Outnumbered UN Pilots Again In Big Sky Battle

Damage Two MIGs
Today; Downed 3
Sunday; Raiding
Units Withdraw

SEOUL, Korea (AP)—American Sabrejet pilots, outnumbered more than two to one, damaged two Communist MIG jets in a battle high over North Korea today, the Fifth Air Force said.

On the ground, an Allied tank-infantry task force penetrated deep into the Communist old Iron Triangle in Central Korea, drove Chinese Reds off a high hill, then pulled back.

Another U. N. raiding party broke out of a Communist trap east of the Pukhan River in Central Korea Sunday night and returned safely to Allied lines. The party was pinned down six hours by machinegun fire and grenades.

The air battle matched 19 Sabre jets against 40 Communist MIG-15s. The MIGs tried unsuccessfully to break through a screen of Sabres protecting fighter bombers attacking North Korean supply lines.

Lt. Kenneth C. Giesler of Sherburne, Minn., was credited with downing two MIGs.

All told 250 MIGs in four groups were sighted over North Korea during the day, but no other battles developed. The MIG total was above average but not a record.

Sabre pilots shot down three MIGs Sunday.

"Operation Strangle" entered its seventh month Monday. An air force spokesman said the continuing assault on Red supply lines had caused the Chinese Reds "terrible expense" and probably had prevented the Communists from attempting a major offensive.

Fighters and bomber planeloads supply targets throughout North Korea. The Air Force reported F-4 Mustangs destroyed or damaged 40 buildings in a supply dump near Sibyon.

Air Traffic At LaGuardia Field Will Slow Down

NEW YORK (UP)—Government and airline officials started "Operation Slowdown" at LaGuardia Airport today to reduce the danger of plane crashes in heavily populated sections of the city.

It was expected that the operation, planned by a special committee headed by Eastern Airlines President Edward V. Rickenbacker, would be completed in two weeks.

The committee plan calls for the diversion of 226 flights daily, including all overseas runs, from LaGuardia Airport because it lies near crowded areas.

At least 38 flights would be diverted to New York International Airport at Idlewild, with the remainder going to airports in Westchester County, Bridgeport, Conn. and other nearby airfields.

Tensions Eased As Result Of 10 Kluxers' Arrest

WHITEVILLE, N.C. (UP)—State and local officials said today the arrest of 10 former Ku Klux Klan members on kidnapping charges has ended a reign of terror in this area.

"I think the whole town of Fair Bluff is relieved," said Columbus County Sheriff H. Hugh Nance.

"The Klan was developing a reign of terror, for which we have no place in North Carolina," commented Gov. Kerr Scott. "I think people are pretty happy about it (the arrests)."

"It's just like being able to breathe again," said Sam Scott, Fair Bluff merchant.

The men were freed on bonds of $5,000 each and hearings were set before U.S. Commissioner T.L. Hon in Fayetteville Feb. 26 and 27.

Fine Nine For Violation Of Brush-Burning Curbs

Pitt County Forester N. S. Tyson today announced that nearly $5,000 worth of damage was caused by an outbreak of forest fires last Thursday over Pitt County.

Tyson's report shows that a total of 1,058 acres of woodland was destroyed by the series of blazes and that damage to all of the property burned totaled $4,439.98.

"All of the fires which broke out Thursday were the direct result of farmers burning brush or ditch banks, and the high winds carrying the flames into the nearby forest lands," Tyson stated.

There were eleven separate fires in various sections of the county which forest fire fighting crews battled for two days and nights before bringing them under control. A much-needed rainfall eased the danger at this point.

To date, nine persons have been fined for violation of the brush burning law and have paid $107.50 in violations before Justices of the Peace.

German Demands Voice In NATO

Spells Out Bonn Parliament Conditions And
Price For Sharing In Defense Army;
Compromise Status Is Sought

By EDWARD KERRY

United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON (UP)—West Germany demanded an equal voice in the conduct of Western Europe's defense today as the price for a contribution of $2,500,000,000 and 12 divisions totaling 305,000 troops.

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer spelled out the Bonn Government's demands at a meeting with the Big Three foreign ministers — Dean Acheson of the U.S., Anthony Eden of Britain and Robert Schuman of France.

The three Western ministers and their 30 advisers reached full agreement yesterday on a joint policy toward Western Germany and called in Adenauer today to hear his views and explain their decisions.

Adenauer spoke first at the conference in the British Foreign Office. He said his government was willing to appropriate $2,500,000,000 for defense and contribute 12 divisions to the proposed European army if Western Germany is granted equality in Western Defense discussions.

A German spokesman said Adenauer intended to emphasize Germany's desire for eventual membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and her willingness to accept some interim plan.

The Western foreign ministers were understood to have agreed yesterday to make a compromise proposal that the NATO Council and the projected European Army Council hold joint meetings on European defense.

Since Germany will be a member of the European Army Council, she thus would have a direct voice in NATO defense affairs affecting Germany while still not a member of the Atlantic organization.

German sources said Adenauer would accept the proposal provided it would not prejudice Germany's chances of entering NATO itself later.

Adenauer also was expected to ask for direct negotiations with France over the future of the disputed Saar. France wants the industrial Saar to be an autonomous state linked economically with France, while West Germany contends the area should be reincorporated within its borders.

Although no details were disclosed, Allied officials seemed confident some solution of the Saar dispute would be worked out.

The Western foreign ministers also planned to offer Bonn a seat on a four-power appeal board empowered to review war crimes sentences.

Maps Are Prepared To Clarify Zoning Program

City Planning Board
Is Shown Four Maps;
Will Request Public
Hearing Before Recommendation To Aldermen

Following instruction of Mayor Lester D. Page, Thomas Rivers submitted maps of the city for consideration by the City Planning Board at a meeting of the board Saturday.

The board reviewed the maps and it was decided to request a public hearing prior to recommending acceptance to the Board of Aldermen. The purpose of the various maps is to clarify and bring the city zoning ordinance up-to-date.

Four maps were looked over by the planning board and they were: the airport zoning map which shows the height limitations as set out in the existing ordinance; and the city zoning map which shows the recommended extension of zoning to include the entire incorporated city.

The projected city zoning map which shows a suggested pattern of growth insofar as residential, business, and two industrial areas are concerned, beyond the city limits; and a fire district map which shows the suggested fire districts.

The work was done with the assistance of the North Carolina League of Municipalities and the maps will be on display in the city hall before the public hearing.

The board also noted that the North Carolina State Highway Commission is constructing or has constructed all outlying and belt line routes recommended by the board.

Farm Production Goals For Pitt To Be Discussed

County Mobilization
Committee To Hold
Meeting Here On Wednesday

Pitt County farm production goals for 1952 will be discussed at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, February 20, when the Pitt County Mobilization Committee meets at the Woman's Club here.

S. L. Daughtridge, district soil conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service, will speak and show slides on the production goals that have been set up for the county, state and nation.

According to Daughtridge, the three crops of special interest are corn, cotton and soy beans. Pitt county's quotas for this year in these crops are 109 percent more than 1951 production for corn; 105 percent more than last year's production for cotton; and 110 percent more than 1951 production for soy beans.

In 1951, Pitt County farmers grew 77,523 acres of corn, about 14,000 acres of cotton, and about 7,000 acres of soy beans. These figures will all be increased this year, Daughtridge said this morning.

The increased production goals for the state are 105 percent more than last year's 2,300,000 acres of corn; 103 percent more than last year's 125,000 acres of cotton; and 107 percent more than the 1951 figure of 320,000 acres of soy beans.

"Although there is no specific quota for any other crops in the state and county," the soil conservationist said, "farmers are requested to grow as much as they can this year. There will be a good market for all crops this year."

At the meeting Wednesday afternoon, a general discussion will be held on production goals, price supports, available labor, fertilizer, farm machinery and insecticides.

All farmers are urged to attend the meeting, which is termed "highly important to the future of county and state agriculture."

Arrest Woman In Shooting Affray

Negro Man In Hospital
With Gunshot
Wound In His Side

WINTERVILLE.—As the result of an affray near Winterville Saturday night, Julius Shaw, 29-year-old Negro, is in Pitt Memorial Hospital with a gunshot wound in his side, and Molly Smith, also Negro, is lodged in Pitt County Jail.

Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson reported this morning that the 27-year-old Negro woman shot Shaw with what is believed to be a .22 calibre pistol during a heated argument.

The shooting took place about 10:30 Saturday night, the sheriff said, and the weapon was not found.

Shaw was taken to the hospital following the shooting, and his condition this morning was described as "not critical." Both parties were tenants on the Jess Branch farm about two miles East of Winterville.

According to Sheriff Tyson, the investigation and arrest was made by Winterville Chief of Police J.E. Buck and Police Officer Alton Hill. The woman was placed in jail about 1:30 Sunday morning, he said.

Mourning Period For King Cut By Queen Elizabeth

LONDON (UP)—By direction of Queen Elizabeth II, public mourning for her father, King George VI, need last only another one or two weeks at most—and there are exceptions even to that.

A special announcement from the Lord Chamberlain's office last night said:

"To avoid misapprehension, the Lord Chamberlain is empowered to state that it is the queen's wish that public dinners and entertainments associated with the government, trade, charity, or the arts should take place as usual."

"The holding of other functions may be left to the discretion of the organizers, who may wish to allow a week or two to elapse before recommending arrangements."

New Navy Jet Is Being Produced

BETHPAGE, N. Y. (UP)—A new swept-back wing jet fighter capable of speeds "much faster" than 600 miles per hour and superior to the Russian MIGs now flying in Korea is being produced at the Grumman aircraft factory here for the Navy.

Reds Indicate Discussion On Issues Apart From Korea Will Be Demanded

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP)—The Communists indicated today that they will insist that issues not strictly connected with Korea be discussed at a post-armistice peace conference.

Such insistence could cause a new deadlock in the truce negotiations.

The truce talks were threatened with another snag when the Communists, in yesterday's talks, indicated that they were ready to hold out stubbornly for acceptance of Russia as a "neutral" country on a six-nation armistice supervision (U. N.).

