

More Victims Of Brutality Hunted

Top Communist Leaders Of Kojé Compound Seized By Military Police In Connection With Murder Of Anti-Reds; 'Possibly Hundreds' Killed By Kangaroo Courts

KOJE ISLAND, Korea.—(UP)—American military police today seized seven top Communist leaders from a prisoner compound where at least 15 victims of kangaroo courts were murdered brutally just before the compound was evacuated.

Paratroopers were searching for "possibly hundreds" more anti-Communist victims of the Red commissars.

While troops probed the earth for more bodies, camp headquarters announced the death toll of the savage fight in Compound 76 yesterday had risen to 38 prisoners. Seven died in a hospital today. One American was killed and 14 wounded, and more than 150 prisoners were wounded.

The seven were grabbed in one of the new 500-man compounds as they were returning to their barracks from an hour of athletics. They had been transferred this morning along with some 6,000 other North Korean inmates of Compound 77.

MPs marched them away for questioning. It was assumed they would be held in solitary confinement as are some 20 other leaders of the Red fanatics.

The 15 died at the hands of fellow prisoners in the last 12 hours before the compound was cleared. Troopers found the horribly mutilated bodies after tips from anti-Communist prisoners, one of whom said he too was slated for death but escaped.

They had been strangled, stabbed and beaten.

Men of the 18th Airborne Regiment, hardened to the grisly sights of the battlefield, were appalled by the tortures that had been inflicted on the victims.

Burned, gashed bodies were lifted from wells and ditches. Eight were found in one well, two more in a well 50 yards away. Four lay face down in the slime of a ditch and another was alone in a trench.

Maj. David Korn, Richmond, Va., said all 15 of the prisoners were "murdered."

"And all within the last 12 hours," he said. "I think there are at least four more in oldiridms in one well and possibly hundreds more buried in other places in the compound."

The bodies were smeared with fresh blood, some still bleeding as if killed only minutes before paratroopers moved into 77 this morning.

Fact-s were crushed and limbs broken. Ropes had been drawn tightly around their necks. One body had no face. Topmost bodies in the well were smouldering. The prisoners had burned a tent above it.

Compound 77 was emptied by 11:30 a. m. today and its 6,000 prisoners moved to new 500-man enclosures. Its die-hard North Koreans submitted meekly after watching the violent removal of prisoners from nearby Compound 76 yesterday.

Yesterday afternoon, while Compound 78 was being evacuated quietly, leaders of 77 said they were ready to come out. They were told they would be moved this morning.

Korn said the Communists apparently went to work immediately on a grisly job that lasted all night until shortly before they were moved this morning.

Violent Tremors Hit Argentina

BUENOS AIRES (UP)—A violent earthquake rocked most of western Argentina and north-central Chile last night, sending people fleeing into the streets in panic.

At least one person, a five-year old girl, was killed and a score injured. Fifteen of the injured were theatergoers who were crushed in fleeing from a movie house in San Juan, Argentina.

San Juan electricity failed for five minutes and the darkness added to the panic in the city, whose residents recalled the 1944 earthquake in which 10,000 persons died.

UN Negotiators Again Threaten Stage Walkout

Warn Reds To Halt Propaganda Tactics; Hear New Outburst Of Inveective

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP)—Allied truce negotiators, backed by a stiff note from Gen. Mark W. Clark to the Communist high command, said today they might walk out again if the Reds have nothing to offer except propaganda.

Senior delegates from both sides met today for the first time since the United Nations called a three-day recess Saturday.

North Korean Gen. Nam Il immediately inquired if the U. N. intended to settle the prisoner of war question "by negotiation and consultation or through massacre."

He referred to deaths of 38 prisoners in Compound 76 on Kojé Island yesterday when they resisted movement to smaller enclosures.

Brig. Gen. William P. Nuckols, U. N. spokesman, said after the meeting that it was entirely possible that the Allies will walk out again unless the Communists bring up a concrete proposal.

Maj. Gen. William K. Harrison, senior Allied Delegate, told the Reds today the U. N. proposes a re-screening of prisoners, with Communist observers, only to determine as fairly as possible which ones want to go back to Communism.

Nam replied with a barrage of shouted invective. He accused the U. N. of "shameful and cowardly acts, torture, forced tattooing, forced writing in blood petitions and forced finger printing." All are old charges.

He went on to charge the U. N. with "ceaselessly slaughtering our captured personnel (on Kojé)."

"The massacre of June 10," he said "exceeded all previous incidents in its seriousness. The fact that your side utilized the period of recess, unilaterally declared by your side, to arrange for and execute this massacre further testifies that it was a premeditated action designed to disrupt the armistice and extend the Korean war."

United Nations Would Release All Prisoners

WASHINGTON (UP)—The United Nations, once an armistice is signed, would be willing to throw open all prison gates in Korea and allow prisoners to decide whether they want to return to their Communist homelands, N. S. officials reported today.

It also was learned that the United States would be reluctant to broa membership of the U. N. truce negotiating team at this time to include British representatives. This was the private reaction of officials to a flurry of "authoritative" London reports that Britain is on the verge of seeking a direct role in the stalled Panmunjom truce talks.

American officials said the Allies proposed to the Communists "months ago" that prison gates be opened following an armistice as a fair way to solve the prisoner deadlock. While the Reds spurned the offer then, it was revealed that the proposal still stands.

MacArthur Free To Make Speech

WASHINGTON (AP)—The White House today agreed with the Army Department's position that Gen. Douglas MacArthur is free to deliver the keynote address at the Republican national convention.

Joseph Short, President Truman's press secretary, was asked if there would be any action against the general for taking part in a political convention while still technically on active duty. Short replied:

"I refer you to what was said yesterday by the secretary of the Army."

will be sent to Scott soon. It may be a refusal to quit, in effect an invitation for the governor to try to force him out.

Scott told Asheville reporters he hopes to issue a public statement this week giving his reasons for resigning Coltrane's resignation.

Earlier in the day, he parried questions with newsmen at his regular press conference in Raleigh.

Speculation on who might be the next to get the gate has centered largely on George Ross, director of the Department of Conservation and Development. Scott told reporters yesterday Ross had been by to see him but added, "not about the matter you're talking about."

Thus far, Scott has dismissed Paroies Commissioner T. C. Johnson and Motor Vehicles Commissioner Landon C. Rosser, and asked Coltrane to resign.

All three men, as well as Ross, supporter Umstead, while the governor backed Hubert E. Olive and urged his appointees to follow suit.

Pin Represents Pint Of Blood Given

Bloodmobile Given 118 Pints In Bethel Tuesday

Turnout Of Prospective Donors Praised, Large Number Rejected; Negro Citizens Make Best Showing In Pitt To Date

By MURIEL SHOTWELL, Reflector Staff Writer BETHEL — Despite days spent recruiting donors and the seemingly large crowd which showed up to give a pint of blood at the temporary center here yesterday, the quota of 150 pints was not met.

The Red Cross Bloodmobile from the Tidewater Region collected 118 pints from Bethel citizens. Enough donors were scheduled to give 150 pints but many were rejected because "Even though the quota was not met, the fine work of the recruiting chairman Julian Smith should be commended," stated B. C. Satterfield, general chairman for the county blood program.

Smith worked hard in securing donors and can be assured that what he and the Bethel people did can save many lives.

Satterfield said that thanks also go to Mrs. Dennis Hardy who headed 25 volunteer workers for such jobs as receptionists and canteen helpers.

One of the most outstanding things about the blood center here yesterday was the number of Negroes who came to donate blood. At least 50 colored men and women donated blood, the largest number to come to any blood center which has been set up in the county.

A number of men brought their employees from work to donate blood. H. L. Briley's workers showed up 100 percent and about 15 of L. N. James' employees, which included 9 Negro women, came in to do their part.

As usual, the canteen at the blood center was the most popular place. Here donors were given refreshments and presented donor pins which represented a drop of blood centered with a white cross.

Reversed

RALEIGH (UP)—The state Supreme Court today held that the Kinston Tobacco Board of Trade may not force buyers to attend a fifth sale at its tobacco auction.

The court reversed a lower court injunction which had ordered several tobacco companies to furnish buyers for the fifth sale.

The court said "the business of operating an auction warehouse is undoubtedly affected with the public interest and is subject to reasonable public regulation but this fact alone does not clothe the Kinston Tobacco Board of Trade, Inc., with the power to establish a five-sale market and invade private right to the extent of requiring individuals or private corporations to participate."

The Board of Trade created the five sale market by resolution in 1949 and the Supreme Court said "directed defendants and other buyers to participate in the fifth sale as they had in the other four."

Leaf Sales System Is Unchanged

Warehousemen Vote To Retain Present Time Allotment Sales System

Greenville tobacco warehousemen have settled the question of what sales system will be used on the local market this fall.

Local warehousemen yesterday afternoon voted unanimously to retain the time allotment system under which the Greenville market has operated for the past decade. The final decision on the sales system for 1952 came after several months consideration of the matter, and an intensive series of meetings during the past two weeks.

Under the selling system which will be continued on the Greenville market at least through the 1952 season, selling time is allotted each warehouse firm on the basis of the number of square feet of floor space it controls.

This season, however, in view of the large expansion of warehouse space on the Greenville market, a system is being worked out where warehouse firms with smaller floor space can rent selling time from the firms which control large blocks of floor space. The idea behind the arrangement is to assure each firm sufficient selling time for an efficient operation.

According to a report from the Greenville Warehousemen's Association, the larger warehouse firms will allot a specified percentage of their floor space and selling time into a pool, and firms with smaller floors will be able to rent selling time from the market pool.

Greenville warehousemen have given consideration to a change in the selling system on the local market because of the great increase in tobacco warehouse floor space which will be on the market this season. Last year warehouse floor space in Greenville totaled 1,400,000 square feet, but with a great surge of warehouse construction in the past several months, the local market this season is expected to have approximately 2,300,000 square feet of warehouse floor space.

At a meeting two weeks ago, Greenville warehousemen gave tentative approval to a resolution calling for a return to the block system of selling on the local market.

Shortly after the meeting in which the resolution was passed, warehousemen emphasized the resolution was only tentative, and at that time expressed the opinion that the resolution would be repealed.

The final action on the selling system for the 1952 season came during a three hour meeting of the Greenville Warehousemen's Association meeting yesterday.

NO RECORD SET SALISBURY N. C. (UP)—Doctors learned today that the 19 3-4-pound baby born to a Negro here yesterday failed to set a new weight record at Rowan Memorial Hospital. The record was still held by a 21 1-4-pound baby born two years ago—to the same mother.

