Newly-Budding Trees Burn In Woodland Fire

Two forest fires broke out in Pitt County yesterday, ravishing acres of woodland which was just beginning to bud. Above, smoke is shown pouring upward from a fire located several miles from Greenville along the Patoilus Highway. Foresters last night had just about controlled the blaze. Earlier yesterday afternoon, a second fire on the Grimes farm in Grimesland was controlled after it burned over eight acres of land. (Reflector Photo by Roy Hardee).

Unafraid Of Threat By Truman

Economy Advocates Not 'Intimidated' By Talk Of Prolonged Session

WASHINGTON (UP)—Senate economy advocates said today they won't be "intimidated" by President Truman's threat to keep Congress in session this summer until it passes his military budget. They defended the House cuts in military spending as "completely justified" and said they would not be "stampeded" into restoring the money by any "dictatorial" threat by the President.

Mr. Truman, criticizing the House cuts as "terribly dangerous," warned yesterday he would recall Congress this summer if it adjourns without the Senate restoring all the funds he asked for national defense.

Some congressmen viewed the threat as "the opening attack in a slam-bang fight with the lawmakers. They felt that Mr. Truman, free from re-election worries, had finally pulled out all the stops in his long-smoldering feud with Congress.

Senate Republican Leader Styles Bridges charged that Mr. Truman "has thrown the constitution to the winds and is attempting to seize the power of appropriation: the power to control the purse strings."

Mr. Truman accused the House of a "fake" economy drive, motivated by election-year politics and a desire for headlines.

"This may be an election year here," he said, "but the Kremlin won't take a vacation simply because of our politics. If we weaken, if we fall back, the Kremlin will see a chance to move in."

Bridges retorted that "merely because the executive branch of the government labels a request as 'defense' is no guarantee to us or the taxpayers that it is a 'must' item."

The House cut Mr. Truman's $50,000,000 military appropriations request to $46,207,000,000 and actual military spending in fiscal 1953.

Sen. Wayne Morse (R-Ore.) said that once Congress appropriates what it believes necessary funds for defense, it would be "plain folly to keep it in session because it can adjourn as fast as sessions can be called."

Mr. Truman anticipated that eventually in a speech before the Armvets, a World War II veterans organization, he said:

"If I have to call a special 'Turnip Day' session every day until January 1, we are going to get this thing done and get it done right."

Girls Take Top Oratory Honors

Win First Three Prizes In County-Wide Speaking Contest

Three Pitt County high school girls collaborated to beat the boys at their own vocation as they declared their way into capturing the three prizes in the finals of the county-wide soil conservation speaking contest held at the courthouse here last night.

After hearing five contestants—four of whom were girls—the judges declared Millie Tripp, 15-year-old sophomore from Ayden High School, winner of first place in the county-wide competition. Mildred Sellers, 17, a junior at Grifton High School, was named the runner-up, and third place went to 16-year-old Emel Wilson, a junior at Bethel High School.

The two other participants, Willis Joyner, 18, of Chicod High School and Laverne Joyner, a 15-year-old freshman at Patoilus High School, had previously won over all contestants in their respective schools. An outgrowth of note is that the two Joyner contestants are brother and sister.

All of last night's speakers had won over a number of contestants in their home schools and rules of the contest required that the speeches be written by the contestant. Topic of the speeches could be any subject relating to soil conservation and development in Pitt County.

Connor Eagles, county soil conservationist, presented the winners with cash awards of $15.00 for first place, $10.00 for second place and $5.00 for third place. In making the presentation, Eagles said, "We feel that this contest has been of great benefit to the youth of Pitt County, and it is our plan to make the contest an annual affair."

Judges for last night's competition were Assistant County Agent C. J. Goodman, S. L. Daughtridge, district soil conservationist, and Dr. M. N. Posey, head of the English Department at East Carolina College.

Another Pint Of Blood Is Given

171 Pints Of Blood Collected At ECC

Largest Single Day Of Donations In County Since Program Inaugurated; Work Is Completed By Four O'Clock

By MURIEL SHOTWELL
Reflector Staff Writer

Air ROTC students and other students at East Carolina College donated 171 pints of blood yesterday; the largest amount to be collected since the blood program was launched in the county in January.

The Tidewater Regional Blood Center sent its crew of technicians, nurses, and a doctor, to Greenville yesterday to set up a blood donor center in the Wright Building at the college. The visit of the bloodmobile to the college was sponsored by the APROTC under the direction of Major Lemax L. May.

By 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon the donors had given 100 pints of blood and by 4 o'clock 171 pints had been donated.

While the blood donations were in progress, a call came from the Pitt Memorial Hospital that two pints of a special type of blood were needed. Within a few minutes two pints of fresh blood, given by college students, reached the hospital.

The canteen crew from the Greenville Service League under the direction of Mrs. J. L. Little served milk, coffee, orange juice and food to the donors. Other volunteer workers took down the necessary data from the students and many volunteer nurses and doctors were on hand.

B. C. Satterfield and Dean Leo Jenkins both said they were quite pleased with the response at the college and Jenkins suggested that

Probe Seizure Of Airliner By Two Canadians

VIENNA, Austria (UP)—British occupation authorities said today they were investigating the seizure of a Yugoslav airliner by two naturalized Canadians to determine whether air piracy had been committed.

The plane, which had been flying from Belgrade to Ljubljana, was forced at pistol point by Yugoslav-born John and Nicolaie Maricovic to land at Graz in southern Austria yesterday.

The Maricovic brothers seized the plane to allow their mother and 14-year-old sister Sophie to escape from their Communist homeland. Belgrade lawyer Nicolai Bokic, passengers on the plane also asked British authorities for political asylum.

On the basis of present tax rates that means he had to pay a federal income tax of around $457,500.

Angry Missouri Goes Under Dikes

Important Cases Scheduled For Pitt Grand Jury

Brantley-Dail Hearing Monday; 36 Cases To Be Tried In Criminal Term

Pitt County Grand Jury, when it convenes next week, will decide whether murder indictments will be drawn against Glenn Brantley and Lucille Dail, both of Greenville, who are being held under bond for grand jury action in connection with the slaying of Melvin E. Daniels.

The cases against Brantley and Mrs. Dail are scheduled to go before the grand jury Monday when the April criminal term of Pitt County superior court convenes here April 21—with Judge John J. Burney of Wilmington presiding. In addition to the two, the grand jury will hear 10 other cases. They are four of breaking and entering and larceny, three of forgery, and one each of assault with a deadly weapon, rape and violating the motor vehicle law.

Inquest Held March 25

Arrest of Brantley and Mrs. Dail grew out of the corner's inquest held March 25 to investigate the fatal shooting of Melvin E. Daniels, Greenville electrical appliance salesman. Daniels was shot to death with a pistol around 9:30 p.m., March 22, at the home of Mrs. Dail.

Immediately following the inquest, the pair was placed under arrest after Miss Helen Strickland—who was present at the shooting—elected a packed courtroom and implicated Brantley by saying, "Mrs. Dail did not shoot Daniels. Brantley was also present when Daniels was shot down on the porch of the Dail home."

After the arrests, Mrs. Dail's bond was set at $1,000, while Brantley's was upped to $5,000. She was released on bond within a few hours, but Brantley remained in jail until his bond was reduced to $3,000, at which time he too went free pending grand jury action.

Courthouse officials conjectured early today that even if the grand jury finds a true bill in their cases Monday, they will not be tried before the August term of court.

Superior Court Cases

In superior court, 13 cases dating back several months are slated to be not pressed. They are two each of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, bigamy and larceny, and one each of assault, affray and assault on a female, breaking and entering and larceny, driving drunk, a careless and reckless driving, illegal possession of non-tax-paid whiskey and murder.

A calendar for trial are 36 cases to go before Judge Burney. They are 10 of forgery, seven of driving drunk, five of breaking and entering and larceny, four of violating the liquor laws, two each of fraud and giving a worthless check, and one each of violating the motor vehicle laws, non-support, larceny, assault with a deadly weapon, gambling, and assault on a female.

A total of 56 jurors has been drawn from every township in the county for jury duty next week. Four of them are women. This term of superior court is scheduled to last through Friday.