The Chinese Communist Peiping radio quoted a dispatch by Communist correspondent Alan Wilmington which said the Allies wanted to discuss strictly Korean matters—nothing else.

"It is certain that other questions which directly relate to Korean peace would be touched on," Peiping quoted Wilmington.

Wilmington's pronouncements are frequently quoted by Peiping and often have foretold the next move by the Reds in the talks here.

The Communists may give their views on the post-armistice talk at a plenary meeting of truce delegations at 10 a. m. (8 p. m. Monday EST).

In yesterday's talks the Red negotiators challenged the right of the United Nations command to veto Russia as one of six neutral nations to police a Korean armistice.

The Reds indicated they are prepared to delay a truce indefinitely over the issue. They insisted that neither side had the right to veto any of the three neutral nations nominated to the supervision group by the other side.

"If the Soviet Union could not be nominated as a neutral nation," North Korean staff officer Col. Chang Chun Sa told U. N. staff officers, "there would be no neutral nation at all existing in the world."

In the interest of the Korean armistice, our side requests your side to reconsider seriously your stand and withdraw its unreasonable objection."

U. N. staff officer Col. Don O. Darrow indicated he would reply to the Communist statement Tuesday.

Another group of U. N. and Communist staff officers agreed on a number of minor changes in a Communist-prepared draft agreement on an exchange of war prisoners.

These included provisions to permit the Red Cross to bring in supplies for war prisoners, and to allow Red Cross teams to accompany prisoners from prison camps to their own lines. The deadlocked question of forced versus voluntary repatriation of prisoners did not come up.

The full truce delegations postponed their meeting at Communist request until 10 a. m. Tuesday (8 p. m. today EST), when the Reds will reply to the U. N.'s conditional acceptance of a Red proposal for a post-armistice peace conference.

"Apparently they're still looking for the gimmick in our quick acceptance which is not there," said U. N. spokesman Brig Gen. William P. Nuccio.

The U. N. said Sunday it was willing to accept the Communist proposal only with Korean questions and South Korea would be invited. The Reds suggested the conference begin within 90 days of an armistice.

In the staff officers' meeting, the Communists contended that the Allies had no right and no reason to object to any of the three nations nominated by the Reds to the truce supervision commission. They said Russia has taken no more part in the Korean war than Poland and Czechoslovakia, whose nominations by the Reds to the commission were accepted by the Allies.

"The Soviet Union is one of the United Nations which is not only most strictly opposed to intervention in the Korean war, but strongly in favor of a peaceful settlement of the Korean question," Colonel Chang said.

"It is our opinion that if a procedure of approval is needed, both sides should approve simultaneously and at once all of the nominations of neutral nations by the other side."

"Otherwise, each side may nominate its three neutral nations respectively in accordance with Paragraph 38 of the draft agreement without requiring any procedure of approval."

The U. N. has nominated Sweden, Norway and Switzerland to the commission, which will send teams behind the front lines to make sure that both sides abide by the armistice terms.

Prizes Awarded
In Speech Event

Ninety-Six Contestants
From All Over
State In Competition

Jimmie Harris, president of the Greenville Lions Club, awarded $45.00 in cash prizes to 15 winners in the Annual speech Contest which was held here Saturday at the Greenville High School.

Contestants came from high schools all over the state and 15 high schools participated in the annual contest which was held here for the seventh year. Speakers totaled 96.

Prizes were awarded for speakers in three divisions and they were: Original Oratory — Phyllis Singleton, Roxboro, first; Jackie Barnes, Wilson, second; Carl Barrington, Jr., Fayetteville, third; Rodney Morrison, Concord, fourth; Franklin Brown, West Edgecombe, fifth; and Robin Weaver, Roxboro, honorable mention.

Experienced oratory — Larry Williams, Concord, and Jimmy Warren, Roxboro, tie for first place; Bobby Nicholas, Greenville, third; Sybil Jones, Chocoma, fourth; Mary Blount, Kingston, fifth; and Jonnie Simpson, Greenville, and Jimmy Klutz, Concord, honorable mention.

Dramatic declamations — Doug Mitchell, Greenville, first; Mary Ann Hoover, Concord, and Creighton Peaden, Concord, tie for second; Mary Hodge, Wilson, third; Bill Meuborne, Roxboro, fourth; and Joanne Padley, Ayden, fifth.

Fifty-eight East Carolina College students in Dr. James Oppelt's class acted as judges and the awards were made on a basis of each speaker being scored by six judges.

Doug Mitchell, president of the Greenville High School National Forensic League Chapter, presided over a luncheon given for the contestants Saturday at the Woman's Club. All of the guests were recognized by R. B. Starling, NFL advisor, and entertainment was furnished by Lilly and Alice Flye who sang.

They were accompanied by Ona Shindler.

Schools represented in the contest were Ayden, Belvoir, Bath, Chocoma, Concord, Fayetteville, Fox Bragg, Greenville, High Point, Kingston, Roxboro, West Edgecombe, Williamston, Wilson, and Walsenburg.

The contest was sponsored by the Lions Club.

Two Break-Ins Over Weekend Are Investigated

Greenville police detectives are probing the breaking and entering of two Greenville establishments over the past weekend.

Police department reports show that robbers attempted to gain entrance into the Greenville Candy Company located on Clark Street sometime last night.

The persons cut off the lock of the door and gained entrance. However, investigation this morning revealed that nothing was believed to be missing.

A policeman on his regular rounds spotted the broken latch and it was thought that the robbers might have been scared away by the approach of the officer.

Also, investigation was being made at the Greenville Elks Club where someone gained entrance into the building and went through the bar.

Big Ben Stilled For Overhauling

LONDON (UP)—Big Ben, which has tolled for funerals and weddings and the quarter hours of war and peace, will stop chiming from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. tomorrow.

The great clock which tolled 54 times at the start of King George VI's funeral procession last Friday, will be halted while the hammer-work of the bells is overhauled.

Light In Sky

RALEIGH (UP)—A very bright object, perhaps a meteor, flashed across the eastern coastal area of Virginia and the Carolinas today, touching off numerous reports of airplane crashes.

None of the reported crashes was confirmed.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration reported that one of its tower observers at the Raleigh-Durham airport saw the flashing object streaking across clear noon-day skies.

The CAA said it received reports of plane crashes from "several places" in eastern North Carolina, from Richmond and Norfolk, Va., from the vicinity of Florence, S. C.

Chest Drive Goal Is Met By Community

General Chairman Reports $12,000 Goal
Topped By $193; Officers Elected;
New Directors Are Named

Alton R. Johnston, general chairman of the recent Community Chest drive has reported to the Community Chest Directors that the drive's goal was met and surpassed.

Johnston said $12,193.68 was collected, $193.68 more than the $12,000 goal which was set at the beginning of the drive. L. S. Ficklen, chairman of the board, commended Johnston for his work in making the drive successful, and said much hard work was involved.

Ficklen was re-elected at the Thursday meeting as president of the board and Ed. S. Rawl was elected as vice-president. Thomas E. Wilson was named as secretary and John W. Overton as treasurer.

Six new directors, whose terms will expire January, 1953, were named to serve and they are: Mrs. J. S. Ficklen, J. M. Little, J. H. Waldrop, Joe S. Moya, John W. Overton, and Alton R. Johnston.

The board works on a rotation plan and 18 directors serve at one time.

Directors whose terms expire in 1954 are Mrs. H. L. Ormond, Sam B. Underwood, Jr., Thomas E. Wilson, R. L. Hodges, Jr., D. J. Whitchard, III, and L. S. Ficklen.

Directors whose terms expire in 1953 are Reynolds May, J. B. Kittle, John Clark, Ed Rawl, Badger Johnston, and Mrs. W. S. Bost.

A great deal of discussion was held on the possibility of incorporating more of the drives into one big drive for the city which would take in as many agencies as possible and cut down on the number of drives.

A committee was appointed to investigate other towns which have launched one big drive successfully and have brought in a large number of civic agencies which hold annual drives. The committee has been asked to also investigate the possibility of such a drive here and report on it at a special meeting which will be held.

The committee is headed by Ed Rawl and serving with him are Joe S. Moya and Reynolds May.

The board meeting was held in the directors room at the Guaranty Bank and Trust Company Thursday afternoon at 4:30.

Three In Family Electrocuted By Fallen Power Line

DOUGLASVILLE, Ga. (UP)—The father, mother and brother of a small boy were electrocuted by a fallen power line near here yesterday in a futile attempt to save him from the scorching wire.

Douglas County Sheriff M. C. Abernethy said the fifth member of the family, a child, stopped short when he saw his parents and brother horribly burned to death in trying to save the boy.

The victims were identified as Tommy Chapman, about 38, his wife, Ester, and two sons, Charles and Bryan.

A Douglasville undertaker, J. Cowan Whitely, said the 4,400-volt line broke free from a pole and fell into a field near the Chapman home in 311 Arp, a small community 10 miles South of here.

Civil Term Of Superior Court Is Opened Today

Judge John J. Burney of Wilmington opened the February civil term of Pitt County Superior Court here this morning at 10 o'clock.

The jury was sworn shortly after court convened, and by 11:15 four divorces had been granted—all on the grounds of two years separation.

Divorces were in the cases of: Ethel R. Clark vs. John R. Clark; Viola Hardison Jones vs. Thomas Griffin Jones; Nancy King vs. Richard King; and Alberta Riddick vs. Shelly R. Riddick.

Court is scheduled to be in session through Thursday.

Voodoo Dance Is Secret Weapon Against Enemy

SOMEWHERE IN KOREA (UP)—Marine Air Group 12 said today it has a new secret weapon—African voodoo magic—which works so well that its indiscriminate use has been banned by the commanding officer.

A couple of South African aviators dropped in at this base last autumn on an overnight visit, and entertained the boys with a voodoo rain dance.

One of the South Africans moaned and grunted a chant he said he had learned in the jungles.

