City Zoning Proposals Outlined

Restrictions Not To Materially Affect Areas Already Developed

In view of the fact that the new zoning restrictions will affect every property owner in Greenville, The Daily Reflector will publish a series of articles explaining how the regulations will concern each one.

By JESS L. POINDEXTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The first zoning changes in Greenville since 1947 were approved by the City Planning Board Saturday, and will go before the Board of Aldermen Thursday night for its consideration and approval.

Frank Little, planning board chairman, said this morning that the new zoning restrictions will not materially affect areas already developed in Greenville, but are designed primarily to control construction in areas where the city shall expand in the future.

"This initial step by the planning board is one which we hope will be followed up by many more — all being directed toward molding a definitely constructive pattern of expansion for Greenville in years to come," Little stated.

Consider New Areas

City Engineer Tom Rivers, on short leave-of-absence from the U. S. Navy, explained today that the immediate consideration is to zone those areas of Greenville taken into the city limits since the original zoning plan was approved in 1947.

"It is necessary that we bring existing zoning up to date to the extent that it will competently cover all areas now in the corporate limits of the city," Rivers emphasized. "In addition to that, it seems only logical for us to project tentative zoning plans into areas not currently within the city limits, but which may be incorporated in the future."

In reviewing the extent of expansion that has taken place in the last five years, Rivers disclosed how Greenville has been enlarged North, South East and West — to absorb rather large portions in each direction.

Expansion Trends Eastward
"Contrary to most cities, Greenville has tended to expand to the East," the city engineer reported. "Consequently, the new areas incorporated eastward have generally been zoned entirely residential, with some minor exceptions where neighborhood shopping centers are contemplated."

According to Rivers, new districts to the southwest in the vicinity of Tucker Circle have been zoned industrial — with the exception of Hillsdale and Tucker Circle, which are presumed residential.

Continuing, the city engineer said, "The area North of the river, which had not been zoned until recently, is now zoned industrial — in compliance with its present use. However, an area on the east side of N. C. 11, between Moore Street and Morgan Street, has been zoned as a business property."

Allows For Expansion

The residential areas as presently situated, Rivers asserted, have invariably been zoned residential. "Within the city, proposed zoning allows for expansion of business areas and general restrictions of industrial areas. Generally, it has been attempted to allow business areas to be a buffer between areas zoned industrial and areas zoned residential."

Residential district regulations as to the city building code provide that in residential areas, no building shall be erected or structurally altered to exceed 35 feet in height, or two-and-one-half stories in height — unless otherwise provided for in city building restrictions as laid down in the Greenville city code.

At the same time, front and side yards come into consideration. Under specific zoning regulations, the length and depth of every lot is laid out and adjusted to fit the respective zoning requirements.

City Planning Board

The City Planning Board was created in 1948, its expressed purpose being to formulate a constructive future building plan for the city of Greenville. As adopted by the Board of Aldermen, the planning board was formed to arrive at what will be needed in Greenville and take steps necessary.

Recreation Day Parade Is Re-Scheduled For April 18

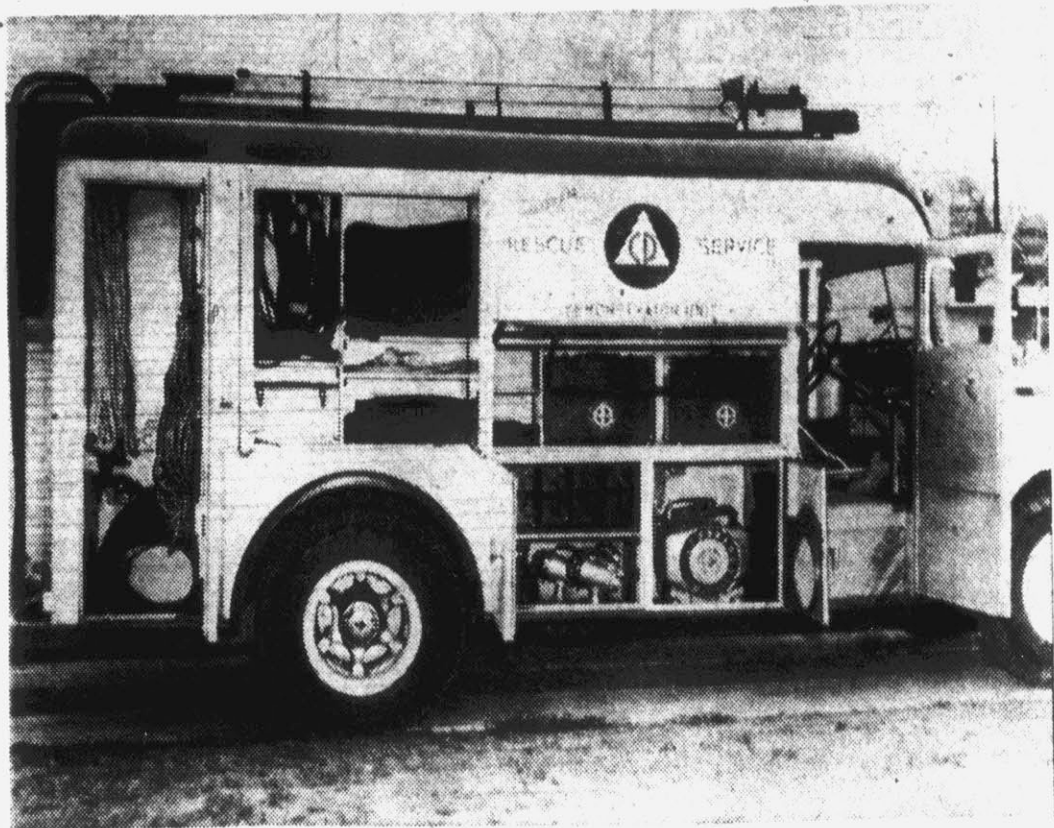

Tentative plans were made last night for the parade which will be held on Friday, April 18 as a part of the Elm Street Park development project.

P. H. Watson, committee chairman, H. V. Watson said that his committee met last night and set the parade time at 3:30 p.m. and decided to back the old tradition as to where the parade will form.

Watson said they planned to have the parade form on Washington, Second and Commerce Streets at the Army and that it would continue down Evans Street to Five Points. It will turn right at Five Points and go to the intersection of Eighth Street where it will disband as it reaches Evans again.

The committee plans to have the

Mobile Civil Defense Unit Shown Local Officials

Above is shown the $11,000 rescue unit displayed in Greenville by the Office of Civil Defense. The emergency equipment is designed to bolster civil defense resources of the nation, and is offered for sale to communities on a 50-50 cost basis. If purchased, the cost of the unit to Greenville and Pitt County would be $5,500 jointly, while federal civil defense appropriations would cover the other half of the price. Atomic Tests In Nevada Starting

CAA Orders Airplanes Avoid Test Area, Indicating Air-Dropped Bomb First To Be Exploded; Blast Reported

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UP)—Atomic scientists stood by today for the first in a new series of atomic tests which will include the highest detonation in history, it was learned authoritatively.

BULLETIN
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UP)—An atomic explosion rocked this resort city about 9 a.m. PST today.

The blast was expected to be touched off before noon today unless present ideal weather conditions changed.

Indication was given the initial "shot" in the series would be an airplane instead of a smaller change on a tower.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration issued a special bulletin to all aircraft to keep clear of the altitude between 12,000 and 14,000 feet from the test area to Kirkland Air Force Base at Albuquerque, N.M., where atomic charges to be dropped are loaded aboard planes.

The warning was effective between 4 a.m. and 5 p.m. EST.

Each time in the past the CAA warning was issued, the atomic device was dropped from a speeding plane. When the blasts were set off on the ground, the warning was not issued.

It was reported four steel towers 100 feet or more high have been built at Yucca Flat Proving Ground 80 miles north of here.

Thirteen other atomic detonations have been set off in the continental United States and 11 nuclear blasts unleashed in the Pacific by the U.S.

These include the two A-bombs dropped over Japan in the last days of World War II.

Seven of the blasts were staged last fall at either the Yucca Flat or Frenchman Flat Proving Grounds, both in the same general area north of here. In the spring of 1951, five tests were held in the desert and the first atomic blast was held in New Mexico.

Dr. Alvin C. Graves, director of the Los Alamos, N.M., atomic laboratory, said at a news conference yesterday that America is making "rapid progress" in developing the atomic weapons for "a wide variety of strategic and tactical situations."

But it was stressed that each test blast did not mean the U.S. has developed a new weapon. Although Graves did say the tests made it possible for the AEC to "increase the efficiency and yield to or stockpile of weapons by very sizeable amounts."

Another spokesman at the news conference indicated one of the series of tests will be a detonation higher above the earth than any previously held.

J. E. Collins Will Seek Reelection

Alderman Files To Succeed Himself For Fourth Ward Seat

One more name was added to the slowly mounting roster of candidates for the Greenville Board of Aldermen yesterday when James E. Collins filed for the fourth ward seat.

Collins will be a candidate to succeed himself, as he is completing a two-year term as alderman from the fourth ward. His announcement brings the total number of candidates who have filed for the May 5 municipal elections to three, but Collins is the only one to file from the fourth ward.

Last week, Robert Elks filed for the third ward seat—which he held last term—and Jimmy Wells registered his candidacy for the fifth ward seat being vacated this year by J. E. Waldrop, who is coming down after serving two terms.

C. B. Mayo, alderman from the second ward, last week announced his intention to run again this year, but he had not officially filed this morning. The only offices to be filled by election this year are four seats on the board of aldermen—one each from the second, third, fourth and fifth wards.

