

Foward Step On Airport Project

Four-County Airport Plan Again Discussed At Wilson; Naming Of Committee For Further Study Is Endorsed; 'Give And Take' View Said Key To Fulfillment

Possibilities of a joint airport for four cities and four counties of Eastern North Carolina moved one step nearer realization last night at a meeting of municipal and county representatives in Wilson. Officials of Pitt County, Greenville, Wilson County, Wayne County, Nash County and Edgecombe County and other representatives of the cities and counties further discussed the project which still is in the exploratory stages.

The group unanimously adopted a resolution calling for the appointment of two representatives from each of the eight local government subdivisions (including the city of Tarboro) to compose a 16-man committee to continue the investigation of the joint airport possibilities. The appointments are to be made by the governing boards of the cities and counties in the near future.

John P. Swain, one of the founders in the Raleigh-Durham airport movement, and Frank Thompson, chairman of the Raleigh-Durham airport authority, were present at the meeting and discussed the establishment of a joint airport and the progress made by Raleigh-Durham in the past nine years.

Swain told the group from the cities and counties, "I think you have started a most laudable undertaking. The point is to carry it through to completion. It can be done, and there is no reason why you people of eight political subdivisions can not do it."

Swain said the success of such a joint project hinges upon close cooperation between the cities and counties. "I recommend," he declared, "you give appointment to the Joint Chamber of Commerce to carry the ball in this thing. They are young, they have the energy and they are smart enough to do it." The speaker emphasized that the joint airport project must be a "give and take proposition" and the airport must be located at a central point where it can best serve the area as a whole.

So far at the Raleigh-Durham airport, Swain said, the two cities and the two counties have invested $137,500 each in the project, and the federal government has put approximately $3,000,000 in the airport. He said the Raleigh-Durham airport operated in the red for the first few years, but it is now operating in the black and last year showed a net profit of approximately $4,500.

Swain added that it is the general policy of the federal government now to participate in the capital outlay for airports on a 50-50 basis with the government subdivisions establishing airport facilities.

Greenville and Pitt County were represented by 11 men at the meeting last night. Attending from Pitt County were County Commissioners M. Brown Hodges and C. C. Harris, Mayor Lester D. Page of Greenville and Aldermen J. E. Waldrop and R. E. Harris, County Attorney W. R. Speight, Manager W. T. Kizer of the Chamber of Commerce, and Jaycees Dan Saeed, R. O. Everette, W. H. Watson and Dave Whitchard.

Ray Bandy C. Rocky Mount, temporary chairman of the group presided at the meeting which was the third in a series of inter-city conferences on the joint airport project.

Anti-Reds Risk Lives In Escape

Four Hundred Flee Fanatic Prisoner Leaders In Koje Compound Shift

KOJE ISLAND, Korea (UP) — More than 400 anti-Communist war prisoners risked their lives today in a break for freedom from the fanatic Red commissars who have murdered at least 131 of their comrades.

"Now we will live!" they shouted as they broke from marching ranks. They ran toward American guards who were shifting 4,875 of them to 800-man compounds.

They were being moved from Compound 95 to temporary quarters in Compound 91. The move was made without violence although there were scuffles between prisoners trying to break away and hard-core Reds trying to hold them.

Tomorrow, Friday the 13th, heavily armed American troops will go into Compound 66 which holds more than 3,000 defiant North Korean officers. Their leaders were shown through the shambles of Compound 76, where 39 Reds died when they fought removal.

Brig. Gen. Haydon L. Boatner, camp commander, conducted the tour for five Red officers today, gave them the latest revised casualty toll, and a graphic warning of what they could expect if they choose to fight.

Troops of the 9th Infantry Regiment, battle-tough veterans of front line fighting with the 2nd Division, will move into No. 66 at 10 a. m. Friday.

There were ominous sounds of metal-working today from 66 as well as 604 and 605.

During today's move one group of 100, apparently by pre-arrangement, wheeled left instead of right as they approached the gate of Compound 91 and surrendered to Allied guards.

Others, alone and in groups, broke away from marching columns and ran to the guards. Hard-core Reds jeered and tried to hold them back.

Several frightened prisoners tried to run back out the gate of 91 but were seized by the Communists and dragged into a barracks before guards could interfere.

"If they do that again," Boatner told his officers, "order them to release the men. If they resist, bathe them in tear gas."

Allied officers said those who tried to get out and failed risked night time kangaroo court trials and execution by the fanatics, although they are hopeful recent stern measures have discouraged further Red violence.

Sixteen were executed just before the move from Compound 77. At least 115 were known to have been executed earlier. Another rotting body, dead from unknown causes, was found today in empty compound 76.

Deputy camp commander Col. Harold L. Taylor announced 19,000 prisoners have been transferred to new compounds. He said at least 1,000 of these have been weeded out as anti-Communists or for other reasons.

He said that "we have uncontested control" of the new compounds. "Uncontested control" was the recent order of Gen. Mark W. Clark, supreme U. N. commander.

Boatner met a Red spokesman this morning and told him: "I moved Compound 76 and there were 38 killed. I moved 78 and 77 and no one was injured. You obey orders and no one will be hurt here."

The leader replied, "I know I'm a prisoner of war. I will obey orders. We want an hour to get into 150-man groups."

Boatner turned him down.

Later Boatner grinned, "they're just like women. It breaks their hearts to do anything exactly as they're told to do it."

Scott Finds His Improved Roads Under Criticism

Greensboro News Says Area Around Scott Farm Has Especially Benefitted

GREENSBORO — (AP) — The Greensboro Daily News said today that since Gov. Scott's election the State has paved a network of roads through and around the Governor's Alamance County dairy farm.

The paper quoted the Governor as saying, "Certainly, the State at large hasn't any such network of roads as this."

All of the new roads, the paper said, lie near the Hawfields Church, of which Scott is presiding elder.

The Governor was quoted as saying that since he ran for Governor on a platform of improved roads, rural telephones and power lines and improved rural churches he decided to make his own neighborhood a model for North Carolina.

"I'll say this," Scott was quoted as saying, "if I have stolen a nickel it was for the church. I did it all for the church and attendance is up 25 per cent since my administration opened."

The Governor owns about 2,300 acres in Alamance, and the Greensboro paper said the State has built around 15 miles of paved roads in a small triangle around his land, and most of them pass through his property.

The newest highway, the Greensboro paper stated, is the biggest, a relocation of highway U. S. No. 70. It added that the State is about ready to pay Scott about $12,000 in return for about 39 acres of land the highway will cross and for crop damages, and the State has built a couple of tunnels under the road for cattle.

Scott was quoted as saying the story was part of a political plot to destroy his influence.

"They are so damned scared I'm going to run for the Senate again that Willis Smith they don't know what to do," Scott was quoted as saying.

"And they're using this and other things to discredit me."

One of the paved roads to Scott's farm was authorized by Gov. Cherry a few weeks before Scott's inauguration. Scott, while commissioner of agriculture, had tried to get the road paved, but A. H. Graham, then Highway Commission chairman, had turned him down.

The Greensboro paper also quoted the Governor as saying he "rode hard" the Sixth Division Highway Commissioner James Barnwell to get the roads in his neighborhood fixed.

"How did I get the secondary roads?" Scott was quoted. "Why I said to Jim Barnwell, Jim, I want this neighborhood fixed up, and he said, 'Well, you're the boss.' That's how I got 'em."

"I didn't tell anybody to run the new bypass through my place. Sure it adds value, but it hurts it as a farming operation."

"Yes, I profited by the new roads, because I can get my milk out now. In the past we've had it spoiled because we couldn't get it to market."

Ranks Fourth

WASHINGTON (AP)—North Carolina ranked fourth in state spending for education in 1951. It spent $4.93 for each person in the state, according to a federal report.

States ahead of North Carolina in the per capita outlay for schools were New Mexico with $6.31; Wyoming, $49.66 and Washington, $48.71.

The Bureau of Census said the money was spent on schools, libraries, state institutions of higher education and programs for the deaf, blind and other handicapped persons and some veterans' education.

In total outlay for schooling North Carolina was fourth, but the three states with higher total expenditures were California, Texas, and Michigan. North Carolina spent $171,117,000.

Imported Labor Supply Assured For Pitt Farms This Summer

There is a good chance Pitt farmers will have outside help with their harvesting this year, but the labor situation still looms as a crucial problem during the harvesting months.

That was the opinion expressed yesterday afternoon by W. B. Dillingham, manager of the Greenville office of the state Employment Security Commission.

Dillingham said 12 Pitt County farmers have made requests through the employment office for 178 farm laborers from Georgia to work during the tobacco harvesting season, and the Georgia employment service has said the chances of filling the orders are good.

If the laborers are available, Dillingham said, they will be a great

Two Slightly Injured In Overturning Car

Two persons were injured last night when the automobile shown above went out of control, overturning about three times. The accident occurred around 7:15 last night about seven miles west of Greenville on the old Stantonburg road. Patrolman Jim Davis, investigating officer, listed the injured as Douglas Baker, 16 (driver), and Travis Nichols, both of Bell Arthur. Each received lacerations and bruises, were treated at Pitt Memorial Hospital and released. Davis stated that the car was a total wreck. No charges have been made as yet, pending further investigation of the accident by the patrol. (Reflector Photo by Roy Hardee.)

Beauty Pageant Climax Scheduled For Tonight

Eleven Compete For 'Miss Greenville' Title In Fields Of Beauty And Talent; Preliminary To State Contest

The coveted title of Miss Greenville will be bestowed tonight upon one of 11 young ladies who meet here to compare faces, facts and figures in the Jaycee Beauty Pageant.

The campus of East Carolina College will be cloaked in a cosmopolitan atmosphere as contestants gather in Austin Auditorium at 7:30 to compete for the $250 first-prize scholarship and numerous other valuable prizes.

The pageant tonight will be a preliminary competition to the Miss North Carolina contest to be held in Winston-Salem July 24, 25 and 26. The winner will go directly to Winston-Salem as Greenville's representative contestant at that time.

Official rules of the Miss American Pageant will be observed and all contestants will make three separate appearances; once in evening dresses, once for talent routine and once in bathing suits.

Contestants will be judged on poise and personality, talent, and beauty of face and figure. Each will present a three-minute talent routine and each appearance will be scored according to national contest procedure. All entries will receive prizes and favors.

The sequence of appearance for judging will be 1. evening dresses, for poise and personality; 2. appropriate dress for talent presentation; and 3. bathing suits, for beauty of face and figure.

The 11 contestants in the order of appearance are: Pauline Dupree, Betty Sue Harris, Patsy Smith, Janice Roberson, Betty Sue Whitfield, Billie Jean Simpson, Ann Smith, Jackie Sears, Oleg Grant, Martha Benton and Carrie Joyner.

For their talent presentations four contestants will sing, four will play the piano, two will deliver dramatic readings and one will dance. Music for the event will be provided by Roy Cole and his orchestra, who will also play for a dance immediately following the pageant. The dance will be held in McGowan's warehouse on Ninth Street.

The beauty pageant will begin at 7:30 tonight in Austin Auditorium at East Carolina College. Judges for the contest will be Mrs. J. H. Rose, Dean Leo Jenkins, O. E. Dowd and Col. Owen Marshburn, all of Greenville; and Bob Rouse of Farmville.

Flatly Warn Of No Concessions

UN Truce Team Firm On Prisoner Of War Position

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP) — Allied truce negotiators told the Communists "flatly and definitely" today they would make no more concessions on the prisoner exchange issue.

They accused the Reds of blocking an armistice in Korea by refusing to accept the final United Nations offer.

Maj. Gen. William K. Harrison, senior U. N. delegate, agreed to another meeting tomorrow but told the Communists, "Why you want to meet again every day is difficult to understand."

Harrison said in a six-minute statement that the U. N.'s April 28 package proposal was an "integrated whole" and was not subject to "acceptance in part."

"I tell you flatly and definitely," he said, "no further concessions will be forthcoming."

"You can save much precious time and achieve an armistice whenever you desire by the simple recognition of that fact and by acceptance of our final, irrevocable proposal of April 28."

In this proposal the Allies offered to return the 70,000 prisoners who have declared themselves pro Communists. Others of the 169,000 held by the Allies would not be sent back to Red territory.

North Korean Gen. Nam Il, top Red delegate, departed from his recent intransigent attitude. He said the U. N. was responsible for "widening the breach between both sides" and said it was up to the U. N. to make the next move.

Nine Are Listed As 'Delinquents'

Failed To Appear For Pre-Induction Exams This Morning

Nine Pitt County men were listed as delinquents today by the local Selective Service office for failing to appear for pre-induction exams this morning.

Only 13 of the required number of men appeared this morning to go to Raleigh for pre-induction examinations.

The men and their last known addresses who are listed as delinquents are: John Henry Gorham, colored, Route 1, Box 99A, City; Jessie James Darden, colored, Route 4, City, and Newark, N. J.; Jessie Leroy Barnes, colored, Route 4, Box 301, City; and Lester Earl Adams, white, 2100 E. Fifth Street, City.

Y.; Lee Arthur Brown, colored, 1405 Short Street, City, and Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Willie Junior Spell, colored, 1315 Pitt Street, City.

The men listed as delinquents are requested to report to the local Selective Service office or anyone known their whereabouts are requested to report them to the local Selective Service office.

Denies Striking With A Bottle

SUDBURY, Ont. (UP)—Douglas McEwan denied indignantly that he hit Mary Mack with a milk bottle.

"I did not hit no woman with no milk bottle," he told the judge yesterday. "I don't need a bottle. I used my fist."

ALL 'DRINKERS'

TORONTO, Ont. (UP)—Charles Irwin Drinkwine has started divorce proceedings against his wife. His attorney is William Sipper.

Steel Seizure Is Again Rebuffed

Orders To Shoot To Kill Extended By East Germans

GUARDS COVER BORDER AROUND BERLIN AS WELL AS WEST GERMAN FRONTIER

BERLIN — (AP) — The Soviet Zone government decreed today an extension of its shoot-to-kill security measures to include the border around Berlin as well as the frontier with West Germany.

An order signed by Communist boss Walter Ulbricht, deputy prime minister, directed the State Security Police to "extend generally" the measures begun at first on the interior frontier to "hinder the entrance of diversionists, spies and terrorists in the territory of the German Democratic Republic."

It provided sentences of at least two years in jail for violators "unless they are not liable for higher punishment under other regulations." The death penalty is already provided for major violators of a catch-all Communist law "for protection of the peace."

The order came as the Western High Commission met in this blockade-threatened city for a discussion of the Communist squeeze.

The commission's visit here from Bonn was a gesture of Allied support for the troubled West Berlin economic aid to West Berliners blockade and are afraid the Russians may be plotting another.

The West German government did its reassuring bit, sending its finance minister, Fritz Schafer, here today to discuss plans for federal economic aid to West Berlin's endangered industries.

The Communists, meanwhile, whipped up a public school campaign of hate and rearmament against the West in East Germany.

Today is "Teachers' Day" in East Germany. At meetings throughout the Russian-occupied, Communist-ruled zone, teachers were exhorted to "increase the defense readiness of our youth and rear them in irreconcilable hatred of the imperialist war-kindlers."

The schools will be called upon to furnish thousands of young recruits for the 375,000-man army which East Germany is preparing. Plans for requiring rifle training in all high schools already have been indicated.

Hottest Fighting Of Year In Korea

Tanks And Planes Support Stepped-Up Allied Fighting

SEOUL, Korea (AP)—United Nations fighter-bombers and tanks today blasted Chinese Reds on two Western Front hills with deadly explosives and burning jelled gasoline, in support of attacking Allied ground troops waging one of the war's hottest actions this year.

An Allied officer at the front called the fight "probably the biggest thing that's happened here all week."

The stepped-up fighting broke out Saturday around Chorwon, 48 miles north of Seoul, when U. N. infantrymen captured two high points. The Reds have tried unsuccessfully every day since to knock the Allies back.

The officer said fighter bombers strafed, bombed and fire-bombed Chinese positions on the hills throughout the morning and carried their attack into the afternoon.