The Marines figured this brand of magic might come in handy some day. So Capt. E. J. Bruchman of Chicago noted the music and choreography and added a few jumps, jives, and twitches from the Air Group 12 war dance.

Six times in the next few months when rain was needed for some operation, the dance was performed.

Five times out of the six, the airmen boasted, the voodoo magic brought deluges which set

Dates For Annual Art Festival Set

Exhibits and Arts Programs To Feature Community Enterprise

Plans for the seventeenth Annual Arts Festival have been announced and committees from the various organizations which sponsor it have been held at work completing arrangements.

The Festival will be held this year in March during the week of 21-29. It will feature exhibits, programs and panel discussions on art. Music, dancing, drama, literature, painting and flower arranging will be presented in various programs beginning Friday night, March 21, and continuing through Saturday, March 28.

There has been some difficulty in securing auditorium space for all the programs, in spite of the early planning for them of last September. For that reason one of the programs scheduled for the Festival will be held the following week. This will be the Teachers' Playhouse production of "Tom Sawyer."

Exhibits will be hung in the Art Gallery at Sheppard Memorial Library, in the Women's Club, and in the auditoriums of Greenville High School and the C. M. Epps High School. In the Art Gallery modern paintings and modern furniture will be featured.

Two new attractions have been added for this year. A panel discussion on major trends in art will be held and speakers for the panel will include one of the state's best known painters, a sculptor and two members of the Governor's Commission for purchasing art masterpieces for the State Museum. A director of the Museum will serve as moderator for the panel.

An amateur high school fine arts talent night will be another feature which is new this year. All 12 high schools of the city and county are expected to participate in the event, which will be judged. The winners will appear on radio station WGTC, when they will be judged again, and the final winners will be sent to Norfolk, Virginia, where they will appear on television.

The Arts Festival annually attracts many visitors to the city, in addition to the large local crowds which participate during the week. The well planned events and the high caliber of the programs and presentations have established a reputation for the sponsoring organizations and groups. The Festival this year promises to come up to the high standards of the past, and the public is invited to attend as many of the programs as possible.

To Present Chapel Program
Pupils of the fourth and fifth grades of the Third Street School will present a special program at chapel exercises on Friday morning. Those taking part in the presentation are pupils of Mrs. Rose's School of Speech. They will present a short play entitled "George Washington Calls On Betsy Ross."

All the grades in the school will witness this performance and parents of the pupils are also invited.

He was a farmer and was a member of the Winterville Free Will Baptist Church, and a member of the Mohican Tribe Number 86 of the Order of Red Men.

Surviving him is his wife, a daughter, Miss Letha Bell Harrington of the home; two sons, Raymond Harrington of Brevard and Charlie C. Harrington of Portsmouth, Va.; four grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

40 Years Ago Today

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
February 18, 1912

Miss Sallie Joyner Davis of the Training School faculty went to Washington Saturday to deliver a lecture at a teachers meeting there. V. E. Staton and H. T. Smith spent Sunday in Bethel.

Simon Moye went to Washington Sunday morning. Misses Louise Whittlesey and Elmore Warren of Farmville spent Saturday here with Miss Ethel Moore. Quite a number of cotton farmers held a meeting in the courthouse Saturday afternoon and discussed the question of acreage for the next crop. A resolution was adopted that they will plant a considerably less acreage this year than last.

Piano Students In Recital
On last Friday night the piano pupils of Mrs. Howard Bodkin presented a recital for parents and friends.

The recital was held at the home of Mrs. Bodkin, 113 Library Street. Seventeen numbers were played by the eight pupils who performed. They were Judith Tyler, Kay Oglesby, Sue Ann Lupton, Libby Dudley, Cathryn Ratcliffe, Lillian Moye, Ann Evans and Jenny Lynn Thompson.

Following the recital Mrs. Bodkin served light refreshments to the participants and guests.

Critchler-Edwards
Mr. and Mrs. Albert Edwards of Grimesland announce the engagement of their daughter, Fronia Ann, to Raymond T. Critchler, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Critchler of Angier, N.C. The wedding will take place March 22 at the home of the bride.

Women In The Church

Among the members of the "General Board" directing body of the National Council of the Churches—who spoke against universal military training proposals now before Congress and branded the move "a long step in the direction of a garrison state," were Mrs. Douglas Horton, wartime director of the WAVES, and Mrs. Clifford C. Cowin of Cleveland.

The Rev. Eleanor Wilson, missionary of the Congregational Christian Church and "captain" of the "Morning Star VII" which plies among four islands and 24 atolls in the South Pacific, carrying the gospel message, is back safely in Boston on furlough. But next fall she will return to the Marshall Islands where she has been for 27 years. The boat, sixth in Congregational missionary service, enables her to visit some 28 island churches that constitute her parish.

Planned visitation of all court sessions in their local communities is one of the goals of Methodist women who belong to the denomination's Woman's Division of Christian Service. "We have found that when women attend court sessions not only are they better informed about their communities, but the judge, lawyers, and others at trials are helped by the knowledge that concerned citizens are present," says Miss Thelma Stevens, of the Department of Christian Social Relations which has planned the program. Court visitation is planned because "actions of our courts are often colored by what court officials think is the 'climate' of public opinion, and thus justice is defeated." Attendance at cases bearing directly on discrimination of minority groups is especially stressed. In their recommendations of "techniques for actions" for 1932-1936, the social action branch of the Methodist women's organization also urged local societies to investigate training requirements of law enforcement officers "for the purpose of improving such training if necessary." Special classes for studying human relations are needed for police officers, they feel. Such training includes courses in juvenile delinquency.

Grifton News

Grifton, Feb. 9, A.

The Grifton Parent-Teachers Association met in regular session on Tuesday night in the school auditorium, with Miss Bert Johnson presiding at the very short business meeting.

A program was presented by students of the ninth, tenth and eleventh grades, with Mrs. Bunch and Mrs. Bradley directing. The play was in one act and was taken from the English book, "Good Neighbors." The object was to teach that neighborliness not only helps the one who is done an act of kindness but in turn aids the one who does it.

Taking part were Joyce Dennis, Dorothy Shirley, Mary Dawson, Shirley Spikes, Geraldine Adams, Edna McLachlan, Sam Gooding and Bobby Cole. The narrator was Jean Daugherty.

Attendance cakes were won by the third and tenth grades.

Hostess At Valentine Party
On Wednesday night Misses Phyllis Jackson, Betty McCotter, Ethel Koon, and Mildred Sellers entertained at a delightful Valentine party at the home of Miss Jackson for a number of their classmates. During the evening informal games and dancing was enjoyed by the group which numbered sixteen. Party cakes, candy, salted nuts and iced drinks were served during the refreshment hour.

Entertain At Bridge
Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hart were hosts to members of their club on Wednesday night at their home here.

Three tables were in play during the evening. Highest scores were held by Mrs. Claude Hart and Dr. W. E. Rasberry. Others playing were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hart, Mr. and Mrs. David Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Billy Phillips, Mrs. Rasberry and Mr. Claude Hart.

As cards were laid aside sandwiches and iced drinks were passed. Early spring flowers were used as decorations.

Personals
Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Taylor have returned from a ten-day trip to Miami and other Florida points.

Mrs. Edward Hart, Mrs. Roger Johnson and Mrs. W. E. Rasberry were Raleigh shoppers Thursday.

Miss Margaret Sugg, a member of the Walkerton school faculty, arrived Friday for a weekend visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George C. Sugg.

Among faculty members of the school here attending the Pitt County unit N.C.A. meeting in Farmville on Wednesday night were Principal Albert Tyson, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bradley, Mrs. J. L. Tucker, Mrs. A. C. Fletcher, Mrs. Vance Abbott, Mrs. G. L. Tucker, Miss Hazel Patrick, and Miss Bert Johnson.

Money Is Viewed Less Important

PHILADELPHIA (UP)—A poll conducted at a YMCA Open House disclosed today that money "means absolutely nothing" to the modern teen-age girl.

Marriage is the main ambition of girls at that stage of life, according to the poll among 400 high school students, but only half of the girls mentioned children.

A career was more important than marriage to most of the boys polled but none aspired to be professional men.

Both boys and girls thought success is more important to the modern teen-ager than happiness.

Murder is Forgetful

Chapter 7
Johnny was surprised when she sat up suddenly at the soft scuff of his foot on the tiles. He had imagined that she was asleep.

"Oh," she said. He had an idea she's been crying. "I thought you were still with mother..."

"She's gone to have her nap," he told her. He sat down on one end of the lounge and the wicker creaked slightly. The girl covered her thighs with the beach robe. Her aquamarine eyes were bright and moist from recent tears.

He lit a cigarette. "It was tough about your father," Johnny said. "I can understand how you feel."

He took the freshly pressed handkerchief from the breast pocket of his suit. He was wearing a blue tropical worsted that contained a fine pin stripe.

Kay murmured her thanks and dabbed at her eyes. "It wasn't father," she said. The remark surprised him. "I was thinking of mother."

"You mean..."

"You know what I mean. Mother doesn't remember us. She thinks she knows you. Yet she recalls nothing. Nothing at all!" Her lip trembled slightly. She had a nicely formed, determined mouth.

"If we only knew what happened on that horrible night two weeks ago. And if mother hadn't been hurt..."

He said, "She has the mistaken idea I'm someone named Bart. Do you know of any such person, Kay?"

Johnny nodded. "I got some of that from a friend of mine who is in the New York police department... Then the accident wasn't discovered right away?"

"No."

"Kay returned his handkerchief. "It was a lonely section of highway where the car went off the road. The police decided that, after the holdup, mother must have been ordered to drive on. In her excitement, and further up the road, she ran the car over an embankment."

"Then your father wasn't found in the car at all?"

She shook her head. "He was discovered several hundred yards back down the highway... which proves that someone must have ordered mother to drive on alone."

"Yes," agreed Johnny Saxon. Johnny stood up, walked over to the dog, bent down and rubbed Michael's ears. He looked up at the girl. "What about that book or something she was supposed to be writing?"

