General Dodd To Be Flown To 8th Army Headquarters Tomorrow To Tell Story; Army Silent On Concessions Made To Gain Freedom For Reds' Hostage

SEOUL, Korea, (UP) — Communist prisoners on Koje Island released Brig. Gen. Francis T. Dodd unharmed after holding him hostage for four days, it was announced tonight.

Gen. James A. Van Fleet, 8th Army commander, said Dodd was released "unharmed and in good spirits" at 9:30 p.m. Korea Time.

While a captive of the Reds the 52-year-old general from Tallahassee, Fla., reported by telephone that he was negotiating for his own release. He asked Van Fleet to delay an attempt to rescue him by force.

Battle-hardened troops had been standing by for an armed assault if necessary. The 8th Army gave no details as to just how the release was effected in the first announcement that Dodd was free.

A board of inquiry has been named to investigate circumstances of Dodd's seizure. His release climaxed a hectic day at Koje which saw leaders of Communist prisoners from other compounds meet to draw up their demands while U. N. troops were ready to shoot their way in if ordered.

An earlier announcement from Van Fleet had reported that release of Dodd was imminent since "favorable arrangements" had been worked out.

It quoted Dodd as saying that "the prisoners of war showed honest intent and are in near agreement with the camp commander."

The camp commander is Brig. Gen. Charles F. Colson, Charleston, S. C., who was named to that post after Red prisoners seized Dodd Wednesday afternoon and dragged him into the compound.

Van Fleet's announcement said: "During the day an exchange of messages has continued between Communist leaders in Compound 76 and the camp commander at Koje-Do."

"Following his request that force not be used until the Communist demands had been received and considered, General Dodd stated: 'The prisoners of war showed honest intent and are in near agreement with the camp commander.'"

"General Dodd reports he is well and will take care of and is optimistic for an early release."

"It is expected that favorable arrangements will be concluded in a very short time."

The announcement came after leaders of the prisoners met to decide the ransom they might seek. Van Fleet gave his reluctant consent for Red leaders from prison stockades throughout the island to meet in Compound 76 to frame their demands.

Allied officers waited tensely outside the bleak, barbed-wire enclosure. At Dodd's request, telephoned from within the compound, Van Fleet delayed an attempt to free the general by force.

He said he had agreed to send writing paper into the compound and to permit the prisoners to use telephones. But, at the same time, he warned that Dodd must be released unharmed.

Little Field Woman Chosen For Tribute

Mrs. Susan Beppard, 83, Named 'Queen Mother' In Annual Ayden Event; Confined To Wheel Chair For 2 Years

By ROY HARDEE Reflector Staff Writer AYDEN — An 83-year-old grandmother of 32 grand and great-grandchildren was chosen last night as the 1952 Queen Mother at the fourth annual Queen Mother Celebration sponsored by the Ayden Lions Club.

Mrs. Susan Beppard, of the Little Field community, was selected for the coveted honor by the popular applause of the audience with the response being tabulated by an applause meter.

The 1952 Queen Mother was among seven contestants competing for the honor. Mrs. Beppard was sponsored by the Little Field Home Demonstration Club.

Mrs. Beppard who has been confined to a wheel chair for the past two years as a result of a broken hip, won out over the other six contestants in the first round of judging.

Fred Fletcher, of Raleigh, who served as master of ceremonies presented the new queen with a variety of gifts donated by local merchants.

Fletcher and three other performers presented an hour-long musical and comedy program prior to the selection of the Queen Mother.

Each of the contestants was presented to the audience and Fletcher read a brief sketch of their lives and services rendered to their communities as prepared by the sponsoring organizations.

Mrs. Beppard, the mother of two children; a son and daughter, is also the grand mother of 12 grand children, has 19 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild.

The winning mother served for 42 years as post mistress for the Little Field Community and for a long time served the community as a practicing mid-wife.

More Offers Of Blood Required

But 75 People On List For Tuesday Donation In Chicod

CHICOD — A blood donor center will be set up here Tuesday to serve three communities but indications are that the quota of 150 pints will not be reached.

A Red Cross official said this morning that only 75 people from the communities of Chicod, Simpson, and Grimesland had made appointments to donate a pint of blood. Usually a small percentage of people who have made appointments are not allowed to give blood for some medical reason, therefore at least 200 people should be signed up to insure the quota of 150 pints.

At Cowart, recruitment chairman for the three communities, has urged more people to make an appointment to save a life by giving a pint of blood. "It is urgent that at least 150 pints be given when the bloodmobile arrives in Chicod at the school Tuesday," the chairman said.

The blood center will be open in the Chicod School from 9 o'clock Tuesday morning until four in the afternoon.

Jonasek paid a $10 fine yesterday after Humane Society officers accused him of giving a hot foot to the squirrels. They testified he rigged a rat trap and an electrified pie plate to keep them out of his garden.

Chapter 4

This was but the first of many such discussions on the subject that Jane had with her Aunt Hattie in the week which followed. It was utterly impossible for her to make the woman comprehend that George was more necessary to her than anyone else. So it was a relief the right to say to me that, lie for the girl to have a job of sorts to go to each day. If Mrs. Goldsborough had not been a singularly understanding and helpful "patient," she would have got aboard the next train and gone back to New York to live with Ruth until the camp season opened. But the work at Mrs. Goldsborough's house did help. Jane found a new Mrs. Goldsborough the first time she went to the huge, brown-shingled house on the other side of the hill, a Mrs. Goldsborough who could actually cry:

"How wonderful to see you again, dear; how wonderful to have you back home after all these years, I missed you, I really missed you."

And this new Mrs. Goldsborough was a most understanding woman. She heard Jane's tale of woe and, when she had finished, nodded very firmly. "You are doing the sensible thing. Apparently this English girl caught him in a lenient mood and married him before he had a chance to do some real thinking on the subject."

"He wasn't himself," she said, defending George as best she could. "He would never have married her had he been himself. It's my job to see to it that he does become himself again."

"Splendid, splendid." Tired, Mrs. Goldsborough had rested back up on the pillow. "Now be a good child and get me some hot tea, won't you?"

So the week passed, a good week, a monotonous, trying and dispiriting week. All she wanted was a peaceful existence until the camp opened, and it got to the point where she found herself sneaking out of the house before breakfast just to make sure she wouldn't have another battle with her aunt. A fact which her aunt soon noticed and soon resented:

"I am not a monster!" she declared from the porch the following Sunday evening. "You have no argument," she said bluntly, her body bristling. "That is why I am particularly angry with you. I did not know that I was nourishing a fool all these years."

It made the girl angry. Color came in a rush to her cheeks. She rose, her green gabardine skirt fluttering in the wind. "You never fell in love, so you don't know what it is to want a particular man more than you want anything else. It happened. Just like that, it happened. And no one just because some clever woman led him to the altar. I should spend the rest of my life without him. It would be impossible anyway. Now I must go upstairs and pack."