Both sides used tanks or self-propelled guns, artillery and mortars.

No count was given, but Allied authorities said hundreds of Reds had been killed and wounded in the six days of vicious fighting around Chorwon.

First Of New Roadside Parks Opens Wednesday

RALEIGH (UP)—The first of the State Highway Commission's new series of roadside parks will be opened to the public Wednesday.

Henry W. Jordan, commission chairman, said the Deep Gap Park, located on U. S. 421 between Deep Gap and Boone in Watauga County, will have a 16-car parking area, picnic tables, water, toilets and stone fireplaces.

The Alligator River Park on U. S. 64 at Sandy Point in Tyrrell County is expected to be opened soon, officials said.

Four other parks, in varying stages of construction, are between Vanceboro and New Bern, north of Carolina Beach in New Hanover County, near Woodlawn in McDowell County and near Socco Gap in Jackson County.

Folk Festival Opens

CHAPEL HILL (AP)—The fifth annual Carolina Folk Festival opens a three-day program here tonight with the redoubtable John Henry set to make the rounds.

Scott, Coltrane Are Deadlocked

RALEIGH (UP)—State officials, still worried by Gov. Kerr Scott's post-primary purge, took heart today in the defiance of David Coltrane, who told Scott he won't quit as assistant budget director.

Coltrane, after dispatching his two-page reply to Scott's request for his resignation, told reporters the matter is in the governor's hands now. Coltrane said that he would not release letter to the press "out of courtesy."

Scott said that he didn't want to release it until he had a chance to read it and "digest its contents."

Friends said Coltrane defended his record in the letter and said he would be "derelict" in his responsibilities if he quit his $12,000 a year post at the present time.

Coltrane's appointment does not expire until next June. Observers said that it is questionable whether Scott can legally cut off his salary, but the governor could bypass the assistant budget director, thereby leaving Coltrane with nothing to do except sit in his office.

In Asheville yesterday, Scott said that if he were entering another four-year term, he would request all his employees to submit undated resignations, so that he could change officials whenever he felt it desirable.

Prolonged Hot, Dry Spell Cause For Alarm Among Pitt Farmers

A prolonged period without rainfall is giving Pitt County farmers cause for a great deal of anxiety.

Consistently hot and dry weather in most sections of the county during recent weeks has materially retarded development of most growing crops, County Farm Agent Sam Winchester reported this morning.

"With the possible exception of cotton, which is looking pretty good all over the county, most crops are suffering badly from lack of rain," the farm agent stated. "Cotton seems to be holding its own very well compared to other crops."

According to Winchester, Pitt County tobacco growers this season got off to one of the earliest starts in many years and since blue mold was not widespread, the future of the crop looked unusually good for awhile.

"When planting first began, there was plenty of rain and soils were in such good shape as to make transplanting—except in isolated cases—almost wholly unnecessary," he said. "But since that time cool nights have caused premature 'buttoning' and dry weather has served only to aggravate the situation."

In most cases, when rain came in any heavy fall it was accompanied by violent hail and windstorms, which devastated tobacco fields in the Ayden-Grifton-Clay Root area and caused exceptionally heavy damage, the farm agent explained.

"Other crops, particularly corn and peanuts, are showing the results of present dry weather and of the cool nights a few days ago. In many instances corn blades are rolling up in the field, showing a very urgent need for rain."

Winchester added that the peanut outlook is not too good. "The peanut crop generally has a very ragged stand and is being attacked heavily by insects when nights are cool. Stands are unusually sparse in sandy soils, which suffer more from lack of rain than heavier soils."

"If farmers can get rain soon, they may still expect to make a good crop, but now is a critical time because most plants are just now developing their growth," he asserted. The farm agent was in agreement with most county farmers when he said, "We certainly need rain badly."

Usually Pro-Administration House Banking Committee Votes Down Move To Give President Requested Powers; Truman Being Forced Down Path Of T-H Injunction

WASHINGTON (UP)—The usually pro-administration House Banking Committee rejected 15 to 10 today a move to give President Truman power to seize the steel industry.

The action was taken as the committee worked on legislation to extend the Defense Production Act—the basic controls law which expires June 30.

The seizure proposal, identical to one already rejected by the Senate, was offered by Rep. Richard Bolling (D-Mo.).

Five Southern Democrats joined 10 Republicans in voting against it. One Republican joined nine Democrats in voting for it.

The outcome made it plain that the administration can have little, if any, hope of getting seizure legislation through the House.

President Truman was being forced down the path toward using the Taft-Hartley Act and its anti-strike injunction to end the crippling steel strike. The Senate has voted against Mr. Truman being "requested" to use it.

In the Senate, meanwhile, sponsors of seizure legislation tried a new tactic today in their campaign to give the government a weapon with which to deal with the steel crisis.

Blocked in efforts to get their proposals into the economic controls bill, Sens. Burnet R. Maybank (D-SC) and Francis E. Case (R-SD) withdrew them and then introduced legislation, known as the Maybank bill, which would authorize immediate government seizure of the strike-closed steel mills but would permit Congress to restore them at anytime by joint resolution.

The bill offered by Case would permit seizure in certain conditions but would require the president to exhaust all anti-strike provisions of the Taft-Hartley law first. Mr. Truman has said use of the Taft-Hartley Act would be unfair to the striking CIO United Steelworkers, who repeatedly postponed their walkout voluntarily.

The Senate was standing firm on its request that Mr. Truman use the Taft-Hartley Act to end the 11 day old strike of 650,000 steel workers.

High administration officials predicted that Mr. Truman would hold off seeking an 80-day anti-strike injunction under the Taft-Hartley law at least long enough to let the House act on his plea for seizure legislation. The issue was not expected to come before the House before late next week.

Mr. Truman will have a chance to say at his news conference this afternoon what he intends to do if Congress turns down the emergency powers he asked before a joint session Tuesday.

Presidential assistant John R. Steelman called in union and management representatives to iron out details of their agreement to reopen a limited number of steel mills to turn out critically needed military items for the Korean war.

Steelman said only a small tonnage of steel would be involved in the strike truce.

Two steel proposals were pending before the Senate when it met for its third straight day of debate.

One called for a modified form of compulsory arbitration in the steel dispute. It would permit seizure of the industry, but only after the President had first exhausted the remedies available under the Taft-Hartley law.

The second proposal was an administration-backed "compromise." It would permit immediate seizure of the steel industry, with the proviso that Congress could end government operation at any time by passing a joint resolution.

There was nothing in the Senate's voting record for the past three days to encourage the sponsor of

Emily Dupree Extends Honor To Miss Smith

Miss Mary Bertollet Smith was the honoree Wednesday afternoon when Miss Emily Dupree was a hostess at bridge as a compliment to her.

A color note of green and white was carried out in the choice of flowers which decorated the home. On the mantel in the living room was arranged a bridal scene in a setting of greenery and white flowers, with white tapers on either end to complete the arrangement.

Tables were set for a dessert course of bridal ices and cakes when the players arrived. Miss Mary Smith found a gardenia corsage at her place, and the other guests were seated according to marked tallies.

During the game iced drinks and salted nuts were passed by the hostess and her mother. Mrs. John Moss was the recipient of a prize for high score, while Mrs. C. H. Edwards Jr. was the recipient of a gift as a consolation prize. Miss Dorothy Stauffer was a guest for the refreshment hour only.

The hostess gave Miss Smith a gift of crystal in her chosen pattern at the time she gave the gifts to the card players.

Has Unexpected Bonus In Auction

BERKELEY, Calif. (UP) — Mrs. Tami Tanabe, 26, paid $1.50 at an auction sale for a box of assorted kitchen ware.

At home she took the lid off a teapot that was in the box and found some wadded paper. It turned out to be $500 in paper currency. She can keep the money if no one claims it within a year.

Country Club Luncheon For Brides Elect, Brides

Several brides-elect and brides were extended a courtesy on Wednesday when Mrs. Helene Hicks Kirkpatrick and her daughter, Miss Sarah Kirkpatrick, were luncheon hostesses in their honor.

The luncheon was given at the Greenville Country Club at 1:00 p. m. to honor Miss Mary Smith and Miss Dorothy Stauffer, both of whom will be married in June; Miss Denny Lee Bryson, whose engagement to J. Herbert Waldrop Jr. has been announced; Mrs. J. Hicks Corey Jr., formerly of Chattanooga, Tennessee, whose marriage took place the latter part of May; and Mrs. Bancroft Moseley, who was married in April.

Guests were greeted on the patio by the hostesses and the honorees, all of whom were wearing shoulder-esters of bridal flowers. The long luncheon table on the glassed veranda was lovely with its massive centerpiece of pink and white gladioli, interspersed with fronds of fern.

In addition to those already mentioned, the guest list included Misses Catherine Smith, Ann Dunn, Carolyn Fiewellen, Madeline C. H. Edwards Jr. and John Moss.

Formal Tea Hour Honors Mrs. J. Hicks Corey Jr.

A formal tea was given Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. J. Hicks Corey Sr. to introduce to her friends Mrs. J. Hicks Corey Jr., who was married in church rites in Chattanooga, Tennessee, the latter part of May.

Mrs. Corey is here on a brief visit with her husband to his family enroute to New York.

The home was elaborately decorated with a variety of flower arrangements in all the rooms where the guests were received. A pink and green color note was observed in the dining room, where the table was covered with green satin overlaid with an embroidered and ruffled organdy cloth. Its centerpiece was a striking arrangement of pink carnations and gypsophylla interspersed with touches of purple sprays and fern, which was in a low antique cut glass bowl. A bowl of red and pink roses was used on a serving table.

Guests were greeted upon their arrival by Mrs. Leon Russell and introduced to the receiving line, where Mrs. Corey was standing to present her daughter-in-law, who was wearing her bridal gown. Mrs. Zeno L. Edwards of Washington, aunt of the groom, was presented next, while Miss Dorothy Stauffer, a bride-elect, was presented as the last in line. Mrs. S. M. Edwards of Ayden and Mrs. J. J. Stauffer were at the door to the dining room, to invite the callers to the refreshment table.

Mrs. W. J. Bundy and Mrs. Zeno Edwards Jr. of Washington were seated at either end of the table and served block ice cream, pink and green mints, bridal cakes and salted nuts. Assisting them were Mrs. Robert Fennell, Mrs. Dallas Clark, Mrs. D. W. Swope, and Mrs. W. L. Cherry. Miss Sue Tucker, Miss Miltie Sue Taylor and Miss Virginia Smith also were serving in the dining room, while Mrs. Helene Hicks Kirkpatrick was standing at the door to the side porch.

Mrs. P. P. Brooks and Miss Eunice McGee were standing near the back hall to direct the guests to the den, where they were served a cup of iced punch by Miss Sarah Kirkpatrick from a round table covered with a floor length organdy cloth over green satin.

Mrs. J. A. Harper and Miss Lucinda Edwards assisted in the den. Throughout the home arrangements of magnolias, gladioli and other summer flowers were used in table and mantel arrangements.

Later in the evening Mrs. Corey served a cold buffet supper to those who assisted her during the afternoon.

To Close For Two Days
River Drive Beauty Shop will be closed Friday and Saturday.
Mrs. Veva Fleming.

Intermingled with the gladioli were double pink and white larkspur and baby's breath, all arranged in a crystal bowl which was flanked by pairs of matching candelabra with white tapers.

The guests found their places marked with bridal place cards and were served a full three course luncheon, in which the color note of pink and white was emphasized in the dessert course. Soft music appropriate to the occasion was played during the luncheon hour.

At the conclusion of the dessert course the honorees were each presented with gifts of china and crystal in her selected pattern. Miss Lucinda Edwards of Washington was also remembered with a gift.

In addition to those already mentioned, the guest list included Misses Catherine Smith, Ann Dunn, Carolyn Fiewellen, Madeline C. H. Edwards Jr. and John Moss.

J. H. Rose To Be Kiwanis Speaker

June H. Rose, past state commander of the North Carolina Department of the American Legion, will be the speaker at the Greenville Kiwanis Club next Friday night.

The program will feature National Flag Day, which is next Saturday. Don H. Conley, superintendent of Pitt County Schools, will have charge of the program. The meeting starts at 6:30. President Milo Smith will preside.

Driver Charged In Hit-And-Run

Police last night arrested Donald Grey Lewis, Route 2, Greenville, on the charge of hit-and-run driving.

The warrant alleges that Lewis car collided with an electric light pole, damaging the property to the extent of about $17. The case will be tried in Police Court Friday. Officer W. B. Cole, who made the arrest, said Lewis fled after the collision.

Supper Party At Country Club For Miss Smith

Mrs. Albion Dunn and her daughter, Miss Ann Varga Dunn, were supper hostesses Tuesday night when they entertained at the Country Club for Miss Mary Smith, bride-elect of this month.

Guests were greeted on the patio and enjoyed a social hour in the early evening coolness before being invited to find their places at the appointed supper table on the screened veranda. Miss Smith and Miss Dorothy Stauffer, another bride-elect of early summer, were given white carnation corsages when they arrived. Mrs. Morris Brody, a recent bride, was remembered with a pink and white carnation corsage, and the hostesses also presented Mrs. Guy Smith, mother of the honoree, with a yellow shoulderette.

The supper table was centered with a large bowl of pink and white gladioli. Six pairs of double candelabra, with white tapers were used the length of the table to furnish illumination for the supper, which was served in three courses. Traceries of greenery formed graceful streamers which connected the pairs of candle holders down the center of the table.

As a conclusion to the supper, the hostesses presented gifts to the brides-elect and to Mrs. Brody. Miss Smith was given a silver platter, Miss Stauffer was remembered with a gift of china in her selected pattern, while Mrs. Brody was given crystal in her pattern.

Local Youth To Again Appear On Television Show

Douglas Mitchell of Greenville will make another appearance over television in Bill Deed's Talent Show.

The Greenville youth appeared with a group of other young people from the city and Pitt County last month over the same TV show. Mitchell said he received a card from Deed asking him to make another appearance on his show tomorrow night. Mitchell will read "The Tell-Tale Heart" by Edgar Allan Poe.

The Talent Show will be televised over Norfolk Channel Four, tomorrow night at 6:15 EST.

Missing Child Is Reported Found

Judith Ann Ferris, 11-year-old stepdaughter of James Joyner, who was reported to Greenville police to be missing early today, has been found.

At 6:30 this morning Joyner told police his daughter disappeared. She was wearing overalls when she left and her family could not ascribe any reason for her leaving. At 7 o'clock a passing motorist phoned police that the girl was on a highway near the County Home and walking toward Greenville. A deputy sheriff picked her up and returned her to her home, about five miles out on the Farmville highway.

Hostesses At Garden Party For Miss Smith

A delightful garden party yesterday morning honored Miss Mary Smith, whose approaching marriage will be solemnized next Wednesday.

Hostesses for the informal morning hour were Mrs. N. O. Warren and Mrs. Fred Haar, and the lovely setting was the garden at the home of the Haars on East Ninth Street.

Guests were welcomed at the entrance to the garden by the hostesses and Miss Smith. Mrs. Bancroft Moseley, a recent bride, was also receiving with the others. Iced drinks from a wheelbarrow of crushed ice were placed close to a rustic table on which were accompanying cheese biscuits, canapés, hors d'oeuvres and sweet pastries. After serving themselves the guests enjoyed a social hour relaxing on the benches and garden chairs which were placed for their convenience around the spacious garden. The blooming flowers provided an unusually charming decorative effect for the morning social.

Legal Aspects In Administering Of Schools Discussed At Meet

Objectives of legislation in support of public education were defined by Assistant Attorney General Claude Love of Raleigh and Asheville in a conference on legal aspects of school administration held Wednesday at East Carolina College.

A law is written to do justice and solve problems and is not a science to get an answer by a mathematical rule, Love said in discussing the school legislation written by the North Carolina General Assembly and various decisions of the courts. Love cited the provisions of the State Constitution in Article 9 and its various sections as developing out of the desire to provide good government and happiness of mankind through encouragement of schools and the means of education for the citizens of North Carolina.