"Didn't Uncle Thomas tell you about that?"

"Uncle Thomas?"

The dog shoved his huge head firmly against Johnny's hand. He liked his ears scratched.

"J. T. Smith," said Kay. "But we call him Uncle Thomas. You had an interview with him in New York. He was father's brother. He employed you."

"Oh—him," Johnny nodded. "Yes, he did mention the manuscript. But he didn't seem to know much about it." He walked back and sat down near the girl again. "I thought perhaps you could tell me more about..."

Kite Tournament Planned In March

Plans are in the making for a kite-flying tournament to be held here March 1 and March 2 under the direction of the city recreation department.

South Greenville School will be the scene of the tournament March 1 when Negro citizens will compete against each other for awards. March 2 is set for white kite-flyers at the Third Street School. Sponsors for the tournaments are the Jaycees and Colored Civic League.

Contestants will be classified into four groups for both boys and girls. The tournament is open to boys and girls seven and under, eight through 11, 12 and up, and for "young men" who are over 18. Each entry who flies a kite will receive a present.

Entry requirements state that all kites must be homemade and made by the contestant flying it. All contestants must have one assistant, and all contestants must register and receive a number at 1:30 on the days of the tournament, which are scheduled to begin at two o'clock.

Awards for the event include gold, silver, and bronze medals given by the sponsors to contestants scoring the first, second, and third highest places in each classification. Ribbons will be awarded to first, second, and third place winners in each event.

Points will be scored as follows: First, 10 points; second, eight points; third, five points; fourth, three points; and fifth, one point. Events and rules of events will be announced later.

Anti-Mask Law Protects Klan, Says Spokesman

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—A Ku Klux Klan leader says anti-mask laws protect the KKK.

Thomas L. Hamilton of Leesville, S. C., imperial wizard of the Klan in the Eastern United States, told the Richmond Times-Dispatch in a telephone interview yesterday: "We're protected by anti-mask laws. We wish every state would pass them."

Gov. Battle has proposed an anti-mask law as a means of stopping a possible revival of the Klan in Virginia, where KKK officials recently said they plan a recruiting campaign.

Hamilton said most anti-mask laws forbid wearing of masks on public property. He added that in that way men "impersonating" Klansmen are held in check by the law.

Parts Of Truman Diary Included In Coming Book

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Truman keeps a diary and he's going to let the public take a peek at it next month.

The diary is a spasmic affair with entry dates at irregular intervals. But it may contain some interesting background of events whose history has been only partially told.

Excerpts from the diary, plus generous quotations from presidential memos, notes and speeches, will appear in a book called "Mr. President," due out in March.

It is the work of William Hillman, former newspaperman and now a radio commentator and official of the Crowell-Collier Publishing Company.

First To Bid For Doughton's Seat

SALISBURY, N. C. (AP)—A young World War II veteran from Salisbury is the first candidate to announce for the Ninth District Congressional seat to be vacated by Rep. Robert L. Doughton.

Twenty-nine-year-old Graham M. Carlton, Registrar of Deeds for Rowan county, announced his candidacy Saturday.

Rep. Doughton said Friday he will not offer for reelection to what would be his 22nd term in Congress. Carlton, a Democrat, is a native of Salisbury and Rowan county. He graduated from the University of North Carolina in 1942 and served in the Pacific aboard a destroyer during World War II.

He graduated from the University of North Carolina Law School in 1948 and was admitted to the state bar later that year.

Carlton was appointed Registrar of Deeds in April, 1949, and the following year was elected to office for a four-year term.

The counties of the Ninth District was Ashe, Alleghany, Caldwell, Watauga, Alexander, Cabarrus, Stanly, Iredell and Rowan.

Blood Drive Foes Are Investigated

DURHAM, N. C. (AP)—A Red Cross official says that Army, Federal and State intelligence agents are probing alleged Communist attempts to hamper a Red Cross blood drive at North Carolina College here.

Col. Marshall Barnum, chairman of the Durham Red Cross chapter said Saturday that Army intelligence officers believe the Communist tactics indicate a drive to wreck the entire blood program.

Col. Barnum said that distribution of Communist propaganda leaflets at the Negro college has brought on an investigation by Army intelligence officers, the Counter Intelligence Corps, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and local officers.

Hundreds of the leaflets, termed the blood drive "Operation Blood-letting," were circulated on the NCC campus Friday during a "Blood of Korea" drive. The leaflets bore the name of the Carolina District, Communist Party, U. S. A. and Junius Scales, District Chairman, P. O. Box 62, Chapel Hill.

Nichols School PTA Discusses New Lunchroom

The members of the Nichols School Parent Teachers Association met last week and discussed the possibility of constructing a lunchroom at the school.

All of the parents approved the idea of a lunchroom and discussed several means of raising money for the project. S. E. Selby of Grimesland delivered an address stating the importance of a lunchroom and his approval of the parent's desire to provide for their children.

Rev. S. E. Hemby, pastor of Arthur's F. W. B. church, also gave a talk. Fifty-six parents were present at the meeting.

The PTA also met January 8 and heard a talk by F. M. Moore of Washington on the role of the parent and teacher in promoting the continual growth of the school.

Trash Box Fire At Local Firm

A blaze early this morning in a trash box next to the Globe Hardware Company was discovered and extinguished by Greenville firemen before any serious damage could result.

Firemen were called to the store shortly before eight o'clock when the fire was discovered. Today's early alarm was the only fire summons received over the past weekend.

British To Detonate First Atomic Weapon This Year

LONDON (AP)—Britain announced today she will detonate an atomic weapon for the first time this year. Her experts reportedly believe it is more efficient than any yet produced in the United States.

The test, a government announcement said, will be held in Australia—presumably on the Woomera rocket range in the isolated Central Desert.

Qualified sources reported scientists who worked on development of the atom weapon are convinced it is the best yet constructed—though not necessarily more powerful—and that tests will prove they are right.

The government announcement early today referred only to the forthcoming tests, at an unspecified date, on an "atomic weapon."

There was immediate speculation whether the weapons was a bomb, shellhead or some other atomic device whose explosions could be controlled and which could be used in close support of ground troops to pulverize specific targets rather than large city areas.

Chapman Pincher, the usually well-informed Daily Express Science reporter, said, however, "The weapon will almost certainly be a high powered atomic bomb designed for use by aircraft."

The principal designer of the weapon is Dr. William Penney, 42-year-old chief superintendent of armament research for the government.

Taft Supporters In N. C. Claiming Most Delegates

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP)—North Carolina backers of Sen. Taft for President say they expect to have a substantial majority of the state's delegates to the GOP National Convention in their camp.

Supporters of Gen. Eisenhower are not so outspokenly optimistic. Generally, they're content to say that sentiment in North Carolina is pretty equally divided.

Both sides are working hard in preparation for congressional district conventions, at which 22 of the state's 26 delegates will be chosen. Most of these meetings will be on March 15, and four delegates at large will be selected at the state convention to be held at Charlotte—North Carolina's largest city—on March 18.

"We feel confident we will have a considerable majority of the delegates," said Morganton lawyer Frank C. Patton, chairman of the North Carolina Taft Committee.

"I think it's pretty well divided about half-and-half," was the reply of Sir A. DeLapp, Lexington lawyer, who is spearheading the drive for Eisenhower.

Patton is a former U. S. district attorney and Republican candidate for governor and senator. DeLapp served as Republican state chairman for many years.

Other Republican leaders of the state are as sharply divided as Patton and DeLapp.

Much of the Eisenhower strength seems to stem from a feeling that the general is more attractive to independent voters and to Democrats than is the man who has won the almost universal title of "Mr. Republican."

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

IT COMES TO BE RIGHT

"One of my readers wrote me and quoted this sentence: 'The birds never get any place unless he gets his neck out.'"

This is just another way of saying that life as a whole is a calculated risk. If we are never going to take any risks, we are never going to get on with our lives. In every office there are people ready to fear and criticize anyone who takes a firm stand on any unpopular issue. Many a business organization in the country is ready to subject decisions to all sorts of financial reprisals if they talk out of turn. In labor circles one is liable to be liquidated if he jumps to his feet and berates the brass head. Even in the church and in educational institutions, those who will not conform themselves to established patterns of thought often find that they are first subjected to cold disdain and then perhaps to denunciation or dismissal.

It is no easy task to live a courageous life, standing every day for what one believes to be right. We have to stick our necks out on many occasions in our defense of the right; and we may be sure that there will be someone standing near with a big stick waiting to slap us down.

But sometimes the slapper gets slapped.

Democratic Progress Begins At Home

As in so many things of a worthwhile nature, strong enthusiasm and action on a local level are necessary for staging of presidential preferential primaries on a local level.

Why presidential primaries in the states of the Union?

Merely to insure that "government by the people and for the people" will lose some of that hollow sound in actual practice as past experience has indicated.

Floating about in the back of most voters' minds is the realization that they have relatively little to say about who will be their party's candidate to captain the ship of state. Comes election day, and their choice to all practical purposes is limited to two men; both of whom have been chosen at meetings of the national political hierarchies. Through a combination of personal distractions and frequent disinterest in the lower echelons of party activities, the American man-in-the-street finds himself with a very small voice in his own party's choice for a presidential candidate.

Two members of Congress have introduced legislation which if passed would allow presidential primaries throughout the nation. Closer to home, Attorney General Harry McMillen and Raymond Maxwell, secretary for the State Board of Elections, contend that even if the federal legislation is passed, some enabling act would be necessary for North Carolina to pay for expenses of such elections.

There is much room for doubt that Congress will adopt at this session any measure to further encourage presidential primaries. Time is short and their agenda is jammed. Besides, it would come too late to affect the fast approaching election. Nonetheless, it would spur on future congressional consideration should individual states take the matter into their own hands and voice either approval or disapproval of enabling legislation.

On at least one occasion a Tar Heel lawmaker has introduced a primary measure in the Legislature; that was Rep. Clifton Blue, of Aberdeen. His effort was made in the 1949 Legislature and the bill failed to get out of committee. He didn't try again in the 1951 Assembly.

