Huge Superforts Raid Pyongyang

Record-Breaking Daylight Raid Followed Up By Devastating Night Assault; Industrial Complex And Supply Lines May Have Been Knocked Out By Planes

By WARREN P. FRANKLIN SEUL, Korea (UP) - B-29 Superfortresses dumped 540 tons of bombs last night on Pyongyang, already shattered and burning from a record-breaking 850-plane daylight raid.

Fifty-four B-29s from Japan and Okinawa teamed up soon after darkness for what they hoped would be the knockout blow at the North Korean capital, its industrial complex and supply lines. "Excellent results" were reported.

It was the biggest armada of four-engine bombers assembled for a Korean raid in recent months. And the devastating daylight fighter-bomber assault which preceded it had been the biggest air attack of the two-year-old Korean war.

The one-two blow was the second major step in Gen. Mark W. Clark's "get tough" strategy with the stalling Communists, who have built up a new army and air force during a year of truce talks.

The first "persuader" raid came three weeks ago, when Clark sent 500 U. N. planes to destroy North Korea's strategic hydroelectric plants at Suho. Dam on the south bank of the Yalu River, just across from Manchuria.

Col. Winton R. Close of Los Angeles, who as commander of the 98th Bomb Wing led the night assault, reported "excellent results."

"Our bombs were on the target with good coverage," he said. "The weather was relatively clear over the target area."

Pilots aboard the night bombers said they saw large secondary explosions and fires still burning from the daylight assault. They said they encountered "moderate flak."

Fighter-bombers from the American, British, Australian and South African air forces took part in the day raid on Pyongyang. Three separate waves of about 240 planes each poured bombs, rockets and flaming napalm on built-up supply dumps, factories and railroad installations.

Two other North Korean cities, Sariwon and Hwangju, also were struck in daylight raids Friday. The Air Force announced that altogether 1,245 sorties had been directed at the strategic supply "complex."

The Air Force said utmost precautions had been taken to insure no prisoner of war camps housing U. N. men near Pyongyang were hit.

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP) - Communist truce negotiators have unbound themselves in the privacy of the secret truce negotiations on the prisoner exchange problem, a United Nations spokesman said today.

Brig. Gen. William P. Nuckols said after today's 26-minute meeting between Allied and Red representatives that the Communists "are continuing to talk about the problem at hand."

Repatriation of war prisoners is the last obstacle to a Korean armistice.

Tobacco Pioneers Review Gains Of Past 70 Years

Winslow Recalls Depression Era And Steps Taken To Stabilize Crop

In the depression year of 1932, the three big tobacco companies made more net profit than the entire farm income of that year, J. E. Winslow declared before Greenville Kwanlans last night.

Introduced by past president Guy V. Smith as "the father of the Farm Bureau in North Carolina," Winslow stated that in 1932 the entire farm income was only $98,000,000, while last year farm income was more than 10 times as much—it totaled more than $1,000,000,000.

"Many factors have contributed to bring about that great increase in farm income during that period," the speaker said, "but none have been so effective as marketing quota, Tobacco Stabilization Corporation and Tobacco Associates, Inc."

Marketing Quotas Winslow explained how, in the late 1930s, increased production brought tobacco prices to a disastrously low level. "Farmers appealed to the government in an effort to get something done to ease the situation," he stated. "In a meeting with representatives of the tobacco companies, it was learned that if farmers would grow just about the amount of tobacco needed each year the companies would buy it all and pay a fair price for it."

Farmers organized and with the aid of the government, a program of acreage control was instituted. In 1938, 438,000 farmers in the flue-cured belt voted for marketing quotas and requested price support at 90 percent of parity. That particular program was in effect one year but was voted out by farmers in 1939.

In 1939, Winslow said, farmers lost 15 cents per pound on their crops and also lost price supports. In addition they greatly increased acreage and produced so much tobacco that a surplus was built up. Although controls were voted back on again in 1940, the surplus built up the preceding year affected the market for years thereafter.

Tobacco Stabilization Corp. Former State Farm Bureau President Winslow explained that in the 1940s, the Tobacco Stabilization Corporation was organized. "Since its organization in the 1940s, it has made farmers in the flue-cured belt more than $13,000,000—in addition to stabilizing the price structure," he asserted.

"Parity prices this year will be slightly higher than 50 cents per pound. The 1946, 1947 and 1948 crops have already been sold and the 1949 crop will be sold within a few days. Predictions of a short crop this year will probably account for the sale of the 1950 crop within a few weeks."

Winslow cited the part experiment stations are playing in agriculture as "very constructive." He explained that experiment stations were set up in North Carolina because farmers really didn't know anything about the technical aspect of agriculture and had neither the facilities, money or know-how to conduct experiments themselves. "We now have 16 such stations in the state concerned with every phase of agricultural problems," he said.

Tobacco Associates, Inc. After World War II, the speaker added, a drastic reduction in foreign purchases made development of additional foreign markets necessary. For that purpose, Tobacco Associates, Inc. was organized. It provides that a levy of 10-cents-per-acre be placed on every tobacco farmer, proceeds to go toward development.

Taft Shakes Hands With Ike, The Victor

Declare Russell Is Only 'Winner'

Southern Demos Say Georgian Is Best Bet To Defeat Ike

ATLANTA (UP) - Southern supporters of Sen. Richard B. Russell predicted today the Democratic national convention will nominate the Georgia senator as the "only" candidate who could defeat Gen. Dwight Eisenhower.

At least three Dixie leaders said the South might vote Republican if Russell is not nominated. James Kitchens, co-chairman of the Russell campaign in Alabama, said "Russell is the only Democrat who can carry the South over Eisenhower."

Gov. Herman Talmadge of Georgia and state Rep. C. Farris Bryant, chairman of the Florida Democratic convention delegation, said they "only Russell could" keep the South from voting for the Republican ticket.

"All surveys, polls and opinions show Russell will be the only Democratic candidate who can win absolute certainty carry all Southern border states," Talmadge said. "He will need only 100 electoral votes plus these states to win the election and of sure he could get the 100 votes."

"Russell is the only man the Democratic Party can put up who could win over Eisenhower" and keep the South in the Democratic fold, Bryant said.

Gov. James F. Byrnes, influential spokesman of Southern States' Rights Democrats, said that in view of the Republican nomination of Eisenhower, "Russell is the best qualified candidate for the Democratic nomination."

"If the party will adopt a platform which will unite the party and nominate Eisenhower the Republican convention has served the Democrats too. No lethargy of the so-long victorious will null the

Rough And Ready Loses Prized Championship Belt To Visitors

The prized championship belt which the Greenville Rough and Ready Fire Department has had in its possession since 1948 was lost to a superior Wilson Volunteer team at the close of the North Carolina Negro Firemen's Association convention here Saturday.

Loss of the belt was a severe blow to the local firemen, who at one time defeated successfully all comers for its possession for eleven straight years. The locals lost the belt by the margin of only one point.

The four-day session wound up with the foot and hose reel races on Thursday, topped off by a barbecue dinner held at the Epkes High School recreational center.

Eisenhower-Nixon Team Hailed By Tarheel GOP

Predict Carrying North Carolina In November Elections; Demos Concur That GOP Picked Man Hard To Beat

BY UNITED PRESS North Carolina Republicans hailed the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket jubilantly today—predicting the GOP will carry the state in November—and Democrats generally agreed that the Republicans "picked a good man."

"He will be hard to beat," State Democratic Chairman Everett Jordan said of Eisenhower. He added that "Sen. Richard Russell can beat Mr. Eisenhower, and I think he's the only man who can."

Buncombe County Republican Chairman Harold W. Sams predicted flatly that Eisenhower will carry North Carolina in November. Other Republicans were similarly cheered.

James Longworth of Winston-Salem, vice president of the state Young Republicans' Club, said "I wept for joy" when Eisenhower won his dramatic first-ballot nomination.

Federal Judge Johnson J. Hayes of Wilkesboro, a Republican, said he spoke as a citizen in saying "I feel that Gen. Eisenhower... will come nearer to keeping this country out of armed conflict with Russia than any other man. I regard peace as a paramount importance to the people."

A Democratic leader in Dunn, Clarence E. McLamb, said Eisenhower is "the best man nominated on either ticket since George Washington."

The state's press, predominantly Democratic, conceded that Eisenhower may come close to carrying the state.

Democratic National Committee man Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, said Eisenhower's nomination "makes it imperative" that the Democrats "put forward their ablest man and add new zeal, new determination, new purpose to their cause which has so long served America so well."

In an editorial Daniels said "in nominating Eisenhower the Republican convention has served the Democrats too. No lethargy of the so-long victorious will null the

GOP Congressmen Confer With Ike On Future Work

County Auditor Is Resigning Office

Asks Resignation Be Effective August 15 In Letter To Commissioners; Plans Going Into Private Business

By JESS POINDEXTER Reflector Staff Writer County Auditor Allan Powell yesterday became the second Pitt County official to fall prey to the lucrative lure of private enterprise when he submitted his resignation to the county board of commissioners.