Entire Economic Controls Bill May Be Reconsidered

Utilities Consider New Water Tank

Commission Discusses Possibility Of Buying Lot North Of River For Elevated Tank For Fire Protection

The Greenville Utilities Commission is tentatively considering the construction of an elevated water tank in north Greenville, "to insure adequate fire protection for that area."

At their regular meeting last night, members of the commission discussed the possibility of purchasing a lot north of Tar River so that when water mains are installed they will correspond to the present system when they are connected.

Utilities Secretary Larry Brown said the consensus of the commission was that the tank should be constructed. "It is designed to provide immediate and adequate pressure in case of a large fire in that vicinity," the secretary said. "Once a definite spot is selected, we can begin to install the correct size mains in the entire area." No action was taken on the proposal last night.

Insurance Coverage The commission also discussed the advisability of securing insurance coverage for business interruption. According to Brown, if something should happen to interrupt service at the utilities plant, income would fall off but overhead would continue. If the policy should be adopted and be in force at the time of the interruption, the commission could collect for the amount of revenue lost.

"If there should be an explosion at the plant, we are covered for the amount of damage," Brown explained.

Three MIGs Are Downed In Fight

On The Ground, Tempo Of Red Infantry Attacks Increases

SEOUL, Korea.—(AP)—U.S. Sabre jet pilots reported they shot down three Russian-built MIG-15 jet fighters today near Sinjuju on the Yalu River border between Korea and Manchuria.

The U. S. Fifth Air Force said the three were among seven that tangled with 12 Sabres of the Fourth Fighter-Interceptor Wing. Eighteen other MIGs were in the flight.

United Nations ground troops, using bayonets and grenades, beat back 200 Chinese Reds striking at a hill on the Korean Western Front.

A battalion of Reds—about 750 men—supported by heavy artillery fire had failed to win the position Tuesday.

An Eighth Army staff officer said 123 of the 200 attacking Chinese were killed in today's savage 50-minute fight near Chorwon.

The Reds broke and ran when the U. N. defenders hit over and called in Allied artillery.

About a mile away another Chinese attack was repulsed by infantrymen defending a hill wrested from the Reds Saturday.

The staff officer said the Chinese are stepping up their attacks along the Western and Central Fronts.

He said there was increasing evidence that the Communists are moving up more artillery along the 155-mile front.

During the 24 hours ended 6 p. m. Tuesday (4 a. m. Tuesday EST) the Reds fired 10,178 rounds into Allied positions, one of the heaviest concentrations of Red firepower since fall.

Poor weather hampered Allied air strikes.

Battle Losses WASHINGTON (UP)—Announced U. S. battle casualties in Korea reached 109,712 today, an increase of 553 since last week.

East German Police Tighten Up Security Measures On Border

FRANKFURT, Germany.—(AP)—Jackbooted Communist People's Police, apparently under orders to shoot first and ask questions later, tightened Red security screws all along the Iron Curtain in Germany from the Baltic to Bavaria today.

What was once a stream of refugees from the East Zone dwindled to a mere trickle. West German police said the whole border area seemed deserted, except for prowling patrols of the Communist Volkspolizei and their watchdogs.

Bavarian police said they have been notified they can claim the body of a West German farmer shot and killed Monday night by the East police. Two West German farmers apparently had stepped briefly across the border on their way home from a church festival. The Communist police fired without warning, killing one farmer. The other was arrested.

Senate Banking Committee Chairman Fights To Provide President With Steel Seizure Powers; Says Might As Well Let All Controls Lapse

WASHINGTON (UP)—Chairman Burnet R. Maybank said today he will try to send the entire economic controls bill back to his Senate Banking Committee unless the Senate gives President Truman seizure powers to deal with the steel strike.

The South Carolina Democrat, acting as floor manager for the legislation, asserted that Congress might as well let all economic controls lapse at the end of this month if it is going to deny Mr. Truman "effective" weapons to get steel production rolling again.

He made the statement to a reporter before the Senate took up a proposal by Sen. Wayne L. Morse (R-Or.) to authorize Mr. Truman to obtain an immediate anti-strike injunction and seize the steel industry for 60 days.

Acting Defense Mobilizer John R. Steelman announced meanwhile that he will call in union and management officials soon to make specific arrangements for reopening a limited number of plants to produce steel critically needed for the Korean war.

He emphasized, however, that the amount of steel involved will be "very small" and will not spare the civilian economy from "very serious" effects if the strike is prolonged.

To conserve already dwindling stockpiles, the government also banned exports of steel for manufacture of consumer goods.

Maybank said it would be "meaningless" for Congress to extend the Defense Production Act if it does not help to produce steel, the basic defense metal.

Recommending legislation to the committee which originated it is of little assistance to killing it, especially when there is an imminent deadline—in this case June 30—for action.

Maybank said he would offer a "compromise" seizure amendment of his own in a final attempt to arm the President with the emergency powers which he sought in an extraordinary personal appearance before a joint session of Congress yesterday.

Senate Democratic Leader Ernest McFarland admitted he was not optimistic in view of the top-heavy votes by which the Senate rejected the previous seizure proposals yesterday.

In a stinging rebuff to Mr. Truman, the chamber then proceeded to vote, 49 to 30, to "request" him to invoke the Taft-Hartley Act and obtain an anti-strike injunction against 650,000 CIO steelworkers who walked out 10 days ago.

White House sources said it was "extremely unlikely" that Mr. Truman would put Taft-Hartley machinery into motion on the basis of yesterday's Senate vote. They indicated the President was hopeful the Senate would reverse itself today, or the House might take a different view.

Mr. Truman told Congress that it would be "grossly unfair" to use the Taft-Hartley law against the steelworkers because they "voluntarily" postponed their strike for a longer period than the law could have compelled. But he noted that Congress could "direct" him to use it.

Capitol Square Wonders Who's Next On Governor's Purge List

RALEIGH (AP)—Capitol Square wondered today who will be next in Gov. Scott's purge of his appointees who backed William B. Umstead for governor.

"One or two more" resignations will be requested, Scott told reporters in Asheville yesterday. He declined to say who would get the requests. To date two officials have been dismissed and another asked to resign.

Meanwhile, an answer was awaited from Assistant Budget Director D. S. Coltrane whom the governor asked to resign last week. Coltrane has indicated his reply will be sent to Scott soon. It may be a refusal to quit, in effect an invitation for the governor to try to force him out.

Scott told Asheville reporters he hopes to issue a public statement this week giving his reasons for resigning Coltrane's resignation.

Masses of yellow daisies and white larkspur were used in various arrangements in the living room and den, where the guests gathered after serving their plates from the dining room table. On the table, which was covered with a white cloth, the centerpiece was a particularly lovely arrangement of yellow daisies interspersed with fever few and flanked by pairs of yellow tapers in single holders.

Guests served themselves from large platters of hors d'oeuvres, party sandwiches and sweets, then took their plates and found cool places on the porch and in the living room, where they enjoyed a conversational hour.

Friday Night Dance At Country Club For Couple

Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft Moseley were honored on last Friday night when Mrs. A. M. Moseley was hostess at a dance at the Greenville Country Club.

The club house was elaborately and beautifully decorated with profusions of summer cut flowers and garlands of greenery. The large refreshment table which was set up in front of one of the fireplaces was covered in green satin overlaid with a white lace cloth. Ropes of smilax outlined the edges of the table, and the centerpiece was a bouquet of pink anapdragons and white stock arranged in a silver punch bowl.

Five branched candelabra with white tapers were also used. Platters of hors d'oeuvres, party sandwiches, salted nuts and pastries were placed there for the pleasure of the dancers.

Two punch tables were placed at opposite ends of the room, from which Mrs. L. C. Skinner, Mrs. J. C. Butner, Mrs. Samuel Tilden White and Mrs. W. M. Scales, Sr. poured refreshing iced punch during the evening. Tall single candle holders with white tapers encircled with garlands of smilax were used as table appointments.

The individual tables on the sunporch were laid with white cloths and centered with small vases of cut summer flowers. Each mantle was banked with masses of pink and white gladioli and on either end were more white tapers. The archways and window frames were outlined with greenery, which was caught up at intervals with clumps of magnolia leaves.

Receiving at the door were Mrs. Moseley, Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft Moseley, Mrs. B. W. Moseley and Mrs. H. D. Bateman of Wilson, sister of the hostess.

Dancing was enjoyed during the evening with music furnished by a group of college musicians. More than 175 guests were invited.

NEW YORK (UP)—Three gunmen kidnaped a union official in an unsuccessful attempt to raid a safe containing $2,000 in union funds, police reported today.

Charles Siegel, 50, business agent of Local 1146 of the AFL Retail Clerks International Association, spent 16 hours in the hands of the kidnapers who seized him Monday afternoon on a New York street.

He was released unharmed early yesterday.

Siegel told police the gunmen took him to the union headquarters and asked him to open the safe containing the weekly dues collections. However, he did not have the safe's combination with him.

The kidnapers tried unsuccessfully to force open the safe and a pair of strong boxes in the office. They settled for $35 which they found in a petty cash drawer.

To Be Married Sunday

Miss Mary Hazel Shackelford is the daughter of Mrs. J. F. Shackelford of this city, who announces her engagement to Jerry L. McLawhorn, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. McLawhorn of Greenville. The wedding will take place at Mt. Pleasant Christian Church on the Belvoir highway on Sunday, June 15, at 4 p. m.

Mother of Mine—the coming generation will be singing about how they love the dear coral that streaks Mother's hair. Yet, we women are made, by the very nature of femininity, in such a way that we continue to try to improve our appearances. We spend money, time and effort to make ourselves more handsome, more attractive and better preserved—and that struggle for constant improvement of mind and physical appearance keeps us on a par with Ponce De Leon, ever pursuing the Fountain of perpetual youth and beauty. Vain? Yes! But the men have made us so.

Beauty Entries

Miss Anne Willis Smith, 20-year-old Greenville girl, has entered the Jaycee Beauty Pageant to be held in Greenville Thursday night. Sponsored by the Lions Club, she attended college for one year and is now employed in the Pitt County Register of Deeds office. She will present a song-routine for her talent display. Miss Smith is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin E. Smith, 311 East Third street, Ayden.

Impressions

By MARTHA S. FORBES

I wonder why some women—and men to, for that matter—dye their hair! Not many will admit to the practice. A few will rather archly tell you that they merely had a rinse applied at the last visit to the beauty parlor. But most people, though the evidence is prominently displayed, refuse to admit the fact that they slip a fast one over on Mother Nature.

