Post-Truce Peace Talk Accepted

But Korea Negotiators Split Further Over Russian Neutrality Issue

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP)—Truce negotiators agreed today on a recommendation for a Korean peace conference, but split further over Russia's eligibility to police an armistice.

The full armistice delegations agreed to recommend to their governments that talks begin within 90 days of a cease-fire on the withdrawal of foreign troops from Korea, "peaceful settlement of the Korean question, etcetera."

The agreement completed negotiations on the fifth and final item on the armistice agenda, but the delegations still were poles apart on key sections of the two preceding items—supervision of the truce and an exchange of war prisoners.

Staff officers of the two sides argued fruitlessly for two hours over the U.N.'s right to veto the Communist choice of Russia as one of six neutral nations to police the truce.

U.N. Col. Don O. Darrow accused the Communists of breaking an agreement by refusing to withdraw their nomination of Russia and name some other country. He contended they had agreed that all six nations on the Neutral Advisory Commission must be acceptable to both sides.

Chinese Col. Pu Chan retorted that Russia qualified as a neutral because it has no combat forces in Korea. He demanded that the U.N. withdraw its "groundless and baseless objections."

The staff officers also still are deadlocked on three other issues connected with supervision of the truce—the number of troops who may be rotated during the cease-fire, the number of ports through which the troops may pass and the right of the Communists to build airfields in North Korea during the truce.

A second group of staff officers reported it reached "just about complete agreement" on the wording of the last five paragraphs of a nine-point solution to the war prisoner exchange program.

The agreement involved "meticulous details of phraseology," however, rather than any new substantive questions. The basic disagreement in the prisoner debate—right of prisoners to refuse repatriation—was not even discussed.

Both groups of staff officers will meet again at 11 a. m. Wednesday (9 p. m. today EST).

Scarlet Fever In Epidemic Stage

ELKIN (UP)—The Surry County health officer, Dr. R.B.C. Franklin, said today that scarlet fever here has reached epidemic proportions. "Though very few cases have been reported to doctors, various evidence shows that scarlet fever has reached epidemic proportions," he said. He said he is disturbed that parents are not getting cases in children treated.

ABC Sales Show Major Increase

RALEIGH (UP)—ABC store sales were up 25 per cent last month, state chairman Robert W. Winston said today.

Winston said January sales total $5,019,035, up $1,014,275 from the same month last year. He said new stores opened in Greensboro and Winston-Salem were mainly responsible.

Heavily populated Mecklenburg County was high as usual with $763,107. Following in order of volume of sales were Greensboro, Asheville, Winston-Salem and Wake County.

At Least 37 Fatalities In Stormy New England

Gale-Driven Snow Leaves New England Virtually Paralyzed; Travelers Stranded; More Snow Predicted

BOSTON (UP)—At least 37 deaths were attributed to a gale-driven snowstorm which left New England virtually paralyzed today.

The weather bureau forecast more snow for tomorrow.

The savage nor'easter, worst storm to hit the six-state region this winter, left at least 1,500 travelers stranded in shoulder-high snow drifts on Maine highways.

Mountainous waves pounded the coast from Maine to Connecticut and two tankers broke up off Cape Cod.

Beach front cottages were reported swept away by 60-foot waves at Minot's Beach, Plum Island and other coastal resorts.

The storm dumped up to 31 inches of snow in some areas and left nearly every highway in Maine choked through the second night to reach marooned motorists, many of whom had been stranded for more than 24 hours.

At Scarborough, Me., where some 1,000 travelers were stranded, a Boston & Maine Railroad train rescued part of the group.

The three-car passenger train halted under a highway overpass and a group of sailors formed a human chain down a steep grade leading from the road to pass 175 persons to the train. Many of the rescued were women and children.

In Portland, Me., bus service was halted and most main streets were opened only to single-lane traffic. Milk and food deliveries were at a standstill in the city and many other Maine communities.

In some sections, residents used snowshoes and skis to get to work but many industrial plants and business establishments were forced to close.

Red Cross Fund Campaign Starts

Kick-Off Breakfast Held; Advance Gift Teams Go To Work

The Advance Gifts Committee of the 1952 Red Cross Fund Campaign met this morning for a kick-off breakfast in the dining room of the Hotel Proctor and outlined further plans for the campaign.

Dr. Leo Jenkins, general chairman of the campaign, presided over the meeting and P. Bauger Johnston outlined the techniques of the advance gifts team members.

The teams are headed by Jenkins, Johnston, Jimmie Brewer, and A. W. Bryan.

Jenkins announced that the collection point of the advance gifts would be the Chamber of Commerce office at Five Points and someone would be stationed there throughout the week to take the gifts.

The chairman told the group that he had been appointed in county municipalities to conduct the campaign and the Service League, Woman's Club, and a Negro organization headed by D. D. Garrett would also be helping with the campaign.

Jimmie Brewer, gifts chairman, reported that the work had been divided among teams and J. A. Taylor, who will solicit chain stores and out-of-town industries, said 35 percent of his goal had been collected.

Jenkins announced that Dr. Robert Holt was in charge of solicitation at the college and the A.R.O.T.C. at the college had underwritten the quota of blood for the next visit of the bloodmobile to Greenville.

Bill Watson announced that 36 Jaycees would be in charge of calling on employees of various business houses here for the fund campaign.

Following the breakfast, the team captains met with their teams to distribute the necessary material for advance gifts.

Slander Suit Is Filed Against Union Official

KINSTON (UP)—An Englishman who is taking out citizenship papers here brought a $25,000 slander suit today against an AFL union official.

Walter E. Cattle charged in the suit that Joe P. Hillock of Washington, international organizer for the Painters' union, called him a "bloody foreigner and a damn Communist."

Cattle said Hillock made the statement outside the main gate at the daron plant DuPont is building here Jan. 15. On Jan. 31 the union struck over internal difficulties and tied up construction for four days. Cattle works for DuPont.

Cattle quoted Hillock in the suit as saying the trouble between DuPont and the painters is "that out-of-state painters are on the job and it is Cattle's fault. Cattle will never work on the DuPont job because he is a bloody foreigner and a damn Communist."

Complaint Falls On Deaf Ears

DES MOINES, Ia. (UP)—An irate passenger telephoned city and state officials to complain about the Des Moines Railway Co., which operates city buses.

The man said a bus driver ordered him from a bus but failed to refund his 15-cent fare.

An investigation disclosed today that the man boarded the bus with a dog, two pigeons, a bass drum and a diaphan full of popcorn.

University Said Among Investors In Shipping Deal

University Of Chicago Named Major Investor In Surplus Ships Inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP)—The University of Chicago was named today as one of the three major investors in a richly profitable deal in war surplus ships now under Senate investigation.

A Senate investigations subcommittee is studying whether the deal—which returned 3 1/4 million dollars profit on investments of $101,000 in less than three years—was legal and "whether federal taxes were avoided."

William Leese, staff counsel of the subcommittee, testified the records of the deal show the university invested $15,000 in the venture, acquiring stock in the two key firms which engineered the complex transaction.

Leese did not immediately say what the firms' books and records showed as to the university's return from its investment.

Leese named Joseph E. Casey, Washington lawyer and former Congress member, as the largest single investor. He said Casey put in $20,000, receiving 2,000 shares of stock in American Overseas Tanker Corp., a U. S. firm, and 4,000 shares of stock in Greenwich Marine Corp., its subsidiary.

American Overseas bought eight tankers from the government and chartered them to Greenwich, a Panamanian firm which had the same stockholders as American Overseas.

Casey was named, as among those who shared in the profit, a retired Adm. William F. (Bull) Halsey of World War II fame; the late Edward R. Stettinius Jr., a wartime secretary of state, and Julius C. Holmes, minister of the U. S. Embassy in London.

As the hearing resumed, two subcommittee members told reporters that staff investigators had produced evidence of "some big fees" they said were paid in one phase of the ship deal to the law firm of Newbold Morris, President Truman's corruption investigator.

Sen. Nixon (R-Calif.) and Sen. Mundt (R-SD) said, "Morris has got to be called" to tell about the fees.

Morris was appointed by the President recently to direct a clearing up of scandals in the government; he has declared publicly that he received "not a penny" from the ship venture.

Nixon and Mundt said the fees reportedly were paid to Morris' law firm on a transaction which shifted three of the eight tankers involved to ownership of China International Foundation, Inc., a non-profit corporation which Morris heads. They said the legal work was done by Houston H. Wasson, Morris' law partner.

Three MIGs Are Downed In Battle

8TH ARMY HQ, Korea (UP)—Heavily outnumbered American Sabrejets shot down three Communist MIG-15 planes today in battles ranging across MIG Alley.

Two of the Russian-built jet fighters fell to earth in a snarling five-minute battle between 26 F-86 Sabrejets and 50 MIGs this afternoon. The other kill was made in a high-altitude clash between 27 Sabres and 100 MIGs in the morning.

The 5th Air Force said the afternoon fight started north of Sinanju and "ranged across MIG Alley" until the enemy fighters fled back to Manchuria. The morning fight took place at a height of 35,000 to 40,000 feet over Sinanju.

An additional 150 Communist jets were spotted over MIG Alley during the day and although firing passes were made, United Nations pilots made no additional claims.

Earlier, an unidentified plane dropped 16 bombs weighing 100 pounds each on Allied positions on the eastern front. There was no report of casualties or damage.

On the ground, two platoon-sized Communist attacks in rapid succession forced United Nations troops to withdraw slightly from an advance position West of the Mundung Valley on the eastern front. After directing mortar fire on the Reds, the Allies reoccupied the position without making contact.

Mayor Page left last weekend for the southern coast of Florida and plans to be out of the city about 10 days.

Mayor "pro tem" Jenkins has taken over Page's duties at the city hall for the next few days.

Military Chiefs Of NATO Argue Cut

Refuse To Approve Reducing 1954 Defense Goals Recommended By Council; Argue Necessity Of Present Targets

By STAN SWINTON

LISBON, Portugal (AP)—Military chiefs of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) refused today to approve sharp reductions in 1954 goals for the international defense force the West is raising.

The cuts were recommended by NATO's Temporary Council Committee under U. S. Mutual Security Administrator W. Averell Harriman. It's job was to recommend how much force could be supported by Europe's hard-up economies.

NATO informants said the committee urged a 15 per cent cut in land force goals and up to 20 per cent reduction in air force plans.

Generally accepted estimates of what the military men are demanding by 1954 include a land force of 100 divisions, either on active duty or in immediate reserve.

NATO sources said the final decisions between military requests and economic resources now will have to be made by the NATO council of foreign, defense and finance ministers, which begins meeting tomorrow.

The Harriman committee's final report was written after NATO members had seen and commented on its preliminary assessment of their economic ability to support military forces.

After reading it, the military chiefs drew up a brief which reportedly argues a necessity for holding to the 1954 targets.

The military comment will be given to the full council along with the TCC's recommendations.

Harriman's group represented the 12 original NATO members. Greece and Turkey, offered membership after the TCC was formed, were not included.

A joint committee of economic and military men and a section of the full Harriman committee with the military committee last night tried to iron out differences but apparently failed to agree.