Various functions of school boards were defined and quotations from recent Supreme Court decisions affecting the public schools were outlined by Dr. J. D. Messick, president of East Carolina College, who preceded Assistant Attorney-General Love on the program. Mr. Love was the principal speaker who addressed the opening session of the conference in Austin Auditorium and also led a forum on the influence of court decisions on Education at a luncheon session.

Dr. J. K. Long, chairman of the Division of Education at East Carolina College, presided over both sessions of the conference. The luncheon forum included questions dealing with principals' and teachers' contracts, school attendance laws, provisions for membership on school boards, and school districting for administration and building programs.

Attendance of near 100 persons at the conference included school superintendents and principals from all sections of Central and Eastern North Carolina in addition to students enrolled in the Summer School at East Carolina College.

Police Failed To Win Back Wife

LINCOLN, Neb. (UP) —Lincoln police had no luck in trying to help a tired farmer win back his estranged wife.

Kefauver Starts Tarheelia Tour

ASHEVILLE — (AP) — Sen. Estes Kefauver started a rapid-fire, one-day swing through North Carolina today with his conskin cap pointed toward the Tar Heel State's 32 Democratic national convention votes.

The Tennesseean had a busy round of handshaking laid out for him from the mountains through the industrial Piedmont. Flying with his wife and other members of his presidential campaign staff, he had stops scheduled at Charlotte, Raleigh and Greensboro after his brief appearance here.

At each stop, he was whisked through downtown streets for short conferences with his campaign workers, state political leaders and members of the press and radio. Sponsors of the Kefauver visit said his tip was mostly in the nature of a good-will trip. But it was no secret that the lanky crime-busting senator, who presently is leading the other Democratic candidates in the number of pledged delegates, had his eye on the state's national convention votes.

The state Democratic convention endorsed the candidacy of another Southerner, Sen. Richard Russell of Georgia. But the move didn't commit the Tar Heel delegates beyond the first ballot, if on that.

Russell himself has made several recent quick trips to the state, stopping at Raleigh, Charlotte and Elizabeth City.

Voted Against Joining Guild

Recover Bodies Of Drowned Men

SALISBURY — (AP) — The bodies of two men who drowned in the Yadkin River on Monday have now been recovered.

Rescue squads and volunteer searchers recovered the body of 40-year-old Lloyd A. Frick of Salisbury last night. The body of his companion, L. H. Talbert, also of Salisbury, was taken from the river on Tuesday. Talbert is a former Spencer police chief.

The two men drowned when their boat capsized while they were fishing.

Feels 'Better' Without Food

ALLIANCE, O. (UP) —Herman Nelson, 64-year-old railroad engineer, said today that going without solid food for 43 days has made him "feel better."

He ended his "water diet" yesterday by drinking four ounces of unsweetened grape juice. He believes that whether a person eats solid food or sticks to water is "just a matter of taste."

Generous Gifts Helped Others

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UP) — Four days ago a thief stole the bicycle that 14 year old Bobby Boltinhouse needed to exercise his polio-crippled legs.

A newspaper appeal brought five new bikes to Bobby's house. He picked one out for himself yesterday and sent the others to General Hospital for use by other polio patients.

GOD SIDE — MAN SIDE

In recent months a national magazine telling a story about a remarkable negro quoted him as declaring that every person has a God part and a man part, and neither can go hungry.

We need to emphasize all the time that we are not only human beings but spiritual beings. Every one of us is a spirit on two legs. We have a man part which makes it possible for us to adjust ourselves to the world of matter; we have a God part which makes it possible for us to keep in touch with the Creator, to learn his will for us daily, and to carry out his purposes. If the man part of us misses a single meal or has to go on a restricted diet for a day or two, our misery and walling reach uncontrolled proportions. Yet millions of people go through life and pay practically no attention to the God side of their nature. They never utter a prayer, they never read the Bible, they never go to church, they live their lives in complete indifference to the Ten Commandments, they have no love for their neighbor.

On the man side, it is safe to assume that you will live just as well as your income, minus your taxes, will permit. But how well are you living on the God side of your nature?

Think about this, and reflect on whether or not you may be suffering from spiritual malnutrition.

Koje And Korea Parallel Cases

Communist prisoners on Kojie Island have been slapped down to make them realize they are prisoners of war, and no longer warriors.

The most regrettable thing about the clean-up is that it was not done several months ago before the Communist prisoners were allowed to gain the upper hand inside the barbed wire enclosures.

In spite of the fact that some 40 lives were lost in cleaning out compound 76—the toughest compound on Kojie—the project was not nearly so tough as preview reports had indicated. It was a bloody mess, there is no doubt about it. But it was a project that had to be done. After the resistance was broken down in the toughest of the compounds, the prisoners in the others were submitting to the splitting up project without resistance.

The Communists within the compounds on Kojie got by with their bluff on resistance for a long time, but once it was shown emphatically that the U. N. were going to meet force with force, it took only a few hours for the Communists to give in. That, we think, is typical of the Communists. They understand only force, and seek at every opportunity to push for advantages until met with force.

By the same token, a parallel can be drawn between the Kojie situation and the growing conflict between the East and the West. Had sufficiently stern measures been taken on Kojie Island soon enough, the prison incidents which have cropped up in the past two months would have been avoided. The United Nations there made the same mistake they have made all along with the Communists. They allowed the Communists to get by too long without taking decisive action.

On Kojie, when the decisive action came, it was not too costly. In other instances in dealing with the Communists, we have seen that our delay in taking decisive action has proven far too costly.

He Has The Tool If He'll Only Use It

The Senate's prompt, decisive rejection of President Truman's plea for legislative power to seize the nation's steel mills shows clearly the members of the upper house believe there are already ample laws in the books which the President can use in settling the steel issue.

The action also shows the members of the Senate do not want to give the President such far reaching powers which ultimately may lead complete government control of industry and business.

The Reflector feels that President Truman's plea for legislation giving him the power of seizure was made on shaky foundations. Previously he had taken the step on his own initiative under the "inherent powers" of the President under the Constitution. But the Supreme Court declared Truman's act unconstitutional. Now he is seeking the same power through a different means.

All during the period of the steel dispute, Mr. Truman has flatly refused to use the powers of the Taft-Hartley law, although the provisions of that legislation seem, in our opinion, adequate to deal with the steel situation. In past industrial crises President Truman has invoked provisions of the Taft-Hartley law with effectiveness to bring about management-union settlements of disputes.

Now, however, the President asserts the use of the Taft-Hartley act would be "unwise, unfair and quite possibly ineffective." We can't follow his line of such reasoning, and there are many other people across the nation who cannot follow it either.

The Taft-Hartley act — just like other legislation—was enacted to provide tools with which to work in meeting crises. The law was not enacted to be disregarded entirely just because the Chief Executive wishes to gain more far reaching powers than he has under the Constitution. While Mr. Truman has sought greater powers instead of using the powers he already has, the nation's welfare has suffered.

National Whirligig

By RAY TUCKER

Washington, June 12—The Republicans' official 1950 declaration of party principles and objectives, which General Eisenhower has recommended as the basis for a 1952 platform, was regarded as such a "back to Methuselah" document by his campaign managers and leading supporters for the presidential nomination that they denounced it and refused to sign it.

The principal framers of this off-year statement were Senator Taft, Ike's main rival to head the ticket this year, former House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., and National Chairman Guy Gabrielson.

Martin favors General MacArthur in the current contest, and MacArthur openly backs Taft. Although supposedly neutral, Chairman Gabrielson reflects the national committee's preference for the Ohio Senator.

WISHY-WASHY The Eisenhower critics of the "liberty against socialism" creed, which was the headline of the opus, included such promoters as Senators Lodge, Duff, Smith of Maine, Aiken of Vermont, Ives of New York, Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York, Governor Alfred E. Driscoll of New Jersey and Ike's two House supporters—Representatives Javits of New York and Fulton of Pennsylvania.

They objected on two counts—namely, the wishy-washy, pussy-footing declaration on civil rights legislation, and the general denunciation of Roosevelt-Truman reforms as "socialistic."

Senator Lodge, Ike's campaign manager, and Governor Dewey, Eisenhower's original sponsor after his own 1948 defeat for the presidency, were the most articulate and vocal in their condemnation.

DILEMMA Since his return from Europe, Eisenhower has discussed this dilemma with these 1950 dissenters. They have told him that, although they differed on phraseology and the specific handling of certain issues, they really believed in the broad principles enunciated in the party pronouncement.

But that is not the way they talked in February of 1950, when the Taft-Martin-Gabrielson faction charted the GOP course.

The circumstances behind the issuance of this off-year statement give it unusual importance in Republican annals. It was meant to be a mandate for the Congressional elections of that year, when it was feared that the combined Truman-labor forces might deal the party a blow by defeating Taft in Ohio. He won by 431,000 on this platform and his own record.

It was also designed to allay rumors of serious differences between Taft and the late Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, the GOP's champion of a bipartisan foreign policy. "Van" approved the statement's reference to foreign matters, which was his main concern, and made no objections to its approach to domestic issues.

Oddly, or perhaps naturally, Arthur H. Vandenberg, Jr., is one of General Eisenhower's aides. Just before the statement was issued, when the writer questioned Taft about reports of his feud with the since deceased Michigan statesman, the Ohioan retorted:

"What do I have to do—kiss Arthur at high noon every day before the Senate convenes to prove that there are no hard feelings between us?"

PLATFORM In an effort to ascertain party sentiment, Gabrielson sent letters to 50,000 field workers, and more than 10,000 responded. Representatives from the House, Senate and national committee spent most of December and January in boiling down the answers into a succinct statement. The three groups agreed angrily over the finished document at closed sessions on February 6, 1950—a date that may become politically famous.

The platform as issued advocated continuance of a bipartisan foreign program, but assailed the Yalta-Potsdam "secret" agreements and White House neglect of the Senate's treaty-making authority.

It demanded a balanced budget, tax reductions, farm price supports, improvement of the Taft-Hartley Act along the line of pending Taft amendments, extension of social security coverage and an increase in payments, elimination of Communists and fellow-travelers from the government.

On civil rights it said: "We shall continue to sponsor legislation to protect the rights of minorities."

Eisenhower favors leaving this and similar problems to the "local communities," although declaring that, as president, he would use his influence in this cause.

INFURIATED This right-wing victory infuriated the so-called "liberals," despite their more recent smoothing comments to Eisenhower.

Lodge demanded immediate enactment of civil rights legislation, and a GOP alliance with Truman Democrats to smash the southerners' filibuster on this issue. He demurred from the characterization of the Truman Administration as "socialists," describing them as "mere opportunists." The slogan of "liberty against socialism," said the Bay State blue blood, was an "overstatement."

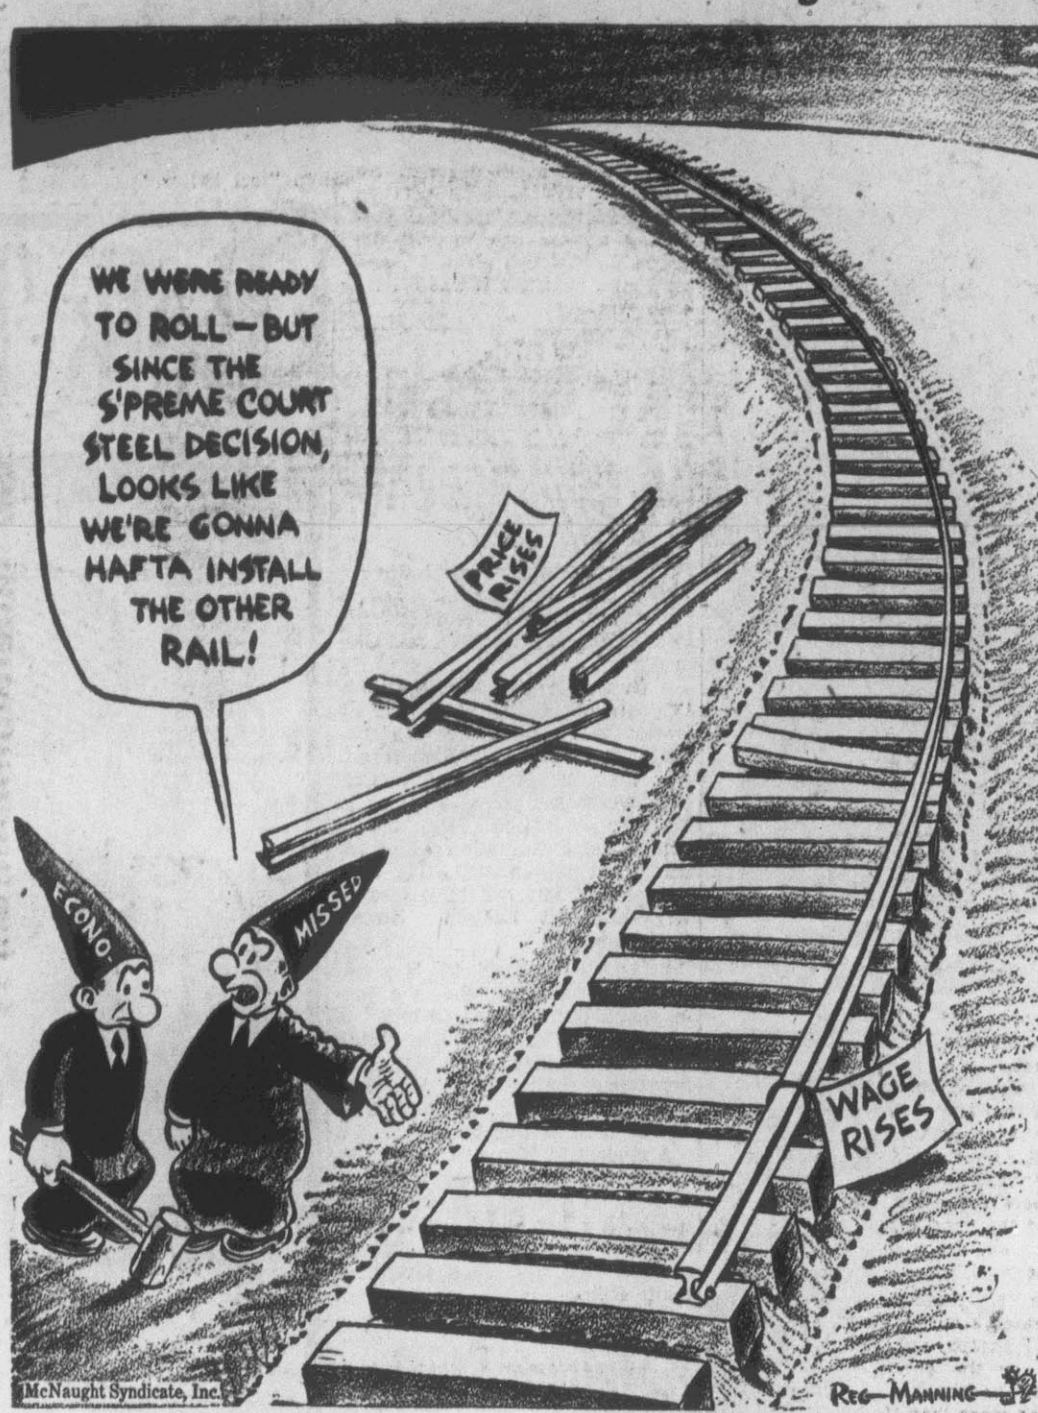

Senator Ives branded the statement as "disappointing" because it "falls far short of the 1948 platform" (a Dewey-Warren product) on civil rights, labor-management relations and social responsibility. Speaking at Princeton a few days later, Dewey blew his top.

"REACTION" He attacked "the very loud voices in the Republican party denouncing all the platforms and candidates with the epithet, 'me too'." He said that the "complaint and the epithet originate largely with those who hold isolationist or extremely conservative views, or both." He scoffed at the statement's sponsors as "the croaking voices of reaction."

The New York governor wound up with a quote from his fellow-executive, Driscoll of New Jersey, who is an all-out Ike man. Dewey referred approvingly to Driscoll's remark that "there are some Republicans who believe that, if the Democrats say they are for the Ten Commandments and the Bill of Rights, we should be against them."