In an equally simple fashion, so the ad read, the color could be brushed right out. Imagine, if you can, chateaux or magenta tresses, or the currently popular mauve shade done with feathery bangs or the more sophisticated upswept coiffure.

How well I remember the day that I discovered—or rather my husband discovered—the first gray strand in my own locks! For years he had been searching diligently for what is mistakenly taken as the first sign of advancing years, and on the occasion when he was rewarded in his quest by sighting, just at the hairline, a shimmering strand of silver, he shouted with glee. Now, what was I going to do about it, he wondered. Change my hair-do to a new part to cover up the tell-tale gray?

The thing that bothers me most about this business of refusing to let our crowns of glory age in the natural way is the loss of the meaning to the younger generation of such sentimental favorites as "When Your Hair Has Turned to Silver" or "Silver Threads Among the Gold." Instead of growing nostalgic with the lady was wearing at the moment.

An entry in the Jaycee Beauty Pageant is Miss Carrie Elizabeth Joyner, 26, of Greenville. She is sponsored by Greenville Jaycees and will play the piano for her talent presentation. A graduate of Snow Hill High School, Miss Joyner is currently employed by Moseley Electric Company. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Joyner, of Route 3, Snow Hill.

progress of the cooperative. President S. L. Dilda reviewed the plans for improvement and increased facilities, which are now in progress. Gwyn Price, chairman of the North Carolina Rural Electrification Authority, spoke on the part that rural electricity and telephones can play in production and better living on the farm. He praised the members for their active interest and participation in the affairs of their organization. G. Leslie Rucker, manager of the Edgecombe - Martin County Electric Membership Corporation of Tarboro, was also a guest at the meeting. Major Walter Jones of Farmville briefly reviewed the cooperative's early history and extended a hearty welcome to its members. The invocation was given by the Reverend E. S. Coates, pastor of the Farmville Presbyterian Church. Another feature of the meeting was an entertainment program.

Eddie Murphy of Wilson served as master of ceremonies and had a store of songs and imitations that pleased the audience. Johnnie Holland, pianist, gave several popular renditions and two vocalists, Ruby Earle Riggs of Wilson and Ora Mae Grant of Snow Hill, sang several popular songs. Approximately 35 prizes, ranging from vacuum cleaners to alarm clocks and other electrical appliances and merchandises, were given as attendance prizes.

Strength for the Day

BACK HOME AGAIN OUT IN FRONT... An old colored print we have of the battle of Princeton is quite amusing. The scene is one of soldiers marching and fighting in a field covered with snow...

Yet despite its obvious inaccuracies, the print is inspiring, for it shows us George Washington leading the attack in person. In today's complex warfare, there are good reasons why the highest command must be the furthest in the rear...

There is something appealing in it because most of us are better followers than leaders. We need direction and guidance. Perhaps our deep need for spiritual help is reflected in the ageless popularity of the Twenty-third Psalm: "The Lord is my shepherd"

We all should remember that our Good Shepherd is out in front also, ready to lead us in the same way.

Here Is One List Well Worth Checking

Pitt County farmers have a sizeable amount of money waiting for them in Raleigh at the office of the Stabilization Corporation.

For several days The Reflector has been carrying in installments the names of Pitt County farmers, and farmers in adjacent areas whose names appeared on the list of unclaimed checks which the Stabilization Corporation office is trying to get claimed.

The checks are for the 1947 tobacco crop, and they have been undelivered because the Raleigh office has not had the full addresses of the people to whom the checks belong. Some 400 names of Pitt County people appeared on the lists of names for unclaimed checks sent out by the Stabilization Corporation. Just how much money the checks will amount to altogether, we do not know, but doubtless it will run into thousands of dollars.

The Reflector urges Pitt farmers to watch its news pages from day to day to see if their names appear on the lists which are being printed as a public service to the farmers. The checks are waiting in Raleigh, and this newspaper wants the Pitt farmers to get the money that is still coming to them for their 1947 tobacco crop.

How Do We Really Stand Militarily In Korea?

To say the least there is a great deal of confusion if not controversy among the top military brass of the United States over the ability of the United Nations to throw back a Communist offensive in Korea.

If the situation is as much in doubt as recent statements by military men would indicate, the United States had better get down to brass tacks and know exactly where we stand in Korea.

General James A. Van Fleet in a statement virtually dared the Communist forces to attack U. N. positions, adding that the Communists would be soundly defeated if they did so. His statement was backed up by a similar statement of confidence by Secretary of the Army Frank Pace.

On the other hand, recent military reports say the Communist troops in Korea outnumber the U. N. forces two to one, and in addition the Communists hold the upper hand in artillery and mechanized power as well as in air power. Major General Daniel H. Hudson, commander of the 40th Infantry Division, this week asserted flatly that the U. N. forces in Korea could not withstand a full scale Communist offensive.

For two years United Nations forces have been committed to the misnamed "police action" in Korea, and if the U. N. forces are there to do the job for which they were committed in the first place, they should be given the manpower and the firepower they need for the job.

The American people do not want American units ripped to pieces and pushed toward the sea again like they were in late 1950. Too long and too often have we played into the hands of the Communists in Korea while they made the most of having a sizeable amount of the free world's military might tied up in Korea.

The U. N. forces there are by no means expendable. They should have the strength to wage an offensive. By no means should there be any doubt that they can hold their own against a Communist offensive.

An Acid Test Proved Favorable

A great many mistakes have been made by the United States and other Western nations in their administration of the Western sector of Berlin and in Western Germany as a whole. But when it comes to a choice between the East and the West in Germany, it appears that the people by far prefer the West.

Of course there have been rumors that the people in Western Germany and Western Berlin would sooner or later sell out to Communists if they had an opportunity. Yet recent developments in Berlin point decidedly in the other direction.

As the Russians moved to seal off their sector of Germany's capital, there were literally thousands of German youths who risked their lives to cross over into the Western sector to avoid being trapped permanently behind the Iron Curtain.

The Russians, by their moves in setting up a no-man's land and other measures, have been making it appear that sides were being drawn among the German people to support the West or the East in actual conflict. In the face of such a possibility, the youths of East Berlin have flocked to the Western sector. They have lived under the Russian heel in the Eastern part of the city, but when the showdown became imminent, they chose to side with the free nations rather than Communism.

In spite of propaganda to the contrary, perhaps the German people who have the slightest chance to make a choice are sold on the Western philosophy rather than communism.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON, June 11—Dean Acheson was only technically correct when he assured worried Congressional inquirers that he had given no secret or unrecorded pledges to Britain, France and Germany in connection with the recent pact making the former enemy nation a member of the European defense community.

The fact is that he entered into commitments at Bonn which virtually scrap the "four freedoms" promises incorporated in the Atlantic Charter by Roosevelt and Churchill. The Truman Administration has finally beaten a retreat from the distant democratic frontiers staked out by those two international surveyors.

It is not too much to say that, as a result of this unpublicized action, the United States has made a major revision of foreign policy. Acheson's failure to explain its significance on Capitol Hill is puzzling, for it would undoubtedly command the support of a majority of the legislators in both House and Senate.

LESSONS Based on bitter lessons learned when Washington effected the immediate establishment of Israel and Indonesia as free states, this country will no longer browbeat its strongest European allies into dismembering and weakening their overseas empires for ideological reasons.

We will not continue to insist that independence be granted to colonies and protectorates when the mere desire for freedom is not buttressed by the basic qualifications for self-government—political, economic, cultural, etc.

UNREST Roosevelt-Truman intervention on behalf of Indonesian independence forced the Netherlands to cast off those islands when they were not prepared for it. It helped to light the fires of communist rebellion in the Far East, especially in China.

Truman's pressure on behalf of Israel has created similar unrest in the Middle East. Far from making friends in those strategic areas, our well-meant action has made them susceptible to Russian infiltration and conquest.

The Chinese and Arabs, once our historic friends, now doubt and distrust us. Even our generous treatment of The Philippines and Japan seems to be bucking.

DISCOVERY What Acheson has done is to abandon or modify the crusading "make the world safe for democracy" spirit which, despite its noble and high-principled purpose, has not worked out well in practice.

Washington has now made the belated but realistic discovery that politicians cannot play the role of a globe-encircling deity. It has begun to substitute fact for fancy in foreign policy.

Our secretary of state, for instance, informed Paris that the United States would support the French war against Tunisia's insistence on more self-rule. With a population that is more than 80 per cent illiterate, and with no experience in government, Tunisia is obviously not ready to go it alone.

Moreover, we have air bases there that may be essential in the Mediterranean sector of a future global war.

HANDS-OFF Acheson likewise told the British that we would pursue a hands-off policy in England's dispute with Egypt over future control of the Sudan. Washington will also continue to pressure American oil companies into providing no markets for Iranian petroleum, hoping that this economic boycott will force a prompt settlement on London's terms. In short, we will back Britain globally.

French and British statesmen submitted an almost unanswerable argument in advocating a change in our gregarious championship of the Roosevelt-Churchill charter and Woodrow Wilson's theory of the "self-determination" of peoples.

They simply asked how Washington expected them to support us in Korea and in the "cold war," while we demanded that they divest themselves of overseas outposts of democracy.

Even Acheson had to smile and surrender at that threat.

GUARANTEES The expansion of an American president's diplomatic powers resulting from our membership in the United Nations enabled Acheson to Hill without subjecting himself to the charge of provocation, deception or suppression.

These guarantees on Tunisia and Egypt were not written into the pacts or treaties. Acheson simply assumed Eden and Schuman that the United States would vote against consideration of the Africans' protests and complaints whenever they were presented to the international body.

He also agreed to line up the so-called American bloc in that organization on the side of London and Paris. In that way any serious discussion or examination of the colonial claims can be pigeonholed more or less permanently.

Not even the Bricker resolution which has the backing of 56 other senators, can negate or prevent this kind of diplomatic operations. The Ohioan's proposed constitutional amendment simply provides that U. N. agreements and other treaties shall not override existing federal or state laws.

Who's On Top Today?

Somebody Told Me

By L. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

"Last night I left a meeting of the Army Reserves and dropped by Austin Auditorium of East Carolina College at almost ten o'clock to see if the contestants were still rehearsing for the Miss America Beauty Pageant tomorrow night. Of the 11 contestants, five were still there.