Both the Harriman committee and the military committee still hope the 1952 goal of 50 to 60 divisions can be reached. However, informants from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's Supreme Allied Headquarters (SHAPE) believe a figure three-quarters that big is more realistic.

A NATO source said France led resistance to the military desire to stick to its goals, but the military chiefs, including France's Gen. Alphonse Juin, refused to budge.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is the chief American representative on the military committee.

The assembly also voted its confidence in the month-old government of Premier Edgar Faure, who gambled the life of his cabinet to push the European Army plan through the House.

The vote ended a week-long stormy assembly debate which for a time threatened Faure's government. It was the first time since the war that the life of a French government had hinged on a vote of confidence on a foreign policy issue.

The assembly approved a compromise Socialist-government motion endorsing the European Army plan on condition German recruitment is delayed until the pact formally is ratified. The compromise, was forced by the Socialists, who oppose the Army plan because they, like many Frenchmen, mistrust a revived German army.

In addition to delaying recruitment of West Germans, the compromise proposal bars Germany from immediately becoming a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. It also repeats a French request that Britain join the European Army and stipulates that national troop contingents be incorporated in the Army progressively at the lowest possible Army unit level.

The plan to call no more of them does not mean the Army is cutting its total of men on active duty. The gaps made by the release of reserves are being filled by draftees and volunteers.

The authorized Army strength set by Congress is 837,000. Whether this figure has ever been reached is secret.

In calling reserves, the Army has taken organized units with a total of about 40,000 men, plus more than 175,000 individual inactive and volunteer reservists.

All inactive and volunteer reserve enlisted men who wanted to be released have gone off active duty. Many inactive and volunteer reserve officers, however, still are on active duty. They are being released either after 17 or 24 months of active duty, depending on whether they are World War II vets.

Releases so far of enlisted men and officers from these reserve categories have totaled more than 100,000.

The Army has called about 135,000 National Guardsmen to active duty. They were in eight National Guard infantry divisions, two regimental combat teams and about 1,500 other smaller units.

Until last Friday, all the guardsmen and organized reservists were scheduled to serve 24 months on active duty. Then the Army announced enlisted men called with their National Guard and organized reserve units would be released from one to five months earlier than scheduled.

Most officers in these units will have to serve their required 24 months.

The plan is to release the enlisted men from their units in equal monthly groups of about one-fifth active duty. Primarily, the releases will depend on replacements and maintenance of the unit's combat effectiveness.

The Army will start in March releasing the men called in August, 1950. These men will be released on an individual basis, except those in National Guard anti-aircraft units. Anti-aircraft men will be released with their units and returned to state control.

Highly Qualified Sources Indicate Experiments This Spring At Pacific Atoll; AEC Chairman May Disclose Progress At Secret Committee Meet Thursday

WASHINGTON (UP)—Highly-qualified sources indicated today that the nation's first hydrogen bomb will be tested at Eniwetok Atoll this spring.

There was no official confirmation. The Atomic Energy Commission refused to go beyond its terse announcement yesterday that preparations are now under way for a new series of test explosions at the mid-Pacific proving grounds.

But it was learned that the congressional Atomic Energy Committee has called top AEC officials to a secret meeting Thursday to report on progress in carrying out President Truman's two-year-old directive to build a H-bomb.

It was strongly hinted, by persons in a position to know, that AEC Chairman Gordon Dean will be able to tell congressmen that an experimental H-bomb is about ready for testing.

Hydrogen bombs, unleashing the same elemental fury displayed in the burning of the sun, theoretically could be built 1,000 times as powerful as present A-bombs.

But the trail-blazing weapon which may be detonated on Eniwetok's lonely coral sands within a few weeks, is as powerful as some two to 10 times as powerful as an atomic bomb. The AEC is not concerned, in the first test, with determining how big an H-bomb can get. It wants to make sure first that it has perfected the technique of setting off a "thermonuclear reaction" in tritium (triple heavy hydrogen) atoms.

In such a reaction, the nuclei of helium atoms would fuse to create helium atoms, releasing awesome amounts of destructive energy in the process.

An A-bomb would be needed to serve as the "trigger" of the new weapon because thermonuclear fusion can take place only in the presence of multi-million degree heat—the kind of heat that is found only in the sun, or in the first split second after an A-bomb goes off.

Even if the Eniwetok tests are a complete success, large-scale production of H-bombs cannot begin until the AEC completes construction of its huge $1,250,000,000 Savannah River plant in South Carolina, which will be capable of turning out tritium in quantity. The Savannah River plant is scheduled to begin production late in 1953.

Tritium, it is understood, is now available to the AEC in test quantities, from a converted plutonium reactor at the Hanford, Wash., atomic plant.

The AEC has announced officially that the last spring's tests at Eniwetok "contributed to the development" of an H-bomb. Scientists learned from those tests that they can produce enough heat, with an A-bomb as a trigger, to provide the minimum conditions for a thermonuclear reaction.

Clean Bill Given Career Diplomat

John Carter Vincent Cleared Of Accusations By McCarthy

WASHINGTON (AP)—Career Diplomat John Carter Vincent was reported today to have been given a clean bill of health by the State Department's loyalty and security board.

He will shortly return to his assignment as U. S. diplomatic agent at Tangier.

Vincent returned here late last year, demanding a public hearing on a long series of accusations made against him by Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis.). Last month he testified before a Senate subcommittee and denied that he is a Communist, or has been a Communist, or has Communist leanings.

In his attacks, McCarthy has made much of the fact that Vincent was chief of the State Department's Far Eastern Division during the time when U. S. policy called for a merger of the Chinese Communists and Nationalists into a coalition government.

No More Major Guard, Reserve Units To Be Called Into Service

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Army said today it plans to call no more National Guardsmen or reservists to active duty except for a few small units and individual officers.

An Army spokesman said, however, changes on the international scene could throw its plans into the ash can.

Since the start of the Korean War, the Army has called about 350,000 guardsmen and reservists to active duty. Most of them will be released by the end of the year.

The plan to call no more of them does not mean the Army is cutting its total of men on active duty. The gaps made by the release of reserves are being filled by draftees and volunteers.

The authorized Army strength set by Congress is 837,000. Whether this figure has ever been reached is secret.

Thirty-Three Seamen Still Are Alive On Shattered Oil Tanker

CHATHAM, Mass. (UP)—Thirty-three seamen were found alive aboard the storm-shattered stern of the oil tanker Fort Mercer today, and the Coast Guard tried to duplicate the rescue operation that saved 32 others from the broken stern of the tanker Pendleton.

The possible death toll in the twin disaster off Cape Cod rose to 15 when five, and possibly six, seamen jumped into the sea to their deaths from the bow of the Fort Mercer, and the bow of the Pendleton ran aground with no sign of life aboard.

The two 10,000-ton tankers snapped in half some 25 miles from each other yesterday when a fierce nor'easter caught them off the treacherous coast.

The heroic crew of a Coast Guard lifeboat braved mountainous waves to pluck the 33 men from the Pendleton's drifting stern as additional rescue vessels stood by the other halves of the tankers.

"Just as we cast off we saw lights on the Pendleton go out and she rolled over on her port side," said fireman Fred Baker, 31, of Clifton Heights, Pa. "If we hadn't gotten off when we did all hands would have been lost."

The Navy cargo carrier Short Splice reported that 33 storm-battered seamen still lived aboard the Fort Mercer's stern.

"We have just contacted stern," the Short Splice radioed. "There are 33 survivors aboard. Stern seems to be okay. Stern riding from good."

But grimmer messages came from the cutter Yakutat and McCulloch as they shepherded the bows of the two tankers through the stormy seas.

The Yakutat messaged that "five or six" men plunged into the icy ocean to their deaths from the bow of the Fort Mercer in a futile attempt to reach life rafts floated to them by the cutter at dawn.

The McCulloch radioed that there was "no indication of life aboard" the bow of the Pendleton which lay aground. Capt. John J. Fitzgerald, 40, of Boston, and six of his crew were last seen aboard the Pendleton's bow. Two other members of the crew of 41 were lost previously.

The Yakutat reported that it floated rafts downwind to the bow section of the Fort Mercer and that "five or six" men jumped overboard into the icy waters in an attempt to reach them. When the cutter pulled the rafts back, no one was aboard them.

The Yakutat immediately abandoned rescue operations until daylight when it was expected that a second cutter, the Eastwind, would be alongside to help. The Eastwind was 30 miles from the scene but was proceeding at only four to five knots because of the heavy seas.

Psychiatrist At 40 Years Ago Duke To Speak To Teachers Today

On Wednesday night the Greenville City School teachers will have a dinner meeting in the cafeteria of the Training School.

Dr. Leslie B. Hohman of the Duke Hospital staff will be guest speaker. He is a neuro-psychiatrist of considerable fame and will bring a message of interest to all instructors of children.

J. H. Rose, city superintendent, said of Dr. Hohman, "He is the finest man in his field that I have ever heard. His work with children has met with remarkable success."

Following the dinner meeting, Dr. Hohman will address an audience in the college theatre, to which meeting the public is invited. This meeting will conclude the study course which has been sponsored by the city P.T.A. Council, with previous meetings on the past two Monday nights.

The P.T.A. Institute meeting, which is scheduled for 8:00 p.m., will follow the dinner for the teachers in the cafeteria.

Dr. Hohman comes to Greenville as a guest of the city school teachers organization.

Valentine Dance Queen Is Chosen

Norma Gwynn Basnight, Greenville High School student, was crowned queen of the Valentine Dance at the teen age club Saturday night after winning over nine other contestants.

The 10 contestants for the place of royalty among teen-agers were nominated by petitions in the high school last week and the queen was chosen by three judges Saturday night on the basis of poise, personality, and appearance.

Pat Crawford was chosen as runner-up for the title and other contestants included: Ronita Respass, Jonnie Simpson, Jane Winchester, Peggy Barnhill, Jo Hendrix, Donna Tabor, Sally Beard and Dinah Porter. The queen was presented a number of gifts donated by merchants in the city and the judges were Sam Brooks, Mrs. C. B. West Jr. and Key Norris.

Purchasing the music for the dance were Boots Teel and his band. The band was made up of 12 high school students and promises to be one of the best dance bands in this section. The band members made their own band stands and arranged their music. Members include Jerry Phillips, Tommy Smith, Billy Cozart, Boots Teel, Jim Rogers, Wayne Smith, R. C. Fields, Glen Briley, Jimmy Pizer, Joe Stell, Bobby Browning and Bruce Baker.