For once in her life Aunt Hattie backed down. A strange expression came onto her face as she realized, suddenly, that the old Jane was going, gone for good. Tears sprang to her eyes, her lips trembled.

"You make me ashamed of a Bancroft for the first time in my life," she said haltingly. "You are indeed. You make me anxious to see you leave this house at once."

Breathless, indignant to think that her aunt would even think such a thing, the girl left the door, left it and knelt at her aunt's feet as she had done in the old days.

"Darling," she said softly, "there is only one life to lead, and that life should be a happy one. If I felt that George, deep down inside were happy, I wouldn't think of seeing him again. But I know George. I know what he wants. Why, the work he is doing for unfortunates in Tuttleton right this very moment is an expression of what he wants. And I fit in. I'm a girl who became a nurse because I, too, want to help people. Don't you see? George and I belong together because we want the same things and are the same persons."

"He has a living wife," Aunt Hattie said inflexibly. "Nothing you say eliminates her. She is his wife, she will always be his wife. There. Now you may do as you choose. I will say nothing more. Nothing, that is, except this: if you come between a man and his wife, then you are dead to me. I shall never again recognize you, I shall never again think of you as my niece."

Horrified, Jane arose. "Aunt Hattie!"

There was a silence, a long, fearful silence. Then Aunt Hattie straightened up and even smiled. "As you wish, I think you had better go upstairs and pack. I'll fix you something to eat."

Sighing, the girl went upstairs already more or less packed to her old room. Her suitcase was there was nothing more to do but say good-bye to Mrs. Goldsborough, eat dinner and leave. She hurried to the road and struck off through the woods, running until she had reached the gate of Mrs. Goldsborough's property. Panting, she burst into the woman's room just as the maid was clearing away Mrs. Goldsborough's supper dishes. "I've come to say goodbye," she blurted out. She looked for all the world like a furious child as she sank onto the chair beside Mrs. Goldsborough's bed. "Aunt Hattie won't listen to reason, so perhaps I won't see you any more. It was nice knowing you."

"Fiddle-dee-dee," snapped Mrs. Goldsborough. "Your Aunt Hattie will change her tune. I know the wench. She loves you and you are all that she loves. So in time she'll forgive you. I have a present for you. Mind you don't spend it all in one place."

Her hand ducked into the drawer of the night table and came out clutching a thin sheaf of bills. "One hundred dollars."

The girl gasped.

Mrs. Goldsborough chuckled. "Dr. May told me. He was quite amused. You see, I have learned a few things since you were last in Puttfield. I have learned a truly amazing thing, in fact. Namely, that you catch more flies with honey than you do with vinegar. You might remember that."

"Keep me posted. I haven't a thing to do. Your letters will be very interesting to an old lady with nothing to do."

Later, on the train, Jane wondered why she had ever gone home for a visit.

Sen. Long To Be Keynote Speaker

WINSTON-SALEM — (AP) — Senator Russell Long of Louisiana will deliver the keynote address today to a state-wide rally here of North Carolina Young Democrat Clubs.

Approximately 500 Democratic leaders were expected for the annual affair, which is intended to be a pre-primary kickoff.

Senator Long will be introduced by Thurmond Chatham, representative of the Fifth Congressional District. Others who planned to attend the rally included Senator Willis With of North Carolina, gubernatorial candidates Hubert B. Olive and William B. Umstead, Rep. Carl Durham of the Sixth Congressional District, Attorney Harry McMillan and State Commissioner of Revenue Eugene B. Shaw.

The three Democratic candidates for Lieutenant Governor, Mayor Marshall C. Kurfess of Winston-Salem, Luther Hodges of Leaksville and Roy Rowe of Burgaw, also are expected.

A dance this evening will wind up the rally.

Court Restrains Nuisance Calls

DEDHAM, Mass. (UP) — Wayne E. Stiles of Wellesley and his wife hoped today their sleep no longer would be interrupted in the middle of the night by telephone calls.

The couple obtained a restraining order here yesterday forbidding Stiles' sister-in-law from telephoning their home. They claimed she called at all hours "solely for the purpose of abusing, annoying and disturbing them."

MOTHER'S Day and Mother's DAY

Our artist is not experimenting with his brush! There is a profound difference between these two days...

MOTHER'S DAY—with the accent on Mother—is the second Sunday in May, when we honor Motherhood, and express our deep affection for Mother.

MOTHER'S DAY—with the accent on Day—is every day of the year. It is Mother's unending labor of love. It is Monday's wash and Tuesday's ironing, the meals to be cooked and the beds to be made, the bruises to be healed and the prayers to be heard.

And at the close of her DAY, Mother has prayers of her own—for her little-ones, her husband and herself.

God is answering many of those prayers through the Church. With its effective program of religious education and worship the Church can supply the spiritual needs in Mother's DAY... and in your DAY also!

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. These are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake (2) For his children's sake (3) For the sake of his community and nation (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go in church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Special Class Projects Cover Wide Range Of Studies

The Good Health Food Store, a miniature grocery store, is run by second grade students. The store was made by the students of Miss Lillian Herring as part of a study unit on "Community Helpers."

Timely And Unusual Topic Units

By MURIEL SHOTWELL
Reflector Staff Writer

Throughout the year, students of the Pitt County schools have worked on a number of timely, interesting, and worthwhile units in the classroom.

A report and pictures on a number of the units of study were turned in to county school supervisors, Miss Annie Lee Jones and Mrs. Edna Earl Baker, who stated that they showed diligent work by both the teachers and students.

One of the units of study, "Ayden in the Gay Nineties," is being sent by Mrs. Baker to the North Carolina Education Association magazine in Raleigh for publication.

The project was undertaken by the eighth grade students in the Ayden School. Its theme was built around the student's ideas of how life might have been in the community around 1896, complete with costumes and furniture.

A play was written by the students who also put it on for guests. The play took in four scenes—courtship, quilting, supper, bedroom, and worship.

The unit was begun by the eighth grade girl's class taught by Miss LaRue Evans and boys from Sam Stell's eighth grade took part in the play. The scenes for the play and exhibit were put up in the Ayden community building one night for visitors.

Placed in the community building were exhibits of old time "relics" such as quilts, pitchers, urns, butter molds, plates, picture frames, a cradle, clocks, bits of old lace, old records for an Edison, skillets, albums, iron pots, pin cushions, salt dishes, cards, and old books.

The furniture exhibit consisted of a plush love seat, kerosene frames, an Edison, a high top wooden bedstead, and many other kinds of old type furniture.

Another unit of study prepared in the Ayden School by the two sixth grades under the direction of Irma Worthington and Maggie McGlohon was "Hands Across the Ocean" in which the countries of Europe were studied.

