Minnesota Throws Stassen Votes To Eisenhower Before Roll Call Result Announced; Move Provides Ample Margin Of Victory; Landslide At The Finish

By LYLE C. WILSON United Press Staff Correspondent CHICAGO (UP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower captured the Republican presidential nomination today with a first-ballot victory over Sen. Robert A. Taft, 614 to 500.

Beauty Pageant

One of the outstanding events of the festival will be a beauty pageant in which prizes of $200 or an expense-paid trip to Florida, $100, and $50.00 will be given.

City Manager's Planning Group Named By Jaycees

Jaycee President Charles Horne last night named Gene Ward chairman of the Junior Chamber of Commerce city manager planning committee.

Quickly Solved

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UP)—Fifteen minutes after learning that a radio had been stolen, detective Anthony Popolizio spotted two men carrying it into a pawnshop.

At the end of the normal roll call, Eisenhower still needed nine votes to make the 604 needed to become the man to face an unknown Democrat in November and try to lead the GOP back to power after 29 years.

He got 19—the 19 that Minnesota first gave to its favorite son, Harold Stassen. That put the general over the top.

After that Texas asked to change its vote to 37 for Eisenhower and one for MacArthur.

Other states quickly fell in line with requests to change their votes. The crowd cheered as each state changed.

When Minnesota's votes went to Eisenhower that put him across with the following totals: Eisenhower 614 Taft 500 Warren 81 MacArthur 10

The 62-year-old Taft went down to defeat despite desperate stop-ike efforts in which his camp tried at the 11th-hour to turn the Eisenhower bandwagon into a hearse.

It was Taft's third—and, he has said, his last—unsuccessful try for the nomination. He lost in 1940 to the late Wendell L. Willkie and four years ago to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

Ike's victory climaxed the Republicans' 25th and bitterest national convention, leaving the weary and wound-licking delegates only the anti-climatic task of picking a vice presidential nominee.

This convention's angry struggle, climaxed by Eisenhower's victory on Wednesday in the battle for "stolen" Southern delegates, left deep scars which the party must try to heal if it hopes to win their campaign to unseat the Democrats in November.

Ike's victory was foreshadowed days before the balloting started. Before the first roll call started Eisenhower was leading Taft 570 to 500 in a United Press tabulation of indicated first ballot votes. His total was just 25 short of the 604 needed to win.

The opening gavel was delayed for more than an hour beyond the scheduled 10:30 a. m. (EST) time probably because delegates were up too late demonstrating for their favorites and in last-minute huddles over voting strategy. Chairman Joe Martin called it to order at 11:32 a. m.

Riddick Revelle of the Jaycees is chairman of the beauty pageant. There will be no charge for entries to the contest.

Business firms in the city and county are asked again this year to decorate booths in the warehouse. Dan Saied is serving as chairman of the booths.

That means that many Northern and Western states will have three members each on the national committee, while the traditionally-Democratic Southern states will still have just two.

The rule provides that the 'hog seat' on the committee will go to the state chairman of the qualified state.

Martin is five feet four inches tall.

Named on the committee with Ward were Louis Gaylord Jr., Kenneth Hite, Dave Whichard and J. B. Kirtrell Jr. At their last meeting, the Greenville Jaycees voted to hold a series of meetings at which guest speakers would be invited to discuss the pros and cons of the city manager form of government for the information of the club.

J. B. Smith, chairman of the annual Jaycee horse show in Greenville, announced last night the second annual show has been set for October 12, and notification of the date of the show has been sent to more than 400 exhibitors in North Carolina and surrounding area. Smith called a meeting of the steering committee for the show for tonight.

Riddick Revelle was named by President Horne as chairman of the Jaycee committee which will stage the beauty pageant to be held in Greenville in conjunction with the annual Farmer's Tobacco Festival. Revelle said entries are now being accepted for the pageant, and young ladies between the ages of 16 and 25 are eligible for the contest.

The Greenville club will be host of the Jaycees of the eighth North Carolina district here July 24 for the quarterly district meeting.

Guests of the club at the meeting last night were Harry Horton of Charlotte, Bill Hussy, Judson Blount, Bill Smith, Craven Hughes, Ashley Hudson and Ed Rawl. Charles Hudson and Walter Stewart were announced as new members of the club.

Churches of Christ, Scientist "Sacrament" is the topic of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches next Sunday.

The Golden Text is from Psalms 116:12, 13. "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me? I will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the Lord." Passages from the Bible include: "And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is my body. And he took the cup and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it." Matthew 26:26, 27.

And from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "If all who ever partook of the sacrament had really commemorated the sufferings of Jesus and drunk of his cup, they would have revolutionized the world. His true flesh and blood were his Life; and they truly eat his flesh and drink his blood, who partake of that divine Life."

Impressive Dedication Service Held At Camp Hardee Council Ring Event

Wednesday night was a big occasion for Camp Hardee as well as the Greenville Girl Scout Council. The dedicatory ceremony for the new Council Ring was held.

After the campers, counselors and guests had filed into the Ring gymnasium, the program was opened with the Brownie promise and the Girl Scout Promise. For the invocation, Alice McKenzie, the music director at Camp Hardee, sang "The Lord's Prayer." A tribute was then given to Mr. Knott Proctor and Mr. Sam White, who had made the Council Ring possible. Each of the three camp units at Camp Hardee was represented by one girl who carried a candle and told what the Ring symbolized for them. These girls were Donna Day Bisette of Greenville, Ann Stallings of Smithfield and Nan Williams of Farmville.

The Council Ring was dedicated by Mr. Charles Bisette, chairman of the Camp Hardee Camp Committee. He reviewed briefly the progress of Camp Hardee and commented on the Council Ring as a much needed addition to the facilities of the camp. Mrs. B. B. Suggs Jr., president of the Greenville Girl Scout Council, accepted the Ring in behalf of the Council, which sponsors Camp Hardee.

The program ended with the singing of "In Years to Come," a Camp Hardee favorite, and "The Hymn of Scouting." Everyone received a lighted candle as he left the Ring and the procession marched to the waterfront. Then all present sailed their candles on the water as they made a final wish. Afterwards, refreshments and games were enjoyed in the lodge. The favors from the dedicatory camp fire will be sent to Rockwood, Md. to be placed on the National Campfire for Girl Scouts of the U.S.A. on Oct. 25. Girls from all sections of the country will be present for this celebration of the 40th anniversary of Girl Scouting. Some of the campers at Camp Hardee hope to be present on that occasion.

Condition of two Pitt County accident victims was listed by Pitt Memorial Hospital this morning as being improved.

Daisy Virginia Asbell, seven-year-old youngster who was run over by an automobile on the Washington highway Wednesday night, suffering a head injury, was listed as "doing nicely." It was not known when she will be released from the hospital.

She was struck by a car which she ran in front of after alighting from a car on the opposite side of the highway. Sarah Bowland, 19-year-old college student, the lone survivor of a tragic Fourth of July accident near Grimesland, was reported as somewhat improved today.

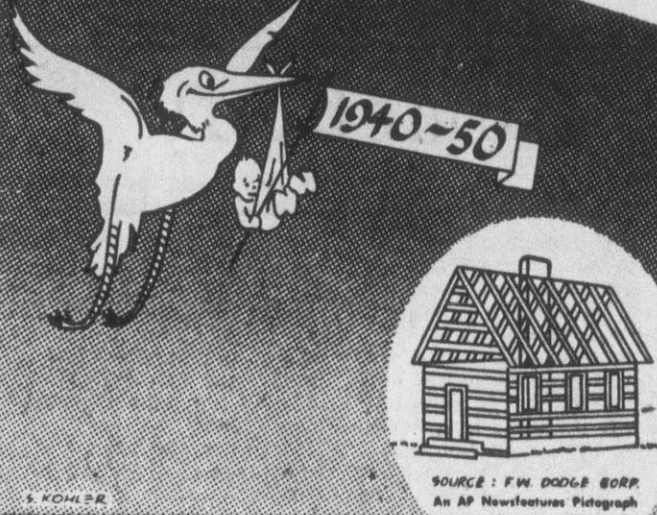

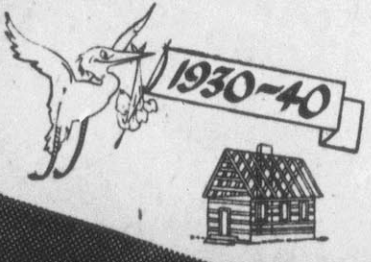

However, her condition is still serious and she has not fully regained consciousness.

BABIES ARE BUILDERS

Births breed building booms. From 1930 to 1940 only a little more than half the number of new persons were added to the population over 1920-1930.

The number of new dwellings built dropped 58 per cent. From 1940 to 1950 the number of new persons added jumped 116 per cent over 1930-1940.

The number of new dwellings built increased 115 per cent.