In today's behind-the-scenes political wars the choice of actual candidates is rivaled only by the decisive elections in determining party courses and the national welfare. Surely, members of the electorate are entitled to a greater voice in these all-important decisions.

Needed--A Growing Sense OF Brotherhood

It may sound futile to talk about brotherhood when half the world is doing its best to deny meaning of the word. Yet if the meaning of brotherhood is to be retained and practiced by saner members of this world's society, man's responsibility to man must not be forgotten.

Today marks the first day of Brotherhood Week, an annual observance sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews. The purpose of the National Conference, which looks after religious, racial and cultural relationships among Protestants, Catholics and Jews, is to "make America safe for differences."

Tolerance of those "differences" makes all the difference between what we are pleased to call Americanism and the tragedy of petty tyrannies, distrust and even hatred.

The democracy of this country has thrived on teamwork and harmony (call it "brotherhood") among its widely varied minorities in the past. Their differences might almost be described as a factor in furthering our democratic processes. Certainly we have had much to learn, and more to practice in this direction.

In the face of this, somebody is bound to ask, "Why have Brotherhood Week? It's what we do all the year."

Well, it doesn't hurt to remind ourselves that this is a great country, that we do pretty well for ourselves as a people. But we don't like to be reminded that there's room for self-improvement.

Our common welfare at home depends upon a growing sense of brotherhood; and the hope of the world lies in the spreading of that doctrine.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—Washington's mostly costly and powerful spending lobby, the Army Corps of Engineers, would be stripped of its historic and exclusive control over billions of dollars of civilian construction under a confidential recommendation submitted to the House Public Works Committee by its special investigating subcommittee.

The report strikes hard at the present "foot in the tent" system so effectively employed by expansionists in the executive departments, especially Defense, Interior and Agriculture. Under this procedure, the engineers first submit only modest estimates on flood control or river and harbor projects.

Then under authority delegated to the Chief of Engineers by Congress, they eventually discover that much larger sums will be required for completion, and Congress must foot the bill unquestioningly.

"UNFORESEEN"—The 1953 budget presented by President Truman a few weeks ago includes many "foot in the tent" items, although he is simply following an old custom.

While he has asked only about $99,000,000 for five construction jobs, their final cost will be $1,300,000,000 or even greater under the "army game" condemned in this report.

It was this same subcommittee which shocked Capitol Hill by earlier revelations that a building program originally listed at $2,638,517,000 would actually cost $5,912,451,000.

Only 71.6 per cent, or $1,887,911,000 of the increase, was attributed to price changes. The rest was due to local or engineering modifications, including $468,499,000 accounted for by "unforeseen conditions" and "inadequate planning."

COST—Now the subcommittee finds that this haphazard method of granting authority to the Army Engineers or other administrators, including Secretary Oscar Chapman and Secretary Charles F. Brannan, has produced a building program costing $11,311,600,000 in additional appropriations. Since this estimate is based on present prices, there is no assurance that it will not skyrocket again.

The construction work now authorized, according to the investigators, will require twenty-two years for completion. In addition, 130 projects now before the House Public Works Committee, but unapproved, will cost another $1,119,467,000.

STAGGERING—But that is not the end of the spend-and-spend story.

The Army Engineers' and Agriculture's field offices are now making surveys on 1082 more projects of one kind or another, of which only fifty have been finished. The subcommittee says it will take four or five years just to complete these engineering studies, and "centuries" to build.

"Based on past experience," continues the report, "it can be expected that 45 per cent of these reports, or about 350, will recommend additional construction work."

The eventual cost of present and proposed work will be staggering. In view of prospective enlargements and price increases. From 1936 to 1951, the report says, inflationary trends have boosted building costs by 167.5 per cent. This has offset savings resulting from more modern machinery and construction methods developed during and since World War II.

WARNING—With obvious exasperation over its discovery of the results of the Army's unrestrained control of public funds, the subcommittee asks:

"To what extent should an administrator be permitted to extend flood walls at the general taxpayers' expense to protect a speculative development—industrial or residential—made with full knowledge of flood hazards?"

This is, perhaps, the first frank and politically explosive warning by a Congressional committee against home and factory expansion in areas subject to recurrent floods, and which require the expenditure of federal funds for protection.

CONTROL—"Can a limit on the extent of delegated authority for modification," the document asks, "be soundly written into law?" The real control of these programs is now in the hands of the agency making the commitment, the Corps of Engineers, and is not with the Congress, acting through the Public Works Committee or the Appropriations Committee.

Action must be taken immediately to permit establishment of proper controls.

Although the subcommittee will continue its studies, with a hard look at President Truman's latest proposals for power, seaway and valley development, it recommends general suspension of projects not yet under construction pending a review of cost and engineering factors, and more detailed reports from executive promoters and planners in the future.

DUEL—Although Senator Taft is trying to keep his duel with General Eisenhower on a friendly and gentlemanly basis, some of his backers are not so parliamentary. They are suggesting the distribution of a Taft campaign button with the label of "I like Ike but what does Ike like?"

DELAVER, WISC. ENTERPRISE: "One of the primary editorial policies of The Delaver Enterprise has been to create an interest in local government. This purpose is founded on the fundamental belief that a true and working democratic federal government is based on strong small units of democratic self-government such as is found in small cities and townships. We believe in strong democracies at the very core of our life will protect us from socialist tendencies of government on higher levels."

SOMERVILLE, MASS. JOURNAL: "There have been frequent speculations as to the limit of the total tax 'take.' It would appear to us, judging from the outcry in Congress about the President's $5 billion dollar budget, that the limit has been reached, and this belief is given added substance by the almost unanimous agreement among Congressmen that economy is an inevitable 'must' if an incentive-economy is to be maintained and enterprise is to be encouraged to progress."

JEFFERSON, OHIO, GAZETTE: "Very few of the great corporations are owned or even controlled by wealthy stockholders. More than 15 million stockholders and individual owners of property pay taxes and employ men and women. The stockholders of many of the great corporations, such as U. S. Steel, and American Telephone & Telegraph, actually outnumber the employees of the corporation."

IRRATIONAL — One of the best wisecracks about the present political situation in North Carolina was made by a top flight state administrative official the other day. He said "Anybody who tries to rationalize this campaign is not rational himself." The statement was made when some fellows were talking about the cross-currents developing in the contest for governor and other offices, and one of the group said that such and such just didn't make sense. It was conceded by all present that many things in the present setup have conflicting and contradictory implications, and that the guy who said it was impossible to rationalize them had something.

EXAMPLES — Such as, for the nomination and election four years ago on an outright anti-machine platform — and Governor Scott now calling upon his folks to stick with the "team" and perpetuate another machine. And the obvious fact that majority of the folks attending the Farm Bureau convention are for William Umstead for governor, while Scott — the first farmer governor in 60 years is openly campaigning for Hubert Olive. And newspaper headlines, dubbing speeches made by Senator Willis Smith as "Republican speeches," when they voice the same philosophy upon which he was nominated and elected two years ago as a real Democrat. And Congressman Harold Cooley, chairman of the Committee on Agriculture in the House of Representatives, vigorously defending Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan, although Cooley is on record as bitterly opposing the "Brannan Plan". And more than 600 North Carolina Democrats putting up fifty bucks apiece for a place at the dinner table (and to boost the national Democratic administration) then give a very cold shoulder to speaker who lauded the administration in an effort to effectuate the purpose for which the 40-odd bucks left over after paying for the chicken and salad and other dinner expenses was designed to achieve. Looks like the evidence supports the idea that only a person at least partly crazy would attempt to rationalize the situation.

OTHERS—There are numerous applications of state law and rules and regulations of administrative agencies which are just as difficult to rationalize as are the current political developments. The list is entirely too long to present here. It includes such items as collecting four million dollars for gasoline inspection — and spending a quarter million on the inspection job. It includes collecting a road-building tax on gasoline — and spending some ten millions of it for non-road purposes. It includes, also, the argument that the road tax collected should not be used on roads which happen to be inside the corporate limits of towns and cities. It includes paying the salary of the parole commissioner out of the governor's office budget, and other expense of that office out of the highway fund. It includes personnel department rules providing that if one employee does the office work of three persons, the employee is entitled only to one clerical salary; but if two others can be hired to do the work the original worker can get an increased salary as a supervisor. It includes other personnel regulations providing that brothers can work in adjoining offices if they have a different immediate superior, but they can't work 150 miles apart for the same boss. Some of these absurdities make humorous reading, but they can be deadly serious for men and women and women who have to earn a living by working under these rules.

RETIREMENT — There are some contrasting, if not actually conflicting, provisions in the state supported retirement system for school teachers and other state employees. These quirks show up every once in awhile. The instant case is that of Dr. J. C. Johnson, who was summarily fired by Prison Director Walter Anderson this week after more than twenty years service as a dentist at state prison. Reasons for this discharge are not germane to this discussion. There are rumors that the real reason was Dr. Johnson's open support, without much acrimony, of the public school teachers' strike. Most of those familiar with conditions are disposed to discount and discredit those rumors. We are talking now about the retirement system, not about why certain employees were separated from the state payroll.

HISTORIC — There are two outstanding examples of how the system works—and a third example might be cited in the Luther Hamilton case involving judicial retirement pay rather than the state-wide system. Dr. Leon R. Meadows, deposed president of East Carolina Teachers College, drew retirement pay while serving a term in state prison after conviction for embezzling state funds, because it was considered he had bought the insurance and was entitled to its benefits. Buren Jurney, whose resignation from the industrial commission was requested by Governor Scott just before his retirement benefits could be claimed, was permitted to come back into state employ to complete the necessary tenure and save his benefits. Other cases could be cited of elderly school teachers qualifying through technicalities for retirement benefits.

CURRENT — Point here is that Dr. Johnson, prison dentist, being above 60 and with more than 20 years tenure as a state employee, for whatever reason fired, has a paid-for stake in the retirement fund and can get it on the same terms as if he had voluntarily retired. What his retirement benefit check will be each month can be ascertained because it is a public record, but it is not important here.