Dewey also denounced the anti-Truman, Capitol Hill coalition of Republicans and southern Democrats. In view of Ike's obvious play to Dixie with his states' rights attitude on FEPC, where do the general and his political backers go from here, with Ike himself recommending what appalled his backers in 1950?

Wonderful Wizards Of Washington

Somebody Told Me

By L. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Sunday I'm going to Fort Jackson, S. C. for two weeks' training with the Army Reserves. That's why I took particular interest in an article I saw last night by Curt Simmons, star pitcher for the Philadelphia Phillies. Curt's National Guard unit was called a year and a half ago, and he was recently discharged. His article is entitled "How to Get Along in the Army."

Curt has some quick reminders: (1) Don't worry; let the Army do it for you. (2) Don't try to outsmart the system. (3) Keep busy; don't gripe all day. (4) Don't volunteer for anything.

More generally speaking, Curt says, "Look fellows. When you get those well-known 'Greetings' from Uncle Sam, don't dive out the nearest window. Don't head for the Mexican border, and don't commit hara-kiri. You'll live through it. What's more, you may, if you're smart or lucky, profit by it. At least, I did.

"On April 10, when I got out of the Army, I told the newspapermen who came to interview me: 'I didn't enjoy the Army. I think most guys dislike military life. A few people criticized me for that remark, but I still stick by it.

'Americans are civilians at heart, most of them, anyway. They do their soldiering when they have to, but they don't like it. Personally, I think that's the way it should be. But no matter what I think, the fact is that we still have the draft. And we still have to serve in the Army or one of the other armed services.

"If you're draft-ripe, don't take on a lot of money obligations. Try to get your affairs in order, so that the wrench from civilian life won't be too painful. Don't buy a car, or a television set, or start building a house. The payments will be a worry to you all the time you're in the service. Even in the matter of getting married, I'd think about it for a few months in the service first.

"Take advantage of everything the Army has to offer. If you always wanted to improve your English, or brush up on math, or learn to speak Russian, do it in the service. You'll have more free time then. By the same token, if you get to Europe, or the Orient, or the Caribbean, take advantage of those three-day passes and do a little sight-seeing and broaden your knowledge of the world."

And I thank Curt.

Around Capitol Square

By LYNN NISBET

HANDS-OFF — Members of the advisory budget commission got together informally Tuesday morning to talk about developments in the feud between Director of the Budget Kerr Scott and Assistant to the Director Dave Coltrane. Whether the meeting was by chance or by deliberate arrangement cannot be determined. Anyway, the fellows talked all around the main subject and decided it was none of their affair. That decision is expected to have general public approval.

BASIS — One feature of the controversy between Scott and Coltrane, and to somewhat lesser degree involved in the outright firing of Parolus Commissioner T. C. Johnson and Motor Vehicles Commissioner Landon C. Rosser, has been overlooked in most of the oral and written comment. While personalities of necessity attract most attention, the fact is basic state governmental administration policies are at stake. There is considerable doubt about the wisdom of the statute permitting the Governor to fire the head of the motor vehicles department without requirement for assigning cause for the action; but that is the way the law reads. It is inherent in the functions required to be performed by them as personal agents of the Governor that he should be able to replace the parolus commissioner and the assistant director of the budget. But there is doubt about his statutory authority to remove his assistant as director of the budget. Tradition and custom sometimes acquire the status of law. In fact, most of the laws of American states are grounded in what is called the Common Law of England—which is essentially custom, dignified by long practice.

ESTABLISHED—Functions of the assistant director of the budget have been established more by custom and practice than by statute. Actually the statute gives him little authority in his own right. The commissioner of parolus has no authority in his own name. Until now there had been no serious conflict in opinions of the Governor and his assistant, over a quarter century of experience. So it is that practice has been confused with statute.

FAR REACHING — The statutes do provide definite term appointments for the assistant to the director of the budget, and events are shaping for a court test of the appointee's property right to the position for the full term. In the atmosphere of emotionalism surrounding the recent primary, majority sentiment quite obviously is with Coltrane and against Scott. The issue at stake transcends personalities and extends far beyond one political campaign which is already history and cannot be char-

Admitting for purpose of argument that Governor Scott's reasons for firing two officials and asking the resignation of another are inadequate; agreeing that his timing is bad, and further conceding that his actions under the circumstances come perilously close to violation of the election laws for which he might be subject to indictment, one or two other facts stand out.

SHORT SIGHTED — In their zeal to embarrass Governor Scott some ardent Umstead folks may be contributing to conditions that would completely hamstring

Governor Umstead during his whole administration, as well as future governors who will follow him, in their insistence upon Coltrane to stand pat and fight the thing out. In the event he carries the issue to the courts and wins, it will ham-string Governor Scott for six months. It will also ham-string Governor Umstead for four years, unless the next General Assembly makes material revision in the law.

DISRUPTION — Turnover in the budget bureau right now would be unfortunate. Itinerary has just been completed for the biennial visit of the advisory budget commission to state institutions, preparatory to making up the budget for the next two years. Any ill effects from the disruption of schedule will be the responsibility of Governor Coltrane if his ideas prevail, and history will so record the facts. But if the Umstead folks, including Dave Coltrane, insist upon "bucking" the Governor the disruption will be as serious or worse, and they will have to assume responsibility.

DEMOCRATS — The plan of organization of the Democratic party in North Carolina provides that as soon as practicable after the state convention the executive committee shall be called into session to select a state chairman and plan for the fall campaign. Usually these organizational meetings are held after the national convention in presidential election years. The 1952 session is tentatively scheduled for mid-August. While the committee is the chairman, custom has been for the Governor-nominate to name him. That means

What Other Papers Are Thinking

DON'T TAKE CHANCES

(Dunn Record)

With the advent of the present hot weather, everyone is becoming vacation minded. Vacations, in our modern fast-moving world have come to be a necessity, rather than a luxury. We need a period of relaxation from the stress and strain of modern living.

So, perhaps, this is as good a time as any to wish all our friends an enjoyable profitable vacation. Profitable, that is, from the standpoint of bettering of health, and a renewed zest for their everyday occupation.

However, we also add the grim hope that you may live to enjoy this vacation. Because, if you are not careful, you very well might not. Extra hazards have been added, and vacation time has become one of the high points of the year, with reference to accidents.

Over the past week-end, there were accidental drownings in this area, all of children. Parental supervision and instruction in the fundamentals of water safety might have prevented these three tragedies.

We urge parents to exercise the closest possible supervision over their children while they are in or around the water. Don't let them take unnecessary chances. By all means let them enjoy the water, but safely.

Accidents on the highway, too, take a much heavier toll of human life during the vacation season than at other times of the year. Although you, yourself are an excellent driver, you cannot possibly predict what the other fellow will do.

So don't take chances. Don't try to make all the miles in one day by driving after you are tired and your reflexes are slower than normal. In these days of high speed driving, your reflex response must be sharp and well co-ordinated. If you feel tired, stop and rest. You'll get there anyway, and all in one piece.

The hours just after dusk and before full dark are particularly dangerous. Light is extremely poor and it is not quite dark enough for headlights to be effective. This is an excellent time to stop and eat.

Wherever you go or whatever you do on your vacation, try and observe all the safety rules, and encourage your children to do likewise. If you do, you are sure to have a happy and safe vacation.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

Supermarkets, having won an enclave in the drug market, are now contesting for a segment of the soft goods field. In all sections of the country, supermarkets are bit gingerly adding lines of nylon hosiery, underwear and other kinds of packaged apparel and accessories.

Just as they predicted that some day the supers would take over all the drug business except the prescription end, enthusiasts are predicting that they will take over all but the tailored-to-measure end of the soft goods field.

These prognosticators envision supers as the store of the future where, with one-stop shopping, families can obtain all but a few of their needs. A few supers are pretty close to its now. In addition to food, they carry such varied things as cigars, liquor, bulbs and seeds, kitchen utensils, small appliances, hardware, paints, books, oil paintings and a great variety of other things.

So maybe they will take over the largest part of the soft-goods field. But it is not likely.

Note that the soft goods now are being sold are all packaged. Except at a few places where they are sold at check-out stands, even the hosiery is offered in large, substantial packages—too big to be slipped into a pocket or handbag.

There is an even more important factor that limits supers in soft goods. That's human nature. Shoppers go to supers primarily for food and to apparel stores for apparel. In a super, a non-food item may create impulse sales, especially if the price is lower than in a traditional store.

And the price can often be lower, because supers hire fewer salesmen, letting the advertising, the packaging and the customer herself do the selling. Some soft goods can be sold on a self-service basis, as the supers' salesmen go into the field and the experience of a number of department stores show. But most of them have to have a salesperson behind them, and as long as that is true, the supers' part of the field will be largely opportunistic.

During the expansion of the drug store in the twenties, it was often predicted that it would become the major shopping center, selling meals, soft drinks, appliances and every other conceivable want. Drug stores are doing a lively business in many of these lines. They have taken over most of the business of the old-fashioned ice cream parlor, unless these parlors are now selling drugs. But restaurants, appliance dealers, notion stores, stationers and other "victims" of drug store competition are surviving lustily.

SUPERMARKETS OFFER NON-FOOD OPPORTUNITIES

Because supermarkets are so busy broadening their lines, they may offer opportunities for an increasing number of non-food manufacturers. Any such supplier eyeing this market will quickly discover these things:

The product has to be packaged, preferably in one not easily shopped.

It must be well enough known to sell itself.

The price must be low enough for supers to undersell competing merchants and, at the same time, provide a better margin than food. One of the reasons supers are interested in non-food lines is that food mark-ups are frozen and, with costs rising, the supers are seeking goods that will improve their average margins.

NEW YORK (AP) — The trouble with politicians today isn't that they all sound alike. It's that they all dress alike.

The average politician looks so much like any ordinary man you can't even tell he is running for office until he opens his mouth. Then it's too late.

Politicians need something to set them apart. Nothing sets a man apart like a uniform. So why not uniforms for politicians? Since everybody loves a uniform, why not also create one for bureaucrats, too? It would peg them up. Bureaucrats are getting the idea nobody really loves them anymore.

Many people in government life now wear uniforms—such as policemen, firemen, members of the armed forces, garbage collectors and diplomats (readily identified by their homburg hats and striped pants). But if every public servant wore a uniform you could see at a glance what he was. You could also be impressed at how many of them there are.

Naturally you would have to have different uniforms to distinguish those elected to office and those appointed to their jobs. All bureaucrats, for example, might be outfitted in neat white hair-shirts and serviceable blue serge suits lined in the seat with a good grade of saddle leather. You could tell their rank by the chevrons on their sleeves, just as you now can tell a corporal from a sergeant. To build pride of service, each bureaucrat might be permitted to wear a stripe on his cuff for every three years he had been in his post.

Then you could look at his chevrons, count his stripes and figure his salary.

To stamp him even clearer, each bureaucrat might wear a metal lapel emblem denoting his branch of government. For example, a miniature ear of corn for the Department of Agriculture, a pine tree for the National Park Service, a pair of pliers for the Labor Department, a gift dollar sign for the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Now let us consider a uniform for elected politicians. They present more of a problem. A politician wants to look impressive and well-dressed. But not too well-dressed.

Perhaps a return to the old Roman toga is called for. The toga is a simple classic garment, rich in dignity. Sew in a few inside pockets and provide the politician with a place to stow his car keys, cigars, aspirin tablets, and campaign leaflets.

Politicians belonging to the party in power would wear a toga of purple, the traditional color of royalty. THEIR TOGAS MIGHT EVEN BE TASTEFULLY TRIMMED WITH FUR. Mink? No, no, no. Maybe ermine. Politicians of the party out of power would look felching to the voters in a toga of white, symbol of purity, with a small gold star of hope blazoned over the heart.

I can hear some gruff old U.S. senator grunting already: "How could the people tell me from an elected dog catcher or county clerk?"

That's easy, senator. Every public office would have its own campaign ribbon—from sheriff on up. You would wear on your chest separate ribbons for all the offices you had been elected to. If you were serving your sixth term in the Senate, you would wear a senatorial ribbon with five oak leaf clusters. A voter could view your chest and know your whole long and honorable public career. As it is now, you have to keep reminding him.

There remains only one problem. What about a uniform for a politician who runs for office and loses?

The only thing that comes to mind is a suit of sackcloth and a crying towel, edged in black.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON — Miss Gertrude Warren has dedicated her life to the rural youth of America. "Mother of the Four-H Club movement," she has helped groom them to assume responsibilities of citizenship and leadership.

A farm girl from Lockport, in upper New York state, Miss Warren came to Washington 35 years ago to direct the organization of Four-H clubs under the Extension Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. One of the world's greatest youth movements, the Four-H Clubs on the eve of their annual Camp Meeting here (June 18-25) boast of an active membership of more than two million farm boys and girls and more than 15 million alumni.

Miss Warren, due to retire soon from her government job, says she will continue to develop in rural youth a "way of life built on self-help and the ability to work beyond their simple daily tasks to take their place in the life of the nation."

In addition to these interests, Miss Warren has recently been endowed with others closely aligned. As newly-elected president of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association, Inc., she will carry on its current program of conservation, 4-H scholarships, horticulture and roadside improvements. The association was founded in 1914 to help farm women merchandise their goods. This work is still carried on in Maine, but in the other 10 member states it has been superseded by the other projects. In recent years it has awarded some $10,000 annually in scholarships to young farm people.

Miss Warren was teaching home economics at Columbia University, her alma mater, and working for a doctorate when she was asked to come to Washington. She helped develop the 4-H citizenship path, the National 4-H Foundation and National 4-H Club center here, the International Farm Youth Exchange program and the one-year 4-H fellowships in the Department of Agriculture. For her work in this field she has received the Department's superior service award.

She has traveled to every state in the union many times over and twice to the Caribbean area to help start 4-H clubs. (4-H stands for "A Head to clearer thinking, A Heart to greater loyalty, Hands to greater service and Health to better living.") The former governor of Latvia conferred the Order of the Tree Stars on her for the help she gave in starting similar groups in that little country.

Rumor Of GOP Maneuverings Unfolded

Ethel Merman In Disappearance

EL PASO, Tex. (UP)—Broadway star Ethel Merman, newly freed of her second husband via a quickie Mexican divorce, played the mystery woman today after suddenly disappearing from her New York home. Miss Merman, the singing star of "Call Me Madame" and "Annie Get Your Gun," pulled a disappearing act amid rumors she planned to marry Robert Six of Denver, president of Continental Airlines, following her Tuesday divorce at Juarez, Mexico, from New York newspaperman Robert D. Levitt. She could not be located at El Paso. Six was registered at an El Paso hotel over the weekend, but he was reported back in Denver.

Balance Of Vote Power Reported Being Organized

By RAYMOND LAHR
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—The hard-fought race for the Republican presidential nomination was thrown into confusion today by reports of backstage maneuvering to weld three pivotal state delegations into a balance-of-power bloc to dominate the GOP convention.

The reports, published by the Baltimore Sun and the Washington Times-Herald, said negotiations involved Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin of Maryland, Gov. John S. Fife of Pennsylvania and republican National Committeeman Arthur Summerfield of Michigan.

Large blocs of GOP convention delegates from all three states are now listed as uncommitted in the contest between Sen. Robert A. Taft and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The reports did not say which GOP candidate such a coalition might back. There was no immediate confirmation from any of the principals in the alleged maneuver. Some highly-placed members of the Taft and Eisenhower campaign organizations here expressed skepticism. They said they had heard "nothing whatever" about any such deal being in the wind.

But the very existence of the reports created a stir in the already-tense GOP camps, and focused new attention on the key role to be played at the nominating convention by the more than 100 delegates who have not yet been pledged to either Taft or Eisenhower.

The Sun said that McKeldin, who holds Maryland's 24 GOP convention votes as a "favorite son" candidate, had been approached with a proposal to unite his delegation with uncommitted delegates from Pennsylvania and Michigan to form a 100-vote convention coalition.