All available material on Europe was put on display for the students to scan before they were given the outline of work. Both sixth grades had informative pictorial displays on bulletin boards and encyclopedias and magazines.

The subject of study was the geographical aspects of the European countries; the origin of the people who inhabit the country and their customs, government, and the like; natural resources; industries; cultural background; cities; transportation; trade and the country as it is today in a modern world.

Other subjects such as spelling, language, music, art, drama, arithmetic, history, geography, geography, reading, and outside activities were correlated in the unit.

The unit was culminated with a program in the form of a tea party given by an American hostess with her neighbors from European lands as her guests. The countries of England, France, Norway, Austria, Spain, Italy, Russia, Poland, and Switzerland were represented. Guests at the party were dressed in the suitable costume of the country and foods with foreign names were served.

In evaluating the unit of study, the teachers stated that by comparing the sizes of the countries of our own states they can understand in a small way the problems that arise because of language, religious, and political differences in nationalities.

"They appreciate more fully the fact that we are descendants of the Europeans and are responsible to them for much of our art, music, and way of life. As a whole, we think we accomplished our objectives and perhaps more than we can see now in a better understanding of our European neighbors."

Miss Lillian Herring's second grade class of the Farmville School recently showed much interest and learning involved to a great extent around the social studies program. This was brought about in the unit of work, "Community Helpers," a year long project.

In the unit the class strived to develop an appreciation of cooperative efforts among people who furnish the necessities of life and personal, group, and neighborhood consciousness through reading, discussion, and experience.

Through the study of the postman, the milkman, the policeman, the fireman, the farmer, the doctor, the grocer, the minister and the teacher, the students were offered opportunity for simple research work, using the library, books, and personal experience.

The fields of study correlated in the unit were—reading, penmanship, oral and written language, spelling, music, art, and arithmetic.

Characters from "Ayden in the Gay Nineties" gather around for worship in one of the scenes taken from a play which was given as a part of their unit of study. From left to right are Geraldine Jolly, Garland Bullock, Jeanie Lee Stokes, Latha McDennis, and Mary Alice Hart.

The exhibit pictured above shows a number of items which could be found in almost every home in Ayden in the 1890s. The items were on display in the community building which was a part of a unit of study by Ayden School students.

Dances representing a number of European countries are given before an audience at the Ayden School. Two sixth grades undertook a unit, "Hands Across The Ocean" in which they studied their European neighbors.

Dressed in costume and showing the flags of every country they studied, the students undertook a seven week's project called "Hands Across The Ocean."

Students in Mrs. Mary Holden's second and third grade classes at Grimesland School display the bird houses they made in a project in which they studied birds.

which was the outgrowth of the unit was the student's Good Health Food Store. A miniature grocery store was set up with empty cans, cartons, paper tags, to a toy telephone, toy cash register and toy money was used.

In the practice of running the "grocery store," the students became acquainted with the value of money, how to use it, rules of courtesy, and learning the kinds of food, how to keep them fresh, and their value.

In evaluating the unit of study, Miss Herring said the students learned the value of relationship in the family, in the school, in the community, and on the playground became familiar with community helpers and established a desirable attitude toward them; became aware of the large amount of work that goes into making a desirable community; and achieved good social group habits.

During the year the second and third grades of Mrs. Mary W. Holden's class at Grimesland studied birds. In the winter the children built a feeding shelf and placed it outside the window.

With the arrival of spring, the students built about 25 Blue-Bird houses. The house is a special type, correctly designed for Blue birds, Chick-a-dee, and Titmice. The house has a removable floor and is highly approved by conservationists, nature students and bird lovers.

The children observed different types of birds, read stories about them, learned poems, drew pictures, and modeled birds. They are developing habits of observation of outdoor life, learning to recognize by sight and call a number of local birds, and to appreciate their beauty and value.

Umstead Takes A Dig At Governor

RALEIGH — (AP) Gubernatorial candidate William B. Umstead review his platform and took some digs at Gov. Scott during a 30-minute state-wide radio address last night.

Umstead emphasized that if he is elected governor, "I shall not undertake to tell the people of this state whom they must vote for to succeed me in office."

Gov. Scott, who is supporting Hubert E. Olive for governor, has urged his key state appointees to follow his lead and support Olive.

Umstead declared "I have not promised, and I do not intend to promise, to appoint any man or woman to any position in the state until after I am elected governor."

He asserted he is not the candidate of any man, any machine, or any pressure group.

In reviewing his program, he urged further development of all areas of the state, especially those far Western and Western sections which have remained relatively isolated. He said the state's goal should be to make every public road in North Carolina usable by motor vehicle at all times. He also discussed education and health and mentioned ways in which the state's per capita income could be increased.

Strength for the Day

By Mrs. L. BOUGLASS
DEEP IN THE JUNGLE
An African Swahili, going into the African jungle, surrounded by darkness, disease, sin, and death, has written as follows: 'I work with unbroken concentration and without hurry. However much I am at the mercy of the world, I never let myself get lost by worrying over its misery. I hold firmly to the thought that if I die, I will do a little to bring some portion of this misery to an end.'

What we realize that Schweitzer left two or three hundred dollars—for he was an accepted master of several fields—and went into the jungles of Africa to live out his life in self-effacing service to the natives, and overcame with the realization that here is a light after Christ's spirit. Among other things Schweitzer is a great musician. His organ records of such numbers are purchased at any music store. The great physician, theologian, and musician gave up everything that he might serve the most lowly in a spirit of complete self-sacrifice. Day by day he moves among the patients of his hospital. He preaches to them on Sunday evenings—if he has any leisure—he plays on the grand piano given him by the Paris Bach Society.

Here is a Christian ideal. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

The True Line Must Be Found Now

The confusion over Greenville's property lines should be clarified by the city administration without delay. No one seems to know exactly where the correct property lines in the city are—or for that matter how long the city has been growing without knowing. But one thing is certain. It will be much better to get the matter settled once and for all right now instead of letting the confusion go on indefinitely while more new buildings and new homes are being erected.

The confusion in the city administration over the issue came to light at the aldermen's meeting Thursday night when Street Committee Chairman Heber B. Tripp revealed that the survey of the city engineer showed the new Worsley building on East Third Street is being erected along the property line, while a survey of another surveyor shows the building is being erected 40 inches inside the city street right-of-way.

Present uncertainties could be expensive to property owners through no fault of their own... and if it is not the individual's fault, then the blame must be laid to the city.

It is going to take a lot of checking through the old maps and deeds of the city to determine exactly where property lines of the city run, but the city should waste no time in getting the work underway. At the present time the city has no intention of using more of its street right-of-way, but the time may come when 30 inches along Greenville's streets will make a big difference. East Third Street particularly has no sidewalk, and the need for it has been apparent for some time. If the city allows individuals to erect buildings on the city right-of-way, it is likely to pose a serious problem in future years.