Powell's resignation followed by only a few months that of former Register of Deeds John G. Clark Jr., who resigned March 15 to join the staff of radio station WQTC. The auditor explained his surprise resignation by saying he planned to go into the farm machinery business.

After submitting his resignation yesterday morning, Powell stated that it has been indeed a pleasure to have been associated with the county of Pitt and the board of commissioners. "They have been wholly cooperative in every phase of my work and I certainly have enjoyed working with them," he asserted.

Powell came to Pitt County as auditor on August 1, 1949, and has served as auditor and tax supervisor since that time. During the period from August, 1949, until the present, property valuation in Pitt County has increased 20 percent. In 1949, total property valuation was approximately $49,000,000—today it is nearly $60,000,000.

In his letter to F. F. Hendrix, chairman of the county board of commissioners, Powell requested that his resignation become effective August 15, 1952. He disclosed that he is vacating his position as auditor to enter private business. The auditor said he deeply regretted leaving Pitt County and expressed his sincere appreciation to members of the board for their "earnest desire to assist me in every way with my work."

Chairman Hendrix described Powell as a good and efficient auditor, and said, "His services have been outstandingly satisfactory." The chairman added that he felt sure he spoke for the whole board when he stated, "We are very sorry to see Allan leave the county's employ."

Hendrix said he planned to call a special meeting of the board of commissioners for Monday night at 8 o'clock. "At that time, the board will act on Powell's resignation and consider the appointment of a successor," he declared. "We will also take action on any applications for the position that may come in by that time." He indicated that thus far no applications have been submitted.

Democrats' Turn Next In Chicago; Candidates Head Into Sprint For Last Lap

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Democratic presidential race, temporarily slowed down by the Republicans' pick of their standard-bearer, roared into the final lap today.

With the Democratic convention eight days away, presidential hopefuls opened their sprint in the wide-open scramble to face Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in November.

Party leaders, who have been sitting on the sidelines awaiting the outcome of the GOP convention, generally viewed Eisenhower as a "strong" candidate. They agreed Eisenhower's nomination would necessitate a vigorous campaign and a powerful vote-getter to assure a Democratic victory.

There was no unanimity in the divided Democratic camp, however, over the proper candidate to lead them.

President Truman, who will probably play a key role at the party's convention in Chicago in swinging the tide to a single candidate, kept his political silence. He had no comment on Eisenhower's victory. The president has repeatedly stated in the past, however, that Sen. Robert A. Taft was his "favorite" candidate for the GOP nomination because he would be the easiest for the Democrats to beat.

Four avowed Democratic candidates—Sens. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, Richard B. Russell of Georgia, and Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma, and Foreign Aid Administrator Avelar Harriman—wasted no time in championing himself as the man to tangle with Eisenhower.

The candidates agreed that regardless of whom the Democrats nominate, victory for their party is assured. But each touted himself as the candidate who would have the best chance to win.

Russell said he "will welcome the opportunity" to meet Eisenhower "with full confidence of a Democratic victory in November."

In a congratulatory telegram to Eisenhower, Kefauver said "I am looking forward to debating the issues of the campaign with you in the fall."

In a separate statement, Kefauver said Eisenhower's victory confirms his position that "the rank-and-file members of both political parties are going to have their way in spite of the attempted obstruction of selfish political bosses."

Former General And Key Lawmakers In Party Peace Conference; Map Economy Effort And Governmental Programs; Ike Knows Of Savings In Military

CHICAGO (UP)—Dwight D. Eisenhower began his "crusade" for the presidency today with a promise to trim the budget and cooperate fully with Congress.

The former five-star general met with Republican congressmen at a party peace conference to heal the wounds of the bruising battle for the presidential nomination.

For some members it was a matter of a handshake and greeting with Eisenhower, jubilant about his first ballot victory over Sen. Robert A. Taft for the GOP presidential nomination yesterday. For other small groups of senators and representatives it was an occasion for a pledge of cooperation on both sides.

Rep. Ben F. Jensen of Iowa quoted Eisenhower as saying: "I realize only too well that Congress is the body that really does the job and sets the pace. It is Congress that passes the laws. Naturally, I will cooperate with Congress to the fullest extent in administering the laws in such a way as to return the country to constitutional government."

Jensen said Eisenhower conferred privately with three top GOP members of the House Appropriations Committee—Reps. John Taber of New York, Richard Wigglesworth of Massachusetts and Jensen.

He said Eisenhower called on them to help him find ways to cut the budget.

"We wanted to let him know we were ready to cooperate in every way in helping him trim the budget," Jensen said. "Gen. Eisenhower said he knew himself of plenty of places where some money could be saved."

Jensen said Eisenhower did not say specifically what he had in mind, but that he obviously referred to cutting down on waste in the military machine.

Eisenhower asked Taber to send him specific information on places where Taber believes that Eisenhower, as president, could reduce government spending. Taber would become chairman of the Appropriations Committee of the Republicans win control of Congress.

Other House and Senate members said the general invited them to write or call him at any time with suggestions.

The congressmen streamed in and out of the suite for about an hour. Several members disclosed that they had an advance meeting with the general yesterday.

Rep. George H. Bender of Ohio shook hands with Eisenhower and then burst into a rendition of "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

Eisenhower took the performance in stride. "I didn't know there was a canary in the house," he said.

Bender is the leather-lunged supporter of Taft who led singing at the 25th GOP national convention this week during the Taft Demonstration.

Eisenhower clearly attached top priority to achieving party harmony after the bitter fight for the nomination, which dropped into his lap on the first ballot at the climactic session of the 25th Republican national convention yesterday.

His first act after winning the nomination was to call on Sen. Robert A. Taft and solicit his help in the campaign ahead. "Mr. Republican" promised to go down the line for the party ticket, but some of his supporters were taking it harder than Taft himself, and Ike still had plenty of intra-party hostility to overcome.

His running mate, 39-year-old Sen. Richard M. Nixon of California, the nemesis of Alger Hiss, was picked by Eisenhower strategists, accepted by the general, and nominated by acclamation at the wind-up session of the convention, all in the space of a few hours.

In their wildly-cheered speeches accepting the nominations, both Ike and Nixon promised the delegates a "fighting campaign" against the "corrupt" Democratic administration.

Eisenhower seized the opportunity, at the emotional peak of the five-day convention, to plead for a "united" party.

Coroner's Jury Frees Girl In Shooting Of Stepfather Sunday

FARMVILLE—The young Negro girl who last Sunday shot her stepfather to death with a 22 calibre rifle went free last night after a Pitt County coroner's jury found "no probable cause that she be held."

At the inquest held by Coroner Griffin Rouse in Farmville last night, Edna Earle Ellis, 19, was released without charges in the shooting of Moses Thomas Joyner, 35, last Sunday around noon.

The coroner's jury found that Edna Earle Ellis shot and killed Moses Thomas Joyner through fear of her own life and bodily injury at the hand of said Moses Thomas Joyner. The jury found no probable cause and released the young girl.

Both Edna Earle and her mother took the stand last night and attempted to recapitulate the series of events that led to the fatal shooting of Joyner last Sunday. The altercation took place at the Joyner home on the Carl Turrage farm located three miles west of Farmville on the Wilson highway.

Officers gave this account of the shooting: Edna Earle came home from Sunday School and found her mother and stepfather engaged in an argument. Joyner was threatening to beat his wife and Edna Earle intervened. Joyner then advanced on her with the wheel of a toy wagon in his hand and she shot him through the head with a rifle.

The bullet was fired from close range and entered his brain just above the left eye, killing him instantly. The girl was taken into custody but was released later under a coroner's bond of $500 for appearance at the inquest last night.

Margaret Coates And Charles Herbert Hale Wed In Sanctuary Of Farmville Church

FARMVILLE—Before a setting of nuptial beauty, Miss Margaret Coates, became the first bride to be married in the sanctuary of the new Farmville Presbyterian Church, when she pledged her troth to Charles Herbert Hale of Scotland Neck, Thursday afternoon. Her father, pastor of the church, officiated at the double-ring ceremony held at 4:30 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Edwin S. Coates of this city. The groom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Herbert Hale of Scotland Neck.

White gladioli, used extensively in floor baskets and other arrangements. Oregon fern in standards, and the glow of white cathedral candles in branched-candelabras, made for the wedding a setting of impressive dignity and simplicity. White alacorn bows and fern marked the pews.

Prior to the ceremony, Mrs. G. Alex Rouse rendered a program of organ music. Selections were: "Traumerel" by Schumann, "Liebestraum" by Liszt, "Lullaby" from "Jocelyn" by Godard, "O. Perfect Love" by Barnby, "Evening Star" by Wagner, "Clair de Lune" by Debussy and Schubert's "Serenade." Elbert C. Holmes, baritone soloist, accompanied by Mrs. Rouse, sang, "Because" by d'Hardelot, "Ich liebe dich" by Grieg and "Wedding Prayer" by Dunlap. The traditional wedding marches were used and "To A Wild Rose" by MacDowell was played during the ceremony.