Charles Wilson Is Going Fishing

WASHINGTON (UP)—Charles E. Wilson packed up to "go fishing" today with a final warning that the fate of the U.S. dollar hangs on President Truman's solution of the steel dispute.

Wilson officially threw up his job as defense mobilizer last night rather than go along with Mr. Truman in sanctioning a steel wage raise without a compensating increase in steel prices.

"I believe that we are fast overtaking Russia in the quantity of production of war materials," he announced to a hurriedly-summoned news conference just an hour before his resignation became effective.

"In quality of production, I believe that we already have passed them."

"We and our allies, in view of the way production is rolling, now have the balance of world power," he said. "The outgoing mobilizer was less optimistic about the future of the wage-price stabilization program."

He told newsmen he still believes steel pay raises of 26 cents an hour would be a serious threat to the stability of the American economy.

Wilson, who gave up a $175,000-a-year job as president of General Electric Co. to become defense mobilizer, said he has no plans to return to private business.

"I haven't any more plan than to raise a baby, except to go fishing," he said.

Presidential assistant John R. Steelman took over as acting defense mobilizer.

Emergency Truck Shown Officials

Special Civil Defense Unit Equipped For Rescue Operations

City and county officials were given an opportunity yesterday to examine a Civil Defense rescue service truck, one of the type which the federal government is now attempting to sell to cities like Greenville on a 50-50 cost basis.

The unit, designed to be ready at a moment's notice to aid in rescue operation, was brought to Greenville yesterday afternoon as it was making a tour of the eastern part of North Carolina.

The federal government, in an effort to bolster its Civil Defense program over the United States, is offering the complete unit to towns at a cost of $5,500, half the actual cost of the equipment. The other half of the cost of equipping and purchasing the vehicle will be paid by the government from Civil Defense appropriations.

City and county officials were high in their praise of the unit as it was set up, and much discussion was carried on informally about the possibility of the city and county jointly purchasing the rescue unit.

Designed to serve as a base of operations for rescue work in the event of an emergency, the unit, costing $11,000, is complete in every detail.

Included in the rescue truck's equipment is heavy-duty lifting equipment such as jacks, blocks and tackle, digging equipment, picks, shovels, bars and blocking tools.

A variety of heavy work tools, carpentry tools, plumbing and electrical equipment and ladders are included.

First aid equipment includes emergency breathing apparatus, room for four stretchers in the truck and additional stretchers.

A power generator operates a portable chain and circular saw, a water pump, pump, oxy-acetylene cutting unit and field telephones in addition to a variety of floodlights to aid in working.

Equipment for the protection of the rescue workers (the truck is supposed to have a crew of eight) is provided for in the roomy compartments of the unit.

Every type of rescue job which might be encountered is provided for in the equipment assembled in the truck.

Two large floodlights are mounted on the roof of the truck, where a three-section extension ladder, with an overall length of 35 feet, is housed.

Facilities have been provided for radio communication which enables the unit to operate a way from power connections and yet remain in contact with other units in the vicinity.

Reflector Is Now A Full Member Of Auditing Bureau

First Audit Report Of Circulation Released; Benefits Advertisers

It was announced today that The Daily Reflector has become an accredited member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, and the first audit report of the newspaper's circulation has been released.

In making the announcement of The Reflector's membership in the Bureau, Publisher D. J. Whichard Jr. pointed out that the organization is recognized by advertisers and publications as the most authoritative organization in the nation on accurate circulation reports of newspapers and periodicals.

"As a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, The Reflector will be able to afford its advertisers at all times an accurate report of its circulation audited by a large staff of the most skilled circulation auditors in the country," Whichard said. "It will afford the advertisers an accurate, verified report of The Reflector's circulation together with a breakdown of the distribution of The Reflector."

The initial audit of the circulation of The Reflector showed an average net paid circulation of 5,825 for the six months period ending December 31, 1951. The circulation records of The Reflector have been kept by A.B.C. standards for more than a year, but the initial audit covered only the six months period.

The audit showed the average net paid circulation of The Reflector for the third quarter of 1951 as 5,702, and the average net paid circulation for the fourth quarter of last year at 5,950.

For the publication date of December 29, 1951, the audit showed the net paid circulation of The Reflector at 5,035—an increase of 3.61 percent over the average net paid circulation for the six months period. A breakdown of the circulation for that particular day showed increases over the six months average of 3.07 percent in the city zone, 3.51 percent in the retail trading zone and a 14.92 percent in circulation in the territory outside the retail trading zone.

The audit showed 56 per cent of The Reflector's circulation within the city zone, 37 per cent of the circulation within the retail trading zone, and seven per cent of the newspaper's circulation outside the retail trading zone.

Quarterly circulation audits will be released to the newspaper's advertisers, Whichard said, and in addition to these quarterly audits, the circulation records of The Reflector are open for inspection by advertisers at all times.

Steel-Parley On Stand-By Basis

NEW YORK (UP)—Steel wage negotiators stood by today to resume bargaining talks aimed at averting a nation-wide strike April 8 as a top industry spokesman argued the case for steel price boosts in Washington.

A high government source said today was the "key day" in the crucial wage-price dispute which threatens to choke off vital steel production. Steel mills will start banking furnaces Friday if no break comes in negotiations.

President Benjamin Fairless of United States Steel Corp., largest of the country's basic steel producers, was reported meeting with Price Chief Ellis Arnall in an effort to arrange a price increase big enough to compensate for 26 cents an hour wage and fringe package increase sought by the union.

An industry source said the steel companies' negotiating committee expected to hear from Fairless this afternoon. His report would determine whether the industry would meet with steelworkers' chairman Philip Murray later in the day.

PAY IS REDUCED

BOSTON (AP)—Some 45,000 textile workers in New England will have their pay cut one cent an hour beginning today under cost-of-living union contract clauses.

In Trouble?

WASHINGTON (AP)—A transcript of Attorney General McGrath's statement that he didn't know whether he would answer a questionnaire about his personal income was turned over to the White House today, Rep. Chelf (D-Ky.) told reporters.

The White House had asked for it. McGrath told the House judiciary subcommittee, which Chelf heads, yesterday he wasn't sure whether he would answer the questionnaire submitted by Newbold Morris.

Morris is the man President Truman named to investigate corruption in Washington. He was named on McGrath's recommendation.

SEoul,orea (UP)—American Sabre jets destroyed or damaged 23 Communist MIG-15s today, setting a record for the number of Red jets hit in a single day of dog-fighting in the Korean war.

They shot down 10 MIGs, probably destroyed three and crippled 10 others, inflicting the second largest number of "kills" since Dec. 13, when 13 Communist jets were downed.

However, on Dec. 13, only two MIGs were probably destroyed and only one damaged for a total of 16 hit by U.N. bullets.

Jet pilots tangled with Reds in eight separate battles over North Korea, three of them in the morning. The morning battles took a total of six MIGs destroyed and three damaged.

In one of the morning battles, Col. Francis S. Gabreski, Oil City, Pa., commander of the 51st Fighter Wing, became the eighth jet ace in history after shooting down a MIG that boosted his total to five and one-half "kills."

A total of at least 190 American Sabre jets tangled with 231 MIGs today, but in three of the dogfights the Allied jets enjoyed a numerical advantage.

In the first of the high-altitude air battles where U.N. pilots outnumbered the MIGs, a flight of 26 Sabre jets destroyed five Red jets and damaged one.

The last tangle reported in detail lasted 26 minutes and Allied pilots returned from it with one MIG destroyed, two more destroyed and four others damaged.

During the afternoon air battles, two of the new "type 15" MIGs were spotted in Red jet formations. However, allied airmen made no firing passes at them.

In the first afternoon battle, 26 Sabres cut into 50 MIGs southeast of Antung, south of the Yalu River. For 30 minutes the fighters mixed it up in altitudes ranging from 20,000 to 40,000 feet.

While pilots of the 61st figured in the first battle of the afternoon, jetmen from the 4th Fighter-Interceptor Wing fought the second and third battles.

The second afternoon fight took place when the enemy attacked an RF-80 photo plane escorted by 12 Sabres.

A short time later, 25 Sabre jets flying cover for other fighter-bombers tangled with 13 MIG-15s and two Type-15 enemy jets. Two of the regular MIGs were damaged by Flight Officer (RCAF) Bruce S.

Fleming, Montreal, Canada, and by Capt. Charles D. Owens, Orlando, Fla.

The Fifth Air Force and attached units claimed 246 swept-wing Red jets destroyed in the Korean war, 44 probably destroyed and 445 damaged.

Ground action was limited to patrols and light probing attacks involving only a few men.

Gabreski, commander of the 51st Sabre Wing, called his fifth victory in jet warfare "just part of the business."

"Our teamwork, superior training and terrific ability of our pilots really paid off today," he said. "I'm damned proud to be able to fly with the 51st."

During World War II, Gabreski shot down 29 enemy planes and destroyed three others on the ground.

The battle in which Gabreski became a jet ace was touched off by the MIGs' third attempt of the day to interrupt Allied fighter-bomber attacks on roads and bridges between Chongju and Sinukuk.

Gabreski's flight of 26 Sabre jets surprised an element of 16 MIGs before the startled Communist pilots could drop their wing tanks.

College Student Dies In His Room

Windsor Youth Found Dead In Dormitory; No Inquest Called

Gerald Ray Castellow of Route 2, Windsor, sophomore at East Carolina College, died suddenly yesterday in his room in Wilson Hall, campus dormitory.