We are not sure when or how the confusion over property lines began, but it is obvious it needs immediate clarification. Clarification will prevent buildings from being erected mistakenly on city property in the future, and it might even bring to light buildings which mistakenly have been erected on city property in the past.

Now It's The Rural Man's Turn

A person who gives a pint of blood to the Red Cross never misses it. But many an American fighting man in Korea has died because a pint of blood was not available to save his life.

In its four previous trips to Pitt County, the bloodmobile has concentrated on donations from people residing in the larger towns. When it visits Chicod Tuesday, it will be depending upon donors from the rural sections in Chicod, Simpson and Grimesland communities to fill the 150 pint bottles with the life-giving fluid. It is the first time the bloodmobile has set up in the rural area of Pitt County. We hope the people in the rural areas will respond to the plea for blood as well as the people in the towns of the county have.

So far Pitt Counties have donated 615 pints of blood to the armed forces in the few months the program has been in operation here. In exchange for these donations, blood in large quantities from the regional headquarters in Norfolk has been available to Pitt Memorial hospital for use of local people who are in need of blood.

The opportunity to give blood is not being confined to the urban population of Pitt County. The rural people of Pitt should take advantage of the opportunity to help save the lives of others just as the people in the larger towns have done.

Repeat That Clarification Once More, Pleas

It never ceases to amaze The Reflector how the many Wonderful Wizards of Washington in the government's network of offices and agencies can make things so complicated and confusing for the individuals who try to abide by federal rulings of various types.

Practically every citizen of the United States at one time or another has racked his brain trying to interpret a government regulation which affects him. Most of the time the citizen can only guess at the right answer, and hope he does the right thing. More often than not, a request for clarification of the ruling brings only more confusion.

A prime example of such clarification, we think, is one issued recently by the Mutual Security Agency. It read:

"Please note: If you receive duplicate copies of this circular, it is unavoidable because of the refinement of our small business circular mailing list. If you requested, in filling out our mailing list request form, more than one of the groups covered by this circular, you will receive duplicates. This does not mean you will regularly receive duplicates. This duplication is the exception rather than the rule."

So there you have it, a clear-cut statement of policy. If you happen to be on the list you know exactly what to expect... or do you?

Maybe it's because the person who wrote the "clarification" doesn't know what to expect either.

Every Saturday this veteran Washington newspaper correspondent devotes his column to answering readers' questions of general interest on national and international policies and personalities. Questions may be sent direct to Ray Tucker at 8308 Bluestem Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON—The 38th parallel in Korea figures so prominently as the front trench in the undeclared war between the communistic and western worlds that series of readers are curious as to why and how that line was chosen to be the dividing boundary between American and Russian rule.

"This is an important historical question," writes R. B. Dunlap of Shreveport, La., "because the mental approach of those responsible was to have an important bearing on our present involvement in Korea. The Cairo declaration in itself was not sufficient justification."

With many others, Mr. Dunlap seems to believe that radical elements in the State Department during the Aiger Hiss days were influential in giving Moscow the foothold on the peninsula which lies behind the current hostilities.

MILITARY—The fact is, according to official records, that agreement on the 38th parallel as a division point was a military rather than a diplomatic decision. When it was selected, it was the opinion of the Truman Administration that Stalin would respect his Cairo and Potsdam pledges to give Korea its freedom and independence "in due course." Here is the official story:

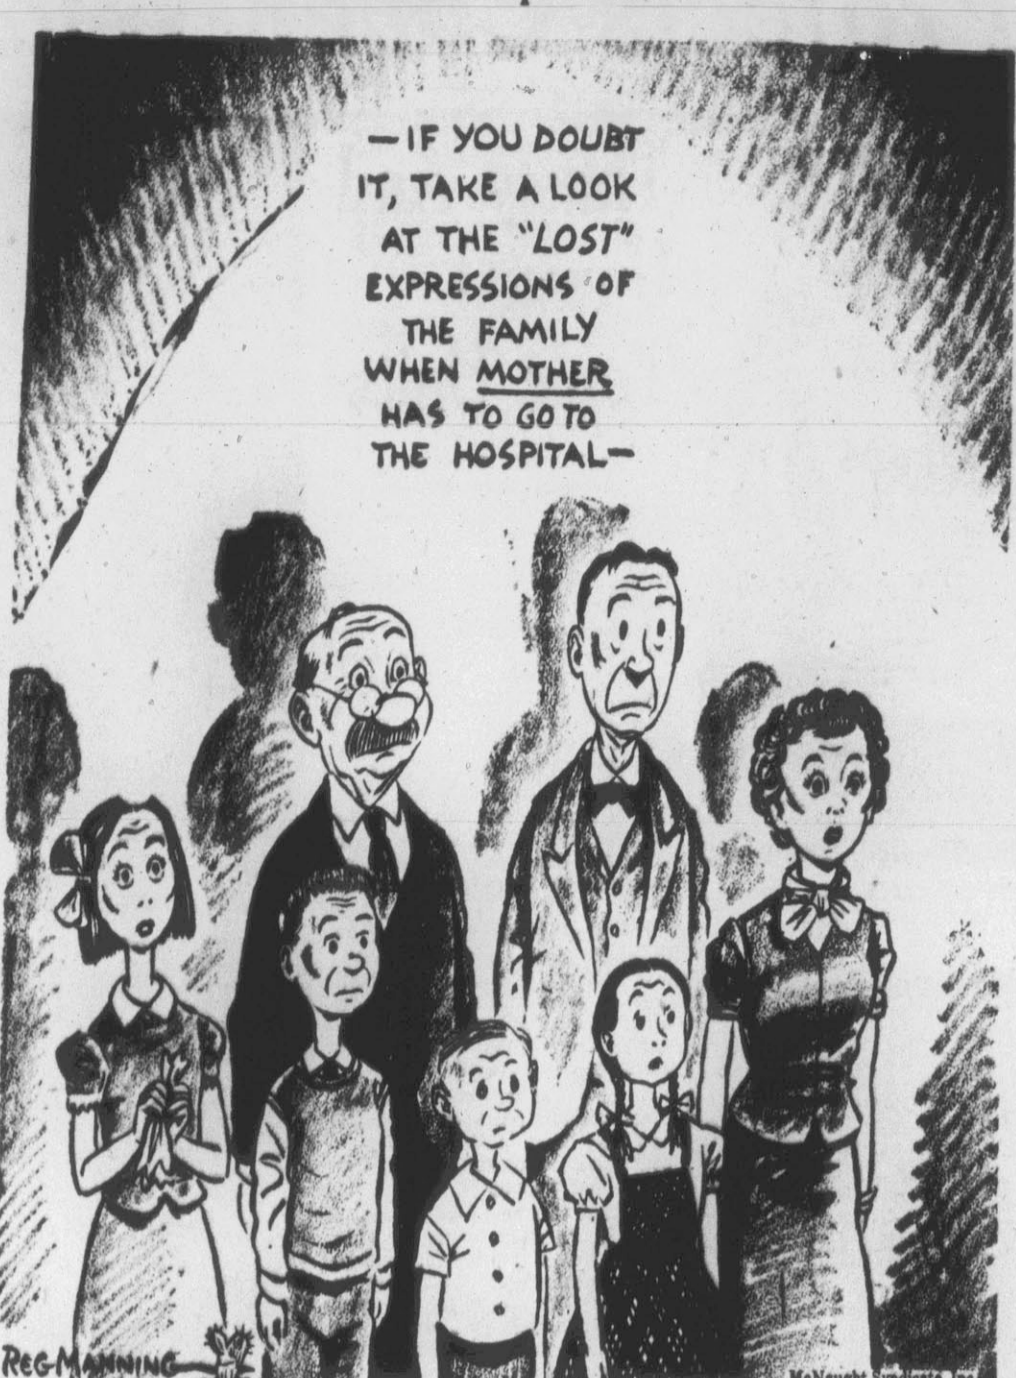

"When the offer of Japanese surrender came on August 15, 1945, it was necessary that prompt arrangements be made for the United States and its Allies to take the surrender of the Japanese forces in the Pacific and Asiatic theaters, including Korea."

Henry L. Stimson, then Secretary of War, submitted an order to James F. Byrnes, then Secretary of State, with regard to surrender arrangements. Known as General Order No. 1, it provided that Japanese forces north of the 38th parallel surrender to Soviet commanders, those south to the Americans.

EXPEDIENCY—The State-War-Navy Coordinating Committee confirmed this agreement because, as the historical files say, "Soviet forces were already well into Manchuria and other Soviet forces were near the border between Korea and other Soviet maritime provinces."

"The first Soviet forces," continues the document, "entered Korea on August 12, at which time the nearest American forces available for movement into Korea were on Okinawa, 600 miles away, and in the Philippines, 1,500 to 2,000 miles away."

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Most of us want something that could be classified as a foolish desire. One of mine is a license number on my car that consists of the same number all the way across. It doesn't matter to me whether they are all 2's, 6's, or even 0's, just so they are the same. Frankly, I would want a full bank of numbers, so as not to be confused with the celebrities that have the low numbers.

Around Capitol Square

MERCHANTS — When several hundred merchants convene in Raleigh next week for the Golden Anniversary of the North Carolina Merchants Association, they will be confronted with many problems similar to those facing the founders of the state organization 50 years ago.

Y. D. C. — There will be a Young Democratic Clubs executive committee meeting, barbecue feed and rally at Winston-Salem on Saturday night. But it won't be the occasion contemplated by its sponsor's when the affair was first projected. In fact, as late as Wednesday night it was almost impossible to find out from any of the more or less ardently enthusiastic Young Democrats around Raleigh anything about the program.

AGLEY — YDC's ers understand what Robert Burns was talking about when he said "The best laid schemes of mice and men gang aft agley." It is known that both Senators Richard Russell of Georgia and Estes Kefauver of Tennessee were invited to make the principal speech.

ADVERTISING — Like that advertising contest, for instance, Thompson Greenwood, executive secretary and treasurer of the association, thought it would be a good idea to make both merchants and newspapers more conscious of the advantages in well-prepared and attractively arranged advertisements. He worked out a plan to have disinterested competent judges pick the winners for recognition among advertisements submitted from two classes of merchants — those in cities of less than 25,000 and those in larger cities. He devotes a good deal of thought to devising fair methods of competition by requiring advertisers to classify their entries as department store, grocery, furniture, etc. It looked like a good stunt, and Greenwood had a lot of commendation for the idea. But not unanimously. Some radio station folks wanted to know how come they were ignored in the contest. There was a gentle reminder that television ought to be cut in on the deal. Next time may be there "ll be a sky-writing contest. These are some things the merchants 50 years ago did not contemplate at their first convention, but it is a safe bet that neither the merchants nor their customers would swap today's conveniences for the things they had back then.

IMPROVEMENT — When the rule of relativity is applied to the traffic casualty reports, they do not look so bad. Unfortunately, relativity and percentage calculations cannot help the individual victims of automobile accidents. On two important occasions within the past few days the fact has been emphasized that modern engineering has contributed to reducing traffic accident. Ray Chamberlain, an official of the national association, told automobile dealers at Pinehurst that the 1952 motor vehicle is many times safer than the models produced just ten years ago. James S. Burch, statistics prove that the chances near for the state highway commission, told a regional safety conference at Asheville that highway engineers also are greatly concerned about and have contributed tremendously to safe as well as fast travel. Burch said statistics prove that the chances of escaping a traffic death are four times as good now as in 1935. He displayed a chart showing that traffic deaths per 100 million miles of travel had dropped from 28 in 1935 to less than 10 in 1951. The relativity and percentage angles are good.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

MAKING A MOCKERY OF VOTING (Henderson Dispatch)
It is quite serious enough that so few people, as a rule, actually participate in elections. And there have been more than usual in the past few years. But it is making a mockery of voting when some of those who go to the trouble of attending the polls resort to write-ins of fictitious or non-resident characters or individuals.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
Self-service will probably get an impetus from the Federal Reserve Board's action this week in suspending its voluntary credit-restraint program. Under this program, banks and other lending institutions were urged to make business loans only for defense and essential civilian purposes. While not completely prohibited, loans for store modernization have been hard to get. On the other hand, loans for building stores to serve new or expanding residential districts have been regarded as essential civilian financing.

Many merchants, squeezed between higher labor costs and price ceilings, have been studying change-overs to self-service. The squeeze is especially light in the food field. Independent stores, although usually with slightly higher ceilings than chains, are being pushed against those ceilings by higher labor costs. Many of those that have not switched to self-service would like to, if the necessary remodeling could be financed.

Meanwhile, the chains want to expand. Their 1951 profits went down to 64 per cent of their 1946 average and the National Association of Food Chains estimates they may go down to 37 per cent this year. They have appealed to the Office of Price Stabilization repeatedly for higher ceilings and, as a further offset, they are adding lines that carry higher margins than food. So many supermarkets have added drug departments that some industry leaders have predicted that eventually all supermarkets will carry drugs. Some have added garden supplies, hosiery, other packaged wearing apparel, and appliances. Many a tobacco shop has lost business to supermarkets. Further expansion into other fields, however, usually involves remodeling.

Many other lines of business are interested in going self-service. Appliances, housewares, furniture, home furnishings, hardware and even wholesale electrical supplies are being sold on a serve-yourself basis. Many a merchant, with one eye on dwindling profits, has let the other eye rove over these innovations. Now that loan restrictions are off, they may have a chance to try them.