The bride entered the church on the arm of Edwin Massengill, of Raleigh, a cousin. She was attired in a strapless ballerina-length gown of white tulle and Chantilly lace, styled with a bodice-jacket of the matching lace. The jacket was fashioned with a high collar, fitted sleeves and lace-covered buttons down the front. The bouffant skirt of tulle over satin was banded with a row of wide matching lace. Her shoulder length veil of imported illusion fell from a lace cloche trimmed with seeded pearls. Her bouquet was a cascade arrangement of Starlike white roses and stephanotis, centered with a white orchid.

Miss Henrietta Cooper, of Wallace, attended her cousin as maid of honor. Mrs. P. O. Evans Jr., of Hartsville, S. C., and Miss Jean Easley of Farmville, were bridesmaids. They were gowned in strapless ballerina dresses of mauve nylon net, appliqued with lace leaves and fashioned with fitted bodices and full skirts. They wore matching stoles, bandeaux and mitts, and carried arm bouquets of pink and lavender asters tied with matching ribbon.

Dr. Fred G. Hale, of Raleigh, uncle of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were George C. Green, Jr., Sam Haniff and Stedman Kitchin, all of Scotland Neck, and Henry Gray Shelton of Speed.

The mother of the bride, Mrs. Edwin S. Coates, wore a powder blue lace dress with pink accessories and an orchid shoulder corsage. Mrs. Spencer Lewis, of Scotland Neck, aunt of the bridegroom, wore a navy sheer dress with French blue trim and a corsage of orchids.

Immediately following the ceremony, the parents of the bride entertained for the newly married couple at a reception given in the Fellowship Hall and parlor of the church.

Following the reception, the couple left for a motor tour of mountains in Virginia, after which, they will be at home in Scotland Neck. For traveling the bride wore a champagne silk shantung suit with a blouse of azure blue and accessories of brown and white. She wore an off-the-face hat, of the same color of blue as her blouse, trimmed with a rhinestone-studded champagne veil. Her corsage was the orchid from her bridal bouquet.

Mrs. Hale was born in Timmons-ville, S. C., where her father held his first pastorate. She was graduated from the high school of McColl, S. C., and from East Carolina College, Greenville, with an A.B. degree in primary education since graduation, she has taught in the Scotland Neck schools.

Reception

Immediately following the ceremony Rev. and Mrs. Coates entertained the bridal couple, the wedding party, and the guests, at a reception in the Fellowship Hall and the parlor of the church.

The traditional wedding colors of green and white were artfully carried in the fern and flower arrangements used to decorate the hall. In the parlor of the church where the refreshments were served, the note was further carried in the table decorations and the lighted white tapers used extensively about the room. The table was covered with an imported, hand-embroidered, cut-work cloth, centered with a silver bowl floral arrangement composed of carnations, roses, asters, snap-

Widow Evicted By Officers In Desperate Fight

By NORMAN NICHOLSON

United Press Staff Correspondent
LAFAYETTE, Mich. (UP)—Sixteen red-eyed officers, nerves wire-tight by a sleepless night of tense waiting for trouble, stood silent guard today as an "outsider" settled down on the farm homestead from which a kicking, screaming 60-year-old widow was evicted in bloody battling yesterday.

Gov. G. Mennen Williams pleaded with all concerned to "refrain from further action of any kind which might precipitate further violence," pending a possible grand jury investigation.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stevens, broken in spirit at the loss of the home where she had lived for 25 years, rested at the home of a son. Yesterday morning, Sheriff Clark Gregory and 12 deputies, with 60 state troopers standing by, descended upon the Stevens home to carry out the law and removed Mrs. Stevens and her few possessions.

Belligerent neighbors and three fighting sons had blocked previous attempts.

In the last try, only a few weeks ago, Gregory and a deputy were bruised and battered.

He found stout planks barring entrance when he arrived at the farm yesterday. The burly sheriff battered his way into the house by sheer force.

Gregory faced a tighlipped Mrs. Stevens in her dining room. He said:

"I don't like this any better than you do. But the law is the law."

The bespectacled little woman held her post stubbornly as deputies carried out her belongings, ripped a television antenna from the roof and emptied the barn of 400 bales of hay. The items were piled haphazardly beside the road.

Through all this, Mrs. Stevens and her sons remained quiet—but a swirling, roody battle flared when two husky matrons went to the bedroom to try to remove the widow.

Mrs. Stevens' two daughters, Dorothy Stevens and Mrs. Myrtle Hanzek, attacked the women deputies, kicking and scratching. Dorothy, just recovering from a nervous ailment, fainted and later became hysterical.

Kendrick Stevens, 26, rushed for the bedroom. A deputy took a punch at him. The melee was on. Kendrick swung back. Two more deputies jumped him and beat him to the floor. A witness reported that a fourth deputy stunned him with a kick in the head.

The women deputies dragged the screaming, clawing Mrs. Stevens from the bedroom. Enraged, 29-year-old Donald Stevens, who weighs 220 pounds, began slugging deputies right and left.

Clenched in his jaw was a cigar that remained in place throughout the battle.

The family was not subdued for 45 minutes. Donald and Kendrick Stevens were taken to jail, where they were held overnight.

Mistake Profits Better $13,429

NEW YORK (UP)—A bettor at Aqueduct racetrack meant to bet on No. 11 in the first race and No. 3 in the second yesterday. But he was excited and asked the clerk for No. 10 in the first race.

He did not realize he had made a mistake until his ticket had been punched. The bettor argued with the clerk but nothing could be done.

No. 10 won the first race and paid $142.50. No. 3 took the second and paid $9.70. With two $10 tickets, the bettor collected $13,429 in the track's biggest daily double payoff of the year.

Army Utilizes On-The-Job Training For Its Reservists

Practical Experience Is Part Of Camp Training

By ROY HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer
FORT JACKSON, S. C.—There is an Army slogan of "Learn by doing," and during the summer months the reserve strength of America's fighting forces will be further prepared for its role in the defense of the nation at annual summer field encampments over the 48 states.

For the members of the 3015 Reception Center, made up of reservists from six Eastern North Carolina towns, this was clearly brought forth in two weeks of summer training at this sprawling Army base.

For the citizen-soldier, the program as mapped out this year was to promote "on-the-job" training which would make it possible for all personnel to work in the fields which he would be called on to do in the event his unit was called into federal service.

Composed of some 145 officers and enlisted men under the command of Col. Oakley Bealand, of Wilson, the primary job of the 3015th is to process Army enlistees, recruits and reassignment of veterans from Korea. It is the job of this unit to get the newly arrived civilian started on the right foot once he becomes a recruit in Uncle Sam's Army.

This year the local reservists from North Carolina moved in to work shoulder to shoulder with the members of the 3431st Reception Center which is currently stationed at this base, processing men.

Recently, all reassignment men coming into the Third Army area, which covers several of the southern states, have been ordered to come through the Fort Jackson base.

Originally, the reception center has been set up on the basis of being able to send through 800 men at peak operation and the load has been made heavier by the addition of the reassignment men.

Company headquarters was set up within walking distance of most of the company's work area, and all men, both officers and enlisted men, were housed in eight-man tents.

Having wooden sides, with concrete floors and canvas covering, the units did not afford much protection from the boiling 105 degree and better temperatures which ranged on the South Carolina base during the stay of the members of the 3015th.

The tents were being used because a heavy influx of new men into the area had filled up the regular barracks. And, too, the camp following World War II had been nearly deserted and some of the camp's units had gotten into a state of disrepair.

Even as the reservists were training, new construction was beginning to dot the landscape and repairs were being carried on at the old buildings.

According to the present set-up, each of the six towns now composing the 3015th Reception Center (Wilson, Plymouth, Greenville, Morehead City, New Bern and Goldsboro) were broken down into separate sections with one certain job to perform.

During the regular weekly instruction periods of these units in their home towns, they had been receiving the principal theory behind the duties which they were counted on to perform if called to duty.

But here at Jackson, each man was given a chance to put into practice what they had been taught and to become better acquainted with what they were expected to do.

Once the induction station has taken care of the men, they are turned over to the reception center for processing, which takes, on the average, around five days.

They usually arrive in time for their first army meal in the mess hall—as a rule their first function as army men. Following this they are sent to the Initial Clothing Issue warehouse where they are completely outfitted with new clothing.

In groups of fifty, training personnel clothe the men in short order. Most of the workers, made up of army men and civilians, can readily size up a man and fit him quickly.

In the event that a man cannot be fitted by the warehouse, his measurements are taken and he is then sent tailor-made clothing.

The old days of "It's either too big or too small" seem to be gone from the modern army, as each man puts on his new clothing and is observed for proper fitting before he leaves the warehouse.

Most men receive five sets of khaki uniforms, two pairs of boots, one pair of dress shoes, caps, underwear, fatigues and other small items which he is to be issued.

Once he leaves the warehouse he is completely clothed and ready for his new army life.

From the warehouse, the men go to the finance section where they draw twenty dollars to help them "over the hump" during their first month in the army before they receive their regular pay. This is called a "Flying Twenty" and is deducted from their first month's pay.

Most of the second day is devoted to testing, in which ten tests are given, to be used in judging the right job for the new recruit. In the coming days they are interviewed and talk with a chaplain.

Then the process of filling out insurance records, allotments to be taken from the payroll and other records are handled by the reception center which usually rounds out the fourth day.