If I have ever told you the truth, I'm saying when I emphasize that this Pageant tomorrow night will be the finest ever held in Greenville. The customers will get their money's worth from several angles:

- (1) They will view the girls in bathing suits. (2) Then in evening dresses. (3) And then they will be entertained by each of the 11 contestants with a performance of talent.

In my opinion, the pageant will be outstanding because of the talent. If you could have been with me at Austin Auditorium last night you would have seen a sample of the show that will be yours for $1 tomorrow night. For an additional 50 cents, you can enjoy the dance after the pageant.

There is another angle to this thing that cannot be overlooked. Every cent of profit that the Junior Chamber of Commerce makes on this Pageant will go for the erection of a recreation building at Elm Street Park. The J.C.'s are investing over $600 in the show, so there will have to be a good turnout to insure profit. The winning contestant will receive a $250 prize, and the dance band's fee will run up to the hundreds.

The five girls on hand last night were hot and haggard from over two hours of rehearsal. Even at that, they looked good. I still have a few tickets left if you'll hurry!

Janice Roberson of Bethel, 18-year-old East Carolina junior, is still undecided what she will offer as a talent show. "I might dance, sing, or play the piano." While warming up, Janice's range on the piano varied from boogie-woogie to the semi-classics, so you can see that there is a wide range for her to pick from.

When I started interviewing Pauline Dupree from Belvoir I immediately recognized her as a contestant in the Farmer's Day Beauty Contest last year. Pauline came in third in that contest, and at the time I quoted her as saying that she works for the State Bank and plans to make banking her career. My side comment still holds: She'll make somebody a pretty wife.

Ann Smith of Ayden, 20-year-old Court House employee, had finished her routine when I arrived. She plans to sing "Through the Years" and "Without a Sing." Olema Grant of Snow Hill is a girl with the Katherine Grayson type of voice. She plans to sing "Make Believe" and "Indian Love Call."

Carrie Joyner, also one of the contestants, was full of praise for the rest. While telling me how good the others are, Carrie was making a good show herself, on the piano, rendering "Waiting for the Robert E. Lee" and "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now?"

It's going to be a great show, and if you rush I'll sell you a ticket. And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

By LYNN NISBET

NO CANDIDATE Chances are the fifth congressional district will not have a Republican candidate for Congress in the November election. The state board of elections in secret session Monday voided the filing of W. Forrest Bedell of Reidsville, rescinded the certificate of nomination previously issued to him, and authorized return of his filing fee. The certification of his unopposed nomination as the candidate of the Republican party was based upon an affidavit made before the books closed that he was a registered Republican and his further oath that he would support all nominees of the Republican party. It later developed that Bedell is registered as a Democrat and in a different precinct from his present residence. Admitting extenuating circumstances and showing of honest intent to have the registration changed, the board took the attorney general's opinion that it could not go back on the record contained in the registration books of Rockingham county.

FILL-IN When the discrepancy was noted subsequent to close of filing time, the Republican committee in the district asked for permission to select a candidate under the law providing for filling vacancies occurring on the party ticket after the primary. The elections board took the position that the question of another candidate was not before it at this time, and advised the Republicans in the district that the matter will be considered when a nominee is presented for certification. However, the attorney general has indicated his opinion that the "fill-in" provisions are not applicable, for that the vacancy did not occur after close of filing time but had existed all along that it was not caused by resignation or disqualification of a "candidate" because the Bedell filing being voided there was no candidate to resign or be disqualified. Prediction is that opinion will prevail, but the matter will almost certainly be formally presented to the state board of elections at its next meeting, scheduled to be held on July 7.

SECRET The state board of elections met Monday in the hall of the house of representatives to canvass and certify returns of the May 31 primary. The returns were read in public and approved by unanimous vote and signed by every member of the board. The Bedell matter was presented and discussed in public, but the board retired to a closed room for its own discussion and returned to announce the decision. No individual statement or vote or the position of any member could be learned. As soon as the verdict in that case was announced, Chairman Charles M. Britt stated he had considered several other matters to be considered in executive session, and the board again went into seclusion. It is inherent in the nature of some problems coming before the board of elections that they should be considered in executive session, but closed meetings have been the rule rather than the exception during the tenure of the present chairman.

REPRIMANDS During the casual informal conversation before the board was called to order two members were given good natured reprimands for failure to bring along some gifts for their fellow members. The other fellows thought Harry Ferebee of Camden, from the heart of the white potato country, might have tendered a few specimens of the scarce spuds, and that Eugene Snyder of Lexington, who is general counsel for Coble Dairy Products, could have brought some ice cream to help cool off his associates. Both culprits promise to do better next time—maybe.

TELEVISION Fred Burns, operator of Boxwood Motor Courts at Morganton, is installing coin-motivated television sets in 10 rooms at his place. Most hotels and many motor courts have TV sets in the lobby, but this is believed to be the first venture in motor court rooms service TV in this state. It represents another long forward step in the rapid evolution of the old "tourist camp" with a few unsanitary cabins and questionable reputation to its modern establishments with air-conditioning, tiled baths, room telephones, radio and now television.

RESIGNATION The famous letters around Capitol Square are going both ways. Governor Scott is sending out the ones that really count, but some of his appointees to lesser positions are offering their resignations. A few of

What Other Papers Are Thinking

GOVERNMENT-PAID WAGES (W'son Times)

We're amazed at some of the reasoning of the President in the steel case. For example, the industry absorbed it bulk of the increases for the steel workers. It would in actuality pay something more than half of that increase. It wouldn't exactly be a subsidy, because the companies with reduced earnings would have reduced taxes; but it represents a new approach because what the government would lose in that way would have to be made up through increased taxes elsewhere. What it would in effect do would be to transfer money from two tills, the government's and the steel mills', to the pockets of the workers. It's not likely that the President ever thought of that. For in his handling of the situation he was so palpably political that he gave little else any thought. But it does establish a new philosophy, that as a prove dangerous as the cars roll by. For it means that no man's bank account is safe if he gets into a dispute with labor. Not only can the government seize what you own, but your bank account as well, using your funds to satisfy labor. It most assuredly, if upheld, marks a departure from the traditional American customs as they've been followed from the beginning of time. Much of what the President has talked about in the controversy has been pure sophistry. Without considering but one side, he has handled the situation in such a way as to make one look like saints and the other sinners. But this, it would seem to us, is the greatest issue that's arisen in the last century. In dealing with it we should deal with facts not one-sided labor versions. That so far the President hasn't done so, he has suggested that the government, through reduced taxes, make up part of the wage increases. If he succeeds, he has established a new philosophy of government?

By ELMER ROESNER The post-freeze television boom is on — in secret. When the Federal Communications Commission announced the end of the freeze on new station applications on April 13, a rush of applications was expected. It didn't materialize. The reason is simple: The FCC announced that it would not begin processing applications until July 1. So those planning and promoting new stations are waiting until the last few hours. They are taking time to buttress their claims for channels and to get a line on the competition.

Meanwhile activities are intense. Would-be station owners are raising money, drawing up papers, negotiating with other claimants and taking options on sites. At the same time, the manufacturing companies are working overtime on the construction of transmitters and other equipment. And, not too strangely, they are selling them.

Many of the organizations planning to seek licenses are acquiring equipment. They figure that between two applicants, all other things being equal, the one that can go on the air soonest has the best chance for the nod. And the risk is small. If the applicant fails to get a license, it has a good chance of selling the equipment to a successful petitioner.

All of the manufacturing companies are reported to be making heavy sales. Total volume is said to be close to what it would be if licenses were being passed out freely in Washington today. The manufacturers, knowing that the freeze would end eventually, have been busy constructing and warehousing transmitters.

Typical is the experience of Du Mont, which reports that deliveries of transmitters is up 300 per cent and sales up 180 per cent. In the two weeks before the end of the freeze, the company received a total of $5,500,000 in orders.

In the last two weeks, a transmitter was shipped to Peoria, Ill., another is about to be shipped to Waterloo, Iowa, and orders were booked for transmitters in Decatur, Ill.; Zanesville, Ohio, and Tulsa, Calif.

Unless the FCC can solve faster than expected the intricate problems involved in licensing only a handful of new stations will get on the air this year, but several hundred may start signals in 1953 and more in the succeeding years until around 2,200 are on the air. Each license will bring a small local boom. TV dealers and service men, furniture dealers, advertising media, coaching schools, real estate men, insurers, consumer credit granters and scores of other businesses will gain from the stimulated business activity.

FCC DOESN'T LICENSE TV SERVICE FIRMS The Federal Communications Commission is warning the public against radio and television service companies that advertise themselves as "licensed by the FCC." The FCC doesn't license service firms.

A FEDERAL LOTTERY Oscar L. Chapman, Secretary of the Interior, in warning against those offers of 40-acre government oil leases for $100 or $200, pointed out that any citizen can file his own application for $30. But, he warns, the chances of finding oil or gas are pretty slim.

In short, it is a gamble. But don't expect Mr. Chapman to toddle over to the office of John W. Snyder, Treasury Secretary, and pay $50 for a gambler's tax stamp. It's Uncle Sam, not Mr. Chapman, that is running this lottery.

SMALL AUTO DEALERS NOT PROSPERING A survey by the National Automobile Dealers Association indicates that one out of every four dealers lost money during the first three months of the year. The average profit of all dealers was 2 per cent of sales before taxes, the survey showed.

Worst sufferers were the small dealers selling less than 150 cars a year. One third of them reported they were in the red.

TIES ON SALESMEN FOUNDATION URGES Men's wear salesmen who fail to wear ties this summer, even on hottest days, will be spoken to sharply by their bosses, the Men's Tie Foundation hopes.

The foundation has launched a three-month promotion campaign to increase tie wearing. Hence sales, in summer. The promotion calls upon retailers to discourage employees from going tie-less. It is also calling on retailers to offer better tie selections.

If salesmen's examples are a potent force, it looks as if each retailer would have to choose between the sales and sport shirt sales.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK — (AP) — Weekend guest is pictured as a man many a summer paradise. People who own a small place in the country love to trade horror tales about the weird guests who descend upon them from the city in quest of tax-free entertainment.

They often speak of these visitors as if they were a ravenous locust plague. The average weekend guest is pictured as a man who—

- (A) Leaves his footprints on the bathtub and walls; (B) Tries to kiss the host's wife behind his back; (C) Keeps tramping on his host's children, and not always accidentally; (D) Laps up the host's entire monthly liquor supply, then makes long distance calls to friends in London and Paris, leaving the charges for his host to pay.