Names Of Jurors

The 56 jurors drawn and their respective townships are: Ayden—C. M. Anderson, Ernest Gardner, Alton Hale, J. Mad McLawhorn, J. L. Tingle and Eugene F. Tripp; Beaver Dam—Fred C. Moore; Bethel—J. Royal Carson and Floyd Thomas; Belvoir—L. E. Brewer, D. H. Parker, Mack Gilbert Teel and C. E. Everett; Carlin—Mrs. R. R. Alexander, A. D. Eakes, J. D. Knox, Jr., and Mrs. Paul A. Couldn't Beat Levees, But Pressure Bursts Big Sewer Pipe To Spew Geyser Of Muddy Water Over Omaha's Industrial Area; Engineers Try Plug Hole

OMAHA, Neb. (UP)—The angry Missouri River, unable to break or top the levees here, sneaked under the dikes, burst a huge sewer pipe and spewed like a geyser over a 500-block industrial section today. Muddy water gushed through a 120-foot crater blown out by the tremendous pressure of the river, standing at 39.94 feet.

Trucks loaded with sand were rushed to the blasted street in East Omaha, but the engineers soon abandoned the effort as useless and concentrated on plugging the sewer outlet 25 feet below the surface of the river itself.

Unless the outlet could be plugged, the water would continue to rush in until the levels on both sides of the levee was equal.

"It doesn't look good," said Lt. Gen. Lewis Pick, chief of the army engineers.

The water inside the dike early today was four feet deep in places, and rising by the minute. It covered portions of the switchyards serving the Missouri Pacific, North Western and Union Pacific railroads.

The residents of the area had been evacuated almost a week ago when the 40,000 citizens in East Omaha and Council Bluffs, Ia., were ordered out in anticipation of a flood.

Hundreds of men were rushed to the spot. Work was begun immediately on a causeway leading from the street below up to the top of the levee.

Truckload after truckload of rock was dumped around the levee to reinforce it for the strain it would have to bear from the workers and their heavy machines.

On the river itself, army tugs jockeyed six large barges into position. Two were brought directly over the outlet. Giant steel beams, requiring the strength of 20 men to handle, were shoved off.

The goal was to place a huge steel sheet against the beams and weight it down with sandbags.

The sewer itself was a concrete tunnel 25 feet in diameter. Through this two steel pipes, each seven-by-nine feet. It was impossible to tell immediately whether the pressure had backed up in one or both of the pipes.

Observers said the situation might be likened to a king-sized "sand bowl" in which the pressure of the water on the outside of the levee seeps under the dike until it bursts through the surface of the ground on the inside.

Army engineers said that if the situation became too desperate they would plug the outlet by sinking a barge in front of it.

The original explosion blasted a single giant hole in the street about 7 p.m. yesterday. Minutes later a dozen other explosions ripped the street, collapsing finally into the 120-foot crater.

Another danger was that the water inside would rush down the riverfront and undercut the water-soaked levees from the inside. A new dike was thrown up to protect the river levee itself.

The new peril came even as it appeared that the greatest crest in the history of the Missouri had met its match in the levees built by 15,000 workers to keep the river within its banks as it funneled through.

The river level fluctuated for several hours yesterday between 39.15 and 39.24 feet, then grudgingly slipped down.

The army engineers, technically in charge of the levee work, warned that the lowering river level would have a "blowing-off" action on the levee, possibly tearing away huge chunks off the face of the dike.

Downstream at the town of Hamburg, Ia., Mayor Louis Jensen ordered half the 2,300 residents to flee. The town was half under water after the Plum Creek levee broke early yesterday, sending water across a 75,000-acre section of farm land.

"We had a regular army of equipment and workers," Jensen said, "but the equipment got here too late."

Huge New Jet Bomber Is Pronounced Success

Nation's Most Spectacular New Global Bomber 'Rides Like A Cadillac,' Says Pilot; Many See Odd-Shaped Craft

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UP)—The nation's most spectacular new aircraft—the ultra-secret all-jet YB-60 global bomber—was pronounced a success today after a maiden flight which only "modestly" tested its capabilities.

"It rides like a Cadillac," said one of its pilots.

Only top Air Force and Consolidated Vultee Aircraft officials were allowed to observe the YB-60 streak off the runway and land again at Carswell Air Force Base after one hour and six minutes in the air.

But several thousands of spectators lined the far side of the runway, the roads outside the base and stood on rooftops for a from-a-far glimpse at a mighty big, queer-looking airplane whose details still are top security matter.

The needle-nosed, secretly-built craft is almost triangular in shape with swept-back wings, almost a big as a giant B-36. Its eight jet engines trail plumes of vapor and there's a shrill, whining overtone to the deep roar of the engines. But "the YB-60 rode like a B-36—no prop noise or vibration," said the test co-pilot, Arthur S. Wittchell Jr., when he, the pilot and six crewmembers stepped from the new air glimmer after the test flight yesterday.

"I came back with very little perspiration," said B. A. Erickson, Convair's veteran test pilot, who was at the controls.

"That's the answer to any pilot." He described the plane as "an extremely high altitude operation bomber with very high speed." He said it "touched at fighter speed" yesterday.

Report Drop For Wholesale Prices

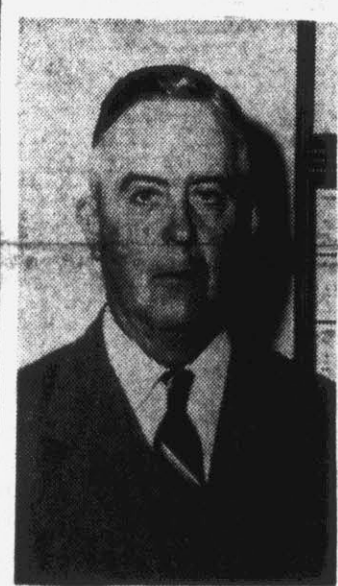

WASHINGTON (UP)—Average wholesale prices fell one-tenth of one per cent during the week ended last Tuesday.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said farm products led the decline. It said the wholesale index was 111.5 per cent of the 1947-49 average and 3 per cent under levels of January, 1951, when prices were frozen.

View Of Recreation Day Parade

Beautiful floats, marching bands and hundreds of other participants took part yesterday in the Greenville recreation parade to stimulate the current campaign for the development of Elm Street Park. Shown above is the float of the Junior Chamber of Commerce which carries a model of the recreation building the Jaycees plan to build at the park. A total of eight floats and both the Greenville High School band and the Junior Band participated in the parade. (Reflector Photo by Roy Hardee).

Hundreds Of Youngsters Parade In Support Of Recreation Plan

Greenville's kids showed Greenville what it wants yesterday.

The Recreation Day parade, composed mainly of high school and grammar grades students, marched down main street carrying banners and posters on their recreation needs.

A number of floats from civic clubs and other clubs in the city were fittingly decorated with tennis courts, picnic tables, a miniature active building, Little League and Pony League ball plays, and pretty girls.

The Greenville High School band and the Junior Band kept the marching pace for participants which also included the Boy and Girl Scouts and members of the Small Fry Ball League.

Recreation leaders in the city, Mayor Lester Page, and other city officials rode in convertibles in front of the parade.

A number of high school girls carrying sheets passed along each side of the street taking small change donations to aid in the development of Elm Street Park for which the goal is $20,000. The parade climaxed a two-weeks solicitation for funds for the Elm Street Park program. Members of the Greenville Lion's Club were responsible for the solicitation.

Clubs which entered floats in the parade were the American Legion, Lion's club, Jaycees, Kiwanis club, Elks club, Moose club, Exchange club, and Automobile Association.

The parade was under the chairmanship of Bill Watson; Sherman Parks served as chief marshal. He was assisted by Lester Turnage.

Chapter 16
Unsuspected by any of the participants in this little drama, there had been another witness to much of the acting. Back at the ranch house, Melody had been restless, unsure of herself uncertain of what she wanted to do. Usually she had an exactly charted course in mind and followed it without question or deviation.

But this was different. She had married Steve Russell, and already she was at cross-purposes with her husband. There was the nagging thought of disloyalty in the course she had contemplated and more than half-way entered upon. Disloyal, because he was her husband and she loved him, and she was working with the Tarsons, who had been hostile to the Russells through all the history of the Bend.

Hesitating, her decision had been to ride out and have a look at the round - up, which report said was now gradually working back toward the ranch. It should be an interesting spectacle. And it would give her a chance to see Steve again, before she did anything else.

That decision had taken a weight off her mind. She had enjoyed the ride, and had finally been lucky enough to sight Steve himself, in the distance. Riding closer, she had been in a position to see most of what happened. Now, separated from the little group by another ring of trees and brush, she could both see and hear. She waited, watching with a growing fascination which amounted to horror. She was loath to break in upon what was transpiring, yet more reluctant to go away while Steve was involved in such a business.