PENSION — One thing the retirement system folks want emphasized is that retirement benefits for which employees have paid on insurance actuarial basis are not to be confused with pensions, or with judicial retirement pay to which the judges make no monetary contribution.

INSURANCE — The retirement system was set up a decade ago as a co-operative insurance proposition, with employees and the state paying equal amounts to buy retirement benefits, available at age 60 or above. Matching payments and benefits were figured on authentic actuarial tables, and of necessity arbitrary limits had to be set on age and tenure of the beneficiaries. Because all parties regard the setup as a business insurance deal, personalities and reasons for separation are not important.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — (AP)—This climate is very good for hermits.

My favorite hermit, old Silas Dent, is still thriving at 71, convinced that a man can find happiness alone.

Old Silas is Florida's senior hermit. He lives on a small island 12 miles southwest of here, and is known as "The Hermit of Cabbage Key."

Silas, who has a bushy beard and rather looks like Santa Claus gone to seed, gets along very well on a $65 a month state pension and the pin money he picks up selling handmade fly swatters to tourists. About once a month old Silas boats over to the nearby village of Pass-A-Grille to laugh at the tourists, then returns to his island paradise and his favorite pastime—reading the Bible.

Dent has lived there in a palm thatch hut in a cluster of pine trees for 40 years. He doesn't drink or smoke and has a quietly cheerful outlook on life. I love him because of a remark he made to me when I visited him years ago.

"I ain't felt blue since 1912," he said, "and I forget now what worried me then."

You have to admire a man like that. He never lets time weigh heavily on him.

"If I get to feeling restless," he said, "I just take one of the hairs from my beard and rub my fingers and try to split it. Sometimes I can split it clear up to my chin."

As he has a heavy beard, this keeps him pretty busy.

Some time ago a niece of old Silas became worried about him and talked him into coming to live with her family on the mainland. The very first evening, rather against his will, she prepared him a hot bath.

Old Silas stepped reluctantly into the shining tub—and promptly fell and broke five ribs. As soon as he recovered he insisted on returning to his island hut, where he announced:

"Civilization is too dangerous. Only three other people live on the island — Claude McCall, a shrimp fisherman, his wife, and their 2-year-old son, Terry. McCall keeps a watchful eye on the elderly hermit's health."

He enjoys her solitude very much, as he is an old hypochondriac at heart. Each equinox he is sure he will die, but the prospect of death doesn't dismay him in the least.

"I have made my peace with the Lord," he tells visitors, "and I am just sitting here waiting for him to take me in his own good time."

Old Silas has been such a success at hermiting he is inspiring others to follow his example.

The latest are two lady hermits — Mrs. Barbara Simmons and Esther Shelton. They live all alone on a one-acre mangrove patch near Cabbage Key which they call "God's Island." They spend their time painting and writing. When the waves lap over their island during storms, they go to a village hotel on the mainland.

"They seem very happy out here," said Wilson Hubbard, a rugged young fisherman who dragged me out to their retreat. Hubbard flew to many strange parts of the world as a transport pilot for Uncle Sam. He has a grateful feeling toward the last World War because, as he said, "It taught me that everything I really wanted out of life was right back here at home."

Business Today

Electrical retailers are concerned about approaches to saturation in several lines. In some areas the market for television sets is near saturation, in some the percentage of households already owning refrigerators and vacuum cleaners is very high.

The market for radio receivers, some retailers complain, has been saturated for years. Well, retailers sold 6,600,000 home radios last year in addition to 1,375,000 portables and 4,800,000 auto radios. Electrical Merchandising calculates. They also sold 2,865,000 vacuum cleaners and 4,075,000 refrigerators. Some of these sales were the direct result of new housing and new families, but the larger part represent results of dealers who just kept on selling instead of worrying about saturation. These dealers will probably keep right on selling this year.

There will probably be even larger opportunities in selling some of the newer and often neglected conveniences in the electrical market. Far from saturation are the markets for garbage disposers, air conditioners, attic fans, dishwashers, floor polishers, dehumidifiers and many other plug-in devices. With the millions the manufacturers are spending on research and development, there ought to be several new types of electrical conveniences introduced during the year—metal supplies permitting.

Stuart Forsyth, Westinghouse sales official, predicted recently that the sale of electric room heaters should become a $50,000,000-a-year business within five years. Retail sales last year were $14,576,200, according to McGraw-Hill figures. If heaters can expand at that rate, why not other appliances?

THE radio industry has discovered the juvenile market. There are dozens of radios especially designed for kids' rooms.

Electric clock manufacturers are also playing this market. The TV industry has shown signs of discovering this market, too, and other manufacturers may be moving in. There are limits, of course. There isn't much hope here for the makers of electric shavers.

This is to remark that the promotion lacked understanding of an old American habit. Families normally buy new rugs for living and other front rooms while rugs there still have wear in them. Then the older rugs are moved to other rooms.

An offer to clean old rugs and cut them to new sizes when a new rug was purchased might have worked better.

BEER, HAIR-GROWER MEASURE BUSINESS

Most economists get their bearings from national production, income, employment and sales indexes. But there are other good indexes, such as hijackings and beer sales. Business Report suggests. Hijackings rise with boom conditions and shortages, the publication notes. Truck thefts are now around $65,000,000,000 a year, compared with $30,000,000,000 in 1947 and brass and copper heists are up 900 per cent over 1945. Beer sales are good indexes of regional activity. Right now they are rising in Cincinnati, Texas and the Northwest, and down in New England and Detroit. Other early indexes are sporting goods sales, entertainment receipts, auto advertising and two pants suits.

A Seattle advertising man says he can accurately predict business conditions two months in advance by the sale of a hair-growing preparation. It seems that when men are not sure of their jobs they rush to buy things they hope will make them look younger.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS

There are millions of dollars lying around that owners do not bother about.

Despite the fact newspapers have been publishing names of persons entitled to income tax refunds, there is still $35,000,000 unclaimed. That is about $260,000,000 worth of travelers' checks unclaimed, but many of them are simply being hoarded by foreign investors. And unclaimed bank accounts run to hundreds of millions of dollars more. In most states these unclaimed funds eventually revert to the state.

Two Centuries Ago This February 18th. Today, To Give You Financial Protection

Celebrating a 200th birthday today, you and your fellow Mutual policyholders can point with pride to the fact that the Mutual Insurance idea, so typically American in its sincerity and honesty of spirit, was pioneered by Benjamin Franklin back in 1752.

CONGRATULATE YOURSELF ON YOUR SAVINGS, because, as a Mutual policyholder, you and your fellow policyholders share in the savings made by the company of which you are a member.

THE SAVINGS PASSED ON TO YOU, as they have been to millions of Americans for the past two centuries, are made possible by the selection of members, willing to become good risks, and by the active and progressive measures taken by your Mutual Casualty Fire Companies to reduce losses.

THE BIG IDEA, as originated and advanced by Franklin, and adhered to by Mutual Companies today, is that people banding themselves together for Mutual protection in order to share savings as well as risks. Accordingly, each policyholder has an ownership interest in his Mutual Company.

Tourney Pairings In Northeastern Made

Greenville's Phantoms are seeded third in the forthcoming Northeastern Conference basketball tournament, according to information released by the conference directors yesterday.

In front of Greenville in the favored spots are Kingston and Washington. The Red Devils have been given the number one spot while Washington's Pam Pack has been seeded second. Roanoke Rapids rounds out the seeded clubs in fourth place.

The tournament will get underway on February 28 in Wright Gymnasium on the campus of East Carolina College. Three games are scheduled for the first night, with the top-seeded Red Devils drawing a bye and moving into the semifinals.

Roanoke Rapids and New Bern will open the three day tourney, while Washington and Edenton meet in the second contest of the first night. A game between Greenville and Elizabeth City will finish up the first round action.

In the semi-finals to be staged on Friday night, Kingston will battle the winner of the Greenville-Elizabeth City contest, while the winners in the other two opening games will meet in the second contest of the night.

Preceding the championship game to be played at 9 p.m. on Saturday night, there will be a consolation game between the two runners-up in tournament play.

An All-Conference team to supplement the All-Tournament team will be picked for the first time this year. The tournament committee is composed of Chairman O. E. Dowd, principal of Greenville High School, Jack Horne of Kingston, and Joe Kornegay of Washington.

Walcott To Fight Charles In June

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York State Athletic Commission should have in the mails today a letter from Jersey Joe Walcott announcing he'll defend his heavyweight title against Ezzard Charles in June.

And the letter will have arrived just in time, for today was the deadline for Walcott to sign to defend his title or have his crown taken away from him by the state commission.

Actually, negotiations for the fight were completed Saturday when Felix Boechchio, manager of the 38-year-old champion and Jim Norris, head of the International Boxing Club, reached an agreement.

Norris will select the site at some future date.

Norwegian Team Wins Third Gold Medal In Event

OSLO, Norway (UP)—Hjalmer Brenden, a 23-year-old Norwegian lumberjack, won the Olympic 18-kilometer cross-country ski race today in the record time of one hour, one minute and 34 seconds.

Simon Slaattvik of Norway, winner of yesterday's jumping event, won the Nordic combined competition by finishing third in the cross-country race in one hour, five minutes and 40 seconds.

The Nordic combined championship is based on the best placings in the jumping and cross-country events. Today's cross-country event thus was a race in itself as well as the second phase of the Nordic combined competition.

Brenden's victory gave the host Norwegian nation its third gold medal. Hjalmer Andersen won the 5,000-meter speed skating race in record time yesterday and Stein Eriksen won the men's downhill ski race Friday.

The U.S. lost the team leadership yesterday by failing to add to its total of 34 1-2 points while Austria rocketed to 41. And Norway began Monday's competition in a challenging position with 32 points.

In winning the 5,000 meters yesterday, Norway's Andersen clocked 8:10.6 to clip exactly nine seconds off the Olympic record. The Netherlands took second, fourth and fifth places, Norway third, and Sweden sixth.