Coltrane Plans Accompany Tour

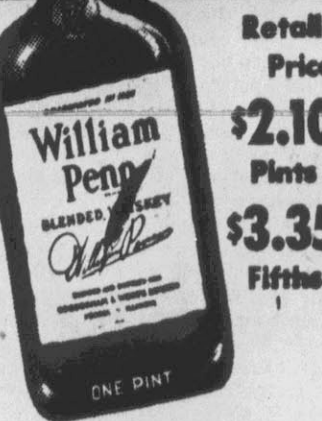

RALEIGH (AP)—Assistant Budget Director D. S. Coltrane, who was stripped of his duties by Gov. Scott, plans to accompany the Advisory Budget Commission when it begins its regular two-year tour of state institutions Monday.

The commission will prepare budget recommendations for submission to the 1953 General Assembly which convenes in January.

Coltrane won't be traveling on state expense account during the one-month tour, but will pay his own way. Scott stripped him of his duties when he balked at the governor's request that he resign following the gubernatorial primary. Since he now has no official duties which require him to travel, Coltrane has been off the list of those eligible to draw travel expense money from the state since June 30.

The trip starts Monday with the commission traveling to Wilson and Rocky Mount where it will listen to the budgetary needs of the Eastern North Carolina Sanatorium and Eastern Carolina Training School. The tour winds up Aug. 13 with the commission stopping at AT&T College and the Woman's College, both in Greensboro.

Bumper Harvest Is Forecast For U.S. This Year

WASHINGTON (AP)—A bumper harvest, featuring a corn crop exceeded only once, is forecast for this year.

In its first estimate of the year, the Agriculture Department yesterday forecast corn production of 3,365,000,000 bushels, only a little short of the government's goal of 3,375,000,000 bushels.

Corn is the No. 1 factor in assuring high level production of meats, dairy and poultry products.

Only in 1942, the banned production year, was more corn produced than is forecast for 1952. Last year production was 2,941,423,000 bushels and the 10-year 1941-50 average is 3,011,652,000 bushels.

A wheat crop of 1,249,019,000 bushels is in prospect. In only two previous years—1947 and 1948—has more been produced.

The index for measuring all crops produced is indicated at about 132 per cent of the 1923-32 average. This is higher than in any past year except 1948 when it reached 135.4 per cent.

The acreage to be harvested is only a little above last year but high yields of several of the major crops is indicated.

In addition to wheat and corn, the soybean crop is expected to be near record size, and rice appears headed for a record.

A larger potato acreage than last year and nearly the same yield per acre will provide a slightly larger supply, although still nearly a fifth below average. A larger sweet potato crop also is in prospect.

The forecast is for 339,048,000 bushels of potatoes compared with 325,708,000 bushels last year—a year in which housewives at times found the lowly "spud" hard to find at the grocery store.

Korea stood at 19,698 killed, 9,543 missing in action, 80,060 wounded and 1,442 captured. Yet the fruitless haggling at Panmunjom continues stalemated as it has for many months.

How long the fruitless talks will continue, or how long American youths will be called on to give their lives in Korea, no one seems to know.

World War I and World War II, the two most costly military struggles of American history were indeed costly beyond the realm of imagination to most of the people of the nation. But if the situation in Korea continues in its present stagnated condition, the Korean conflict, which has been viewed too much as incidental, may prove even more costly to the United States.

Tragedy That Comes With Holidays

Death took a big toll in Pitt County over the July 4th week-end. An automobile accident near Grimesland claimed the lives of two people, and a third person drowned while swimming in a sand hole north of Tar river.

It is unfortunate that holidays in this nation are always marked by such tragedies caused by carelessness. Unfortunate as it is, however, tragedy has become the rule rather than the exception on holidays in the United States. And as individuals find out too late, it is not always the other fellow who becomes a static in the nation's book of accidents.

There were a total of five serious automobile accidents in Pitt County during the holiday week-end. In addition to the two people who lost their lives in these accidents, six others were injured, and property damage ran into the thousands of dollars.

So far this year, automobile accidents have claimed the lives of eight people in Pitt County . . . and the year is only half gone. Will eight more people die in automobile mishaps in Pitt before the year ends? Of course everyone hopes not, but there is no indication that drivers are becoming more careful with their lives or the lives of their passengers.

CHICAGO—European newspaper correspondents covering the Republican National Convention here are extremely skeptical of a GOP victory next November, although they have been surprisingly neutral in their reportorial treatment of the bitter Taft-Eisenhower feud.

Indeed, many of the scores of foreign commentators on a scene strange to them admit that they exercised extreme caution in their reporting of this exciting and important assemblage. Their home capitals, needing continued American economic and military assistance, do not want to antagonize the Republicans. And it is recognized that foreign newspapers usually respond to their governments' needs and desires in a domestic or international crisis. To them the American presidential election is a grave event.

Even if the ticket named here does not take over control of the executive arm next January, the GOP will still have a powerful influence on Capitol Hill. They will have to underwrite future financial commitments, and it is no good business to alienate your banker.

FASCINATING—In almost a full-page dispatch from Chicago, the editor of another London journal chronicled that "Taft is fascinating and a man of unchallengeable rectitude without a blot on his record." Even Washington correspondents fairly close to the Ohioan, personally and politically, have never found him "fascinating."

A German newspaper praised both Bob and Ike. It likened the erstwhile commander of the army which crushed Hitler to a "young Siegfried who has gone out to do battle against the party machine and bureaucracy." At the same time it referred to Taft as "the man who has worked the miracle of controlling the Republican machine while remaining politically clean and unimpeachable himself."

None of the foreign newspapers—British, French, German, Italian—have assigned the Ohio Senator as viciously as many pre-Eisenhower newspaper, magazine, radio and television commentators have done in the last few weeks.

HEDGING—Thus the European press, measured by the many thousands of words sent across the water from Chicago, and by editorial comment, are hedging on the American election as they look westward for further reinforcement.

Together with some domestic political observers, many foreign newspapermen here still anticipate re-nomination of President Truman, possibly because the wish may be father to the hope. In discussing this possibility, they inform their readers that "Truman is considered a stronger candidate today than three months ago after the outcry against corruption in the government."

In common with many departing delegates, the overseas journalists, as they like to call themselves, wonder whether the Republican Party will be sufficiently recovered from the internal upheaval in time to go into the November election with any chance of defeating the Democrats.

CONCERN—Europe's concern over what one London writer described as "the most colossal and stupendous spectacle in world Democracy" is unmistakable here. Not even in the more fateful and tragic years of 1940 and 1944 have so many foreign reporters and editors attended a national convention. Many made special trips at great expense, despite the dollar shortage, and the number would have been greater, if it had not been for the scarcity of working and living space for the press.

STEAMROLLER—Political history was reconstructed erroneously, although perhaps not deliberately so, at this convention by the grandson of the man who engineered the most famous "steamroller" in American politics. In urging the nomination of Eisenhower, Theodore Roosevelt III said in a widely circulated statement:

"The Republican Convention of 1952 dare not repeat the disaster of 1912 by defying the will of the people. In 1912 an earlier Taft steamroller, with the control of the party machinery, ignored the will of the people, and led the party to disastrous defeat. The 1952 Taft steamroller is following almost the identical road and pattern of that earlier Taft steamroller of 1912."

Young Roosevelt has his facts all wrong. His grandfather, not Senator Taft's father, was the man who built the first "steamroller," and it was operated in 1908, not 1912. Exercising ruthlessly and joyously the power of his office and personality "T. R." overrode all opposition as he nominated his hand-picked candidate, William Howard Taft. And his tactics were far more rough than those alleged by Roosevelt III to have been revived forty years later.

Finally it was the strong-willed "T. R." who, in seeking a third term, split the GOP vote and "led the party to disastrous defeat" in 1912.

Ah These Amerikans

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Fishing through my notes last night I found a group from my Fort Jackson trip that I had overlooked, about an American war bride from Czechoslovakia. Before the Greenville reserve unit left there we were treated to a dinner party by the permanent personnel of Fort Jackson. Among the hosts were a Captain Bryant and his wife, Ise, the war bride.

While Captain Bryant was having his close call Ise was here in the United States still learning how to be an American citizen. Ise has been here since 1948, but she has only seen the South so far. Bryant's encampments have been in Fort Benning and Augusta, Ga., and Fort Jackson. Quite naturally, she has a warm feeling toward the U. S.

Ise has musical talent, and consequently a great feeling for the classics. During her short stay here she has learned to love America, but she lacks the appreciation for the arts as the only shortcoming of the average American. "Many Americans have the proper appreciation," she says, "but many others are rushing so fast through life that they don't take time for them."

Contrasting American children with those in Czechoslovakia, Ise gave an interesting analysis: "In America you have more children per family, and the children get less individual attention. Back in my country the parents give their all to their children to death." Ise added that more money is spent on children here, but less time than in Czechoslovakia.