The three were unburied, almost studiously deliberate as they closed around the horse rider. Terror which he could not disguise looked out of Hecitor's eyes, showed in the slackness of his jaw. McKee reached across and helped himself to Hecitor's holstered gun, and the cowboy made no protest. A second time he opened his mouth to try and explain, and reading the look on the faces of the others, seeing the cow and calf still standing there, closed it again with the words: "He caught the cow, right at the edge of that cliff," the man from Cross Buck volunteered, and pointed to the spot. "Hit her with his horse, an' knocked her off. But the water's pretty deep down there."

Hecitor's Adam's apple jerked in his scrawny neck. So that had been seen, too. He knew that it sealed his fate.

"How much extra do the Tarsons pay you for this sort of thing, Hecitor?" Steve asked. Receiving no reply, he added, "If that was some of your work to begin with, it was plumb careless." "I didn't do it," Hecitor burst out suddenly. "And mistakes'll happen—calves gettin' lost an' runnin' with the wrong cows—run you know that—"

"Yeah, such mistakes will happen," Steve agreed softly. "It's when you try to cover 'em up that they look bad." Hecitor subsided again, unhappily. The mistake of a misbranded calf might have been explained, after a fashion. His act could not be.

Burt McKee dismounted. He took a tentative step or so as if to get the saddle links out of his legs, then cast an eye at the big pine tree and began untying his own lariar from the saddle.

"That big limb that kind of juts out, ought to do fine," he suggested. "Yeah," Steve agreed. "We'll leave him mounted, an' ride his horse out from under him. Better tie his hands behind his back, though."

The man from Cross Buck moved to do that. He had made no comment, but he seemed in full sympathy with the course being followed. Cross Buck and Diamond R. usually worked together.

Melody watched horrified but fascinated. This was the sort of thing that she had heard about, but had never quite believed—the stern code of the West, in which men took the law into their own hands, acting as accusers, judge, jury and executioner, all in one. She had been given an exhibition of brutality and relentlessness at the Corners school, but this was worse. Steve, at least, had had an opportunity to fight back then. Now they were going to hang a man without giving him a chance.

"A noose can be almighty tight—and final," Steve commented, and watched while McKee moved one end of his rope, saw it sail over the jutting limb and come curling down again.

"Go to hell," he said hoarsely. "You'll get nothin' out o' me." Steve hesitated, his face blank. It had been no part of his intention in the first place to actually lynch Hecitor, and the others had understood that. But there would be decided, he no harm in playing this to the limit. Hecitor, had almost cracked. He might be bluffing now. There was nothing to lose in one more try, and possibly much to gain.

"Too bad you feel that way, Hecitor," he said. "We've got enough now to put a stop to this rustling and clean this country up—and we're going to do it! Since he wants to wear a necktie, Burt, fit it in place."

McKee did so, moving Hecitor's horse up closer, adjusting the noose around his throat and the knot under the point of the chin. Hecitor's face grayed, his eyes rolled. But before the results of this final play could be tested, all four men were startled by a crashing in the brush, and Melody sent her horse plunging through, crying out as she came.

"Stop it! Stop it, I say! Murderers! I won't let you kill him this way!"

Vivid Coloring Adds To Beauty Of April

By MARTHA S. FORBES

Spring is the time of the year when the fancy of young people is supposed to turn to thoughts of love and other things.

The other things for everybody are the beauties of Mother Nature as she stirs and awakens from her slumber of winter. She begins to arouse in January and February when she moves slowly under her cover of Japonicas and camellias. She yawns and stretches with a luxurious burst of jonquills and daffodils and suddenly jumps out of bed with a burst of buds on shrub and tree.

She calls with the vernal equinox to her earth children to awaken also and breathes deeply of the winds of March. She bathes her face with the soft showers of April and then dons her gown of azaleas and ties back her hair with a ribbon of candytuft. She rubs the red of the tulip across her lips and pats powder of spirea on her cheeks. Garbed in her regal raiments, she saunters forth to greet each cool morning with a sunny smile, carrying in her hands the gay pansies and shy violets.

What heart is not stirred and what mind is not filled with the rapturous beauty of Mother Nature when she parades the world in her wraps of velvety green and her clothes of soft pastels? Her sudden entrance upon the brown stage of winter causes gasps of delight and pure ecstatic joy at so lovely a sight.

Here in Greenville she has been walking now for several weeks, trailing her wisteria and redbud offspring behind her. The tulips proudly flaunt their blooms of many hues and the dogwood spreads a canopy of white over their heads. Borders of candytuft and thrift form a carpet for her feet, and the milky white spirea bows in adoration as she passes.

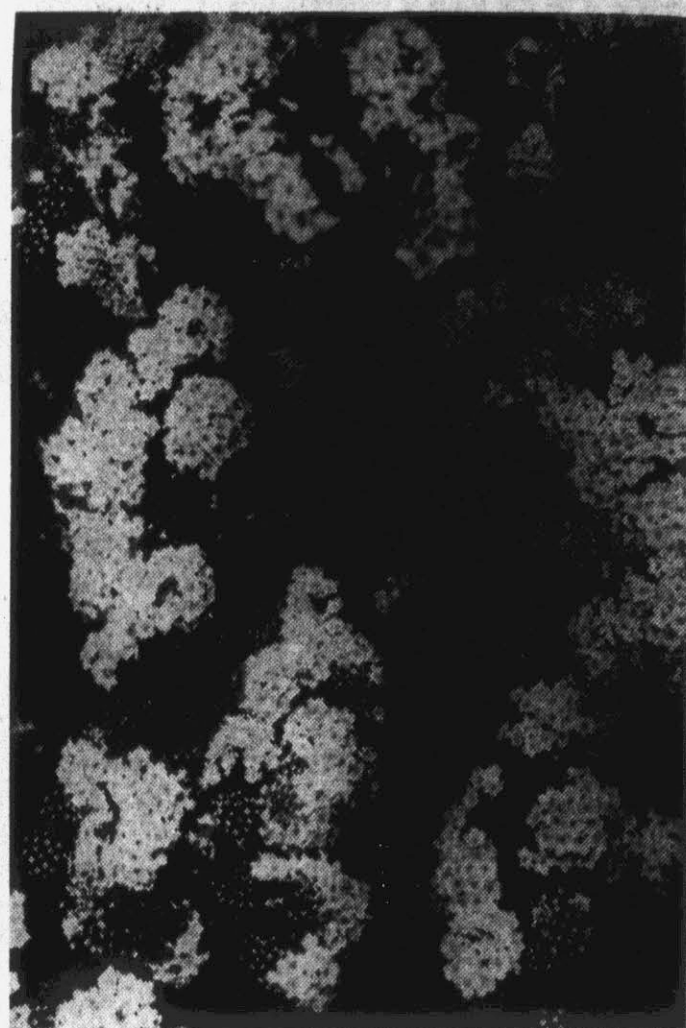

Amateur gardeners and flower-lovers everywhere spend as much time as possible in her company. Some people work with her in creating bowers of loveliness; others are content to be only spectators of the most beautiful drama of all creation—the coming of spring!