But it always has seemed to me this is a one-sided story. All rural hosts agree there is no such thing as a perfect weekend guest. On the other hand, it isn't exactly easy to find a perfect weekend host.

It might be a good idea if long-suffering weekend guests banished together and got some Duncan Hines or Emily Post to protect them. Why not put up signs before country homes rating the owners? For example, "Host strongly recommended but wife is terrible gossip" or "Food okay, but host is terrible bore." Or "Guest beware—Bring your own sandwiches." Or even, "Run for life."

Guests who are invited to spend "a quiet restful weekend away from it all" must learn by trial and error now that a host in the suburbs isn't always the same fellow he seemed in the city. Here are a few standard types, recognizable to all veteran guests:

- 1. The slave labor host. He shows up wearing overalls and carrying a trowel. All he wants you to do is help him build a garage and a 100-foot winding concrete driveway between Friday and Sunday evening. 2. The keep-fit host. Every morning before dawn he barges into your room saying, "If we hurry we can get in five sets of tennis before noon. That'll leave us plenty of time to play softball with the kids, and then we can go nose-back riding." What does he care if you drop dead? 3. The ain't-nature-grand host. This husky boy has to have every meal outdoors. The mosquitoes eat you as you try to eat a barbecued hog trot that looks like a burned clothes pin. The salad he made with lettuce from his own garden also turns out to have a few sprigs of poison ivy in it. 4. The everflowing bottle host. He shows up at the station with baggy eyes. You just know he has poured a gallon of gin into his swimming pool, because he can't even take a dip into the water unless it has a Martini flavor. 5. The make-a-profit host. The first thing he does is set up a card table, and he and his wife play bridge together like Hal Boyle and Mrs. Boyle. If they don't win enough off you to buy a sailboat, this week end is ruined and you are a bum. There is still another true of host, the kind that guests dream about but never meet. He is the perfect host. When you arrive, he hands you the keys to his house and car. Then he packs up his wife and kids, calls a taxi, drives away—and doesn't come back until Tuesday, by which time you, natura y have gone, refreshed, rested, and happy after a wonderful end alone.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON — There are no days off in the life of Mrs. Arthur MacArthur. Sundays she works harder than ever. For the past five years Mrs. MacArthur, wife of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, has not missed a Sabbath volunteering her services at the Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Airmen's Club for enlisted men in downtown Washington. The club, a non-profit hotel, is the only one of its kind in the world. Mrs. MacArthur told me it is maintained and operated by the Woman's Army and Navy League — wives, mothers, daughters and sisters of commissioned officers of all branches of the Armed Forces — and has been in continuous existence since 1899.

Mrs. MacArthur's husband was the late Capt. MacArthur U.S.N. She inherited a life membership in the league in 1917 from her mother, who, as the wife of the late Adm. Bowman McCalla, was one of its founders.

An early rise, Mrs. MacArthur is "on deck" at the home-like clubhouse at 7 a.m. Sundays and was manning the cashier's desk when I talked with her. Her eager assistants are teenage "Janglees," members of the Junior Army Navy Guild Organization, which Mrs. MacArthur helped to set up 10 years ago. During World War II the club buildings were redecorated and enlarged to take care of the 5,000 or more men who came there every month. In the peak war year of 1943 more than 45,000 paying only $1 a night, were lodged at the club, where they get home-cooked meals, can read books from the well-stocked library, write letters, play pool or just relax. During the winter the Army, Navy, Marine and Air Force bands play at club dances. Service daughters volunteer as partners. They also serve as waitresses.

"It's awfully worthwhile," Mrs. MacArthur told me. "On Sundays we usually take care of as many as 150 to 200 boys, and we're always getting wonderful letters from them from far corners of the world after they leave." In the world after they work at the club, Mrs. MacArthur, a slender, sweet-faced lady of great charm, has served as a Grey Lady at Bethesda Naval Hospital every Monday for the past 22 years. She is also on the board of the House Of Mercy here.

"I love my work even though it leaves me little time for anything else," she said. "But in any free time I have I have a lot of fun too, getting in a game of golf or playing bridge with my friends." Mrs. MacArthur lives at the Chevy Chase club and gets about to her various posts by automobile. "I couldn't live without my car," she said.

Safety Habits Can Be Taught Young Children

By DAVID TAYLOR MARKE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

As parents you face the problem of how to prevent children doing many things which endanger life and limbs.

Reports of dangerous behavior read like a nightmare. The children run in front of speeding autos, fall from bicycles, and break all traffic-safety rules. They play with matches and set the house on fire. They swallow poisons and poke scissors into electric outlets. They break their own bones and nearly blind other children. They run grave risks while throwing stones and snowballs, climbing roofs, swimming, playing ball and shooting BB guns.

There is a gleam of hope in the situation say the noted psychologists and educational consultants. Dr. Norma E. Cutts and Nicholas Moseley in their forthcoming book, "Better Home Discipline," (Appleton-Century-Crofts, N. Y.) they point out "you can teach children to avoid accidents."

While your children are too young to take care of themselves don't leave them out of doors alone except in a screened porch, a play pen, or a fenced yard, they say. Make doubly sure that the child cannot get out by climbing a barricade or by lifting a latch.

Another precaution to take is not to trust young children to the care of slightly older sisters or brothers, they say.

A third precaution is to keep alert when you are walking with a child. Do not lose yourself in conversation with a friend or in window shopping.

Above all, they say, give the young child all the safe experience you can. "Many parents put young children to harness and take them walking. The other day we saw a mother 'driving' her sons, 3 and 4, in double harness. They pranced along like a prize team. She hauled them up at red lights, guided them away from the curb, and in general gave them a lesson on how to behave in traffic. . . .

"Practice of this kind starts a child with the right ideas about walking on the sidewalk and watching for lights to change. Soon he will step out as though he were on his own. But keep hold of him and concentrate your attention on him. By 4 he will wish to walk without even holding your hand, and may be rebellious. Don't yield yet."

"At 5 most children are capable of following a carefully worked-out route to and from kindergarten." But even at this age before you let a child go alone on a route, go over it with him. Have him tell you about which crossings to use, about lights, and about looking both ways.

Burns, point out the authors, are another cause most frequently found among accidental deaths. Telling a child a match will burn him or even allowing him to get burned is no sure way of preventing him from playing with fire, they say. Better still, keep all matches where children can't get at them. And that goes, too, for poisons.

Here are some precautions to take, according to the authors:

1. Keep all poisons, including sleeping pills, locked up in a special place.
2. Keep pot handles turned to the back for the stove.
3. Consider safety when making purchases. If you are buying a stove, buy one that lights automatically. If you are buying lamps or appliances, be sure they bear the label "UL," showing the Underwriters Laboratories have approved them.
4. Do not leave young children alone with sharp tools, or with any metal tool in a room that has electrical outlets.

5. Have a group inspection — by husband, wife, and children — of the whole house and see who can point out the greatest number of dangers and the best ways to eliminate them. Your insurance company will be glad to send you a pamphlet telling you what to look for.

Training a child to live in a world full of hazards requires courage and some common-sense precautions, the authors say. Have definite rules, but keep them to a minimum; set a good example in observing common-sense rules of safety in the home and out; join with other parents to study safety in the home and street; keep first-aid materials on hand and your knowledge of first-aid up to date; finally, keep clearly in mind the child's capacity to understand dangers and to assume responsibilities.

X-Ray Programs Prove Value In War Against TB

CHICAGO — (UP) Mass chest X-ray programs have proved of positive value in the fight against tuberculosis, according to a high-ranking officer of the U. S. Public Health Service.

Dr. Robert J. Anderson of Washington, medical director and chief of the division of chronic disease and tuberculosis, evaluated the X-ray programs in an article in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Anderson said such surveys also have aided in the discovery of other chest conditions such as tumors, cancer, and heart and blood vessel abnormalities.

He based his evaluation on the results of four years of participation by the U. S. Public Health Service in 14 community-wide chest X-ray surveys, during which more than 5,500,000 persons over 15 years of age were examined throughout the country.

Sonny Russell Is Named Manager Of Greenies; Play Ormondsville Here

The Sport Reflector

By MELVIN LANG

The Coastal Plain League took the field tonight against Ormondsville in a Bright Belt League game. They will be playing under a new manager.

Greenies officials announced this morning that former manager Bill Sweel of Washington had asked to be relieved, and that he would be replaced by firstbaseman Sonny Russell.

Sweel, who has led the team since the opening of the Bright Belt season, asked for his release because of scholastic difficulty. The Washington High athletic director is attending summer school at East Carolina College, and the double burden was beginning to be too much.

This is Russell's first fling at trying his hand as a manager, although he has played ball for several years. He was a regular on the East Carolina squad in 1951, and has played with the Greenies all year, either at first or second base. He is leading the Kiwanis team in the Little League at the present time.

Sweel will remain as an assistant to Russell, coming out to the games from time to time. He will be present for tonight's game, but it will be Russell's show.

Russell, all-conference basketball player for ECC, will have Franklin, Va., Sunday afternoon. The local Jaycees will sponsor a horse show later on this season, and it would be a good opportunity for the people who have never seen or known very much about this phase of horse-life to go out and see it. The exact date for the show will be announced later.

Local baseball fans will have another opportunity to show their spirit tonight, when Greenville plays host to Ormondsville out at Guy Smith Stadium in a Bright Belt League contest.

The attendance, as has been repeated so often in this column, have been woefully weak at home games. It's almost a wonder that the team has not folded before this, and unless something is done about it by the paying fans, Greenville will probably be without a ball club of any variety before the season is over.

Even if you do not like semi-pro baseball, go out to see the game. Just for the sake of keeping baseball of some sort in Greenville, if for no other reason.

Jaycees Win Last Game On First Half Schedule

A 3-1 victory for the Jaycees over the Exchange brought the first half of the 1952 Little League schedule to a close yesterday afternoon.

Two runs in the top of the third inning won the ball game for the Jaycees. After Jasper Tripp was retired on a flyout to centerfield, John Wesley Hudson walked and advanced to second on a passed ball. Dick Nobles fanned for the second out, but Walker Lee Allen walked to put men on first and second.

Third baseman Kluis Fisher then unlimbered a long double to score both runners and put himself on third base. Pitcher Arthur Andrews ended the inning by flying out to the pitcher.

Andrews hurled the entire game for the winners. He limited the losers to but two hits, both singles.

Snead, Mangrum Set For National

DALLAS, Tex. (UP)—Slammin' Sammy Snead and Lloyd Mangrum sounded shrill warms; challenges today to Ben Hogan's stranglehold on the National Open golf title.