"The greatest thing about America," she says, "were brought to my attention when I had to recite the freedoms from the constitution when I took my examination for citizenship."

"Another great thing," she says, "is the attitude of the American husband toward his wife. In Czechoslovakia a husband would not consider helping his wife wash dishes, for example. Neither would you ever find a man over there pushing a baby carriage."

And I thank you.

HEALTH—Progress reports covering the period since commencement of the Scott administration have been filed by Dr. John Ferrell, executive secretary of the Medical Care Commission and by Dr. Roy Norton, State health officer, for their respective agencies. The composite of these separate reports gives a clearer idea of the changing attitude of North Carolinians toward public health problems than either could be taken alone. Both reports deal with large sums of public money, tremendously larger than had ever before been contemplated for similar services. Both doctors emphasize that the money is important only as it makes possible previously unthought-of state control over sanitation, contagious and infectious diseases, and state obligation in preventive measures to insure public health.

HOSPITALS—Dr. Ferrell goes back to beginning of the State medical care program six years ago. In 1947 only 67 counties had general hospital facilities. Now 82 counties have them or have cooperative access to them. Within the six year period the medical care commission has approved expenditure of over $68 million divided roughly as $14 million State funds, $24 million Federal and $30 million local. During the program North Carolina has built or contracted for 4,959 new hospital beds, making it rank second only to Texas in new beds since July 1, 1947. In addition to these hospital beds there have been numerous health centers, nurses' homes and other auxiliary facilities built. A major item in the total program is the teaching hospital and nurse training school at Chapel Hill. In addition to all the physical equipment, approximately $100 million in value, attention has been given to aiding medical, dental and nursing students through a state loan fund. Long range planning has been undertaken for more fully co-ordinating the services of physical facilities and technical staffs of the state-local general hospitals with those of specialized institutions for treatment of tuberculosis and mental diseases.

PUBLIC HEALTH—Dr. Norton's review of public health progress contains only slight reference to investment in physical equipment, but emphasizes the expanding service activities in prevention and control of disease. He notes that every one of the hundred counties in the state now has an organized public health department, and that while the State has multiplied its financial contribution several times over, actual administrative control has been decentralized. Result is that the State puts up more money, the counties have more control than was the case a few years ago. A significant result of this combination has been a tremendously increased popular interest in projects designed to conserve and promote public health.

ITEMS—The tuberculosis section's campaign has produced 952,098 chest pictures, contributing to discovery in time for preventive treatment in thousands of cases. Under laws requiring report of premature births and appropriations to aid in the care of such babies born to indigents, the infant mortality rate has been reduced. Professional and financial aid to crippled children is on sounder basis under direction of a medical doctor. More than 30,000 dental corrections, mostly in rural communities, have been made by public health dentists. For both children and adults, there are greatly improved facilities for detection and treatment of heart diseases and cancer. More adequate inspection of sanitary conditions in public eating places is given some credit for the increased volume of tourist dollars pouring into North Carolina every year. The stream sanitation setup authorized by the 1951 assembly is heralded as an important factor in further orderly development of industrial and recreational growth. For all of these purposes the State of North Carolina is putting up a lot more money than ever before, and somewhat paradoxically, the centralized State agencies are conceding more authority and responsibility to the local communities, and to self-police groups representing the affected interests.

SOCIALISM—Inherent in these progress reports is the concept of increasing "socialism." Inescapable conclusion is that government at some level, whether national, state or local, is being more largely depended upon to look after the welfare of the common people. It is significant that the doctors who made these reports are top level members of the medical profession. It is perhaps more significant that federal and state appropriations for the Medical Care Commission and the Public Health Service, as well as local tax levies and bond issues for hospitals, clinics and health centers, are supported almost unanimously by medical doctors. In fact, a Wake county vote on bonds for expanded hospital facilities has been delayed by demand of some doctors that additional facilities be included, necessitating increased amount in the bond issue to be voted upon.

PERTINENT—How far this trend toward complete "socialization" of medicine will follow the socialization of education and lead to the socialization of electric power and transportation, depends upon the attitude of the people. In that connection one sentence in Dr. Norton's report is very pertinent: "All public health movement

What Other Papers Are Thinking

STEVENSON AS A CANDIDATE (Wilson Times)

It now begins to look as if the Democrats will center on Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois even though the Governor of that state all along has held that he prefers not to be a candidate. But if he's nominated in Chicago, which wing of the party will he represent? Will Truman support Stevenson if Stevenson doesn't accept an FEPC plank? And will not Stevenson with such a plank, be as objectionable to the South as Truman would have been if he'd been the nominee?

That will put a heavy burden on Senator Richard Russell of Georgia. He's a candidate knowing that there's little likelihood of his getting the nomination, but to serve as a challenge to those Northern Democrats who insist on dominating the party. If Stevenson, then, is the candidate and if the Democratic party platform contains an FEPC plank, will Russell lead a Dixiecrat movement similar to the one that attempted to beat Truman in 1948? The South has a just grievance against the Truman administration. For in no way does he represent the Southern ideals. If the South, then, has a grievance against Truman, will it not have a similar grievance against anyone that Truman supports? Perhaps all that has been made clear to Stevenson and perhaps that's why he'd prefer not to be the party leader. So far what can happen in the even Stevenson is nominated and in the event the Democrats adopt a form with the objectionable FEPC in it, hasn't come to the surface. But it likely will as sentiment crystallizes in favor of any of the leading candidates.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

It sometimes comes as a surprise to a merchant to discover that the only profit he is making is the money earned by paying his bills promptly. Yet that situation is far from uncommon.

A recent survey of specialty store profits last year showed that the average store made a net profit of 2 cents on each dollar of sales. That 2 per cent is fairly close to the amount offered as discount for the payment of bills within a given number of days after receipt.

The same survey showed department stores' net profit amounted to 2.4 per cent of the sales dollar. Since there was a wide variation in the earnings from stores, it is reasonable to suppose that in many cases the entire profit margin was equal to earned cash discounts.

Owners of stores in other fields may find this sort of calculation interesting and profitable: Add the number of dollars gained in the last twelve months by realizing cash discounts, then compare that with the profit realized in the same period. The relation between the two figures will show, often dramatically, the importance of cash discounts. As a further exercise, total the amount of cash discounts offered but not realized, then reflect that profits could have been increased by that amount, less taxes, if all bills had been paid promptly.

Because cash discounts often amount to an amazingly large part of net profits, big and successful merchandising operations take the fullest advantage of them. Furthermore, when a supplier reduces the amount of a cash discount offered, they protest vigorously, individually and through their trade association.

The National Retail Dry Goods Association is carrying on a two-front campaign on discounts. On one front, it is demanding that manufacturers maintain historic discounts and notifies members when a supplier cuts or restores a discount. On the other front, it is urging store personnel, especially buyers, to insist on discounts.

One store, it notes, has a rule requiring that every order not providing for a discount bear the personal signature of the president.

TWO BIG CHAINS TEST OWN CHAIN

Two big chains, one in the grocery field and the other in general merchandise, are testing consumer reaction to their own brands of cigarettes. The packs are priced competitively with popular brands.

If these new private brands go over, it may be the beginning of a trend. Certainly every large merchandising organization will be thinking about its own brand.

CORONATION TESTS OF LONDON FASHIONS

London is hoping, if not to win the fashion crown from Paris, to pick up a few bundles of foreign currency with coronation fashions. With the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II almost a year away, West End designers are already showing fashions with coronation motifs. Coronation red, royal blue and imperial purple are being featured. And, of course, there are tweeds as always. The fashion houses report considerable interest among buyers abroad.

PUBLIC SPURNS ORANGES BY POUND

People like to buy oranges by the dozen. It took the Florida State Citrus Commission $25,000 to find that out.

In hopes of selling more of the Florida orange crop, the commission arranged for sales by the pound in Memphis, Tenn., and Louisville, Ky., as test cities. Sales were no greater than they had been by the dozen.

PLAN FOR PATIENTS

Tooth repairs on easy payment plans are now possible in Indianapolis. The Bankers Trust Co. and Indianapolis Dental Society have worked out a plan whereby the bank finances dental work for patients unable to pay the full amount at once. About 350 dentists are expected to participate.

NEW PRODUCTS

BANK: Assorted fruit syrups are being marketed in novelty piggy-bank pint bottles by Fred Fear & Co., Joralemon St., Brooklyn, N.Y. "Deposits" can be made through a slot in the cap, after syrup has been consumed.

WASHER: An automatic washing machine, said to wash nylon, Orlon and other synthetic fibers without damage, has been announced by General Electric Co., Louisville 2, Ky. Using the agitator principle, it is said to wash, rinse and spin-dry nine pounds of clothing.