Richard Hovey has expressed the joyous abandon of the season in the following lines of lyric poetry:

I said in my heart, 'I am sick of four walls and a ceiling.
I have heeded of the sky.
I have business with the grass.
The dogwood calls me, and the sudden thrill
That breaks in apple blooms
Down country roads
Plucks me by the sleeve and nudges me away.
The sap is in the boles today.
And in my veins a pulse that yearns and goads.'
Spring in the world!
And all things made new.
When the greenlet sings on the redbud bough,
Where the blossoms are whisper-pure ecstatic joy at so lovely a sight.
And the world is just made now

Earth has not anything to show more fair;
Dull would be he of soul who could pass by
A sight so touching in its majesty.
—William Wordsworth

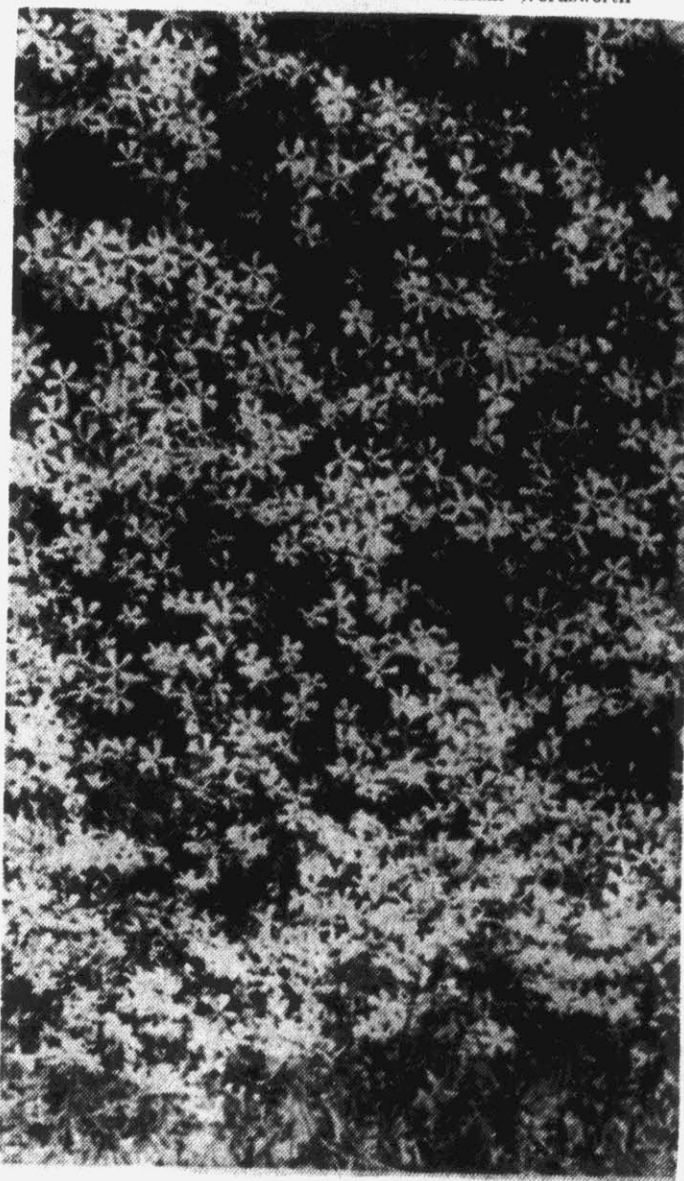

For lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of the birds is come. (From Songs of Solomon).

No matter how barren the past may have been
Tis enough for us now that the leaves are green.
We sit in the warm shade and feel right well
How the sap creeps up and the blossoms swell . . .
—James Russell Lowell

To him who in the love of nature holds
Communion with her visible forms, she speaks
A various language . . .
—William Cullen Bryant

Whether we look or whether we listen,
We hear life murmur or see it glisten;
Every clod feels a stir of might,
An instinct within it that reaches and towers,
And, groping blindly above it for light,
Climbs to a soul in grass and flowers.
—James Russell Lowell.

The budding twigs spread out their fan
To catch the breezy air;
And I must think, do all I can,
That there was pleasure there.
—William Wordsworth

Mrs. Smiley Hostess To Members To Aries Club

Mrs. W. W. Smiley club sponsor, was hostess to members of the Aries Book Club when it met on Thursday night.

Mrs. Astor Richardson, president, presided over the business, at which time suggestions were made for the program next year. Mrs. A. W. Bryan, librarian, announced that two of the books have been misplaced and she asked all members to look carefully at home for them. Mrs. Harry Forbes brought an item of local interest for the current event, after which the president introduced the speaker for the night.

She was Mrs. William Shelton, the former Lillian Abbe of this city. Mrs. Shelton's husband is a squadron leader in Korea, and during his years of service with the Air Force, he and his wife have resided in many different places in the world. Mrs. Shelton outlined a tour of 10 European countries which she had visited while her husband was stationed with the occupation forces in Germany in 1947.

The countries which she had visited were Switzerland, Italy, France, Luxembourg, Denmark, Sweden, Germany, Monaco, Austria and Czechoslovakia. She described many of the outstanding cathedrals, museums, castles and other famous spots which she toured. Especially interesting to her listeners was her account of travel over the Swiss railroads. She gave a detailed account of her trip to the Vatican, and so vivid were her descriptions that each member felt as though she herself had seen the magnificent structure.

Mrs. Shelton in her discussion also told of the life of the people, especially in Germany, which she was privileged to observe while there. At the conclusion of her talk, she answered questions raised by members of the club.

The hostess served a dessert plate with coffee at the end of the meeting, after which the books were exchanged and the club adjourned.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

ARE THEY WORTH WHILE?

The words "bigger" and "better" characterize our age. We throw out our chests considerably when we as a nation, a community or an industry produce something bigger than anybody has produced before, and—according to our estimation—better.

The philosopher William James, Harvard seer of fifty years ago, has written this about bigness and greatness: "As for me, my bed is made. I am against bigness and greatness in all their forms. . . . The bigger the unit you deal with, the hollower, the more brutal, the more mendacious is the life displayed. So I am against all big organizations as such . . . and in favor of the eternal forces of truth which always work in the individual and immediately unsuccessful way—underdogs always, until history comes, after they are long dead, and puts them on top."

A good way to measure the quantity and quality of your Christian faith is to ask yourself whether or not you believe what William James has said. Or do you still put your faith in bigness? The attitude of William James reflects basic principles of the Christian gospel.

Jesus, and his little band of disciples—starting out to change the world, and changing it—constitute the classical refutation of the value of bigness.

How Much Power, Mr. President?

Consider for a minute President Truman's statement that he might have the constitutional power to seize the nation's free press and radio in case of an emergency.

It sounds like a typical statement by a Pendergast politician, schooled in the powers of machine bosses, nourished out of the taxpayers' pocketbooks, and instilled with the idea that political demigods can make their words law—statutes and constitutions notwithstanding.

Truman did not flatly say he has the power to seize the nation's free press, but he certainly left the implication that such is his belief.

From the way he has encouraged keeping obscure from the people activities within federal agencies, it has appeared that he would like to have the power to control the nation's press, and with it the minds and thoughts of the people of the United States.

During his stay in office, Truman has so twisted and distorted the meaning of the constitution to his own advantage that it is difficult to tell just how far he would go to further his own desires if he thought he could get by with it.

On the President's orders, his administrative heads have defied the rulings of the Supreme Court which interprets the supreme law of the land. He has taken drastic steps of authority without first endeavoring to know for sure whether or not such power is his as president under the constitution. He has read new thoughts into the accepted meaning of the document.

If the government of the U. S. ever gains control of the nation's free press—and may God rue the day—totalitarianism will reign supreme in the land. Citizens will have been stripped of their freedom and a dictatorship more ruthless than those yet viewed with awe by the people of the world will have been established.

The news organs in the United States occupy a unique position being privately-owned businesses, and at the same time morally obligated to impartially perform as a public service. The press occupies the nether-land between private interests and the public interest. It can not let either private business or government dictate its policies or its views. When it does it ceases to fulfill its purpose.

Should the time come when Truman or any other president seeks to control the free press by virtue of supposed constitutional power, it indeed will be an emergency. It will be an emergency in which the American people will need their free press and free radio more than ever before.

Aside from Truman's distorted view of constitutional powers of the Chief Executive, his statement points up emphatically at least one other thing.

There is a definite and immediate need for a clarification of powers granted under the federal constitution. With a progressively centralized state which has come about in this nation, it is time we go back and read the letter of the law laid down by the constitution before government and individual usurpation of these letters completely destroy the true meaning of the document.

America's Growing Savings Account

Are the American people becoming more frugal, or do the American people have more money than ever before?

Perhaps there is not a clear-cut answer to that question. So far as dollars are concerned, the last part can be answered in the affirmative. There are more dollars going into the average home, but by the same token, there are more dollars being paid out to meet today's living costs.

Americans never have gained the reputation of being thrifty people. They work hard and have a great incentive for gaining wealth under the system of free enterprise, yet they are great spenders at the same time.

Last year the savings of the American families amounted to 13 billion dollars. That is an average of $325 per family, and it is a sharp increase over the savings of the American people in 1950 when only one and one-half billion dollars were saved away in individual accounts.

Certainly the consumer market has not been sufficiently stripped of goods to make wanted items difficult to get at any price as was the case during the war years. We doubt that an appreciable part of the savings represents wage increases over the increased living costs during the past year. It could be, however, that the people are stiffening their buying resistance in the hope that a break in the high cost of living may soon show its head.