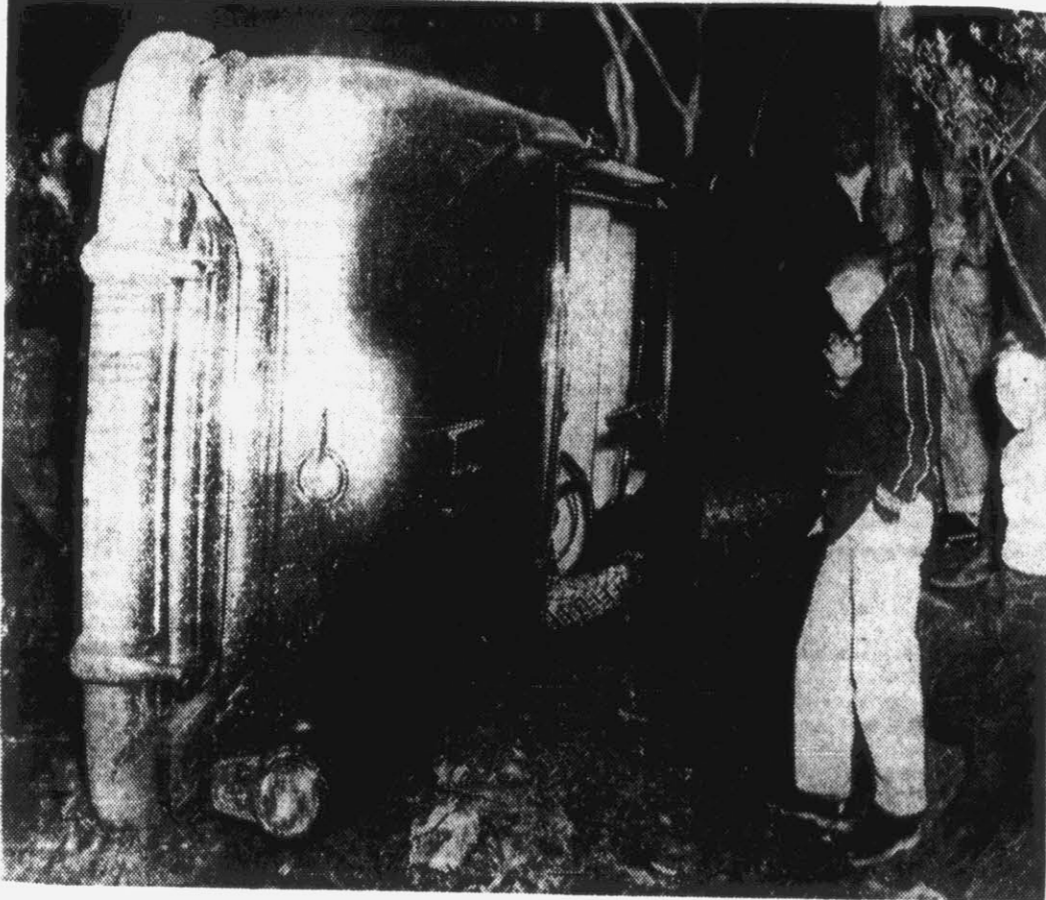

During the evening the new snack bar was opened and had been decorated by the teen-agers. About 450 people attended the dance and Joan Brooks and Doug Mitchell acted as masters of ceremonies.

4-H Honor Club To Be Organized

The 4-H Senior County Council met last night and voted to organize a county 4-H Honor Club.

The club will be composed of 4-H club members who fulfill some or all of the following qualifications: A national, state, or district winner; completion of 15 projects; completion of seven years of 4-H work; and the president of the county council is also included. The council voted last night to take health improvement as a county-wide project and also made plans for a 4-H window display in store windows to commemorate National 4-H club week which is March 1 through 9. A committee of three, William Harris, Rachel Spelant, and Howell Bone, was appointed to look into the possibility of a window display.

Following the business meeting, Mrs. B. L. Tyson led the council, junior council officers, and senior club members in games and square dancing.

Margaret Clark, assistant state 4-H club leader from Raleigh, attended the meeting.

Strength for the Day

By KARL L. DOUGLAS
NOT BY FRONTAL ATTACK

There is a warfare which goes on continually between the flesh and the Spirit. Their demands are contrary, the one to the other. The result of this incessant conflict is that we may become weak creatures, not able to do the things that we would.

St. Paul insists that there is a way to resolve this conflict. Desist from all frontal attacks against sin, which so often end in defeat, win your victory by filling your life with the Spirit of Christ. To strive against evil thoughts and practices is to wage a battle in which Satan has all the advantage, to fill the heart with love, to dwell upon our devotion to Christ, means to crowd out of our lives and thus to win our victory over the evil one by circumventing his designs.

"Walk by the Spirit," said Paul. Carrying the Spirit of Christ into your daily life. Religion is not something to be practiced one day in the week and forgotten the rest of the time. Christian faith means loyalty to Jesus Christ all the time in thought and deed.

The way to achieve Christian goodness is not by trying to be good but by seeking after Christ and taking him into our hearts. When we do this, righteousness follows in natural sequence.

Now It's Voodoo As A Secret Weapon

Advancement of the secret weapon field is pretty much left to Pentagon management; but on occasion, men in the combat area turn up something devilishly effective. A recent example is described in Monday's Reflector, to wit: African voodoo magic.

As in so many discoveries, the jungle mumbo-jumbo was an accidental innovation for Marine Air Group 12. With a few modifications (probably by a cat who digs the glossary and twirls of a jive joint) the rain dance and chant has been polished up to twentieth century standards.

So it's only a rain dance? Albert Einstein started with less in developing his theory of relativity. The field is wide open for researchers with all the gadgets of modern science.

Unless the laboratories buckle down, Marine Air Group 12 may expand their curiosity and delve into the forbidden arts of Haitian witchcraft, Black Forest sorcery and the black magic of Dark Age soothsayers.

That would be dangerous for Marine Air Group 12 and everybody else. Experiments by tyros can be devastating, as witness the extemporaneous "demonstration" which reputedly stirred up a Korean snow storm and provided shovel-duty for innocent soldiers seeking a brief holiday from the rigors of war.

If atomic weapons ever become outdated, look for their successors to emerge from a bubbling kettle of witches' brew stirred by the light of a full moon to the accompaniment of incantations and weird gyrations by descendants of the men of Marine Air Group 12.

Don't Cheer Yet! It's Only Starting

The FBI arrest of ten former Klansmen in North Carolina is being hailed as a very notable achievement, and the signaling of a new era of tranquility among peoples of a terrorized neighborhood.

It may be all of that; but before indulging ourselves in any enthusiasm, results of the trial before a jury of their "peers" should be awaited. For if these ten are truly related to the night-ridings and floggings that have occurred, then as members of the "secret empire" there must be others of their like who will resort to any extremes to harass, delay, coerce and balk the course of justice. It would be folly to presume such lawlessness as already displayed is limited to the handful now awaiting trial.

The battle has not been won, but only begun. Prospective jurors and attorneys who will handle the case are, or should be, aware of this truth.

There remains a pertinent question: Why were not the local authorities and the State Bureau of Investigation able to make a better showing in the case? The question riddles, for North Carolina's SBI has a reputation for resourcefulness and ability in criminology.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has all the known devices for tracing clues; but the local law enforcers were literally working in their own back yard... and they too have access to all the paraphernalia of the trade.

The floggings and terrorism in the affected area should have been cleared up by North Carolina authorities. It's a matter of principle with The Reflector that local problems should be solved on a local basis.

Hopes Of Armistice Again Are Waning

That spark of hope always lingering in the human breast dims again with the fantastic Communist insistence that Russia be regarded as a neutral fit to police the Korean armistice.

Such an absurdity can only denote the farcical attitude toward armistice in Korea which our enemy holds.

If they (the Communists) persist in their madness, it leaves no doubt as to their desire to undermine present negotiations until such time as they are ready to strike and drive the Eighth Army "out of Korea."

There is always a remote possibility that the Reds' stand is but another move in their cat-and-mouse game of maneuvering toward some sort of a truce. But this latter premise is weaker than even the most ardent lover of peace likes to think about.

Speculation on Communist intentions is fruitless, but it will go on. Too many people have a very personal stake in what happens in Korea.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—The whole postwar structure of Anglo-American-European unity and anti-Russian defense threatens to fall apart, unless Secretary Dean Acheson can salvage it on his current diplomatic mission overseas.

Although Moscow's negative gains within the last few weeks have been achieved so quietly so effortlessly, that they attract scant public notice, diplomats here, in London and in Paris are deeply concerned over growing dissensions within the democratic family of nations. As in Korea, the Kremlin is winning victories without taking any positive action.

Stalin is resorting to the weapon Britain used so effectively in her 100 years as a world and continental power. He has got the members of the United Nations, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and General Eisenhower's army strapping among themselves.

PREJUDICE—Recent debates in the British Commons on the Churchill-Eisen visit to Washington suggest the existence there of sharp anti-American prejudice, and fear that our rearmament effort will precipitate World War III.

When Churchill denied that the Truman Administration contemplated more aggressive tactics in Korea, attributing the report to "sections of the press," Opposition Leader Attlee reminded him that two high officials here—the Secretary of the Navy and Admiral Fechteler, Chief of Naval Operations—seemed to favor a naval blockade and bombing of China.

When Churchill reported that Washington still regarded Europe as our first defense line, commending General Bradley for saying that an all-out China conflict would be "the wrong war in the wrong place at the wrong time," a Labor leader shouted: "Yes, and on the wrong side."

This was a reference to the fact that the United States recognizes the Nationalist regime, while London considers the Communist as the going government.

DIVISION—Other anti-Churchill speakers declared flatly that, in their opinion, the United States was not sincere in professing a desire for a truce in Korea, and that we were playing a hypocritical game.

It is a long time since this country was assailed so fiercely in the parliamentary body of our principal ally. But the very existence of this sentiment shows how warily Churchill must walk to remain in power, and how far apart the two nations must remain on the Far Eastern problem.

To make it worse, this division runs like a dark thread in many other fields—Iran, Egypt, Indo-China, the Mediterranean.

CONTRIVERSY—Franco-German relations have sagged seriously on the questions of the rich steel-coal Saar area and the rearmament of the former enemy country.

Every military man says there can be no real defense of Western Europe without a German force of ten or twenty divisions. But Bonn refuses to make even a small contribution unless Paris abandons her attempt to retain the Saar permanently.

The Truman Administration is tangled thoroughly in this historic controversy. It was Mr. Acheson who first proposed German rearming, and as many diplomats thought, too precipitately. The two ancient foes, in September of 1950, had not recovered from the emotional and physical wounds of war.

As Secretary of State, General Marshall rendered the official American verdict that the Saar should be kept by France. Now that Bonn is in a position to bargain between Moscow and Washington, those two utterances make difficult any settlement.

DISSATISFIED—Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg, jointly and separately, are dissatisfied for many reasons of American origin. They dread the thought of revival of a German war machine. Together with every other European nation, they cannot endure the cost of contributing to Eisenhower's force without unbeatable sacrifices at home.

At Lisbon, Mr. Acheson will try to persuade participants in NATO to take the organization's aims and purposes more seriously. In addition to petty international squabbles, they refuse to transform it into a real alliance instead of a piece of diplomatic paper, according to Eisenhower.

He may also try to obtain the admission of Spain, Greece and Turkey to the general anti-Russian defense system. All our military experts urge their inclusion for reasons of strategy. In the past, however, our diplomats have bowed to Franco-British-Scandinavian demands that they not be admitted.