DEHUMIDIFIER: An automatic control, activated by moisture content of the atmosphere, is featured on a new dehumidifier by Walton Laboratories, Irvington, N.J. It is said to save power by operating only when required rather than at timed intervals.

ROD: A magnesium alloy rod, manufactured by Call Boy Co., 7147 Lyndale Ave. S., Minneapolis, suspended in a car's cooling system under the radiator cap is said to inhibit formation of rust. Its electrochemical action is claimed to cause corrosion of the magnesium rather than walls and fittings of the cooling system, and water in a new car will be kept clean indefinitely.

COPIER: A high speed machine with a 20-inch copying width, said to copy any size office form in seconds, has been developed by Charles Bruning Co., 125 North St., Teterboro, N.J. Easily operated, it is said to be practically soundless, requires no special installation and makes error-proof smudgeproof copies at less than 2 cents per square foot of copy.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Wilbur Peeble, America's most average citizen, goes to the heart of the GOP problem in the following letter to his wife, Trellis Mae, from the Republican national convention:

By HAL BOYLE
CHICAGO—AP—Well, honey, it looks like five stars over the White House, according to a waitress who sold me a hot dog at Convention Hall.

"Ike's in!" she said me happily, and generously passed out free mustard to the crestfallen Taft supporters.

The story now is that Gen. Eisenhower is doing so well that he is offering to lead the Texas delegates to Gen. MacArthur in a package labeled: "Don't open until 1956."

Bob Taft is still in there pitching with both vocal chords, but most of the bystanders now seem to feel that the steam in his steamroller is only going "fizz-z-z-z."

They believe Ike has romanced the elephant and taught him to salute.

"That case we might as well make it a coalition cabinet and appoint Harry S. Truman secretary of the treasury," a bitter Taft man said.

The question then arose about what to do with John Foster Dulles, and a fellow said: "Why not appoint John Foster Dulles secretary to John Dulles so there'll be no doubt about his policy?"

"Well, honey, as you can see from this, they talk the Republicans are kind of tuckered out. They have had a rough week. They are not used to fighting them—Ives like Democrats. A donkey can relax acting like a jackass, but it makes a dignified elephant nervous."

It may be a bit early for the Ike fans to count Sen. Taft out. Personally, I know of only one man who has turned in his Taft button and he explained it was only because he was having his suit pressed and wanted it back right away if Taft is nominated.

The increasing likelihood that Ike will be the Republican nominee is very annoying to some members of the Old Guard GOP who refer to him as "the five-star Cinderella from Aboloney, Kansas."

"Drat it we are always falling for glamor boys," one said. "I would rather run He! Hoover again—if we can't have Taft. Let's be real Republicans."

"Well, Trellis Mae, I am no seagoon. But if I had to sue you the wounds in the Republican Party at this moment I wouldn't use thread. I'd call for rope."

"However, an old-time observer of conventions told me: "Son, there is nothing in this world shorter than a politician's memory. The promise of future patronage can cure a lot of present name-calling."

canx is that we've got too many leaders, and the Democrats—they've got too many people.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—Social life in the nation's Capital isn't quite the "business" it used to be, observes Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, widow of the Democratic senator from Illinois. She has lived in Washington since 1913.

"New senator's wives in those days had to call on everybody, first at the White House and then at the vice president's," Mrs. Lewis recalls. "After that we had to call on wives of our husbands' state delegations, other senators' Mondays we called on wives of diplomats." If a wife didn't do this, Mrs. Lewis said, she might lose her husband some valuable votes.

"Then life was very formal," she said, "you had to carry big boxes of calling card everywhere you went and shell them out so your husband would be popular—one for yourself, one for your husband, and nobody would ever dream of calling you up to invite you for dinner as people do today."

"Parties were more dignified, more elegant, more appropriate for people in high station in the old days," she said. "There's too much informality now. Parties aren't so much fun, and there's too much drinking."

Mrs. Lewis says she finds it even difficult to get a glass of water at some affairs, and she doesn't like the way they begin at 6 p.m. these days. "You can't get dinner and get there by 6 and after 8 o'clock, when they break up it's too late," she added. "Now people go to parties to eat their dinner from the buffet table, but you get tired of looking at hams, turkey and other whole animals."

Mrs. Lewis, who attended her first political convention in 1912 and accompanied her husband to succeeding ones, never was actively engaged in politics and never helped her husband campaign. My husband wouldn't let me help him," she said. "He said if he wasn't his own boss, he'd get elected on his own party, he'd stay out. Nowadays wives get right into the fight. You'd almost think they were the trousers."

A handsome, beautifully-dressed much-traveled lady, Mrs. Lewis is often called "Gypsy" by her intimates because of her life-long hobby of palmyristry which she has polished with studies in Spain, Hungary, Rumania and Turkey. She has had the palms of hundreds of prominent persons.

Chapter 27
John Taylor replaced the telephone receiver and made to turn about when the shadow cast upon the wall before him caused him to jerk back, slightly startled.
"You were talking to Danny. Is that it?"
Kate stood framed in the doorway, a scarf tightly held against her hair and fastened beneath her chin.
"You promised to stay downtown, Kate."
"I know. That was yesterday."
"Why have you come here, then?"
"I want to talk with Danny. Where is he?"
"At Berowra Water. With Gardner."
"Let me telephone him. What's the number?"
Taylor interposed himself between the woman and the telephone table.
"Before you do that, Kate, what's on your mind?"
"Why didn't you tell me that Gardner spiked me in Wade's Hole?"
"The O'Bourke girl told you. I might have known."
"Yes. You're supposed to be a psychologist, too. Yet you'd trust a woman with a confidence! You're just a little playboy, Johnny, like a kid with a me-anno set. Why don't you get wise. Now, what's the number?"

Taylor thrust forward a chair, but the woman declined.
"Now, if you phone Danny and tell him the whole story, he'll kill Gardner. That's good. Gardner's dead. So Danny gets ten years for manslaughter. Ten' at least. That'on top of the five years he did for maliciously wounding a cop, will represent about a quarter of his life behind bars. Now go ahead and telephone. The number is Berowra seven two eight."
"The other remained at the doorway."
"O.K. Then, let's phone police headquarters instead. You can't object to that."
"You'd like to see Gardner dead, wouldn't you, Kate?"
"Slowly, if possible."
"Then you won't phone the police either. I was just talking to Danny, Gardner's so near to being stark, raving mad that it doesn't matter. He doesn't know what's going on. He feels fenced in. He's in what we call a manic-depressive state. When the crisis comes the only way out'll be self-destruction. Paul will commit suicide within a week. It'll be torturous and slow. I don't think that even you will be able to object to the manner of his death."
"You're doing this for Mell-sande, aren't you?"
"Factly."
"I don't know. I'm no psychologist. Perhaps it'll work out the way you say. Like you said, I don't want Danny in any bother with the police. That spin he got just about did for him. So, I suppose it's up to you, Skipper."
"I know what I'm doing, Kate — providing you stay in hiding. We expect Gardner back here any time now."
"Well, here's one thing you can put your shirt on, Skipper. If your little mecano-set thing doesn't work out—he won't get away from me. That's sure."

"O.K., we'll leave it at that for now."
It was well into the afternoon before Paul Gardner woke; and in the period of his sleeping, Mell-sande endured a hundred tortured nightmares, compounded of uncertainty, mystification, anger—and common fear. She was angry for the reason that there were things afoot of which apparently everybody was cognizant but herself. Something was taking place between Paul and Danny and John Taylor—and possibly Katie, too—something deep and significant — but of the parties engaged in the new drama she herself knew least about it and she felt that it touched her perhaps more intimately than any of them. What was it, then, that lay behind this obstinate wall of innuendo, threat, mystery and conspiracy? Instinctively, she felt that all of it centered round the person of Kate Sale, who within the last week had gradually assumed the gigantic proportions of the evil spirit in some bad dream. The presence of Kate's father here at Berowra Waters she now knew to be part of a carefully prepared design, probably initiated by John Taylor. What kind of a world was it, anyway, where people simply took full control of one's private life shutting personalties back and forth, like pawns on a chessboard, guarding, watching, protecting...
Protecting! There, perhaps, lay the answer to her half-formed questions. Never was there a figure more symbolical of protection than the great bulk of Danny Sale, rifle forever carelessly slung in the crook of his arm and eyes obliquely fixed upon half the Universe. Why had John Taylor sent Danny down here in the guise of caretaker? Why had Danny spoken so meekly of Paul?
Paul could provide the answer — if only he would speak. But his manner during the past few days had been strange and unapproachable and she dared't make a direct appeal to him for the simple reason that there was nothing definite to proceed with.
Something would have to break soon, she felt. It was impossible to go on living forever on the bottom step of an infinite question mark and even though the climb to its summit be grueling and perhaps paved with boulders of tragedy better far that the attempt be made now—now—

And so she would wake Paul and talk to him.
"Paul — what is Kate's father doing here?"
"So he's been talking." He pondered a while. "I gather it has something to do with his health. He's cancerous, you know."
"You didn't tell me he was Kate's father, Paul!"
"Neither did I tell you that he's sixty years of age and once served five years for assault and battery. Didn't you know I am the uncommunicative type? I'm for peace at any price. Go away, Sandy—!"
"Paul—talk to me. What's going on? Danny's watching you like a cat watching a mouse."
"Mouse? Thank you."
"I didn't mean that—exactly. But there's something happening and you know what it is. Won't you tell me—please?"
"I haven't the vaguest notion."
"You're lying!"