U.S. skiers ran into some hard luck yesterday.

In the women's downhill ski race, Mrs. Andrea Mead Lawrence of Rutland, Vt., winner of the ladies' slalom on opening day, was making a strong bid for her second gold medal when she gambled and lost. Because of the course was dangerously streaked with ice, officials had placed 28 "gates" on the course through which the skiers must pass.

Approaching one of these at breakneck speed, Mrs. Lawrence elected to make a leap—and she skidded into some soft snow and nearly fell. The lost time placed her 17th in the field. Winner of the event was Trude Beiser-Jochum of Austria.

East Carolina Moves Into Three-Way Tie For North State Conference's Top Spot With Second Win Over Indians

By JIMMY ELLIS

Reflector Sports Writer

SALISBURY—Another third quarter scoring spurge Saturday night with the Catawba Indians as the victims enabled the East Carolina Pirates to pull into a three-way tie for top honors in the North State Conference. The score of the Saturday night scapling of the Indians was 69-59.

The victory was a pleasing but not easy one for the Pirates. Catawba moved more quickly. The smaller Colie didn't stop Hunsucker, but he slowed him down considerably and Hodges and Blake began working on the rebounds.

The double post system enabled the Pirates to work better and get the ball moved more quickly. The smaller Colie didn't stop Hunsucker, but he slowed him down considerably and Hodges and Blake began working on the rebounds.

Catawba was held to only nine points in the third quarter and was unable to score in the fourth period until four minutes of playing time had elapsed.

While Catawba was stalled by the forcefulness of the Buc attack, the Pirates were building up their comfortable margin. Russell hit for nine points in the fourth period to spark the offense but Hodges contributed six points for his share of the work. Catawba scored only 10 points in the fourth period and was almost unable to do anything at all.

The Pirates' last half work was a good show of team work. Guard Toddy Fennell and his sub, Cecil Heath, did some good work in bringing the ball into the forecourt against a pressing game thrown up by Catawba. Big Charlie Huffman went into the line-up at a forward post and racked up two timely field goals which helped considerably while Russell, Blake and Hodges were working over the Indians in rebound play. Colie had his hands full with Hunsucker but he did his job well—something the Catawba scoring in the last half will well indicate.

ACE Plan Not To Affect NCAA

CHICAGO (AP)—The National Collegiate Athletic Association has announced that the American Council on Education's new stringent athletics control plan will have no immediate effect on present NCAA policies.

However, confusion in collegiate athletic circles appeared to be growing today.

Most of this centered around spring football practice, which the Executive Committee of the ACE abolished in its plan adopted in Washington Saturday.

The NCAA, made up of 343 member universities and colleges and 12 allied conferences, has okayed spring drills on a limited basis.

Edward (Moose) Krause, Notre Dame athletic director, keynoted the sentiments of most sports officials. "The ACE program is the wish of the school presidents and they are the heads of our institutions," he said. "But I'm certainly eager to learn if we can have spring football practices this season or not. We're scheduled to start on St. Patrick's Day."

The ACE plan, backed up by possible loss of academic standing for violating institutions, abolishes all football bowl games and spring practices; eliminates outright athletic scholarships; limits basketball practice and games to a 3½-month period between Nov. 1 and March 15; limits baseball practice to 3½ months between Feb. 1 and the end of the school year; prohibits the use of freshmen on varsity teams; requires all athletes to make regular progress toward a degree and requires that all athletic funds be handled by the university.

Tarboro Team To Operate Again

TARBORO (UP)—Ray Goodman, president of the Coastal Plain Baseball League, said today that Tarboro will operate this year in the league.

Goodman said he had had a three-hour conference with representatives of Louis Baseline, New York businessman. The club will be operated independently, although Baseline's other team, Scranton, Pa., has an agreement with the St. Louis Browns.

North State In Three-Way Lock For First Place

By UNITED PRESS

The North State Conference basketball race roared into its final week today with three teams bunched in a tie for first place and another pushing hard.

Elon, Appalachian and East Carolina are tied for first. All have 10-4 conference records. High Point, with a 10-5 record has played its final regular season game but could move ahead if the leaders lose a few.

The NAIB playoffs are scheduled at Elon a week from today and the North State Conference tournament will be played a week from Thursday at Statesville. Who will be top-seeded is anybody's guess.

Lenoir Rhyne, pushing High Point in loop standings, will play out of the conference tonight with a home game against Newberry. Western Carolina goes to Wofford.

Tuesday night will put Catawba at Guilford and Erskine will play at Appalachian in a game that won't affect the standings.

Appalachian will put its lead on the block Wednesday night with a home game against Western Carolina while Atlantic Christian takes on Westinghouse Apprentice.

Thursday night Elon will go to Guilford and Friday East Carolina takes on The Citadel from the Southern Conference.

Saturday in the season windup Elon will be at Lenoir Rhyne and Catawba at Appalachian.

In Saturday night's games Elon got back into the first place tie with a 76 to 62 win over Guilford. High Point finished out its season by edging Lenoir Rhyne 60 to 58. Western Carolina pulled an 84 to 83 upset over non-conference Wofford.

Gehrmann Sets New U. S. Record For 1,000 Yards

NEW YORK (AP)—No two ways about it, Don Gehrmann is one of the greatest runners in the world today.

That may sound like going overboard for the slender Wisconsin whippet. But it isn't. It might even be an understatement.

For the past few years, Gehrmann has been an unknown quantity. He won practically all his mile races, all right, but he never went below 4:07.5. Everyone said he still had to prove himself.

He has. He smashed one of the toughest records in the books in the National AAU championships at Madison Square Garden Saturday night when he literally sprinted the 1,000 yards in 2:08.2, shaving six-tenths of a second off the late John Borican's American record.

Borican set his mark of 2:08.8 back in 1939 in a race with Glenn Cunningham. That one, too, was sprinted from gun to tape, but Borican was being pushed.

Gehrmann had no competition. For the first time since the railbirds have been watching him in the Garden, Don ran against the clock instead of against his opposition. If he had waited around for Roscoe Browne and Reggie Pearman, his closest rivals, he wouldn't have broken 2:10.

Fred Wilt, who was beaten in 4:11.4 mile by Bill Mack, a Michigan State graduate, for one, thinks Gehrmann ought to run the 800 meters in the Olympics instead of the 1500. The 800 is about a half mile, the 1500 about a mile. Wilt added that he thinks Gehrmann can do even better than 2:08.2.

Groat Slips But Still Holds Lead In Loop Scoring

By The Associated Press

Dick Groat's average fell off during the past week but the Duke University captain and guard remained out front in the Southern Conference basketball scoring race just the same.

Groat has an average of 26.9 points for Duke's 11 games. His nearest rival, West Virginia's Mark Workman, has a mark of 25.8.

Frank Sely, Furman star, is resting in third with 23.0 and Dwane Morrison, South Carolina forward, is in fourth with 22.1. Washington and Lee's Jay Handlan jumped from seventh to fifth the past week with an average of 21.9.

Meanwhile, the race for berths in the March 6, 7 and 8 conference tournament at Raleigh, N.C., continues tonight when four league games are on the program. Three of them have direct bearing on the tournament picture.

Maryland's Terps (7-3) invade Duke for a scrap with the Blue Devils (8-3), tied with South Carolina for fourth place in the standings. South Carolina is host to Wake Forest (4-6). William and Mary (8-5) journeys to Virginia Tech (3-8). In a game involving non-contenders, North Carolina visits Davidson.

The scramble for the eight places in the tourney has narrowed down to seven clubs fighting for six places. League-leading West Virginia (12-1) and runnerup North Carolina (10-2) already have fully assured themselves of invitations.

William and Mary remained in the thick of the race Saturday night by knocking off Maryland, 71-66. Ducky Drake, with 20 points, was the big W & M point-collector. Sophomore Don Dunlap picked up 15 for Maryland.

Clemson strengthened its bid with a 77-69 win over North Carolina. Guard Jones Sneer was tops for Clemson with 20 points but yielded scoring honors to North Carolina's Al Lifson, who bucketed 25.

With Forward Mel Thompson poking in 24 markers, North Carolina State gave George Washington's tourney hopes a setback with a 71-58 victory over the Colonials. Tex Silverman's 11 points led G-W.

Workman and Mack Isner each sank 20 points as West Virginia rolled over Virginia Military, 84-49.

Pope Gregory XIII in 1582 ordered that October 4 be followed by October 15 in order to adjust the inaccuracy of the Julian calendar.

Bill Ralph was high for VMI with 14. The Citadel got its first conference triumph with a 62-52 victory over Davidson. Teddy Weeks Jr. was the Citadel's big gun.

Furman edged Presbyterian, 77-76. The University of Richmond was downed by Georgetown, 69-54.

Belvoir Jayvees Have Unbeaten Season So Far

BELVOIR—Coach Ed Warren's Junior Varsity of Belvoir High School has won eight consecutive contests without a defeat this season.

The most recent decision for the Junior Eagles came last Friday night when they walloped Winterville's Jayvees, 51-28, in a preliminary scrap to the varsity games between the two schools in Winterville.

Gene Bell and Gene Harris have been the offensive leaders throughout the season. Harris dropped in 20 points in that last outing while Bell was held to only nine points, but Bobby Pollard took over for the ousted star and tallied 11 points.

Harvey Strickland, Willis Peeden and Bobby Bullock have led the defensive work for the Eagles throughout the short season.

Included in their string of victories are two wins over both Stokes and Chocod, and one each over Ayden and Winterville. The Belvoir team also has beaten the Greenville Midgets.

Two games are slated for the Junior Eagles this week. They are with Ayden and Greenville's Junior Varsity.

Jack Burke, Jr., Wins Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Jack Burke Jr. went to Houston today to show his golfing prowess to the home folks, a $2,000 check in his wallet as champion of the 25th Texas Open.

Burke shot a record 260 for 72 holes in winning the Texas Open, closing out with two rounds of 7-under-par 64 yesterday. He recorded 67-65 in the earlier rounds over the 6,400-yard par 71 Brackenridge Park Course.