The young man had attended a ball game on the campus during the afternoon with his twin brother, Earl Grey Castellow, also a student at the college. About four o'clock Gerald left the field to get a soft drink, and did not return for the rest of the game.

When Earl Castellow returned to his room in Wilson Hall, he found his brother lying face down on the bed, and tried to arouse him. He saw immediately that medical help was needed; and Dr. Fred Irons, college physician, was called. The young man was dead when Dr. Irons arrived.

Gerald Castellow had suffered for some time, according to his brother, from epilepsy, and had had an attack about three weeks ago. It is thought that he died of suffocation during an attack.

Pitt Coroner Griffin H. Rouse who investigated the death ruled the youth's death was due to natural causes and said no inquest will be held.

Castellow had attended East Carolina for five quarters, and at the time of his death was a member of the sophomore class. He was specializing in the social studies and physical education. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Castellow of Windsor.

Hotel Fire Is Fatal For Four

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—Four persons were killed and 17 others injured in a flash fire which roared through a four-floor wooden hotel in San Francisco's Western addition today, causing $60,000 damage.

Four of the injured were firemen overcome by smoke while combating the blaze.

Fire Chief Edward P. Wash said the victims were trapped in bed by flames which spread with "astounding rapidity" after erupting through a light-wall at the rear of the Casa Loma Hotel.

Wash was unable to say how the fire started. An investigation was under way.

Tunisian Unions In Protest Strike

TUNIS, Tunisia (UP)—Two unions staged a 24-hour strike today protesting French rule of Tunisia but their walkout was only a partial success.

Strong units of infantry and field gendarmerie patrolled the streets of Tunis and other cities, ready to cope with any violence.

But in Tunis the strike was almost unnoticed, and authorities said public utilities were operating normally. Employees of streetcar and suburban rail lines refused to take part in the strike.

VA To Drop 53 Employees In May

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)—The Veterans Administration Regional Office will drop 53 employees from its North Carolina payroll May 31.

Manager J. D. Deramus said yesterday the reduction will cut the office staff here by 50 employees. The Charlotte field office will lose one employee, while the Greenville office will be closed and two employees will be dropped.

Deramus said the personnel ceiling for the Winston-Salem office will be 772 workers.

The reductions are based on 1953 appropriations and lower workloads in certain VA programs.

Finds No Answer To Skunk Family

NORTH VANCOUVER, B. C. (UP)—Encyclopedia salesman S. H. Saunders said today he has failed to find the answer to a very pressing problem, even in the book he sells.

Saunders wants to get rid of a pregnant skunk that has converted his attic to a maternity ward. The skunk has twice shown her disdain of Saunders' feeble attempt at trying to trap her. Once she sprayed the household. The second time she scared Saunders into falling into a laundry tub.

"I'm getting desperate," Saunders said. "All I've learned from the encyclopedia is that skunks have litters of from six to 10."

McMullan Backs Election Change

RALEIGH — (AP) — Atty. Gen. Harry McMullan says he is strongly in favor of a constitutional amendment which would change the present electoral college method of electing presidents.

McMullan gave his views in a speech yesterday before the Sertoma Club here. He said the change would greatly increase the voice of the South in national elections.

The amendment provides that the electoral votes of a state be distributed to candidates in proportion to the popular vote they received. Such a proposal was passed by the Senate in the 82nd Congress, McMullan recalled, but was defeated in the House by a vote "aimed directly at the South."

He said the proposed amendment "would do away with the present national misfortune of political parties surrendering to minority groups in the 12 important and pivotal states."

In developing his subject, Mr. Hardin spoke of the dangers about the people today and the opportunities among the dangers, the minister listed the danger of selfishness, the danger of an un-learned faith, and the danger of worldliness. In listing the opportunities, Hardin listed the opportunity of winning the lost, of encouraging the discouraged, of putting on God's strength, and of clothing one's self with the garments of humility, of obedience, and of consistency.

Tonight at the services, Mr. Hardin will preach on "The Master's Business."

Pastor Hardaway said the people of Greenville are cordially invited to attend the services.

Hearing Today In Charlotte Killing

CHARLOTTE (UP)—A heavy-set balding resort hotelkeeper faced a preliminary hearing today on a murder charge in the pistol slaying of a prominent North Carolina political figure.

Albert Rahmond Reinhart Jr., 30, fired three shots at point-blank range into a partially-opened elevator here yesterday, killing attorney Emmett Bellamy, 60, and wounding his 24-year-old assistant, Lloyd S. Elkins Jr., police said.

"I shot the two . . . they stole $40,000 from my mother," police quoted Reinhart.

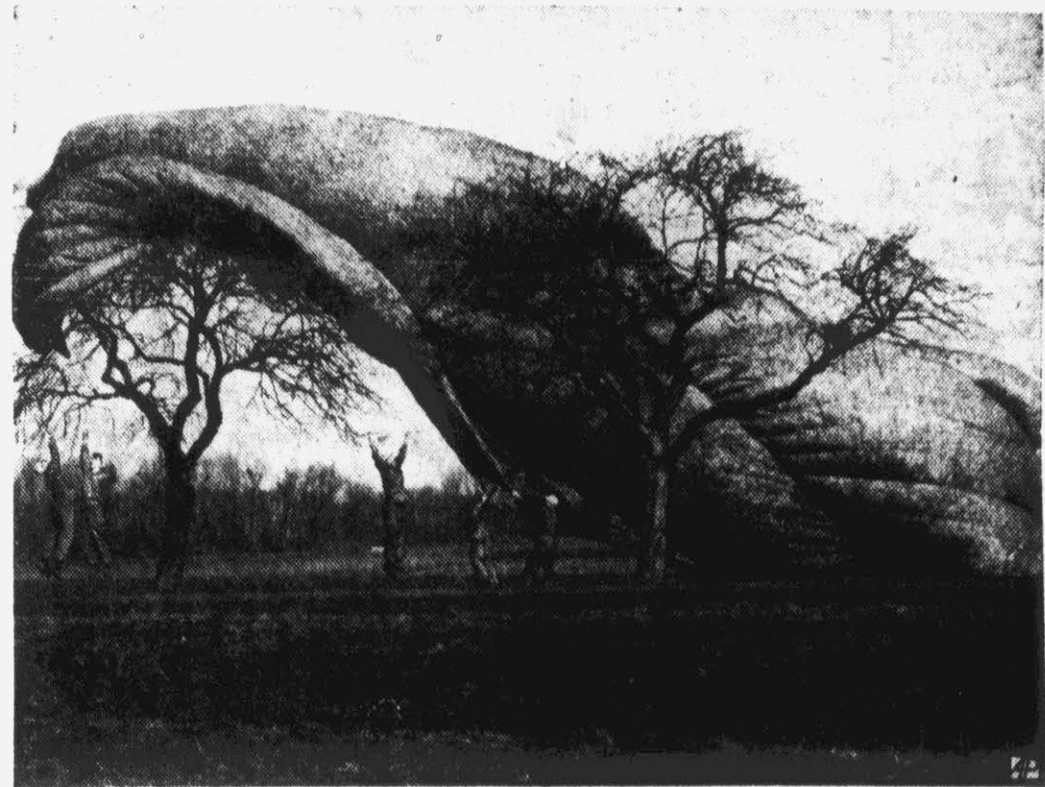

"I came up here to kill him, and I did," Reinhart said. He added that he did not know Elkins, "but he is an associate of Bellamy's." The hotelkeeper's wife was killed by his father in 1926 in Wrightsville Beach, N.C. The elder Reinhart shot his daughter-in-law during a family quarrel and was fatally wounded by a policeman who sought to arrest him.

The father survived long enough for his son to reach the hospital and blackjack him as he lay dying in bed.

Reinhart, officers said, claimed Bellamy "tricked" his mother into signing a deed. He said she is "old and frail and can't see very well."

Bellamy, chairman of the New Hanover County Democratic Executive Committee and a member of an old and wealthy Wilmington family, died before he could be hospitalized.

Elkins, of Bladenboro, N.C., suffered a minor shoulder wound. Reinhart, who operates the Miramar Hotel and another resort hotel at Myrtle Beach, S.C., told police he came here for a "show-down" with Bellamy.

They said he confronted the two lawmen on the seventh floor of a downtown office building and demanded they return a deed to property here formerly owned by his mother.

Reinhart said Bellamy "sneered" and stepped into a waiting elevator and he opened fire with a .38-caliber revolver, hitting the lawyer in the stomach.

The elevator operator, Mrs. Sarah Wallace, said she shut the door as soon as she saw Reinhart's gun, "but I wasn't in time."

Reinhart made no attempt to escape and surrendered quietly when police arrived.

Told by police Bellamy was dead, Reinhart cursed him and said "good . . . I'm glad."

HARRISBURG, Ill. — (AP) Benjamin Gobin, 26, is the fourth of seven brothers to break his back in four years. All lived.

He fell at work on a Joppla, Ill., power plant. George, 40, and Roy, 32, suffered broken backs in Brother Oscar, 28, fell 119 at work in Hammond, Ind., to break his back.

It's got the other three brothers wondering who's next.

Strength for the Day

By RALPH L. DOUGLAS
SLOW AND STEADY
Use these negotiations in Korea have revealed a few pitances and tireless persistence not usually thought of as typical of our national character. A more popular though often less practical way of settling problems is the dramatic one—the challenging ultimatum, the brilliant diplomatic triumph, the overwhelming military victory. Regardless of what we have thought of the Korean situation, our representatives have revealed our willingness to put aside impatience and work slowly and painstakingly toward our goal.

