Germ Warfare Debate Has Mild Start; Malik Avoids Korea Claims In Opening

Russian And U. S. Spokesman In Verbal Sparring Yesterday But Security Council Members Expect Them To Pull No Punches In Tomorrow's Session

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., (UP) Russian delegate Jacob A. Malik and U. S. Ambassador Ernest A. Gross squared off today for a blistering germ warfare debate in the United Nations Security Council.

The first battle in the war of words gave Malik and Gross an opportunity to feel out each other yesterday. Council members expect them to pull no punches when debate is resumed tomorrow.

In opening the long heralded debate before the 11-nation council yesterday, Malik studiously avoided bringing up discredited Red charges that U. S. troops waged bacteriological warfare in Korea.

Instead, he insisted mildly that all nations ratify the 1925 Geneva protocol outlawing germ warfare.

Gross abruptly described Malik's maneuver as a "fraud" and, in turn, suggested sending the ratification question to the U. N.'s 12-nation Disarmament Commission for further study.

As Security Council President for June, Malik attempted to rule Gross out of order but the U. S. ambassador to the United Nations resisted and brought the germ warfare charges to the floor.

"There has been no evidence whatever placed before the membership of the U. N. or manifested in any other way on any other front throughout the world that theSovietgenevomrtnhsaanba- the Soviet government has abandoned its campaign of lies regarding the question of germ warfare," Gross said.

Malik, returning to his opening statement, said Russia's appeal for ratification of the Geneva document "bears no relations whatever to the question of Korea."

Gross said Russia, while ratifying the protocol, felt free to use poison gas and loosen plagues against countries which did not ratify it and those "whose forces do not respect the restriction which is the object" of the document.

He said Russia, in accusing the U. S. of waging germ warfare in Korea, was getting into position to use such weapons itself "if it decides to declare that the states resisting aggression in Korea are its enemies."

Gross also reminded council members that Russia has not agreed to stop manufacturing or stockpiling gas or bacteriological weapons.

Bonner Charges Work Is Shelved

N. C. Lawmaker Says Bill To Centralize Military Buying Taken Out Of His Hands Because Pentagon Opposes It

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Bonner (D-NC) said today a bill to centralize military buying and save millions of dollars a year has been taken out of his hands because the Pentagon wants to kill it.

Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee, however, scoffed at the suggestion that the bill is being put on ice.

The measure, sponsored by Bonner, would do away with the Federal Munitions Board and would consolidate armed forces purchasing under a new civilian undersecretary of defense.

Bonner's own expenditures subcommitee planned to hold hearings on the bill later this month. But the House voted yesterday to turn the measure over to Vinson's committee.

Bonner told a reporter the House acted after, "a big huddle at the Pentagon by the big brass who do not want to lose their prerogative of scattering the taxpayers' money to the four winds."

He added that he plans to ask periodically what the Armed Services Committee is doing about his bill.

Vinson told a reporter:

"It was referred to us today and we've sent it to the (Defense) Department for a report. Can you take any faster action than that?"

Bonner's bill is designed to end duplication in military buying.

The Bonner subcommittee has held hearings and reported the services are wasting money by maintaining separate "supply empires."

Sporadic Red Attacks Hurled Back By Eighth

Attacking Communist Battalion On East-Central Korean Front Has More Than A Quarter Of Its Men Killed

SEOUL, Korea —(AP)— United Nations forces hurled back sporadic Communist assaults in East Central Korea today and killed more than one-fourth of the attacking battalion.

U. S. Eighth Army Headquarters estimated 200 Red soldiers were killed as air-supported Allied troops successfully defended their forward position southeast of Kumsong.

For the second successive day Red guns were silent near the Allies' newly-won T-shaped hill mass west of Chowon on the Western Front. U. S. Shooting Stars made eight air strikes on Reds still dug in on the rocky ridge.

The Chinese Communists' Kumsong assault began with fire from six self-propelled tanks or guns Wednesday night. Then five infantry platoons attacked and before dawn the Reds upped their strength to around a battalion, about 750 men.

After light exchange of small arms, mortar and artillery fire, U. N. troops crippled a noontime attack with their own counter-assault.

Grounded by bad weather Wednesday, Fifth Air Force fighter bombers reappeared today on close support missions against frontline Reds on both the Chorwon and Kumsong sectors.

One flight of Allied Shooting Stars killed or wounded 75 Communists and shot up three caves reported shielding Red soldiers, the Air Force said. Land-based Marine planes attacked a Red supply building 20 miles north of Pyonggang, on the Central Front.

More than 50 B26s unloaded their bombs on front-line Red positions Wednesday night after the clouds had blotted out their usual targets of supply vehicles.

The Communists tripled their infantry strength overnight on the Kumsong sector. However, latest reports Thursday morning indicated the strong enemy force was not pushing the assault aggressively

Duncan explained that if taxes are paid this month, the highest possible discount may be received.

Three Plans Of Reorganization Are Dead Issues

WASHINGTON (AP)—Three of President Truman's government reorganization plans are dead in the wake of a Senate vote keeping congressional control over 21,582 federal jobs.

With many who normally support administration policies bucking the President, the Senate yesterday defeated in 1-2-3 order his proposals to eliminate Senate confirmation of city postmasters, U. S. marshals and customs collectors.

The program would have gone into effect automatically Friday midnight if neither the House nor the Senate had acted. It called for filling the jobs by department heads through civil service procedure.

Kyzer has been manager of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce for approximately 13 years.

Cost-Of-Living Index Edges Up

Now Within Tiny Fraction Of Last January's Record

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government's latest cost-of-living barometer moved up today under pressure of rising food and rent costs to within a tiny fraction of the record high reached last January.

The living-cost index, measuring prices of food, clothing, shelter and a host of other things climbed during the month ending May 15 two-tenths of 1 per cent to 189 per cent of the 1935-39 average. That is 4.1 per cent over the mark of 18 months ago when price and wage controls took effect. The peak figure last January was 189.1.

A million and a quarter rail workers will get an automatic two-cent hourly wage boost as a result of the latest increase in living costs. Their work contract ties wages to the cost-of-living index and adjustments are made each three months.

Another 100,000 wage earners in textiles, aircraft and oil refining industries also get at least a one-cent boost.

Leading the overall living-cost rise was a boost of four tenths of 1 per cent in rent across the country. The price of food at the grocery store moved up three tenths of 1 per cent.

But the price of clothing, of fuel and electricity and of house furnishings all dropped fractionally.

Korea Criticism Unjustified, Is Briton's Opinion

EDMONTON, Alta., (UP) —Field Marshal Earl Alexander said today the United States was doing "an excellent job" in Korea.

The field marshal, accompanied by Selwyn Lloyd, Britain's minister of [illegible] for [illegible] affairs, came here yesterday after visiting United Nations installations in Korea.

"The Americans are running a really [illegible] show," he said. "Criticism of United States handling of the war and truce talks is absolutely unjust. I am very satisfied."

Alexander, now defense minister for the United Kingdom, said British criticism of the U. S. leadership in Korea came as a result of "the ignorance in England about what is really happening out there." He said he believed his week-long tour of the Far East would clear the air.

Mother Is Told Third Son Lost

GREENSBORO (UP) — In 1944 and 1945 telegrams brought the news, but when her third son died in action, Mrs. Helen W. Thompson heard it from an army officer.

Mrs. Thompson answered the door yesterday to learn that Cpl. James W. Thompson died in action in Korea June 14. In 1944 a telegram told her another of her sons, Ned, had died in action in France. In 1945 another telegram said Paul, serving aboard a tanker in the Atlantic, had been killed.

The officer told the widow, who has two living sons and three daughters, that the War Department ordered the last message delivered personally because of her previous losses.

OSLO, Norway (UP) — Max Conrad, 48-year-old flier, landed today at Sola airfield near Stavanger, western Norway, to complete the last leg of his long and lonely flight across the Atlantic.

He brought his light plane in after a 3 hour, 29 minute flight from Stornoway, Scotland, where he stopped this morning for refuelling and a meal.

Truman Implies Steel Union Would Not Obey Injunction

President Says Congress Could Not Force Him To Use Taft-Hartley Law To End Steel Walkout; Concedes Use Of The Law Is 'Under Consideration'

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Truman said today Congress could not force him to use the Taft-Hartley law to end the steel strike.

The President, hit by numerous news conference questions on why he had not used the Taft-Hartley law, expressed the belief that the union would not comply with an injunction to end the strike as readily as it agreed to his steel mill seizure which was later ruled illegal by the Supreme Court.

The Senate has voted to "request" Mr. Truman to use the Taft-Hartley Act. The House is expected to follow suit.

Mr. Truman admitted that use of the law is under consideration, but he volunteered that congressional action would not have any bearing on his ultimate decision.

Mr. Truman said the effects of the steel strike are becoming increasingly serious and are beginning to affect defense production and to threaten to touch every industry in the country.

Mr. Truman said Congress could not tell him what to do because the Taft-Hartley law was permissive legislation for peacetime use.

Asked why he did not avail himself of the 80-day cooling off period provided by the law, the President said that 99 days had been used in the same manner and Congress had time to consider the problem then.

"Are you implying that they (the union) would not obey the injunction?" a reporter asked.

Yes, the President answered.

Democratic and Republican leaders agreed that the House was certain to give overwhelming approval, late today or tomorrow, to a Senate-passed rider to the economic controls bill "requesting" President Truman to invoke the law and seek an 80-day anti-strike injunction.

Industry officials expected the government to announce today which steel plants will be reopened by agreement with the union, to provide war goods for Korea.

The emergency plan engineered by presidential assistant John R. Steelman, is aimed at restoring some 600,000 ingot tons of steel production a month—about 5 per cent of the industry's total capacity.

Some capital quarters thought the move might provide the administration with an argument that the steel strike no longer posed a "national emergency" warranting use of the Taft-Hartley law.

Others believed, however, that Mr. Truman would "bow to the inevitable" and invoke the law after the house made it official that Congress wants him to do so.

Meanwhile, labor circles awaited CIO President Philip Murray's reply to John L. Lewis' offer of $10,000,000 in United Mine Workers funds to help the steelworkers win their strike. The betting was that Murray, in Pittsburgh, would decline the offer and tell Lewis the steelworkers don't need any help.

As government, industry and union maneuvering continued with no settlement in sight, the loss of 300,000 tons of steel production a day began to have its effect on the civilian economy.

The Ford Motor Co. announced in Detroit that most of its plants across the nation will go on a four-day week tomorrow, in an effort to stretch out dwindling steel supplies and avoid a complete shutdown June 30.

The fact that prices are no longer an issue in the seven-month-old steel contract dispute was officially disclosed yesterday by Economic Stabilizer Roger L. Putnam.

He said the industry had been promised "friendly and sympathetic" consideration of a price hike of around $4.50 a ton if it reached a settlement with the union.

Government officials have been saying this privately for several weeks, but Putnam was the first to put it on the record.

The union shop wrangle now is understood to be the chief block to a settlement.

Koje Prisoner Accident Victim

KOJE ISLAND, Korea (UP) — A Canadian soldier accidentally wounded a Communist prisoner of war today in the first incident of bloodshed since American paratroopers broke up Compound 76 more than a week ago.

The soldier, a member of the perimeter guard, was cleaning his weapon when it went off, hitting the prisoner in the hip.

Meanwhile, Brig. Gen. Haydon L. Boatner's campaign to split up Koje's 80,000 prisoners into manageable groups continued without incident as 5,600 civilian prisoners from Compound 62 were moved. There was no resistance.

RICH DIET

CHICAGO (UP)—William Hinkle, 19, was hospitalized today for an overdose of razor blades.

He said he swallowed 40.

Truman In Favor Of More Taxes

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Truman told a news conference today he thought taxes should be increased to meet the federal deficit.

The President's tax statement followed reference by reporters to campaign statements by candidates for presidential nomination that taxes could and should be reduced.

Mr. Truman, in response to questions, said no Democratic or Republican president could reduce taxes 15 per cent because it would put the country into the hole worse than now.

In fact, the President said, taxes ought to be increased to meet the deficit.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R-O) pledged himself yesterday to reduce taxes by 15 per cent in two years if he is elected president.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Taft's chief rival for the GOP presidential nomination, also has advocated heavy budget cuts.

After he said the taxes actually should be increased, the President remarked that he said this with the reminder that he was not running for office.

Tears Of Joy By Ingrid On Seeing Twin Daughters

ROME (AP)—Ingrid Bergman shed tears of joy today as she got her first good look at her day-old twin daughters.

Isabel, seven pounds, three ounces, and her younger sister by half an hour—eight-pound, five-ounce Ingrid—dozed in fitful unawareness of their international publicity.

Sharing his wife's joy after a night-long vigil at her bedside was Roberto Rossellini, for whose love the blonde Swedish film star abandoned her husband and a Hollywood career. The couple have a son born in 1950.

The twins, two weeks overdue, were born last night at the fashionable Savatore Mundi Hospital.

The 35-year-old mother was reported doing well.

Top UN Negotiator Hints Offer To Re-Screen Prisoners Of War

MUNSAN, Korea, (UP) —Maj. Gen. William K. Harrison intimated today the United Nations would agree to a re-screening of Communist prisoners of war before an armistice to determine how many Reds want to return home.

If the move met with Communist approval, it would solve the touchy prisoner exchange stalemate blocking a Korean armistice.

Harrison, senior U. N. truce delegate, has offered repeatedly to re-screen prisoners after an armistice is signed. Little or nothing has been said of another screening before an armistice.

In reply to a question if the U. N. would approve of a re-screening before an armistice, Harrison replied:

"The matter of timing of a re-screening has never become an issue in the negotiations." He did not elaborate.

Communist delegates, headed by North Korean Gen. Nam Il, have rejected Harrison's offer of a re-screening after an armistice on grounds it would violate the Geneva convention.

The results of the Allied screening to date show that only 70,000 of 169,000 Communist military and civilian prisoners want to return to the Communist side.

Meanwhile, U. N. negotiators, ignoring a Communist protest against a three-day break in the truce talks, were reported to be considering an even longer recess so as to deprive the Reds of a propaganda platform.

Sources close to the truce delegation said the U. N. might suggest a two weeks or a month recess if the Communists resume their propaganda drum beating when the negotiators meet again Saturday.

Such a recess might be broken at any time, these sources said, if the Communists indicate they are prepared to resume discussions on the basis of the U. N.'s "final and irrevocable" armistice proposal of April.

The chief issue holding up the truce is repatriation of prisoners. The U. N. has said flatly it refuses to send prisoners back to the Communists who do not wish to go.

Principal speaker at the graduation exercises will be Gov. Kerr Scott. The ceremonies will also be attended by Reps. Harold Cooley, F Ertel Carlyle and Charles B. Dean, and the flight training chief,, Maj. Gen. Warren Carter.

Secret Trial

PUSAN, Korea (AP)—The Republic of Korea today secretly placed 14 men on trial on a charge of conspiring with Reds to overthrow the United Nations-sponsored government.

Seven of the defendants before a nine-man civilian-military court are national assemblymen, political opponents of President Syngman Rhee.

Hardly had the closed trial begun when the National Assembly, meeting but a few yards from the drab courtroom, adopted a resolution, 84-0, urging Rhee to open the hearing to the public.

Observers said there was little possibility the trial would be opened to any but 12 foreign observers invited by the Korean government.

The 14 defendants are charged with violations of the National Security Act. Some also are charged with one or more violations of criminal codes, including bribery, theft and embezzlement in connection with the Communist conspiracy.

Sweden Standing Firm In Crisis

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UP) — Sweden's foreign minister returned today from an interrupted vacation to help steer the country through its worst crisis with Russia since Soviet troops plunged into neighboring Finland in 1939.

Foreign Minister Osten Unden, who hurried home from Italy after a Swedish mercy plane was shot down in the Baltic by Soviet jet fighters, began a series of conferences with governmental leaders.