Burke's $2,000 here pushed him into the fifth place among the money-winners of the year with a total of $2,700. Cary Middlecott of Memphis, Tenn., is No. 1 with $4,320.

Houston starts its $10,000 open tournament Thursday.

Pope Gregory XIII in 1582 ordered that October 4 be followed by October 15 in order to adjust the inaccuracy of the Julian calendar.

Bill Ralph was high for VMI with 14. The Citadel got its first conference triumph with a 62-52 victory over Davidson. Teddy Weeks Jr. was the Citadel's big gun.

RUPTURED THE DOBBS TRUSS BULBIEN-BELTLESS STRAPLESS

I CAN HOLD YOUR RUPTURE

And Give You Comfort and Relief Without an Old-Fashioned Type

"TRUSS"

LEARN HOW — NOW

Expert Fitter Will Be In Our Store Wednesday Afternoon, February 20th, 2 P. M. to 7 P. M. For Free Demonstration

If your rupture is larger this year than last, it may be due to your wearing the wrong truss, perhaps, one with a knob that fits into the opening and spreads the muscles apart. The Dobbs Truss has a CONCAVE PAD that fits over the rupture like the palm of your hand and supports the muscles in a more natural position. No belts or straps to bind and chafe. It only presses the body in two places. Don't delay until your rupture becomes irreducible when it's too late. Try the famous Dobbs Truss now. It has given relief to thousands after others failed. For men, women and children. Note the date and come in.

No Contesting In Gable Divorce

HOLLYWOOD — (AP) — Clark Gable won't contest his wife's divorce suit, his studio says. Gable returned yesterday from New York, where he had several "very friendly" talks with Mrs. Gable, the former Lady Sylvia Ashley, an MGM spokesman said. Hollywood, after hearing reports the pair couldn't agree on a property settlement, had been expecting Gable to fight his wife's suit, filed last May.

Stocks And Market Reports

NEW YORK (UP)—Stocks resumed their drift downward on curtailed volume today after rising a few cents on Saturday.

Some of the leading oil shares lost more than other issues. Skelly touched 86 1/2 off 2 1/4 and Standard Oil (NJ) was at 76 7/8 off 1 5/8. Amerasia touched 180 up 1. Gulf and Pure Oil lost a point each. Other petroleum shares held in a fractional area.

About a dozen issues lost a point or more in the leaders. These included Northern Pacific and Atlantic Coast Line in the rails; duPont and Monsanto in the chemicals; General Tire in the rubbers; American Viscose in the textiles; and Aluminum Co. of America in the non-ferrous metals.

Utilities rose a few cents in their average which set a new 20-year high. Motors held steady to firm. Steels were steady to slightly easier.

Encyclopedia Of Communists Is Opinionated

By TAD SZULC

United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK (UP)—Baseball is merely an English game notable only for its resemblance to a sport invented in Russia centuries ago.

So the Russians say.

That observation, with denunciations of the Western world and its history, features the new edition of the Great Soviet Encyclopedia, of which the first seven volumes have arrived in this country.

The seven volumes—the complete work will have 90—cover only the letters "A" and "B." Every Western figure whose name falls in that group is denounced. Only Alexander the Great and his conquests in Asia Minor, Persia and India in the 4th century B. C. draw a really favorable review from the Russians.

Russia's encyclopedia uses plenty of quotes from Karl Marx and Joseph Stalin to give authority to its judgments. Much of the Soviet work is given to editorial opinion in contrast with the fact and presentation of Western encyclopedias.

The encyclopedia was started in 1949 by the government. The editor is V. Vavilov. There is no indication when the last volume will appear.

Besides dismissing baseball as an offspring of the Russian game of kapla, the encyclopedia gives the United States other attention.

John Adams, second President of the U. S., is rated in the class of reactionaries, capitalists and enemies of the people. His Federalist Party is described as a branch of British bourgeois-conservatives.

Adams, the Russian encyclopedia says, was noted while in office for his "strengthening of reactionary elements in the government" and for the persecution of the progressive press. The only good word the encyclopedia has for Adams is that he favored establishment of diplomatic relations between the U. S. and the Russia of Catherine II.

South American patriot Simon Bolivar is described as a would-be dictator who sought to replace Spanish rule with that of powerful landowners.

Stanley Baldwin, former British prime minister, is described as an enemy of the Soviet Union, fomenter of the 1926 general strike in England because he fought against raising living standards for workers, and an enemy of freedom for the colonies.

Leon Blum, famous French Socialist leader, is described as a traitor to the working class and as "the most despicable enemy of the Soviet Union... of peace, democracy and socialism."

The encyclopedia is especially interested in Alexander the Great because his conquests "were responsible for assuring up to the present the Greek slave system"—presumably by providing lots of extra slave labor. Stalin is quoted as believing that Alexander "inaugurated a new era in the development of a slave society."

No Inquest Planned In Woman's Death

BETHEL—An 85-year-old Negro woman was found dead at her home here early this morning.

Coroner Griffin H. Rouse stated that Lizzie Jones, 85, died of natural causes sometime last night or this morning. No inquest will be held into the death, Rouse stated.

Dog Trainer Is A Biting Soldier

SINGAPORE (AP)—A British Tommy, whose mission in life is to train dogs for the army, was convicted himself recently of biting a corporal.

The soldier, a member of the Army Guard Dog Unit in Singapore, was sentenced to 84 days detention for assault, absence without leave and creating a disturbance.

His court martial was told that when he returned late one night from leave, he objected to questioning from a corporal and a struggle ensued. During it, came the bite.

Ike's Aloofness Worrying Some

By RAYMOND LAHR

United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—Sen. Irving M. Ives (R-NY) said today that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower can win the Republican presidential nomination without coming home to campaign. But other Eisenhower boosters were not so sure.

Some frankly admitted they are worried about the recent indications that the general means to remain at his Paris military headquarters until after the GOP nominating convention in July.

One top leader of the Eisenhower organization said that the general's adamant refusal to return to this country for "non-political" speech-making has been "damaging" to the campaign.

This Republican, who asked not to be named, told a reporter that all of the pro-Eisenhower leaders "hope" for the general's return before July. The only divergence of view, he said, is that some do not consider it absolutely necessary.

This latter view was upheld by Ives who said Eisenhower's return would be "beneficial" but not "indispensable" to the campaign.

"I think he will be nominated if he doesn't come home," Ives said.

He added that an immediate return would subject Eisenhower to criticism that he quit his post as European defense commander before the job was done.

When he declared his availability for the GOP nomination last month, Eisenhower said he would not campaign for the nomination. Some of his supporters felt, however, that he could finish his European assignment in time to return before the convention and make speeches under non-political auspices. But the general has indicated he will not even return for West Point's sesquicentennial celebration which ends June 1.

There has been mounting pressure for Eisenhower to return and speak on current issues lest Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio take a commanding lead in the race for the nomination.

Sen. George D. Aiken (R-Vt.), for example, has repeatedly insisted that Eisenhower must speak out if he wants the nomination.

Other political developments: 1. Supporters of both Eisenhower and Harold E. Stassen were expected to enter their names in the Pennsylvania GOP presidential preference primary before today's 5 p.m. deadline.

Taft predicted that the issue of corruption in the Truman administration will "underlie the whole election." In a radio interview yesterday, the Ohio senator said he doesn't "put any stock" in public opinion polls indicating that many voters are "apathetic" toward skulduggery in the government.

He said his campaign tours across the country have convinced him that "the people have been aroused" and that they realize the scandals reach "right up to the doors of the White House."

3. Taft's campaign headquarters announced that "prominent doctors in every part of the United States" have formed a committee to support Taft for president. R. Ernest E. Irons of Chicago, chairman of the group, said physicians have special reasons to be "grateful" to Taft "for the valiant part he has played in saving our country from the scourge of state socialism."

Charge Youth Burned Alive

INDEPENDENCE, Calif. (UP)—Two teenage Indian boys face arraignment today for allegedly "burning alive" a 22-year-old caretaker in the lonely Saline Valley, 60 miles east of Lone Pine, Calif.

The boys, Phillip Hunter, 15, and Irving Miller, 13, confessed yesterday to any County officers that they shot the caretaker, known only as Johnny, in an ambush about two weeks ago after he threatened to turn them in to the authorities.

The youths, sheriff's officers said, remained the next day and set fire to the bunkhouse where the wounded man had taken refuge.

Coroner Edward Blake reported the slain man's bones had been scattered over a wide area and the actual cause of death could not be determined immediately, however, Sheriff Charles Cline said there was reason to believe the caretaker was alive when the bunkhouse was set fire.

The caretaker had been employed by A.E. Monteth of Los Angeles to work at his ranch about four months ago.

Too Much School Protests Trade
YAKIMA, Wash. (AP)—Painters are blaming the emphasis on college education for the shortage of apprentices for industrial painting.

The complaint was voiced here recently by Joe B. Wiesman, the executive secretary of the Seattle chapter of the Washington Council of Painting and Decorating Contractors of America.

He said he felt that the present method of counseling high school students over-emphasized the opportunities offered by advanced academic training. Skills developed by industrial apprenticeship programs are just as necessary to the national welfare as the attainment of college sheepskins, he said.

Wins Degree By Close Timing
SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP)—Attractive Betty Groebli used split-second timing to get her bachelor's degree.

Wife of a professor and mother of 9-year-old Gary Groebli, Betty worked out an exacting schedule to educate herself. Often she would attend an 8 a.m. class at Santa Barbara College then rush home to get Gary and hubby off to their respective schools.

Now that 14-year-old young brunette has her B.A. degree, she plans to work out another schedule and try for her master's degree.

Restrict Age Of Employed Girls
CALGARY, Alta. (AP)—Recommendations that no girl under 18 be allowed to accept jobs as counter girls, waitresses or hotel chambermaids without written permission of her parents was passed by the Alberta Council on Child and Family Welfare here. Mrs. Harold Riley, president of the council, said temptations for teenagers today were greater than ever before.