PRESSURE—Presidential as well as world politics may be affected by the success of the Acheson mission. The White House badly needs and wants a triumph in the foreign field before the conventions and November elections.

Any man would tend to offset Taft-McArthur criticism of the Korean affair. That is why Admiral Joy and his staff, under pressure from Washington, are making so many concessions in the present truce talks.

Domestically, an Acheson achievement might help General Eisenhower's political stock. "Ike" could come home to enter the Presidential race with a lead if the present threats to his defense organization are minimized or removed in the Paris and Lisbon negotiations.

Selected Shorts
"My special plea is that all of us should work to further social and economic progress based on the common ethical principles of our religions and as expressed in the Constitution of our country. I am sure that this is the way to combat the false philosophies of Communism and state planning and that only through a clear demonstration of the material and spiritual benefits of our free system can we convert others to it."—Charles E. Wilson.

The Trial Jump

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Of all the things I have read about Harry Truman, the latest reveals his sense of humor. Last week Harry took a group of newspaper reporters on a tour around the White House, which is undergoing a face-lifting that will cost us $5,500,000. The job was started in 1949 and the workers there are so used to seeing Harry around on inspection tours that they hardly glance at him. The date of completion is very near.

Harry promised to take the reporters out on his famous balcony some day and buy them a bottle of beer. When the reporters visited the Pennsylvania Avenue porch built by Andrew Jackson, Truman said he thought that old Jackson had put on too much porch, and said that he had considered chopping some of it off. But because of the uproar when he added the balcony in 1848, he gave up the idea. He said that the Washington newspapers would have a hemorrhage if he chopped the porch off. Anyway, he said he added that balcony only for architectural balance, and not lounging in the summer.

Harry pointed out what he called the tooth carpenter's place, a three-room medical-dental suite, and told reporters if they didn't behave themselves he would send them in there for a major operation.

In the main lobby, Truman said he scared the builders into putting up a new chandelier. The old one, he said, looked like a livery-stable lantern, and he said he would knock it down with a baseball bat if they put it up again.

Upstairs the job is so well advanced that the decorators are coming in this week to install draperies and carpets. Truman told the story of a Civil War President whose ghost is supposed to still be walking in the Lincoln Room. He said that once, when two school friends of the baby (Margaret Truman) were sleeping there, he suggested to the madam (Bess Truman) that he might arrange for the ghost to really appear. He didn't say how, but it didn't matter. Bess thought it would scare the girls to death, and "poed the idea."

On another occasion, the tub in his old bathroom began to sink through the floor when he was in it. He asked the madam what he would have thought if he had fallen into the Red Room when she was having one of her receptions for the ladies of the DAR. She didn't think it was funny and wanted to slap his face.

The job was originally supposed to be completed by March, 1951. Harry has raised cash about the delays, but now that the end is in sight people want to know what he's going to do about attempting to renew his lease for four more years.

And I thank you.

ELECTION MONEY — For the first time in twenty years candidates for public office this year can spend a reasonable amount of money without violating the law. The 1951 general election deleted the limitations on spending which have been in the law since 1931. At the same time, provisions requiring reports of spending and providing for prosecution for failure to report or for incomplete and inaccurate reports were tightened. In other words, the 1951 amendment to the election laws took the lid off spending, but spilled out in considerably more detail the duties of the secretary of state and the attorney general for prosecuting candidates failing to report or making obviously ridiculous and erroneous reports as to amounts spent.

EXPENSIVE — Running for office in a popular election on a statewide level is an expensive proposition. Many people have thought that the common talk about campaign spending was exaggerated, while many others have felt that the largest figures used in street corner gossip still fell short of amount actually spent. The statutory limits of $12,000 for each candidate for governor or United States senator, which had prevailed from assembly, were so obviously ludicrous as candidates or managers felt no moral compunctions in swearing to false reports. Governor Scott has talked freely to newspaper men about his headquarters set-up costing around $60,000 and he had frequently suggested $200,000 as a reasonable estimate on overall cost. His chief opponent in 1948 probably spent as much as did he, and gubernatorial candidates in previous campaigns quite likely spent more. Yet all of them signed sworn reports that spending was less than the statutory $12,000 maximum. Casual analysis of a few items going into legitimate campaign expenses will show the absurdity of any such limitation as $12,000 or even four or five times that much.

COSTS — There are approximately one million registered Democratic voters in North Carolina. A government post card now costs two cents, so one post card for each registered voter adds up to $20,000 in postage. Anyone with experience in such fields knows that it will take to compile a mail list, print a message on a mail list, and address it. There goes $40,000 and nothing has been done except one post card mailed to each voter. No personal visits, no telephone calls, no letters, no newspaper advertising, no radio time. Everybody who has been through a state campaign knows that in legitimate items travel, there are numerous other items which are not legitimate or unethical, and which seem necessary in order to let the people generally know where the candidate stands on public issues.

SOURCE — It is not hard to understand that a campaign fund of $200,000 or more is necessary to do a good job along these lines. Where is the money coming from? No candidate can be expected to put up the kind of money out of his own bank account. Most of it must come from his friends, and from sources in sympathy with his program. There is nothing wrong in that. What has been wrong in the past is largely corrected by the 1951 act which the law itself virtually prohibited the candidate reporting where the money came from and how it was spent. There have been rumors about bootleggers financing campaigns against legal sale of whiskey, about big manufacturers on the one hand and big labor unions on the other financing campaigns of candidates supposed to be sympathetic with their ideas. If both the letter and spirit of the law as now written are observed, such contributions will be legal—but the people will know where the money came from and where it went, who paid it and who got it. No experienced observer is naive enough to think the whole story will be published, but there is at least more inducement for candor and honesty than has been the case for twenty years.

JUSTIFIED — There undoubtedly has been some money spent in behalf of candidates that came from sources of questionable morality, but most of it has been appropriate to the interests of those contributing to it. If a group of school teachers, or members of a labor union, or stockholders in a big corporation, or farmers, or preachers or lawyers, feel that one candidate will be a better friend than another if elected, they have full right to help him, financially and otherwise. At the same time, other people have a right to know that such groups are continued on page twelve

The Voice Of The People

Dear Sir:

Your editorial in Saturday's Reflector regarding Grimesland's request of the Greenville Utilities Commission for permission to lower its current rates in order to meet those of Washington in our territory was certainly a death-blow to Grimesland.

We realize and respect your and your citizens' position; that the Utilities belong to Greenville and if the Utilities has any gravis to offer, your citizens should come first. Evidently that position Washington is disregarding. At the same time we want the Utilities Commission and your citizens to see our position and what we are confronted with.

We realize price cutting is very poor business. We realize it more when prices of everything pertaining to the manufacture and distribution of current is increasing. But Mr. Editor what else can we do to hold our business in the Chocowinity community when Washington is offering our customers electric current at a savings of $14.75 per thousand (1000) KWH. We cannot comfort ourselves by wishful thinking as that will not hold our customers. What we lose will be part of Greenville's loss also. To meet such competition sometimes you are forced to lower prices and in that way often your competitor will see the folly in such a venture and the results are a price stabilization.

We trust your Utilities Commission will see the situation as we do. If not, then they will have a part in liquidating our power line in Beaufort County and we can't believe they want to see that happen. In Beaufort County alone we have between $60,000 and $70,000 invested.

Thanking you for this space in your paper, I am Yours respectfully, T. R. Rouse.

Business Today

The current rash of silly contests by retailers is symptomatic of a decline in sales. It is also symptomatic of a desperation of some merchants.

These contests involve the playing of familiar songs over radio and offering prizes to all who guess the correct title, advertisements offering prizes to all who can correctly count the number of dots, or offers of awards to all who can rearrange the letters W, O and C to form the name of a common farm animal.

It doesn't matter if the contestant can't spell COW, count up to 16 or recognize the Side-walks of New York. He'll probably get a "prize" anyhow. The "prize" is usually a slip of paper resembling a check and good for $50 or $100 against the purchase of an expensive fur, television set or appliance.

These contests are rare in some cities, widespread in others. Their number depends on the slowness of sales, the desperation of retailers and the vigilance of local better business bureaus and city officials. It is possible that some of these contests are quite honest, but there is a suspicion — which has been proved by some BBB's — that a lot of them are just disguised discounts, sometimes against prices that have been marked up to stand the discounts better.

They must make sales, or they wouldn't be used so often. But the sales they make are at the expense of the seller's reputation, prestige and good will. And in those cases where the "prizes" are given even if the answer is wrong — and some "prizes" have been handed to people who did nothing more than walk into the store—even the dullest customer must realize he is dealing with a sharp operator.

If a person wins a prize in a contest, he has to pay income taxes on it. But without any ruling from the Bureau of Internal Revenue, it is a safe bet that no one will get into trouble for failing to pay taxes.

At least one arm of the government has decided the "prizes" aren't gains in income but simply discounts or rebates. The Federal Reserve Board has ruled that merchandise certificates cannot be credited against down payments under credit con-trails. Dealers have been told that in fixing down payments under credit contracts they must first subtract the face value of the price and calculate the down payment as a percentage of the remainder.

LATIN AMERICA CREDITS RATED
Cuba, Nicaragua and Panama ranked highest in both credit and collections in the 4th semi-annual survey by the Foreign Credit Interchange Bureau, Mexico, Dominican Republic and Haiti ranked second. Argentina, Bolivia and Paraguay were ranked poor in credit and slow in collections.

DOLLARS FOR OIL, VEGETABLES FOR DOLLARS
Speaking of foreign exchange: A Dutch company wanted to buy oil in Aruba, but the refinery there wouldn't accept guilders. So Esso Export Corp. exchanged dollars for guilders, used the guilders to buy fresh vegetables in Aruba and got back its dollars. William J. Haley, Esso Export president, told the story at a Pittsburgh University forum to demonstrate there are ways of getting around foreign currency barriers.

SUPER CHAIN SEEKS MALE CUSTOMERS
A number of recent surveys have shown that a surprisingly high percentage of supermarket shoppers are men, who do more impulse buying than women. Why a survey was necessary to determine the second point is not explained, asking almost any wife would have disclosed it.

Acting on this information, a New England chain has switched emphasis to men in its advertising. Half of a recent ad was a glorification of the chain's steaks, addressed to men.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK —(AP)—The present French-Arab tension in Tunisia must bring back my memories these days to thousand of American veterans.

For just nine years ago this week the U. S. Army's Second Corps was learning a bitter lesson in the art of warfare in the battle of Kasserine Gap.

Their teachers were the combat hardened warriors of Field Marshal Rommel's famed Afrika Korps. Pursued more than 1,000 miles across the sands from Libya by Montgomery's tenacious "Desert Rats," the Nazi commanders were hungry for gas and other supplies.

They decided to get them from the Americans, spread thinly along the right flank of the Tunisian corridor. Their hope was to crash the Yank line, roll their Panzers north to Constantine, a big Allied base, and wrap up the British Second Army en route.

With no enemy at his back, Rommel could then turn his freshly-supplied armor around and deal again with his old foe, Montgomery.