Most of us have personal problems that we would like to solve quickly and dramatically, too. Unfortunately, advertisers and makers of moving pictures are constantly encouraging us to hope for such quick solutions. Our financial woes may be relieved by winning a contest or receiving a bequest from a long forgotten uncle; our puny physique may be miraculously altered in three weeks by special exercises; our unpopularity may be ended by the right combination of soap and toothpaste.

But the wise man knows that this is not so. We can change our lives—our fortunes, appearance, habits. We can become better and happier if we really want to. But the change will not come by our sitting and waiting for the miracle to transform us. Instead, we must begin now, making a small gain today and another tomorrow, mindful of our future goal to encourage us through our present difficulties. That way lies success.

Favoritism In Pitt Tax Valuations

There was a statement in President Truman's speech Saturday night which certainly should be given thought by the people of Pitt County as it applies to the county government.

It particularly deserves the attention of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, we think.

The statement from the President's address to which we have reference is: "... it is just as immoral ... to enact special tax favors into law as it is for a tax official to connive in a crooked tax return."

If it is immoral to enact such favors, it surely follows that it is equally immoral to perpetuate such favors.

The present ad valorem tax valuations which are on the books of Pitt County certainly show favoritism to particular individuals and groups of the county. Not by their action, but by their failure to take needed action, have the members of the County Board of Commissioners continued these tax favors.

The Reflector has pointed out these discrepancies time and time again, but the Pitt Commissioners have never seen fit to take any action to clear away the tax favoritism and see that every person in the county pays taxes on the same percentage of what they own.

Under the state statutes, a revaluation of property is required in each county every four years. Under the law the revaluation may be in the form of a horizontal increase or decrease, or by actual appraisal.

Has Pitt County had a revaluation in the past four years? Heavens no! As a matter of fact the last revaluation of property in Pitt County in any form was in 1937—a decade and a half ago—and that survey is what forms the basis for the present tax valuation.

It takes little looking about Pitt County to see that proportional property values have changed a great deal in the past 15 years. It takes little looking through the county tax books to see that an appreciable portion of the property in Pitt County is listed far too low on the tax books compared with other property.

No matter what the tax rate is, or how much property an individual owns, every property owner should pay taxes on the same percentage of the true value of the property he owns. It is certainly showing favoritism when some people are paying taxes on the basis of 10 per cent of the actual value of what they own, and others are paying taxes on the basis of 30 to 40 per cent of what they own.

The most practical way to get rid of this favoritism is to have a complete revaluation of property in Pitt County by outside property experts who have no business or other connections in Pitt County. This proposal, however, has been blocked before by the Board of Commissioners. It may be blocked again. But until a revaluation is made in the county, the favoritism is being perpetuated by the County Board of Commissioners.

That a perpetuation of favoritism in tax payment is morally wrong can not be questioned. It is bad enough to have it in government at the national level, but when it is evident at the local level of government and nothing is done about it, it is even worse.

Millions Of Bucks For Doodadles, Duplication

The subcommittee on executive expenditures of which Congressman Herbert Bonner is chairman, is certainly putting the bite on the military to cut out its wasteful spending.

The Reflector is looking forward to continued efforts by the Congressman from the first congressional district of North Carolina to save the tax payers millions of dollars in unnecessary spending.

When Bonner and his committee returned from their round-the-world tour last summer, they were armed with information on waste by government agencies and the military in foreign countries. They have likewise been gathering information on military expenditures in this country and have come up with some astounding revelations.

Unified purchasing practices by the army, navy and air force would save the government untold dollars each year, and so far little reason for not having unified purchasing has been put forth. It would eliminate competition between the branches for the same materials, and make for greater bulk purchasing.

As The Reflector pointed out last fall, Bonner's subcommittee is in a position to lead the fight for more economy in the military spending of the nation by cutting down the waste in the categories the Congressman called "doodadles and duplication." The fight is now being waged, and we hope it will be followed through to a successful end.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—Democratic politicians on and off Capitol Hill, where he served ably for so many years, have again brought tremendous pressure on Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson of Kentucky to reconsider his refusal to seek the Democratic nomination for president. The movement has White House blessing and encouragement.

The decision to turn to the likable jurist from the Blue Grass state was made after members of House and Senate canvassed the political situation without any attempt to deceive themselves as to the weakened condition of their party, and the lack of strong candidates with nationwide appeal.

In their opinion, he is the only man who can save the organization from falling apart over sectional and personal quarrels.

SACRIFICE—The nomination of any other figure might lead to a disastrous division rivaling the Democratic split in 1960 and the Republicans in 1912. The argument now presented to Mr. Vinson is that he should make the sacrifice in gratitude for the many honors he has enjoyed at the hands of the party.

It is hardly an appealing prospect which they offer to the Chief Justice in asking him to give up a comfortable lifetime job. Few candid Democrats believe that they have much chance of winning against either a Taft or an Eisenhower next November.

So, they are proposing to the Kentuckian that he step down from the bench solely to prevent a disunion which may keep the party out of power for many years, as happened to the Democrats from 1860 to 1884.

FRANK—The analysis of the party crisis by the we-want-Vinson pleaders is unbelievably frank. As a matter of fact, it shocked the Chief Justice, although he is an old political hand and frequently discusses politics with Truman.

UNACCEPTABLE—Kefauver: He has no chance to win, despite his unorganized popularity because of his televised crime investigation. He is unacceptable to the machine bosses of New York, Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, etc., whom he embarrassed by exposing the leop between politicians and crooks.

He does not appeal to the southern bloc, even though he hails from Tennessee. In too many respects he has been a Trumanite, and it is Trumanism the South wants to wipe out. A Kefauver nomination would not prevent formation of an independent southern movement behind Mr. Russell.

ELEMENTS—Kerr: He would lose almost every great city of the North and Middle West, also the Far West. He stands with the Russell faction on civil rights. His vast oil and gas interests, in view of his use of his political influence at Washington to further them by legislation, make him a bogey-man to millions of consumers.

Russell: Although the ablest and most forthright on the Democratic side, the day has not yet arrived when the Flynn-Hague-Arvey type of boss, depending on millions of varied racial elements for their political existence, will dare to name a Georgian.

BLOW—But the most stunning blow to Democratic complacency, appears and party rescue squads is the discovery that Governor Adlai E. Stevenson would be "poisonous" to the southern faction. He is supposed to be Truman's favorite, which is sufficient to condemn him in Dixieland. He does appeal to leaders of the northern wing.

This excerpt from an editorial in the Shreveport Times, La., however, casts a new light on that section's reaction to Stevenson promotion. After referring to a suggestion in this column that nomination of the Illinois Governor might "appease" the South, it continues:

"OPPOSITION—Mr. Tucker, we believe, fails to grasp the basic fact about southern political agitation these days—that it is opposition not merely to President Truman, but to Trumanism, no matter who peddles it.

"Governor Stevenson grew up politically in the New Deal. When the Fair Deal came along, he became one of its 100 per centers, and still is. He was a public and ardent defender of the traitorous Alger Hiss, whom the Truman-Acheson-Department of Justice clique did everything possible to save.

"He is an active and ardent opponent of segregation, even where fully equal facilities and opportunities are given to the negro race. He is an advocate of the type of social equality which should be as repugnant to the North and East and West as it is to the South. He would be as the Democratic nominee, purely a hand-picked Truman stooge, politically speaking. Somebody in Washington seems to have been feeding Mr. Tucker a bit of horse-dung."

Huh? What's This?

Somebody Told Me

By L. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

The other day I thoroughly enjoyed a session with President John Messick of East Carolina College on the progress of the school. Despite the fact that Dr. Messick has been under the weather of late, he was on hand in his office, violating Doctor's orders, and as usual working on the project that he undertook when he accepted the Presidency: a better East Carolina College.

A good yard stick with which to measure the progress of the college is the enrollment. In the year of 1945-46, East Carolina had 159 men students on campus, 890 women, and no students off campus. During that summer session, they had 45 men on campus and 533 women. The combined total for that year was 1627.

For the year 1951-52, taking the summer of 1951 to round out the year, ECC had 915 men on campus during the regular session, 1209 women, 851 men during the summer and 1276 women, 620 students off campus, for a total of 4870 students.

In a report on March 20th, Dr. Messick said, "Our dormitories were filled in May last year, but this year they were filled in March with men who cannot be accommodated having already paid fees. Since we have had no dormitory for women built since 1927 that problem is acute."

Our classroom space will take care of 2500 when the library is completed. The enrollment of students in the elementary education curriculum has gone from 47 in 1947 to 490 this year, but again, space handicaps us, as well as lack of staff. Just one additional staff member is available for this increase, which presents a terrific problem. Only a few graduate students have been given rooms on the campus, and they have been denied rooms for next year."

With more dormitory space, it is obvious that Dr. Messick will be able to place even more students in ECC. His influence has resulted in a great increase in the building program, but even more facilities are needed to take care of applicants.

Dr. Messick is developing a program to obtain funds for scholarships for worthy students. Other colleges have many scholarships to offer, and in order to compete with them, ECC must do the same. With the help of Greenville residents, ECC is now in a position to offer athletic scholarships. At the completion of the proposed drive, it is hoped that scholarships in other fields will be available.

The value of ECC to our community is so great that it's hard to measure. That's why I interview Dr. Messick now and then, just to get the facts and figures that prove what a fine school we have here in Greenville.

And I thank you.