Whatever the reason behind the markedly increased personal savings during 1952, the fact that more money has been put aside for a rainy day is indeed a good one. Particularly this is encouraging in view of the fact that the American family as a whole has extended its credit farther than at any other time in history.

National Whirligig

Every Saturday this veteran Washington newspaper correspondent devotes his column to answering readers' questions of general interest on national and international policies and personalities. Questions may be sent direct to Ray Tucker at 6208 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON—"Can you tell me," asks Mrs. L. K. of Colorado Springs, Col., "why the Republican presidential candidates and their campaign managers seem to spend more time smearing each other instead of denouncing their natural enemies, the Democrats? How do they expect to have a unified party after the nominations at Chicago?"

CLEAVAGE—Answer: The various GOP candidates and factions are tearing each other apart because 1952 appears to be their most favorable year since Franklin D. Roosevelt drove them into exile. Moreover it is probably the last time that the two principal rivals—Taft and Eisenhower—will be given any consideration for the great honor. If one of the other doesn't make it this year, he is through.

PERSONALITIES AND individual ambitions aside, there is a real cleavage among the "outs" over foreign policy, between the Taft nationalists and the Eisenhower "internationalists," as the Ohio senator characterizes them. This division on this question is fully as serious as the Democrats' differences over civil rights and the so-called "Truman trend to socialism."

FUNDAMENTAL—Senator Taft and his crowd believe that 1952 represents the last chance to check or terminate the "me tooism" which marked the Willie and Dewey campaigns in 1940-1944 and 1948. On the other hand, the factions rallying around " Ike" fear that the GOP must make concessions to liberals, independents and new conditions. This dispute is as fundamental as that over foreign policy.

Should the presidential contest be another close race, as it was in 1948, it is quite possible that the pre-convention bickerings could again snatch defeat from victory for the Republicans. No matter who wins the nomination, there may be fatal scars and sulking among the losers.

INELIGIBLE—But there is another unfortunate aspect to this intra-party squabbling. If the GOP expects the White House, it may deprive that party of some of its ablest figures for the next administration.

I doubt, for instance, if "President" Taft would select as Cabinet members, commission members and diplomats such antagonistic individuals as Governors Dewey of New York, Warren of California, Driscoll of New Jersey, or such Capitol Hill opponents as Senators Lodge of Massachusetts or Duff of Pennsylvania. And many distinguished men supporting the senator would be ineligible for an "Eisenhower Cabinet."

ASSISTANCE—"President Truman has promised to work hard for the party and its 1952 nomination," writes F. G. of San Antonio, Tex. "But do you think that the Democratic presidential selection will welcome any assistance from the man in the White House?"

Answer: Frankly, I doubt if any of the men mentioned as possibilities, with the possible exceptions of Governor Stevenson of Illinois and Senator Humphrey of Minnesota, would want Truman to take an active role in the campaign. Humphrey, of course, has no chance for first place or for his real ambition, the vice-presidential nomination.

HARMFUL—It would be embarrassing for the candidate and the party if Truman were kept under wraps, but it might be more harmful if he conducted another whistle-stop tour.

As the 1948 statistics show, he did not run well in the large cities. He squeaked through in many states where Congressional and gubernatorial candidates rolled up tremendous majorities. And he would be "poison" in the south or border states.

The politicians I talk with say that all they ask from Truman is an attitude of "inactive benevolence," and not too much of that. As I recently wrote, he has soft-pedaled his preference for Stevenson for fear it may hurt the Illinois governor's convention prospects.

SECURITY—I have been buying the Treasury's so-called "baby bonds," complains F. T. of Wilson, N.C., as well as many other readers. In the belief that they were good security for a poor man. Now, I hear that the small profit from them when they mature in ten years is subject to tax. Is that true?

Answer: It is. The increment on a $25 bond, for instance, is $25 at maturity, and the $25 is taxable. This, together with inflation of prices and curtailment of the matured securities' purchasing power, is partially responsible for greater redemptions than sales of these bonds.

Designed For Big Game

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Martha Ross is still a friend of mine, in spite of what she did to me last night. Martha originally from Boone is the wife of Bob Ross originally from New Jersey, who works at Refrigeration Discount Corporation. It was a job that brought Bob to Greenville after graduating in Commerce from the University of North Carolina.

While living at Chapel Hill Martha picked up a bridge hand, which is the subject of what she did to me last night. There were no particular problems confronting me when Martha asked me if I could play the hand. Like all bridge players (I no longer claim that title) I had to prove that I could make seven hearts with ease from this hand, and I was almost insulted when Martha told me that I could expose all four hands in arriving at the solution. After working on the hand for almost an hour I called her to see if I had the cards in the right place. Unfortunately I did, and as yet I have not figured out how seven hearts can be made.

Martha did console me to a degree by naming a few others who have tried it without success: Katherine Warren, Bill Davenport, Joyce Galloway, Miriam Martin, Susanne Braswell, Helen Parkinson, Katie, Bill, Louise and Alice Hudson.

The hand is being played by North, who holds:
Spades: Ace, King, two Hearts: Ace, King, Queen, Jack
Diamonds: Queen, Jack, ten, nine, eight, seven Clubs: Void
East holds:
Spades: King, Jack, ten, nine, eight, seven

Hearts: five, four, three, two
Diamonds: Void
Clubs: King, Queen, Jack
South holds:
Spades: Void
Hearts: Ten, nine, eight, seven, six
Diamonds: Ace, King
Clubs: Ace, ten, nine, eight, seven, six

West holds:
Spades: Three, four, five, six
Hearts: Void
Diamonds: Two, three, four, five, six
Clubs: Two, three, four, five

The lead is the King of Clubs, and no finesse is necessary. The bid can be made. As yet I do not have the solution, but if you are a bridge player you can figure it out for yourself. If not, Martha's phone number is 5238 and mine is 4882.

And I thank you.

MOVIE — The balance of approximately $15,000 in the treasury of the inactive Better Schools and Roads, Inc., may not be used to make a moving picture. It has developed that the press releases several weeks ago about appointment of a committee headed by Lieutenant Governor H. P. Taylor to supervise a moving picture portraying progress and remaining needs in school and road development did not tell the whole story. This special committee must report back to the full executive committee, constituting the board of directors, of the disbanded corporation. Chances are that the directors will not approve such use of the balance left over from the fund contributed to promote the $200 million secondary road and $25 million school building bond issues in 1949.

DISSOLUTION — The purpose for which the corporation was formed having been achieved, dissolution is in order. The corporation cannot quit without making some disposition of the treasury balance. In a mail vote sometime ago a majority of the directors authorized the moving picture, but several of the larger contributors to the fund protested and sought either relief of the balance or donating it to the engineering school at State College. Governor Scott insisted upon the movie, while Allen Langston, treasurer, has insisted that the contributors should be given some consideration. There are some legal technicalities. In a going concern the directors have complete control, but when a corporation is in process of liquidation there are other factors to be taken into account. The stockholders in this case, the contributors to the fund, then have more authority.

FRICTION — There is political friction and clashing behind the scenes in this situation. There is feeling on part of some contributors that Governor Scott wants to play politics with the proposed movie—and they want none of that. Date for the full meeting of the executive committee has not been fixed. Here again politics enters. Advocates of the movie want to get started as soon as possible, while those who favor other use for the balance want to delay matters so that the about electric power at the Capitol can be made at all cannot be made during the Scott administration. In fact, it is probable that the courts may be asked to enjoy the defunct corporation from spending the money on a moving picture at any time.

POLITICAL — Many people have thought for a long time that some of the advocates of publicly-managed generating plants were more concerned about political power in Washington than about electric power in North Carolina. Similar situation prevails in connection with the recently approved hike in rates allowed to be charged by Duke Power Company. There is evidence that some people are less concerned about the economic involved than about the political use which can be made of the Utilities commission order. Statements that the higher rates would add about two million dollars to the total bills of Duke customers, fail to point out that approximately half that amount will go for taxes—mainly federal, but substantial state and local levies. It is more politically advantageous to create the impression that all the money collected will go to swell profits of a big corporation.

JOBS — Half or more than half the total collected will go for taxes and a substantial part of the other half will go to provide jobs for people who want to work. A recent publication sponsored by a government-supported agency notes that it requires an average of $10,000 in invested capital to provide each man or woman in America with a job. "The average savings of an American is $1,120—counting his back savings, Government bonds, etc. Thus, in effect, it takes the life savings of nine Americans to furnish the tools of one industrial job. One million young men and women enter the nation's work force each year. At $10,800 each, that's more than $10 billion needed for industrial expansion each year. It must come from profits and stock sales." If not one cent of the extra $2 million permitted to be charged was used for any other purpose it would enable Duke to pay a million in taxes and provide jobs for 100 persons in North Carolina.