The breakthrough plan was almost exactly the same as that employed later in the war by the Nazis in their daring, hopeless gamble in the battle of the Belgian Bulge. And it failed for the same reason — in neither case did the Germans quite reach our supply bases.

But it looked like an easy touch in those early Tunisian days. The Americans were outnumbered and relatively untried by battle.

Leisurely the Nazis massed and in a sudden night attack seized Faid Pass from its French infantry defenders. This gave them an opening down into the plains. Fearful that this was only a diversionary action, and that the Germans would make their main drive through a pass farther north, the Allied command refused to let the American group and throw all its force in a single unified counter-attack.

The American units therefore went into action one at a time, and were simply chopped to pieces or forced to fall back in the face of the superior weight of the wheeled Panzers.

I remember standing with Ernie Pyle on the second day of the battle on a field redolent of almond blossoms shaken from the trees by the blasting guns. As far forward as the eye could see the area was littered with the hulks of burning American tanks, and we felt like crying. There were men in those tanks we had come to know as friends in a few short weeks, and they were dead now in a struggle against hopeless odds. It seemed like a great waste of human bravery then. And, looking back now, I guess I still feel that way.

That night Combat Command "B" of the First Armored Division, a tremendous fighting outfit, held back the Germans at Sbeitla, once a Roman outpost, while our trucks in relays carried back our supplies. Those that couldn't be removed were put to the torch, and the flames flickered about the old Roman ruins, ghostly in the black night.

This great stand helped defeat the Nazis. They went on through Kasserine Gap, driving the Americans back 40 miles but the Panzers never reached the gas dumps for which they were thirsting. British tanks and artillery trundled down to support him. Pass, Rommel pulled back.

It was the beginning of the end for his Afrika Korps, one of the great armies of history. The battered American force was taken over by two new generals — George Patton and Omar Bradley — and they began to build it into a mighty army.

They were all these men now, the green soldiers who fought so well in the dry wash and rocky djebels of Tunisia? Ernie Pyle is dead, and the men he wrote about are scattered widely.

Nothing exists of that battle now, except shards of old metal rusting in the timeless sands, and the memories of men who shared loyalty and danger there. Was it all only nine short years ago, or a century? Nothing is as temporary as an army.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Pauline G. Kells, petite and pretty, is a capable housewife with a blithe outlook on life despite the handicap of having been born without a left forearm. Since her early teens she has worn some kind of an attachment on that left arm. Nevertheless, she has managed to get through school and college, to mother a small son and do all the intricate householding that has been achieved by women most fortunately endowed.

An accountant at the Naval Gun Factory here, she not only runs her household and keeps her family happy, she is taking correspondence courses in accounting and studying voice.

Born in DeKalb county, Alabama, she has lived in Georgia, Florida and Virginia with what she describes as "a household of sisters"—five in all. She was graduated from the University of Maryland and five years ago married Robert D. Kells, who is now vice president of the Mount Vernon Foundation, a non-profit organization for educators. Her son, Robert H. Kells, is three.

When it was used to any handicap when I was a little girl," she told me. "My mother allowed no exceptions to be made for me, and I had to learn to do the household chores just like the rest of my sisters. My mother didn't want me to feel different."

She added that most handicapped persons may learn to do most of the things other persons do if they have the will to learn. "The only thing that bothers me is that I must bother other handicapped people as when other people are asking questions they don't ask," she said.

Since her son was old enough to understand, both Mrs. Kells and her husband have been telling him that "mother can do everything any one else can do."

Other children keep asking him what's wrong with his mother's hand, she said. "An oddity to a child is just an oddity. We had quite a little problem of educating the boy to this."

While attending the University of Maryland, Mrs. Kells learned to play tennis and bowl. She has a woman to look after the child and get supper week-days but she does most of her own housework — washing, ironing and baking. "I baked 30 pounds of fruit cake at Christmas time,"

Leads Sabrejet Squadron Over 'MIG Alley'

Lt. Col. William M. Shelton, husband of Mrs. Lillian Abce Shelton, 1202 Chestnut Street, Greenville, is shown being greeted by his crew chief after his first F-86 Sabrejet mission over famed "MIG Alley." Shelton has been promoted to squadron commander and leads regular fighter sweeps over the Korean front. Before entering the service, Shelton taught at Wilson High School, coaching three of the school's sports. He also played baseball for Greenville, and is a graduate of East Carolina College.

Same Charge For Sister Of Youth Now In Prison

ASHEVILLE (AP)—The sister of a former high school sports star serving a prison term for embezzlement has also been arrested and charged with a similar offense.

Miss Frances Bennett of Asheville was indicted yesterday by a Buncombe County grand jury on charges of embezzling $13,663.57 from the Western Auto Supply Co. She had been working for the company about three years. Unable to post $10,000 bond, she is being held in the county jail.

Her brother, Phillip Bennett, pleaded guilty in superior court last November to charges of embezzling

$3,495.98 from Charles M. Britt Co., a wholesale produce firm. He was sentenced to one to five years.

Soldier Refuses Battle Training

SEATTLE, Wash. (UP)—A petition for the discharge of a soldier who said he would "not even carry water for water-cooled machine guns" was on file in federal court here today.

The soldier, Enrico Pierino Manzo, Santa Barbara, Calif., filed his own petition seeking the discharge through a writ of habeas corpus on grounds that he is a conscientious objector.

Manzo, stationed at Fort Lawton here, said he had refused to train for combat or handle a rifle.

Two Freighters Aground On Mud

CAMDEN, N.J. (UP)—Tugboats attempted today to pull two freighters from Delaware River mudflats on which they were driven aground by 55-mile-an-hour winds yesterday.

The 7,212-ton Honduran vessel Sapho and the 2,304-ton Norwegian freighter Bessengen were grounded a short distance apart of Thoroughfare, a few miles South of here.

The Bessengen was inbound from Cuba with a sugar cargo, while the larger vessel was enroute to near-by Chester, Pa., after discharging a cargo at Philadelphia.

Private Hearing In Catawba Case

SALISBURY, N. C. (AP)—Three faculty members allegedly involved in recent internal unrest at Catawba College got a final hearing before the college Board of Trustees today.

The teachers are John C. Hadley, former head of the college's Department of Education, now an instructor in geography; Christopher J. Thomas, head of the Music Department, and his wife, a music teacher.

The three requested the hearing before the Board after their case was reviewed by a group of faculty members and trustees earlier this year. The college administration has never made public any charges against them.

However, after the first hearing involving the three, Dr. A. R. Keppel, president of Catawba, told reporters:

"This is an internal matter. We cannot discuss it. This thing happens hundreds of times in colleges all over the country, and always is handled privately."

The Catawba unrest became evident more than a year ago. Since then, the college administration has admitted a shortage of $13,626 was discovered in the business office, but said the money had been repaid.

Husbands Guests At Club Supper

The Fountain Home Demonstration Club had member's husbands as guests at a dinner meeting last week at the school lunchroom.

Mrs. C. B. Joyner gave the invocation and, as president of the club, welcomed the guests. The response was given by Mrs. Alton Moore.

Mrs. Ann Parker Hodges, assistant home demonstration agent, showed a record on the increase of farm commodities and increase in prices from 1930 through 1950.

Mrs. B. L. Tyson of the Red Oak community played her accordion and directed the group singing. Other special guests at the dinner included B. L. Tyson, Sheriff and Mrs. Ruel Tyson of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bell of Fountain.

Plane Used For Spotting Scrap

COLFAX, Wash. (UP)—The National Production Authority calls a three-pronged drive that has netted more than 1,000 tons of scrap metal here "The Colfax Plan."

Most of the metal scrap has been spotted from the air by a light plane pilot, and Colfax civic and farm groups picked it up.

Funds from the scrap sales are added to a community improvement fund. W. E. Stipe, the pilot, larger vessel was enroute to near-by Chester, Pa., after discharging a cargo at Philadelphia.

Memorial Rites

Pitt County Post 39 of the American Legion will hold memorial services tonight in honor of the men of Pitt County killed in World Wars I and II.

The ceremonies will be held at the Legion Home, and will follow the regular monthly meeting which begins at 7 p.m. Post Commander Lester Turnage asked that all members be present to pay tribute to the comrades who fell upon the field of honor in two world wars.

A business session will also be held during the supper meeting, the commander said.

Antibiotics For Plant Treatment

WASHINGTON (UP)—Antibiotics may some day be used against plant diseases as effectively as they now are used against human ailments, according to Agriculture Department scientists.

Experiments at the Beltsville, Md., research center have opened up a new approach to control of plant diseases caused by bacteria, fungi, and viruses. Scientists warn, however, that much more work is needed before any antibiotics can be recommended for practical disease control on farm.

In greenhouse experiments, Beltsville researchers applied minute amounts of 12 antibiotics as a thin layer of paste to stems of black valentine bean seedlings. The plants were then inoculated with halo blight organisms, a bacterial disease.

None of the seedlings treated with one antibiotic—streptomycin sulfate—developed symptoms of the disease and only slight infection appeared in untreated plants not treated with nine other antibiotics.

Chain Reaction From Diversion

SEATTLE, Wash. (UP)—Bus driver Harry R. Smith said all he did was to glance idly at some dogs playing on a parking strip.

The next thing he knew his bus rammed into another city bus, the second bus ran into a truck, and seven passengers were slightly injured yesterday.

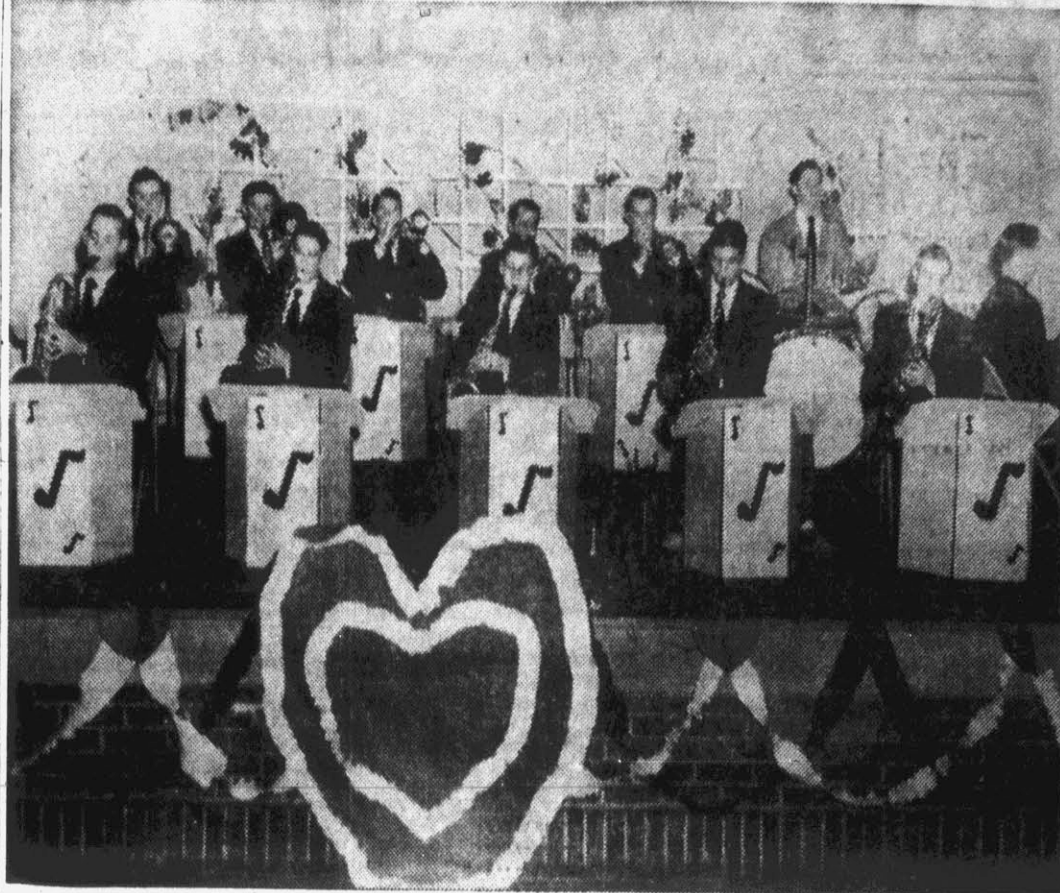

TRAINS GET TICKETS

DETROIT, Mich. (UP)—The Grand Trunk and Western Railroad paid $75 in traffic fines after pleading guilty to blocking traffic at a crossing on three different occasions. A city ordinance provides trains may hold up traffic for only five minutes at a time.