It said the deal was proposed by Fife, who controls at least 25 delegates out of Pennsylvania's 70, and who has refused up to now to commit himself to either Eisenhower or Taft.

The Sun said McKeldin was reported to have informed Fife, through an intermediary, that he was ready to consider forming such a bloc "if satisfactory conditions can be agreed upon."

The dispatch gave no indication whether McKeldin, who was once regarded as pro-Eisenhower, expected the coalition to swing its weight behind Taft, Eisenhower, or a dark-horse "compromise" candidate.

In a similar dispatch, the Times-Herald said it learned that McKeldin has been "negotiating for several weeks" with representatives of Fife and of the Michigan GOP delegation. It said the Maryland governor would confer with Fife and a Michigan GOP spokesman within the next two weeks.

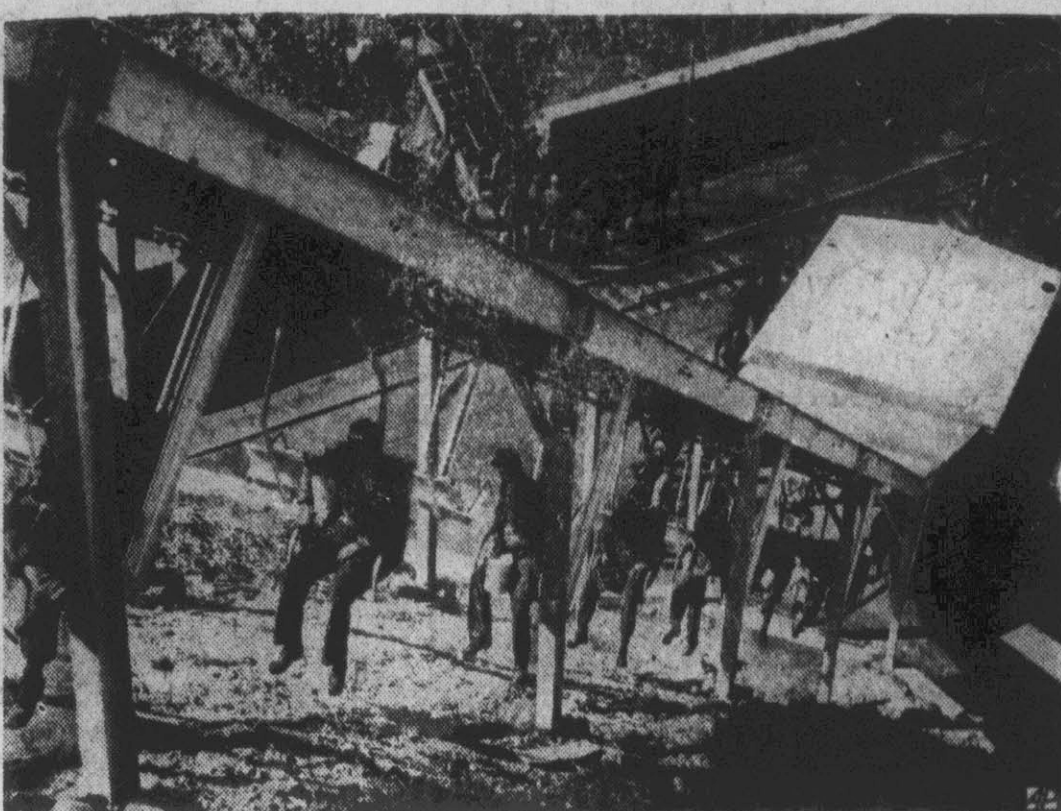

With only 15 GOP convention delegates still to be chosen, the United Press tabulation of formal pledges and known first-ballot preferences shows Taft with 468 delegates, Eisenhower with 400, and 132 uncommitted. It takes 604 votes for nomination.

The largest blocs of uncommitted delegates shown in the tabulation are in Michigan (26), and Pennsylvania (25). Maryland's 24 votes are theoretically supposed to go to McKeldin on the first ballot, but the Times-Herald said McKeldin was considering releasing the delegates even before the first ballot.

In other political developments: 1. David S. Ingalls, Taft's campaign manager, said a "strange affinity" between Eisenhower supporters and the administration had raised "grave doubts" that the general can wage an effective campaign for the GOP nomination.

Ingalls said the "affinity" was shown when "three top men in the Eisenhower organization" voted to give President Truman authority to seize strike-bound defense plants. The move was beaten.

Piggy-Back Rockets To Soon Gain Outer Space

CHICAGO (UP)—Piggy-back rockets, riding one upon another and fired in sequence, make travel into outer space "feasible" within the "foreseeable future," a scientist said today.

Kenneth H. Jacobs, a rocket expert for the Armour Research Foundation, said that as succeeding rockets were fired, the motor and empty fuel tanks of the previous rocket would be cut loose.

He estimated that five progressively smaller rockets all riding piggy-back could overcome the "staggering" gravitational pull of the earth and make the trip into outer atmosphere.

Such a space ship, Jacobs said, would be about twice the size of a German V-2 rocket or about 125 feet long and 12 feet in diameter. The rocket which actually arrived in outer space would carry a "payload" of about 10 pounds of radar sets.

The piggy-back principle is necessary because it overcomes the need for propelling a single rocket to a speed great enough to drive it through the earth's pull in one giant thrust.

"To leave the earth," Jacobs said, "a V-2 would have to travel at 25,000 MPH. This speed is equivalent to circling the earth at the equator in one hour."

V-2's traveled at the comparative snail's pace of 3,600 MPH although they developed 60,000 horsepower, about the same as five large four-engine airliners or 400 Cadillac automobiles.

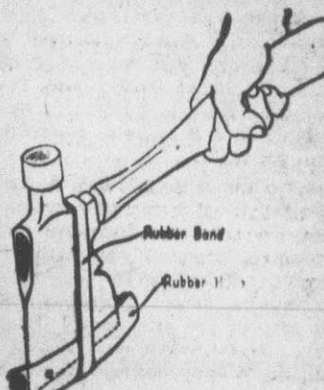

But with the piggy-back rockets, the big 125-foot space ship would be the journey toward space, industrialist, was named Taft's floor manager at the national convention.

3. James A. DeLong, an Oklahoma delegate pledged to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, said the GOP keynoter will seek the presidential nomination if a deadlock develops between Eisenhower and Taft.

4. Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, a candidate for the Democratic nomination, said at ceremonies dedicating a Columbus television station that TV "may sound the death knell for political decisions made in smoke-filled rooms (because) for the first time, millions of our citizens will be able to see the two great national political conventions."

5. Gov. Fuller Warren of Florida said Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia "is the only Democrat I know who will be able to carry the entire South," but Russell "is not a sectional candidate in any sense of the word."

Anti-Religious Campaign In Hungary Described By Top Communist Leader

By W. A. RYSER
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON — (UP) — In a review of the Communists' post-war fight for supreme power in Hungary, the veteran Communist leader and general party secretary, Matyas Rakosi, revealed the tactics used by the Communists to break down the influence of the Catholic Church.

In an article in the Communist Party monthly, Social Review, Rakosi described how his party attacked the church and destroyed its power under the pretext that it was harboring "reactionary elements."

The campaign against the church came only after the Communists had succeeded in compromising and destroying the largest Hungarian political organization, the Smallholders' Party, and in splitting and absorbing the Socialists.

In addition, the Communists had brought under their control the security police and their trade unions. Only after having thus prepared the ground did they attempt to attack the Christian churches and the Catholic Church as the last in the long list of organizations which they had marked for destruction.

Campaign Described
In Rakosi's own words, the Communists' campaign against the churches developed as follows:

"The winning over (by the Communists) of the masses of peasants, the small bourgeoisie and, in certain places, even of the industrial workers was rendered extremely difficult by the reaction hiding behind the cloak of the church."

"The majority of the church leaders were opposed to democracy from the very first moment. This opposition was particularly sharp on the part of the Catholic Church, whose lands were taken away by the land reform. The churches fought almost united against us from 1945 to 1948."

"First of all we broke up the reactionary united front of the churches. By making use of the democratic possibilities in the Reformed Calvinist and the Evangelical Lutheran churches, we were able to mobilize the believers who sympathized with us. An agreement was reached in 1948 in the spirit of mutual understanding and indulgence which ensured the peaceful co-existence of the people's democracy and these churches."

Attack Organized
Having thus eliminated the Protestants from the fight, the Communists proceeded to make a frontal attack on the Catholic Church, by far the greatest spiritual power in Hungary.

"The position with the Catholic Church was different," Rakosi went on. "The leaders of this church maintained close relations with the American imperialists, by order of the Vatican."

"After the unmasking of the Smallholders' Party as the agents of the American imperialists, the Social Democratic Party was ordered to man the front line. When the treacherous Social Democratic leaders have shared the same fate—that is to say when the Communists had eliminated them too—"it was the turn of the anti-democratic leaders of the Catholic Church, who became the most exposed representatives of American imperialism."

"Their activities became particularly strong at the end of 1948 when, as the Rakosi trial revealed, this attitude would have been part of the armed invasion which Tito and his gang planned at that time with the aid of spies and provocateurs who had been planted into the Hungarian workers' movement."

Vatican Under Fire
"The Hungarian people's democracy, however, was on the alert. It brought Cardinal Mindszenty to trial, which threw a light upon his activities and those of his companions and which disclosed that under the activities of the church they had not only planned to restore the old landlord-capitalist order but also the hated Hapsburg regime."

The trial was accompanied by a gigantic propaganda campaign against Catholicism in general and the Vatican in particular and resulted in the elimination from office and from public life through trials, imprisonment and other forms of persecution of Catholic bishops and prominent laymen.

The remaining Hungarian bishops were forced to accept a government-imposed compromise which completely eliminated Catholic influence from public life and is steadily diminishing the role of religion in education and in the private life of the Hungarians.

Word 'Papa' Has Been Dying Off In Our Language

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—With Father's Day coming up Sunday next, it is interesting that the word "papa" virtually has disappeared from our language.

The latest Webster still lists "papa" as "a child's word meaning father." Actually, the term has not been in general use for a long time.

The fact is evident in the present crop of Father's Day cards. The familiar titles now are "dad," "daddy" and "pop."

Mark Finch, a spokesman for a leading greeting card company, has made quite an extensive study of the subject. He firm keeps a continuing survey through contact with retail stores where requests for special titles on cards are recorded.

"Pa" probably is the oldest of all American names of affection," Finch says. "Now even that is as rare as 'papa', even though George Washington is said to have used it. I cannot tell a lie, Pa' is what the father of the country is supposed to have said after he cut down the cherry tree with his little ax."

Up to about 30 years ago, "papa" was the accepted and respected appellation, although behind the barn the expression "the old man" frequently was heard.

In the long ago every grown man and woman referred to father as "papa." A recurring remark of Penrod Schofield in Booth Tarkington's 1914 novel "Penrod" is "are you going to tell papa?"

Finch says that today's father usually is "daddy" to children up to the age of 10 to 12, and "dad" or "pop" after that.

"The father in whose memory Father's Day originally was founded was William Jackson Smart," Finch says. "Most certainly he was 'papa' to his six children. A Civil War veteran, he died in 1909. Most certainly, he would have thought it an excuse for a session in the woodshed had one of his brash youngsters dared address him as 'dad.'"

Occasionally there are variations of the word "father," and always will be so long as we have guys like Tony Galento about the premises.

Once in Chicago I interviewed the "beer-barrel who walks like a man" as the former heavyweight fighter was called.

I asked him if he knew the following day was Father's Day?

"Fadder's Day!" he stormed. "Give me out of here. Give me out to a telephone."

He called Denver and canceled a bout he was to have Monday. Then he called East Orange, N. J. and announced he would be home on the evening plane. I drove to the airport with Tony and saw him off.

He made it for "Fadder's Day", and Denver's loss was East Orange's gain, even though it cost

Tony a pretty penny. His son, little "One Ton" was worth every cent of it, he said.

Strange Passage

By William Lynch

Chapter 3

She awoke late, the sun hot upon her face and hair, and lay quite still for a long time, like a person emerging from an anesthetic, her nerves numb and her brain doped after a long, tired sleep. There came vaguely to her ears the murmur of downtown traffic, but this she dismissed as the sound of the city that she distinguished the closer, personal sounds of somebody moving around upstairs. Her mind swiftly sped back to the fears and uncertainties of the previous evening and she got out of bed, wondering, still perplexed and confused, and her morale low.

As she dressed she wondered if he'd breakfasted yet, and if he hadn't should she return his hospitality of last night and offer him something? But firstly she had to find a shop. She would ask him where the shops were. She hadn't noticed any yesterday.

He spared her the enquiry by half lurching, half walking down the narrow staircase and squatting easily on the bottom stair.

"You look fine," he said. "Sleep—you can't beat it. What miracles it can work on a woman's face and eyes!"

"I slept very well," Melisande said, "in spite of the ghosts that are supposed to walk in these old convict places. By the way, when one wishes to eat in these parts what does one usually do?"

"One walks down the hill to Circular Quay. You see, a colony of sixteen houses cannot support a shop. So you walk. It's a good thing, I find. Makes eating a burden. Which is as it should be."

"I'd like to shoulder my burden right away, then. Care to walk down and show me where to shop?"

They caught a wave of heat on their faces as they stepped out upon the narrow footpath.

"What a cool house yours must be!" exclaimed Melisande, shading her face with a scarf. "I had no idea it was like this outside."

Paul was silently contemplating the sprawling recreation centre beyond the tall fence and didn't reply for several minutes. Finally he said:

"That's the playground over there. It's wonderful! Wait till the kids come out of school. I'll take you across. You won't like the supervisors, excepting one, but the kids—they're wonderful—lots of funny little refugee kids."

What a funny thing for Paul to say, Melisande reflected, and she scarcely stopped thinking about it until they were making the return journey up the steep hill. Then suddenly she said:

"You're about the funniest,

—and possibly the sole—due to his inner identity.

"Here am I," she reflected with a smile, "wrapping him up in mysticism and mystery. What an anti-climax if it were chocolate box designs he painted. What if he did? The difference between a chocolate box and a Gallery piece was probably no more important than the difference between breakfast and lunch. I must accustom myself to not putting a price-tag on everything."

When she entered the studio he was standing by the wide window and idly smoking his pipe. Wreaths of blue smoke curled round his head and only the end of his pipe and the edges of his face were visible. The floor of the studio was littered with upturned butter boxes, crumpled sketching papers, dirty tea-cups, stubs of pencils and obsolete paint tubes. She stepped carefully between the hazards and stood beside him at the window. Presently he left her and began fumbling inside the large wooden cupboard that occupied almost the entire endspace of the room. A moment later he returned and without speaking held at arm's length two canvases for Melisande's inspection.

She tensed at once and allowed her eyes to appraise the work, piece by piece, line by line, curve by curve. She stood transfixed for several minutes, looking from one canvas to the other, hesitant and afraid to speak. Her glance finally settled upon the larger of the pictures and she reached out her hand and permitted her fingers to touch the black, thickly-curved head and to trace down upon the dark cheeks of the child, to where twin tear-drops glistened like dew upon a yellow-brown field, and back to the uncertain, unafraid eyes, in which were gathered all the unanswered questions of the Universe—to the large drooping, sensitive, black half-opened mouth. And all she could think of to say just then was:

"You paint children!"

Marble Offered By Old Church To New Churches

LONDON — (UP) — Marble from St. Paul's Cathedral is available to any who wish to incorporate it into their church as a symbol of fellowship with the ancient Cathedral Church of London. Already more than 50 churches in Britain and overseas have received pieces, including churches in the United States, Australia, Canada, Germany, South Africa, and at Tonga and Fiji in the South Pacific.

The marble comes from the old reredos, which has been removed in the reconstruction of the bombed East End of the Cathedral, where the new American Memorial Chapel is to stand behind the new High Altar.

The Chapel, for which Britain subscribed $300,000 — mostly in pennies — will house the handwritten Roll of Honor containing the names of 28,000 U. S. servicemen who died in the British Isles.