CONFUSION—Those people of all political parties who are deliberately trying to throw the election of the next President of the United States into the House of Representatives may be playing with a veritable Pandora's Box of troubles, not the least of which might be a constitutional question which has never arisen before.

PROCEDURE—If no candidate for President receives as many as 268 electoral votes as result of the November election, the House of Representatives will select a President from among the electors. In this process each State has one vote. One or more members from 32 states are required for a quorum and a majority of all states is necessary to elect. That means the winner must get 25 votes or more. It means also that states like Delaware and Wyoming with one representative each have the same voting power as New York with 46 representatives under present apportionment. But the next Congress will see many shifts in Congressional strength with the balance of power swinging to the West.

SITUATION—There will still be 435 members of the House of Representatives, but they may not be in same ratio of state representation or party strength as now. Presently the division is 232 Democrats, 201 Republicans, 20 independent and one vacancy. That is not important so far as the presidential election is concerned. What is significant is that with 25 state votes necessary for election, the division as to parties is 24 Republican, 21 Democrat, 3 with evenly split delegations. In several years ago would be invoked and the speaker of the House of Representatives would become President.

NON-PARTISAN—It is, of course, foolish to anticipate straight party line voting in either branch of the Congress. The whole effort to throw the election of a President and Vice President into Congress is predicted upon the hope and belief that party lines will be ignored. That is the particular hope and special purpose of Southern leaders bitterly opposed to President Truman or any of his hand-picked Fair Dealers continuing in the White House. Republicans in the House mean to follow party lines which means that any President elected by the House of Representatives is almost sure to be a Republican. The senators are likely to be influenced more by personalities than by party affiliation in selecting a Vice President.

BI-PARTISAN—So another interesting but confusing prospect arises the definite probability of a Republican Vice President and Democratic Vice President. The last time the President and Vice President were of different parties was 1801-1805, and the mess created by the feud between President Thomas Jefferson and Vice President Aaron Burr led to adoption of the twelfth amendment to the constitution setting up the present method of election.

HISTORY—The 1800 contest between Jefferson and Burr was the first of two instances when the House of Representatives had to complete the job of choosing a President.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

MORE PRIMARIES NEEDED (Kinston Free Press)

The interest that has been manifested in the presidential preference primaries in New Hampshire and Minnesota, as well as those now pending in Wisconsin and Nebraska, is proof that more such primaries are needed in the Nation today.

Senator George A. Smathers of Florida has introduced a measure in the Senate which would authorize a national presidential preference primary. It would assure a hearing for the voice of the people across the land and would encourage more favorite sons to seek elective office.

Even the most casual voter today knows that interest in our local elections is climaxed in the primaries—especially in states where one party is predominant. The primaries bring out the voters in numbers that overshadow general elections in North Carolina every time they are held.

The national presidential preference primary would be the greatest boost the voter could have in making his voice felt among the so-called professional politicians. It would create a revitalized interest in politics on the national level and bring out new leaders and new statesmen from the ranks of business, education and other fields.

The way it stands now, the average man who would "ok" office is reluctant to do so because of the many commitments necessary to gain the support essential to a successful campaign. If the people could express themselves freely in such a primary, there would be no dearth of leadership as has been experienced in campaigns in recent years.

Senator Smathers' measure should have the careful consideration of the Senate and the House. If it were passed we believe it could make a real contribution to the survival of democracy in this trying age.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

The Federal Trade Commission has a lot of work cut out for it between now and June 1 and fur retailers are going to have a lot of extra trouble and work after August 9.

The FTC has to translate the provisions of the Fur Products Labeling Act into rules, with June 1 as a target date, and they will go into effect, as the law provides, on August 9. The fact hasn't much leeway, because the law is quite specific.

It applies not only to furs but to all apparel containing fur, including hats with fur trim, fur-lined slippers and ear-muffs. However, the FTC may exempt articles containing relatively small parts of fur.

The National Retail Dry Goods Association, in an analysis of the law, points out that all fur articles after the effective date must bear a label containing the name of the animal as listed in the Fur Products Name Guide, if the fur is used, if it is bleached, dyed or artificially colored, if it is partly tails, bellies or waste furs, the country of origin if imported, and the name, identity or FTC registration number of the vendor.

Then the retailers must put all required information on the sales slip, and the information must be contained in any advertisements.

To make matters more complicated, while the manufacturer is required to furnish this information, he is not required to guarantee his facts are correct, or he may file a continuing guarantee with the FTC. Thus, if a retailer doesn't get a guarantee, the retailer must check with Washington or run the risk of inadvertently violating the law.

Complications set in when furs come from several different countries. The NRDA is hopeful that the FTC will decide that the country from which the most important constituent comes from will be enough. However, the FTC may insist that every country be listed and may even insist on the size or type used in lists.

If the regulations are as strict as the law allows, it may discourage milliners from using fur trimmings on hats, since that would involve a specific kind of label, detailed invoices and possibly guarantees. It will also complicate retailers' billing and advertising. Some retailers may prefer not to bother with such things as fur-trimmed hats in the low price ranges, or ear-muffs and slippers.

On August 9, the Hudson seal and the unicorn. Those names do not appear on the official list. They can escape extinction only as muskrat and rabbit.

DRUG, JEWELRY AND FOOD SALES GAIN

Despite the public nail-biting by retailers' sales in some lines have not been suffering. Retail sales in drug stores in February totaled $5,000,000 more than a year ago even after adjustment for the extra day this year. Gas station sales were up $3,000,000 and jewelry store sales up $1,000,000. Food store sales were up $167,000,000 and eating and drinking places up $75,000,000, although this gain was caused largely by higher prices.

All other lines totaled by the Department of Commerce were down when allowance is made for that extra day. Total retail sales were actually $1,205,000,000, compared with $1,192,000,000 a year earlier, but that seeming gain becomes a decline when the extra day is calculated.

SHOE PRODUCTION DRAGGING ITS HEELS

Shoe production in the three months ending yesterday is estimated by the Tanners Council of America at 126,375,000 pairs, compared with 136,295,000 pairs in the first 1951 quarter.

NEW PRODUCTS

WALLPAPER: A plastic wallpaper guaranteed to retain its color through 100 washings is being introduced in 24 patterns and various color combinations by Trimco Co., Merchandise Mart, Chicago 54.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK — (AP) — How will history rate Harry S. Truman, who has staked out a "for rent" sign on the White House?

When the partisan din of our times dies away, the chances are he will be allotted a greater niche than many of his critics now suspect.

This little man of big surprises may rank as the most warmly human President since Abraham Lincoln. For surely one of the greatest sources of his appeal has been the fact he looked and talked so much like the average citizen.

His great office was thrust upon him unexpectedly, and any American could look at his picture and say, "why the same lightning might have struck me." That was a big advantage to him—any voter could imagine himself being put in Harry's spot.

Even in his act of voluntarily removing himself from the 1952 Presidential race—the latest of many unpredictable acts—some people are sure to say, "well, there's a man that finally listened to his wife." And they will feel they understand him even better.

If he now goes on and steps out of the political scene altogether, his final stature in the story of our nation will begin to emerge more clearly. The small legends of leadership will cluster about his name and fame, molding him into the pattern that after generations will know.

How will they remember Harry?

They will remember him as a man who would rather be senator than President, and would rather be a Medal of Honor winner than either.

They will remember him as a man who would rather be senator ball with either hand and, look in a horse's mouth and tell its age.

They will remember him as a man who helped his wife dry the dishes and insisted that she edit all his speeches.

They will remember him as a man who went broke in business, spent 20 years clearing off his $30,000 debts, and went on to spend more money than any peacetime President in history.

They will remember him as a man who assumed his high office with a feeling of unpreparedness, but who went on to make vast decisions of breathtaking boldness.

They will remember him as one who rose personally unstained from a corrupt political machine to practice the trade of professional politician with an art probably unmatched since Lincoln.

"Historians are sure to write of him as a man less simple than he seemed, and they will label as the greatest mistake of his enemies the error they made of consistently low-rating his profound knowledge of people in the mass."

"That boy could plow the straightest row of corn in the county," his mother once said of Truman. "He was a farmer who could do everything there was to do just a little better than anyone else."

But he himself said: "I've worked hard all my life. That's the only recipe for success I know."

Truman has always been proud of being a professional politician.

How would he himself like best to be remembered—this man who called the White House "the finest prison in the world."

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—Want to know how to "lift a frugal meal to gourmet heights, or give a simple party that looks plush but costs little?" Mrs. Donald Detweiler, wife of a Naval officer and mother of two "teen-agers," gives some hints in her "Noes from the Kitchen Exchange," part of a mimeographed letter sent out to members of "Housewives United," a group she helped organize to fight inflation.

"We are not home economists, but just housewives who are worried about the cost of living," she wrote in one "Exchange."

"We are counting on ingenuity and imagination—yours and ours—to carry us through. So in a spirit of high adventure, rather than one of grim austerity, let us take our families along the low road of thrift."

Mrs. Detweiler asks her readers to remember the French housewife with her perpetual pot of soup—into which she throws everything including potatoes, water in which vegetables have boiled and left-overs—and her superb omelet ("try to find eggs at discount"). Also, her genius with herbs.

"Why not an herb bed this spring?" she suggests. "Share the seed cost with your neighbors. There will be plenty of seedlings from each packet for three or four beds. Use fresh herbs during the summer and dry them for your own use in the winter. Some herbs can be grown in pots on your window sill."