Divorcee, Young Lover Returned Under Guard

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UP) — A 28-year-old divorcee and her fussy-checked, 17-year-old lover returned to California under police guard today, to face the consequences of their runaway romance.
Mrs. Virginia LeTourneau and the youth, James Eldon Sherwin, were arrested here after they fled from James' disapproving parents in Burbank, Calif., and spent eight weeks traveling across the country together.
As police pulled them apart at the city jail, the platinum blonde swore she would "wait for you forever."
With them was Mrs. LeTourneau's 10-year-old son, Armand Jr. The divorcee will face a California warrant charging her with contributing to the delinquency of a minor. The youth is scheduled for a showdown with juvenile officers who attempted several months ago to break up the romance.

THE POLITICAL DOPE

AS TOLD TO WALT KELLY
BY POGO

by POGO
Chicago, July 11: (By Special Correspondent)

One of the Horned Frogs, who sort of carry their own chains with them, said that so far as he can see those that aren't running are talking and those that aren't talking are liable to get nominated and elected unless they move fast.
He said he noticed the talk sort of slim when it came to the candidates saying anything which could be overheard by a public with national TV., radio, newspaper and motion pictures coverage at its disposal. He thinks this is because there is a rule known as Cave Canem's Law that Danger Befalls the Candidate Who Speaks Out Too Early.
The candidate wants to wait till after he is nominated so as to not offend certain elements of his party, says the toad. Then he finds it is better to wait until after election, when he'll be in a position to speak with authority. Then during his term, he finds that he should be careful of the dignity of his office, so he waits until he is no longer president. When he's out he feels it would be a violation of a public trust to speak out in any free handed fashion. So we wait until he is dead and read his memoirs and usually find out why he had nothing to say in the first place.

The assistant to the house detective feels there is one way to avoid this problem for Candidates. He says we could kill off these men politically at the outset. Then we are in a position to listen to any one of them on any topic available at the drop of any side that is open.

Rate Hearing Is Still In Progress

RALEIGH (UP) — North Carolina railroads continued testimony before the State Utilities Commission here today on a request for a 15 per cent increase in intra-state rates.
Attorneys for the railroads yesterday asked the commission to "equalize" the intra-state haulings. John Hill Paylor, assistant attorney general representing the commission and the State Department of Agriculture, said he would withhold his decision on whether to oppose the general increase, but would definitely oppose the increase as it applies to fertilizer and fertilizer materials.
Paylor said he would ask the commission for a recess after the petitioning rail lines and protesting shippers have completed their testimony, in order that figures submitted can be studied by the commission's accountants.

Attorneys for the railroads said yesterday that the average net return after taxes for five major North Carolina lines was 4.3 per cent last year.

The Sport Reflector

By BOB HILLDRUP

The matter has come to light through the release of the 1952 East Carolina football schedule that once again the Pirates are playing service teams.

The practice of scheduling teams from the armed services to play against the local college, or for that matter, any college, is one that should cease.

Just this week announcement was made that the 1952 season tickets for the Pirates five home games were being placed on sale. It should be stated that out of five games to be played at home this year by the local college three are against service teams.

These teams are Norfolk Naval Air Station in the opening contest September 13, Newport News Apprentice School the following week and the Cherry Point Flyers to close out the season on November 25.

The price of $7.50 for five home games is a very reasonable one. These tickets, calling for reserved seats, would sell much better if these service teams were eliminated from the schedule.

The people of Greenville love good football but East Carolina, in scheduling service teams, is going to lose just that.

The men who play for these service teams are men who just do not have that college spirit. Too often the term "college spirit" is abused. What is meant is that games between colleges are apt to present fiercer competition and therefore better football.

Servicemen who come here to play have little more than a passing interest in their team. By the time the next season rolls around they will probably be stationed in a different locality and playing for a different team.

In a game between teams such as the ones that East Carolina is scheduling, there will be nothing to urge the players on. Why should either team be prompted to try when the contest will have no effect on any conference standings? The only thing that could bring about any effort on the part of the players is the inward desire for competition.

If the football health of any school is to be kept then the game itself should be played between students from like environments.

There are plenty of teams in the country that are capable of giving the Pirates a good game. If East Carolina could afford to send the local squad to Mississippi last year then they certainly should be able to find teams that are willing to travel just as far in order to compete with the Pirates.

The fans had much rather see a schedule that presented strong opposition against which the Pirates were underdogs than see a bunch of old men huffing and puffing around the field.

We believe that the people of Greenville, as well as the students of East Carolina, had rather watch the Pirates lose a good, hard-fought, competitive game to a team of the caliber of Southern Conference opponents than see them win against a bunch of service clubs.

In stepping out of their class and out of the Conference last year against Mississippi Southern and The Citadel, the Pirates lost two games. They did, however, publicize their school and gain the respect of their opponents for their fine play.

Players from both schools were quick to praise the Pirate squad for their performance. In losing the Pirates could well be proud; and had they won it would have been a real feather in their cap. Who cares about the 45-0 score run up against Cherry Point last year?

The argument, if argument it is, seems to be settled in the minds of the people that count—the fans. If any added reason is needed then take the gate receipts. Games played with service clubs have always drawn notoriously small crowds. Therefore if money was the only thing to be taken into consideration then East Carolina would be better off to drop the service teams.

Imagine how a game with N. C. State or Duke would draw. The local stadium would be filled to overflowing. If not teams of that power then why not such schools as the University of Richmond, Davidson, or Rollins and Tampa from Florida.

Credit must be given to the schedule makers for meeting Stetson University this fall. The men from Deland, Florida play some top-notch schools and should be capable of offering worthwhile competition.

Schools such as these can provide good, strong, out-of-conference play and yet have all the spirit of college football. Football is on the move at ECC and the place to begin now is with the schedule.

Here is the complete 1952 East Carolina College football schedule: September 13—Norfolk Naval Air Station, home

September 20—Newport News Apprentice School, home

September 27—Lenoir-Rhyne, away

October 4—Catawba (homecoming), home

October 11—Elon, away

October 18—Western Carolina, home

October 25—Gulford, away

November 1—Appalachian, away

Waldensian Victors Over Royal Crown

Royal Crown Cola came out on the short end again yesterday as they dropped a 7-6 contest to Waldensian-Sunbeam.

Waldensian could collect but six singles from the offerings of losing hurler Edwards while Royal Crown was banging out ten off James McRoy.

Royal Crown took the lead with two runs in the opening frame and held on tightly until Waldensian rallied for three in the top of the sixth.

Three consecutive singles by Billy McRoy, James McRoy and first baseman Tommie Lupton sparked the rally. J. McRoy, in addition to hurling the win, collected two hits in four trips to the plate to lead his team.

Conway, Arnold and Taylor each hit safely twice for Royal Crown. Arnold having two hits, including a double, and scoring twice in three at-bats.

Road Will 'Sing' Note Of Warning

TRENTON, N. J. (UP)—Part of Route 6 will become a "singing" highway to keep careless motorists in harmony, authorities said today.

A two-foot strip of concrete, placed in the middle of the highway, will cause car bodies to hum loudly when motorists veer too far to the left.

Norman Thomas holds the record for presidential attempts at six. He ran on the Socialist ticket.

November 8—Stetson University, away

November 25—Cherry Point, away

As can be easily seen there will be only two collegiate opponents to appear at the college field. The fans of Greenville deserve a better break than this. No other area can boast better campus-city relationships than when school officials ask the local inhabitants to buy their season tickets then the least that can be done is to provide a decent schedule.

Finnish Daylight Makes Life Hard For Competitors

By LEO H. PETERSEN, United Press Sports Editor

HELSINKI (UP)—Finland's midnight sun was playing havoc with Olympic athletes today. Up here on the rim of Europe the sun sets only briefly during the summer months so there are only two or three hours of semi-darkness, with the sun blazing brightly from about 1:30 a.m. on.

That has disrupted the sleeping habits of the athletes who have gathered here from all over the world for the Olympic games opening July 19.

Most of them are used to sleeping in darkness and are finding it difficult to get their proper rest. Some even have gone so far as to start working out as early as 4 a.m. Three U. S. athletes—pole vaulter Bob Richards, javelin thrower Bud Heid and walker Henry Laskau—along with members of the Pakistan and Venezuelan teams—were in that "early bird" contingent.