SHEEP MULTIPLY FAST

Pittsford, Mich. (UP)—Nelson Brinkenhoff has a flock of ewes on his farm which produced a 308 per cent increase in the past year. Brinkenhoff's 14 Dorset ewes gave birth to 28 lambs last spring, and 17 more in the fall for a total of 43.

Teen-Age Band Is Making Name For Itself

Above are members of the Greenville Teen-Age Band, which has been formed under the leadership of James E. Rogers, Greenville High School band director. New Jet Tool Device Expected To Speed Defense Production

PITTSBURGH (UP)—Hi-Jet, a revolutionary development which it is hoped may double the nation's metal cutting capacity and speed up defense production, has been announced here.

Invented by J. R. S. Pigott, director of engineering research of the Gulf Research—Development Co., Hi-Jet combines a system of small high-speed jets of oil with a special lubricant. It cools the cutting tool from below rather than from above the cut as in the present overhead flood method of cooling and lubricating.

Through the use of the new cutting method and special cutting oil, tool life and cutting speeds are increased greatly. These improvements can be realized without major changes in existing equipment and at moderate cost.

The new system consists of a jet, or series of jets depending upon the depth of the cut, a pump and compressor capable of producing 400 pounds of pressure per square inch, and flexible tubing. It can be adapted to most turning operations using single point cutting tools and in many cases can be installed in a few hours.

Something New Although it represents a radical departure from present methods, the operation of Hi-Jet is surprisingly simple.

Streams of specially refined oil are forced through a jet opening

18-1000ths of an inch in diameter by 400 pounds (per square inch) pressure and directed toward the exact point of contact between the cutting tool edge and the work.

Since the lubricant is applied directly to the point where heat is generated, friction is reduced and heat is transferred away from the cutting edge. Reduction of heat also eliminates a major portion of chip buildup (metal cut from the machined part) encountered in the overhead flow method of cutting.

Increased heat dissipation, however, results in a great deal more smoke. To quench the smoke, twin shower heads are placed above and below the cutting surface. These shower heads are adaptable to available overhead flood equipment. This smoke quenching attachment sprays the same type of oil used in the lubrication and cooling system in a thin curtain rather than in a steady flow, but in no way influences the operation of Hi-Jet.

Tests Tell Story Dr. Pigott reported that more than 600 tests have been conducted with Hi-Jet on metals ranging from SA 1020 to titanium. Current tests are being made under actual shop conditions in plants at Pittsburgh, Detroit and Cleveland, O. Tests run at normal cutting speeds showed an improvement in cutting tool life from 3 to 5 times on carbide tools and from 6 to 12 times on high-speed tools. At above-normal speeds, even greater ratios of improvement were noted, while tests run at below normal speeds resulted in higher cutting rates without sacrifice of tool life.

Bucs Win Sixth Straight By Defeating Eagles 87-78

Subs See Action In 14th Win Of Season

Hodges, Russell, Blake And Huffman Lead Pirates' Offensive As Locals Get Early Lead And Coast To Victory

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Sports Writer

The East Carolina Pirates last night ran their win streak to six games as they led all the way in hanging an 87-78 defeat on the semi-pro McCrary Eagles of Asheboro. The victory was number 14 for the Pirates who have lost seven times.

For the second straight home game, E.C. Coach Howard Porter was able to use every man on the squad and all but one of the twelve scored at least two points. Carl King was the only Buc who failed to score.

The Pirate scoring was led last night by big Bobby Hodges who scored 22 points despite the fact that the Eagles were using all their tactics to stop him and his Pirate teammates. Sonny Russell, who refuses to be stopped by any defender regardless of that defender's ability, was number two man in the Pirate scoring with 16 points. Cap'n Dick Blake was a tower of strength in the time the first team was in the ball game and chipped in with 15 points. Sub Charlie Huffman led the reserves with a total of 11 points.

The scoring for McCrary was spread through their line-up but all the scorers had one thing in common: most of the shooting had to come from a considerable distance away from the basket. Center Ab Williams, the former Wake Forest star, led the scoring with 18 points from his pivot position but many of his seven field goals were scored on a pivot shot which took him away from the goal.

Forward Bill Sheets tossed in 17 points—eight field goals—and many of his points came on set shots from well out in the forecourt. Guard Hilliard Nance was the only Eagle who had any fair degree of success in driving for field goals and wound up with a total of 16 points. Frank Henry hit five set shots and two free throws to score 12 points and forward Bill Miller scored 10 before he fouled out of the game in the fourth period.

There was hardly ever any question about the Pirates' winning. They started very quickly in a red-hot running game and were ten points ahead at the end of the first quarter. They were unable to get their margin much greater than the ten points but neither were the Eagles able to get the gap much smaller. The biggest point difference between the clubs was twelve points and the smallest difference was four points.

That quick start by the Pirates was a great help to E.C. as the visiting Eagles doubled their efforts to take the lead. The Buc were out-scored in the third period and played on equal terms in the fourth quarter. That eleven point margin at half-time made the difference as Porter elected to clear his bench in both the second and fourth quarters. It was the most considerable action seen by the reserves this year but even though they were in the line-up, East Carolina was still the superior team.

The Pirates now have but one contest remaining in their regular schedule before beginning tournament action. They will meet the Citadel Bulldogs here next Friday night to complete preparations for the NAIB and North State Conference tournaments. The NAIB regional play will begin at Elon next Monday night and the North State tournament will open on Thursday.

Barclay To Talk Tomorrow Night

George Barclay, assistant football coach and first All-American for the University of North Carolina, will be the chief speaker at the University's Educational Foundation dinner meeting tomorrow night at the Greenville Country Club.

Barclay recently resigned as head football coach at Washington and Lee in order to take his present position at Carolina. Besides his talk at the forthcoming meeting, the grid mentor is to show several films made of games played by the championship Washington and Lee grid team while he was coach there.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. All members of the foundation and alumni of Carolina, as well as anyone interested in the meeting, are invited to attend. Those who intend to do so have been asked to contact Lee Folger in advance.

BOBBY HODGES sets himself to hook one in even though he is closely guarded by McCrary's Ab Williams (behind Hodges) and Red O'Quinn (No. 12). Hodges got the shot off and went on to lead the scoring with 22 points for the night. (Reflector Sports Photos by Roy Hardee).

Bucs, Bears Win; Cats Lose 88-67

By The Associated Press

Two scoring records were smashed last night when the Wofford Terriers turned back the Western Carolina Catamounts 88-67 in a non-conference game. Erlebe (Daddy) Neal, the Terriers' six-footer, flipped in 35 points to pace the Wofford victory.

Lenoir Rhyne rolled to an easy basketball win over Newberry last night 84-51. Frosh forward Roland Barker of Lenoir Rhyne rallied 19 points. Ted Blank of Newberry was high for the South Carolinians with 16.

East Carolina gained revenge for an early season defeat by tripping the McCrary basketball Eagles, 87-78. High for East Carolina was Bobby Hodges with 22 points. Bill Sheets was top for McCrary.

Coastal Tourney Set For Ayden Court Next Week

AYDEN—The Coastal Athletic Conference is slated to hold its annual championship tournament here on the nights of Feb. 25, 26, 27, and 29. Finals in both the boys and girls divisions are to be held the last night.

Pairings in the four day tourney will not be known until after Friday night, when the five schools that comprise the conference will end their respective conference schedules. However, a system of selecting the opponents for the first round action has been drawn up by the tournament committee, according to E. P. Johnson, principal of Ayden High School and chairman of the Tournament Committee.

One boys and one girls game will be played each night of the tourney. Teams that finish in the fourth and fifth places during regular season play will meet in the first night, with the winner of that game scheduled to meet the number one team on Tuesday night, the second day of play. Teams finishing in number two and number three spots will meet on Wednesday nights.

Teams winning on Tuesday and Wednesday nights will advance into the finals Friday night. The girls game is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. each night, with the boys contest getting underway immediately afterward.

Ayden will be the defending champion in both the boys and girls divisions.

Included in the awards to be presented at the conclusion of the tournament are: two championship trophies, two runner-up trophies, two team sportsmanship trophies (to be selected by the teams), individual awards for champions and runners-up, and all-tournament awards.

Wildcats Retain Number One Spot In Latest Poll

NEW YORK (AP) — Kentucky's high-gear basketball team today ranked as the best collegiate outfit in the nation for the fifth straight week.

Baron Adolph Rupp's Southeastern Conference powerhouse drew 36 first-place votes and 885 points in the weekly Associated Press poll to remain ahead of Kansas State.

Kentucky, already crowned SEC champion, is riding the crest of a 16-game winning streak and boasts an overall record of 22-2.

Kansas State drew 16 first-place votes and 754 points from the 104 sports writers and sportscasters who participated in the coast-to-coast canvass.

Rounding out the top 10 are: Duquesne, Iowa, Illinois, Washington, Kansas, St. John's, St. Louis and St. Bonaventure.

Illinois jumped two places as did Kansas. St. John's advanced from tenth to eighth as a result of its victory over St. Bonaventure, which dropped from fourth to tenth. St. Louis dipped from seventh to ninth.

Iowa defeated Ohio State, 75-62, to swell its record to 17-1 and remain tied with Illinois for the lead in the Big Ten conference. Illinois turned back Indiana, 77-70. The games were played after the polls closed.

With the exception of positions, the makeup of the top ten was the same as last week. Iowa and Illinois moved up a step. Washington jumped two places as did Kansas. St. John's advanced from tenth to eighth as a result of its victory over St. Bonaventure, which dropped from fourth to tenth. St. Louis dipped from seventh to ninth.