TENURE — The charges made by Hubert Oliver, candidate for Governor, that the Utilities Commission was influenced by political considerations in granting the increased rates, has aroused interest in the tenure of the five commissioners. Chairman Stanley Winborne has more than 20 years service, and has been elected and appointed more times than any other State official. He was appointed for an unexpired term on the old Corporation Commission in February, 1930; elected for the remainder of that term in November, 1930; re-elected for a regular term in 1932. The General Assembly of 1933 changed the name to Utilities Commission, and on January 1, 1934, Winborne was appointed chairman until the November election.

Frankie Carle had a pretty good idea for controlling that situation. He had his own daughter do the singing in his band. A series of one-night stands with long jumps in between, is tough on the men, let alone a lady singer, says Martin. She also has to have special hotel accommodations. And as you'd expect, a girl has about three times as much luggage as male tooters what with prettifying paraphernalia and a bunch of evening gowns to be lugged around. The more talent and the more beauty that goes with the vocalist, the harder it is to keep her in the organization. The mortality rate via matrimony is high. Either that or they leave to solo on their own.

But generally, girl singers do not last too long, says Freddy. "Men are the big money-makers. Girls like Doris Day, Ginny Sims, Dorothy Lamour, Kay Starr, Peggy Lee and Lena Horne—all of whom got started with a band—are unusual exceptions."

But to get back to the psychology of the thing, Martin claims it is really the little woman who calls the tune, and she has had much rather not give hubby the chance to ogle a curvy velvet-throated thrush. How can she have a good time with all that competition?

WASHINGTON — Prospective First Ladies, home-makers at heart like Bess Truman, who like to whip up family favorites for dinner occasionally, will glow over a small private kitchen stashed away for that purpose on the third floor of the renovated White House.

"It's a U-shaped, domestic-type kitchen, an individual housekeeper would be proud to preside over," I was told by W. B. Stephens, vice-president of the firm (Kitchens, Inc.) which put in all the new kitchens.

This kitchen, directly above the private family suite in the north wing, boasts an electric range, refrigerator, dishwasher and garbage disposal unit, all white walls and stainless steel sink and counter tops.

The original main kitchen, on the ground floor, boasted two fire places. One of these was at one time used for cooking, but both are now blocked up. The room is now a TV and radio room.

The main kitchen layout is now in the northwest portion of the building on the ground floor. It is 22 x 28, light and sunny, with antiseptic, hospital-white sparkling walls and stainless steel surfaces. Electric ranges take up 18 feet of the south wall, along with an immense, electrically-operated soup kettle that also serves as a coffee-maker. Some of the ranges are old, but rebuilt and cleaned up.

On the east wall are double-bowled sinks and cabinets. There are more sinks on the north wall and a huge, heavy-duty garbage-grinding unit. Cabinets and shelves take up the rest of the wall space, and in the center are steam tables and warmers and a table fitted with electric mixing gadgets.

These are not only used for mixing things, but for slicing and grinding meats," Mr. Stephens said. They sit on the floor, are 4½ feet high, with a bowl about 18 inches across.

On the floor above, the first floor of the White House, are the State and private dining rooms. Between them is a pantry that boasts a plate-warming unit, a dishwasher, a garbage disposer and coffee-maker. Here the silver and glassware is kept. The servants have their own pantry and dining room.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

Efforts to sell home freezers by tying in food are growing and spreading. Almost every day news comes from another city that some dealer or group of dealers has embarked on some new tie-in deal, or dressed up an old one with new gimmicks. Most of the new plans involve arrangements between food wholesalers and freezer dealers by which purchasers of freezers are allowed to buy beef in quarters and other foods at something less than retail prices. The savings, it is usually represented, more than pay for the freezer over a length of time. A Philadelphia dealer says that lifetime savings for an average family would be $4,000—more if the family lives long enough.

Because the relationship between food and freezers is so obvious, tie-ins have been used since early in freezer marketing. Whenever sales slowed down, dealers would prime them by putting packages of quick-frozen vegetables or meats inside. Just when the idea of giving customers a "continuing" source of food at lower prices must be left for future historians. Such sales plans appeared almost two years ago in the East. In recent months they started popping up with new vigor in Los Angeles and quickly spread.

Some of the first western promoters did much to spoil the promotion by advertising that the food was at wholesale whereas it was priced some place between retail and wholesale, by comparing the price of sirloin steaks fairly to the price of carcass beef, by exaggerating the savings or by making other unsubstantiated claims. However, food retailers were quick to blow the whistle on these exaggerations both because the over-statements cost them customers and made them appear to be profiteers.

Even today city officials and Better Business Bureaus are kept busy policing claims. One freezer manufacturer, International Harvester, while neither endorsing nor condemning food tie-in plans, has warned dealers to explore them very carefully before embarking upon them, thereby putting itself in a position to cancel franchises if dealers become involved in unsavory plans.

A California dealer used food in a different way: buy a freezer and get $200 worth of food for $100 more. His competitors say this is merely a hidden $100 price cut. It's not quite that bad. The dealer ought to be able to buy $200 worth of food for $150, so he is taking only $50 less per freezer.

Another manufacturer, Admiral, is using beef to promote sales of its refrigerators. It offers 10 pounds of sirloin steaks free to families who will try a new model for ten days. The promotion involves 100,000 pounds of choice cuts.

Hal Boyle's Column

By CHARLES E. LYONS
(For HAL BOYLE)

NEW YORK — (AP) — When a guy takes his little woman stepping to the music of a big-name band, she may look for the "name" but he's a sure bet to get round-eyed over the girl vocalist.

This entirely natural phenomena is reason enough for a great percentage of the music boys to see to it that a beautiful blonde little thing sits at the end of the front row of bandmen.

Her main function seems to be toe-tapping the beat, bobbing the head in a somewhat rhythmic pattern and throwing a smile at the boys occasionally. And a couple of times during the evening the bandstand beauty gets up and demonstrates a certain talent for vocalizing to boot.

But Freddy Martin at the Hotel Roosevelt is one balon maestro who has reached the top without feeding the audience the formula. From his bandstand Martin pedals sweet music with artistic arrangements. In front of the band is Freddy and his sax—but no sex. He's never had a regular female vocalist in 20 years of band leading.

"Too many headaches," is the way Freddy explains it. "When I was first starting, my friends in the business advised me to steer clear of girl singers and so far I've been doing all right."

But he knows some of the troubles that make other band leaders reach for the aspirin. "Sometimes when a band is playing a night club, a customer will wobble and try to date the vocalist," he said. "This can get complicated, especially if the vocalist goes with someone in the band."

Bill Hitz, one of Martin's sax men, vouches that intra-band romance can often spoil the close harmony. He cites the case of one luscious warbler—everytime she smiled at one of the dancing customers she would have three or four bandmen frowning at the same time.

Frankie Carle had a pretty good idea for controlling that situation. He had his own daughter do the singing in his band.

A series of one-night stands with long jumps in between, is tough on the men, let alone a lady singer, says Martin. She also has to have special hotel accommodations. And as you'd expect, a girl has about three times as much luggage as male tooters what with prettifying paraphernalia and a bunch of evening gowns to be lugged around. What Other Papers Are Thinking

STEEL AND SOCIALISM
(Wilson Times)

Let's study the Washington picture slowly!

The steel workers, led by Phil Murray, despite wage freezes, asked for 18 1/2 cents an hour. The steel industry refused to give it unless it received a compensating increase in the price of steel. To avoid a strike, the President referred the case to the Wage Stabilization board which, after hearings, recommended an increase of 17 1/2 cent an hour.

In other words, the President by-passed collective bargaining. The steel workers would never have been given anything like the 17 1/2 cents an hour had the government intervened. The industry, however, rejected the recommendation that the higher steel workers one alternative, to strike. To prevent it, the President seized the mills. Will the government, as the technical owner, grant the wage increase the Stabilization board recommended?

It'll be precedent-making if it does. For cannot any labor group, simply by threatening to tie up an important defense industry, get increases as easily? It will expect the government to step in, giving the very Socialism that so many of late have been fearful of. For the government does not own the steel mills. It has merely seized them in the name of the government. If while the seizure continues, the government increases the pay of the men, it's wages not its money, but the industry's money.