Sweden categorically denied Russian charges that the rescue plane had violated Soviet territory and fired on the Russian fighters in a note handed to Soviet Ambassador Constantin Rodionov last night.

Observers here believed that Russian planes attacked the Swedish craft in an effort to guard the fact that large-scale fortifications are going up on Soviet-occupied Baltic islands.

Hope was all but abandoned for recovery of the wreckage of a second Swedish plane, a "flying classroom," which vanished Friday with eight men aboard.

In neighboring Denmark, Danish armed forces continued to operate under their three-month-old standing orders to fight back if attacked. Danish officials said no new orders have been issued because of the incident involving Sweden.

CHOKED TO DEATH

SHELBY (AP) — A 10-month-old boy, James Bruce Grayson, was pronounced dead on arrival at Shelby Hospital last night after choking on a garden pea. An examination revealed the pea lodged in the child's windpipe. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Grayson, of Route Five, Shelby.

Lavish Steamship Junket Rejected By Some Solons

WASHINGTON (UP) — The United States Lines steamship company has arranged a lavish junket for congressmen and high government officials aboard its sleek new $70,000,000 superliner United States, it was disclosed today.

But some lawmakers have declined the company's invitation to board the liner at Newport News, Va., Saturday for a free weekend cruise up the coast to New York. They told reporters they did not think it would be "ethical" to accept the proffered hospitality "under the circumstances."

The government is scheduled to chip in $43,000,000 in subsidies to help pay for the luxury liner. Comptroller General L. C. Warren is trying to block the deal. He claims the taxpayers are getting a rooking.

At least one member of the House subcommittee which is investigating allegedly excessive ship subsidies has accepted the cruiser invitation.

The list of congressmen invited appeared to be a closely-guarded secret. Spokesmen for the line in Washington and New York said their plans were so "confused" they "didn't know" exactly who or how many were invited.

But a reporter's check revealed that invitations have been sent to well over a score of congressmen, including members of committees which handle ship subsidy laws or appropriations.

One who received an invitation said he thought it would be "a great mistake" to go. He said some of his constituents might get the idea that his attitude toward ship subsidies was "influenced" by the free ride.

Rep. Clare E. Hoffman (R-Mich), member of the House Executive Expenditures Committee which severely criticized the subsidy for the liner United States, said he promptly rejected his invitation.

A special train will pick up the congressmen in Washington Saturday and take them to Newport News. On Monday, a special train will take them back to Washington from New York, all at no expense to the lawmakers.

Congressmen were told that the weekend cruise will be the first trial run with a full crew, including stewards and bartenders.

Tax Cut In Two Years Promised By Eisenhower

DENVER—(AP)—A cut in taxes in two years, which would be made possible by balancing the national budget, was promised yesterday by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower if he is elected President.

No cut in taxes can be made, he said, until the budget is balanced and the military might of the Western nations equals that of Russia, goals which he estimated could be reached in two years under his leadership in the White House.

After that, he foresees a "steady shrinkage" in the tax load.

The Republican presidential aspirant expressed the opinions during a conference late yesterday with Oregon delegates, who are backing him unanimously.

He also promised them his voice "will be raised" in the controversy over delegates from Texas, his native State, where he contended the will of the Republicans was "thwarted".

National Republican headquarters announced at Washington that all Texas contests between delegates supporting Eisenhower and Sen. Robert A. Taft have been referred to the national committee, which will meet in Chicago, probably July 1.

Eisenhower said he wants no delegate "that I have real reason to believe has been elected by another means than the free expression of the American people."

Preparing for a week-end trip to Texas and Nevada, the general announced no schedule for today, reserving it for office work and relaxation.

Pickets Put End To Soft Attitude

INDIANA HARBOR, Ind., (UP—Supervisors trapped inside the Inland steel plant were still eating steaks today but striking steelworkers had cut off their supply of cookies and wifely kisses.

When the nationwide steel strike broke out June 2, 2,500 supervisory employes were locked inside the gates of the inland mill.

Their loneliness was broken, though, by daily visits from wives and children who engaged in through-the-wire kissing and chatting.

Leaders among the CIO United Steel workers pickets patrolling the strikebound plant decided that this was too much sentiment for tough steel puddlers.

Tom Conway, secretary of Local 1010 of the striking union, said the workers were dead serious about their walkout and would permit no more kissing.

"It got so it didn't even look as if there was a strike on," he said. "There would be 50 or 60 women and kids at the fence making a holiday of it. Why, it go so it was breaking the morale of the pickets."

Confession Has Cool Reception

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (UP) — Authorities discounted today the "confession" of a 51-year-old convict to complicity in the 1935 kidnap murder of 10-year-old Charles Mattson, a crime that stirred the nation 17 years ago.

Sheriff Harold Zeis and the FBI investigated the statements and past record of Charles E. Cramer, Fort Wayne, and it was learned that Cramer previously had "confessed" the crime and been cleared.

Cramer now is serving a two to five-year sentence for burglary at Indiana State Penitentiary at Michigan City.

The Mattson boy was kidnaped from his Tacoma, Wash., home the night of Dec. 27, 1935 by a bearded man who grabbed the youngster after obtaining entrance to the home while the boy's parents were attending a party.

Charles' body was discovered 15 day later by a rabbit hunter near Emmett, Wash., after an all-out search by FBI and local officers.

The crime remains unsolved.

Virtuous Claims A Thing To Behold In Political Fights

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON — (AP) — One of the never-ending wonders of Washington is the amount of virtue claimed by both sides in a controversy. The most recent example is the dispute over postmasters.

Under the present system postmasters of the first, second and third class are chosen by the President, provided the Senate approves. The Senate can kill his appointments. President Truman asked Congress to change this.

He suggested that all postmasters be put under civil service in such a way that the President and the Senate would have nothing to say about appointments at all. He said the postmaster general, a member of his cabinet, should make them.

The Senate rose in its wrath yesterday and said "No." so the system stays as it's always been This power over the selection of postmasters, with all the political patronage involved, was too much for the senators to let go.

Sen. McClellan, Arkansas Democrat, said the President's plan, although 93 per cent of all government workers are under civil service, would "destroy the democratic process that keeps the government close to the people."

This was really putting senatorial power and political patronage on a high plane. Senators favoring the plan went up to a pretty high plane, too. They said the plan would be the biggest advance in civil service reform in 70 years.

There's no law saying the postmaster general can't consult with local politicians and with congressmen and senators on a candiate for postmaster. He could still do it, even if the Senate voted to cut itself and the President out of the picking.

The postmaster general alone now picks postmasters of the fourth class without the President or the Senate as a whole getting in on the act. So if the Senate approved the President's plan, the postmaster general could do with the first, second and third class postmasters what he's free to do with the fourth now.

For that matter, all four classes of postmaster come under civil service now. The classification of each postmaster depends on the amount of money taken in by his office.

An office is in the first class when it takes in at least $40,000 a year there are 2,845 first class postmasters; an office is second class when its revenue is between $8,-nd $40,000 there are 5,954 second class postmasters; a third class office is one which takes in between $1,500 and $8,000 there are 12,819 third class postmasters; and a fourth class office is one with receipts of less than $1,500 for the year there are 19,407 fourth class postmasters.

The terms of postmasters, once they're picked, run indefinitely. While it was at it yesterday, the Senate also refused to let the President put U. S. marshals and customs collectors under civil service

SBI Is Probing Into Political Ad

SMITHFIELD, (AP)—A political advertisement in the race for Johnston County's two House seats has brought an investigation by the SBI.

Solicitor Jack Hooks said his action in the case would depend on the SBI report.

The advertisement charged that two of the candidates, Roy C. Coates and C. Blake Thomas, were sponsored by a former Johnston school superintendent for the purpose of getting his job back. The former superintendent, H. B. Morrow, said the advertisement was "absolutely untrue and false in every detail." He said he did not want the job again.

Coates and Thomas were high men in the May 31 primary. They will be opposed by G. Troy Page and Rudolph Howell in a second vote June 28.

The advertisement appeared in the Johnstonian Sun and was signed "Paid for by the Johnston County Committee for Better Schools."

Herring-Corbett Vows Spoken In Farmville Christian Church

FARMVILLE—The marriage of Miss Faye Lisette Corbett of Farmville and Kinston and Elbert Ray Herring of Kinston was solemnized in a double ring ceremony and characterized by impressive dignity and simplicity Friday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock in the Farmville Christian Church. The Rev. Z. B. T. Cox officiated.

The vows were spoken in a chancel setting of pedestal baskets of white gladioli and Oregon fern and floor candelabra bearing cathedral candles interspersed with plumosa fern. Family pews were marked by white maline and satin bows.

A prelude of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Haywood Smith, organist, and Mrs. James E. Corbett, soloist. Organ selections included "Dedication" and "Traumerai" by Schumann, "Evening Star" by Wagner, 'Serenade" by Schubert and "Liebestraum" by Liszt. Mrs. Corbett sang, "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," 'If I Could Tell You" and "The Lord Bless and Keep You."

Traditional wedding marches were used. "Clair de Lune" by Debussy was softly played during the ceremony.

Boogie Scott of Kinston was best man. Dalton Corbett of Farmville and James Corbett of Farmville and Korea, brothers of the bride, James Warren, cousin of the groom, and Tex Teenie of Kinston were ushers.

The bride entered the church with her father, by whom she was given in marriage. Her blonde, classic beauty was accentuated by her bridal attire. She wore a gown of embroidered organdy fashioned with a fitted bodice, a sweetheart neckline with double collars and butterfly sleeves wearing short mitts to match the dress. The ballerina length skirt made of four tiers and fitted over a crinoline foundation was featured in embroidery. Her tiered veil of bridal illusion was shoulder length and fell from a Mary Queen of Scots bonnet.

She carried a bouquet of carnations gypsophelia centered with an orchid and tied with white satin ribbon and white tulle.

Miss Joyce Corbett, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and the bride's only attendant. Her ballerina length gown was of mist blue embroidered organdy with slippers, hat and mitts to match. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses tied with pink satin ribbon and pink tulle.

Mrs. Corbett, mother of the bride, wore a navy Linalace dress, a hat of navy and beige trim, beige gloves, matching slippers and bag. Her corsage was talisman roses.

Mrs. Herring, the bridegroom's mother, wore a mauve crepe dress and white accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses. Mrs. Luther Flowers was directress.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Herring left for an unannounced trip. The bride wore for travel a white linen suit, the coat, hat, gloves and shoes of white Linalace. At her shoulder she wore the purple throated orchid lifted from her bouquet.

Mrs. Herring is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Corbett of Farmville. Her maternal grandparents are the late Mrs. Emily Nichols and F. M. Smith. Her paternal grandparents are the late Mrs. Addie Smith and James Corbett. Mrs. Herring is a graduate of Farmville schools and attended Atlantic Christian College of Wilson. From the latter she received a secretarial certificate in business education and has since been employed at the Kinston shirt factory. While in college she was a pledge to the Phi Sigma Tau.

Mr. Herring is the son of Mr and Mrs. Elbert Herring of Kinston and has just been released from the armed services. He is now associated with R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

The couple will live in Kinston on their return home.

Cake Cutting

Mr. and Mrs. Dalton Corbett, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Willoughby entertained the Herring-Corbett wedding party and close friends at a cake cutting immediately following the wedding rehearsal Friday night in the home of the Willoughbys. The home was extensively decorated with summer flowers, dahlias, feverfew daisies and roses predominating. White decorations carried the wedding motif used in the dining room of the home.

The serving table in the dining room was spread with an imported cutwork madeira linen cloth and was beautifully decorated. The four tiered wedding cake was placed on one end of the table. The centerpiece was an arrangement of white carnations, feverfew and plumosa fern in a silver container, silver candelabra with lighted white tapers interspersed with small white flowers.

Mrs. R. L. Corbett, the bride's mother, served the cake after the bride-elect, assisted by the groom-elect, cut the first slice in traditional manner.

Mrs. Elbert Herring of Kinston, mother of the groom, served lime ice from the opposite end of the table. Mrs. D. L. Corbett and Mrs. L. S. Willoughby served salted nuts and bridal mints.

George W. Jordon Jr. Weds Ann Vicars On Saturday

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—Miss Ann H. Vicars, daughter of Mrs. Daniel Vicars, of Glasgow, Scotland, and the niece of Mr. and Mrs. David Buchanan, of 11 S. Martindale Ave., became the bride of George William Jordan Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George William Jordan of Greenville, N. C., Saturday, June 14, at the Chelsea Presbyterian Church.

The Reverend William Parker officiated at the double ring ceremony before an altar of palms, cibodium ferns and white flowers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, David Buchanan, was attractive in a white Chantilly lace and bridal satin wedding gown, made with an illusion neckline embroidered in seed pearls. Her long waisted bodice had tight fitting sleeves which came to points at the wrists. Her full satin skirt terminated in a graceful train. She wore a satin halo cap from which fell her fingertip length veil of nylon illusion net. To complete the picture she carried an old fashioned bouquet of white roses.

Miss Suzanne Little, maid of honor, wore a pale green nylon net and taffeta gown. Her strapless bodice was topped with a lace bolero and she wore a large matching picture hat. An interesting contrast of color was her old fashioned bouquet of yellow roses.

Mrs. Harold Driver was the bridesmaid and selected a yellow taffeta gown, having a wide V neckline, molded bodice and full bouffant skirt. She also wore a large picture hat and carried an old fashioned bouquet of talisman roses.

The best man for the bridegroom was Donald Weisbech, of Summit, N. J. and the ushers were Harold Driver and Harry Proudfoot.

Mrs. Vicars, mother of the bride, chose a grey lace over taffeta gown, styled with a V neck buttoning to the waist, and having a circular skirt. She wore a pink straw and lace hat and purple orchid corsage. The bride's aunt, Mrs. Buchanan, selected a natural colored lace and taffeta gown. Her fitted bodice had a mandarin neckline trimmed in black velvet. The velvet trim was repeated on the two pockets of the circular lace skirt. She chose black accessories and a purple orchid corsage.

The groom's mother looked charming in an attractively styled pale blue linen dress, with beige accessories and an orchid corsage.

A dinner was given at Fox Manor Hotel following the ceremony, after which the newlyweds left by car for a week's honeymoon trip to New England.

The bride wore a pale blue linen suit for her traveling costume, styled with a peplum jacket and flared skirt. She accompanied this with a small white lace hat and a white orchid corsage.

The bride attended school in Scotland and is a graduate of the New Jersey College of Commerce. She is a member of the Beta Sigma Phi sorority and a member of the Alumni Association of N. J. C.

The bridegroom served four years in the U. S. Navy, and is presently employed in the N. J. Bell Telephone Co. laboratory in Summit, N. J.

Upon the return from their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Jordan will make their home at 186 Fairmount Ave., Chatham, N. J.

Intends To See Coltrane Is Paid

RALEIGH — (AP) — Rep. John Umstead aims to see that D. S. Coltrane doesn't lose any money for supporting Umstead's brother in the recent governor's race.

The Orange County legislator said yesterday one of his first acts when the 1953 General Assembly opens will be to offer a bill to restore the assistant budget director's $1,000 a month salary. Sixty-seven other legislators have agreed to sponsor the bill, Umstead said.

Gov. Scott stripped Coltrane of all his duties except those spelled out by law after Coltrane refused to resign. Coltrane has announced he will not accept his pay checks until the normal duties of his office are restored.

Coltrane supported William B. Umstead for governor although Scott backed defeated candidate Hubert E. Olive and asked his appointees to follow suit.

Scott has indicated there were other reasons for asking the budget officer to step out and has promised a statement in the near future.

Two Boys Who Didn't Know How To Fly Took Airplane; Survive Crash

ABINGDON, Ill. (UP) — Two teen-age boys, who never had a flying lesson in their lives, stole an airplane, flew it 45 miles and managed to crash-land it in the dark without killing themselves.

Before the boys were through with their adventure they buzzed rooftops, sheared branches off trees, landed in jail and gave Ma and Pa Murk the fright of their lives.