"Then," she continues, "if you have no conscientious objections, try cooking with wine occasionally. A 60-cent bottle of sauterne will last a long time if you keep it refrigerated. Try marinating pork liver in a half cup for a while before cooking and you will be surprised at the tenderness and delicacy of flavor."

A baked stuffed heart is delicious too if properly seasoned and cooked, and other inexpensive organ meats are sources of nutritional value and can be tasty if seasoned with herbs, she says.

Mrs. Detweiler suggests ways of making soup the main dish occasionally, how to serve it up with a flair to intrigue the family appetite, how to make tomato aspic with tomato juice and unflavored gelatin instead of expensive priced fresh tomatoes.

Although the group urges increasing economy, it still considers enterprising a "part of the American tradition," and that's where Mrs. Detweiler comes forth with ideas for that "simple, party that looks plush but costs little." One of these is a "centennial punch" made of white wine, soda and a dash of brandy, is the drink.

TEEN TALK

(By Judy)

AP Newsfeatures
You've all heard that from little acorns big oaks grow. But you'd probably be surprised that from seeds left after your breakfast grapefruit or from dinner cucumbers lovely plants grow.

At the recent International Flower Show held in New York, junior horticulturists exhibited fine plant specimens, the result of planting tiny fruit seeds of pits and nutshells until they looked like very fancy plants.

You don't need an acre of land to have fun growing things, says Carol Huenick, 12, of Staten Island, N. Y. Carol won first prize with a plant grown from an avocado pit entered in the "Little Sprouts by Little People" contest. Says she:

"Children who do not have an outdoor garden can have lots of fun growing plants from seeds or pits right in an apartment. I put my avocado pit in a jar with a tiny bit of water, placed it in a sunny window and pretty soon had a lovely plant."

Carol, who is the daughter of a Presbyterian minister, recalls that she became interested in gardening when she lived in the country. She started her mother's tulip bed, and started lovely pussywillows, merely by putting a twig in the ground. She loved growing pansies and daisies.

Another youngster—Susan Eastburn—won a prize for a large sweet potato plant. She started it three months ago by taking "a good fresh potato" and putting the sprout end in about an inch of water. Then she put it in a dark place for a few weeks, adding water occasionally. When leaves appeared she put it in a sunny window.

Susan also exhibited a plant which had grown from a cucumber seed. She put the seed in an eggshell which was filled with soil. Then she imbedded the egg shell in a cement-filled bottle cap, putting some cement around the outside of the cap to make an interesting container for her attractive plant-to-be.

Kids who live in cities can have lots of fun growing flowers in window boxes, small pots or other containers. It is fun to experiment with a variety of plants. People even have been known to grow tomatoes in a sunny window. If you have some land available to you for gardening, the first rule to remember is to take on only as much as you can handle. It is better to have a small garden plot which you can care for easily than one which becomes weed-ridden because it is more than one person can do.

Grow your own corsage. Sweet peas, baby's breath and rambling roses make charming nosegays. Flowers which can be available, readily, for the guest room or a little gift to a friend—zinnias, marigolds, nasturtiums, etc.—are easy to grow and are all-summer-long bouquets.

Vegetable gardening is fun, even for the neophyte. It doesn't need to be all work and string beans. Grow things with an interesting theme in mind. Plant salad bowl delicacies—tomatoes, lettuce, chives, cucumbers, onions, radishes—and you'll always have something to feed the gang. If you want to grow herbs to lend an aromatic bouquet to your salad try tarragon, rosemary, marjoram, sweet basil. Herbs can be grown in the house.

A luncheon of salad will be enjoyed by your school chums—especially those on a diet. Add julienned tongue or ham, Swiss cheese and Russian dressing to which some Worcestershire sauce has been added. Your school friends will agree that your home grown salad is a special treat.

Scholarship Goes To ECC Alumnus

Carl G. Conner of Windsor, graduate of East Carolina College last year and now a student in the School of Journalism of the University of Minnesota, has been selected as one of a group of students from colleges and universities in Minnesota to study abroad. He will spend most of a ten-week period investigating industrial conditions in Israel.

Conner was formerly editor of the East Carolina student newspaper the "Teco Echo" and is the author of a number of feature articles which have appeared in leading North Carolina newspapers. Recently he was chosen as a member of Sigma Delta Chi, national journalism fraternity.

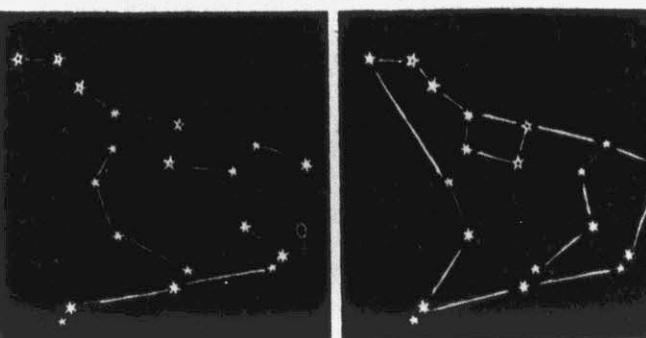

Through a series of tests and interviews, Conner was awarded a scholarship for foreign study offered by SPAN, Student Project for Amity among Nations. In this project a total of 53 students from Minnesota schools will benefit this summer by travel and study in various countries.

Conner will sail June 10; will visit briefly France, Switzerland, Italy, and Greece; and then go to Israel. Charting the Stars

AP Newsfeatures
STAR GAZING has interested men for so long that its beginning in antiquity cannot be traced. Through the ages they have tried to group stars in "constellations", many of which are linked to ancient myths. Charts drawn to show these constellations have puzzled moderns. H. A. Rey was one who was puzzled. "There is a better way to chart the stars," he said, and produced a book to prove it. Known for his children's books, his "The Stars" reduces the problem to its simplest terms for both children and adults. Here are four illustrations of the old and new charts taken from Rey's book. His charts are at right.

GREAT BEAR—This star group which contains the Big Dipper is one of the best known in the northern sky. The two stars farthest from the handle of the Dipper point to the North Star around which Rey groups his charts of the stars. The Bear is visible all year.

HERCULES provides a picture of the hero with a club when Rey charts it. Best seen May through October.

TWINS are best seen December through May.

PEGASUS can best be seen August to October.

Bill Dole To Become Head Coach At Davidson College

Announcement Made Last Night By Dole

In a joint announcement from East Carolina College and Davidson College, it was announced last night that Bill Dole would resign his position as head football coach at E.C.C. to take a similar position at Davidson. Dole will assume his new position next Monday.

Dole himself made the announcement to members of the football team at East Carolina in a called squad meeting last night. He revealed that he has been considering the matter for about two weeks. He would offer no comment as to who he thought would succeed him at East Carolina. "That will be the job of the President (Dr. John D. Messick) and the Board of Trustees," Dole said in regard to the selection of his successor.

Immediate speculation puts the finger on Jack Boone, former Elon College athletic great, who is serving as assistant football coach and head baseball coach. Boone was Dole's chief assistant last year. Boone had no statement to make this morning. He has not had a chance to talk with either Dole or other college officials.

In a prepared statement this morning, Dole said, "We have enjoyed our three years in Greenville and will miss our many friends here. I appreciate the fine following and support in athletics Greenville has given my teams. We have a fine group of athletes and a most promising team for next year and, naturally, that made my decision a hard one."

Dole came to East Carolina in 1949 after an outstanding record at Fayetteville High School. He went to Fayetteville after his discharge from the Navy and built the school into a state championship team within three years. He had formerly coached high school ball in Bluefield, West Virginia, and was connected with the Physical Education Program while in the Navy.

At Davidson, Dole will be able to select his own staff. The resignation last Saturday of Buddy Chandler, line coach, reduced the number of assistants at Davidson to three but Dole would not make a comment as to whether or not he intends to keep the three remaining coaches.

Tom Fetzer, former Wake Forest great, is the backfield coach and is expected to be retained. Boyd Baird, an assistant, is also the basketball coach, and will probably remain at the college. The status of Dick Redding, Crowell Little's chief assistant, is unknown.

The contract offered Dole was for

Wolfpack Netmen Blank Pirates 9-0

The tennis team of East Carolina College offered little challenge yesterday to the netmen of N. C. State as the Wolfpack rang up a 9-0 whitewash victory over the Pirates. It was the first loss of the year for the Pirates who have won one.

Only two of the nine matches played went the full three sets. In the number two singles, Pirate Paul Cameron extended Alf Aksel to three sets before losing. In the number three singles, Dave Jones also carried Dave Croxson for three sets before finally losing to the visiting netter.

The summary:

Singles
Morris defeated Hallow, 6-3, 6-3.
Aksel defeated Cameron, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4.
Croxson defeated D. Jones, 6-0, 6-3, 6-3.
Jones defeated Richardson, 6-1, 6-2.
Duffett defeated Stroud, 7-5, 6-3.
Greenberg defeated Mooley, 6-4, 7-5.

Doubles
Morris and Aksel defeated Jones and Cameron, 6-3, 6-3.
Cline and Greenberg defeated Hallow and Kincaid, 6-1, 6-4.
Jones and Duffett defeated Richardson and Mobley, 6-0, 6-2.

Coleman Leaves

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—Jerry Coleman, New York Yankees' second baseman who has been recalled to the Marine Corps, will leave for Jacksonville today for his physical examination.

He'll stay overnight, then report tomorrow to the Navy Air Base about 15 miles outside the city, along with Ted Williams, the Boston Red Sox slugger, who also has been called back.