Pollution Fatal For Many Fish

MOBILE, Ala. — (AP) — Small dead fish by the thousands covered a canal here recently following what was reported as the sudden pollution of the canal.

"The odor is something awful," said one official of a fish concern. The affected species is known as menhaden, a delicate fish caught mostly for their oil. Other more hardy fish survived. The pollution was washed out of a tributary stream in a sudden rain.

Full-Length Sky Tops For Cars

CHICAGO — (UP) — The Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad will be the first railroad in the country to have full-length "sky top" lounge cars. John P. Kiley, president said his company has placed an order for 10 cars with the Pullman Standard company.

"These cars," Kiley said, will provide our patrons with a new travel thrill because the glass-enclosed dome will permit more passengers to view the countryside."

The air conditioned observation-dome section will seat 68 passengers in foam rubber seats built to provide unobstructed view through curved glass window sections measuring more than three feet wide and five feet high.

In the lower level of the new cars will be a dining and lounge section seating 28 passengers.

The Anglo-Egyptian Sudan is all but surrounded by Egypt, Libya, French Equatorial Africa, the Belgian Congo, British-protected Uganda and Kenya, Ethiopia and Eritrea.

ON THE HOUSE

By DAVID G. BAREUTHER, AP Real Estate Editor

A good way to throw money away is to use a cheap paint brush. Lots of householders believe in cheap brushes principally because they do not know how to clean and keep a good brush. They buy a cheap brush and throw it away after every paint job, blaming the paint for all brush marks and loose bristles left on their work.

This is false economy. Good paint brushes are carefully made tools and, when properly cared for, they last for years, can be used in virtually any kind or color of paint and cost less in the long run than a series of cheap brushes—which sell by the millions to unwitting householders.

The same goes for paint rollers, which when made from fine lamb's wool, can be kept soft and clean and free from matting.

The first precaution to take with a good brush is never to use it immediately in paint. It needs breaking in. Twirl it by holding the handle between your hands to spread the bristles slightly in the air. Then flip the bristles across your fingers to bring any loose hairs forward. These can be picked out.

Soaking a new brush in linseed oil will keep paint pigment from sticking to the bristles and soaking into the heel and the brush will always be easier to clean. This treatment is given by suspending the brush in the oil. Never let a brush rest on its bristles tips at any time.

Painters recommend at least 12 hours of oil soaking before using new brush. Douglas C. Arnold, president of Keystone Paint and Varnish, advocates several days of oil treatment. When you are ready to paint, you can remove the surplus oil by drawing the brush across the edge of an empty can, or across a wire. If you want to use the brush in varnish, or a non-oil base paint, clean the oil out thoroughly with turpentine or with the specific thinner recommended for the paint.

Odorless paint, rubber base paint and various lacquers call for special thinners, each recommended by the manufacturer.

Paint rollers should be washed before using. Use warm soapsuds to remove any lint or dust. Then rinse and dry completely—unless you're going to use the roller in cold-water paint, in which case it should be wet when you start. But for use in oil paint a roller must be absolutely dry.

In painting, only dip the bristles of a brush about half their length into the paint. Since virtually all paints need mixing—even ready mixed paints—a galvanized iron scrub pail is handy for mixing. Stretch a wire across the handle fittings and draw the brush across the wire. This will break across the wire, thus the brush dripping, and by using only the lower ends of the bristles excessive paint will not soak into the heel of the brush.

Never use a paint brush for purposes for which it was not designed. To try to force a four-inch brush into small corners or tight openings will bend or fray the bristles.

A handy way to keep a brush soft overnight, or for a few days, is to cut the top off a flat quart can—such as a turpentine or cooking oil can—with a can-opener. Step on the side of the can until it bends in the middle small enough to grip the ferrule of the brush above the bottom of the can. Then cover the brush with turpentine, linseed oil, or whatever special thinner you are using—alcohol for shellac—and seal it up in a waxpaper bag to check evaporation.

Turpentine or mineral spirits will clean a brush used in oil paint, rust inhibitor metal paint, odorless paint (unless you want to avoid the odor, in which case use odorless thinner). Alcohol will clean a shellac brush. Lacquer thinner for a lacquer brush, water for one used in water-mix paint.

When well cleaned, brush out the bristles on old papers, wipe with old rags and then wash well with mild soap and rinse in clear water. Lay the brush flat and when dry, shake it or comb lightly and wrap in paper for storage. Never wring solvent out of a brush. If forces remaining pigment into the heel to harden and twists the bristles.

Paint makers say that patent brush cleaners should be used with caution. Some have been found harmless and effective, but properly cared-for brushes need no cleaning compounds.

The Sport Reflector

By MELVIN LANG

Another big turn-over in the Greenville Greenies took place last Tuesday when Warren "Sonny" Russell was named field manager, replacing Bill Sweet. Russell's appointment brings to life the fact that the Greenies have now had four managers in less than two years of operation. Jack Boone, head baseball and football coach at East Carolina, started as boss last year when Greenville entered the Bright Belt League in mid-season. Bill Phillips followed as manager when Boone left to work on his M. A. degree at Carolina. Sweet forced to resign because of conflict with his scholastic troubles. He is working toward his Master's degree at East Carolina. Russell is a popular player, with the fans and players alike, and should be able to get a lot of good baseball out of his players. He is expected to continue playing first base.

Charlie Eaton, star pitcher for the Lions Club in the local Little League, won the first game of a doubleheader the other day although he had previously injured his back earlier in the day.

Lionie Eaton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lennie Eaton, fell out of a tree early Monday morning and scratched his back rather severely. The injury did not stop him, however, as he pitched the last inning of a make-up game and then played in the infield of the entire second game that afternoon, helping the Lions clinch the first half championship.

His is only one of the many examples of competitive spirit built up by organizations like the Little League. It is good to know that the players, all of whom are between the ages of seven and 12, like the game and have enough team spirit to keep on playing although they are suffering from some personal difficulty.

Kim Buchanan, controversial basketball player with State College last winter, has enrolled at East Carolina, finally bringing to an end his search for a school.

After he was graduated from high school in Raleigh, he starred on the State freshman team and then was promoted to the varsity in his second year. In the early games, Buchanan set the hoops on fire, but he rapidly cooled down and was soon just another ball player for the Wolfpack. It is still a big question mark on whether it was just his normal playing ability coming out, or if it was because of personal difficulty with Coach Everett Case that caused him to fall out of the first five.

Buchanan will be ineligible for participation at East Carolina until next year, but he will probably be welcomed with open arms when his eligibility status is corrected. Most of the standouts left over from last year's team will be gone after another year, and there will be a plenty of spare whether needed or not, for a player of Buchanan's abilities.

Buchanan is reported to be interested in baseball as much as in basketball. If so, maybe an opening can also be found on the Pirate baseball squad by Coach Boone.

Clyde Biggers, name assistant football coach last spring for the 1952 East Carolina squad, is scheduled to arrive on the campus around the first of July. Biggers took over at Fayetteville High School, succeeding Bill Dole, when Dole came to East Carolina as head coach. While at Fayetteville, Biggers completed an enviable record of victories against some of the better coached teams in the state. Horace Sisk, the man responsible for bringing Biggers to Fayetteville, recently wrote East Carolina President J. D. Messick a congratulatory letter on hiring the new coach.

Sisk says in the letter that "I want to take this opportunity to congratulate you and the college in securing Mr. Clyde Biggers as your head coach (Note: Biggers is assistant coach to Jack Boone). I had the good fortune to secure this fine young man for his first job of coaching and have never had to regret it one moment."

The retired Superintendent of Fayetteville's City Schools goes on to say that one of Biggers' best assets is his ability to influence his players. According to Sisk, "He has saved more than one boy who seemed hopeless since he came to Fayetteville. The boys here simply worship him."

Here's hoping that Biggers will have the same success, both on the field and off, while he is at East Carolina.

Top Grid Coaches To Finally Meet

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — (AP) — When Notre Dame and Oklahoma meet for the first time on the gridiron next Nov. 8, two of the top coaching records in college football will be on the line.

Bud Wilkinson, coach of the Sooners, has won 46, lost six and tied one for a .884 mark in his five-year tenure at Oklahoma.

Frank Leahy, Irish mentor, has a 71-win, nine-loss and seven-tied record for an .888 percentage in ten Notre Dame grid seasons. Prior to his coming to the South Bend institution, Leahy had a 20-3 record in two years at Boston College. Wilkinson has not lost a game in Big Seven competition. He has won 38 and tied one while Oklahoma has topped five straight conference crowns.

Greenies Edge Ormondsville To Win 5-4

Jackson, Hardison In Starring Roles Of Win

Sonny Russell Makes Successful Debut As Greenies Rally To Win Game In Top Of Ninth Inning

Dallas Jackson and Stanell Hardison combined their talents last night and led Greenville to a 5-4 win over Ormondsville in a well-played Bright Belt League contest.

Hardison hurled the full nine innings for Greenville, and was tagged for a total of 10 safeties, including three two-baggers. Ormondsville was held hitless in only three innings, but Hardison spaced the hits effectively to keep the Greene County team throttled down. Seven strikeouts marked up to the Greenville pitcher also helped.

As for Jackson, it was his night as the Washington, N. C., boy came through with two singles, a double, and a triple in five times at the plate to push his seasonal average over .330. The lanky first baseman also batted in three runs during the night, and scored the winning run in the ninth inning.

The win made Sonny Russell's managerial debut a successful one, and marked the seventh win of the year for Greenville. Russell had taken over the reins of the Greenies when Bill Sweet resigned earlier in the week.

Russell also aided the cause tremendously with three singles in five times at bat. His fielding was flawless, except for a miscue made in the bottom of the eighth when he allowed Ormondsville to go ahead by throwing wild at first on an attempted double killing.

Greenville scored early in the contest, pushing across Russell in the first inning on as single by bagger by Jackson, and a single by Simon Hardison. But that was only the beginning of the picture, as Ormondsville came right back to score two in its half of the inning.

Hardison started out shakily and walked Barry Jones to start off the frame. Shortstop Tommy Cole came through with a double, score Jones, and moved to third when the throw in was error by third baseman Red Sauls. Red McDaniels, playing leftfield for the losers, singled and George Graybill fanned. After Fred Soles had singled, a-d Garland Little had walked, McDaniels came in to score when catcher George McSwain allowed one of Hardison's deliveries to get away from him.

Ormondsville built up its lead to a 3-1 margin in the fourth, as Norman Clark led off with a single. Barry Jones sacrificed him to second, and Cole connected for his second double to score Clark. Greenville threatened in the fifth when it loaded the bases with one out on an error and singled by Jackson and Hardison. McSwain hit a bouncer back to Clark on the mound, who hesitated and then threw home to get Russell coming home. James Ray McLawhorn then got McSwain at first to complete the double play.

The Game
The Greenies came back in the seventh to knot the count. Wilbur Thompson singled and moved to second when the second baseman dropped a throw from the catcher. Russell singled and then stole second, with Thompson scoring on his single. Russell scored the tying run on another single by Jackson.

Third single, and came all the way home as Jackson drove one deep into right centerfield for a triple. Simon Hardison fanned to kill the Greene hopes for a while, but George McSwain came through with a low bounding infield single to score Jackson with the winning run.

Greenville plays home again Saturday night, entertaining Fremont. The clubs switch sites for another game Sunday.

LaMotta Wins On Late Decision

DETROIT (UP)—A furious finish in the last two rounds gave Jake LaMotta a new career fighter. The underdog and a losing fighter after the eighth, LaMotta pilled up just the points to win in his finishing flurry as he defeated Irish Bob Murphy in a 10-round televised bout here last night.

That meant that LaMotta can fight as a light-heavyweight, and so he has a new championship to chase. True, he might have to knock it off Sugar Ray Robinson's head, because Robinson seeks the light-heavy crown when he meets champ Joey Maxim in New York June 23. That wouldn't be too good because it was Robinson who wrestled LaMotta's middleweight title.

But Jake had said that the Murphy bout would prove he could fight as a light-heavy, and his fast finish told the tale. All three ring officials gave LaMotta an edge in the ninth and 10th rounds, which were decisive because Judge Andy Brown and referee Lou Handler both scored the fight 51-49 in LaMotta's favor. Judge Johnny Weber gave the winner a much wider edge — 55-45.

Farmville Loses 3-1 Game To Fremont; Lead League

FARMVILLE — Fremont scored what could be termed a major upset last night by blasting Red Benton and Farmville's Red Sox for a 3-1 victory in the rugged Bright Belt League race.

Fremont, winner of only five games this year, scored all of their runs by the unearned route as Farmville committee four costly errors. The winners scored single runs in the second and third innings on errors by the Farmville shortstop, leading directly to the final margin. Two men were out on both occasions.

The loss leaves Farmville in first place, but only by one-half game. Here's how the standings look at the present time:

W	L	PCT
Stantonsburg	14	6 .700
Ormondsville	14	7 .667
Greenville	7	12 .368
Fremont	7	13 .278
Pinetops	3	17 .150

Teddy Barnes pitched the victory last night, allowing but three hits and striking out six men. Fremont tied off against Red Benton for 13 hits. Benton fanned seven Fremont batters.

Farmville scored its only run in the first inning. Streeter Tugwell singled with two out and Ralph Britt tripled to send him home. Besides Tugwell and Britt, the only other Farmville player to get a hit was Bobby Wilkerson, an Oak Ridge native. Catcher Smith led the winners at bat, with three hits, including a three-bagger, in four times up.

Farmville plays Pinetops in Farmville Saturday night. It was announced this morning that Farmville's no-hit ace, Rodney Heath, would be on the mound for the Red Sox.

Nancy Maples Is Still In Tourney

COLUMBUS, O. — (UP)—Nancy Maples of Woman's College of the University of North Carolina is the only Tar Heel entry still in the running here today in the Eighth Annual Intercollegiate Golf Tourney.

Miss Maples is paired today against Pat Lasser, Seattle University freshman who had a blistering sub-par round yesterday to defeat Evelyn Braddock of San Diego State.

Another Woman's College golfer, Frances Fowler, went down to defeat in yesterday's first round play.

Marty Marion Suffers From A State Of Nerves

Editors Note: What's it like to become a big league baseball manager with no advance notice? Marty Marion, picked to replace the ousted Rogers Hornsby as manager of the Browns, tells in the following dispatch.

By MARTY MARION

St. Louis Browns Manager
BOSTON (UP)—My nerves are acting up all over the place. . . my stomach is upset. . . my head is still whirling a little. . . I'm just as jumpy as a cat.

Everything happened so fast. I went to bed a ball player one night and woke up as manager the next day.

Man, I was as loose as a kid at a picnic a few days ago. I was just another player with the Browns and I was enjoying myself tremendously. But it's different now.

My chief hope, of course, is to bring a championship to the city of St. Louis.

I have a lot of faith in the boys on our ball club. They're real free and loose now, their spirit is fine and I think they'll produce.

My first job will be to get a set ball club. I don't want to move ball players all over the place. I'd like to install a player at a position and keep him there. I feel that helps the player and the team, also.

I'm going to try to win and keep the boys happy, too. That can be a tough job at times but I think we'll be able to do it.

As for myself, my back-condition has improved a bit and I'm going to try to play in another day or so. I still think I'll be able to play 100 games this season and help the club at the same time.

"300 CLUB"

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Since the departure of Ted Williams into the service, the American League's "300 Club," composed of batters who have average .300 or better for at least 300 games, is headed by Dale Mitchell of the Cleveland Indians.

Dale's lifetime mark through the '51 season was .316. Williams' average before accepting Marine duty this year was a lofty .347.

Red Sox Edge Browns, 11-9 As Sam White Slams Homer

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (UP) — Sammy White, Jimmy Piersall and Ted Lepcio, whose rah-rah spirit more than makes up for their raw-missadventures as rookies, have the Red Sox all charged up again and ready to make a new hot bid as flag contenders today.

Lou Boudreau's boy wonders, all the more formidable now that they have been fortified with stout veterans George Kell, Dizzy Trout, and Hoot Evers from the big trade with Detroit, were in a virtual first place tie with the New York Yankees.