The owner of the smashed plane, Harlan Baird, moaned, "I don't know what I'll do," and promised to press charges against the youths.

The young airmen, identified as William C. Richey, 17, and Larry L. Sopher, 16, steadfastly refused to say why they stole the plane and tried the solo yesterday.

They told police they broke into Peoria's M.T Hawley Airport hangar and nosed around until they found a gassed-up plane.

They climbed in and Richey, who said he had had one or two airplane rides, took the controls and took off.

The boys flew steadily enough until they got over Abingdon, where they started to become a little uneasy.

According to police, they buzzed the town for about 15 minutes after their arrival at about 8:30 a. m.

Authorities thought the plane was lost and threw searchlights on it.

"We wanted to guide it," said a policeman.

The blinding searchlights completely wiped our Richey's poise. was clipping small branches from

He began flying so low that he treetops as the plane wheeled over the town. Finally, Richey turned the craft toward the house of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Murk, who live just west of Abingdon.

"Ma and Pa Murk were rocking on their front porch when those kids came over," a policeman said.

The plane dipped suddenly, grazed the Murk porch and then knocked a limb off a nearby tree.

The Murks got out of their rockers and headed for safety.

Richey hit another tree and one wing of the plane folded back against the fuselage. The plane bumped to a landing in a hollow in anearby pasture.

The boys, only slightly hurt, jumped out of the machine and ran for the woods. State and city police had to chase them a mile before running them down.

Crop Reporters Urged To File By This Friday

James Meredith, Pitt PMA secretary, this morning urged that all reporters who are measuring tobacco and peanut acreage this year to get their final reports into the PMA office not later than Friday, June 20.

"We want to complete all measuring in the county by that date so reports can be tabulated," he said. "All excess acreage must be destroyed by July 1, or farmers will have to pay a penalty when the market opens."

Acvcording to Meredith, Pitt County farmers will cultivate nearly 40,000 acres of tobacco and almost 10,000 acres of peanuts this year.

REPENTANCE—AND ITS POSSIBILITIES

Does a man ever get to the place where he cannot repent of his sins?

Yes, he does. The most dangerous liar in the world is the man who lies to himself. His fate is that he believes his own lies at last. There are people who cannot repent of their sins for the simple reason that they do not believe they are sinners. They cannot repent of sins which they do not believe they have committed. There are still others who cannot repent of their sins because they have so allowed their sins to overwhelm them that their will power is destroyed.

Repentance is a gift of God just as salvation is a gift of God. Anybody can have repentance who wants to have it, but there actually are many people who do not want to repent. Accordingly, they cannot receive the spiritual gift of repentance. They will not forgive somebody they hate, or they will not restore something they have wickedly appropriated. There are others who are willing to do anything save give up some vice. To live without this indulgence would be unthinkable.

These cannot receive the gift of salvation because they cannot receive from God the prerequisite, namely, the power to repent. But they can have this power if they want it. To say that they cannot repent means that they do not want to repent.

The "Special Significance" Is There, All Right

"No special significance," the Army says in reference to its moving anti-aircraft batteries into defensive positions around major cities and vital target areas.

Could be that the current deployment of anti-aircraft batteries has no "special significance" in view of the fact that some deployment had taken place previously. But taking the situation as a whole, it does have significance for the American people.

Just how close are we to another war? Or how much chance is there of another "Pearl Harbor" here at home?

Granted the move by the Army is a precautionary measure, it is part of a constantly broadening net of air defense being built around the nation. Admittedly the Army (so far as we know) is not sure when, or even if, Russian planes will attack this country, but were it not a possibility, there is no doubt that present preparations would not be taken.

Along with the new deployment of anti-aircraft batteries, there comes the announcement that civil defense aircraft observers will take up a 24-hour a day vigil beginning July 17.

Add all those things together, and perhaps it is not amiss to reach the conclusion that the American people should give a little more serious thought to civil defense and what to do in case of attack.

How is the civil defense program progressing in Pitt County? How prepared are we to do our part should one of the vital defense targets in this region be hit by an air attack?

Perhaps the time has come to take inventory and sharpen up on our own weak points here at home.

Scott's Behavior Should Be Remembered

Well, we've had our fingers crossed . . . kept an eye on the news wires, all to no avail. Governor W. Kerr Scott just won't try to explain away the disproportionate amount of road-building around his own private bailiwick in Alamance County.

He isn't ashamed of what we can now only regard as exploiting his honored office . . . no apologies to make, is the term used in his last press conference.

May this attitude rise up out of his past to haunt him, should Scott ever again aspire to public office.

Of late, these columns have been so preoccupied with the peccadillos of our Governor that it seemed like stretching it to the realm of petty and chronic complaint-itis with still another pointing-of-the-finger. Nevertheless, this latest press disclosure is deserving of filing and remembering by the citizenry of North Carolina.

At times we've felt some satisfaction in having a "maverick" riding high in the State's official family. It seemed a good thing to have a Governor who was a little unpredictable; had a mind of his own, seemed to put some fresh air into the stodginess of political life.

But there were conflicting elements: Scott campaigned as an anti-machine candidate, then attempted to organize one of his own. Scott condemned "petty graft" that prevailed among some State departments and his attitude was hailed with appreciation; now he himself willingly concedes obtaining highway benefits that probably no other comparable North Carolina sections enjoyed in his road program. Scott, as an "independent" minded figure would be presumed to encourage voters to follow their own convictions; actually, when a few under his thumb dared to exercise their rights they were dismissed from their jobs or relieved of their authority.

Such behavior seems almost irresponsible; either that, or a single-minded purposefulness of opportunism. Suffice it to say that W. Kerr Scott would, in the minds of very few, be labeled irresponsible.

It should not be soon forgotten.

Check The Urge To Be A Roadhog

It is out in Minnesota, as we recall, that police are looking for a roadhog who refused to let another motorist pass on the highway, and later stabbed the motorist in an argument.

So far as we know, the roadhogs in Pitt County haven't taken to using knives, but there are plenty of drivers who are causing a great deal of trouble by taking more than their half of the highway.

Just last week-end a wreck was caused in the county when one automobile forced another off the road. During the past several weeks, particularly on the highways from here to the coast, there have been numerous accidents and other near-accidents caused by roadhogs.

In the summer months the highways hereabouts are jammed with the automobiles of people seeking relief from the heat either on the beaches, in the country of along the rivers. Most folks go early and stay late, and consequently do a lot of traveling in the dark. That is when good common sense and highway courtesy mean most to drivers and passengers alike. Too many drivers are in a hurry to get home; they are usually tired, and too often carelessly place the burden of precaution on the other fellow.

More than ever in these vacation months, careful driving is vital to every person on the road. The careless driver . . . and the roadhog . . . may not live to see another summer.

WASHINGTON—A long deadlock and possible failure of the Korean peace talks, it is now known, was forecast by high-ranking army men, when President Truman and Secretary Acheson decided to bar the exchange of Koje prisoners who refuse to return to North Korea. With the Panmunjom conferences still fruitless after ten months of negotiations, they have proved correct.

The inside story of the Truman-Acheson decision reveals that it was an ideological rather than a military approach to the problem, as were so many ill-fated, Roosevelt-Churchill orders to field commanders in World War II. As Eisenhower and Bradley opposed Yalta-Potsdam agreements, so their successors are skeptical of today's interference by Washington.

GODSEND—The original surrender leaflets showered over enemy troops contained no guarantee of permanent refuge in our ranks. They simply promised humane treatment, an offer designed to offset Communist warnings that we mistreated and massacred all captives. To hungry, weary and demoralized troops, this prospect of surcease from battle hardships and casualties was a godsend.

There was no ideological fine print in these tracts, as printed and distributed by military authorities on the scene. More than half of our 170,000 prisoners, it is figured, threw down their arms only for bread-and-butter, body-and-soul reasons.

The Truman-Acheson afterthought was an attempt to make anti-Communist propaganda in the global "cold war." It was designed to convince the world that even ignorant and illiterate Korean peasants prefer a democratic to a communistic way of life.

SKIN-DEEP—Army experts also believe that many thousands of the captured accept our offer of refuge solely to escape further fighting, and to enjoy the relatively comfortable conditions in our compounds. They doubt whether these uneducated and untravelled boys from the most backward sections of barren Korea have been "converted to democracy."

In view of the dictatorial behaviour of Syngman Rhe, the South Korean puppet president we have pampered, financed and kept in office for so many years, the depth of North Koreans' faith in western standards of anything is regarded as only skin-deep.

EXCHANGE—Despite the admittedly good intentions behind the Truman-Acheson experiment, it has several unfortunate aspects that only now are receiving consideration on Capitol Hill, largely because of growing complaints from folks back home, and from sharp critiques by international authorities.

While the peace talks founder on this issue, more than 70,000 American boys—the figure, though tentative, is approximately correct—languish in enemy prison camps. They may even suffer retaliation because of General Boatner's necessary but drastic action in smashing Koje revolts.

We have enough prisoners willing to return home, according to published accounts, so that we can now effect a full exchange on a conventional and historical basis, thus releasing the Americans who otherwise face a killing summer heat under execrable conditions.

So, on Capitol Hill and at the Pentagon they ask: Why not make a man-to-man swap now, without injecting the ideological question into the truce talks?

DUD—The propaganda value of the Truman-Acheson position, it is maintained, will have no lasting effect in a protracted "cold war." The Kremlin is laughing at the threat, and using it to build up strength during the Panmunjom affair.

White House and State have secret reports that our noble attitude on his quesion has been given no publicity in communist, satellite and even in such neutral states as India, the Middle East and Africa. In those areas, where it was supposed to win us friends, it has been a dud.

DIFFICULTIES—From a broader standpoint, international legal experts say the Truman-Acheson idea may create many novel and troublesome difficulties, should there be a global war.

If persisted in, it may nullify and weaken the Geneva agreements for treatment and exchange of prisoners, as well as for the mitigation of war's horrors, that have been laboriously established since the first convention for discussion of these problems was held in 1864.

They Could Ask An Embarrassing Question

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Saturday afternoo I was sitting at home trying to write columns, but at first it was sort of different because of the presence of my two neighbors, Billy Davenport, Jr., and Burney Warren, Jr., both about four and a half years old.

Then I became engrossed in an intelligent conversation with my neighbors and decided that this elegant conversation would be worth writing about.

It all came about when Billy Davenport said he wanted a power lawn mower that I have at the store.

"You can have it," I told Billy, "for a mere $100."

"Is it all right," Billy asked, "if I take a long time to pay for it, because I don't have much money right now." That was OK with me and I was relieved that we had made t hedeal.

But then Burney tuned up and asked, "How much is $100-" If you have ever tried to explain such a phenomenal number to a four-year-old you knew the situation I was in.

"Well," I said, "can you tell me how many people are in this room?"

Burney started pointing, "One, two, three, four, five."

"How many fingers and toes do you have?"

"Ten."

"O K; 100 is as many fingers and toes as all of the people in this room have."

Naturally I didn't get off with such a simple explanation. "Well," Burney asked, "Why isn't that just the same as the number of fingers and toes we all have?"

"Because," I said, "that's just half as many. You know, 50 fingers To make the 100, we must have 50 fingers and 50 toes." This got more and more involved, and finally I decided that parenthood is a great game. My daughter Nancy, at 21 months, has just learned how to say "What's that," and she goes around the house all day asking that question, even about things that she already knows. Rachel and I have it easy now. Maybe by the time she is four years old I will have figured out a simple way to explain how many a hundred is.

And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

GOOD HUMOR — Governor Kerr Scott was in a good humor at his press conference Tuesday. In fact, he has manifested pretty good humor ever ince he got the letter out of his system stripping Dave Coltrane of virtually all his powers as assistant to the director of the budget. For two or three days before and a like period immediately following the recent primary in which the governor's candidates all along the line took a severe drubbing, he was definitely not in a good humor. He wielded a big axe to chop off the official head of his paroles commissioner, the commissioner of motor vehicles and his assistant budget director. To fill vacancies created by these executions he, for the second time in his administration, broke up a smooth working probation system and malt beverage control in the ABC board. These actions with implications of others to follow were attributed to personal peeve on part of the governor because his candidates in the primary lost.

RECESS — He told newsmen Tuesday that the "letter writing" was over for the present, a statement which newsmen interpreted to mean nobody else would get fired right now He further indicated support of the newly appointed commissioner of motor vehicle, L. R. Fisher, in his reversal of the Scott policy of mandatory transfer of one fourth of the highway patrolmen every year. Additional evidence of his returning good humor and sportsmanship was manifested in hi invitation to Governor-nominate William Umstead to be his guest at the National Governors' Conference in Houston.

TRADITIONAL — Such manifestation of sportsmanship has been traditional in North Carolina. Other retiring governors have invited their nominated successor to attend similar conferences. Scott missed out on the national conference four years ago because he had to go into a second primary, results of which were not determined in time for him to attend the national conference. He did go as Governor Gregg Cherry's guest to the Southern Conference in the fall of that year.

DEMOCRACY — Such sportmanship is an integram part of real democracy. When the primary is over Democrats get together. It is recalled that in 1936 Ralph McDonald suffered a physical breakdown due mainly to his activities in the general election campaign after he had been primary by Clyde Hoey. In 1948 William Umstead was a vigorous campaigner in the fall following his defeat for the senate nomination by J. M. Broughton. And just two years ago Frank Graham worked as hard for the November election of Willis Smith as he had to get the nomination for the senate in May and June. So it was that there was no big news in the fact that William Umstead and Hubert Olive rode in the same car in an American Legion parade at Durham just a week after Olive had lost the gubernatorial nomination to Umstead. The commentators who seek to make big news out of Governor Scott's invitation to Governor - nominate Umstead to attend the National Governor's conference are indirectly doing Scott an injustice. The implication is that it is surprising or newsworthy that he is as good Democrat and as good sport as his predecessors.

PRESIDENT — Efforts of reporters to get an expression from Governor Scott as to his prefence for the presidential nomination failed. He just smiled and reiterated his frequently quoted statement that he is for the nominee of the Democratic convention. When reminded that he was a delegate and would have some voice in selecting that nominee, he grinned again and said he had just half a vote and that wouldn't count for much. (He is one of 16 delegates at large wit half a vote each. The entire North Carolina delegation has 32 votes.)

INTIMATIONS — Conclusions drawn from Governor Scott's demeanor at the press conference, the way he said things more than what he actually said, are that while he has no inclination to back up and no apologies for his actions of the past few weeks, he has gotten a lot of venom out of his system and that for the immediate futurehis course will more hearly follow the norm for retiring governors. The major difference will be that because of his demotion of his assistant in budget functions he will give closer personal attention to matters in that field than past governors have given them. And there is some evidence that he does not expect to retire completely from public life when his term as goveernor ends next January.

CONSTABLE — One of the best political offices in Wake county is constable of Raleigh township. There have been times when the constable's fees exceeded the salary paid the sheriff. Currently there is a second primary for constable, Incumbent Eddie Wall the first and Hubert Horton having called a run-off. That is the only second primary affecting Raleigh township workers, except the state-wide race for associate justice of the supreme court between Judges Hunt Parker and William Bobbitt. Constable Wall is bothered about the situation. He is sure he will win for something, but he points out the possibility that voters might get confused and elect him to the supreme court and Judge Parker as constable of Raleigh township. He doesn't think either of them would like that. (Note: Lest some reader should take the foregoing seriously, let it be written into the record that while it might not be funny, it is supposed to be. After all, this weekend will feature midsummer night, and as far back as Shake-

What Other Papers Are Thinking

TOO LATE

(Raleigh News and Observer)

Regardless of the merits or demerits of Senator Hoey's proposal that labor unions be forbidden to exist on a national scale or be forbidden to bargain on a national scale, the proposal is doomed to failure for the very practical reason that it comes too late.