Note: Contractors may now find store owners to be prime prospects. Suspension of the credit-restraint program should make it easier to finance new store fronts and other improvements as well as conversions to self-service. Necessary materials are more readily obtainable.

DUBLIN, Ireland — (AP) — An Irish cop on his Dublin beat wears his night stick as some other gentlemen would a cane. Not only is it ornamental, but he also feels undressed without one.

In front of the Gresham Hotel on busy O'Connell St. on a Saturday night a policeman stood. He looked all of his 6 feet, 175 pounds as he watched many of his countrymen who had come to window-shop on Dublin's main street, or to chat awhile with the gentilefolk who sometime pass the time in the one or more public taverns.

He appeared to have a moment to himself and so it came to pass that the patrolman on his beat heard himself ask the following question: "How often, Mr. Officer, do you find it necessary to use that nightstick? On unruly ones, I mean."

Mr. Officer thought and thought again and then he ventured the reply: "Very seldom."

Pursued as to the last time he used the truncheon, the policeman searched his memory and finally recalled: "Six, or it may have been eight years ago."

The occasion was some sort of political demonstration. The people themselves rarely get out of hand it appears, because the Irish apparently are quiet, law-abiding citizens who don't go in for rowdy activities, even on Saturday nights.

The young patrolman—he said he could not give his name—had been on the force ten years. He had two uncles who had been on a police force in America—New York, of all places. One of them, Mike, came here during the war. "I think he's retired now; I lost track of him, but I heard he was wounded in some skirmish in New York."

They rarely have "skirmishes" in Dublin. Last December some armed men stuck up the Provincial Bank on Thomas St. and shot a cashier. The three were captured and quickly got 14, 10 and 8 years. They still talk about that shooting affray—it was the first criminal gunplay in Dublin in 14 years.

But cops don't carry guns. Most of their work centers about traffic problems and on Saturday nights helping those who have celebrated too much get back on their feet and home to bed. Only disorderly ones find themselves taken to prison and they usually get let off when they sleep it off. Four drinks a night per cop is the average.

Not that Dublin has no crime. There is a spate of house-breaking now and then. Like most of the Dublin cops, came from the country. He said the Dublin young ones seek a more profitable field of work. A ordinary officer on duty 20 years earns 8 pounds 3 weekly $22.82. A sergeant gets 9 pounds 13 (87.03).

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS
WASHINGTON N — Mrs. David K. Bruce, wife of the new undersecretary of state, is expected to shine as one of the capital's most distinguished official hostesses.

She has already won laurels in an exacting role in Paris, where for the past three years her husband has been serving as ambassador. Practically brought up for the job, she is a gracious and attractive young woman with great chic. Her late father and stepfather were both in the foreign service, and she grew up in legations and embassies around the world. She lived in Stockholm, The Hague, Bern, Tokyo and Copenhagen and went to school in Rome, Stockholm and Paris. She spoke several languages as a child, including Japanese, but she says she has retained only French and German. These she speaks fluently.

Since her recent return to the United States, she has been so busy helping the three Bruce youngsters, Alexander (Sasha), 6, David, 4, and Nicholas, 3, and her four French servants get acclimated to life in America, and to getting settled in the handsome Bruce home in Georgetown, that she's had little time to give to planning parties. However, she and her husband have been widely entertained.

In addition to sprucing up the Washington residence, she has opened the Bruce country estate, Staunton Hill, near Lynchburg, Va., worked up the gardens in both places, enrolled Sasha and David in dancing classes and has seen to it that the family's cocker spaniels, Brewer and Carlos, are happy "back home again."

Nevertheless, she says if need be, she could give a dinner party on a moment's notice, so accustomed is she to the role of hostess. She prefers to give big parties. "They run themselves," she told me.

Though she received her early schooling abroad, Mrs. Bruce, the former Fyveline Bell, came home to go to college. She was graduated from Radcliffe, where she was a history major.

For a while she was private secretary to Francis Biddle, when he was U. S. Attorney General, then went to work in the Intelligence Division of the Office of Strategic Services (OSS) in London, where she met her husband, boss of the OSS European set-up during the war.

During her stay in Paris, Mrs. Bruce was elected to the French capital's best dressed list. Simplicity and suitability keynote her fashion choices. Gray flannel suits and separate skirts are her daytime favorites, and she likes white, gray and beige for evening. She has brought a number of new French creations with her, but she contends American summer cottons and sports clothes are "unbeatable anywhere."

Mrs. Ernest L. Willard, in charge of the program, gave the outstanding events in the life of Jefferson Davis, the first and only president of the Confederacy.

He was educated in the academies of Mississippi and Kentucky, and later Transylvania University, Lexington, Ky. He secured appointment to West Point and was graduated in 1828. After a successful career in the army he retired in 1835. He returned to Mississippi where he became a plantation owner and acquired considerable wealth before he entered his political career in 1845, as a Democratic member of Congress. He served here in various capacities until his state of Mississippi seceded.

Davis had hoped to become commander of the Confederate forces in the field, but instead (February, 1861) he was elected president of the newly formed Confederacy. To him was given the difficult task of guiding the new government during the terrible war which followed the secession. After the war he tried without success to regain his shattered health and to retrieve his broken fortunes. His last days were spent upon his book, "The Rise and Fall of the Confederate Government." He died in New Orleans, but his body was later removed to the old Confederate Capital of Richmond, Va. where a monument now stands to his memory.

For refreshments the hostess served delicious home-made cake and ice cream with ginger ale.

Pirates Blast Elon 11-4 For Possible Title Chance

Soles And Byrd Lead Conference Victory

Pirates Rally In Late Innings For Tenth Conference Victory; Loss By Elon Today Can Give ECC Shot At Divisional Title

By JIMMY ELLIS

The East Carolina College Pirates blasted themselves back into the position of being a contender for the North State Conference's Eastern Division title by pounding a pair of Elon College hurlers for an 11-4 victory yesterday.

Sophomore pitching ace Jimmy Byrd received credit for the win. He came into the game in the sixth inning and shut the Christians out for the remainder of the contest. Jimmy Piner had started the game but was pulled after Bobby Stewart's booming home run had put Elon ahead 4-1.

Batting stars for the Pirates were all over the place yesterday but the big bat belonged to senior Fred Soles who was playing what might be his final college game. Soles will play again if Elon loses today to Atlantic Christian. A loss to Elon today will give the Bucs a chance to throw the race into a tie with a replay of a rained out game with Elon. In case of the Elon loss, the Pirates will travel to Burlington next Tuesday.

Soles, however, wasn't taking any chances. He used his big bat effectively to spark the late-inning rally which brought East Carolina victory. He started off the sixth inning with a tremendous double off the left-centerfield wall, led off in the seventh frame with a base on balls and finished up his work with an inside-the-park home run in the eighth inning.