Even on a won and lost basis, but 12 percentage points behind because they had played six more games, the Red Sox came through last night with an 11 to 9, ninth inning victory over the St. Louis Browns when White's grand slam homer broke it up.

The three rookies and three ex-Tigers all had key parts in the victory. The Browns, leading 9 to 5 and still in the clouds after the firing of their unpopular manager, Rogers Hornsby, were ready to wrap up a second straight for new boss Marty Marion.

He wasn't even around, having been dismissed in the eighth for a row with umpire Bill McGowan.

But Piersall, the heckling outfield speedster, started it out by bunting safely against old Satch Paige, then needed him unmercifully as he took daring leads off first.

Evers followed with a single. A walk to Kell loaded the bases. Billy Goodman also walked, forcing home Piersall with the first run off Paige after 26 2-3 scoreless innings of relief ball in 11 games.

Lepcio also beat out a hit to bring in the second run. That left it up to rookie catcher White, who blasted the homer on a 2-2 pitch, his third of the year. The Yankees topped Detroit, 7 to 3, as Joe Collins drove in four runs with two homers for their fifth in a row.

Washington set Cleveland down to third with a 1 to 0 triumph for Bob Porterfield over Bob Lemon in a duel of four-hitters.

The Philadelphia Athletics came from behind to top Chicago, 5 to 3, and end a four game White Sox winning streak. In the National League, the New York Giants moved to within four games of top-dog Brooklyn with a 3 to 2 victory at Cincinnati while the St. Louis Cardinals were beating the Brooklyn Dodgers 3 to 2 in 10 innings at St. Louis.

Hank Sauer's three homers gave the Chicago Cubs a 3-2 decision over the Philadelphia Phillies and the Pittsburgh Pirates blanked the Boston Braves, 5 to 0, on Murry Dickson's five-hitter. Pitcher Johnny Sain was touched for 10 hits, but was scored on in only one inning as he recorded his sixth victory against two defeats for the Yankees.

Washington, which had failed to score for Porterfield in three of his five defeats this year, got big-hearted and gave him a run on two of its four hits in the seventh last night. The Athletics wrapped it up for Bob Hooper with four runs in the sixth, two on a homer by Allie Clark. Hooper pitched seven hit balls.

Doubles by Bob Elliot and Don Mueller and a two-run homer by Bobby Thomson supplied all the runs big Jim Hearn needed for his sixth Giant victory.

For the second straight night, the Cardinals topped the Dodgers in the 10th. Del Rice singled home the winning run as Wilmer Mizell, Eddie Yuhas and Willard Schmidt, all rookies, collaborated in a four hitter.

Sauer was the whole show at Chicago, putting himself even with Babe Ruth's record 60-homer pace of 1927 with his three blasts which gave him 16 for the year and 58 runs batted in, both walkaway tops for the majors thus far.

All of the homers were off loser Curt Simmons.

Pro-Am Tourney Set For Wilson

WILSON, N. C. (UP) — Play-for-pay golfers and hilly whites completed at the Wilson Country Club in a pro-amateur tourney as a warm-up for tomorrow's North Carolina Amateur Golf Tournament championship.

The pros and amateurs will split $500 in cash and merchandise prizes in today's round.

The amateurs begin match play in the seventh annual Jaycee-sponsored tourney tomorrow morning. Total entries will determine the size of the championship flight.

Two-time winner Ed Gravelly of Rocky Mount will defend his title. Included among his chief threats are Ben Goodes, Reidsville; Ray Taylor, Jr., Pinehurst, and Arthur Ruffin and Hubert Walston, Wilson.

It Doesn't Pay; Ask Herb Brett

DANVILLE, Va. (UP) — It's just plain murder to get some ball players mad.

Herb Brett, manager of the Raleigh Caps of the Carolina League probably knows that better than anyone today.

Brett fired a player, Bill Behie, after an argument last night shortly after the Caps arrived here for a game with the Danville Leafs.

The Leafs' business manager, Howard Fox, heard about the tiff, promptly signed Behie and had him in uniform for the game. Behie gained sweet revenge. He hit two home runs and a double and drove in three runs to lead his new mates to a 5-4 win over the Caps — and Herb Brett.

CLEMSON — Twenty-one Clemson College athletes will attend summer camps this summer as part of their R.O.T.C. training.

Yadkin County Dirt Is Used To Help Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals appear to have panned out some nuggets of good fortune from a small quantity of dirt imported from Yadkin County, North Carolina.

George Sisler, Jr., Card executive, advertised the imported soil as a proven whammy against the Brooklyn Dodgers, the Redbirds' heated rivals. Although the jinx was somewhat delayed, it's now starting to pay off.

Proud Yadkin Countians describe the dirt as "lucky dirt-real dark, dirty dirt."

Totin' a shovelful of the stuff in a cigar box, Sisler transplanted it in the pitcher's mound at Sportsman's Park last Monday. The Brooks ignored the hoodoo that night, blasting out two homers in a 6-2 victory.

But Tuesday night and again last night, the Cards struck pay dirt. First they stopped the league leading Dodgers' winning streak at eight games, 1-0, and then made it two straight, 3-2. Both victories came in 10 innings.

This dirty conspiracy had its start when Sisler journeyed to the Redbirds' farm club at Winston-Salem, N. C., for ceremonies honoring oldtimer Ernie Shore, past New York Yankee and Boston Red Sox pitcher, now sheriff of Forsyth County.

A box of Yadkin County dirt was placed on the mound and a curious Sisler asked how come.

It was explained that the presence of the lucky dirt had given Shore a shutout exhibition victory for the Yanks at Winston-Salem about 30 years ago.

"Against what club?" asked a skeptical Sisler, "Brooklyn," came the answer. That was enough for Sisler. He made quick arrangements to acquire some of the dirt.

Lucky or not, the Cards have whipped the Brooks two out of three in the presence of that good ol' "real dark, dirty dirt" from Yadkin County and lead in the season series, 4-3. That's quite an improvement over last year's record of just four triumphs in 22 games against Brooklyn.

ONE MAN SHELL GAME

SYRACUSE, N. Y. (AP) — Every one of the 28 eight-armed shells that will race on Lake Onondaga June 21 in the Intercollegiate Regatta, has been built by George Pocock of Seattle, Wash. Pocock, father of Stan Pocock, University of Washington freshman coach, has a workshop in the Huskies' Conbar shellhouse. The slim crafts are approximately 62 foot long, two feet in the beam at the widest point and weigh 250 pounds.

Exchange, Jaycees Win As Second Half Play Starts

Exchange 2c 24 reg ROSE
Exchange and the Jaycees took wins in the opening day doubleheader of the second half schedule of the Little League yesterday afternoon.

Exchange won the first game from the hardplaying but luckless Moose, 10-6, with a six-run outburst in the fifth inning. The second game went to the Jaycees, by a 5-2 margin over the Kiwanians.

First Game

The Moose, who have yet to win a game this year, started off the second half with a strong spurt by scoring three runs in the first inning. Ebern Allen started the spree with a single, and Leon Stocks followed with a walk. Lawrence Perkins also worked Exchange pitcher Peanut Nunn for a base on balls, but Tommy Cannon struck out. Marvin Blount, the opposing pitcher, also walked, but by this time Allen and Stocks were both already home. Perkins came across on a groundout by Wesley Topping.

Exchange added one run in the first on singles by Tommy Braxton, Ralph Johnson, and Dick Evans, and then came back with three runs in the third to come within one run of the Moose, who had scored three in the top of the third.

The winners then came from behind and won handily with their big explosion in the fifth. With one out, Evans walked, and Dickie Hathaway singled. Alf Forbes was safe on an unsuccessful fielder's choice, and Billy Fields walked.

Second Game

The Jaycees took the lead in the third inning of the second contest and held it all the way as the Kiwanians were unsuccessful in a late-game comeback.

In the third, Klutz Fisher and Arthur Andrews singled with two out. Both runners came home on a two-bagger by Randolph Taylor. They added three more in the fourth on walks to Buddy Murray and John Wesley Hudson, and successive singles by Dick Nobles, Walker Lee Allen, and Fisher.

Nat'l Open Starts Today

DALLAS, Tex. (UP) — It was Ben Hogan against the field and the weather today as the little Texan with the precision swing went after his fourth straight U. S. Open golf championship.

No man has ever won four straight.

The 162-player field was full of stars who conceivably could dethrone the little comeback king but the strongest challengers looked like former champion Lloyd Mangrum, perfectionist Bobby Locke, and Sammy Snead, who's been so near the yet so far from other Open crowns.

But, it may be the weather — hot and sultry, the kind which sucks a man's strength out through the pores — which may prove more of a stumbling block to Hogan than his competitors today.

However, the game blacksmith's son, who is rapidly approaching his 40th birthday, gets a break in that he drew an early tee time and will finish before the 90-degree heat can take its toll.

But tomorrow Hogan doesn't go off until more than an hour after mid-day, and the USGA schedule calls for a grueling all-day 36-hole grind on Saturday for the 50 survivors of the opening two rounds.

Keel-Laying For Atomic Sub Will Be On Saturday

GROTON, Conn. (UP)—The keel of the 40-million dollar USS Nautilus, the first atomic-powered submarine, will be laid here Saturday and President Truman will autograph the hull plates.

Then the President will deliver a 20-minute broadcast on this country's sea strength, heralding the birth of the revolutionary atomic-age of naval warfare.

The keel-laying ceremony will be held in the south yard of the Electric Boat Division of the General Dynamics Corp., just across the Thames River from the base of the Atlantic submarine force.

Riding at anchor in the river will be an assembly of submarines of all classes decorated with bunting and flags.

The actual keel-laying will require but a few minutes. A traveling crane will pick up two welded plates and swing them into place on a massive cradle on which the new undersea craft will be built.

Mr. Truman will write the initials HST in chalk on the plates. While he watches, Theodore A. Risch, foreman of the welding department and a company employee for 30 years, will burn them into the steel.

Much remains to be done before the Nautilus will be ready to take its place in the nation's fighting forces. Only the shell is being built here. It is expected to be another two years before the power plant is installed and the craft launched.

By that time a second atomic-powered sister ship may be under construction.

Two atomic engines now are being built—one by Westinghouse Electric Co., at the Atomic Energy Commission's Arco, Idaho, reactor works, the other by General Electric Co., at West Milton, N. Y.

The navy has released little information on its atomic submarine plans, other than to say that the speed of the Nautilus under water will be 35 knots, or greater than that of most destroyers, and that it will be the greatest sea killer in history.

It should be able to cruise under surface indefinitely. Because of the small space required for fuel, there will be more space for weapons of war.

Moonshine Truck Lacked Plenty

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)—Two policemen arrested the driver of a dump truck after midnight recently because the truck had neither license plates nor tail lights.

Then one of the policemen, a rookie, got curious. He climbed up to see what the cargo was.

He found 73 gallons of excellent quality moonshine whiskey.

The truck was impounded, the whiskey seized and the driver jailed.

Sen. Russell Proposes Open Kojé To Neutral Observers

WASHINGTON (UP)—A proposal to invite neutral military leaders to observe the treatment of Communist prisoners of war on strifeto Kojé Island got a mixed reaction in Congress today. The suggestion by Senator Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) was endorsed by President Truman.

Some Democratic Senators said it would help offset Communist propaganda about the "mistreatment" of Red prisoners. But Republicans, if not hostile to the idea, expressed skepticism that it would prove effective.

One Senator told a reporter he feared it might be taken as an admission of weakness.

President Truman suggested in a letter to Secretary of Defense Lovett yesterday that military men from five neutral nations be asked to visit Kojé to see at first hand how Communist prisoners are treated by United Nations forces.

Russell, chairman of the Senate Armed Services committee and a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, advanced the idea in a call at the White House two days ago.

A visit to Kojé Island by high-ranking neutral military observers, Russell suggested, would be a means of refuting "the mass of falsehoods which are being broadcast to the world by the Communist propaganda machine."

Truman forwarded Russell's memorandum to Lovett with the comment that the proposal had a lot of merit.

"It seems to me," the President wrote, "that it would be well to ask Sweden, Switzerland, India, Pakistan and Indonesia to send military men to Korea to take a look at the situation and see what really is happening."

Senator Robert Kerr of Oklahoma, one of Russell's rivals for the Democratic presidential nomination, promptly called it "an excellent suggestion."

Similar comments were made by Senator Fulbright (D-Ark.) and Senator Moody (D-Mich.). But Senator Bridges (R-N.H.) took the view that "we don't need representatives of other nations to go there and tell us if we are conducting the prison camps properly."

U. S. Shipping Shows Growth

GENOA (AP)—American flag carriers have increased activity in importing and exporting cargo through this port, according to official figures for the first four months of 1951, despite a drop of shipping imports here for the same period. Last year from January to April, American ships unloaded 166,649 tons and took on 36,291 tons here. For the same period this year, U. S. vessels discharged 229,097 tons and loaded 46,187 tons here.

During the first quarter of 1951, a total of 2,694,486 tons were imported here from ships of many nations.

During the same period this year, the import-shipment at Genoa dropped to 2,305,920.

Letter Involves Difficult Task

WASHINGTON (UP)—Rep. Clare Magee (D-Mo.) today asked his colleagues, particularly Republicans, how, "New Deal Democrat" like himself should answer a letter he received from a constituent.

He said he received the letter from Mrs. L. L. Wortman of Chillicothe, Mo.

The letter, as read by Magee on the House floor:

"Senator McGee
Washington, D.C.
Subject: Good law abiding people in distress.

"I am in receipt of your valued letter of sympathy after my husband's death Feb. 25, this year.

"At present, I am confined to a bed in a nursing home here at 406 Walnut. This is being written with my knowledge and consent by my nephew, Ruel Glover, who is being held in the county jail here charged with untrue charges and because we cannot raise necessary bail money he has to stay in jail until Sept. Circuit Court because he is not and will not plead guilty to any of the 4 charges. He is needed by me for assistance and help because I am almost helpless.

"He does not have a lawyer and very little money. Please help us in some way and if I live until Nov. 1 will make Chula and Farmersville Republican again."

Teaching Sisters End Long Career

BOSTON — (UP) — Two sisters, natives of Enfield, Conn., who together have given 76 years of service as Christian educators under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions in Japan, have returned to the United States.

Miss Grace H. Stowe, 70, and Miss Mary E. Stowe, 74, were awarded the decoration of the Fifth Order of the Sacred Treasure by the Japanese government. The presentation ceremony was held at Kobe College in Kobe, where Grace has been teaching.

Mary sailed first to Japan in 1908. Grace, who earned her master of arts degree at the University of Chicago taught in Capron Hall, Madras, India, during World War II when she was unable to remain in Japan. She returned to teach in Kobe in 1947.

Mary, after 37 years of educating the Nipponese, reached retirement age in 1945. However she went back to Japan to keep house for her sister and continued to make remarkable contributions to the life of Kobe College.

Bird-Watchers Have Last Fling

CLEVELAND — (AP) — The bird watchers, 300 strong, had their final fling of the season recently when they gathered in the northward flight of birds to nesting grounds. In the six-weeks season, 182 species of birds were seen, Harold E. Wallin, curator of education at the Cleveland Museum of Natural History, reported. Thirty-one of a possible 33 warblers were also noted.

U.S. Lends Hand To Guatemala In Improving Coffee

WASHINGTON — (UP) — "Operation Hedgerow" is making agricultural history on a scenic plateau in Guatemala.

The experimental project at Finca Chocoma is aimed at boosting coffee production. Latin America's bread-and-butter crop and the United States' largest agricultural import. It is headed by 37-year-old Dr. William Cowgill, go-getting Agriculture Department horticulturist.

Cowgill's "Operation Hedgerow" is an innovation in coffee-growing that is astonishing producers. He hopes to raise yields from 100 per cent to 200 per cent in Guatemalan coffee trees.

Scientists Engaged Some of Central America's foremost scientists are also at work at the lofty research station, which since 1946 has been the scene of the joint U. S.-Guatemalan project. A volcano smokes lazily in the distance but the inter-American team is kicking up plenty of dust of its own.