As a rule, the men are then placed on KP or details for the fifth day or sent to their respective places of assignment to start their basic training.

Some of the men receive their basic at Jackson while the majority are shipped out. Fort Jackson is the home of the Eighth Infantry Division.

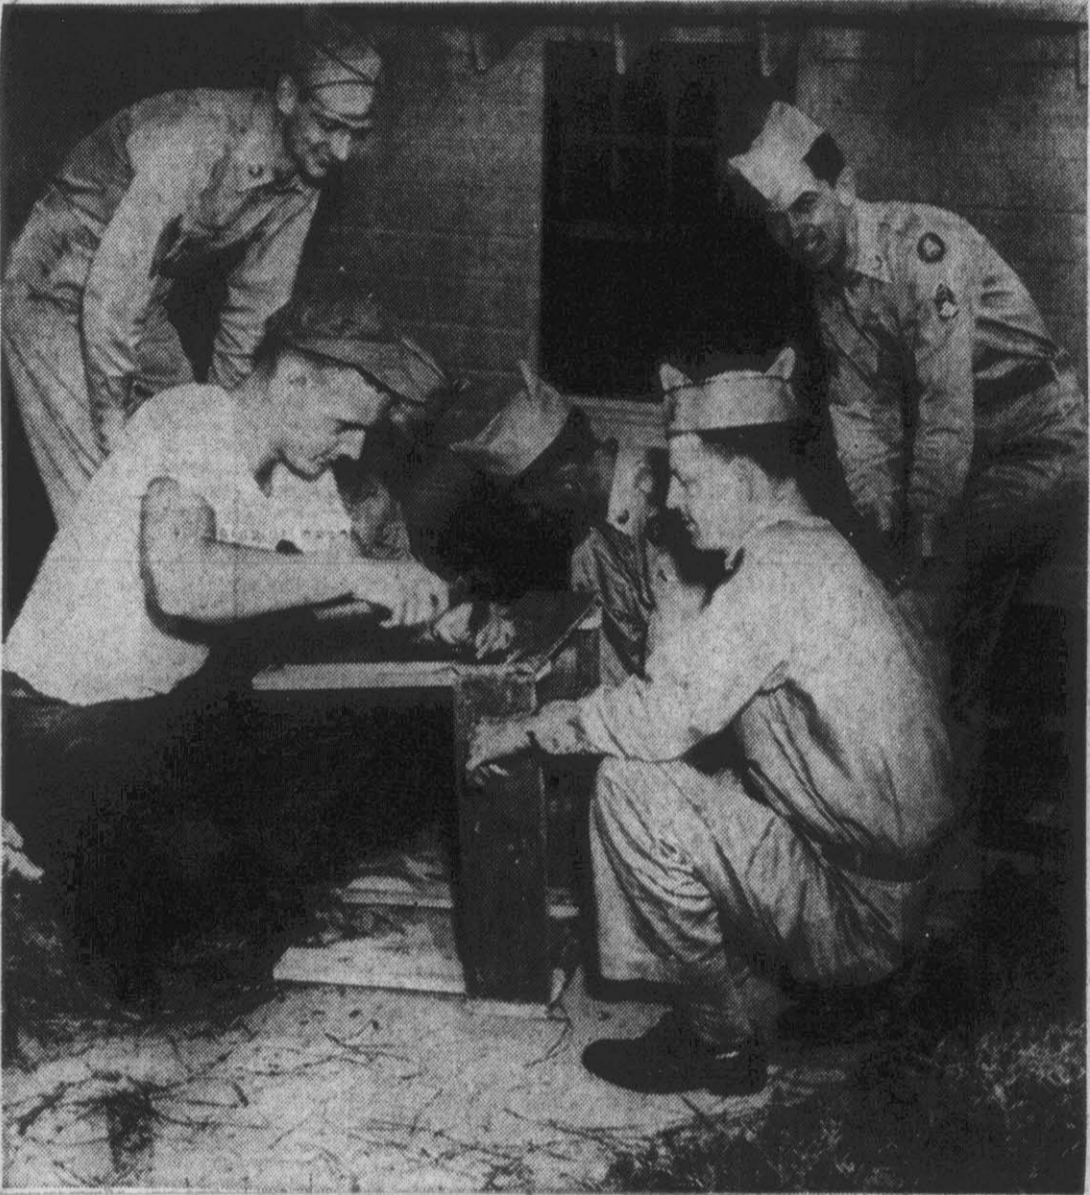

All operations of the reception center were handled by members of the 3015th Reception Center as they worked under the trained eye of the men of the 3431 unit.

Reservist James Griffin (center) receives instructions from Capt. W. E. Little in the administration section of the 3015th Reception Center while at Fort Jackson. Members of the organization worked hand in hand with reception center personnel at the base in one-the-job training.

Part of the sprawling Fort Jackson Army Base can be seen in the above picture. In this area most of the operations of the 3015 reception center was housed.

This was "home" for local reservists for two weeks. These tents housed around eight men each, and living conditions really warmed up when the mercury soared to an occasional 105 degrees.

Members of the supply section of the 3015th are shown above in one of their training classes in which they were instructed on handling of unit supplies. WOJG Clinton Joyner and Master Sergeant George Johnson (to the left) conducted the classes.

After a hard day's work at summer camp, most of the boys above were content to just relax around the barracks and take it easy until the next day. However, ample recreation facilities were available for any who desired to use them.

Strength for the Day

WORD OF LIFE

Some weeks ago reference was made in this column to the power of the Bible in the life of the nation. This is a good subject always to keep in mind; so I venture again to offer the opinion of some who have indeed discovered in the Bible words of eternal life.

Said Washington, "It is impossible rightly to govern the world without God and the Bible."

Woodrow Wilson in a public address said: "I ask every man and woman in this audience that from this day on they will realize that part of the destiny of America lies in their daily perusal of this great book."

General Eisenhower remarks: "To read the Bible is to take a trip to a far land where the spirit is strengthened and faith renewed."

J. Edgar Hoover's comment is, "The Bible is the unflinching guide which points the way for men to the perfect life."

General Douglas MacArthur has written this: "Believe me, sir, never a night goes by, be I ever so tired, but I read the Word of God before I go to bed."

Robert A. Vogeler, the American businessman imprisoned by the communist government in Hungary, wrote, "I treated my Bible as one treats a priceless possession. . . . It gave me strength and assurance for what to my knowledge at that time were the interminable years ahead."

A Sign Of Greenville's Continued Growth

Those who doubt that Greenville is continuing to grow at probably the most rapid rate in its history should get a different outlook with a careful study of the report of the city building inspector for the first six months of 1952.

During the first half of the year, building permits amounting to almost a million dollars—$949,500 to be exact—were issued in the city of Greenville. If the pace continues, 1952 is going to top the all-time building record set for the city during 1951.

In the first six months of the year, permits were issued for the construction of 59 new dwellings within the city limits, along with permits for 15 duplex apartment houses. The dollar value of the residential permits totaled $576,500. Add to that construction the permits for 14 commercial buildings valued at $372,800, and the continued growth becomes even more apparent.

To be perfectly realistic about the construction work which has gone on "in" Greenville during the past six months, however, we can not include only that building which has been done entirely within the corporate limits of the city. Since the first of the year, there has been placed under construction a million square feet of tobacco warehouse floor space, practically all of which is just outside the corporate limits of the city. Similarly there have been a number of dwellings built just outside the corporate limits of the city which required no building permit from the city government.

Another factor which must be considered to arrive at a true picture of the city's growth is the construction work which has been underway on the campus of East Carolina College. In spite of the fact that the new buildings are within the city limits, the city requires no building permits for them, and consequently the dollar value of such buildings does not show up in the official city building reports.

Altogether the construction work which has been undertaken in Greenville and adjacent to its city limits during the past six months probably would reach the three million dollar mark. And that's a great chunk of new construction for a city the size of Greenville during a six months period.

If The GOP Had A Winner, It's Ike

They liked Ike in Chicago.

As a matter of fact it has been fairly generally conceded that the people like Ike all over the country, and the Republicans have named their one party member who can win back the White House if it can be won from the Democrats.

It was a bitter convention battle in Chicago. It was bitter from the standpoint of the pre-balloting maneuvering rather than from the standpoint of a floor fight once the delegates got around to the actual naming of the candidate who will lead the ticket in November. In spite of the unanimous nomination which came after Eisenhower eked out a victory on the first ballot, the scars of battle still remain within the GOP. Chances are the wounds will heal sufficiently to present a solid front for the all out battle with the Democrats; but the cuts are deep and the healing may take more time than many Republicans would like.

The Eisenhower nomination points out vividly two factors which were paramount in the Republican convention this year. The followers of the Elephant in the first place wanted a winner who can bring the voters to the polls in November. Eisenhower with his already large following in both parties and among the independents can surely do that.

In the second place, the nomination of Eisenhower is a culmination of the desire of not only Republicans, but members of both parties, to see new names and new faces in the higher echelons of party politics. The Old Guard of the Republican Party for the most part was down the line for Taft, and bitterly opposed to Eisenhower. The outcome of the balloting surely shows that the Old Guard no longer has the hold on the GOP it once had.