As a matter of historical fact, labor followed management in bargaining on a national scale. The pattern has been set firmly for both labor and management. The Congress could not, in good conscience, forbid industry-wide bargaining for labor without also forbidding it for management. Even if such a law were bilaterial it would be difficult to enforce.One large industry, the telephone industry, does bargain ostensibly on a local scale. The Bell Telephone System makes separate contracts for each of its subsidiary companies, stretching across the country. But no one would be so naive as to question the statement that labor policies for all the companies are formed in New York, rather than in the various cities in which the "home" office of the companies are located.

Senator Hoey's proposal was prompted by the steel strike. However, there seems no doubt but that the steel strike would have been averted entirely had each steel company bargained separately. Instead of doing that, the companies stood like a solid phalanx, with some of them willing to make concessions not agreeable to all.

Some way must be found to avert work stoppages which cripple the entire economy of the country. It will not be found, however, by feeding labor out of one spoon and management out of another.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

If you get an offer of six ties for $4.75, would you be more inclined to buy them if the offer came in a white envelope than if it came in a buff one? Would you be more inclined to buy if there was a memorial stamp on the envelope instead of an ordinary one? Or if the offer was addressed to you by name instead of "Dear Friend?" Or if the price was $4.98 instead of $4.75?

Nonsense? Not a bit of it.

While the average person may think his decision was based solely on the question of whether he needed ties and whether he thought the offer was the best one available, the fact is that all of those other things are factors in the question of buying by mail.

Mail order sellers have found out by tests. They have sent out 10,000 letters with one-color printing and 10,000 with two-color, then counted the replies. If there is any doubt about what the test shows, they do it again and again. Some tests have involved 300,000 letters in a single mailing. Some time or other, almost every variable in mail orders has been tested. And almost every test has shown — and it has been corroborated by broadside mailings — that almost every variable does have an effect on the receiver.

A stamp, an envelope color, a salutation or a premium may make a difference of a tenth of one per cent in the replies. But that difference may be the difference between profit and loss on the mailing. Even when the difference is smaller, it is important to the mail order seller.

Suppose repeated tests show that one more person out of 10,000 consistently responds when an offer is on green paper; that an average of two more send in money when an airmail reply envelope is enclosed, and so on through all the variables. The right combination may double the profit from each mailing.

FORMULA FOR ONE MAY FLOP FOR ANOTHER

That poses the question: Since all these things have been tested, why hasn't someone compiled a list of results, thereby saving constant testing? There are such lists, but they have very limited application. What brings the highest returns for one article will flop for another. Note that offers of religious goods are often poorly printed. Tests have shown that if the printing is good, enough people to make a difference must have thought, "They don't need my mite!" But a poorly printed offer of a magazine, a stock or a book might be fiscally fatal. Furthermore, there are regional and time differences in reactions. A combination of variables might bring one result in New England, another in Missouri. A combination that clicks one year may lay an egg in another. And if too many mail order companies use one combination, prospects may get tired of them.

Another question: Since enough tests can show the best way to offer any article, why aren't all mail operations highly profitable? The answer lies in the cost-and-profit equation. An operator may discover a combination that brings a 4 per cent return (a fabulously high response for most offers) and then discover that if he spends so much on printing, mailing, premiums, etc., he needs a 5 per cent return to meet his costs.

BRITISH SETTING UP BUSINESS APPOINTMENTS

American business men going to England are offered a "personalized" service by the British government.

All such a visitor need do is to call the nearest British consulate before leaving and tell what kind of business contacts he wants and dates and time available. When he gets to London he calls TRAfalgar 8855, asks for Brigadier Williamson, and gets his schedule (pronounced shedule) of appointments.

IT'S NOT CHEATING, JUST FUDGING

The current issue of a leading food trade publication carries a story highly critical of several newspapers that have exposed gyp practices by some local grocers. Three pages later, in reporting suggestions for food dealers made at a recent convention, it includes this one: "Greens stored in a washtub of cold water stay crisp and irresistable and pick up weight, too."

Sun glass makers hope that fashion can sell their product as well as hats.

As a warm-up for National Sun Glass Week starting next Monday, a dozen manufacturers staged a fashion show, complete with models wearing beach attire and displaying sun glasses in great variety of shapes and frames. Slogan for the week is "Look Smart— Be Safe — Wear Sun Glasses."

Hal Boyle's Column

By RELMAN MORIN
(For HAL BOYLE)

NEW YORK — (AP) — Dwight Eisenhower's mother was not there when he came home to Abilene the other day. She has gone now.

The spirit of her, though, the very essence of this woman, is so strong that it breathes from every corner of their home. Indeed, the old house is a perfect self-portrait, something she made and colored forever with the rich, deep shades of personality.

Her niece, Mrs. Ray Etherington, still lives up the road a way. She calls her "Aunt Ida."

"She must have been very strong," I said, "as a person."

"She was," Mrs. Etherington said. "Of them all, Aunt Ida was the most vivid, the dominant one. Of course, you wouldn't think it to look at her."

In the photographs of her as a young woman, her chin is small and pointed. There is a firmness about her mouth, and yet the faintest shadow of a smile, too. Her hair is thick and it looks dark in the picture. In her eyes, there is that same intimation of a smile, something felt rather than seen. Her eyebrows are high and dark, and they give her an arch, knowing expression.

This expression must have been very marked on her face when she pretended not to notice that the boys had taken her bread dough from the old Pennsylvania Dutch dough tray in the kitchen, rolled it into balls and were playing catch behind her back.

And all her life she pretended not to recognize the nickname, "Ike," although every one of the boys—and not Dwight, alone — was known as "Ike" at one time or another. "Ike?", she would say, sweetly. "Who is Ike?"

She was an intensely religious woman. The family Bible, with the names of her sons and their birth dates, lies open in the living room. In the book shelves are faded editions of "Bible Studies," "Our Beacon Light," "The Life of Christ," and "Religious Denominations." Framed mottos from the Bible hang above the two brass bedsteads in the room she kept for herself and her husband.

All this is just as it was when she went away for the last time.

Except for one thing, and this is a thing she would not have permitted, if she had been there because she never allowed things to lie around. Her wedding dress, of white silk and lace lies diagonally across her bed for visitors to see.

It is a size 9. She was a small woman.

Yet, she maintained a home for five boys and a man, by herself. She made some of their clothes on the sewing machine in the bedroom, handled the family washing, baked her own bread and pies, and stirred up cauldrons of a mysterious dish called "pudding meat." The way of making it seems to have been lost.

"And so Aunt Ida never was able to go out very much," says Mrs. Etherington. "She was always at home. I don't think she wanted to go away from the house."

She had an egg-warming dish in the kitchen, with four holders for the eggs, but she used it to keep her money in. The small house-expenses were paid out of this dish.

"Later in life," her son said, at Abilene, "I learned that we were very poor."

They may have lacked for money at times, but their home was a treasure house of good living, of warmth and comfort and books and music—she tried to teach each of the five boys the piano —and especially of a woman's loving care.

It is all there today. And so is she.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON — The capital's social pattern has changed very little over the last quarter century, says Verna Bloom, daughter of the late Congressman Sol Bloom (D-NY), who has written two books on the subject. "It's body's just as exhausted," Miss Bloom said. 'The only difference is that some people give in and some don't."

Only the practice of making formal calls has eased off, except for the diplomats, and even some of them are returning their cards by mail, she said. Miss Bloom, whose book, "There's No Place Like Washington", covered the Capital front in a series of behind-the-scenes stories from the glittering '20s through wartime Washington, heard a new story the other day on one of her characters, Calvin Coolidge. "A man who said his cousin had been the President's military aide told me Coolidge was not on speaking terms with the White House housekeeper because she refused to serve him parsnips, which he pronounced 'passnips'." Vera said. "One day he wanted his 'passnips' so fervently he summoned his secretary and said: 'This is a presidential order. You tell the "queen" I want "passnips" tonight!' "

At a tea party people were discussing changes in the newly renovated Executive Mansion. An elderly little woman cut in on the conversation. "I know all about them," she said. The President himself told me on TV."

Miss Helen Bullock, a native Californian, was honored recently by the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities as having made the biggest contribution to Virginia's historical data during 1951.

Miss Bullock, now associated with the National Council on Historic Sites and Buildings, is an authority on Jeffersoniana and early colonial history and aided with the restoration of Williamsburg.

"They gave me a history on California, lest I forget my home state," Miss Bullock said, "but I reminded them I was actually a native of Virginia. By the charter of 1609 the boundaries of Virginia were described as '200 miles north of Old Point Comfort and 200 miles south of Old Point Comfort and as far west as the ocean, including the island of California.' "

Taft And Eisenhower Supporters In Accord Over Handling Texas Strife

WASHINGTON (UP) —Taft and Eisenhower supporters agreed today that the Republican National Committee did "the right thing" by taking on the job of referee in the bitter dispute over Texas delegates to the GOP nominating convention.

Some of the other decisions on delegate contests which the national committee announced last night were less pleasing to one camp or the other. But the overall "package" was accepted by both sides without public protest.

With 95 convention votes at stake, the way in which the delegate disputes are settled could decide the outcome of the neck-and-neck race between Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Sen. Robert A. Taft for the GOP presidential nomination.

The national committee took jurisdication over disputes involving 72 delegates and 70 alternates, including the entire 38 - member Texas delegation.

Contests involving 23 delegates and 23 alternates were referred to state GOP committees in Virginia, Louisiana, Georgia and Mississippi for decision.

The actions were based on a GOP rule requiring state committees to decided contests over delegates elected by districts and the national organization to settle disputes over those elected from states at large.

Taft would have been the gainer if the 32 district delegates allotted to Texas had been referred to the pro-Taft Texas GOP committee.

However, the Taft camp believed that the whole Texas fight would go before the national convention anyway. Eisenhower's managers have said they would insist on taking it there.

Eisenhower campaign managers have charged Taft forces with "stealing" the Texas delegation by excluding Eisenhower supporters from the state convention. Taft retorted that the Eisenhower backers were actually Democrats trying to take over the Texas GOP.

The Eisenhower organization was less pleased by the national committee's decision to refer contests over seven district delegates and seven alternates to the pro - Taft Louisiana state committee. Eisenhower managers have threatened to fight these contests at the national convention, too.

While Taft could expect to benefit from the Louisiana decision, he could be hurt by a parallel ruling sending disputes over 13 district delegates and 13 alternates to the pro-Eisenhower Georgia GOP committee.

Along with this decision, the national committee took jurisdiction over disputes involving four delegates at large and four alternates and two district delegates and two alternates from Louisiana.

Other political developments:

1. W. Averell Harriman, who trimmed Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee in the District of Columbia primary Tuesday, told a news conference he would not predict how many votes he will have on the first ballot at the Democratic national convention.

But he said "a very considerable number of states" will support him on that tally.

2. Eisenhower met in Denver with five of Arizona's 14 convention delegates and appeared to have gained the support of one of the two uncommitted delegates.

3. Reliable sources said Sen. Everett M. Dirksen (R-Ill) probably will make Taft's nominatin speech at the Chicago convention.

Prisons Program Reorganization Urged By July 1

RALEIGH — (AP) — The State's Prison Advisory Council wants the prisons reorganization program to go into effect July 1.

In a meeting yesterday, the council urged the Highway Commission to adopt the plan after eliminating the one point which had caused an outcry. Eliminated was a proposal to chop the 10 prison division supervisors to three.

Prisons Director Walter Anderson and the council had hoped to coentralize the duties of the supervisors of the state's vast prison network.

Major changes in the reorganization plan calls for the addition of two assistant prison directors. One would supervise all prison camps. The other would have charge of rehabilitation and training.

The plan recommended yesterday also calls for a definite policy of mandatory retirement at 65 for prison personnel. The plan is similar to that of other state agencies in that an employe could be kept on after 65 if he is recommended by a superior and in good physical health.

Lengthy Docket Heard In Wednesday Police Court

By CHESTER WALSH

In Police Court Wednesday, David Earl Adams, Negro tenant farmer Route 5, Greenville, charged with having improper rear lights on his motor vehicle, came into court with a lawyer to plead his case.

Under normal circumstances, the fine for having a defective tail light on a motor vehicle would be about $5, if it were the first offense.

Sam B. Underwood Jr. and Solicitor Eli Bloom engaged in a prolonged forensic debate on the law in the case.

Judge Whedbee gave judicial cognizance to the eloquence and continued prayer for judgment in "the case of the extinguished red light."

Next case was that against Verona W. Robinson and Winstead Robinson. They were found not guilty of hit-and-run driving.

When the case against Leo August Rivera, Negro, charged with driving without a driver's license, he failed to answer to his name and the court ordered a capias instanter issued.

Speeding: Angela Daduses, $15; Roy Lee Ross $15; Jehu Taft, Negro, $15; Georg eV. Campbell Jr., $15; Lester I. Sherman, $15; Charles E. Holloway, $15.

Willie J. Brown, Negro, failure to stop at a red traffic light, $10.

Willie Earl Gardner, Negro, defective brakes, $15, and he is not to operate a car without proper brakes.

In the case of Ned Brady, Negro, no operator's license, prayer for judgment was continued on payment of $25, costs deducted, and he is not to operate a car without a license.

The case of Thomas Worthington, charged with driving a motor vehicle while drunk, was transferred to Superior Court for jury trial.

Arthur James Morris, Negro, nonsupport, 30 days in jail, suspended on payment of $25 a week for the next 10 weeks for support of his family. The court order provides that he is to remain of good behavior and keep the court advised of his address. An order is that this case shall be retained for further court order.

Crop Conditions In Tarheelia Are Above Average

RALEIGH — (AP) — June may have been a dry month to date but crop conditions in North Carolina have been above average.

So reported the Federal-State Crop Reporting Service yesterday for the period through June 14. Showers since then have relieved the situation.

The reporting service said tobacco, corn, cotton, peanuts, soybeans, Irish potatoes, apples and peaches were in fair to good condition. There were few reports of poor and none of excellent crop conditions.

Hospital Boasts A Pulsating Bed

DALLAS — (AP) — Parkland Hospital has a pulsating mattress designed to relieve possible bed sores of bulbar polio patients or those having other types of paralysis. It is one of the first to be used in the Southwest.

Pulsation of the mattress eases body pressure areas and forces blood circulation. The mattress is also said to be useful on rocking beds which, by use of a rocking motion, allow the patients to breathe easier.

Elopement Will Not Deter Federal Officials Probe

MEMPHIS, Tenn., (UP) —Federal authorities refused to drop charges against a retired contractor today despite his elopement with the French girl he is accused of bringing here for immoral purposes.

William Stancell, 52, and pretty Denise Guerard, 19, claimed their marriage yesterday in Clarksdale, Miss., proved their only "crime" was being in love. They motored to New Orleans for their honeymoon.

That, indicated Thomas Fransworth, assistant U. S. district attorney, is a question for federal court to settle when Stancell goes on trial July 9 on four counts of Mann Act violations. She is booked as material witness.

"Our present plans are to go right ahead with the prosecution," he said. "The fact that she is now his wife will not necessarily make her testimony inadmissable."

The petite brunette from La Garenne-Colombes, France, walked out of jail yesterday after Federal Judge Marion Boyd reduced her bond from $10,000 to $4,000, and the couple left town together at once.

A few hours later they were married in the study of the First Baptist Church in Clarksdale by the Rev. W. L. Pearson. Stancell said he had put up most of Denise' bond.

"If love is a crime, I'm guilty because I love him," Denise wired her sister Michelle, 17, who came here from France shortly after the couple was arrested in a motel outsid eMemphis last March 17.

Michelle complained bitterly against Denise's high bond and told the judge the sheriff and the FBI were "taking advantage" of her sister "be she was a little girl and frightened."

Denise, a pianist, told authorities her parents consented for her to come to this country with Stancell after he promised her marriage and a radio and television career. StanceH was divorced two weeks ago.

Pinetops Win 6-0 Game From Greenville Yesterday

Winners Score Pair Of Runs In First, Third And Fifth Frames To Win Bright Belt League Contest

PINETOPS—Greenville failed to score here yesterday afternoon as Pinetops took a 6-0 win in the semi-pro Bright Belt League.