In addition to this unusual situation, the athletes also had the gracious hospitality of the Finns with which to contend. There was such a wide variety of delicacies available at the Olympic village that coach Brutus Hamilton of the U. S. track and field team had to warn the athletes against over-eating as well as under-sleeping.

Although it did not bother the U. S. athletes, because they are used to it, the heat also presented a problem to those from countries accustomed to cooler weather. Helsinki has experienced its hottest weather of the year during the past two days, with the temperature in the upper 70's and a continuation of the "heat" wave forecast.

The vanguard of the German Olympic team—30 rowers and yachtsmen—called off their first scheduled practice session yesterday because it was too hot for them.

Today, however, most of the athletes were scheduled to start regular practice sessions with the U. S. preferring the hottest hours of the day for their workouts.

Illinois Laborer Leading In Open

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—With all former champions watching wistfully from the sidelines and a 21-year-old Illinois laborer hogging the spotlight, the rough-and-ready National Public Links Golf Tournament moved today into its fifth exciting round.

The man to watch was rangy Bob Scherer, an unknown workman from Decatur. He came from nowhere in yesterday morning's third round to blast Defending Champion Dave Stanley of Los Angeles from this meeting of the stars of America's municipal golf courses with an astounding 4 and 3 victory.

Completely unaffected by his sparking decision over Stanley, the young UCLA student who had been given a good chance to don the public links crown for the second year, Scherer came back in the afternoon fourth round and knocked George Caskey of Dayton, O. out of the running, 4 and 3.

Stanley Bielet of Yonkers, N. Y., the 1940 champ, was bumped by Frank Rutkiewicz of Honolulu, 1 up, and Andy Sewedko, the stubborn Pittsburgh steelworker who won it way back there in 1939, was knocked out by Charles Hess of Indianapolis, 2 and 1.

Rutkiewicz was kicked out himself in the afternoon round by Matt Carvey of Harvey, Ill., 1 up.

Stanky On Way To Winning Hat From Durocher

By CARL LUNDQUIST, United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP)—Eddie Stanky still has a long way to go to win a pennant in his rookie year as Cardinal manager, but his ace pitcher Gerry Staley was a good bet today to win him a hat from his old boss, Leo Durocher.

Before the season started Stanky bet Durocher a hat that Staley would win more games than any of the three Giant aces, Sal Maglie, Larry Jansen, or Jim Hearn.

Last night Staley won his 12th game, 10-3 over the Phillies, as the Cardinals extended their winning streak to 10, longest in the majors this year. Staley thus became the No. 1 winner in the league. The crafty right-hander, who was on the All-Star squad but didn't get into the game at Philadelphia, coasted home, as his mates piled up a 9-0 lead, knocking out the Philly All-Star hero, Curt Simmons, with a four-run outburst in the first inning. Billy Johnson drove in four runs with a triple, double, and single and he also stole a base.

The Cardinals, now in third place, eight games behind the leading Dodgers and 3½ behind the runner-up Giants, gained on both teams. The Cubs topped Brooklyn 7-6 and the Pirates upset the Giants, 6-4, in 12 innings on Gus Bell's two-run homer. The Reds topped the Braves, 5 to 3.

In the American League, the White Sox moved to within 2½ games of the leading Yankees by winning 2-0 and 4-2 decisions at Washington. The Yankees handed the Browns their ninth straight defeat, 10-2, while the Athletics drubbed the Indians 11-1. The Red Sox and Tigers were rained out.

The Giants were about to wrap up a 4-0 shutout for Hearn when Pittsburgh exploded for four runs to tie the score in the ninth, then went on to win on Bell's blast.

The Cubs capitalized on two big rallies, getting four runs in the first and three in the fourth to top the Dodgers. Gene Hermanski, with three hits and two runs driven in, paced the Cubs. Dodger homer by Jackie Robinson and Duke Snider went to waste.

Lefty Ken Zaffensberger won his 10th game and turned in his fourth job of the year in which he issued no walks in topping the Braves at Cincinnati. Roy McMillan doubled in two Red runs and the others came home on Boston errors.

Billy Pierce pitched two-hit ball and Saul Rogovin followed with a six-hitter as Chicago made it seven victories in a row at Washington this year. Eddie Robinson hit his 13th homer in the second game.

The Yankees collected 13 hits, including homers by Yogi Berra, his 14th, and Billy Martin in their blasting of the Browns. The Browns made three errors for four unearned runs and helped by yielding five walks and hitting four batters with pitches.

Lefty Alex Kellner breezed to a four-hit victory at Philadelphia in which Elmer Valo drove in four runs with a triple and two singles.

Europe Newspapers Don't Have All-Star Game Score

(For PM's Fri. July 11) TODAY'S SPORT PARADE By OSCAR FRALEY, United Press Sports Writer

HELSINKI (UP)—Baseball may be modern madness in the United States, but a line drive east of Brooklyn it's strictly a secret. After two days of aerial high-kicking, I'm still trying to find out who won the All-Star game. Up here in the penthouse of the world, where they're getting ready to hold the Olympics, baseball news is more difficult to find than a talkative Russian.

The last word I heard, on leaving Idlewild Airport, was that Musial and company had themselves a one-run lead in the fourth inning. First off, the Clipper captain tried to tune in the game. All we could get was the seventh at Aqueduct. At Gander, Newfoundland, the next day's newspapers hadn't arrived for some reason.

At London my hopes were revived as I dashed up to a young lady at the information desk and blurted: "Haba English, er, pardon me, do you know who won the All-Star game?"

The young lady didn't, but suggested the result might be in the afternoon paper. Well, the English pound took an upward turn, English mothers are amazed that American boys don't wear short pants. The Surrey cricket team put on a bit of "barracking" in its game with Yorkshire. Plenty of news in the papers, all right, but not All-Star result.

My research was halted by a plane call and I'll agree it was strictly a longshot at Oslo, where I was told by the papers that "Tyke" Ryder (op. Professorelle Brytere." That's real big news, in case you don't know it. It means professional wrestling is being cleaned up in Turkey, a feat of terrific magnitude almost anywhere. But baseball? No baseball.

Stockholm proved but little better. "Who won the All-Star game?" "Babe Ruth" from a guy who apparently had heard of the game, on landing in Helsinki, to be asked as I leaped thankfully out of that moonstruck mixmaster: "Who won the All-Star game?"

U.S. Jets Build Up In Korea War

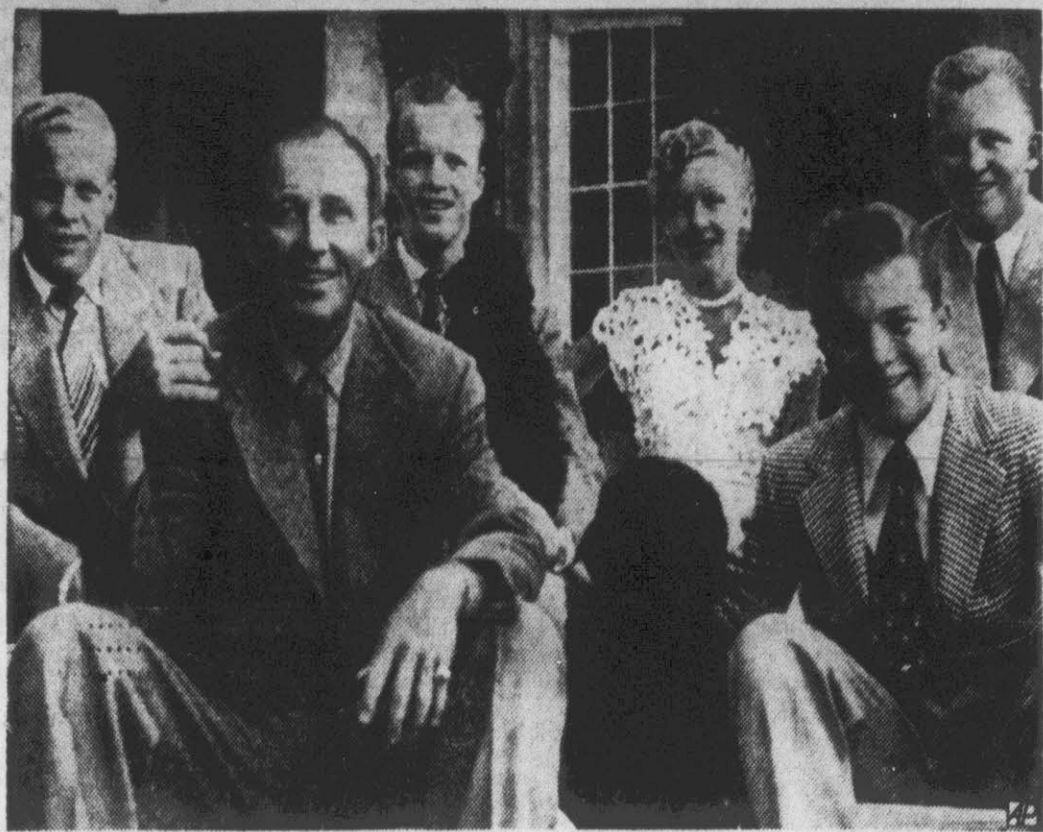

WASHINGTON (UP) — A slow-down in jet fighter shipments to Europe has enabled the U. S. Air Force to boost its jet strength in the Korean war by 30 to 40 per cent it was learned today.