In short, then the people who own the steel mills don't own them. That is, they'll have little to say about how they're to be run. It's highly questionable whether the President enjoys such an emergency power. It is a question that affects not the steel owners alone; it can be made to affect all owners and eventually the workers themselves. For it only one thing can be said: we go on making steel. But what have we done to the theory of private enterprise? - hat have we done to collective bargaining?

Mardi Gras Theme Of Ball At Junior-Senior Banquet

WINTERVILLE—On April 11 the juniors of Winterville High School entertained the seniors at a Mardi Gras banquet held in the school lunchroom.

The banquet began at 7 o'clock after everyone had been served pineapple juice in the hall by Margie Stocks and Faye Branch. Archie Nobles, the junior class president, returned thanks and then welcomed all the guests, juniors, seniors and faculty.

Elaine Worthington, junior class vice-president, gave the "Toast to Seniors," to which Denyse McLaw-horn responded.

"Toast to Juniors" was given by Leroy Faulkner. The response was given by Betty Jean Harrington.

Bobby Cole, junior class treasurer, gave "Toast to Faculty and School Board." The response was given by the principal, Paul J. Clark.

The menu was: pineapple juice, baked chicken with dressing, green lima, pickles, cranberry sauce, rolls, tomato and lettuce salad, iced tea, ice cream and block cake. Everyone enjoyed the delicious meal prepared by the homeroom teacher, Miss Taylor, and some of her pupils.

A dance, "Goofus," was presented by Maggie Castello, who was dressed in old, ragged dungarees. It was a feature of the evening.

Archie Nobles presented a guest, El Bloom of Greenville, who was a very delightful and entertaining speaker. His special feature of entertainment was the "Story of a Jewish Wedding," a humorous, enjoyable reading.

The luncheon was beautifully decorated, having the seniors' names in the background, which were cut out of gaily colored paper with their teacher's name, Mrs. Mallison, in the center. The lighting effect was very interesting for the occasion. The globes were covered in red, green, orange and blue crepe paper. Strips of gaily colored paper hung from the light globes to the center of the room.

The tables were colorfully and appropriately decorated with strips of colored paper down the center with white table cloths. Nests of Easter eggs were the centerpieces and on the speaker's table a large Easter basket was the center of attraction. The waitresses were dressed like clowns. These ten girls were from the tenth grade. Their costumes were white with big red dots and a tall hat. They were: Joan Averette, Arlene Cayton, Rachel Speight, Jo Anne McLawhorn, Louise Lane, Patsy Relyen, Jo Faye Beddard, Anna Pearl Langley, Betsy Mills, Nancy Jackson.

The bulletin board in the hall was decorated with balloons cut out of gaily colored paper with "Junior-Senior 1951-52" on them.

The gymnasium was decorated attractively and really brought out the colorful and festive idea of the Mardi Gras. The center of attraction was a float gaily decorated with purple and orchid crepe paper, a funny clown's face, W.H.S. and the year "1952" constructed from silver tinfoil. One of the main high spots was a huge clown encircled by paper balloons and the banquet theme "Mardi Gras" in silver letters pinned to the stage curtain.

At the opposite end of the gymnasium was a multicolored curtain made from crepe paper. Colorful streamers were attached from an overhead wire and pinned to the floor. The streamers were twisted and gave a woven effect. In the center of the curtain the streamers were gathered together and made a doorway into that part of the gymnasium where punch was served by the clown waitresses. For the overhead decoration, balloons, banners and streamers were attached to wires. A big cluster of balloons was hung over the float. At a certain time during the dance they were cut and floated into in to the crowd. Everyone enjoyed bursting the balloons and throwing confetti.

The windows and doors were also gaily decorated. They were covered with blue paper. Twisted streamers of different colors were attached to the tops and bottoms. A spotlight cast different colors about the room making a more vivid picture.

The dancing which followed the banquet was largely attended and enthusiastically received.

East Carolina College

Robert Lee (Jack) Boone is new head football coach at East Carolina College and Clyde Biggers has been named assistant football coach and assigned to line coaching duties, said an announcement issued by President J. D. Messick and Athletics Director N. M. Jorgensen today.

Boone has been assistant football coach at East Carolina for the past three years with Coach Bill Dole and moves now to the top position in the gridiron program of the East Carolina Pirates. Dr. Jorgensen said. The new football mentor came to East Carolina in 1948 as backfield coach under James Johnson who learned the "split T" under Dan Faurot and then head football coach of the Pirate squad. Boone has been head baseball coach since coming to East Carolina.

As new line coach, Biggers comes to East Carolina College from a successful coaching career at Fayetteville high school. He went to Fayetteville from a year of professional football with the Green Bay Packers in the National Pro League, and after a year as line coach was advanced to the position of head coach and director of athletics in the Fayetteville school.

Boone's Record
Boone was graduated from the Woodrow Wilson high school of Portsmouth, Va., where he played both baseball and football and was captain of both sports. He was selected captain of the Virginia all-state high school team of 1937. For four years at Elon College, where he played under Coach Horace Hendrickson, Boone was recognized for his outstanding gridiron feats and for three years made the North State "all-conference" team and named captain of the conference "all-state" in 1941. The same year he was named on several "Little All-American" teams.

In 1942 he was graduated from Elon and was included in "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities." Drafted by the Cleveland Rams, a professional football team, in 1942, Boone played halfback and quarterback under Earl "Dutch" Clark, former member of the Detroit "Lions" and Chilli Walsh of Notre Dame. He remained on the Cleveland roster until called into service with the United States Navy and reported to Notre Dame where he received his naval commission. For four years he was in the Navy. In 1944 he was backfield coach and played halfback and quarterback with the Fort Pierce "Amphibs" coached by Hampton Pool of Chicago "Bears" fame. During that season the "Amphibs" fared as one of the best service football squads, winning 10 games and sustaining no defeats.

After leaving the service, Boone was expected to report to the Los Angeles "Rams" (formerly of Cleveland), but accepted another offer to coach and play with the Portsmouth Pirates in the Dixie League in his home town in Virginia. Here he was backfield coach and assistant to Coach Keith Ransport now of the Boston Yankees.

Boone holds a Master's degree in physical education from the University of North Carolina. He was married in 1943 to Miss Joyce Black of Burlington, who was chosen Miss North Carolina of 1939 and was runner-up in the national finals of the Miss America competition in Atlantic City. Mr. and Mrs. Boone have two sons, Jackie, 5 and Bobby, 10 months.

Biggers a Tar Heel Product
Biggers hails from Salisbury and was graduated from Catawba College in 1947. He had four years of varsity football, excelling in defensive play as left tackle. He ranked in top positions in scholastic work for two years made "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities", worked as a student assistant instructor in athletics and English departments, headed the student government association, was president of the Catawba lettermen's club, and was chosen the most outstanding senior upon graduation. Like Boone, he holds his master's degree in Physical Education from the University of North Carolina where he assisted in Spring football practice and was a graduate assistant in the physical education department. He was elected to membership in Phi Delta Phi, an honorary educational fraternity.

During his play with the Green Bay Packers he was used entirely in defensive play. His coaching record at Fayetteville is impressive. Biggers was the youngest AAA conference coach in North Carolina and in 1950 had six wins, three losses and one tie. In 1951, his team piled up heavy scores in all games to win eight games, lose one game by one point and tie one game. Under his coaching, Biggers produced one all-state tackle in 1950 and two all-stars in 1951. In 1950 and again in 1951, Biggers coached four all-eastern conference players.

Choice of Boone for the head coaching spot for football was urged by several student organizations. Since Coach Dole accepted the Davidson college coaching job, President Messick and Athletics Director Jorgensen have been swamped with applications by telephone and letters from aspirants seeking the football coaching position at East Carolina.

Jimmy Byrd Pitches Bucs Bulldog Hurler To 5-3 Win Over Guilford Hits 3 Homers

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Sports Writer

While sophomore right-hander Jimmy Byrd pitched four hit ball against the Guilford College Quakers yesterday afternoon, the East Carolina Pirates were pounding Guilford right-hander Bonnie Lapham for 11 hits and a 5-3 win over the Quakers in a North State Conference baseball game. The win was East Carolina's seventh in North State Eastern Division play. A single run in the seventh inning gave the Pirates their victory but the big story of the afternoon was the manner in which Byrd worked his way out of jam after jam. All told, Byrd gave up nine free passes to the visiting Quakers and there were Guilford runners on the bases in every inning but the second. Byrd and his Buc team mates left ten Guilford runners stranded as the little right-hander from Kinston pitched no-hit ball for six and two-thirds innings.