Playing before a small gathering, Pinetops pushed across two runs in the first, another pair in the third, and finished up with two more in the fifth. Though the winners acquired only five hits off two Greenie pitchers, four Greenville errors made their trail much easier.

Pinetops started its scoring when Dud Whitley led off the first with a singleton and moved to second as Virgil Payne dropped a double play ball at second base, with Alvin Hooks reaching first. Jack Griffin walked, but Peck Stokes grounded out with Whitley coming home with the first tally. J. D. Thorne beat out an infield hit to send the second run home.

A single by Griffin and a walk to Stokes, coming before a two-bagger by Thorne, brought home the second pair of runs. Pinetops finished the scoring by pushing two men home in the fifth on only one single.

Hooks reached first on an error by the third baseman. Griffin singled and Hooks came home when the leftfielder allowed the ball to bounce away from him. Another error by the third baseman allowed Griffin to come home when the relay home was over the catcher's head.

Gajda Leading PGA Qualifiers

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UP) — Unknown Bob Gajda of Detroit went out today with a six under par 66 in his pocket and hope in his heart that another fine round would bring him the $250 medalist prize in the windup of qualifying play for the PGA golf championship.

Gajda finished a stroke ahead of three tough opponents — former National Open champion Cary Middlecoff, veteran Dutch Harrison and 1950 PGA runnerup Henry Williams — in yesterday's opening round qualifying play as par at Big Spring Golf Club took a record beating.

The Detroit darkhorse led 35 professionals who blasted par on the short, baked-out course as 22 others matched the card of perfection.

And with 137 contestants shooting for 64 match play berths come sundown today, it looked as if only those who could equal or better par of 144 for the two rounds would make the match play division.

Actually only 63 berths were at stake, for defending champion Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W.Va., qualifies automatically. But Slammin' Sam, suffering from a strained side, went out to try the course yesterday and helped himself to a not?too-encouraging par 72.

That wasn't a scintillating performance, the way the field was battering old man par.

For behind Gajda, and the three in second place, there were five with 68's, three with 69's, eight with 70's and 15 with 71's.

Those at 68 were Claude Hamon of Mamaroneck, N. Y., last year's medalist; Argentine champion Roberto DeVincenzo, 1942 runner up Jim Turnesa of Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., Milon Marusic of Herkimer, N. Y., and Marty Furgol of Atlanta.

Lions, Jaycees Take Victories In Little League

Exchange lost its first game of the second half yesterday as the Jaycees scored fast and furious in the early innings of the nightcap of a Little League twin-bill to win by an 10-2 margin. The Lions squeeked past the Moose in a thriller, 1-0, in the tight opener.

Moose Threaten

Playing one of their best games of the season, the Moose threatened to take their first victory of the 1952 campaign as they held the Lions scoreless for six inhings, pushing the contest into an extra frame.

The Moose made their first threat in the second inning when pitcher Charlie Puryear walked leadoff man, Wesley Topping, fanned Sullivan, walked Marvin Blount, fanned Wayne Sugg, and then walked Bob Taft to load the bases. An infield out by Ebern Allen stopped the early rally.

Puryear, who went the distance of the seven inning game for the winners, started the winning rally by working Blount for a base on balls. Mayiong Edmondson continued the rally with a single, moving runners to third and second as he advanced on the throwing. Mack Roebuck broke up the game with another singleton.

Second Game

The Jaycees scored three runs in the first inning, enough to eventually win the game, and pushed across seven more runners in the second frame to put the second game on ice in the early stages.

In the first, Buddy Murray walked, but was erased going into second as John Wesley Hudson was safe on a fielder's choice. Dick Nobles doubled to score the first run, and Klutz Fisher singled. After Randolph Taylor flied out, Walker Lee Allen doubled to bring the other runners home.

Allen was the winning pitcher, allowing but two singles to the Exchangites. Randolph Johnson reached him for a singleton in the first inning and Tommy Braxton collected the second safety in the last inning.

Atlanta Players Leading Southern Tennis Tourney

MEMPHIS (UP) —The Southern tennis championship here may turn into a second "Battle of Atlanta" before Sunday's final round.

Five Atlanta players, headed by top-seeded Frank Willet, were still in the running today as the men's singles field was cut to 16. None of the five was paired with another Atlantan in today's battles.

Willet meets Alex Wellford, Memphis, today, John Ager, Atlanta, plays Glen Gardner, New Orleans, and Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, third member of Atlanta's top ranked trio, clashes with Herb Browne, Columbia, S. C.

Two unseeded Atlanta players, Russell Bobbitt and Larry Shippey, also are still in the running. Bobbitt plays Calhoun Dickson, Tampa, Fla, and Shippey meets Bill Davis, Knoxville.

Yesterday, Willet had an easy time with Dell Sylvia, Richmond, winning 6-1,6-1, while Ager beat Whit Cobb, Durham, N. C., 6-2, 6-1 and Grant licked Gavin Gentry, Knoxville, 6-2, 6-2.

Bobbitt knocked Alfredo Millet of Mexico out of the meet 6-4, 6-1 while Shippey was not scheduled yesterday.

The top ranked doubles team of Ager-Grant eliminated Glen Gardner and Slew Hester, Jackson, Miss., 6-1, 8-6.

In women's singles, defending champion Jean Clark of Birmingham won from Elizabeth Dameron, Chapel Hill, N. C., 6-0, 6-0 and Karol Fageros of Miami whipped Louise Fowler, Covington, Ga., 6-2, 6-2.

Betsy Rawls And Peggy Kirk Meet In Western Open

CHICAGO (AP)—An all-Georgia scrap and a battle of teen-agers spiced today's quarter finals of the Women's Western Open in which defending champion Patty Berg and Medalist Betsy Rawls still overshadowed their brackets.

The Georgia dispute pitted pro Louise Suggs, three-time meet winner from Atlanta, and Mary Lena Faulk, a dogged amateur from Thomasville, near the Florida border.

Two other amateurs still in contention, 17-year-old Barbara McIntire, Toledo, O., high school junior, and 19-year-old Barbara Romack, slick Sacramento, Calif., shooter, met in a lower bracket contest of youthful charm.

The real business of the quarter final round, however, was expected to be transacted in the upper bracket showdown between Miss Rawls and pro Peggy Kirk and the lower bracket tiff between Miss Berg and the fifth pro still in the running, Betty Jameson.

Musial Increases Lead In All-Star

CHICAGO (AP)—Stan Musial, St. Louis Cardinals' slugging outfielder, today increased his lead as the most popular vote getter in the All-Star Baseball Poll.

Musial's total votes rose to 194,787. This gave him an edge of 4,465 over Dom DiMaggio, Boston Red Sox centerfielder, and 8,633 more than the erstwhile popularity leader, leftfielder Hank Sauer of the Chicago Cubs.

The nation-wide poll of fans to determine the starting lineups for the All-Star game in Philadelphia July 8 will end at midnight June 27. The total vote now is 623,459.

Musial was the biggest vote getter in 1951.

Giants Play Here Saturday Night

A grandslam home run in the top of the seventh inning enabled the Kinston Greys to take a 12-7 victory over the Greenville Giants last night in a game played out at Guy Smith Stadium.

Hobgood received credit for the victory, going the route of the nine-inning game. Morris was the loser. Greenville threatened in the ninth, but the rally was cut short as the runner was cut down at home.

Greenville plays Sharpsburg in Greenville next Saturday night. Game time is 7:45, in Guy Smith Stadium.

Bratton Loses Split Decision

By ED SAINSBURY
United Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (UP) — Welterweight Johnny Bratton feared today that seven pounds cost him a victory over a man he had on the verge of knockout three times.

Bratton, a former NBA champion, weighed 149 pounds for his 10 round Chicago Stadium battle last night with Rocky Castellani, at 156.

Castellani won a split decision with 54 to 46 and 52 to 48 scores by referee Norm McGarity and Judge E. Allen Frankel. Judge William O'Connell held it 51 to 49 for Bratton.

"I had him out in the third, and the fourth and the seventh," Bratton said. "I know I had him out, but he had it in his mind that he was bigger than me and that's a hard man to beat.

"He's not a hitter," Bratton added. "If we were the same weight, it would only have gone two or three rounds. I'd love to fight him again but I feel that I should stick to welters. It's hard to beat a big middleweight."

Castellani, from Luzerne, Pa., posted his second win over the Chicago Negro and he thought that Bratton was a tougher foe in the second encounter.

"He was a much sharper puncher," he said. "I'd like to fight Rocky Graziano or Johnny Saxton now, but I'll fight anyone my manager says for me to fight."

Neither Bratton nor Castellani will be scrapping for at least a month, even though the International Boxing Club had planned to throw the winner in with Saxton in the Stadium July 2.

Castellani required two stitches to close a cut at the edge of his left eye and can't fight that soon, while Bratton hurt his right hand again, a usual occurrence when the small-boned Negro battles a tough opponent.

Whooping Cranes Head North Again

NEW YORK — (AP) — The whooping cranes, America's most publicized birds, have left the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge in Texas to make the long fight to their unknown breeding grounds in the far north. This has been reported by the National Audubon Society.

Last Fall 26 whooping cranes arrived at the Aransas Refuge, but two of them subsequently died of gunshot wounds received en route. This indicates that the giant birds run their major risks while traveling from the breeding to the wintering grounds.

An encouraging note on the whooping crane front is that five young birds were added to the ranks during the summer of 1951. The continental population of whoopers, which includes the two birds at the Audubon Park Zoo in New Orleans, now is 25.

Efforts to prevent the extinction of the whooping crane are jointly sponsored by the Fish and Wildlife Service and the National Audubon Society.

NEW ORK (UP)—Stan (The Man) Musial and Jackie Robinson, who rose to full eminence as superstars when Joe DiMaggio and Ted Williams faded from the picture, gave the National League new prestige today — and new hope for another victory in the annual All-Star classic.

They are the new magic names in the game and stand out among all active players as best bets to land eventually in the Hall of Fame.

One game doesn't make a season, nor does it make or break a player, but the deeds of both Musial and Robinson were brought strongly into focus yesterday as they led their clubs to standout victories.

Musial, now established as the game's greatest all-around hitter, passed another milestone when he attained his 1,900th hit as the St. Louis Cards drubbed the Philadelphia Phillies, 7 to 1.

Before the season ends, he is likely to top the 2,000 figure. And, as he made it 1,900 with a resounding two-run homer, he surpassed all but three fading stars — phil Cavarretta, Bob Elliott, and Johnny Mize — at that level.

Musial, who should catch them all before the year ends, also added a single later to make it 1,901. He paced the 15-hit Cardinal attack as little Joe Presko pitched a five-hitter, three of the blows being tagged by catcher Smokey Burgess.

Robinson, not so devastating a hitter, but perhaps a greater all-around performer with his brilliance afield and on the bases, "stole" a 6 to 5 decision for Brooklyn in 10 innings.

He pilfered three bases, the last in the 10th when he walked, took second, went to third as Dutch Leonard struck out Roy Campanella, who gained first as the ball eluded catcher Toby Atwell.

Robby scored on Gil Hodges' fly. Duke Snider and Bobby Morgan homered for Brooklyn while Hank Sauer hit his 19th homer and Hal Jeffcoat and Bob Addis also homered for Chicago.

The New York Giants stayed four games behind Brooklyn by defeating Pittsburgh, 5 to 2, while the Cincinnati Reds topped the Boston Braves, 7 to 6 and 3 to 1.

In the American League the New York Yankees outslugged the Detroit Tigers, 10 to 6, while the St. Louis Browns set back the Boston Red Sox again, 4 to 3, and the Washington Senators repeated over the Cleveland Indians, 3 to 2.

Bobby Thomson, off on a terrific hitting spree, drilled two homers and a single, batting in three run to give him a total of 54, as he set up Jim Hearn's seventh victory for the Giants.

Ex-Brave Willard Marshall, who has hit over .400 since going to the Reds, doubled in the winning run in the opener at Boston as Ted Kluszewski and Andy Seminick hit Cincy homers and rookie George Crowe got one for Boston.

Yogi Berra, Gene Woodling and Billy Martin hit Yankee homers and Johnny Sain gained his seventh victory with relief help from Bob Hogue although Vic Wertz and Walt Dropo hit Detroit homers.

The Browns made it five victories out of eight for new manager Marty Marion when Marion himself delivered a single in the ninth to give Duane Pillette his sixth victory. Rookie Bill Henry was the loser.

Detroit Swimmer Wins State Honor

EAST LANSING, Mich. —(AP)— Clarke C. Scholes of Detroit was named the outstanding varsity swimmer at Michigan State for the second straight year. He will receive the Hubert E. Gluski-Porpoise Fraternity Memorial award.

This award is named in memory of Hubert Gluski, member of the '42-'43 Spartan swimming team who was killed on submarine duty in the Pacific during World War II.

Scholes is a great clutch swimmer. In three years of competitive swimming he has won 7 out of 8 major indoor championships in the 100 yards freestyle.

Game Called

FARMVILLE—Light trouble caused the Farmville-Stantonsburg baseball game to be called during the eighth inning last night. The game will be resumed at the point of termination when the two clubs play again.

At the time the game was called, Stantonsburg was leading 2-0 after reaching Farmville's Rodney Heath for four hits. Newsome for Stantonsburg had given up only three hits.

Farmville plays here again tonight.

Japanese Naval Expert Wants Stronger American Alliance

TOKYO —(UP) — A key admiral in Japan's World War II naval strategy believes Gen. Douglas MacArthur should "admit" that the no-war constitution his occupation headquarters introduced in Japan was a "mistake."

The deposed occupation ruler should then "come to Japan just once and call on the emperor," former Rear-Admiral Sadatoshi Tomioka said in an interview.

Those moves, the one - time navy tactician said, should be coupled with a statement from Washington that the United States wants Japan as an "equal partner" in the free world's defense system against Communism in the Far East. It should lead to a blueprint of how Japan is to be integrated into U. S. military plans, he added.

He sees those steps as the measures which would persuade Japan and the Japanese people to give up their "false trust" in peace at any price and join the fight for liberty on the side of the democracies.

Tomioka 55, last World War II planning director on the naval general staff, said there was no doubt in his mind that the United States needed and wanted Japan and Japan must have the United States.

He warned that indecision regarding Japan could be as "dangerous" to the free world as was indecision about Korea in June, 1950.

Tomioka said he spoke as a "civilian" but he admitted his opinions were "not necessarily representative" of the feeling of the masses in Japan.

Tomioka was regarded as one of the most promising young staff officers in the old imperial navy. A former baron, he spent most of his naval career as a staff expert. He sat in on the conferences which planned Pearl Harbor and was present at the end of Japan's military adventure as naval representative on the Japanese delegation that signed the surrender on the U. S. S. Missouri.

Tomioka brushed asside arguments that the democracies can do without Japan as long as they have bases in Okinawa. Pulling out a map of Asia on which distances had been drawn with a compass, he poked a finger at the Lake Baikal area in central Siberia.'

"That is where Russia is concentrating its factories in the Far East," he said. Japan is 300 miles closer to Lake Baikal than Okinawa. A difference of 600 miles in the flight of a fuel-hungry jet bomber can spell the margin between life and death for its crew."

The ex-admiral was contemptuous of American and Japanese publicity methods in Japan which, he charged, have failed to sell the Japanese people on the need for a strong Japanese defense force.

"There has been too much emphasis upon peace," he said, "and not enough on freedom. To fight for peace is a contradiction. To fight for freedom makes sense."

Tomioka said the switch in sales talk was needed to overcome Japanese opposition based ostensibly on the argument that re-armament would run counter to occupation policy and the "spirit" of the new "democratic" constitution Japan adopted in 1947 on the urging of occupation advisers. The Socialist Party has a case now pending before the supreme court charging the 75,000-man national police reserve is "war potential" and violation of the constitution's article nine "no-war" clause.