Whether the Republicans have named a winner, we'll have to wait until November to see; but if they had a winner in their ranks, he now heads the party ticket. Party affiliation notwithstanding, the Republicans have named a candidate who is not only popular, but one whose capabilities and devotion to duty have meant much to the nation in the past decade and a half.

National Whirligig

By RAY TUCKER

Every Saturday this veteran Washington newspaper correspondent devotes his column to answering readers' questions of general interest on national and international policies and personalities. He will continue that practice while covering the important political deliberations at Chicago through July.

CHICAGO—Was the feeling between the Taft and Eisenhower people at the convention as generally reported, asks Mrs. T. L. of Miles, Mich. "and do you think it will hurt us Republicans in the November election?"

Answer: The Taft and Eisenhower boys were rather rough on each other. They were not playing for marbles. In addition to the nomination itself, future control of the party organization, national, state and local patronage and influence were the prizes.

Although it is possible to oversimplify this question, it was a battle between the haves and the have-nots, between state and national leaders, between veterans and relative youngsters.

SYMBOLS—The embattled men on each side had a keener realization of the long-range importance of the outcome of this struggle than did the delegates, the general public and even many reporters on the scene. Bob and Ike were, in reality, only the visible symbols of this underlying conflict.

It should be said on behalf of Taft, Eisenhower, Warren and Stassen that they behaved in a far more gentlemanly manner than some of their backers. I would say that the man who antagonized most people, including his own coteries, was Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

He is, perhaps, the most hated man in the Republican Party. Regardless of the decision in November, I shall be surprised if he has a bright political future. He would add no strength to a Republican Administration because of the antipathy toward him within the organization and among GOP members of Congress.

TONIC—However, the 1952 field at Chicago does not match other historic intra-party mud-throwing. It was conducted on a higher level than the Lincoln-Bryan rivalry in 1860, the Jackson-Clay duels, the Sevier-Parker fray in 1904, the Taft-Roosevelt split in 1912, and even the Roosevelt-Smith controversy in this same city only twenty years ago.

Sometimes these exhibitions of deep and different feelings over personalities and principles are a tonic to a party, and the GOP is desperately in need of vitamins. It must try a new kind of medicine, if it is to escape a fifth successive defeat in national elections, which could mean extinction.

SPUNK—When a major party nominates a ticket and frames a platform in an atmosphere of churchly calm, as the Republicans did with Hoover in 1928, Landon in 1936, and even with Dewey in 1944 and 1948, it frequently reflects a lack of issues and interest. The GOP lost out in all those years because it did not have enough spunk or spirit to fight among themselves or against the Democrats.

Whether the bitterness engendered here will weaken the GOP in November depends on how the candidate and his managers conduct the campaign. By studying the Dewey ventures of 1944 and 1948, when he operated through a small overbearing clique rather than the organization and its independent aides, they can learn how not to reunite a party.

AUTOMATONS—"Is it true," inquires M. T. of Chester, Pa. "that the delegates are mere automatons at these conventions, sitting around in hotel lobbies until they get word from so-called 'bosses' on how to vote? Isn't there a more democratic way to nominate men for the presidency than the present system?"

Answer: It is too true that delegates at these affairs usually vote as told by political highups, such as local, county, state and national leaders. They do sit under hotel palms, go shopping, attend night clubs and do some sightseeing until the decision has been reached by a small group of politicians. They take orders.

HEARTENING—Several pending measures in Congress suggest what may be a means to assure a more representative selection. The obvious method would be a federal law providing for binding, nationwide primaries, with the man obtaining the largest popular vote becoming the party candidate.

Even with this procedure, the same old political faces and forces would eventually learn how to manipulate the machinery. The only real way to assure a less boss-controlled convention is for more people to take an interest in politics instead of regarding them as sordid and beneath their consideration.

I must say, however, that delegates at the GOP convention showed an unusual degree of independence. The divisions within so many delegations in the rules and credentials floor fights was a most inspiring and heartening spectacle. I imagine that the Democrats may also have a few surprises for the feudalistic lords, from Truman down.

Selected Short

ITALY, TEXAS, NEWS-HERALD: "Had Congress refused to go along with presidential requests for more power. . . . Had Congress held a tight rein on governmental expenditures; had Congress been more careful about approving presidential appointees, this nation would never have slipped as far along the road to socialism as it has."

Around Capitol Square

By Lynn Nisbet

NON-INTERFERENCE—A good deal of political comment since the May 31 primary has dealt with prospective changes in personnel at beginning of the next administration. Somewhat less attention has been given to probable issues to be faced by the new Governor and General Assembly affecting long range policy. The commentators who assume that Governor Umstead will insist upon a large voice in matter pertaining to legislative responsibility ignore one of the basic characteristics of the man. His policy is more likely to be one of non-interference.

STEADFAST—William Umstead is a lifelong student of government and understands more fully than majority of public officials the distinctive functions of the three major divisions—legislative, executive and judicial. He has strong convictions and has the courage to maintain them, but there is nothing in his long public record to indicate he has any desire to do anything just for the sake of doing something. On the contrary, there have been numerous instances when he offended some of his enthusiastic friends because he had the courage to do nothing when his judgment indicated action on his part would have been untimely.

SPEAKERSHIP—There is considerable public interest, as well as real concern among representatives-nominate, in the speakership contest. The man who will preside over the 1953 house of representatives will have a tremendously responsible job. He will have the potential power to embarrass or to aid the administration, and it is almost necessary to a successful regime that he not be positively unfriendly to the chief executive. For that reason some past governors have deemed it wise to exercise some influence in selection of a speaker. There is presently no prospect of Governor Umstead being placed in that position, and his whole record justifies conclusion he would be reluctant to inject himself into a situation that was outside his province.

FRIENDLY—It has been noted that preponderant majority of the members of the General Assembly have the same general political philosophy as the new Governor. Governor Umstead has no right to expect servile obedience to all of his wishes by the legislators. Neither is there any reason for him to fear a generally unfriendly attitude. The three avowed candidates for the speakership were strong supporters of Umstead in the primary. So were the four or five others who have been suggested as possible aspirants for the post.

CANDIDATES—The avowed candidates are Eugene T. Bost Jr. of Cabarrus, Thomas Turner of Guilford and David P. Dellinger of Gaston. Frequently mentioned as a potential is Roy Taylor of Buncombe, and less frequently heard are names of Oscar Barker of Durham and Lee Whitmire of Henderson. Rated as "available" but highly improbable are William B. Rodman of Beaufort and Alonzo C. Edwards of Greene. Bost and Turner have been in touch with most of the members-nominate, while Dellinger and Taylor have shown a little activity. It is almost unanimously conceded that Bost is far ahead of the field now, and that the only semblance of a real contest is offered by Turner.

BOST—Bost is 45 and has represented Cabarrus County continuously since 1936, for a total of eight regular and two special sessions. He is rated a conservative, and during the last assembly incurred the wrath of school teachers by criticism of their lobbying tactics. During that same session, however, he was chairman of the finance committee and one of the relatively small group of leaders which worked out the plan to increase appropriations $42 million above original budget recommendations, and $4 million above Governor Scott's subsequent requests. While generally opposing new and higher taxes, he has consistently sought to keep the budget in balance and in some instances had led the fight for increased pay for state workers. He is presently a member of the advisory budget commission. His 16 years legislative tenure has been marked with service as chairman of some of the most important committees.

TURNER—Turner is 52, has had four terms in the legislature, the sessions of 1931, '33, '43 and '51. He served 32 months overseas in combat service during the late World War and in post war military government in the European sector, and holds the rank of lieutenant, colonel in the Reserve Officers-Judge Advocate General Corps. Lack of continuity in legislative tenure prevented top level committee assignments. Usually he has voted with the mild liberals. With enough exceptions to raise question about the rule, he has been generally classed as "an administration man," whether the administration was headed by Governors Gardner, Ehringhaus, Broughton or Scott.

STAND-OFF—In view of that comparison of the probable attitude of the leading contenders for the speakership, it is hard to see why Governor Umstead should feel called upon to take a hand. Comparable analysis of other potential candidates for speaker leads to similar conclusion.

LEGISLATION—With respect to enactment of laws as well as selection of their presiding officer, the new Governor is likely to let the General Assembly do its own job. Throughout the recent campaign he repeatedly reminded the people that the Legislature makes the laws. The constitution imposes upon the executive the obligation to recommend action he deems not matter too much as to actual values. A high valuation means a low tax rate, and a low valuation means a high tax rate. This is on the assumption that taxing authorities will not yield to the temptation to keep rates high along with high valuations. That condition would impose additional burdens all along the line, which is a thing least to be desired.

But it is not fair for John Smith to list his holdings for a piece of real estate at, say, one thousand dollars, when Sam Jones, with property of similar value, puts his down at five hundred dollars. That means that Smith pays more taxes for the same type of land or building than Jones does. It is to get around that situation, as we understand it, that early steps are being taken by the commissioners to effect a new land valuation for 1953 assessment.