Air Force Undersecretary Roswell L. Gilpatric told a news conference late yesterday that large reinforcements of F-86 Sabre and F-84 Thunder jets are being dispatched to the Far East. He used the term "several hundreds."

It was learned that the great majority of these planes — the F-84's — originally were destined for European air forces under the military aid program.

But, according to reliable reports it was necessary to slow down transatlantic shipment because of shortages of air bases and operating funds in Europe. The Air Force readily turned the situation to good advantage, loading the fighters aboard aircraft carriers for the Orient.

Deborah, a Woman of Courage

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Judges 4-5.

The children of Israel were oppressed by Jabin, king of Canaan. His captain, Sisera, and his army had iron chariots. Deborah, a prophetess, was judge of the people and she called Barak and told him to gather his army and go to Mount Tabor, and the Lord would deliver the Canaanites into his hand.

Barak said he would not go unless Deborah went with him, so she consented. When the armies were assembled, Deborah told Barak, "Up, for this is the day in which the Lord hath delivered Sisera into thine hand." The Canaanites were defeated and all slain except Sisera who fled for his life.

Fleeing from the battlefield, Sisera, the Canaanite captain, came to the tent of Jael, wife of Heber, the Kenite, whose family had been at peace with Canaan. She took him inside, gave him a drink of milk when he asked for water, and when he laid down she covered him with a mantle.

When Sisera was asleep, Jael killed him with a spike through his head. Barak had followed Sisera, and Jael met him and told him what she had done and showed him Sisera's body lying on the floor of her tent, the enemy of her people conquered.

Deborah, a Woman of Courage

SHE WAS A JUDGE, A PROPHETESS, AND A MOTHER IN ISRAEL.

Scripture—Judges 4-5.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL. DEBORAH, a judge, prophetess and a "mother in Israel," is the heroine of today's lesson. She is the only woman judge in all the four centuries the Israelites were ruled by judges. She was indeed a leader, a wise woman, full of courage and also a home woman.

The people of Israel were in trouble again. They had reverted to their evil ways and Jehovah was angry with them so He "sold them into the hand of Jabin, king of Canaan."

He "mightily oppressed" the children of Israel and, as usual, they called on God to help them. This king had a captain who had not only a powerful army, but this army had 900 chariots of iron to bring against the Israelites.

Nevertheless, Deborah was not dismayed. It is told of her that "she dwelt under the palm-tree of Deborah between Ramah and Bethel in the hill country of Ephraim; and the children of

Now we read of the other woman in the story—Jael, the wife of Heber, a Kenite, a descendant of Hobab, brother-in-law of Moses, who seems to have been living separate from his countrymen, and who had been at peace with King Jabin. She was standing at the door of her tent when Sisera came, fleeing for his life.

Jael said, "Turn in, my lord, turn in to me; feast not." And when he had gone into the tent, she covered him with a mantle. Sisera asked Jael for a drink of water, for he was very weary and thirsty. Instead she gave him some milk and covered him. Then she asked her to stand at the door of her tent, and if anyone asked her if there was a man therein, she was to say no.

When she saw that Sisera was sound asleep, Jael took a tent-pin and a hammer, and drove the pin through the man's forehead and into the ground, and killed him. It was a horrible thing for any-

Israel came up to her for judgment." This place was pointed out to travelers for centuries. It was an oak tree, under whose shadow she would sit and rest when her day's work was done, we are told.

Deborah sent for Barak of whom we know little, but Deborah must have known him. She knew that he could command 10,000 men for battle. She told him to go to Mount Tabor, situated in the middle of the Plain of Esdraelon, about 12 miles north of Mount Gilboa, "And I will draw unto thee, to the river Kishon, Sisera, the captain of Jabin's army, with his chariots and his multitude."

Barak said he would go as she said if she would go too. She said she would go, but warned him that the honor of the victory would not be his, but would belong to another woman.

Barak, with Deborah and his army, went as Deborah said, and faced the chariots and the great army of Sisera. Deborah said to Barak: "Up, for this is the day in which Jehovah hath delivered Sisera into thy hand; is not Jehovah gone out before thee?" Inspiring words indeed from a brave woman!

That day Sisera and his hosts, chariots and all, were utterly destroyed by Jehovah's people. Only Sisera himself escaped, and leaping from his chariot, he fled on foot.

one, especially a woman, to do. He was her guest; he felt safe in her home; but she did it for her people. Shortly after this Barak came to look for Sisera, Jael met him and told him what she had done, and he knew then that Deborah's prophecy had come true. The glory of the total victory had gone to a woman, instead of to Barak.

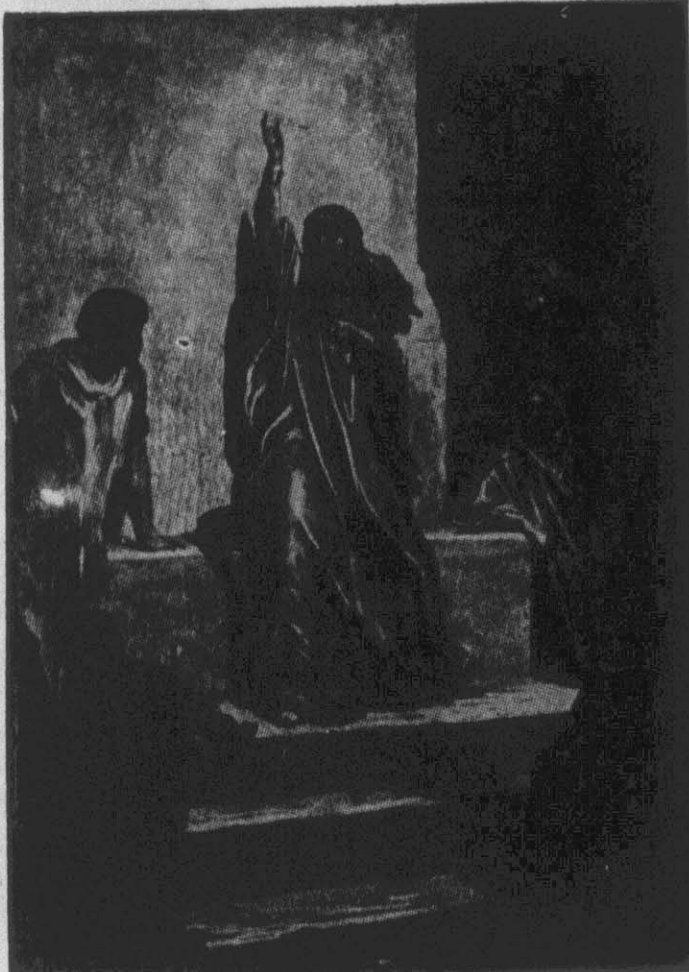

The last part of our lesson is given to Deborah's song of praise. It is universally agreed that this song of joy and thanksgiving is unsurpassed by any poem in Hebrew literature and holds a high place in the literature of the world.

"Then sang Deborah and Barak the son of Abinoam on that day, saying: 'For that the leaders took the lead in Israel, for that the people offered themselves willingly, Bless ye Jehovah, Hear, O ye kings; give ear, O ye princes; I, even I, will sing unto Jehovah; I will sing praise to Jehovah, the God of Israel. Jehovah, when Thou wastest forth out of Seir, When Thou marchest out of the field of Edom, The earth trembled, the heavens also dropped, Yea, the clouds dropped water. The chapter ends with, 'And the land had rest forty years.'"

That day Sisera and his hosts, chariots and all, were utterly destroyed by Jehovah's people. Only Sisera himself escaped, and leaping from his chariot, he fled on foot.

Bible Words to Live by

ROMANS 8:28 is the verse.

"For we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose."

For the reason that it affirms a positive philosophy of life, certified by every finding of human reasoning and underwritten by the promises of God, I found this the most difficult verse to accept, but once accepted, I find it the most reassuring, and after 50 years as a trusting Christian, I have never had one reason to doubt it.

Youth Arrested in Child Assault

DURHAM (UP) — Sheriff's officers arrested a youthful sandy-haired farm worker in a wooded section near here and said today he admitted raping a pretty six year old girl.

A wide search got underway for 16-year-old Earl Hester after other workers on the farm of Dimetrios Keith had answered the child's screams and discovered her bloody figure lying on the floor of the Keith outhouse Wednesday.