Tomioka described article nine as a "mental block" to re-armament which should be amended and he urged that United States leaders, "preferably Gen. MacArthur, admit it was a mistake."

The admiral reserved his chief ire, however, for the United States-Japan security pact which, he charged, was "unfair to Japan" and the product of U. S. vacillation about Japan's role in its military plans for the Far East.

Because of that indecision, he claimed, Japan is not being treated as an "equal partner" in the defense pact. He asked that defense "be made a joint affair, not a question of charity where we are forced to beg."

As it is, he said, Japan is dependent upon the United States but it does not know to what extent. "Does the security pact intend that the seventh fleet will act for Japan as it has for Formosa?" he asked.

Tomioka predicted that the danger of a new world war will be greatest in 1955 or 1956, Russia will have a large stockpile of atom bombs and United States military output will have reached peak production.

SPY STABBED—Countess Krystyna Skarbek (above), 37-year-old Polish noblewoman with a brilliant record as a British wartime spy, was found stabbed to death in a Kensington, London hotel. Advises Parents Learn To Swim

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — (UP) — Many fathers and mothers take foolish chances in the water to keep their children from knowing they can't swim, says Earle Whittington, Y.M.C.A. general secretary here.

"Most adults won't admit they can't swim," he observed.

"They feel it beneath their dignity to start as beginners when they have achieved success in the business and professional worlds."

He urged parents and children make a "family project" out of learning to swim, and "save parents from embarrassment."

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW! By FAGALY and SHORTEN

ON THE HOUSE

By DAVID G. BAREUTHER, AP Real Estate Editor

This is a good time of the year to keep cool about air cooling. When the summer sun heats the house up to a point where you don't even want to go to bed at night, you're likely to say: "Let's forget about a new car and buy an air-conditioner."

In one way that's not a rash statement. Some air - conditioning plants, adequate to keep a whole house comfortable the year 'round, can cost just about the same as a new car. But in another way, it's not quite as simple as that.

Cooling a house calls for a completely different technique than heating a house. The way your house is built and the way you live are vital factors in air cooling. Vast window walls or lack of efficient insulation and a habit of entertaining a lot, with your house more or less full of people, can make cooling an expensive proposition.

In fact, the initial cost of almost any cooling system is not the big item. You can get excellent air coolers to fit into a window or stand in a room like a piece of furniture for about the price of a good radio or television set. These are adequate for one room. Or you can get a larger unit to hook up with an existing circulating warm air duct system for around $1,000 to $1,200.

But the upkeep is something to think about. If you grouse about your fuel bills in winter, or feel that they pinch the family budget, you might prefer to sweat out the warm weather with a fan and long cool drink.

It used to be that it cost a lot more to cool a house in summer than it cost to heat it in the winter. This has now been changed some by modern developmens. W. Paul Jones, president of Servel, Inc., of Evansville, Ind., manufacturers of both gas and oil-fired air-conditioning plants for homes, has case studies showing that an average-sized six-room house that cost $50 to $56 per month to heat (with gas) in the worst winter months, was cooled for around $23 a month for July and August. This type of plant was designed for $20,000 to $25,000 houses.

Another manufacturer of one of the most popular types of heating plants, developing a new cooling unit, considered operation costs and decided not to strive for the low cost house market. He decided that while it would be economically practicable for such home owners to pay for installation, they generally would prefer to spend the operating costs for other luxuries.

However, the demand for summer comfort proved so strong in the South that R. G. Hughes, prolific builder of Pampa, Tex., devised a year-round air-conditioning plant for $10,500 houses.

Industry kept working on the problem until S. J Lev.ine, manager of the General Electric home heating and cooling department at Bloomfield, N. J., announced: "Home cooling today is practical and within the means of the average home owner."

Dallas developers promptly introduced $12,500 houses on 60 by 125 foot lots fully equipped with year-round General Electric air-conditioners. This project involves 210 houses. Another Texas development of 115 air-cooled houses followed. Operating costs in Texas were estimated at $93 a year for a normal cooling season and about $40 for a normal heating season.

At Haworth, N. J., the cooling system was combined with the air-wall system of high velocity ducts diffusing in a fan-like pattern over the outer walls of rooms in 65 ranch-style homes.

This cooling unit can be piped into the air ducts of any existing warm air system. It also can be used with radiator heat by installing cooling ducts. You can get a cooling unit installed for about $1,000, or a combination heating and cooling system for around $1,500. They operate on 220-volt power —about the same as a modern electric range.

A combination heating and cooling setup has an automatic changeover switch. In spring and fall when there may be need for heat in the morning and cooling in the afternoon, especially when the sun shines through large windows, the temperature is automatically kept constant.

Humidity also is controlled. In muggy weather, excess moisture is removed from the air—in winter, dry air is automatically tempered.

The efficiency of any type of cooling plant depends greatly on its installation. For example, heating outlets can be placed low on a wall, or in the baseboard, to allow heat to rise through a room. For cooling, high side-wall outlets are preferred, permitting the cool air to drop naturally.

And condensation must be guarded against. Warm air ducts are seldom insulated. If uninsulated cooling ducts run through an uncooled space, moisture can condense on their outside surfaces.

It's not as simple as going to the movies to cool off, but it's great if you can afford it.

Expect Record Year For Watermelons

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS

WASHINGTON (UP) —The water melon season is with us, and if the Department of Agriculture isn't mistaken we'll eat more this year than ever before.

In 1951, 83,297,000 melons, valued at $30,297,000 were consumed. This record is expected to be bettered this year.

The department has an interesting little booklet out called—quite properly—"Watermelons."

There are 29 more or less common varieties of the giant of the cucumber family, making it a pretty big business.

The growers have tacked some rather unusual names to the various kinds. For example there is the "Georgia Rattlesnake," which has a sweet taste and is fine-grained. There is the "Irish Gray" which grows up to 40 pounds. Among others, there is a variety known to the trade as the "Yellow Ice Cream." It's yellow on the inside and has a sugary flavor.

Watermelons are fine to eat but not so easy to grow. A lot of things can go wrong from watermelon hill to the table, making it a highly speculative crop.

The department lists all sorts of enemies of the melon. There are the cucumber beetles, which destroy the seedling.

Cut worms and wireworms have been known to cause considerable damage. There is a small louse-like insect known as the watermelon aphid. It obtains its livelihood by sucking plant juices.

The sale of the grown melons often is affected by the weather. On hot, sultry days the demand often exceeds the supply. But on rainy days, or in cool, unseasonable weather the demand falls off and the supply piles up in the back end of the grocery.

The growers or wholesalers are not completely off the hook financially, even after the melons are picked and ready for shipment.

"A carload or truck load of melons may leave the farm in apparently perfect condition," the department says. "But if the cut stems are not treated with copper sulfate paste after picking, the melons may be so spoiled by stem-end rot as to be unsaleable when they reach the market."

Speaking of enemies of the melon grower, the department in an off-hand way comes to the defense of small boys, who are bitten by a streak of larceny when the first melon ripens. The department does not condone such thefts, but admits that little boys are the least of the growers' worries.

Bible Words to Live by

MATTHEW 16:26 — "What doth it profit a man if he gain the whole world and suffer the loss of his own soul? Or what exchange shall a man give for his soul?"

* * * * *

This line of Scripture, spoken by Jesus Himself, is to my mind the most memorable verse in the Bible. It has profoundly influenced the lives of millions and altered the whole course of human history. It has been the revolutionary call which brought men and women out of mediocrity into sanctity. It states with brevity and compelling clarity the ultimate alternatives, God or Mammon, between which every man and all humanity must sooner or later make a choice. It puts time and eternity in their proper perspective. It poses the question which, of all questions, is the problem of our generation: Christ or chaos, spiritual salvation or total ruin.

Explorer Ponce De Leon Is Buried At Town Site He Shunned In Lifetime

By MATTHEW T. KENNY
United Press Staff Correspondent

SAN JUAN, P. R. — (UP) — The remains of Juan Ponce de Leon, famed Spanish explorer who died in Havana, Cuba. 431 years ago this month, rest here in the Cathedral of St. John the Baptist.

Although he perhaps is best remembered to the world for the discovery of Florida and his efforts to find a "fountain of youth" there, Ponce de Leon's name is intimately linked with this inland.

He was with Columbus when the admiral of Spain discovered Puerto Rico on Nov. 19, 1493. After some ten years in nearby Santo Domingo, Ponce de Leon was sent to conquer Puerto Rico and look for gold.

In 1508 he established the first Christian settlement here—named Caparra — at a point across the harbor from what is now San Juan. In 1509 he became the island's first governor.

Buried in San Juan

Some history students find considerable irony in the fact that Ponce de Leon's final resting place is in San Juan —where he refused to live—rather than in Caparra.

During his residence in Puerto Rico Ponce de Leon was involved in several stormy issues, including his right to be governor. The most persistent conflict — and one which Ponce de Leon was ultimately outvoted— concerned the location of the capital.

His selection of the Caparra site apparently was unpopular from the beginning. Ponce de Leon was adamant and built a strong and imposing stone house for his family as evidence that he intended to stay in Caparra.

Despite their leader's example, other settlers constructed less permanent dwellings of wood and mud, presumably in the belief they eventually would be moving.

Referendum Wins

As the controversy continued over the years, Ponce de Leon found it necessary to obtain a royal order forbidding transfer of the settlement. In 1519 Spanish authorities approved the move to San Juan after a referendum—possibly the first in the New World —was held among the settlers.

According to recent discoveries by historians of the U. S. National Park Service, Ponce de Leon cast the only vote in favor of Caparra. Despite his overwhelming defeat on the issue, he never lived in San Juan.

In 1513, while searching for a legendary land called "Bimini," he had discovered Florida but the marvelous fountain with the youth-giving waters could not be found.

Nevertheless, Ponce de Leon was named governor of Florida by King Ferdinand, who also conferred other titles and honors on him during Ponce's visit to Spain in 1514.

Back To Florida

Back in Puerto Rico in 1515, he found himself in the middle of various controveries including growing opposition to the Caparra site.

The final ruling in favor of a move to San Juan possibly played an important part in Ponce de Leon's decision to undertake a new expedition to Florida in 1521. He was badly wounded in a battle with Florida Indians and was taken to Havana, where he died in June of that year.

He was buried in Havana but in 1559 his grandson brought his remains to San Juan. They were transferred to the cathedral in 1909.

The ruins of Ponce de Leon's house can still be seen in Caparra.

Authorities have considered transferring his remains to the Caparra he loved so well —the conquistador's five-century-old bones might rest more peacefully there. But so far nothing has been done about it.

Use of distilled water in a steam iron will prevent minierals from forming a deposite that eventually may clog the steam holes.

Accident Results In Hospital Rites

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y. — (AP) — After two previous wedding postponements, Cpl. Floyd Wood was headed home recently with two servicemen buddies to get married when their car overturned and landed the prospective bridegroom in the hospital.

The couple decided to get married anyway and the ceremony was held in the Saratoga Hospital with a Methodist pastor officiating and with the bridegroom in bed. The best man had a patch over one eye, the result of abrasions suffered in the accident. The third-soldier, who was more seriously injured, was in bed in the same hospital room as Cpl. Wood.

'Problem Child' Has Unique Difficulties

By DAVID TAYLOR MARKE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

It's easy enough, in puzzlement or exasperation, to label a youngster "problem child." It's more difficult, but far more rewarding, to look behind his outward behavior for clues to inner disturbance.

Peter Blos, disstinguished psychologist, member of the Advisory board of the Child Study Association, and member of the Department of Student Personnel at Brooklyn College in New York City, writing in the National Parent-Teacher Magazine, helps us to read those clues.

Before deciding Junior is a problem child, he cautions, we would do well to determine first whether he is not a child who has a problem.

We should find out whether the demands being made on Junior are within his capacity at this stage of his mental, physical and emotional growth, says Blos.

Another child may be troubled not because of goals that are out of reach but because the means taken to attain certain reasonable and practical goals are quite unsuitable.

For example, parents have a right to look after Junior's health by seeing that he gets enough sleep every night. Yet he can become a problem when his parents completely disregard neighborhood standards and insist on his going to bed unusually early. A young boy wants to be and act like his friends. He has a strong and impelling urge to be like everybody else his age. He resists being babied. This combination of forces, if thwarted, can stir up all sorts of difficulties at home, in school, and in the community.

Emotional growth in children has its ups and downs. We are often disappointed to see how a child progresses for a time, then seems to stand still for a time, and actually slips back now and then as well. Problems connected with this hill-and-valley growth pattern, says Blox, we call developmental problems. They are to be expected to a degree in all children.

In addition to these developmental problems, he says, we should make allowances for the effects of accidental events on the growing child's personality. Birth death, sickness, change in environment, crises in the parents' lives, and innumerable other events somehow have to be assimilated by the child, made a part of his growth —and this effort may temporarily obstruct or retard his normal progress. As he copes with these experiences, he gains in maturity.

The patterns in the lives of real problem children stand out:

First— A serious and persistent lack in the scheme of his experiences —lack of friends; inability to play; disturbance in sleep, appetite, or elimination; persistent fears; inability to concentrate or learn in accordance with his mental capacity.

Second — A real problem child reacts consistently in inappropriate ways to normal situations. He may show no anger or sorrow when ordinarily such emotions would be appropriate and understandable. He may look forward to some happy event and then show deep disappointment over it.

It is perhaps unfortunate, he concludes, that parents are more concerned with a child's mental progress than with his social and emotional growth. In either case, a child is suffering from some kind of deficiency, and this will ultimately disrupt the unity of his personality.

Firemen Honor Boy For Bravery

OMAHA, Neb. —(UP) — Ronnie Augustyn, 3½ -year-old Sargent, Neb., lad was in pain in Children's Memorial Hospital here. In spite of the severe burns received when he vainly tried to save his puppies from a burning corn crib, Ronnie was wearing a big smile.

Representatives of the Omaha police department paid him a call and gave him an Omaha junior fireman's badge.

Said Fire Commissioner William D. Noyes: "You are such a brave boy that we want you in our fire department. Here's a badge just like all firemen wear."

The firemen wanted to replace the lost puppies but neighbors had already taken care of that.

Horses were found in America until comparatively recent geologic times, but died out and did not appear again until introduced from Europe by man.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. —(UP) — When Jeanette Colbrunn decided to go in for autograph collecting she did it the easy way. That was a year ago and she already has several hundred of the world's top signatures. She just writes famous people and asks for the autographs. Very few refuse.

In British administered islands of Oceania, head hunting was, until recently, a vital part of the ceremonial life of the people and its suppression led to social decay and a sharp reduction in population.

Two Cropdusters Die In Accidents

ROCKY MOUNT, N. C. —(AP) — Separate plane crashes in this area yesterday took the lives of two veteran airmen during crop-dusting operations.

Millard F. Whitley, 35, of Wilson, Rt. 2, was killed when his plane struck a high tension wire in Wilson County. He was burned to death.

R. E. Lee, 60, of Rocky Mount, a pilot for many years, was killed when his plane also struck a power line in a field near here.

Three Martin County youths recently enlisted in the Navy through the Navy Recruiting Office here.

The recruits were sent to San Diego, Calif., for basic training.

Quads Arrive

WEYMOUTH, Mass.— (AP) — Mrs. Marion L. Manning, 27, is the mother of healthy quadruplets today. Three boys and a girl were born to her at South Shore Hospital last night. She has three other youngsters.

The babies, all placed in incubators, were reported to weigh between two and three pounds each and to measure about a foot long. Several hours after the last birth, hospital physicians reported their condition as fair.

Mrs. Manning was doing well and will be allowed to sit up today if she feels strong enough.

Move To Bolster Birthplace Claim Of Andy Jackson

LANCASTER, S. C. —(AP). — South Carolinians have made another move in the long-standing argument between the Palmetto State and its neighbor, North Carolina, over the birthplace of Andrew Jackson.

In a ceremony at a point near here, which South Carolina says is the birthplace of the nation's seventh president, a deed for a 350-acre Andrew Jackson State Park was presented to the State Parks Commission yesterday.