Behind Soles in the race for batting honors were Claude King and John Hamilton, each with two hits. Billy Rakes and Carlton Reid were the leading Elon stickers with two hits apiece but the big blow went to outfielder Bobby Stewart. Stewart bashed out the long home run which gave Elon a 4-1 lead.

After Stewart's 350 foot blast, Byrd retired the side and the Bucs started some fireworks of their own. Soles started the batting marathon for East Carolina with his long double. He came in when Gaiter Cline's grounder to second base went right through Dalton's leg. Cline held on at first while King popped out but moved to second when W. C. Sanderson drew a base on balls off Ronnie McIntyre.

John Hamilton, hitting for Paul Gay, loaded up the bases when his grounder to shortstop was booted all over the infield in trying to retire Sanderson at second. Hamilton was retired a moment later at second on Paul Jones' grounder to short but Cline came across with the second run of the inning. Jones stole second and the bases were loaded when George McSwain got hit with a pitched ball. Burney Stevens went in to run for McSwain and while that change was being made, Coach Jim Mallory of the Christians lifted McIntyre and put in Roberts.

Jimmy Byrd greeted the new hurler like a long long brother with a single through the box which chased across two more runs. That was the ball game so far as the scoring was concerned. The Pirates didn't stop, however. They batted around again in the seventh inning and scored five times and added a single run in the eighth inning to complete the job they had started. The loss was Elon's third in 13 games while the Pirates have a mark of 10 wins and five losses. Elon can win the Eastern Division crown with a victory over Atlantic Christian today.

Unimpressive In First Big Fight

NEW YORK, (UP) — Middleweight Sammy Giulliani of Stamford, Conn., was officially on the "big time" today, but the cheers heralding his arrival were very weak.

On his 20th birthday, the stocky Italian won his first scheduled 10-round bout by unimpressively stopping veteran Johnny Williams of Montgomery, Ala., at the end of the fifth round in St. Nicholas arena last night.

Giulliani, favored at 12-5, outweighed Dusky Williams, 155 pounds to 145 1-2. The youngster used his weight advantage and his hooking attack in every round to keep Williams pinned against the ropes or in corners.

Referee Ted Martin topped the bout when Williams, nearly helpless, went to his corner at the end of the fifth round.

Southern Seniors Opens Today At Club

Visiting golfers from all over the South take over the Greenville Golf and Country Club course this afternoon and tomorrow as the Southern Seniors Golf Association, comprising 14 states, brings its spring tournament to Greenville for the third year.

The association, composed of men over 50 years of age, will have its biggest day tomorrow, when golf alone will be the order of the day. Trophies and prizes for the winners will be awarded following the completion of all rounds of play tomorrow.

John Proctor of Greenville is the defending champion in the Seniors' affair. He will be on hand today to protect his title.

Another Greenville man, Ercell Webb, is president of the organization.

Clemson Favored

CLINTON, S. C. (UP) — Defending champion Clemson had the inside path for another state track title today with 17 men qualified for the finals of the South Carolina intercollegiate track meet here.

In yesterday's trials host Presbyterian College placed 12 qualifiers. The Citadel showed unexpected strength in landing eight men in the finals. The University of South Carolina qualified a disappointing six and Furman placed two.

The most thrilling event of yesterday's trials was the first trial heat of the 100-yard dash. Jimmy Block of The Citadel and Bobby Drawdy of South Carolina finished in a near dead heat with a time of 9.8 seconds. The judges, after long deliberation, ruled that Block had broken the tape a shade ahead of the Carolina speedster.

E. M. Watt of Presbyterian set the individual trial pace by winning the high and low hurdles, placing second in the board jump and fourth in the javelin throw.

Host Sam Snead Closing Gap At Greenbrier Open

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va. (UP) —Sammy Snead, playing on his home course, was only one stroke behind leader Ed Oliver of Lemont, Ill., today as the field teed off on the third round of the Greenbrier Open golf tournament.

Oliver, who set a tournament record 61 for Thursday's opening round, soared to a 71 yesterday but managed to retain a one-stroke lead at Laguna Beach, Calif., who were tied with 132 totals.

With most of the golfers harassed by a severe downpour, Clark shot 65 for the best round of the day. He went out in 33 and came back in 32, carding birdies on four of the last five holes.

Snead shot a second-round 69 to go with his opening 64. Despite the downpour, which forced several golfers to suspend play while they returned to the clubhouse for dry clothes, Snead shot steady golf as he moved into a contending position.

Dave Douglas of Newark, Del., who fired a 67 for 134, also was in a good position for the first prize money. Behind Douglas there was a tie between Bob Toski of Northampton, Mass., and Charles Basler of Baltimore, Md., at 136 each.

Mangrum, Bolt Lead In Pan-Am

MEXICO CITY (UP) —Lloyd Mangrum of Los Angeles and Tommy Bolt, the Durham, N. C., fireball, teed off in the third round of the $15,000 Pan-American golf tournament today in a tie for the lead with four-under-par 36-hole scores of 140.

Bolt was the first round leader, but took a 76 yesterday while Mangrum was shooting a steady par 72 to move to the top. Bolt forgot his "temperament" pledge and broke his putter by stomping it during yesterday's round.

He remained in first with Mangrum, however, on the strength of his first-round 64 which set a new record for the course.

The golfers hoped for less wind today. A stiff breeze yesterday permitted only two players to break par. The scores also were cut by lengthening the course to 7,100 yards, 400 yards greater than the distance for the first round.

Jackie Burke Jr., of Houston, Tex., shaved three strokes off par with his 69, the lowest score of the day, and climbed into a tie for second with the other par-busters, Iverson Martin of Fort Worth, Tex., who had a 71. Each has a 142 total.

Hill Gail Out Of Two Big Races

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UP) — The jinx that has struck so many Kentucky Derby winners today put Calumet Farm's Hill Gail, the 1952 victor, out of action for at least two months and turned the struggle for three-year-old honors into a wide-open race.

Trainer Ben Jones, who watched Hill Gail give him a record sixth Derby victory last Saturday, announced last night that the big colt will not race in next Saturday's Preakness at Pimlico or in the June 7 Belmont Stakes because of an injured left foreleg.

Hill Gail was the favorite for the Preakness and a top candidate in other rich three-year-old events. But the Calumet pride came out of the Churchill Downs classic with a swollen ankle.

Jones tried to get the colt ready for the Preakness by giving him workouts Friday and yesterday. But after yesterday's X-rays revealed a "growth" on the ankle.

Since 1940 only five derby winners—Whirlaway, Count Fleet, Assault, Citation and Ponder—have gone on to dominate the three-year-old class in their Derby year.

Hill Gail's withdrawal probably will make Sub Fleet the favorite for the 76th Preakness next Saturday.

Scoring Schools

CENTRALIA, Ill. —(A) — A total of 191 points provided one of the highest single game scores ever piled up by two high school basketball teams in Illinois. Carrier Mills beat Galatia in a regular season game, 100-91. Five boys made 20 or more points apiece.