They told officers that in their frantic haste to get aid to the child they allowed Hester to walk away. They said he went to the farmhouse and picked up a bundle of clothes and disappeared.

The search for the youth ended almost 24 hours later when officers tramping through the wooded areas near the Keith farm spotted Hester, who offered no resistance.

After questioning, Sheriff E. G. Belvin said, the farm worker said he had attacked the child but, "I don't know why I did it."

The child was released from a hospital after treatment. Her condition was described as "satisfactory." Hester was held in jail here.

Steady Prices For N. C. Coal

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)—An official of the North Carolina Coal Merchants Association, predicting that prices will not rise during the coming year, has urged coal users to stock up during the summer.

J. V. Berry of Greensboro, association president, made the statement yesterday while attending a meeting of the association's directors here.

He said coal supplies are now ample throughout the state.

Doesn't Know

RALEIGH (AP) — Even the state's chief highway engineer doesn't know what the new routings will be in making U.S. 301 a super-highway through North Carolina.

Engineer W. H. Rogers Jr. revealed yesterday it will be at least a couple of months before a decision is made on four key construction links.

Money has been appropriated for the work which will make 301 a superhighway and part of the federal government's inter-regional highway system. The system is a network of cross country roads planned primarily to handle inter-state traffic and heavy military traffic in times of emergency.

Unused Ruling Is Said Misleading

WASHINGTON UP—The For- eign Service Requisitioning Guide, Sec. LI-2 (18M III APP. A) reads: "Form No. FS 146. "Certificate to accompany ship- ments of alcoholics on vessels of 800 tons or less."
The State Department says the forms haven't been used since pro- hibition was repealed. Besides, it said there's a misprint. The word "alcoholics" should have been just plain "alcohol."

Six-Cent Suit May Be Appealed

NEW YORK (UP)—Dr. Bar- uel R. Levine, loser in a six-cent lawsuit, said today he may ap- peal his case to the state's high- est court.

GOP Nominations Caused Real 'Brawl'

Wild And Woolly Frenzy As Candidates Named

By JOSEPH L. MYLER
United Press Staff Correspondent
CHICAGO (UP) — There can't have been anything like it since Vesuvius blew up.

They named candidates for the presidential nomination last night and early today. It is a tradition of American politics for partisans at nominating conventions to stage organized riots for their men.

Nobody who lived through this session, and somehow thousands did, will ever forget it. In the small hours tempers got short and at 2:26 a.m. a pushing, shoving brawl broke out in front of the speakers rostrum over a California standard.

Fists came close to flying when angry California delegates tried to recover a state standard from supporters of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, one of five men put in nomination for president.

It took six or seven ushers and several policemen to restore order. One husky MacArthur supporter was wrestled violently to the floor by a policeman and removed from the hall.

Political conventions always go mad on nomination night every four years, but this one practically exploded. Delegates roared and shouted and made with sirens, cap pistols, rattles and cowbells until every seismograph in the county should have gone off the dial.

It was a sort of planned pandemonium with overtones of jungle frenzy and camp meeting ecstasy.

It was planned, the way a circus is planned, because four-foot balloons, 30-foot standards, and placards and banners in the special colors that show up well in TV don't just materialize. Neither, do such properties as elephant masks, lion heads, and dizzy hats designed to make pretty girls look silly.

The first big demonstration was for Sen. Robert A. Taft, whose non-delegate backers had been lurking for hours at the gates. They stampeded into the arena and the riot was on.

Rep. George H. Bender of Ohio whipped up the crowd from the rostrum. As standards and signs dipped and bobbed in a sort of St. Vitus' dance, Bender encouraged the bearers to sing, shout and chant.

Under Bender's evangelical leadership, what looked at first like a mad action began to take on aspects of a camp meeting. He had 'em sing 'Onward Christian Soldiers, Battle Hymn of the Republic, God Bless America, and My Country 'Tis of Thee again and again. He said other campaigns had failed because the campaigners didn't sing hymns.

House Republican leader Joseph W. Martin Jr., serving his fourth convention as permanent chairman, tried in a way to control the demonstrators.

He tried and tried. Every time he hit the wood with his gavel, the Taft crowd erupted into chants of "We Want Taft." The demonstration lasted 31 minutes.

He had better luck later with the backers of the next candidate — Gov. Earl Warren of California. The Warren people couldn't equal the Taft show because they were outnumbered by hundreds. But individually they seemed noisier. They had more cowbells.

The loudest and longest and craziest bedlam of the evening was produced by victory-scenting demonstrators for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. It lasted 42 minutes—11 minutes longer than Taft's.

The peace disturbers for Ike began their stampede at 11:41 p.m. when Gov. Theodore Roosevelt McKeldin of Maryland was introduced and resumed it when he finished his speech nominating Ike. The crush was suffocating. A couple of bands collided, each playing a different tune.

Abetted by sirens and drums they produced an ear-splitting cacophony that made the arena throb. The costumes and properties were on the nightmarish side.

A papier-mache mountain lumbered past the stand bearing the words, "Ike's Peak or Bust." Paper plates whizzed from the galleries. Something impelled one Ike man to smoke two cigars at once. Another went around waving a lion's head. A girl in a gold dress climbed aboard a man's shoulders and went riding.

James M. Reynolds, a swivel-hipped young man from Pasadena, Calif., son of the pen manufacturer, led the Eisenhower ruckus from the rostrum. Martin looked at him and remarked, "He's the noisiest Republican I ever heard."

The audience was tiring by the time Harold E. Stassen was put in

Capitol Square

'has been forward and none backward since the 1949 Legislature, with the help of the Governor and forward-looking legislative leaders, voted to carry the benefits of public health to every man, woman and child throughout North Carolina, by providing funds which up to that time had been denied by every session of the State's lawmakers body."

CUMULATIVE — Fact is that needs for such services, like capacity to meet them, are cumulative. The need was greater in 1949, and more money was available to provide for it, largely because war conditions for several years before had prevented action. The stupendous appropriations made by the General Assemblies of 1947, 1949 and 1951 came out of money accumulated during the preceding decade when it could not be spent. These appropriations and the services they made possible were in the nature of catching up with the accumulation. Keeping up with the rate of progress imposes a serious problem for the upcoming and future legislatures.

Mouth Is Burned By Disinfectant

A straight shot of lysol yesterday put Mrs. Louise Randolph of Greenville in Pitt Memorial Hospital with burns inside the mouth and throat.

According to reports, the 26-year-old woman attempted to drink some of the disinfectant but failed to swallow any. At the hospital she was treated for minor burns inside the mouth. She was confined there overnight and will be released today.

Officers said the incident took place about noon yesterday at the home of Mrs. Randolph's mother, with whom she lives. They stated that Mrs. Randolph's mother, known as Madam Lee, transported her daughter to the hospital in her own car.

The two live in a trailer at the intersection of N. C. 11 and the Pacolus highway. Her condition was described this morning as "not serious," and hospital officials said she would be discharged this afternoon.

Eisenhower Says 18-Year-Olds Can Be Good Soldiers

CHICAGO (UP) — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said today he thinks 18-year-old boys make good soldiers provided they get good training and have something to fight for.

The general made the statement in talking to a group of pro-Eisenhower delegates from western New York.

"To my way of thinking," Eisenhower said, "an 18-year-old boy, as long as he is healthy, is a darned good fighting man if you give him good training—and if you give him a cause to fight for."

Eisenhower made the remark after Willard J. Magavern, one of the New York delegates, told the general he was a private in the 338th battalion in 1918 when Eisenhower was a lieutenant colonel.

The general sized up Magavern and said he must have been about 10 years old at the time.

Magavern said no, he was 18. Eisenhower went on with his comment about 18-year-old soldiers.

Using Radar To Curb Speeding Will Be Widened

Soop the law enforcement arm of the North Carolina Highway Patrol will be strengthened in its battle against the speeding motorist who travels the state highway.

In the near future "whammies," the radar device for clocking speeders, will begin to make their appearance in the state and will be put to work in an effort to control the increased speeding.

More than twenty Highway Patrolmen from North Carolina patrol troops this week spent two days working with the Greensboro City Police in learning the operation of the "whammy."

Highway Patrol Lt. T. E. Brown and Pfc. Jim Davis, stationed in Greenville at Troop Headquarters here, were among the twenty officers attending the radar training school.

These two officers will play a large part in the operation of the machines once they are put into service in this section.

During the two-day instruction period, the officers watched the radar clocking device in operation and operated it, in order to be able to run the units when they return to their home bases.

The "whammy" clocks a speeding auto as it passes its path and the officer in turn, radios to a second officer down the road to stop the car, bearing a certain license number and charge him with speeding at a specific rate.

While no definite announcement has been made as to when the machinery will go into operation it is believed that it will be in the next week or so.