Bethel Roms To 67-40 Decision Over Ahsokie

BETHEL—Booby Manning poured in 27 points here last night to lead Bethel's Indians to 67-40 decision over the Indians of Ahsokie High School. Bethel made a clean sweep for the night by taking the girls contest, 41-39.

Manning was the big gun in Bethel's attack but Earl Johnston came in with 10 points for the Indians also. These two boys were the leaders in Bethel's scoring thrust in the first half, that saw Ahsokie fall behind by a 35-17 margin at halftime. The score had moved up to 49-27 at the end of the third period.

Joe Credel of Ahsokie led the losers' scoring with only nine points as Bethel's Vance White and Michael House constantly broke up any attempted scoring attack thrown up by the visitors. William Leary was second high for the losers with six points, while the defensive fortunes of Ahsokie was carried by Albert Vaughn.

The victory gives the Bethel Indians a record of 18 wins and only three defeats. Ahsokie overpowered Bethel in an earlier meeting by 14 points, but Bethel was held down by an excessive number of personal fouls.

Girls Game

Joyce Beverly led Bethel's girls to their hard fought 41-39 victory, but the two points that she scored in the last 15 seconds will be the ones remembered by those who saw the contest. Joyce's field goal with 15 seconds left to go in the game gave the victory to Bethel as it broke open a 39-39 stalemate. Carrie Ayers and Jean Cullifer were defensive leaders for the winners.

Ann Hill dropped in 16 points to pace the losing Ahsokie team, while Joanne Pritchard led their defense. The score was tied at ten different points in the contest, including half-time and the close of the third quarter.

Purse At Yonkers

YONKERS, N. Y. — (AP) — Close to $1,800,000 in purses will be distributed to horsemen at Yonkers Raceway during 1952. Of that amount, approximately $700,000 will be on the line during the 35-night, April 15 - May 24 Spring meeting. The Summer meeting will be 12 nights, Aug. 18-30 and the Fall season from Sept. 29 to Nov. 15.

FARMVILLE—Robert Joyner, local business man and sports enthusiast, was recently elected to the presidency of the Farmville semi-pro baseball club.

Marvin Speight Jr., who was in charge of the Junior Chamber of Commerce committee which controlled the fortunes of the team last season, was elected vice-president of the team for the forthcoming season. The Red Sox will be run on a community basis this season, and will not be under the auspices of any one individual.

Other men who were also named to the Board of Directors are: Rom Webber, Fred Moore, Walter Jones, James Monk, Mabry Pollard, Will Summerville, and L. W. Allen.

Pete Plestrak, third baseman and relief pitcher for last year's championship entry in the strong Bright Belt League, has been obtained as manager for the 1953 club. Plestrak is a veteran of professional baseball with several years experience in the Class D Coastal Plain League. He now lives in Greenville.

Farmville is one of four teams that definitely stated their intentions of operating in the Bright Belt League again this season at a recent meeting of the owners. Other teams which have made known their intentions of fielding a team are Greenville, Pinetops and Ormondsville, who lost to Farmville in the championship playoffs last year after finishing on top of the regular season standings.

The league directors expressed a desire for four more teams for the league this season. If they are found, and indications at the present moment are favorable, the loop will operate as an eight-team league for the first time in its history. It was a six-team affair last season.

Six teams are prospective members of the league at the present time and have been invited by Bright Belt President John Allen Farfour of Goldsboro to attend the next meeting of the league directors on February 29 in Farmville. The teams which have indicated a desire to join the league are: Snow Hill, Saratoga, Stantonsburg, Williamston, La Grange, Robersonville, and Lucama.

Besides the above towns, Macclesfield has announced that it would in all probability field a team in the league again this season. Macclesfield has been a strong contender for the championship since the beginning of the Bright Belt League. Another holdover from last season — Fremont—has expressed doubt on its status for 1952.

Stocks And Market Reports

NEW YORK (UP)—Stocks continued their slow descent in a slightly more active market today. A dozen issues or so retreated a point or more and a half dozen managed to rise a point or better. The main list held to a fractional range with declines outnumbering gains.

The leading issues did little in volume with the exception of Northern Pacific, the market leader in turnover. That stock rose 1 3/8 to 67 7/8 and helped sustain the railroad average which at the end of the first hour was down only four cents.

Other gainers included Cerro de Pasco at 57 up 1 1/4; Corning Glass 78 1/4 up 1; International Business Machines 200 1/2 up 1 1/2; and Texas Pacific Land Trust 156 up 1.

Small gains were registered in Monsanto Chemical, Loew's, Owens Illinois Glass, New York Central, and Shell Oil.

Rohm & Haas lost 3 1/4 to 140 on one transaction of 200 shares. Newmont mining was down 2 and losses of more than a point came into Abbott Laboratories, Ex-Cell-O General Tire, American Viscose and J. C. Penney. American Cyanamid, Dow Chemical, Aluminum Limited, Ruberoid and Hercules Powder lost a point each. Steels and motors held near the previous close.

CHICAGO (UP)—Grain markets turned steady to firm at mid-morning on the Board of Trade after a rather irregular opening.

A fairly active demand was apparent in wheat with some of the support inspired by the fact that Argentina has turned from an exporting country to an importing nation and the weather outlook for the Southwest which indicated little or no moisture for the dry areas.

Corn futures were aided by reports of export business with the United Kingdom. Soybeans declined as much as 1 cent a bushel before a really brought prices up to 1p2 to 3-4 cent a bushel above yesterday's close.

E. H. Harris, pastor, and a chaplain from Fort Bragg will conduct the services. Full military honors will be carried out by an escort from Fort Bragg.

Pfc. Taft is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Willie Taft, seven brothers, Milton of Norfolk, Sergeant First Class Willie Jr. at Fort Dix, N.J., Pfc. Lee Norris, overseas, Freddie, Bruce, James and Glenn, of the home, six sisters, Lillian R., Shirley, Peggy, Delores, Ann and Mildred, all of the home; one daughter, Evelyn; his grandparents and numerous aunts and uncles.

Three New Attempted Break-Ins Are Reported

Three more attempted break-ins in various sections of Greenville are being investigated by Greenville police today.

The three break-ins came on the heels of four other robberies which occurred over the past weekend.

Reports show that the South Greenville Negro school building was entered during the night by prying open the rear door to the building. First check-ups indicated nothing was missing, but a closer inspection will be made.

Robbers were foiled in their attempt to gain entrance into a residence on Dickinson Avenue early last night when they were discovered by a housewife. A noise in the kitchen of Mrs. Lansing Allen, 1103 Dickinson Avenue, aroused her suspicions and she called the police. When officers arrived, they found the side window of the Allen kitchen had been opened and the screen removed.

Doubt was expressed that the person or persons succeeded in entering the home.

A third possible attempted theft was discovered at the used-car lot of the White Chevrolet Company on East Fifth Street. Investigation revealed a left rear window of a car parked on the lot was broken out and cigar ashes and matches were left on cushions of the car. However, no apparent attempt was made to wire the car and steal it.

Rotary Magazine Value Is Noted

By WYATT BROWN

The Rotarians had it called to their attention last night the value of reading their club magazine, The Rotarian, when Sam Underwood gave something of its statistical picture and its editorial line. Mr. Underwood pointed out that by reading a magazine like The Rotarian one would be not only a better Rotarian but a better person in the home and community.

He went on to say that the magazine was a medium for the communication of ideas and concepts with the ideals of Rotary. He cited one instance where a story in The Rotarian led to the building of a swimming pool in a community nearby. Also pointed out was the wide range and timeliness of the subject matter in the publication.

The Rotarians decided last night to hold an Inter-Club meet in Greenville to include Washington, Bethel, Patego and Belhaven clubs. The date has not been settled. Joe Mays is chairman of the committee composed of Hugh Winslow, Badger Johnson and Francis Bowen.

Guests of the Rotary Club last night were T. M. Wilson of Raleigh and William H. Brown and H. A. Hendrix. Visiting Rotarians were Gene Booth and J. K. Wothers of Kinston and James Armistead of South Hill, Virginia.

J. H. Rose gave a brief outline of his autobiography extemporaneously last night. He is the grandson, son and nephew of Methodist preachers. He was born in Fremont, one of thirteen children, went to school in Warrenton and "old" Trinity College (now Duke), and Columbia University. He served in the Army in World War I and came to Greenville from the Army.

Charles White, club president, presided.

He was also charged with trespassing, and vulgar and profane language, and was fined $10.00 and was ordered to remain on good behavior and not to go on property or harm or molest Zeb Blount for one year.

Hoover Suggests New Committee Take Up Work

WASHINGTON (UP)—Former President Herbert Hoover suggests that a new citizens committee be established to carry on the work of the Hoover Commission.

It would take over the work of the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report when that group disbands May 31 "to avoid becoming involved in politics" during the election campaign.

At a meeting of the Hoover Commission last night, Mr. Hoover suggested that a new citizens committee be set up, possibly with the help of members of the present group. The commission met to touch off its final drive for congressional approval of its remaining recommendations for streamlining the government.

Mr. Hoover said the "humiliation" of the wave of scandals in government could have been avoided if Congress had approved civil service reforms proposed by the commission.

"I am convinced that had these reforms been enacted three years ago, they would have saved great grief to our country," Mr. Hoover said. "The nation has a right to a better system of choice and management of its employees than one which has produced these months of humiliation."

"Daily, Congress and grand juries are turning up sickening conduct of federal civil officials. These exposures can mean only one thing: That our method of selection and organization of federal employees is badly at fault somewhere."

FBI's Most Wanted Criminal Faces Brinks-Holdup Questions

NEW YORK (UP) — Captured bank robber Willie (The Actor) Sutton, No. 1 pinup boy on post office bulletin boards, faced questioning by FBI agents today about the $1,500,000 Brinks stickup at Boston in 1950.

Sutton's arrest yesterday on a Brooklyn street by two alert patrolmen ended one of the nation's biggest manhunts. He had been sought since he escaped a Philadelphia prison in 1947.

The slender, neatly dressed bandit was identified positively last night by officials of a Manhattan bank branch on Long Island as a robber who took $64,000 on March 9, 1950.

But Sutton denied he was one of the men wearing halloween masks and sailors' peajackets who staged the greatest cash holdup in the history of crime in 1950 by taking $1,500,000 from Brinks armored service guards.

He protested that he was always accused of masterminding bank robberies throughout the country, whereas he had been living quietly in Brooklyn three blocks from a police station the last two years.

FBI agents and police officials refused to take him at his word, however, as methods used in the Boston robbery resembled those employed by Sutton in his 34-year career as a bank bandit.

Sutton was known to police as "The Actor" because he often posed as a Western Union messenger, a fireman, laborer, or policeman in "casing" banks he intended to rob. And authorities investigating the Brinks holdup agreed the thieves had mapped their strategy to the most minute detail.

Regarded by police as the greatest escape artist since the heyday of Harry Houdini, Sutton was handcuffed to two policemen while he was being taken from Manhattan to Long Island, where he was locked up overnight to await arraignment on bank robbery charges.

Although Willie the Actor had received top billing wherever photographs of "wanted" criminals were posted, he was playing a straight role yesterday when Patrolmen Joseph J. McClellan and Donald P. Shea recognized him from a picture in their police magazine.