State Sen. Bruce Williams made the presentation for Lancaster County, which purchased the land two months ago, to Dr. R. F. Poole, president of Clemson College and chairman of the State Forestry Commission. The park, to be built by the state, will have 350 acres of wooded picnic grounds and a 50-acre lake for swimming and fishing.

A small crowd, which attended the ceremony in spite of sudden thundershowers, heard a eulogy in praise of Jackson by Rep. J. B. Richards, of the Fifth District.

Characterizing "Old Hickory" as a man "who could take dynamic action in this troubled world of ours today", the legislator priased Jackson's loyalty and said that his "love of country was sublime."

The long-standing dispute between the Tar Heel and Palmetto state over the site of Jackson's birthplace, which is somewhere near the state line, was recognized by Richards in his speech.

He said that it has been "proved conclusively" in the Library of Congress that Jackson was a native of South Carolina despite a "friendly argument with our great sister state of North Carolina."

Acreage Reports Required Soon

All Pitt County tobacco growers who applied for Federal Crop Insurance this year should get their acreage reports into the PMA office as soon as possible, PMA Secretary James Meredith warned this morning.

Meredith stated today the acreage report was supposed to have been made when the crop was set out, but many farmers have failed to make any report at all. He explained that only farmers with crop insurance have to make acreage reports.

"If growers don't get acreage reports into the office so they can be computed and paid before July 31, they will forfeit their five percent discount," the secretary said. "This discount is arranged for those who pay their premium before that date."

Quakers Review Global Struggle

GREENSBORO — (AP) — The annual Quaker - sponsored Carolina Institute of International Relations continued here today, with several prominent speakers continuing the theme discussion "The World Struggle For the Minds of Men."

Last night, William B. Edgerton, a teacher of Russian at Pennsylvania State College, told the group that "the democracies must wage peace with Russia." Edgerton said that democracy thrives in peace and withers in war.

He pointed out that there is a "double revolution" in the world today. "One is a movement of freedom from domination and the other is the revolt against the old social order," Edgerton said.

His main point was that this "waging of peace" especially in Asia, which is being offered a choice of democracy or communism, "must be extended to the economic life and social welfare of all mankind, if really we are to be our brother's keeper."

Earlier Kermit Eby, University of Chicago author and lecturer, said that the Pentagon is having a greater and greater impact on American fiscal and foreign policy. He contended that the military is taking over too much power in areas where it should not dominate.

Compromise Bill To Give Marines A Bigger Voice

WASHINGTON — (AP) — A group named to iron o t differences in Senate and House bills has agreed to strengthen the Marine Corps and give it a bigger voice in military policy.

But the joint Senate-House committee discarded House-approved provisions to make the Marine commandant a permanent member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and to set a minimum strength of 220,000 enlisted men for the Marines. The compromise bill was worked out yesterday. It now goes back to both House and Senate for final action.

House Armed Services Committee officials said these were the main points of the agreement:

1. The Marine commandant would sit with the joint chiefs as a "co-equal" on matters affecting the Marines, with the same voice and same right of appeal as other members. He now is an adviser. The Senate bill proposed to give him a consultant status.

2. The maximum strength of the Marines would be 400,000 men, plus officers, and the proposed minimum would be eliminated because no other service has one. The ceiling has been approved by both houses.

3. For the first time, the law would specify the organization of the Marines into three combat divisions and three air wings. These would not necessarily be maintained at full strength continuously. House conferees originally proposed four divisions and four air wings.

Sen. Long (D-La), acting chairman of the Senate group, said the compromise plan would "insure that the Marine Corps will not be whittled down into 'mail' units, the size of a battalion or smaller."

Strange Passage

Chapter 9

In the thick air of the evening there came an eager set of echoes from the direction of Five Ways. The metallic sounds were clumsy and erratic and full of impatience and the old houses in Grover Street threw back the sounds dully. At the crest of the hill the walker sat down on the nearest patch of grass and rested from her labors.

From her bag she clumsily produced a cigarette. It burned away rapidly with the fierce, impatient inhalations and within a space of three minutes it was discarded. Immensely relieved, the woman came to her feet and brushed the fibres of dead grass from her skirt. Then she squared her shoulders and set an uncertain course for Number Thirteen. She half lurched against the solid, wooden door and clawed for the heavy knocker.

Paul Gardiner, pale and dishevelled, opened the door and led the woman into the room. She swayed to the lounge chair and with a sigh of contentment sprawled into it and stretched out her legs.

Gardiner stood above her and a cynical smile creased the corners of his lips.

The woman slanted her head and gave him a sidelong glance.

"Where's the girl friend, Paul?"

"Out."

"Funny. And you just married."

"You know me, Kate. I do strange things."

"You sent her out."

"Yes."

"Because you were expecting me?"

"Right again. They told me you were at the Arms all day. I reckoned you'd be coming this way sooner or later."

"You didn't want her to see me—like this."

"You're right on the target to-night, Kate."

"You must love her, Paul."

"Maybe I like her," Paul said, without expression.

"O. K. honey—so you like her. You like her so much you sign her up permanent. You get married You!"

"That's right, Kate. That's how much I like her."

"It's funny, that," Kate said.

"I'll mix you a drink," he said evenly.

Kate's eyes devoured his every deliberate movement. She quickly gulped down the fluid.

"You were saying, Kate—"

"You know, Paul," she drawled, "I've had it—and I jus' don't care!"

"You're not drunk, Kate. A little washed-up. Let me get you another."

Gardiner measured out a double ration of overproof and handed it to the woman.

"What about you, honey? Where is yours?"

"You know I seldom drink at night, Kate."

Kate broke into laughter.

"Here's lookin' at you, sport." She swallowed the drink. Gardiner contemplated her earnestly then he said:

"Why did you come here, Kate?"

The other returned his stare.

"Don't you know?"

"No."

"You're a liar, sport!"

Gardiner looked down upon her with undisguised contempt for several moments.

Kate faced him squarely.

"I make you sick now—is that it?"

"That gets close to it, Kate."

She lurched to her feet and came towards him. Suddenly she clenched both fists and swung them into his face with all the force and venom that she could muster and she sustained the attack until Gardiner drew back his right fist and sent it crashing into her half-open mouth.

The woman reeled and fell sobbing to her knees.

Gardiner looked down curiously at her and then assisted her to her feet.

"You had it coming, Kate."

Kate dabbed the edges of her lips with a handkerchief.

"Especially since you married Melisande, is that it?"

"Exactly."

"It's because she's educated and refined an' nice an' she's got all those things you've always wanted and never had."

"That's about it."

The woman examined the red marks on the handkerchief.

"Does she know what kind of a man you are, Paul?"

"I hope not. I didn't tell her."

"You shouldn't've slapped me in the mouth, Paul."

"I'm sorry. You had it coming."

"An' so have you got it coming. That's one thing you'll pay for, sport."

Gardiner's eyes swam blue in the clear light.

"I hardly think so, Kate. After to-night I'll probably never see you again. We're leaving for the country to-morrow."

"After to-night you probably won't be seein' Melisande neither. I'm stayin' right here till she comes in."

"What for?"

"I told you—I don't like being slapped in the mouth. I think maybe your little china piece might be interested to know that her boy friend once spent two years in a mental home."

"You wouldn't do it!"

"When a woman's in the kind of spot I'm in she'll do just about anything."

Gardiner unlatched the door

"Come along, Kate, I'll take you home."

"It ain't as easy as that. Paul I said I was stayin' here 'til the bride-elect arrives."

"I warned you once not to make trouble, Kate."

"Why?"

"You see, Katie, I'm breaking loose. You wouldn't prevent me from being happy, would you? you won't make any trouble. You'll give me a break. Melisande is a lady."

"And what am I, Paul?"

"You? A little sewer rat. A funny little creature of the streets! You'd drag me down to the sewers with you, if you had the chance."

Gardiner's fingers were painful upon her neck.

"Let me go, Paul. You're mad!"

"Maybe I am. But not mad enough to let you get away with this!"

"I'll scream for help!"

"Then scream!"

The thick nail - less fingers pressed hard against the cords of her neck and clung there until the face of the woman colored to a deep red and it wasn't until the tightness went from her eyes that the fingers relaxed. The figure of Kate wilted and slid to the floor.

Outside, Grover Street was deserted. Bearing the body of Kate, he kept well within the street shadows and moved swiftly towards Wade's Hole. Skirting the playground he reached the Hole from its gloomy, western end and quickly thrust his burden over its edge. He was about to move away when he saw at his feet the broken white rose that the woman had been wearing. With a quick angry movement of his foot he sent the crushed flower down into the melancholy pit.

Builds House To Suit Himself After 40 Years

TAMPA, Fla. — (AP) — After 40 years of working on houses for other people, John Ciesla, 62, a retired concrete worker, is building one to suit himself.

Ciesla just indulges his construction whims. For instance, there's a giant clock set in the house's cement finish that has immovable hands set at 11:38. He's not sure just why he picked that particular time.

The house is trimmed in varied shades of yellow, green, blue and red, sprayed over the cement. Green cement vines with big cement flowers run up the sides of the building. The railing posts of the outside steps are adorned with cement heads with caricature-like faces.

Another cement face overlooking the outside stairs has eyes which are really concealed peepholes. And Ciesla is not finished yet.

FAMILY OF HAMS

GULFPORT, Miss. —(UP)— Helen Mae Martin, nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Martin, has been licensed as an amateur radio operator here by the Federal Communications Commission. Four of her five brothers are "hams."

"Harbinger of Spring" is the name of a plant (erigenia bulbosa).

DOGS WEEP TOO

CORINTH, Miss. —(UP)— The mother dog gently picked up the dead puppy in her mouth and carried it across the highway where she buried it in a wooded spot.

"When she came back, she had real tears in her eyes," said R. F. Ross.

The practice of dyeing nails was common among ancient Egyptians.

The useful life of sheets in galvanized roofing may be determined by the amount of zinc coating rather than by the weight of the base metal.

ACROSS THE BRIDGE TABLE

Women say they save more at Colonial

In budgeting as in bridge, women really lay the cards on the table. They make no bones about comparing their respective food bills, airing out WHY they shop WHERE.
On such discussions, Colonial scores high. But more important—value-conscious women KNOW that their whole week's supply of groceries adds up to a lower total food bill at Colonial!

whenever . . . wherever they get together, women say, "Your total food bill is less when you shop at CS!"

Selected Theatrical Scenes On Program

Carol Teitel and Michael Higgins, gifted young American actors, will open the summer entertainment series at East Carolina College Friday evening of this week June 20, when they appear in their unusual program "Theatre As You Like It." The performance is scheduled for 8:15 in the College Theatre.

Friday's entertainment will be the first in a series of four programs to be offered on the campus this summer, according to an announcement by Mrs. Ellen Fleming, chairman of the Entertainment Committee. All performances will be given free of charge, and the public is cordially invited to be present.

"Theatre As You Like It" is described as "a program of comedy and drama from William Shakespeare to Tennessee Williams"; and favorable press notices indicate that Miss Teitel and Mr. Higgins provide stimulating and enjoyable performances in a wide range of scenes from dramas. Both young artists are well known on Broadway, on radio, and in television.

An unusual part of their program is the one-act play "Mooney's Kid Don't Cry" by Tennessee Williams, whose "Glass Menagerie" and "Streetcar Named Desire" made theatrical history. As portrayed by Michael Higgins and Carol Teitel, this packed little drama conveys "all the poignancy of human experience in twenty minutes not easily to be forgotten."

Higgins' monologues from Shakepeare's "Henry V" and "Richard II" have won praise from discerning critics. He was an outstanding success last season in Olivia de Haviland's "Romeo and Juliet"; and now, with Carol Teitel as Juliet, the pair presents the "star-crossed lovers" during the evening of drama.

"Theatre As You Like It" includes also scenes from Rostand's Cyrano de Bergenac," Thornton Wilder's "Our Town", Ring Lardner and George Kaufman's "June Moon," and other popular plays.

Inmates Discover Find Surprises In Barrack Walls

MONTEITH, Canada — (AP) — Inmates of the Monteith Jail Farm found many surprises as they tore down the barracks constructed here for a German prisoner-of-war camp during World War II.

So far they have found two home-made radios, numerous maps and a box filled with contraband materials ridden in the walls of the buildings. The radios, about 4 inches square, were built from scrap including parts of combs, cigarette papers, nails, wire, flashlight bulbs for tubes and small batteries.

The walls of one of the buildings demolished recently were found plugged with earth, obviously removed from a tunnel. Although the barracks buildings sat on posts and the ground under them was floodlighted, several escape tunnels were discovered by guards.

Taxidermist Got Start As Scout

MEMPHIS, Tenn. —(AP) — Ira Griste, 23, is a taxidermist who got his interst in animals from his days as a Boy Scout.

Now many of the animals that die at the zoo as well as hunter's trophies end up in his shop for stuffing. Some of them go eventually into Fortune's Jungle Garden.

First he skins the animal, pickles and tans the hide and finally mounts them. The skin goes over a paper-mache form.

Machines Make New Factories Near-Automatic

CLEVELAND, O. —(UP) —When the world's factories become automatic (and experts believe the time is rapidly approaching) the origin of the development perhaps will be traced in part to efforts of the Wean Equipment Corp. here.

The firm, which now turns out those huge, intricate, automatic, multiple - operation machines started on its present task in 1940 when it took over the old Broden Construction Co. From then until 1946, Wean continued to turn out steel mill and wire-drawing machinery.

However, in the past six years the company has turned to "monster" machines which do dozens of operations at one time with "extreme accuracy."

Two "Queens"

Two outstanding examples of the company's achievements along this line are the "Queen Mary" and the "Queen Elizabeth."

The "Queen Mary" was made for the Cadillac tank plant in Cleveland to hasten the manufacture of Walker bulldog tanks. This particular machine grinds smooth 10 surfaces of the tank's hull in one slick operation which previously was done in 10 steps and took 20 times as long.

The "Queen Elizabeth," another spectacular time and labor saver, bores 110 holes at once in a tank hull.

The latest addition on Wean's automatic family is a "trans-car machine line" built for Massey-Harris Ltd. to be used in that firm's tank plant in Racine, Wisc.

No Waste Motion

The operator of the "trans-car" rides on a narrow gauge streetcar which carries the hull of the Army's largest tank. As the "trans-car," its driver and the tank hull move down the track, bits and drills intermittently attack the hull to mill 10 different surfaces and drill 110 holes in three continuous operations.

Beside the obvious labor saving, Wean engineers point out that not once during this operation does the hull have to be shifted to another part of the plant, or from its original position.

Wean Equipment, under the direction of 30-year-old R. J. Wean, Jr., has enjoyed a 200 per cent expansion in the past year. Sales have jumped from $1,000,000 annually to $6,000,000 since Wean absorbed Broden.

POLICE BUSY AT CORNER

OMAHA, Neb. — (UP) — A certain corner proved to be a busy intersection for a certain type of driver. Within 30 minutes, police arrested two men on identical charges at the corner. Both were found guilty of drunken driving. They paid fines of $50 and their licenses were suspended for 60 days.

MUNITIONS DUMP EXPLODES—Fire mushrooms into the sky exploding flares to touch off the scene with bright colors as a series of explosions destroyed the largest U. S. Thinks Hobby In Glass Profitable

BOSTON — (UP) — Francis X. Weinman guesses he was "born with glass on my brain"— and the believes it's going to bring him $1,000,000.

The 88-year-old master of the disappearing art of hand glass blowing has made it his work for 24 years and his hobby for 35. He's an exponent of the adage that a man's work sh ould also be his hobby.

Weinman, who estimates he has fashioned 5,000,000 glass objects in some 50 different designs, said:

"One of these days, that glass on my brain is going to pay me off with a million dollars. I'm just going to keep inventing novelty things in glass until I hit the jackpot."