"I don't know if they'll tell us immediately if we have passed the exam," commented Coleman.

Lovellette Stars In Kansas Win Over LaSalle

NEW YORK (AP)—LaSalle's gritty Explorers had no formula for stopping big Clyde Lovellette, and as a result Kansas will meet the Peoria Casterpillars in the finals of the Olympic basketball trials tonight at Madison Square Garden.

Lovellette, the nearest thing to a scoring robot, stuffed 40 points through the cords last night as Kansas overcame LaSalle, 70-65, in perhaps the most thrilling game seen here this season.

In the opener, Peoria repeated its AAU title win over the Phillips Oilers by whipping the Bartlesville, Okla., club, 64-50, with surprising ease.

By winning last night, Kansas and Peoria qualified seven players each for the U.S. Olympic team, which will journey to Helsinki this summer.

The fans in Madison Square Garden, who claim they've seen just about everything, were given a performance by Lovellette they won't soon forget.

At times, the Explorers, who were forced to play without their great rebounder, Jack Moore, would double and even triple team the All-American center from Terre Haute, Ind. But almost every time Lovellette got his hands on the ball, it either cut the cords or danced around the rim and teetered out.

In all, Clyde dropped in 18 field goals and four fouls.

Rodney Heath Features 10-5 Victory By East Carolina Bucs

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Sports Writer

Freshman Rodney "Little Spook" Heath turned in a superlative three-hit relief pitching job yesterday afternoon to feature an uphill battle by the East Carolina Pirates in defeating Atlantic Christian College 10-5. The game was a North State Conference contest.

The Pirates were trailing 5-1 at the time Heath came into the game but once the slender left-hander got into action, they had little to worry about except producing some runs. A four-run sixth inning and big five-run eighth frame took care of that item.

Despite the big fireworks in the late innings by the Pirate batters, Heath was the big noise yesterday. He pitched five innings against the Bulldogs and gave up only three hits and three walks while more than balancing the books by striking out ten Bulldog batters. In addition, he drilled out a single and accounted for one of the Buc runs in the big eighth inning.

That eighth inning rally by the Buc came with two men out. After the first two batters had been retired by Bulldog relief hurler Gilbert Ferrell, Pirate shortstop Paul Jones broke the dam with a long hit to left-centerfield which went for an inside-the-park home run. After that, Ferrell completely blew up walks to Heath, Boyd Webb and Fred Soles before tossing up a fast pitch which W. C. Sanderson tied into for a two base hit. Another fast pitch to Jim Corbin was blasted for a triple—Corbin's second of the afternoon—and the Pirates had enough runs to sit back and enjoy their second North State Conference victory of the year.

Bulldog starter Gogo Jackson made things tough for the Pirate batsmen in the first five innings before his slow pitches were finally figured out by the Bucs. He was enjoying a 5-1 lead before he was torn into in the fifth inning.

In that frame, Jackson gave up singles to Soles, Sanderson and Corbin to load the bases which were promptly cleared by a double off the bat of Gailther Cline. Cline went to third when rightfielder Jim Peebles booted the ball and scored when Cecil Heath punched a single into leftfield off Ferrell who had just come into the game.

That set the stage for (Rodney) Heath's magnificent display of pitching and the Pirates' big eighth inning.

Corbin, with two triples and a single in five trips to the plate, was the top batter for the Bucs while Sanderson came through with two singles and a double in four official trips. Jones had a single in addition to his big home run. Second baseman Nick Siganos pounded out a triple and two singles in four trips to the plate to lead the Bulldogs. Jackson helped his own cause while he was in the game with two singles in two trips but his pitching was not enough to keep the Pirates from tearing down the big lead that had built up for him.

Murder is Forgetful

BY WILLIAM G. BOGART

Then Homer, the butler, was in the room also, and Nick Walker again, rain running off his face. They carried Nancy out between them. There was the sound of a car motor running outside the main entrance to the front hall.

Doctor Clark was saying, "You'd better come with me, Karen." His features were set and grim. "We'll get her to the hospital."

Johnny followed them into the hall.

He asked Clark urgently, "What do you think, Doc?"

The doctor's voice was low as he spoke. The words were for Johnny's benefit only. "She hasn't a chance. I doubt if she lives until we get there."

Doctor Clark paused just as instantly to look steadily at Johnny Saxon. "Perhaps," he said softly, "it's just as well. This clears things up without a mess of publicity for the family. No one need ever know about her and Martin Smith. As for shooting herself, accidentally, we can all vouch for that."

"Yes," said Johnny.

Kay was bringing her mother out of the living room. She said, "She'd better lie down. She's been through so much." Kay's own voice was trembling.

Johnny took Irene's arm. "I'll take her upstairs," he said quickly. He looked with concern at Kay's young face. "Now stop thinking about things. You're the one I'm worried about. It's finished now." He called to Moe, still in the living room. "Fix Kay a drink. I'll be right down."

He went up the stairs with Irene Smith. He accompanied her into the blue and white bedroom. She was not nervous now. She was calm and thoughtful.

In the room, Johnny looked at her and said quietly, "That was about the same way it happened at the gun club that Saturday night, wasn't it?"

"Yes," she said.

"You remember everything now?"

"Everything." She was very calm. "The lights were turned off that night. They were arguing. Nancy had the gun. I grabbed her and we struggled over it, just like a moment ago."

Johnny said, "In the darkness, you shot him."

"Yes," Irene firmly stated. "I shot him. I loathed him. Even poor Kay was finding out the things he did. I'd warned him. I couldn't see Kay hurt any more."

Johnny said, "But Nancy's always thought she did it?"

"I think so," Irene said quietly. "She fainted, that night. Later I told her we had to get him out of there... make it appear like an accident. She had come there with the gun. She intended to kill Martin. She was frantic afterwards, and utterly helpless."

"What did you do?"

"I told her to go back to the house through the woods path. Putting Martin in the car... I don't know how I did it... I drove down to 25A. I left him there in the field alongside the road. When I got back in the car I felt faint. I didn't know what I was doing. I remembered driving off the road. There was a crash. I'm not sure, but I think my head struck the steering wheel."

"I did," explained Johnny.

She made a gesture with her hands. "After that..."

He nodded. "You didn't remember the thing. Yet Nancy's never been sure. She had planned to kill him. Yet if you never regained your memory she was comparatively safe."

Irene Smith sat down. She looked tired. Yet a great burden seemed to have been lifted from her, and she was calm and relaxed.

She told Johnny, "The whole story — all except the very ending — is all written down in my manuscript. Perhaps a jury would believe it. Maybe they wouldn't. Whatever you want to tell them..."

"There's no need for that," Johnny said.

Irene looked at him quickly.

"They'd free you anyway. Knowing what he had done to you... what both of them had done to your life... they'd never find you guilty. You've got a new life ahead of you now. You've got Kay, too. No one knows anything, except you and me. Why not leave it that way, and start anew?"

"And the manuscript?" asked Irene.

"Has been destroyed," Johnny lied. "I'm the only one who ever read it. So forget about that, too."

She stood up again. She took his hand. "I've never met anyone quite like you," she said warmly. Johnny felt ill at ease. "I think I'll see Kay for a few moments. The kid's all confused. I'll talk to her."

"Please do, Johnny Saxon."

He went downstairs. Moe met him in the hall.

"J. T. Smith just called," he whispered quickly. "He's on his way out from New York. Do you think we'll get paid?"

"Good God," said Johnny in amazement. "Can't you wait?"

"The hospital called too. It was Doc. Nancy's... dead."

The great Dane came out of the library and stood looking at Moe. Johnny said, "So that winds up things. We'll be leaving soon, after I see Kay's uncle. You might start packing."

"Yes, I guess so," Moe said. He started up the stairs slowly. He looked back.

The dog's ears lifted up and he followed. Moe patted his powerful shoulders. "I'm going to miss you, pal," he said sadly.

In the living room, Johnny smiled as he found Kay. She was waiting for him. Her unusual green eyes were troubled.

"Hey!" he said brightly. "None of that." He flung open one of the terrace doors. He heard rain pattering on the tiles outside. The wind had almost died.

"Would you like to walk in the rain?" he asked suddenly, grinning.

"I'm..." She hesitated.

He took her hand and led her quickly outside. "It makes you feel fresh and alive," he said cheerfully.

Kay caught some of his mood. "Shouldn't you wear a hat, Johnny?"

"Darnit, do you have to remind me that my hair is thinning?"

"Johnny! You're not old! I think..."

He took her by the arm and they swung down along the driveway. The rain pelted their faces and ran down their cheeks. It was cool and refreshing.

"No kidding," Johnny said seriously. "do you really think I still look young?"

S. Qualifications are a bachelor's degree, good scholarship, practical skills, good health, and ability to work with people. The six-week training session for those selected is scheduled for July 14-August 22 at National College for Christian Workers, Kansas City, Mo. Dr. W. A. Vasser t'Hooft, general secretary of the World Council of Churches in Geneva, Switzerland, gave the Carnahan Lectures in the Union Theological Seminary, Buenos Aires, Argentina, March 25 to 27. This is the second year of this lectureship which honors the memory of the late Miss Carrie Jay Carnahan and Miss Ella May Carnahan, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Once a missionary nurse, always a missionary nurse," says Miss Ethel Lovatt, R. N., of Lubec, Maine, now on her way to the Near East. Miss Lovatt was formerly superintendent of nurses at the Congregational Christiana Lu Lo Hospital, Tungshien, North China. She was there at the time of the Japanese invasion, and was interned as a civilian POW. Then she was repatriated to the United States on the famed "Gripsholm." Three years later (1946) Miss Lovatt returned to China and served there while the communists were in control of the Chinese government. When that became untenable (so as to protect the Chinese Christians) she again returned to the United States (1951). And now she is en route to Turkey where she will resume her nursing and nursing-teaching career at the Congregational Hospital in Gaziantep. Meanwhile she has been making herself proficient in the Turkish language which she finds easier than the Chinese.