The first Guilford hit off Byrd came in the seventh inning when Bobby Callicutt pounded out a solid single into left-centerfield. Byrd struck out Joe Matthews to cut Callicutt out of any scoring chances but the Quakers picked up two more hits in the eighth to score their final runs.

The Pirates got their winning tally on three consecutive hits in the seventh frame. George McSwain led off the inning with a single into rightfield. Byrd was sent up to punt McSwain to second but all hands were safe when Lapham fielded the bunt and refused to try to retire either. McSwain or Byrd. A bunt down the third baseline by Cecil Heath loaded the bases for the Pirates and McSwain trotted across with what proved to be the winning run when Fred Soles worked Lapham for a free ticket to first.

The Pirates had jumped into a quick 2-0 lead in the first inning with a three hits and an error by Quaker Billy Charlton. Heath led off in the contest with a single and Soles moved him to second when Charlton booted the centerfielder's grounder to third. Gailther Cline loaded up the bases with a blooper into short centerfield and Heath scored when Claude King sent out another Texas Leaguer. Soles was forced at the plate by W. C. Sanderson but Cline came in with the second run then Paul Gay fled out to deep right field.

A single by Byrd in the second inning, a stolen base, and Heath's second hit of the day brought the Pirates their third run.

Guilford got its first run in the third inning without benefit of a base hit. Byrd walked the bases full and then gave Bill Yates a free pass to force Lapham home with run number one for the Quakers. From that point until the eighth inning when Guilford put together two hits and two wild pitches for two more runs, Byrd held the visitors in check.

Heath, the pepper-pot second baseman from Wilmington, continued his break from a hitting slump with three of the Pirate hits. The freshman ace was followed by Byrd, McSwain, and Cline, each with two hits. Paul Jones came through with the afternoon's longest hit, a triple which got past rightfielder Bill Osteen. The four Guilford hits went to Callicutt, Matthews, Yates, and Bill Ringer.

The Pirates will play a two-game series in Norfolk Monday and Tuesday. They will meet the Naval Receiving Station Monday afternoon and follow up with a Tuesday game against the Naval Air Station.

Tornadoes Take 7-3 Win Over Bethel

AYDEN — An inside-the-park homerun with the bases loaded by Willis Manning gave Ayden an inside track here yesterday and the Tornadoes went on to defeat Bethel's Indians by a score of 7-3, in a non-conference clash between the two Pitt County schools.

Manning, who also recorded his fourth victory of the season without a defeat, struck his big blow in the fourth inning to enable Ayden to overcome a 2-1 deficit and go ahead in the contest for the first time. His hit was the only safety received by Ayden in scoring five runs in the inning.

Centerfielder Todd Kittrell started the big innings by working Bethel hurler Earl Johnston for a walk, and A. T. Venters gained life on an error by the visitors' second baseman. W. O. Jolly completed the circuit by reaching base after being hit by a pitched ball. Johnston then walked Mack Allen to force in Kittrell with Ayden's first run of the afternoon, setting the scene for Manning's homer. The Tornado mound star's blow traveled deep into centerfield, falling in around the 400-foot mark and scoring Venters, Jolly and Allen ahead of him.

Worthington Leaves
Darrell Worthington, mound ace

for Ayden last season, started the game—his second of the year. He retired the first man and then allowed a single, but while striking out the third man in the batting order—Dalton Council—he strained the muscles in his pitching arm and was forced to leave the game. Manning relieved him and went the rest of the way, fanning 10 men and walking none.

For Bethel, Earl Johnston went the distance on the mound. Johnston was tagged for eight hits while whiffing a total of eleven and walking seven batters.

Manning led the batting for the winners with a single and his four-bagger in four times at bat. Hal Edwards collected two singles, and Billy McLoon tripled.

Cecil Riddick connected for three bingles, including a double, in four times up to lead the losers. Johnston had two for three.

Ayden plays at South Edgecombe Tuesday afternoon in a continuation of the Coastal Conference championship race.

Devils Swamp Vanceboro 16-2 In Coastal Contest

VANCEBORO — Two Vanceboro hurlers allowed 16 Farmville batters to reach first base on walks here this afternoon, and the Red Devils took advantage of it to score 16 runs on only four hits to take their first Coastal Conference victory, winning out by a 16-2 score.

For Farmville, pitcher Johnny Hinson did a masterful job of hurling for himself. Hinson, a sophomore, outpawed allowed but two hits to the Vanceboro team while fanning eight men. He walked three players.

Five runs in the second inning proved to be the clincher for the Red Devils. They came almost entirely as a gift of the Vanceboro club-on two errors and five bases on balls. The only hit of the inning was a single by Bobby Nichols.

Farmville cemented the game with two runs in the fourth, six scores in the fifth, and added another pair of runs in the seventh. Two of the runs in the fifth came as the result of a four-bagger by Red Devil Jack Farrior.

Nichols and Farrior led the Farmville batting, while Powell and Lancaster collected Vanceboro's two safeties for the afternoon.

Farmville has an open date Tuesday afternoon.

Pitt Cancer Crusade Is Proceeding On Schedule

With the month of April — which has been proclaimed cancer crusade month — rapidly drawing to a close, reports from local officials indicate the campaign in Pitt County is "right on schedule."

L. M. Buchanan of Greenville, county campaign chairman of the Pitt County drive, said this morning that collections are progressing very well in most parts of the county. "We are pleased with results our solicitors are experiencing," Buchanan stated, "but we still want to remind the people of the county just how serious the threat of cancer is."

According to the county leader, the first community to "go over the top" by exceeding its quota was Bethel, with Mrs. Leighton Blount, Jr., as community drive chairman. Mrs. Blount just recently turned in $315, $15.00 over her quota of $300.

Complete reports from other community chairmen have not been received as yet, but according to E. R. Conway, chairman of the Greenville drive, the local crusade will surely attain its quota. "We are still working in the city and hope to have our canvass completed before the end of the month," he said.

Buchanan brought out that proceeds from the drive will not only be used for treatment of cancer patients, but much of the total will be spent on research in an exhaustive effort to discover what causes the disease. "Cancer took 3,325 lives in North Carolina last year," he disclosed. "The unfortunate thing is that many of the stricken are children below the age of 10."

He added that cancer control program in this state includes "education of the public as to danger signals and ways of discovering cancer before it has gone too far, keeping doctors abreast of latest developments on the cancer front and operating a home at Lumberton for care of indigent cancer patients."

Candidates . . .

Those filling in addition to Hodges were Jos. S. Moyer of Greenville, who succeeded himself on the board of education, Zeb Manning of Grifton for constable of Swift Creek Township, Wilbur L. Stocks of Greenville for constable of Chicod Township, Rick Jackson of Winterville for constable of Winterville Township, R. M. Manning of Greenville for justice of the peace in Belvoir Township and C. C. Worthington of Winterville for justice of the peace in Winterville Township.

Hodges, who represents the fifth district made up of Ayden and Swift Creek, yesterday filed for his seventh term on the board of commissioners. He is rounding out 12 years on the board and in length of service, is the oldest. Hodges was elected to the board in 1940 and has served since that time, having been chairman of the board for three years.

The fifth district representative is married and has one daughter. He is engaged in the warehouse business in Kinston and, thus far, is the only commissioner to have any opposition. R. Guy Jackson of Ayden recently filed for the fifth district seat on the board of commissioners.

Today is the last day for candidates to file for office as the registration books close at 6 o'clock this afternoon.

Conservation Program Is Started For Pitt Farms

Pitt County farmers were informed today that the Agricultural Conservation Program for 1953 is now underway in the county.

James Meredith, secretary of the Pitt Production and Marketing Administration, disclosed this morning this year's program is different from previous programs introduced in the county.

"This year each community committee is to visit each farmer in his community and assist him in listing the practices most needed for conservation and increased production," Meredith said. "Then before the start of the 1953 program in Stokes County in 1952, a meeting was held in that county March 10 attended by representatives of county committees and PMA fieldmen from all over the state. County and community committees in Stokes County discussed how the program was carried out and how successful it was in Stokes."

Meredith again cited the changes in the program in Pitt County this year and instructed farmers in the county to expect their county committees to call on them relative to 1953 practices.