Important thing about the procedure is to employ men to do the valuation who actually know what they are about and who will go all-out in seeing that justice—and real justice—is accorded to every one. Few will object to revaluation on an equitable basis for all real estate. The problem lies in achieving a status of equality, which is not as simple as it may appear on the surface. Many factors enter into the fixing of assessments. Even the appraisers, whoever they may be, are not infallible and will make mistakes. The best men available should be selected, and if they do the job as it ought to be done there will be a minimum of complaints.

EQUALITY IN VALUES (Henderson Dispatch)
Objective of the county commissioners in ordering a property revaluation for 1953 is, presumably, to achieve equality in values as nearly as practicable. That is a fair basis for taxation.
So long as all property is assessed on an equitable basis, it does

What Other Papers Are Thinking

HUMOR CAN HELP

(Rocky Mount Telegram)
You can't take a lot of things too seriously during this hot weather. It might prove fatal. And some of our top comedians are helping us to bear the heat.
Take that remark of Bob Hope, broadcasting from Chicago the other night. Bob told how that the various bigwigs were coming in by plane, train and bus—and how that General MacArthur "just waded in from Lake Michigan." That perhaps will be remembered long after the Chicago convention is forgotten.
Another of our leading comedians, Groucho Marx, doesn't let the heat or anything else dampen his comedy. Eddie Cantor, not a bad comedian himself, says that Groucho ought to be funny because "he practices 24 hours a day."
It is then recorded how that Marx recently broke off a discussion with his friend George Jessel. "You're not to be trusted," he snapped, tilting his long cigar at Jessel's long cigar. "I've been telling people that for years. Now I believe it."
In an article in the current issue of Esquire, "My Life In Finishing School," the author declares that Groucho Marx can get away with saying anything he wants because there's never any malice in any of the insults.
Groucho is a shy thoughtful, worrying man, who early in life, wanted to be a doctor. He is 61 years old, and a little sensitive about his age, but he looks 45 and acts a good deal younger. He's proud of his figure—he's five feet, eight inches tall and weighs 155 pounds—and he keeps in trim by playing golf and being the first to leave cocktail parties. He reads constantly, dreams of playing Shakespeare, sings Gilbert and Sullivan to his own guitar and writes.

He can be serious—and charming, too—but it wouldn't pay. His business is effrontery.
Referring to contestants on his NBC radio-television show, Groucho says, "Once we get 'em on the program, we demand they speak up. If they don't come clean we take them over to Eagle Rock and shoot them with a warning that they can't use that kind of language on the air."
Asked why he constantly kept that long black cigar dangling from his mouth, Groucho replied, "I smoke. More than that, I've got sentimental reasons. This is the cigar that said, 'What this country needs is a good five cent nickel.' Besides, I'm not through with it until I throw it down. If that's why you're still hanging around."

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

While the adjournment of Congress has given business and the public a period of respite, it seems certain that postage rates will eventually rise generally.

The Post Office deficit for the year that began July 1 is estimated at $670,000,000. Meanwhile, all forms of transport—land, sea and air—are becoming more expensive. Wage rates generally are rising and this may force the government to increase salaries in the Post Office or to lose its best men to industry. Another dash of inflation could easily send the current deficit above a billion dollars.

Congress tackled the postal problem last year and raised some rates. It did nothing this year. Perhaps it was because of the press of other business, or perhaps it was because this is an election year and higher rates would cost the incumbents votes. But sooner or later it will have to bring rates up closer to costs or reconcile the nation to subsidizing the postal service. On the basis of past performance, a compromise can be expected: raises in rates to cover part of the deficit, a subsidy to cover the rest.

Under action taken last year, second class rates go up 10 per cent more on April 1, 1953, and another 10 per cent on April 19, 1954. While magazine publishers protested these hikes bitterly, in the end the rises may benefit the publishers, since the increases may cause Congress to pass over second class when it gets around to raising rates again.

With further rate rises highly probable—perhaps next year, more than a year before elections—it is not too early for large users of mail to start work on two projects. The first is the assembling of arguments why their rates should not be increased; the second is the preparation of plans for meeting higher rates.

For the second, some companies may consider establishing branch offices for the shipping of merchandise cheaper. Goods can move in carload lots from main plant to branches and then be sent from branches by parcel post, freight or delivery services at savings over direct shipments from main plants. They can consider the distribution of local mail by hand. A group of magazine publishers experimented with cooperative delivery of magazines this way, but the savings appeared too small to warrant continuation even in face of the last and twofold postage boosts. There are many other ways to save: using lighter packaging for parcels; taking pains to keep weights of first, third and fourth class mailings at the best weight-rate ratios; reducing the costs of mailing pieces, and reviewing mailing lists. The higher the postage rate, the greater the saving in cleaning up lists.

MAIL ORDER HOUSES EASE CREDIT TERMS
A survey of the fall-winter catalogs of the large mail-order houses shows that all of them are offering easier credit terms, especially on appliances and other durables. One house is offering a limited number of items on a "no money down" basis.

Merchants selling on credit can find out what competition they face from this quarter by getting copies of the catalogs and studying them.

CHAIN COMPETITION ISN'T SO TOUGH
"Speaking of competition," said the Old Promoter, who had left off trying to date our secretary, Miss Cerebra, and was reading over our shoulder, "a smart little fellow can always stand up to it."

"I was visiting a friend who runs his own supermarket in a near-by suburb. A block to the left is a big chain's supermarket and a block to the right is an individually-owned market affiliated with a buying and warehousing organization. I asked him how he survived that kind of competition.
"He told me, I don't mind the chain market on the left. I know its practices, because it follows the chain policy and I know its prices because it advertises them in advance. I can always raid its customers with a special on something it doesn't carry. I can put on buck-eye promotions that aren't in its pattern. I can meet or undercut its prices as I wish. But it's that store on the right that worries me. Being independently operated, it can pull stunts when I least expect it. It can change prices to the middle of the day and it can add services that take me weeks to catch up."

NEW PRODUCTS

ADHESIVE Rubber tiling on ground-level concrete floors is now possible with a new adhesive that holds in the presence of water. It's Chem-Set, by Pioneer & Lacey Co., Lincoln Rd., Middlesex, N.J. It is said to be superior to adhesives that soften or saponify in contact with moisture and alkalis in concrete.

RACK A cook book rack with adjustable knobs has been introduced for kitchens by Saker Industries, Harrington Park, N.J. The rack, which can be folded out of sight when not in use, has a heavy elastic band to keep pages in place.

TRAY A plastic tray for refrigerators and freezers is being marketed by Northeastern Plastics, Inc., 588 Commonwealth Ave., Boston 15, Mass. Available in four colors, it may be used for both freezing and serving desserts.

Hal Boyle's Column

EDITOR'S NOTE: Wilbur Peelle, America's most average guy, has gotten himself into serious trouble while attending the Republican national convention. He tells about it himself in his letter to his faithful wife:

By HAL BOYLE
CHICAGO (AP)—Well, Trellis Mae, I just hope you can realize the spot I've got myself in by marching for Taft, Eisenhower, Warren and MacArthur. I have overnight become the overnight All-American Republican, and I have had to beat down a movement among the stockyard boys to name me for president.

Here's now it happened. Honey, and that blonde who held my hand while the television camera was pointed our way was just joking she said. Anyway, I didn't see her later.
Well, Dear, I didn't have a pass to get into convention hall, and naturally, after a week of civic duty here I wanted to see what was going on.

I was standing at the entrance to the hall when a fellow came up to me and said, "How about carrying this banner into the hall."
"Why, sure," I said. And for 40-odd minutes I muscled that sign saying "Win With Taft!"
Well, Honey, after that, just as they were about to throw me out of the hall, an elderly man with a California accent thrust a "Win With Warren" sign into my hand, and said, "Carry on for a great Republican Democrat."

That was when I got hit by one of the circulating paper saucers they were throwing up for fun. Of course, the saucer that hit me would have to have a state hot dog covered with mustard on it. Honey, there is no way you can take mustard off a suit here for less than $2.50, and a letter of gratitude to the valet. There is no charge for the black eye.

Well, Trellis Mae, then they started the Eisenhower demonstration, and the lady in front of me tossed away her Warren sign and said:
"If you can't carry for Ike you're yellow."
So I grabbed an Ike sign and followed her gamely around until she started talking to a widower from South Dakota—or was it North Vermont?

It became such a madhouse, Trellis Mae, that when they nominated Stassen I jumped up and grabbed a sign. Then somebody said, "We aren't yelling for Stassen now. This isn't 1948."
Well, Honey, the convention was killing time, and finally an oil man from Oklahoma got up and nominated Gen. MacArthur, and said of him that he had "a name that will not die, and will not fade away."

The funny thing about the next 35 minutes of madness, Trellis Mae, is that everybody joined in it. It was late at night and the delegates were very tired.
I don't think they were politically for MacArthur at all. But he was a symbol, like the American flags they hauled out and holed for.

The last banner I ended up carrying said "The People Want

Mac." I am not at all convinced that is true, but it is a possibility. The Republicans are kind of mixed up right now and aren't sure whom they want.

And this letter comes to you from a tired, loving husband, tired of shouldering many banners, Your Own, Wilbur.