Snead, a PGA titleholder who's flirited with the Open crown on numerous occasions without making it a date, steamed around Northw 1 Club's heralded 6,784-yard par 35-35 layout in a bristling, 31-64 under a broiling sun yesterday.

Yet he was so mad when he finished he refused to discuss his round although it equalled the course. A bogey five on the last hole aroused his ire.

He missed a three-foot putt after almost holing out a 40-foot chip shot.

Meanwhile, Mangrum, with an eye to overhauling Jackie Burke as the season's top money winner, stamped himself as a prime contender by breezing around in a 68—the only other sub-par practice round reported.

Turpin Waits For Unknown Fighter

LONDON—(UP)—Handy Turpin who now owns four boxing titles in two weight divisions, rested on his laurels today waiting to see who will fight him for a world championship.

The 24-year-old Negro crashed into the light-heavyweight ranks last night with a brilliantly executed 11-round knockout of Don Cockell.

The well-earned victory gave him Cockell's British national and British Empire 175-pound crowns to go with the English and European middleweight titles he already owns.

Sugar Ray Robinson, the world middleweight king, meets Joey Maxim, the light heavyweight champ, for Maxim's title in New York June 25.

Jack Solomons, who promoted last night's show, hopes to line up the Maxim-Robinson winner for a London bout with Turpin.

Comisky Back At Chicago Position

CHICAGO (UP)—Charles A. (Chuck) Comisky, who said "I'm through for good" only five months ago, was back at his old vice president's job with the Chicago White Sox today—at the same salary.

The 26-year-old grandson and namesake of the "Old Roman" who founded the Sox thus ended the angry tangle that took him all the way to Dallas, Tex., and a job with the now defunct Liberty Broadcasting System.

But the bitterness that flashed during his dispute with his family at the time of his departure appeared to be gone today.

"I'm very happy to be back with the ball club," he said. "I am glad to get back into the White Sox organization and will a ball club that is good as the White Sox are."

Yankees Take First Place As Brownies Beat Red Sox

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (UP)—Like freed slaves — with whom they compared themselves — the St. Louis Browns started their new manager, Marty Marion, off with a key victory over the Boston Red Sox today, a victory that was the labor of love.

The Browns were so glad to be rid of Manager Rogers Hornsby that they presented a trophy to owner Bill Veeck, describing his firing of the old Rajah as "the greatest play since the Emancipation Proclamation."

Then they went out and showed that they would give out with spirit and hustle for Marion by knocking the Red Sox out of first place with a 7 to 4 triumph.

Homers by Bobby Young and Bob Nieman gave Ned Garver an early lead and, when he faltered later, the unbelievable Satchel Paige came in and pitched three-hit scoreless ball the rest of the way to protect Garver's third victory.

George Kell hit a Boston homer. The defeat of the Red Sox, coupled with Ed Lopat's gorgeous four-hit, 4-0 shutout of the Detroit Tigers at New York, put the Yankees in first place for the first time this year — by three percentage points.

Yoggi Berra delivered three of the Yankee runs with a pair of booming homers as Lopat breezed to his third victory, giving only two walks and striking out five. A homer by Larry Doby gave Cleveland a 4 to 3 triumph at Washington, moving the Indians into second place ahead of Boston.

At Philadelphia the Chicago White Sox went hit crazy with a 12-run rally in the fourth that gave them a 15 to 4 victory over the Athletics.

Sam Mele equaled a modern record by batting in six runs in the big inning with a homer and a triple.

In the National League, the St. Louis Cardinals broke an eight-game Brooklyn winning streak with a 1 to 0, 10-inning victory, but the second place New York Giants missed a chance to gain and remained five games behind when they blew a 14-inning, 6 to 5 decision at Cincinnati.

The third place Chicago Cubs moved to within one game of the skidding Giants by bouncing the Philadelphia Phils, 10 to 5, and the Pittsburgh Pirates topped the Boston Braves, 7 to 5.

Early Wynn, with ninth inning relief help, gained his seventh victory. Doby's homer and three hits by Harry Simpson, one of them a double, highlighted the Cleveland attack.

Mele gained his six RBIs on a three-run homer and a three-run triple. Hector Rodriguez also hit a three-run home and Al Zarilla connected with a two-run route clout in the rout. Chicago made 16 hits.

A triple by Red Schoendienst, after pitcher Chris Van Cuyk nicked Solly Hemus with a pitched ball, gave little Joe Presko a five-hit Cardinal triumph over Van Cuyk, who yielded but six.

The Reds scored the winning run in the longest National League game of the season when Bob Borowski, Bobby Adams and Grady Hatton put together singles. Big Frank Smith pitched scoreless relief ball from the ninth on to gain the victory. Bob Elliott hit a giant homer.

Lefty Paul Minter pitched eight hit ball and contributed a homer as Hank Sauer also got a homer, his 15th, in Chicago's easy triumph over the Phils. Stan Lopata hit a Philly homer.

Pittsburgh, piling up a 6 to 0 lead in the first two innings as George Strickland and Pete Castiglione sparked the run-making with homers, went on to break Lefty Warren Spahn's five-game winning streak. Ted Wilks, who came to the rescue in the fifth, pitched scoreless two-hit ball the rest of the way to gain his third victory. Ralph Kiner hit his ninth homer for Pittsburgh.

NEWS FOR GIANT'S FOES
NEW YORK (AP) — It's bad news for NFL foes of the New York Giants. Arnie Weinmeister, All-Pro tackle, has signed for his third year with the club. The 29-year old, 235-pound Weinmeister is captain of the formidable Giant defensive line.

Lightweight Leader . . . . . by Pap'

Lauro Salas' surprise victory over Jimmy Carter to win the lightweight title sent the experts scurrying in every direction for background material on the new champion. Salas was even more of an "unknown" than was Carter when he knocked out Ike Williams to take the 135-pound crown about a year ago. The Mexican-born Salas had done most of his fighting on the West Coast and boasted an unimpressive record marred by 20 defeats. He had been beaten on two occasions by Featherweight champion Sandy Scudder.

Salas is the first Mexican to own a clear-out title to the lightweight championship. Juan Zurita won the National Boxing Association's version of the 135-pound championship when he beat Sammy Angott but the title was not universally recognized. He lost the crown to Ike Williams.

Actually, Salas is little more than an overstuffed featherweight. For Carter, he was built up to 131 pounds. For all his slight build, Salas has an unlimited fund of stamina, a fiery attitude and a pretty good punch. He is 24 years old and the son of a Mexican railroad laborer. The turning point in his career came when he gave Art Aragon a terrific battle in March. He earned his shot at the title when he dropped Carter to the Canvas in the fifteenth round while dropping the decision in a previous meeting.

Irish Bob Fights Jake LaMotta In Detroit Tonight

DETROIT (UP)—If fans pack Olympia Stadium for tonight's Irish Bob Murphy-Jake LaMotta fight, it will be for one reason only: To see a slam-bang bar-room type brawl between two guys who like to mix it.

The International Boxing Club says the winner will get a shot at the light-heavyweight title, which may or may not pan out. That prospect may lure a few additional fans into the indoor sports palace on a warm night.

But the prospect of a real return hassle between LaMotta, Detroit's adopted son, and the man who shredded his face in their only previous meeting is much more alluring to Detroit fans blacked out from a nation-wide telecast.

No doubt about it, the bout is an important one to both fighters. LaMotta, dethroned middleweight king, has outgrown that weight class and needs to get by Murphy to go very far in the light-heavy division. Irish Bob, beaten badly by Joey Maxim, light-heavy champion, after he TKO'd LaMotta almost a year ago, would drop way back down the comeback trail on a reversal by Jake.

Murphy, the southpaw ex-sailor from San Diego, is rated a 7-5 favorite. LaMotta is expected to give Murphy about eight pounds—168 to 176.

Inside Story Of The Rajah

Editors Note: Baseball writer Milton Richman, who covered the Western-based teams in spring training, swung East with the Browns before the start of the major league season. Here is his inside story on the Rogers Hornsby regime.)

By MILTON RICHMAN
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (UP)—Hate is a strong word. . . . But St. Louis Browns players used it every day to express their feeling for hard-bitten Rogers Hornsby.

They detested him thoroughly—so much that they even avoided sitting near him on the bench. "Look at him standing there by himself," pitcher Gene Bearden said one night in a railroad station. "It's no wonder. He doesn't have a friend in the world and he doesn't deserve one."

On another occasion, outfielder George Schmees volunteered, "I would have gone to the end of the earth for that man (Hornsby) because he gave me my chance to play in the majors, but now that I know him, I wouldn't go to his funeral."

When Hornsby brought the Browns to Beaumont, Tex., for an exhibition game last spring, the city's reception was cool even though he had won a pennant there in 1950.

"Baseball's Grizzled Grinch returns to Beaumont Today," one newspaper headline said.

Beaumont fans had remembered when they chipped in to buy Hornsby a Cadillac. After the presentation ceremony, he snapped, "Aw right, let's get this damn thing the hell out 'here and start the ball game."

On the third base coaching lines during the spring, Hornsby always would be introduced over the loud speaker system as, "Rogers Hornsby, the greatest right-handed hitter who ever lived."

The players took up the announcement and each time he was paged in a hotel lobby—where he preferred to sit alone for hours—they would mimic sarcastically: "Paging Rogers Hornsby, the greatest right-handed hitter. . . and the most miserable manager. . . who ever lived!"

When the Browns returned from spring training, several players paraded into owner Bill Veeck's office to cry "uncle." One pitcher didn't even wait that long. At Oklahoma City, Okla., he called Veeck on the telephone and said:

I've played for a lot of managers realized that Veeck "forgot" to do in my life but none like Hornsby. I would just as soon you trade me."

Veeck asked the player to be patient and hoped matters would be righted.

Hornsby's treatment of Satchel Paige was particularly harsh. He fined the 44-year-old Negro pitcher $100 when he failed to appear at the park for an exhibition game in Texas.

Paige explained he had trouble getting to the park because cab drivers refused to accept a Negro passenger. But Hornsby's retort was:

"What do you expect me to do, lead you around by the hand?" Until this day, Hornsby never

Pentagon Asks Clark Interview

WASHINGTON (UP) — The Joint Chiefs of Staff have asked Gen. Mark W. Clark for a transcript of his "no holds barred" interview on the Korean war, it was disclosed today.

Clark said yesterday in Tokyo that it was his opinion that there should be "no holds barred" by U. N. forces in retaliation for an all-out, massive air attack by the Communists in Korea.