They have developed a rotation system of planting coffee trees separated by 10 to 15 feet of soil-protecting and improving legume crops. After the coffee trees reach the end of their most productive life span, they will be uprooted and the rows planted to legumes. The old grass strips then will be replaced by hedgerows of new coffee trees.

Simple as it sounds, the system is revolutionary in Guatemala and other Central American coffee producing areas—Costa Rica, El Salvador, Nicaragua—where coffee makes up 67 per cent of all annual exports.

Sunlight Helps Until now, the Indians have planted their trees in orchard fashion, spaced at irregular intervals and grown under large shade trees. Success of the hedgerow method may enable them to disperse with the time-honored practice and grow trees in direct sunlight, as it is done in Brazil.

The researchers have found that while coffee trees exposed to full sunlight are more productive, their life span is apparently shorter than shaded trees. They are now trying to solve that problem by extensive use of fertilizers and sprays.

Guatemalan coffee growers, accustomed to "doing it the way their fathers did," were cautious about adopting the hedgerow method. One by one local producers have tried it out and the idea is gradually spreading, in trial plots, to other plantations.

FROM PRISON—John Gates (right), former Daily Worker editor, was the first witness Monday in Washington before the subversive activities control board, as Communist party called on imprisoned and indicted leaders to dispute under oath the government's charge that American Reds take orders from Moscow. At left is to Marcantonio, former New York Congressman and chief counsel for the Communist party. Gates is serving a five-year term in prison on charge of conspiring to teach and advocate violent overthrow of the U. S. government.—(AP Wirephoto.)

Bible Chapter Is Found 'Missing'

RICHMOND, Va. — (AP) — The Rev. G. Houston Patterson of Bluefield, W. Va., found a chapter missing in the Bible much to his embarrassment.

He was conducting the baccalaureate service for the graduating class of Union Theological seminary. For several minutes, he thumbed the massive Bible in the pulpit while the audience waited and watched.

Finally, he said: "I will read the 23rd Psalm."

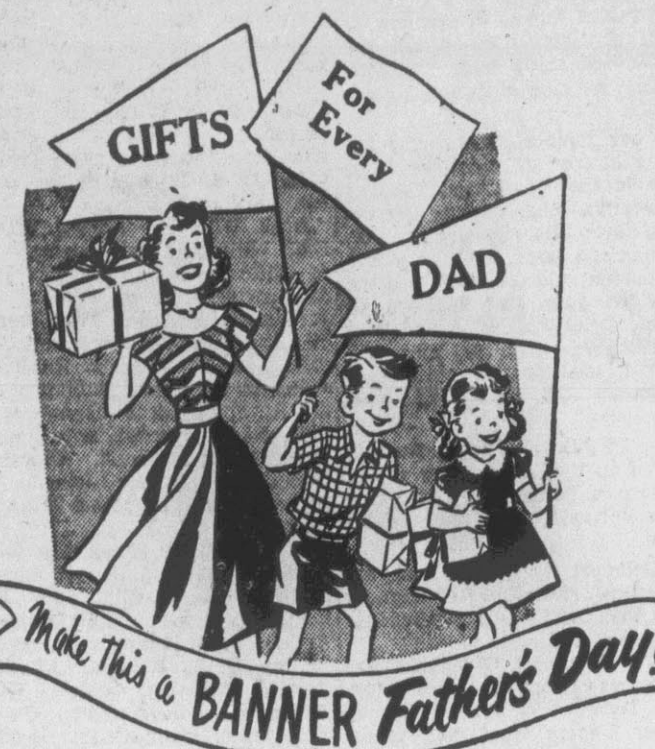

A bit red-faced, he then added: "I am reading this psalm today for a very special reason. It is one which I hope you will never be confronted. I find myself with a Bible from which the 23rd chapter of Luke is unaccountably missing."

tionally.

Jean is glad she came to the city but doesn't know what she'll do when she leaves Columbia in August. She'll probably pursue her career as a speech teacher, unless of course she meets the right man. She has "old-fashioned" ideas, she says, and is willing to give up teaching for marriage. Her hope chest is well-stocked, containing among other things a complete set of sterling silver and linens.

But Jean isn't looking to snap just any man. She'll wait for one who enjoys her interests — "simple things," she says, like "concerts, count liv 7, animals, dancing and friends.

Dear Judy,

AP Newsfeatures

If you've a yen to spread your wings in the big city, summer is the ideal time. A job away from home during school vacation may help you size up future employment possibilities.

Or you may combine summer school at a city university with a part-time job. One girl who tried it—pretty Jean Arthur of Kansas City, Mo.—embarked on her venture in New York last summer, stayed through the winter and doesn't quite know when she'll go home.

A graduate of Kansas University 22-year-old Jean had taught one year at Shawnee-Mission H.S. in Mission, Kansas when she decided to study for her M. S. at Columbia University, N. Y. C. She banked everything on being able to land a job. Her experiences might be helpful to you for this or another year. Says she:

"Since my only work-experience was as a speech teacher, I decided to look for work along those lines. I narrowed this down to available jobs such as 'telephone clerk'—answering complaints perhaps for a department store or utility company — or conducting guided tours, where good speech would be important and useful."

Jean got the guide job — at Radio City, and after summer classes were over, decided to stay on at Columbia for classes three nights a week. Fortunately there was no conflict between school and job hours, she says.

At first — was a receptionist in the sales and ticket information department of the tour service. There she acquainted herself with the guide job as a trainee. Her pay was $183 a month.

Later when she became a full-fledged guide her base pay was $45 a week plus $2.25 for every additional tour. Since she wears a uniform all day, clothes are not a big item on her budget, except for dates.

Jean shares an apartment with another student (rent $85 a month). She believes any girl in a strange city should either share an apartment with a friend or live with classmates, friends or relatives, if possible. Most colleges have a service directing students to apartments and roommates.

It is not easy to figure the cost of food, she says. There are always invitations to dinner, and when she eats at home the cost of food is shared. Says she:

"I'd always heard that big-city boys were wolves, so I was a little nervous about dinner dates. Pretty soon, I realized that they were not very different from boys back home — a little more sophisticated, perhaps, and likely to treat romance more lightly than country boys. But all of the young men I have met so far have been gentlemen."

Jean classifies her New York dates this way:

1. Students: These are the boys

you meet at classes. They are fun to be with — discuss school events, examinations and are the "pal-type."

2. Business: Most of the young men she has met in job contacts have been eligible, witty and pleasant. They have a "big brother" complex about a little girl alone in a big city — remembering her birthday, and on holidays and weekends taking her to meet their families.

3. Social: These are the boys you meet through relatives and friends. They are very nice in a dutiful sort of way.

Eastern men have one fault: according to Jean — they expect girls to be subtle, and mid-western girls, aren't! She says this frankness which is new to these boys can upset the applicator if you like the boy — he's always being offended at something said, unintentionally.

ARTHRITIS

I have been wonderfully blessed in being restored to health and active life after being crippled in every joint in my body and muscular soreness from head to foot. I had Rheumatoid Arthritis and other forms of Rheumatism, hands deformed and my ankles were set.

Limited space prohibits telling you more here but if you will write me I will reply at once and tell you how I received this wonderful relief.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING. Pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 725 of the Session Laws of North Carolina, 1947, notice is hereby given that a public hearing will be held at the Municipal Building in the City of Greenville, N. C., at 7:30 p.m. o'clock, on the 9th day of July, 1952, at which time and place the Board of Aldermen of the City of Greenville will meet for the purpose of considering the annexation of the following described territory to the City of Greenville:

That certain tract or parcel of land situated, lying and being on the south side of Tenth Street Extension (U. S. 264) and beginning at a point in the south property line of Tenth Street Extension (U. S. 264) in the east line of the Hinton Fornes heirs' land, and running thence with the south line of Tenth Street Extension (U. S. 264) N. 85 deg. E. 138 feet, N. 88 deg. 20 min. E. 742 feet to a point in line with the Whitely line; thence S. 26 deg. 28 min. S. 264); at the beginning according to survey and map made by Robert F. Wilson, Reg. L. S. dated January 9, 1951. There is excepted from the above boundaries a certain lot located in the north-east corner of the tract above described which was conveyed by Clyde S. Blount et al. to Nora Lee Heath, by that certain deed dated September 18, 1951 and recorded in Book W-28 at page 122 of the Pitt County Registry.

The owners of the above described property have heretofore filed with the City of Greenville a petition duly signed requesting the annexation of the said property to the said municipality. Notice is further given, pursuant to law, that if a petition is filed signed by at least 18 percent of the qualified voters residing in the City of Greenville, who actively participated in the last gubernatorial election, requesting an election on the question of the annexation of said territory, the Board of Aldermen will be required to call an election on the question before said territory can be lawfully annexed. All persons interested are requested to be present at the hearing. By order of the Board of Aldermen.

Farmer, 99, Is Doing Chores

LINCOLN, Neb. — (UP) — A 99-year-old Red Cloud farmer took time out from his farm chores to attend the 86th annual meeting of Nebraska Congregational churches here.

Alvin Peirce, a former school teacher who now farms near Red Cloud with his 73-year-old son, has been a member of his home town church for 74 years.

Peirce, who taught in a dugout schoolhouse in 1887, remembers presidential campaign speeches made by Abraham Lincoln. He was 14 when Lincoln was assassinated. Peirce said that in 1942, when he was 88, he husked 37 bushels of corn in five and a half hours. He still helps husk corn.

Governor Does A Lot Of Talking

BALTIMORE — (AP) — The Governor of Maryland has done a lot of traveling and a lot of talking so far in 1952.

A statement issued by the Governor's assistant, Albert W. Quinn, reveals that Gov. Theodore McKeldin has traveled more than 10,000 miles in seven states and the University of Washington freshman days of this year. He has delivered 24 speeches on a wide variety of subjects.

Eighty-four of the 285 hours he has been absent from the state have been weekend hours. This doesn't include his 28-day holiday trip to Europe and Israel.

Ancient Ruins Being Excavated

LONDON — (AP) — Soviet archaeologists have excavated a 2,000-year-old city in Kojum Desert, near the Aral Sea in Soviet Central Asia, Moscow reported. The town of Koi Myrgan Kola was one of the monuments of the ancient Khorezm state.

Built in the third or fourth century B. C., it consists of a fortress surrounded by a wall with battlements. Many pieces of decorated porcelain have been uncovered and an inscription on one clay vessel is regarded as the most Asia.

Goldfish have been bred by the Chinese for centuries.

High-Up Garden Has 'Everything'

Marford, Conn. — (AP) — This garden in tops. It has a green lawn, flower beds with such items as tulips and bleeding hearts, and 20-foot-high trees. It also has the usual quota of bugs, worms and weeds.

The garden is on the eighth story of an office building here. The garden is set in 6 feet of soil. Its base is in the seventh floor ceiling. The concrete was waterproofed before the soil was put in.

U. S. military operations in 1951 involved the flying of 68,000 personnel and 28,000 tons of material to the Far East.

the next state chairman will be the personal choice of William Umstead — and he has not indicated who will get the nod. His campaign manager, Carlisle Higgins, probably can have the post if he wants it. That would be in keeping with custom. Incumbent Everett Jordan might hold over with Umstead approval if Higgins does not want the job and Jordan manifests desire to retain it.

RULES — The executive committee this year will also be faced with revising the Plan of Organization, to bring it in line with enactments of the 1951 General Assembly respecting the nomination of presidential electors. It has further been pointed out that the present Plan of Organization makes no provision for naming delegates to the national convention. This oversight will be corrected, along with some other revisions to bring the Plan up to date. All of which means that the meeting of the State Democratic Executive Committee this summer, probably in mid-August, will be one of the most important in many years.

IGNORED — There may be some tightening of lines respecting equal representation of men and women and the selection of committees in subsidiary district committees — matters which have been largely ignored in recent meetings of the highest governing body of the organized Democratic party in North Carolina.

Game Wardens To Go To 'College'

ANTIOCH, Ill. (UP)—Game wardens will become professors here Sunday when the Illinois Conservation Department holds a "fishing college."

Eight instructors will teach sportsmen such subjects as live bait fishing, spinning, ice fishing, bait casting, fly casting and trout lines.

Steel Seizure...

A fourth proposal, was defeated 54 to 26 yesterday. It would have let the President seize plants for 60 days, subject to a congressional veto, when the "national welfare" is at stake.

Young 'Dillinger' Met His Match

NEW ORK (UP) A rough-and-ready Brooklyn policeman taught a young "Dillinger" and his two companions just how tough New York's finest can be when riled up. Patrolman Raymond Hertel, 35, cruising in his patrol car spotted a stolen car as it passed a red light yesterday and halted the vehicle.

Hertel reached into the car and demanded the driver's license and registration. One of the thugs in the rear seat twisted up the window, pinning Hertel's arm.

The driver started the car with Hertel galloping alongside. Two blocks later the man in the rear shoved Hertel after biting his hand and the cop went sprawling in the street.

Hertel fired one shot and the car careened wildly and crashed. The driver, Carlos (Dillinger) Torres, 22, was fatally wounded with a bullet in the head.

Hertel charged the other occupants, Fundada Lopez, 22, and Car elo Ramos, 18, with assault and grand larceny.

DeLapp Believes Ike Has Chance In N. Carolina

LEXINGTON (UP) — The state chairman of the Eisenhower for president committee said today if the general wins the Republican presidential nomination, he will make a "very close race of it in North Carolina against anybody" except Dick Russell.

The state chairman, local attorney Sim DeLapp, agreed with observers who have said the Georgia Democrat has strong popular support among Tar Heels. Against any other Democratic candidate DeLapp said, the general would be hard to stop, even in this bastion of Democratic strength.

"I think Ike is personally very popular with all classes of people in the state," he said, "especially with young people, both Democrats and Republicans."

"I find hundreds of people every day in both parties who say they will vote for Ike if he is opposed by anyone but Russell."

Brazil Sending Troops To Guard Uneasy Frontier

RIO DE JANEIRO (UP) — Foreign Minister Joao Neves Da Fontoura says he has requested that troops be sent to the Argentine border to protect Brazil from incidents "by Argentine police."

The newspaper O Globo had reported that Marines and motorized infantry would be sent to reinforce regular border garrisons.

Three persons have been reported killed and two kidnapped by Argentine police in recent border incidents.

The foreign minister said that "rigorous investigations" by officials in the Brazilian border states of Rio Grande Do Sul and Santa Catarina had proved that the Argentine gendarmes were to blame in each of the reported incidents.

Beat The Heat With Sprinkler

The temperature is no problem for these two uninhibited Greenville youngsters, because they have devised an ingenious method of coping with the current Pitt county heat wave. Six-year-old Mike Cavendish (left) and Jimmy Ross, nine, frolic happily amid flying spray from a yard sprinkler set up on the courthouse lawn near their homes. Young Ross is on vacation this summer after completing the third grade at Third Street School, and minute Mike proudly reports that he will enter the first grade at the same school this fall. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Cavendish, 213 Washington street, and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Ross, 206 Washington street.—(Reflector Photo by Jesse Poindexter.)

Quake Survivors In Tents, Huts

SAN JUAN Argentina (UP) — Frightened survivors of a series of earthquakes that shook this area huddled today in tents and huts.

The tremors Tuesday night and early yesterday killed a five-year-old girl, injured 25 persons and wrecked hundreds of homes.

In the rural area 30 miles south of here where the quakes centered, 80 per cent of the homes were destroyed. Huge rocks were dislodged from hillsides and large cracks opened in the ground.

With temperatures below freezing thousands of shivering persons either were without homes or were afraid to return to their dwellings.

N. C. Peach Crop Estimate Is Cut

RALEIGH (UP) — The June 1 estimate of North Carolina's peach crop is only 8,000 bushels from last year's crop, the Federal-State Crop Reporting Service said today.

Agriculture officials place the state peach crop at 1,798,000 bushels, 39,000 bushels short of the 1941-50 average.

A record winter wheat crop is in prospect in the state.

Based on conditions as of June 1, the crop is put at 9,408,000 bushels. Last year's production of 8,763,000 set the previous record.