P. S. I hate to bring up money again, but send me some more. I need to buy a round of soft drinks for all my banner carriers. We all agreed on only one thing—Gov. Warren has the best-looking family.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS
WASHINGTON—The 62nd Congress was the most inquisitive to date according to the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress, which answered some 50,000 inquiries from "the boys on the Hill."

Known as the congressman's brain trust, the Service attempts to apply legislators with impartial, accurate and comprehensive information on almost every subject. The number of these inquiries has increased in 20 years more than 5,000 per cent.

Burnis Walker, administrative officer, says every member of both Houses of this Congress has used the service. They asked every kind of question, from locating a citation of law or a quotation to major surveys of ground water resources in the U. S. and big studies of such subjects as strategic mineral resources. Some questions can be answered in seconds. Others take weeks to complete. A survey on American Indians filled some 1,500 pages.

Mr. Walker says congressmen get the answers to most of their questions. The Reference Service has some 10 million books and millions of documents within its reach. It has at its command the most exhaustive and detailed index of Federal law in existence. It clips and files some 600 newspapers and periodicals.

"And," says Mr. Walker, "if the experts don't know the answers, they can usually find them some way. We get some gibbles too. Some want to know where there are markets in the government for human hair. We found hair is used in optical instruments. One member asked for a piece of poetry to commemorate the birth of triplets. That we couldn't find, but Kinton Kilmer, son of the poet Joyce Kilmer, wrote one for him."

The department's staff numbers up to 175 at times and ranges from messengers to experts in such fields as foreign trade, public administration, industrial organization, international relations and labor problems.
"It's our job to translate documents, seek correct quotations to fit a situation, find appropriate commemorative poems, compile voting records and refuse to answer questions for use in quiz programs," Mr. Walker says.

Strange Passage

By William Lynch

Chapter 23
 "Don't sidetrack me, Paul. There's something about Kate and you and Danny and John Taylor — but particularly Kate."
 "The last time I saw Kate she was staggering drunk."
 "When was that?"
 "The night you went to the theatre. She called in."
 "Why are you telling me about that night?"
 "Because, apparently something has happened to Kate."
 "What do you think has happened?"
 "Suicide —"
 "How terrible!"
 "I wanted to spare you this, Sandy — but perhaps it's better you should know. Danny won't say anything definite — and there was nothing in the papers."
 "You received a parcel —"
 "It contained a white rose."
 "But why a — rose?"
 "Kate was wearing a rose — that night."
 "Then you really believe this is a conspiracy to destroy your mind, Paul? And us?"
 "I'm going to phone John Taylor."
 "Don't do that!"
 "Why can't I phone him?"
 "If you do that it'll indicate to him that his plan's beginning to succeed. I wouldn't like him to think that."
 "Then what shall we do, Paul?"
 "Ignore the matter entirely. Let's just go on as though nothing had happened."
 "But we can't do that, Paul! It's wicked — foul! The police should be told."
 "He isn't breaking the law."
 "At least we don't have to stay here. We must leave!"
 "Danny's hidden the boat."
 "I know. We could phone for another."
 "To leave here now would be an admission of some kind of guilt — remorse, anyway. I'm neither guilty nor remorseful. But I am sleepy. Is the interrogation over?"
 "For the first time in days Melisande smiled."
 "That's what comes of making false images," she said, half aloud.
 "What's that, Sandy?"
 "I was thinking of John Taylor. He's incredible. Excepting your love for me. Come here, darling."
 "I love you, Paul. I really do."
 "Why?"
 "Don't ask me. There's no reply to that kind of question. You're not angry any more?"
 "No more. Strangely, I'm not sorry for Kate was no good to herself nor to anybody else."
 He sat up suddenly and peered through the half-open window.
 "Almost sunset." He scrambled to his feet and began to collect his painting materials.
 "You going out, Paul?"
 "Only for a little while. I must get a sunset from the top of this hill. I won't be long."
 Clutching easel and paints he hurried from the house, and through the window, Melisande saw him clambering up the hillside, his hair standing up stiffly as in the evening breeze. She was about to prepare the evening meal when — for the first time since their arrival — the sound of the telephone wounded the silence of the house. It was the Exchange and she had to wait for several minutes. Then she recognized the deep voice of John Taylor.
 "Is that you, Melisande?"
 "Of course."
 "Is your husband within hearing?"
 "No."
 "Naturally."
 "Get ready to leave there in a hurry."
 "Why?"
 "Don't ask stupid questions. Do as I say. Danny will bring you safely into town."
 "Is that all?"
 "Is that all?"
 "Yes. For now."
 "I'm sorry. What about Paul?"
 "I can't say any more on the telephone. But please do as I ask. I'm not leaving without Paul."
 "You're an idiot, Melisande."
 "Thank you. Why must I leave?"
 "Do I have to tell you?"
 "Yes."
 "Very well. Paul tried to murder Kate Sale. He might try the same on you."
 "Who told you that?"
 "Kate herself. She's here beside me now. Don't you believe me, Melisande?"
 "Let me talk to Kate."
 "Funny how the room revolved and how the telephone, normally so unobtrusive in its wall-niche, now swelled to the size of Mount Forrester — and this voice, shouting from the grave its imprecations —
 "It's like the man said, honey. It happened the night you went to the pitchers — remember? He strangled me an' slung me against a spike in Wade's Hole."
 "The voice appeared to rise and fall in a series of unearthly cadences — sometimes afar off, like the beat of a cowbell in the hills, and again, close against her brain, hammering in a thunder — and then a man's voice, soft and reassuring —
 "You do believe me now —"
 "I — expect so —"

"And you'll leave at once?"
 "I must talk to Paul first —"
 "You're mad, Melisande."
 "I must talk to Paul."
 "If you must — then say nothing of this conversation."
 "I can't promise that, John Paul is my husband."
 "Is that your last word then?"
 "I'm afraid so."
 "Then, get me Danny."
 "He's out."
 "You're making my task very difficult, Melisande."
 "Exactly what is your task, John?"
 "To protect you."
 "Why?"
 "Do I have to answer?"
 "Not necessarily. I think I understand. I'll have Danny phone you the moment he gets in."
 She hung up the receiver and stood contemplating the black telephone for several minutes. Strange how a few words spoken across miles of wire could change the face of the Universe and blot out all light from the sky.

Monologist Will Appear At ECC

Sue Read, young American actress, will appear in a program "Bits of Drama" at East Carolina College Monday evening, July 14, at 8:15 in the College Theatre. The entertainment, described as "light, gay, amusing," is offered as part of a summer series sponsored by the college Entertainment Committee. The public is cordially invited to attend. There will be no admission charge. "Bits of Drama" will present Miss Read as monologist in a series of skits displaying her talents as an actress. Numbers will include "The Soap Opera," a take-off of radio commercials, and sketches based on such characterizations as a job-hunting actress, a woman at a flower show, and a wife trying to persuade her husband to leave a party. Miss Read is a Philadelphian and a descendant of George Read, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. Attractive in appearance and vivacious in manner, she began her career as one of the famous Powers models. Her voice is familiar to radio fans in such programs as "Backstage Wife" and "Just Plain Bill" and to movie goers who hear her discussions of styles and fashions in the Paramount newscasts. Recently she has successfully appeared on television.

It's FUN to be NEW

This is Janie's favorite dress. Her mother made it especially for her to wear to Sunday School, and Janie is pleased as any little girl to show it to you.

Not long ago, on the way home from church, Janie heard her daddy say, "I feel like a new man. I've put off the old and put on the new."

Janie looked, but she didn't see anything new—the same neat suit—the same Sunday tie. His shirt was, even a little rumpled around the collar. "Daddy, where's anything new?"

Her father chuckled. "Honey, it's all inside, but it's bursting out the seams of my everyday life. You don't have to have new clothes to be a new man. You just stop worrying and have faith. You pray, then go around smiling. That's what's new about your daddy—his faith."

"And I've found it all just since we began going to church every Sunday."

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are few sound citizens who ever were brought up in the Church. They are: (1) children's souls, (2) for the sake of his community and nation, (3) for the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and spiritual support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

The Sport Reflector

By BOB WOODROW

Over in the neighboring metropolis of Wilson, Bernard West, sports columnist for the Wilson Daily Times, has been up on his soapbox plugging for the revival of an All-Star game in the Coastal Plain League.

West believes that an All-Star game is the secret to the league's salvation. In addition to the game, he suggests ball throwing contests, base running contests, fungo batting contests and, "other such features which would add a lot of color to the game and also to the season."

If all these attractions were instituted the huddled fan would probably be wondering whether he had come to the ball park or wandered into a county fair.

It is agreed that the Coastal Plain League is a sick circuit and that something may have to be done to assure its continuation but it doesn't seem that the caliber of the baseball will be improved by making what should be a hard fought game into a cross between an Elks club outing and a Sunday school picnic.

If the Coastal Plain is going to survive then it will do so on the caliber of baseball provided, not on an extra circular activities.

While having an All-Star game may not be such a bad idea it just doesn't seem that one game will stir up so much interest that the teams will be playing to full houses for the remainder of the year.