New 'Targets' For Dixie Demos

By WILLIAM M. BATES

United Press Staff Correspondent

ATLANTA (UP)—Dixie Democrats switched their attention from personalities to policies today and Democratic convention write a platform acceptable to the South.

President Truman's withdrawal as a candidate set Southern leaders talking about the platform the convention will adopt when it meets in July. They appeared certain to press for adoption of a strong states' rights plank and elimination of the 1948 civil rights stand.

"We are interested in whether the platform of the national party will recognize states' rights," Gov. Hugh White of Mississippi said.

Gov. Herman Talmadge of Georgia and Gov. Eugene B. Tamm of Louisiana said they hoped Mr. Truman's decision not to run would make agreement on candidates and a platform possible.

Former Gov. M.E. Thompson of Georgia, who supported Mr. Truman in 1948 but has broken with him since, said he hopes the "South will unite behind a reasonable platform and the nominees of the party to work for a Democratic victory in 1952."

It was adoption of a strong civil rights plank along with Mr. Truman's nomination in 1948 that set off a party bolt in Dixie that kept four states out of the Democratic column.

Meanwhile, Talmadge said "solid" Southern opposition to the President and the "strong candidacy" of Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) were major factors in Mr. Truman's withdrawal. He said the President was convinced he could not win.

Talmadge said he and Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.) decided at a meeting in Atlanta last June to unite Southern leaders in a stop-Truman move. Talmadge said he and Byrd decided then to induce Russell to become a candidate.

Talmadge said "five or six" Southern states adopted election laws that helped discourage Mr. Truman from running.

These laws are designed to free democratic presidential electors to vote for whom they please in an effort to throw the election into the House of Representatives.

Willie Sutton And Gunman Pal Guilty Of Bank Holdup

NEW YORK (UP)—An all-male jury filled into the box at dawn today and pronounced Willie (The Actor) Sutton and his gunman pal, Thomas (Mad Dog) Kling, guilty of robbing a Queens County bank of $63,942 two years ago.

The verdict for Sutton meant little as far as years in the penitentiary go. It would add a maximum of 30 years to the 100 or more he already faces in unexpired terms on other robbery charges.

The jury, which received the case at 7:30 p.m. EST yesterday, delivered the guilty verdict at 5:47 a.m. EST in the 11th trial day.

As the jury filled the box, the defendants were told to rise and face the standing men. Jury foreman Donald Maloney, a landscape architect, pronounced the verdict: "Sutton and Kling guilty as charged."

That meant the jury had decided both defendants were guilty on four counts. The maximum penalty with sentences running concurrently on all four counts would be 30 years.

However, that could be doubled if the state, prior to sentencing, files an information with the court proving the defendants are multiple felony offenders.

At the request of the defense, the jury was polled. To the question "Is that your verdict," each juror answered: "It is."

The atmosphere of fear which had hung over the trial since its beginning on March 18 had continued through to yesterday's summations.

In his summation, Assistant Dist. Atty. James P. McGrattan told the jury he was convinced the state's first important witness, an elderly vault custodian, "was scared stiff" on the stand.

That witness had failed positively to identify Sutton and Kling. Other bank employees did.

Sutton was arrested Feb. 18 when the alertness of a 24-year-old clothing salesman led police to him.

sary to accomplish it.

The planning board consists of five members, citizens of the city, who are elected by the Board of Aldermen. One member is elected for five years, one for four, one for three, one for two and one for one year. As the terms of these members expire, new elections for terms of five years are made.

As composed at present, the planning board is made up of Frank Little as chairman, Tom Rivers as secretary, Mrs. Dave Clark, Martin Swartz and L. S. Ficklen.

Joint Talks On Service Pay Bill

WASHINGTON (UP)—A Senate-approved bill providing a 3 per cent pay boost for servicemen and a $45 monthly bonus for combat duty in Korea headed for a Senate House conference committee today.

Rep. Paul Kilday (D-Tex.), who played a leading role in drafting the House bill providing a 10 per cent pay hike, said the differences are so great that it is impossible to predict what will be in the final version.

Except for the bonus provision, the Senate bill, passed late yesterday, was less generous than the House measure. The Senate version also included increases in rations and quarters allowances, making a total average increase of 5.6 per cent. The combat bonus would be retroactive to June 30, 1950.

Kilday said some members of the House Armed Services Committee have objected that the bonus would have a tremendous impact on the national economy in event of all-out war. He said he would study the Senate's definition of "combat" before taking a position on the proposal.

The provision adopted on the Senate floor would provide the bonus for men who serve at least six days in a month with a combat unit under fire, or who are wounded or captured. It would set up five general standards for determining when a ground, naval or air unit is under fire.

Men of the 1st Marine Division in Korea believed it was an April Fool joke when they were told of the pay raise and bonus.

Sgt. Alvah Thielke of South Bend, Ind., gave a typical comment: "I hope there's nothing significant about this being April Fool's Day and somebody telling us we may get more money."

Soldier Says He Killed To Get Out Of Uniform

LAMPASAS, Tex. (UP)—A cook's helper stuck to his story today that he killed his mess officer with a home-made bullet because he was "willing to do anything" to get out of the Army.

Pvt. Michael F. Kunak, 19, of Baltimore, Md., shot Lt. Harold Williamson, of Washington, N.C., yesterday in the presence of Signal Corps officers and newspaper reporters.

Then Kunak, a six-foot veteran paratrooper, put aside his carbine and stood at parade rest to await the arrival of military police.

The bullet that killed Williamson was fashioned from a piece of brass cleaning rod. Kunak told police he was not issued to Kunak or other soldiers of the 82nd Airborne Division, which is participating in the "Exercise Longhorn" war games.

"I'll kill a man to get out or I'll kill a man who would keep me from getting out," Kunak told police and reporters yesterday. "I know I was wrong," he said, "I expect to be hanged. It was cold, deliberate murder."

Kunak first was held without charges by civil authorities, since the slaying took place outside military territory. But he was turned back to military authorities for mental examination later today.

Capt. Raymond Fleming, assistant public information officer for the 82nd Airborne, "Aggressor Force" in the largest air-ground maneuver in the nation's history, said he thought at first it was Williamson's gun which had discharged, because he was pay officer and carried a gun.

Bob Mooney, covering the maneuvers for the Indianapolis News, said the shooting occurred at noon while Williamson, other officers and reporters were sitting at a field table.

"I heard the explosion," Mooney said. "I looked behind me and saw this carbine. The man—a private—either laid it on the table or leaned it against a seating bench. Then he stepped back under a canopy of the field mess tent and stood at parade rest."

"The mess officer, a young second lieutenant, threw his arms up and just toppled over from where he was sitting. A major who was also a doctor came from another mess tent and did everything."

"But I think the lieutenant died within a minute and a half or two minutes. It was at extremely close range. The private practically stuck the end of the barrel right up against his chest."

Kunak told Dist. Atty. James K. Everts last night that he was not "mad" at Williamson and had talked to him only once before. He said he had tried unsuccessfully on other occasions to get a dishonorable discharge.

Kunak said he once stole a pair of boots and left behind his cap with his name on it so he would be incriminated, but the Army took no action.

Rebellious Convicts Given Tear Gas, Give Selves Up

TRENTON, N.J. (UP)—Twenty-nine hungry, water-soaked convicts were routed by tear gas last night from a besieged wing of New Jersey State Prison where they had wrecked fixtures and furniture in a two-day riot.

They were hospitalized today under heavy guard for treatment and to await disciplinary action.

The rioting prisoners barricaded themselves in the isolated wing of the prison early Sunday and stubbornly refused to come out despite repeated flooding of the three-story wing by city fire hoses.

Ten tear gas bombs were dropped down the building's ventilators from the roof last night. The gas drove the convicts to the end of the wing where they talked with Warden William H. Carty through a closed door.

They agreed to surrender and Carty ordered the door opened wide enough to allow one man at a time to come out. The 29 were placed under heavy guard as they stumbled one by one through the narrow opening.

The immediate cause of the riot was said to be dissatisfaction of the prisoners over treatment of one inmate who said he was ill. There were also protests against the prison food.

Iron-pipe bedsteads, sanitary fixtures and other furniture were ripped up and thrown at guards who surrounded the building.

Warden Carty ordered the fire hoses into action and said it had been decided to harrty the prisoners and starve them into submission rather than clean out the building by armed force.

The warden was pelted with fixtures and other missiles yesterday when he approached the building to plead with the convicts to give up. He was not hurt.

There were no serious injuries, he said, either to guards of prisoners during the riots.

It required 36 ballots in the House to break the tie there, when Alexander Hamilton, opposing the philosophies of both, threw his weight to Jefferson. Four years later, Hamilton was killed in a duel with Burr. Only other time the House elected a President was in 1824,

DISHWATER DOES DUCKS DIRT
HARTFORD, Conn. (UP)—De-tergents may be fine for removing grease from dirty dishes, but they are making life tough for ducks. A sportsmen's group reports that dishwater, which finds its way into bays and inlets, reduces the oily coating of ducks, making their feathers waterlogged and giving them trouble swimming.