He was attempting to remove a battery from his stalled automobile when the patrolmen approached him. When they asked his name, he replied "Charles Gordon" and produced a bill of sale and auto owner's license issued to him under that alias.

McClellan and Shea took him to a police station where he admitted his identity. "I guess you've got me," he said.

Police Commissioner George P. Monaghan was so overjoyed at the feat accomplished by his patrolmen that he promoted the two men to first-grade detective, raising their salary $1,700 a year. But because their arrest was made in line of duty, McClellan and Shea were not eligible for the $25,000 reward offered for Sutton's capture.

Sutton sawed his way out of Sing Sing in 1932 while serving a sentence for a $129,000 jewel robbery. In 1934 he was arrested following a bank robbery and sentenced to 25 to 50 years, but escaped the Graterford, Pa. prison in 1945. He was recaptured and imprisoned at Philadelphia, where he made his last escape.

Six Airmen Die In Mid-Air Crash

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP) — Six Navy airmen—two instructors and four students were killed yesterday in a two-plane, low-altitude collision about five miles west of Rockport, Tex.

Names of the fliers were withheld.

Meteor Explodes

GREENSBORO (AP) — The blast caused when a huge meteorite exploded in North Carolina skies last night set off rumors that planes had crashed near Wilmington and Salisbury.

J. P. Molen of the U. S. Weather Bureau here said that a meteorite had exploded 100 miles or more north-northwest of Greensboro at a height of 40,000 to 80,000 feet.

At Hickory airport, 100 miles southwest of here, two men saw a flash of light streak across the sky. Mayo Heffner and Lee Gabriel said it looked like a red hot stove with a long tail.

A meteorite also streaked into view in Virginia, where it was seen at Hopewell and Parnell. A heavy, rumbling explosion shook the Norfolk-Portsmouth area of Virginia before noon. Authorities investigated a report that a plane had crashed but found no plane.

Charter Service Plea Is Denied

The Fleming Transportation Company of Greenville yesterday was denied the right to operate a charter service in addition to its regular contract carrier service.

In handing down the ruling, Superior Court Judge John J. Burney said the statutes as interpreted by the N. C. Utilities Commission provided that a company operating a contract carrier service under the conditions of the Fleming Transportation Company, could not also provide charter service.

Attorneys for Ed Fleming, owner of the company, filed notice of appeal to the N. C. Supreme Court. Bus companies protesting Fleming's charter service represented in court yesterday by their attorneys are Atlantic Greyhound Corporation, Queen City Trailways, Carolina Coach Company and Seashore Transportation Company.

A divorce on the grounds of two years separation was granted in the afternoon. It was in the case of Jessie M. Riggs vs John D. Riggs.

Student Recreation Room Redecorated; Equipment Added

The "Pirates Den," student recreation room in the basement of Wright building at East Carolina College, has been redecorated and new equipment has been purchased, according to Alec Hurst of Greensboro, chairman of the student social committee of the Student Government Association of the college.

Costs for improving the room both in appearance and in equipment were met by appropriations from student funds, approved by the SGA. Plans for the work were made by a student-faculty committee under the leadership of Hurst and Gertrude Irbly of the staff of the college dean of women. The "Pirates Den" is used by students for informal gatherings and recreational activities.

Recently purchased equipment includes a collection of popular records, ping pong tables, and games such as horseshoes, shuffleboard, and canasta. A soft drink dispenser has been installed and will be serviced weekly.

No Place for a Heavy Foot!

You'd find it out, in a mile or so, even if we failed to tell you. But we think it's best if we tell you now—

—you must treat the accelerator with special respect when you drive the Golden Anniversary Cadillac!

Down under the hood of this gorgeous car is the most powerful engine ever used in standard American production.

So take it easy—wherever you drive.

Don't use that power to bolt away when the light turns green—and other cars have their ways to make in the traffic lanes beside you. And never use it for unnecessary speed, or for dominating the highway.

Use it, instead, for the thing it was put there for—

—use it to give you that easy, floating, comforting ride which can come only when your engine is "loafing," and most of its power is in luxurious reserve—

—use it to give you that "shot ahead" when an opening shows in the traffic line—or when your safety calls for a blast of power—

—use it for a thrilling sense of mastery over car and time and space—

—use it, in short, for happiness and luxury—and for adding satisfaction to every mile you drive.

As you would expect, this amazing performance is but one of the wonderful virtues that have been added to the Golden Anniversary Cadillac.

There is marvelous new beauty—inside and outside. There is a wholly new type of power steering—available as optional equipment at extra cost. And there are literally scores of refinements and improvements of vital importance.

For its "year of years," Cadillac has certainly built its "car of cars."

Deadly Poison Trapped By Science In Research

By ROBERT MUSEL
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON—(UP)—The "poisoner's best friend," a deadly, tasteless, odorless liquid hitherto almost impossible to detect in the human body, has been trapped by science in a brilliant piece of international research extending from native Africa to Oxford.

No one will ever know how many "heart attacks" or how many fatal cases of "lockjaw" were really murder through its use. From now on poisoners no longer can administer the fluid with impunity. Science has caught up with them.

chemistry department of Oxford, where the clue to paralysis and death was found to be an innocent chemical, citric acid.

No one had suspected previously that citric acid, which is produced by the body itself in burning sugar, could be linked to murder.

Early Placing Of Fertilizer Order Urged Farmers

Due to a substantial reduction in the anticipated supply of phosphate products available to fertilizer manufacturers during 1952, Pitt County farmers today were urged to order their fertilizer early this year.

Giant Telescope Is Delivered To Observatory

MOUNT HAMILTON, Calif.—(UP)—The giant glass mirror for the Lick Observatory's 120-inch telescope has been delivered to its

It is finished, the Lick observatory will work in collaboration with the Palomar Observatory, where a 200-inch telescope is observing the stars a half-billion light years away from the earth.

That cannot be done before death but it may be some comfort to the victim to know his slayer probably will be punished. Highly technical, it involves detection of the amount of citric acid in the kidney (which has to be ground up for the purpose). An abnormal amount indicates poison.

Savage Dogs Are Killing Deer In British Columbia

VICTORIA, B. C.—(AP)—Deer are faced with a new danger undisciplined domestic dogs. George Stevenson, provincial game inspector, reported the dogs are becoming more savage than mountain lions during some seasons of the year. He said the Game Department had to kill 12 dogs in two weeks recently.

'Dream House' Is Like Nightmare

CHAMPAIGN, Ill.—(UP)—From the outside it looks like a dream house, but once inside, you would swear it was a bad dream. The walls can be moved in and out, rooms switched, kitchen and bathroom fixtures changed from one room to another in a jiffy, and doors and windows relocated.

Researchers hope to determine, by experimenting with the house, the space requirements for modern families living in small homes.

James Meredith, secretary of the Pitt County Production and Marketing Administration, stated today that with a scarcity of sulphuric acid, 1952 production of phosphate supplies will be about six percent less than last year.

"The situation is a trifle improved, but still tight," Meredith said. "Pitt County farmers can help orderly distribution and assure themselves of adequate supplies by placing their orders early."

According to the secretary, PMA specialists say supplies of nitrogen and potash for this crop year, will be slightly larger than record quantities available last year.

Meredith explained that nitrogen supplies in 1952 are expected to reach about seven percent above the 1951 record. But with demand increasing, supplies will still run short of needs, he disclosed.

Taft Confident He Has West Coast Majority

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Sen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. Taft of Ohio said today his political tour of the West has convinced him he has "a substantial majority of popular support among Republicans" there.

Back from a five-state speaking trip in behalf of his bid for the GOP presidential nomination, Taft told reporters he thinks he will get "the predominant majority" of convention delegates from Washington, Idaho, Wyoming, and Colorado.

"This Western trip has confirmed my most optimistic hopes," he said. "The Eisenhower people are putting on a fight everywhere but I feel we are still far in the lead."

Taft said he will repudiate any "unfriendly" efforts to enter him in the May 16 Oregon primary because he doesn't have time to campaign in the state.

Jack Travis, Hood River publisher and friend of Sen. Morse (R-Ore), has started circulation of Taft petitions. Morse is supporting Gen.

If Travis' action turns out to be regarded in the Taft camp as unfriendly, there was some talk among the Ohioan's supporters of circulating petitions to put Morse's name into the race also.

Eisenhower's followers, headed by Morse and Gov. Douglas McKay have predicted the general will win Oregon's preferential primary popularity test and also will get all of the state's 18 convention delegates.

The entertainment is an attraction on the College Entertainment Series for 1952. Ray Anthony To Be Here Feb. 27

Ray Anthony and his orchestra, one of the top dance bands in this country, will appear at East Carolina College Wednesday evening, February 27, in a one-hour concert and will play afterwards at a dance for students, holders of season tickets on the college Entertainment Series, and their guests. The event is scheduled for the Wright auditorium and will begin at 8 o'clock.

The orchestra program is the fifth attraction in the series of offered during the present school year by the college Entertainment Committee.

Elected the number-one dance band on records by the nation's disc jockys, the Anthony orchestra has won acclaim as a top band in dance, sports, radio, television, and motion pictures.

Led by Anthony, called "Young Man With a Horn," the band presents orchestras running the gamut from jazz and swing to no-velties and "sweet" ballads. The group gives a well-balanced program of popular music designed to please those of varied tastes.

TIGHTER — Most of the provisions of the Corrupt Practices Act of 1931 were carried forward in the 1951 laws, with a few other tightened up places besides that affecting money contributions. No corporation is allowed to make any contribution to a political campaign. It is still unlawful to publish or distribute anonymous advertisements, circulars or letters; to impose upon the blind, the illiterate or other incapacitated voters; to promise political jobs in return for election support, and a whole string of other practices which have been hinted at in past elections are still illegal.

Four Buildings In Oxford Razed

OXFORD, N. C. — (AP) — A fire which raged for more than five hours in the heart of the business district destroyed four store buildings and damaged two others early today.

Fire Chief J. B. Powell estimated the damage at nearly half a million dollars. He said the blaze apparently started in a waste room at the rear of the Colonial Stores grocery on Hillsboro Street. The four buildings destroyed were the Colonial Stores grocery, Berygin's clothing store, the Greenville Feed Store, and the Oxford Feed Store. The Western Auto Store and Leggett's Department store were damaged by water.

Powell said the fire had gained considerable headway before the alarm was turned in at about 11 p.m. last night. One fireman, Louis Hutchins, was treated at a hospital for an eye injury. Powell himself suffered an injured leg.

Fire fighting equipment from Henderson, Roxboro, Durham and Camp Butler answered calls for help and stood by during the night to prevent the blaze from spreading.

A film-strip entitled "The Christian Family" was used by Miss Blanton as a basis for the afternoon's discussion.

Frances Barnes of Kenly, East Carolina student who is doing student teaching in home economics at Grimesland, introduced Miss Blanton. Approximately sixty FHA members were present for the meeting.

Recently Miss Blanton led a similar discussion at a meeting of the Bethel FHA at a meeting in the high school there.