Kiwanis Edge Jaycees 3-1 In Hard Fought Contest

The Kiwanis pushed across a pair of runs in the bottom of the second inning out at Little League Park yesterday afternoon to take a hard-fought 3-1 victory over the Jaycees.

Little Kelly Barnhill started the rally off with a single but was retired going into second on a fielder's choice on a ground ball hit by Lynn Jorgensen. Centerfielder Burke Stancil continued the rally by reaching first on an error by the Jaycee pitcher. One runner scored as all hands were safe on a fielder's choice attempt at Stancil on a grounder by Bryce Cummings. Gene Byrd walked a few minutes later and Stancil came home with the third run of the game on an error by the Jaycee infield.

The winners took the lead for the first time with a single run in the first inning. Lead off man Don Wilkerson singled to begin the frame and moved to second base on an infield ball by Jim Rogers. Wilkerson stole third base and rode home on the second single of the inning, hit by Bob Edwards.

Kelly Barnhill was the winning pitcher, giving the distance of the six-inning game for the Kiwanians. Barnhill allowed but two hits in pitching the victory. He fanned four men in the process.

The only time that Barnhill was in serious trouble was in the fourth inning. After the first two men up had struck out, Wayne Sugg singled and then proceeded to take command of the base paths. Sugg stole second and third in succession, and then stole home for the only run of the game for the Jaycees.

23 Enter Big Race At Darlington

DARLINGTON, S. C. (UP) — A field of 23 racing cars powered with standard American motors lined up today to await the starter's flag in the inaugural 200-mile race over the Darlington International Raceway.

Only three drivers posted qualifying times yesterday to swell the list of qualifiers to only 11. But the other 12 entries will be allowed to start behind the qualifiers.

Speedy Thompson of Monroe, N. C., held the pole position by virtue of his qualifying average of 100.88 miles per hour.

The 200-mile big car race was scheduled to be followed by 100 miles of strictly stock car racing.

Instructions For Crop Measuring

An instruction meeting for all reporters who will measure tobacco allotments in Pitt County this year will be held Monday morning May 12, at 9 o'clock in the PMA office in Greenville.

In making the announcement this morning, county PMA Secretary James Meredith emphasized that the meeting is only for reporters who have been approved by their community committeemen.

"It is necessary for all reporters who plan to measure this year to attend the meeting," Meredith said. "They should not send anyone in their place because at that time, measuring equipment will be issued following the meeting and recipients will have to sign for it."

According to Meredith, actual measuring will not begin until about a week after the meeting. "It will take a lot of work to measure the nearly 40,000 acres of tobacco land in Pitt County, and we'll have to move fast to meet the June deadline," he said.

Barn Is Burned In Last Night's Electrical Storm

Roaring flames lick their way through the frame barn building of Mrs. Lucy Worthington of Ayden last night after a bolt of lightning fired the structure during an electrical storm. Ayden firemen, summoned around 10 o'clock, succeeded in preventing flames from reaching adjoining outbuildings. No estimates as to the loss were made. A broken hose line and distance from a fire hydrant further hindered firemen in their work. (Reflector Photo by Roy Hardee.)

See Slight Drop For 1952 Crops

RALEIGH — AP) — The Federal-State Crop Reporting Service, in its first peach forecast of the season, predicts a slight decline from last year's production.

Based on May 1 conditions, a combined farm and commercial production of 1,798,000 bushels was forecast yesterday, compared with the 1,806,000 bushels produced last year.

The report said very little freeze damage was sustained this year and that generally orchards in the commercial sandhills are clean and have been well kept.

The reporting service also said a bumper crop of wheat is in prospect. The state's early Irish potato crop is down about 17 per cent.

Based on May 1 conditions, the wheat crop is estimated at 8,624,000 bushels, a crop second only to last year's 8,763,000 bushels. The expected yield of 22 bushels per acre is down one bushel from last year's average.

A 3,238,000 bushel Irish potato crop would be a decline of 39 per cent from the 10-year average. Prospects point to an acreage yield of 175 bushels per acre off an estimated 18,500 acres.

Starling Battle Is Long Struggle

WASHINGTON — (UP) — Washington's 60 years' war between starlings and men continues but mankind has come up with a new weapon.

Genus Homo is trying to vanquish species Sturnus with a new resin-like substance called "No-Roost."

Historically speaking, the struggle dates back to 1890. In that year, 40 European starlings were released by an unknown—and now often cursed—bird lover in Central Park, New York.

The birds winged to all corners of the land and those settling in Washington founded a dynasty which now totals an estimated 1,000,000,000 descendants.

Needless to say, the feathered pests are not wanted. They are disrespectful of the streets, sidewalks and pedestrians below and their roosting on building ledges has caused real estate agents considerable headaches.

Lethal war can not be waged against the feathered pests because they are protected by an act of Congress passed June 30, 1906. The legislation made it "unlawful to kill any game bird or wild bird in the District of Columbia, except the English sparrow." Congress wanted the speckled black bird protected because of its feeding habit on the grub of the Japanese beetle.

Engineer . . .

The mayor explained that the street which Rivers authorized paving on is not even laid out on the original map developers submitted for the area where the street now lies. City Engineer Rivers also served as engineer for the Village Grove developers.

People's Interest

"It's unfortunate this controversy had to come up," Mayor Page conjectured, "because I certainly have no personal interest in the project. But while I am mayor, I will attempt to protect the best interests of all the people, and not those of a chosen few."

The mayor disclosed that in his conversation with Rivers, the city engineer stated he thought he had the authority to give the "go ahead" signal for paving. "I don't know where he got that idea," Page mused, "because the question of paving that particular street has not even come before the board of aldermen to date—for action either way."

Mayor Page reported that he is particularly interested in activities of the New Development Committee. "I am extremely anxious to see definite rules set up for developing new areas," he said. "Maybe their plan will save the city cause for much worry in the future."

In the meantime, I guess the city will be forced to vote an annual expenditure of many thousands of dollars in an attempt to bring poorly developed areas—such as Village Grove—up to par," the mayor added.

BAD — Burch added that this means the average motorist can drive 12 million miles, about 428 times around the globe, before he is killed. Some other figures were not so encouraging. Such as — one out of every 30 deaths in this state last year was caused by a traffic accident. Stated another way, one out of every 30 people now living will die in a motor vehicle accident if the 1951 ratio continues. Not even the morticians are happy about that.

RESEARCH — Significant factor in this whole business is that engineering research is constantly seeking further improvement. In the cars such things as all-steel tops, four-wheel brakes, almost puncture proof tires, shatterproof glass; in highway construction widening and straightening roadways, stabilizing pavements, removing sight-obstructions and numerous other items have contributed far more to general safety than the average driver realizes, because most of the results are indirect—and accepted unconsciously by the public.