Clark indicated that in his opinion it would be necessary to "bomb Communist bases in Manchuria if the Reds brought into action their China-based full air strength.

Some Relief

Some relief from the past several days of abnormally hot weather was felt yesterday but the temperature was still in the 90s.

Mrs. Carl Maiden, local weather observer, said this morning that the temperature dropped from a high of 101 degrees Monday to 94 degrees yesterday. Low yesterday was recorded at 70 and the mercury read 81 degrees at 8 o'clock this morning.

But still no rain. Last year this time a trace of rain fell but so far this month only .01 inches of rain has been recorded.

A year ago yesterday high was recorded at 83 degrees and low at 59.

Wholesale Food Prices Edge Up

NEW YORK (UP) — Higher prices for 11 commodities in the week ended June 10 boosted the Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food price index two cents to $6.45.

The index now stands 8.8 per cent below the $7.07 recorded in the like 1951 week, but 8.2 per cent above the $5.96 pre-Korea level.

The wholesale barometer represents the sum total of the price per pound of 31 foods in common use, of which six declined and 14 held unchanged.

Commie Workers In French Plants Are Being Fired

PARIS (UP) — Hundreds of Communist workers were fired from national defense factories and arsenals today for joining in Red-aided protest strikes.

Firings were ordered in arms-producing plants throughout the country. Both nationalized factories and privately owned ones were included.

As the anti-Communist crackdown by Premier Antoine Pinay entered its third week, the government also sent out a nationwide alarm for a Red leader from Toulon France's greatest naval base, and resumed lightning raids on Communist headquarters.

The Interior Ministry issued a search warrant for Andre Touthin, secretary general of the Communist-led General Labor Confederation for the Toulon area.

Churchill Says Britain In Peril Of 'Losing All'

LONDON (UP) — Prime Minister Winston Churchill said today that Britain is in peril of losing all of her possessions and glory because she is dangerously near economic bankruptcy.

Churchill gave his warnings dramatically during a speech at a luncheon of the British Press Association.

Britain, he said, is standing on a "treacherous trap door" which may fall beneath it at any time.

He was urging newspaper men to put the facts of Britain's economic plight before Britons and the world when he startled his hearers with his warning.

Strange Passage

By William Lynch

Chapter 2

"You'd better get your things," Gardiner said.

"No, not yet, please. You know, this is positively the very first time in my life that I've watched a sunset."

"Then you must do it more often. It really is good for the nerves." He paused. "While you were busy—down there—I took advantage of your preoccupation to have a good look at you. Do you mind?"

"That depends on what you saw, Mr. Gardiner."

If I'm not mistaken you are what is commonly referred to as a well-bred young lady. Probably you finished at a finishing-school."

Melissande laughed softly.

"As a matter of fact," she said, "I did. But I didn't finish. Instead, I was expelled."

"Good! Obviously for some midnight frolic, Miss Brandon."

"The head-mistress, Madame Dallieme, called it a flagrant example of moral turpitude. You see, we were all supposed to be back in the dormitory by midnight."

"Then, so far," Gardiner pursued, "my diagnosis is correct."

Gardiner had placed bread and cheese and butter on the bare wooden table, and the teapot was still warm as Melissande returned, heavily laden and out of breath.

"I really should have gone with you," he said, as she put down the larger of the bags and sat on it. "It's some climb from the bottom," Melissande said.

"That's the price we have to pay for our monastic isolation. Here, have a cheese sandwich."

"Thanks. I'm famished. I've had nothing since leaving Goulburn this morning."

Melissande took good stock of him as he moved round the big room. Some of his attitudes she suspected were studied and deliberate, but, natural or not, they radiated a kind of pent-up tightness, controlled energy directed to the simplest of forms, as pouring tea or cutting bread, and making of each a potential atomic upheaval.

At thirty-five his hair was beginning to recede slightly from the temples. Blue, piercing eyes lay half hidden behind a veritable jungle of eyebrows. His eyes, Melissande observed, appeared to take on a paler blue aspect under strong light. His mouth was soft and sensitive and the constant play of his lips was often the only clue to his moods, which later, she reflected, between mouthfuls of cheese, were probably as unpredictable as her own. For the rest, his hands in repose, his fingers, she discovered to her amazement that they were thick, gnarled and coarse and the finger-nails rough, worn, uneven and shapeless.

"Horrible, aren't they?"

"I'm sorry," Melissande said, "I just happened to notice them as you were filling your pipe. I had no idea of being rude!"

"I've finally discovered," Paul said, "that you can't have emotional upsets and finger-nails too. So I've elected to keep the former."

Melissande made a move towards tidying the table, but the gesture began and ended with the sweeping of a few crumbs into the palm of her hand.

"That's hardly what you'd call a meal for a hungry stomach," Gardiner said.

Melissande was slightly startled at the unexpected thawing out. Already she had built an image of him and the image was immediately frightening. At nineteen she felt that there was probably a great deal about men that she could never expect to fully understand. Paul scared her stiff, not because of him (had she dared to look), but because she was about to live alone with him, up here on a hill, and already she was beginning to feel the first pangs of another tight little fence that was springing up round her. She resented, too, his urgent proprietary interest—this talk of the past and the future, the watching of the sunset together, the scrappy, unconventional and too-familiar meal. This wasn't what she was wanting. So she found herself wishing that he would go upstairs to his studio.

"Would you like to take a look at my studio, Melissande?"

"Perhaps I'd better unpack first."

"Melissande is an unusual name—I think quite well together—that is, providing you don't develop an ambition to play anything."

Halfway up the stairs he paused and looked down at her. There was a probing expression in his eyes as he silently contemplated the tired figure of the girl.

"Perhaps tomorrow then," he called back.

She sat quite still, then listening to his foot-steps as he paced erratically to and fro, opening a window, dragging a chair, or perhaps a case, splashing his hands in a wash-basin. Melissande, weary beyond caring, mentally "placed" his abrupt, nervous activities, found herself waiting for the silence that she expected would soon come as he settled down to his work. She wondered what kind of things he painted, whether they were after Cezanne and Picasso, or those thick-legged shapeless nudes that she'd come to associate with the work of Norman Lindsay. Somehow, she fancied that he was probably a very good painter. He had not commented on it very much. This she regarded as a symbol of competence.

"God Almighty, I'm tired. Why did life have to be so immediate, urgent, demanding, insistent? Why did she have to come here, anyway? This thing she was trying to do, this breaking away from the smug, small-town, pink-ribbon, fenced-in thing labelled 'home,' this casting off of the shackles and leg-irons, this expanding, spreading, moving—outwards, was it nothing more than the uncontrolled overflow of an impulse?"

Tomorrow, perhaps, she could look round for a job. That blessed, tantalizing, fugitive Tomorrow. How it eluded her! Maybe there was no Tomorrow. Maybe every day in the time of your life was today. And tomorrow was a mystic, unsubstantial thing existing only in the imaginations of poets and song-writers and people who were trying to escape from something.

She crawled into bed and fell asleep on the downbeat of a tired mind.

High School Youth Believes In Creating His Own Opportunities

By HARMAN W. MCHOLS
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP) — Fifteen-year-old Bob Thorton lives by the philosophy of Francis Bacon who once wrote, "A wise man will make more opportunities than he finds."

Bob, who will be a junior at Anacosta High School in Anacosta, Mont., next year, saw an opportunity coming his way. He entered a letter-writing contest for high school kids and walked off with the first prize of $250 and a three-day tour of Washington.

The subject of the contest was: "How can I help expand opportunities in America?"

The handsome, blue-eyed lad latched onto that one in professional style. He said in his theme:

"In order to make more opportunities and expand them, a person must have two prevailing qualities, curiosity and the chance-taking spirit. Without these traits the chances of making a success in life are few. It is through curiosity that we discover opportunities, and it is by gambling that we expand them."

He concluded: "Yes, America has a golden future that can be compared to a lofty mountain in the distance, accessible to us if we have the skill and courage to surmount the foothills."

When Bob arrived in the capital, he wanted to look around some of the places he had read about. He rang up Rep. Mike Mansfield, a Democrat from his home state and the congressman showed him around the Capitol.

"That was swell," he said, "but I got a bigger kick out of my visit to the Library of Congress. I like what you would call 'long-hair' music and was thrilled to look through the glass-encased cabinets at the manuscripts of some of the old masters."

It was no accident that Bob came out ahead of 2,500 other high school kids. He spent days on the 500-word manuscript and wasn't satisfied until he made it "gell," as he put it.

His specialty in high school is social science. But he has done well in all of his subjects, maintaining a straight A average. He also was a leader among the other students. He was secretary of the student council, secretary of the student safety patrol, and co-president of the freshman chorus.

Most of the kids who entered the writing contest were seniors. Bob just finished his sophomore term. Bob thought it would be nice to shake the hand of the greatest letter-writer of them all, President Truman.

Somebody called the White House for him, but the President was busy with affairs of state. He sent word he was extremely sorry he could not meet the kid champion, but "congratulations anyway."

Iran's Premier Pleading Oil Case At The Hague

By PHIL NEWSOM
UNITED Press Foreign News Editor

A frail little man with faltering step and trembling voice is pleading his case this week before the International Court at The Hague. Iran's Premier Mohammad Mossadegh is so frail he faints occasionally in the midst of a speech, but underneath it all he is a man of iron who has lived longer than many of Iran's top-ranking politicians.

He is representing Iran before the court in the dispute with Britain over the nationalization of Iranian oil.

At stake is the $560,000,000 Anglo-Iranian Oil Co., and finally control of the world's richest single oil field.

Britain had a contract with Iran giving it control of the field until 1953, but so far as the hearing before the court is concerned, it would seem the cards are stacked in Iran's favor.

First, Mossadegh argues that no one can attack either Iran's legal or moral right to nationalize the Iranian field. Second, he says that even should Iran lose its case, Iran will ignore the decision.

The court has no way to enforce its ruling.

As a signatory to the World Court which was set up after World War I and reconstituted after World War II, Iran is bound by the court's decision. However, should she withdraw, then the court's decision no longer applies.

Meanwhile, Mossadegh says that win, lose or draw he is quitting as premier at the conclusion of the present hearings.

He would, of course, like to quit with a victory under his belt but under present circumstances that seems difficult.

If the court rules against him, then the dispute would seem to return to stalemate.

Mossadegh's hatred of the British is such that he even has refused to permit British technicians to operate the field under Iranian control.