Weinman claims that when "some gal—Irene Castle, I think it was — bobbed her hair" his expected road to $1,000,000 was frustrated. He explained:

"Then all the women in America cut theirs, too, and cut out my glass hatpin business, which was the product that helped me make my best week's salary ever. It was a long time ago in Buffalo and I made $2,500 that week."

Pro-American Textbooks Are Rapped By Reds

HONG KONG — (AP) — The Chinese Communists have found "venomous worship of U. S. ideology" in a couple of their own geography texts.

The official Peoples Daily of Peiping charges one book made the party-line error of saying the United States led in reserves and output of coal, oil and iron and was first in the production of copper, zinc and lead.

The newspaper said the geography should have noted instead that Russia surpassed the United States in copper and lead reserves. The book also erred in failing to mention the "aggressive purposes" of the U. S. in the Pacific.

The newspaper rapped the second book for observing: "The rich mineral resources are the major factors in the U. S.'s success as a capitalist nation at the highest industrial level in the world."

Seek New Proof Of Racial Origin

VANCOUVER, B. C. —(UP) — A party of University of British Columbia scientists will wage a race with water this summer to try to uncover proof that North American Indians originally came from Asia.

Dr. Charles E. Borden, university archeologist, will lead the party into Tweedsmuir Park, in north - central British Columbia. The park will be flooded by water backed up by the Aluminum Company of Canada's Nechako River dam.

The provincial government has granted Borden $8,650 for research. Researchers uncovered several abandoned village sites in the park area last summer.

Borden believes digging in the park will reveal new proof of the lines of travel of ancient tribes. He says it is certain that North America was populated by men traveling across the Bering Strait from Asia, down through Alaska and from there south along several disputed routes. The scientists think that some of the lines of travel crossed Tweedsmuir Park.

NPA Will Close Office Friday In Charlotte

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The National Production Authority announced today it will close its Charlotte district office effective tomorrow.

Regional NPA director C. Roy Mundee of Richmond, Va., said the closing order resulted from a decrease in the need for services, along with a budget curtailment by Congress.

Business at present being handled by the office will be transferred to the Richmond office, which also will handle any future North Carolina NPA business.

The office was established in January, 1951, to provide assistance for North Carolina businessmen in the defense production program.

Blind Bridge Fan Plays In Tourney

AP Newsfeatures

PITTSBURGH—Not long ago J. Mellor Phillips finished in the top half of players competing in a bridge tournament. Phillips started playing bridge 18 months ago and he figured he did fine to outscore 88 opponents because they could see.

Phillips is blind.

That does not bother him one iota when it comes to playing bridge, or doing a good many other things.

The 40-year-old Pittsburgher, using a special deck of brailled cards, not only is giving the Steel City's top bridge players a run for their money —he's helping other blind folk learn to play bridge. They practice regularly at a downtown club.

The class, one of the few of its kind in the country, is composed of men who are adept at reading braille. Eight of the 16 members have college degrees. One, Charles Hogan, lost his sight in the Normandy invasion of World War II.

Phillips and his blind friends use cards which have been marked in braille on the upper left and lower right hand corners. As each man plays a card he tells his opponents of his choice.

Phillips says he does not try to memorize the play of all 52 cards, adding: "I just keep track of the top cards, who plays them and the length of the various suits. Once in a while, I slip up on a nine or 10-spot but who doesn't?"

Bureau Scoffs At Rainmakers

ST. LOUIS, Mo. —(UP) — The U. S. weather bureau here disputes claims by scientists that seeding the clouds has changed the nation's rain pattern.

Harry F. Wahlgran, chief of the bureau here, said there is no such thing as a rain pattern, anyhow.

He said in the 115 years since weather records began to be kept in St. Louis no two years have had similar "patterns." Rainfall ranged from 23.23 inches in 1930 to 68.83 inches in 1858.

Wahlgran said he doesn't think it possible for men to make rain. He said experimenters seeding clouds with silver iodide possibly may increase precipitation "but they don't take on the job unless the moisture is already in the air."

Silent Struggle Between Nations

By PHIL NEWSOM
United Press Foreign News Editor

Aggressive Red China and neutral India are traveling their separate paths. But between the two there is a silent struggle involving the lives of nearly half the world's population and the future course of Asia.

So far as Asia is concerned the two are laboratories which could prove or disprove the advantages of living in a free world or in a totalitarian world.

It is a struggle to win men's minds and it is centered, not in the great cities, but in the villages where politics is of less importance than the next meal.

Having already lost China, the West is forced to pin its hopes on India.

Into the effort the United States is pouring $50,000,000 as part of a five-year plan to develop India's starving millions.

Despite Communist gains in the recent Indian elections, the balance sheet so far seems to favor the West.

India was unhappy about the Chinese invasion of Tibet. It was difficult for the Indians to understand just who and what the Reds were "liberating" and it put them uncomfortably close to India's border.

Indian cultural missions to China have been impressed by the way the Reds get things done, but they have not liked the slave labor and the way ancient Chinese culture is disappearing.

One visitor was Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru's sister, the former Ambassador to Washington. Mme. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit decried the fact that 2,000,000 peasants had been conscripted without pay to build a huge dam.

Nehru himself has said that the results of communism in many satellite states are displeasing to the Indians.

He also has warned that India will use force if necessary to prevent an outside force from taking over neighboring Nepal.

Yet Nehru himself is one of the great problem children for the West.

He inherited the political mantle of Mohandas K. Gandhi, and with it a passionate mistrust of the West. Particularly he fears so - called colonial policies.

He seldom criticizes Russia by name, but is not so cautious with his criticism of the West. Yet upon him much depends.

For in New Delhi there is general agreement that should our hydro-electric and agricultural projects in India fail; should the next few years see China making the greatest gains economically, and should we fail to relieve the plight of India's millions, then another nation will have gone down the drain of communism.

Start Digging From 'Sky Mine'

PITTSBURGH — (UP) The U. S. Steel Corp. has started digging coal from a "mine in the sky."

The mine, 2,160 feet above sea level on a mountain near Munson, W. Va., now is producing 4,000 tons of high-grade metallurgical coal a day and production will reach 10,000 tons daily when work is completed.

The company did a face-lifting job on a towering tree - covered mountain in the surface development work for the mine. More than 1,500,000 cubic yards of earth and rock were moved to make the site accessible by automobile.

The mine actually is a twin operation with coal being dug at two levels of the famed Pocahontas seam. A 70-foot cliff separates the levels and miners ride between them on a ski-hoist.

More than 27 miles of track already have been laid at the mine, including 20 in the underground workings. The coal is shipped to a large blending and washing plant at nearby Alpheus, W. Va. After processing, it is then shipped to U. S. Steel's mills in Indiana, Illinois and Ohio.

Lindy Matchbook Rated In Value

NEW YORK — (AP) — One of the most valued matchbooks among collectors is the one issued 25 years ago this month when Charles Lindbergh was honored at a luncheon in the Hotel Astor following his epic non-stop flight from New York to Paris.

Tom Torrent, who runs a Brooklyn hobby shop, says his faded copy is valued at $100 — but he won't sell.

British Come Up With Sun Cooker

NEW YORK — (AP) — British scientists have come up with a "sun cooker" which may eliminate charcoal from the backyard barbecue, the British Information Service reports here.

The device collects heat by a system of mirrors and lenses and focuses it on the cooking chamber. Scientists believe solar energy for industry may develop from this small start.

Army Ruling Recalls President's Favorite

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Army Department's refusal to disqualify Gen. Douglas MacArthur as Republican keynote speaker recalls that Sen. Robert A. Taft is President Truman's candidate for the GOP presidential nomination.

Mr. Truman has said so, and publicly. If MacArthur's keynoter helps to nominate Taft and to stop Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, as some of Ike's friends fear, the Army would appear to have done its part.

Its ruling was that since MacArthur had no military assignment at the moment, he was free to make political speeches despite the fact that he is technically on active service as a five-star general.

The facts are, however, that Eisenhower's friends and others put the Army on an impossible spot with suggestions that MacArthur was not qualified to make a political speech before a convention or anywhere else.

MacArthur already had been making political speeches all over the nation. To disqualify him for a convention apperance would have required someone to make some mighty fine distinctions between convention politics and other politics.

More embarrassing, however, to the Pentagon brass was the fact that Eisenhower was in exactly the same position as MacArthur when he waded into politics up to his hips as President of Columbia University. Eisenhower then was neither retired nor resigned from the Army, but on active service, when he undertook his speaking campaign against the Truman administration.

If Eisenhower's old friends in the Pentagon slapped down MacArthur in 1952 for doing what Eisenhower did a couple of years earlier, there would have been some explaining to do. And MacArthur was ready to put some tough questions to the Pentagon's Department of Explanation.

Now that it is all settled, politicos are recalling a passage from one of the speeches MacArthur delivered here at home since Mr. Truman yanked him out of Japan.

"I shall raise my voice," said the general, "as loud and as often as I believe it to be in the interest of the American people."

The general is a man of his word.

City Officials Salaries Higher

CHICAGO — (UP) — Salaries of most city officials throughout the nation this year average five to 15 per cent higher than last year, a survey shows.

The study, conducted by the International City Managers' Association, showed that last year most cities granted pay raises for all categories of municipal jobs.

For example, the median salary for city engineers of cities in the 25,000 to 50,000 population group now is $5,500 a year, compared with $5,070 in 1951.

The survey showed that average salaries of 18 other department than a year ago.

The average pay of mayors and city managers also has been increased.

The median salary for mayors in non-council-manager cities of 50,000 to 100,000 population was raised from $6,000 to $7,000 last year.

The average salaries of city managers in population groups below 25,000 and in the 250,000 to 00,000 bracket were increased an average of eight per cent in each group.

The increase in city managers' salaries in the population groups between 25,000 and 250,000 was five per cent or less.

Fake Preacher Shows Profit In 'Saving' A Drunk

COLUMBUS, Miss. —(UP) —A man representing himself as a preacher entered the county jail in the name of religion and knelt for an hour's prayer with a prisoner charged with drunkenness.

Several who watched were so moved by the preacher's zeal that they made donations toward the drunk's fines. The "preacher" left with $5 to make arrangments for his convert's release.

That was the last time he was seen.

"I'm going to give that preacher plenty of what he was trying to save me from," the jailed man declared, "if I ever catch up with him."

Mule Ownership Case Contested

Is possession nine-tenths of the law? The pressing question at the moment is who really does own the proverbial "old gray mule?"

Involving sentimental attachment as well as intrinsic value set at $400, ownership of an old gray Pitt County mule is being contested in a complaint filed last week with the clerk of superior court here.

According to the details of the complaint, Mary Peaden is requesting that claim of delivery proceedings be issued in her favor regarding an "old gray mule" currently in the possession of J. D. Mercer, a tenant on her farm.

She alleges she is absolute owner and entitled to immediate possession of a 10-year-old gray mule which Mercer now has on the farm. She claims she went to the farm in May for the purpose of removing the mule, and that Mercer refused her the privilege of entering the premises and taking the mule.

The complaint further reads that Mercer farmed with the mule in 1951, as she had rented her land to him and agreed to furnish him stock with which to cultivate her lands. He rented again for 1952, but with the understanding he would furnish his own stock, the complaint states, and she left the mule on the farm until such time as she wanted to remove him to some other place.

The plaintiff set the mule's value at $400 in her complaint and asked that Mercer be forced to return the mule and pay costs of the action.

Negroes Provided Win District Of Columbia

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP) — District of Columbia Negroes ran away with the Democratic presidential primary here and gave Southern and border states Democrats something mighty serious to think about.

W. Averell Harriman ran as an administration favorite with special emphasis on civil rights, compulsory fair employment practices, and a bigger slice of pie for government clerks.

By a ratio of four to one, Harriman crushed Sen. Estes Kefauver who also took the administration party line but no firm stand on civil rights.

Government clerk votes boosted Harriman's total. But Negroes were a powerhouse element of his strength. One pastor led nearly 500 of his flock from their New Jersey Avenue church to the polling place. A marcher in the ranks was calling Harriman a "second Abe Lincoln."

In the U Street area which is almost wholly Negro, the primary score was: Harriman 1,158, Kefauver 80. If anything was needed to harden President Truman's determination to ram an all-out compulsory civil rights plank into the Democratic platform, the District of Columbia primary did the trick.

"Whichever candidate I endorse will follow my policies," Mr. Truman confidently is telling callers.

The primary returns were substantial evidence that the Negro bloc of votes outside the South must be reckoned with next November, and that government pay checks are powerful persuaders, too. The returns, also, suggested something else.

Kefauver was the favorite of labor in the primary here. If the labor vote had gone to the polls and voted for Kefauver he might have won, certainly would have made a better showing. The returns suggest that the labor bosses who shouted for Kefauver could not deliver their union members — anyway they didn't.

Southern and border states Democrats will recognize these primary returns as a bare-knuckled challenge to their plans for a compromise civil rights platform plank. The significance of the polling here far exceeds the number of convention votes involved. There were only six and Harriman got the lot.

Film Is Sparking Local Drive For A Rescue Squad

A 20-minute film entitled "Rescue Squad" touched off a drive this morning to have an emergency rescue squad organized in Greenville.

Speaking briefly before the showing of the film in the Pitt Theater, Fire Chief George Gardner told approximately 25 representatives of local civic clubs that the rescue squad, if formed, would be operated entirely on a civic basis. He also said that the organization would be independent of the police and fire departments of Greenville.

Gardner went on to say that equipment has already been purchased by the city for the use of a rescue squad, but enough trained personnel is not ready in case of an emergency. At the present time the rescue equipment is used by the fire and police departments.

The fire chief continued his talk by pointing out that an organized rescue squad would lay a foundation for a civil defense program in case of homefront warfare.

It would be the duty of the rescue squad to help the police and fire departments in the event of emergencies. Members of the squad would be trained in Red Cross methods of administering first aid to the wounded and ill.

No immediate reaction to the film, which was the story behind the formation of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase, Md., rescue squad, was shown. However, most of the representatives appeared to be in favor of having a local squad.

Adds Oil Lamp To Police Collection

Chief Guy C. Langston will now add to the collection of weapons used in assaults for various persons arrested an oil lamp, policemen on duty at police headquarters said today.

When a visitor enters the police station at City Hall he or she gets a panoramic view of numerous deadly weapons taken from persons arrested by Greenville policemen. The oil lamp will go next to a miniature pistol cigarette lighter that was used here recently in an assault, Police Court records show.

A warrant is on file for Willie Carr, Negro, charging him with assault with a deadly weapon (an oil lamp) on Alfred Carr, inflicting painful and serious wounds about the head and face. They are Negroes.

The case is expected to come up for trial in Police Court Friday.

NEW WRINKLE —. A new wrinkle has been injected into the congressional run-off between Ertel Carlyle and Joe Tally in the seventh district. Numerous Lumberton folks report being waked up in the middle of the night or wee morning hours by anonymous telephone callers, warning them to get out of the campaign for Carlyle or face serious consequences. Tally headquarters folks deny any connection with or responsibility for the 'phone calls—and there is no evidence tying them together. Obviously it is the distorted idea of some irresponsibles. That did not keep the calls from bothering the householders who wanted to sleep.

Had Accident In Driving Test

Lizzie Johnson Payton, Negro, 313 Boyd avenue, while taking a driver's examination test yesterday, collided with a car parked on West Fifth street, near Greene street.

The investigating officer said she was driving too close when she collided with a car belonging to R. C. Abee, 508 East Second street. The Abee car was not damaged. Damage to the Payton car was about $30, police estimated. None of the occupants was injured. No arrest.

Lizzie Johnson Payton did not get her driver's license. She will have to take another examination.

Govm't To Wind Up Its Fiscal Year Better Off

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government is going to wind up its year two to three billion dollars better off than it expected. But it still will be deep in the red.

Government experts, speaking privately, said today the deficit—the amount by which the government overspends its income—is likely to be less than 6 1-4 billion when the fiscal year ends June 30. It could be as low as 5 1-3 billion.