Americans could do it for the Iranians but the U. S. government is not likely to sponsor any such plan, at least until the British claims are settled. Russia would be delighted to take over operation of the field. But, whereas Mossadegh dislikes the British, he has good reasons to fear the Russians, particularly in any plan which would give them virtual control of Iran's economy.

When Iranian oil is flowing, it brings to Iran more than $100,000,000 annually in revenues and wages. The money represented nearly 13 per cent of Iranian income and its loss was a staggering blow to the nation's economy. Both Britain and Iran seem to have miscalculated in the dispute. The British believed the loss of income would force Iran into a quick settlement. Iran believed the world need for oil would force an equally quick settlement in its favor.

Hat Makers Of Paris In A Sweat Over Hat-Less Fad Of Post-War Years

AP Newsfeatures

PARIS. — French hat-makers are facing the darkest times their industry has known since Marie Antoinette's death. They are being hit by a low blow by popularizing lowering hatless hairdos in the 18th Century.

That time, the crisis blew over and women went back to wearing hats as enthusiastically as ever. This time, encouraged by history's example, the hatters have organized to try to stem the tide of hatlessness which engulfs them.

Modern hatters blame the war for getting women in the habit of going bare-headed. Some blame the bad example set by American tourists, who often manage to look chic without hats.

Time was when no Paris housewife would have set foot on the street without being properly hatted and gloved, even if she were only on her way to the baker for a loaf. The hatmakers, backed up by fashion dictators, till sternly insist that a woman of style should never be seen dead without a chapeau. You might as well step out without shoes as to be bare-headed in public, they hint darkly.

But, faced by statistics and dwindling sales, the hatters' syndicate must sadly admit that times have changed. Among the crowds that stroll down the Champs-Elysees in warm Spring weather, hardly more than one woman in ten wears a hat.

If the public has decided that hats are frivolities and not necessities, the hat designers themselves are at least partly at fault, admits Monsieur Paul Gallien, secretary-general of the hatters' syndicate.

By bringing out mad creations that nobody could possibly take seriously, they have literally out-striated themselves. Of course, it's the daffy chapeau that always gets splashed in the papers, but a hat that people can laugh at does the industry a disservice, thinks Monsieur Gallien.

Another boomerang launched by the hatters themselves is the idea that hat styles must change completely every season. Every woman knows that last year's bonnet is as demode as a last year's bird's nest. But when the budget is tight, the result may be that a hat is knocked off in favor of something that lasts longer than a season.

Women who thus lose the habit of hat-wearing may be a headache to the hatters, but their worst worry, according to Monsieur Gallien, is the younger generation's scornful attitude towards headgear.

"Just think of it—some of them have never owned a hat!" When the Duchess of Windsor was photographed not long ago wearing only a net over her hair, some hat-makers howled. But Monsieur Gallien thinks they can no longer afford to quibble. "Even a net or flowers is better than nothing at all. We're willing to count nearly anything worn on the head as a hat."

The beret, in its myriad disguises, is by far the most popular headgear for both sexes in France. It has almost come to be a symbol of the Frenchman, but its hold on the country does not go back as far as most people imagine. Part of the Basque native dress, it only spread to the rest of France some twenty years ago, replacing the workman's traditional cloth cap.

Part of the beret's popular appeal is the fact that it can be found to fit any pocketbook—from the workman's cheap felt model at a few hundred francs to the bejeweled velvet cocktail number for the wealthy woman of fashion.

In all, some 4,000 new hat models are launched every year by Paris' twenty "modistes" (custom hatters, as opposed to "chapeliers" who turn out wholesale reproduction). Hat seasons precede dress seasons by about a week, to take advantage of foreign buyer's presence.

Last year the "chapelieres" did fifteen billion francs worth of business, and the "modistes" annual sales amounted to seventeen billions (both figures in clude exports). This is an improvement over the earlier postwar years.

Hotter Taft-Eisenhower Struggle Might Split Republicans As In 1912

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (UP) — The scalding bitterness between the Taft and Eisenhower camps may boil over in their struggle to select rival delegates at the Republican National Convention next month.

The contest now is focused on disputed delegates in Texas, Georgia, Louisiana and Mississippi. Taft has offered to compromise on some disputed Southern delegates, although he hasn't said how. The Eisenhower people say no.

If the fight becomes too fierce, it may split the Republicans into such hostile camps that it will cost the party the election. It could happen, and did happen before in the Taft family.

The Senator's father, President William Howard Taft, went through this experience 40 years ago in a rivalry with ex-President Theodore Roosevelt at the Republican National Convention in Chicago where this one will be held, too. The struggle did more than just break the party into factions. It split the party. Roosevelt ran against Taft on an opposition ticket.

The divided Republican vote let Democrat Woodrow Wilson win the election easily. No one this year is suggesting an exact duplicate of 1912, with the loser in the Taft-Eisenhower fight creating a rival party to run anyway, Eisenhower said last week.

He'll support the candidate chosen by the convention. When he was elected in 1904 Theodore Roosevelt said he wouldn't seek or accept another nomination. But he had no intention of losing his political grip altogether when the 1908 elections came around.

He hand-picked Taft, his friend and associate, as his successor. And the Republican convention that year accepted Roosevelt's choice. Taft was elected. But not all of Roosevelt's followers liked Taft's four-year administration.

They told Roosevelt so when he came back from an African hunting trip before the 1912 elections. They persuaded him to try for the Republican nomination and another White House term. He did. He drummed up convention delegates in the 13 states which had presidential preference primaries. He swamped Taft. But most states had no primaries and there the Republican politicians had a word to say for Taft.

Historian Harold U. Faulkner, in his "American Politics and Social History," gives a picture of what followed: "Administration Taft delegates, hand-picked from the South, gave Taft a larger nucleus to start with. And the National Committee and the committee on credentials saw to it that the disputes were decided in favor of the regular Republican machine.

"When Roosevelt saw that the convention was in the hands of his opponents, he issued a scorching blast and urged his followers to participate no longer in the voting. Roosevelt's followers then nominated him as presidential candidate of their new Progressive party. As he arrived for that party's convention, Roosevelt said he felt as good as a 'bull moose,' which became the party's symbol.

The result! The Republican party smashed wide open, with Roosevelt getting 88 electoral votes to only eight for Taft. Wilson won on the Democratic ticket with 436 electoral votes.

The National Committee and the credentials committee, just as 40 years ago, will be the key groups.

dealing what Taft or Eisenhower delegates this year can be seated and take part in the nominations. And, as in 1912, the big fight will be over delegates from the South where the Eisenhower people claim the Taftites squeezed them out.

'Direct Use' Of Atom For Peace Use Is Advocated

CLEVELAND, O. — (UP) — George Woodling, graduate engineer, lawyer, author and politician is seeking a patent covering a process whereby atomic energy is to be used in welding.

Woodling, who holds an engineering degree from Purdue and finished law here at Western Reserve, explained that "I want to see this new form of energy used for the good of humanity, rather than for killing."

Beside being a partner in a law patent office, Woodling holds 60 other patents, has written a textbook on the subject for engineers and has sought political office.

Prefers Direct Use

His latest idea, he believes, "is the first to make direct use of atomic energy. So far, scientists have talked only of using it indirectly. They use the heat generated by nuclear reaction, for instance, to generate steam and then power."

Woodling believes the intense heat generated by atomic energy has been the chief obstacle to developing the new power source.

Has Many Uses

Woodling has submitted drawings of proposed application of atomic energy which conceivably could utilize the energy generated for welding studs to heavy steel plates in shipbuilding, for example, covers a cupola, or crucible, for melting iron or steel to make castings or ingots.

Admitting the whole business is complicated, Woodling insists that "it's use as a new source of power is coming in our life time, we'd better get to learn everything we can about it."

Thrift Backfired For Young Man

HOUSTON, Tex. — (UP) — It wasn't the law officers but the car that he stole that almost meant the end of a youthful car thief.

Detectives Leroy Mouser and M. L. Singleton spotted the stolen vehicle as it was being driven along a Houston street. They began a chase.

The youth led them for five miles, then slowed the vehicle and leaped into a ditch, the car still moving.

The youth started to run up an embankment when he looked back and saw the car roaring at him at full speed, driverless. He barely drew over the top of the embankment before the car plowed into where he had been crawling a split second before.

Before the officers could stop and get out of their car the fugitive had disappeared in some underbrush.

these take humorous quirks. Like the man who said he was resigning as a member of the Scott-appointed commission on displaced persons because he figures his job is about finished. He says since his appointment a number of prominent people have been displaced, including Senator Frank Graham, Associate Justice Muraay James and Hiram Valentine, gubernatorial candidate Hubert Olive, Highway Commissioners Raymond Earp, Mark Goforth and Dale Thrash, Paroles Commissioner T. C. Johnson, Motor Vehicles Commissioner L. C. Rosser and others. In process of displacement he lists Assistant Budget Director Dave Coltrane, C&D Director George Ross, probably Utilities Commissioner Fred Hunter and Ed McMahan, and maybe some others whose names have not hit the news. With that record of accomplishment the resigning commission member says his job must be about over.

WRONG — Of course, he is wrong; his job is just beginning. The DP commission was set up not to displace folks, but to find suitable locations for them, after they were displaced. Somebody has a lot to do in that field, looks as if.

Abandoned By Fathers, 28 Families Given Help

In Pitt County there are 28 families receiving aid to dependent children because the father deserted the family.

K. T. Furell, superintendent of the department of welfare, said that in a large majority of cases the offending parent is out of the state, usually in Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey, or New York.

"The process of sending law enforcement officers of North Carolina to these states to pick up the offenders, has been so expensive as to be almost prohibitive."

Recently, the Social Security Act has been amended "to provide for the prompt notice to appropriate law-enforcement officials of the furnishing of aid to dependent children in respect of a child who has been deserted or abandoned by a parent."

Cidental will. The new amendment, 39 states and three U. S. possessions have signed a reciprocal agreement whereby the state in which the offender parent is found, tries the offender rather than having to be returned to the state in which he abandoned the child.

It is required of the welfare department to notify the proper law enforcement officials of all cases of desertion of children receiving aid but only with the consent of the applicant or recipient of such aid. "If this consent is not given, then the recipient will request that the payment be terminated or the applicant will withdraw his application."

After notice of abandonment or desertion has been given the law enforcement officials by the superintendent of public welfare, it is the responsibility of the courts as prescribed by law to apprehend deserting parents.

"It is hoped that this less expensive way of apprehending parents, who have deserted their children, will in some way awaken these of their responsibility to their families and communities," said Furell.