Look at the situation this way. Back when Snow Hill was still in the league and had a population of about 900, it used to have better than 2,000 fans at some of its regularly scheduled games. There weren't any All-Star games in those days and attendance was pretty good. As it looks from here, the institution of a combination All-Star game and county fair isn't the solution to the Coastal Plain League's problems.

The sudden collapse of the Greenville Greenies came as something of a shock. Though the cessation of operation had been expected for some time, the suddenness with which it occurred was reminiscent of the collapse of a dam.

Had the local club managed to stagger through the season it would have been nothing short of a miracle. First off they were forced to transfer the site of their home games to a normally alien field because of poor attendance.

Secondly the lack of support at the gate reflected in the attitude of the players and finally the culmination of these two, plus numerous other disadvantages, resulted in collapse.

Pity be to the next group that tries to bring baseball to Greenville. It's evident that the people just don't want it.

At Helsinki, Finland things are warming up in preparation for the 1952 Olympic games.

Surprisingly enough, the Russian delegation has dropped some of its traditional aloofness and is speaking to the other representatives.

On several occasions the Reds have become downright friendly with the team members from other nations.

Pietr Sobolev, secretary general of the Soviet Olympic Committee, stated that the Russian entry was the "strongest" ever sent abroad.

Greenies Withdraw From Bright Belt League Play

The death throes of the Greenville Greenies have ended.

At a meeting of the board of directors last night it was decided that operations of the local entry in the Bright Belt League must come to an end. Reasons given were lack of attendance at games and inadequate player interest.

Since the resignation of Manager Warren "Sonny" Russell on July 6 following the forfeiture of four successive games, the local club has swiftly disintegrated.

In a last ditch move to preserve the team the managers of the clubs to which games were forfeited, Ormondsville and Stantonsburg, were contacted. These managers agreed to by-pass the forfeits and reschedule the contests.

Despite the show of sportsmanship on the part of these men the local board of directors felt that continuation of play was impossible. The board is comprised of Guy Smith, Dr. Gene Harvey, Harry Lee Stokes and C. E. Williams.

At the time of the withdrawal from play the local club was in the cellar position, a game and a half out of fourth. A fourth place position is necessary to guarantee a spot in the play-offs.

John Allen Farfour, president of the Bright Belt League, stated that he was sorry that Greenville had been forced to withdraw. He added, however, that league rules called for the dismissal of any team that forfeited five games and that Greenville's position had been exceedingly demerous.

The withdrawal of the Greenville club will leave the city with no organized inter-town league with present plans calling for no attempt to reorganize any type of club from the remnants of the late entry.

Two Lea, Wistful Listed As Favorites In Race

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP)—Calumet's "grandmother" entry of Two Lea and Wistful occupied the betting favorite's role today as the Hollywood Turf Club prepared to stage the 13th running of its $100,000 Gold Cup Handicap.

Two Lea was generally picked to win the $100,000 net prize, making it his second Cup victory in a row for Mrs. Warren Wright's Calumet racing empire.

Ten challengers to Calumet's pair of 6-year-old mares were slated to go postward in the mile and one-quarter fixture, notably such leading threats as Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Phelps' sturdy One, Clifford Moore's Cyclotron, and Moonrush, racing for Miss Anita King and Gus Luellwitz.

Rounding out the list of entries were Dewey Burden's Piquancy and Last Round, Mrs. Gordon Gulberson Arroz, John De Bois Wack's Great Circle, Robert Lehman's Count Me Out, Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Phillips' Story Cloud and Frank Magrin's Skeller.

The gross value of the race, based on 12 starting, was $137,000. The winner's check actually will read $102,100. The $2,100 represents the nominating, entering and starting fees.

Rich deposits of long-fiber asbestos were discovered in southern Quebec in 1977.

Tripp Fans Eighteen As Coupes Defeat Converts

Pony League play yesterday saw the Coupes down the Converts by a 7-6 score.

Pete Tripp hurled the victory, giving up only four hits. He also fanned 18 men and walked six.

Miller started on the mound for the Coupes but was replaced by Ike Riddick at the start of the second frame after the Coupes had scored three times in the first. Riddick hurled the rest of the game, striking out 12.

Robert Carawan, Coupe catcher, singled three times in five trips to the plate.

The winning run came in the top of the ninth when Billy Gardner, Coupe centerfielder, raced in to score.

Tripp was in complete command all the way except for the second frame. In that inning the Converts batted around to plate six runs and led the lead. Two miscues by Coupe defenders hurt Tripp badly.

Giants Play At Stadium Sunday

The Greenville Giants will play Pollockville tomorrow afternoon at Guy Smith Stadium. Game time is 3 p.m.

In their last outing the Giants dropped a 6-8 decision to the Warrenton Tigers. This loss made their overall record 14-7 for the season.

In tomorrow's game Manager Price will probably give the starting assignment to his ace hurler, Leroy Smith.

The line-up for tomorrow's game: Carr, cf; Underwood, ss; Winston, 3b; Clemmens, c; Harris, 1b; Bellamy, 2b; Lee, rf; Whitfield, lf; and Smith, p.

Rosen Ties For Homer Leadership

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Al Rosen's ninth inning home run against the A's last night was an important clutch in more ways than one. Not only did the Cleveland third sacker's blast enable the Tribe to pull into a tie, they won 8-7—but it put Rosen in a triple deadlock with New York's Yogi Berra and Vic Wertz of Detroit for the American League homer leadership at 16.

Groat Playing Well For Pirates

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The Pirates' Dick Groat, former Duke University baseball and basketball great, is batting only .222, but he's hitting when it counts. Dick rapped out a pair of singles and drove in three runs as the Bucs whipped the New York Giants yesterday 6-2.

Illinois Laborer Is Now In Finals

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A spectator who watched Bob Scherer, cool, steady, 21-year-old Decatur, Ill., laborer, club his way into today's finals of the National Public Links tournament remarked:

"That kid has got what it takes to be another Ben Hogan, with more personality."

Well, that's Scherer's ambition—to carve out a career for himself in professional golf—and if he wins the Public Links title in today's 36-hole final he will have taken a long stride in the right direction.

But that last hurdle in the tough, week-long grind will be a high one, for he faces a man who is just as nervous as he is and who has far more golfing experience.

His opponent will be Pete Bogan of South Gate, Calif., who at 35 was the oldest man to get to the quarter-finals in that battle among the stars of the American municipal courses.

Just five years after he hefted his first golf club and fell in love with the game, Scherer blasted into the Public Links yesterday with a crushing 36-hole, 10 and 8 victory over John Halin, Spokane, Wash., college student.

Bogan grabbed the other finals berth with a 5 and 4 win over Bob Kurz, Tusky Miami flier who pilots an Eastern Air Lines Constellation on the Detroit-Miami run.

Scherer and Bogan are the last survivors of a starting field that included more than 2,000 weekend golfers in last month's qualifying play.

Chemicals Win In Softball League At Third Street

V. C. Chemicals defeated Wagner-Waldrop, 10-8, in a game played at Third Street park.

On Alford and Frank Toothman locked horns in the pitchers battle, with Alford emerging the victor on the strength of heavy hitting by centerfielder Don Carson.

Carson whacked out three timely singles in three trips to the plate.

Joe Dudley, Chemicals catcher, contributed two singles in four at bat.

Morgan at third base, and Morris at second, led Wagner-Waldrops attack. Each collected two hits in four tries.

Wagner-Waldrop jumped away to a three run lead in their half of the opening frame but Chemicals rallied to tie the score at the end of the second inning and then forged ahead to stay with two runs in the bottom of the third.

Neither hurler was able to fan a man. Alford gave up two bases on balls and Toothman one.

Wagner-Waldrop 330 200 1-8 8 4
V. C. Chemicals 232 210 x-10 10 4

St. Paul Course Built For Golfer

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—St. Paul's Keller Golf Course—6,577 yards long from the back tees and rated par 72—is a public golf course built for the ordinary golfer.

Visiting pros competing in the $15,000 St. Paul Open Golf Tournament over the course are proving again that they play no ordinary game.

At the end of two days of firing, 47 pros and two amateurs boasted 36-hole totals that were under par.

Heading the field as the 77 low scorers tee off for today's third 18-hole round is Henry Ransom. He counted a 66 yesterday for a 36-hole total of 130-14 under par.

Second with 66-66-129 is Sam Sneed, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and third is Cary Middlecoff, Memphis, Tenn., with 65-68-133.

But not all name golfers are finding the course easy. Tommy Bolt, Durham, N. C., quit after another of his now famous outbursts. Shooting sixes on two consecutive holes, he broke two clubs and walked off the course in disgust.

In fourth place is Ted Kroll, New Hartford, Conn., with 65-69-134. Four are tied at 135. They include Johnny Palmer, Badin, N. C., 67-68.

Spahn Fans 100

CINCINNATI (AP)—Warren Spahn, Boston Braves southpaw, is the only member of the 100 strike-out club today. Spahn fanned three Redlegs yesterday to raise his strike-out total to 101, tops in the major leagues.

TWO ROOKIES HIT
NEW YORK (AP)—As the major leagues neared the halfway mark, each league boasted only one rookie in the 300 class. Catcher Toby Atwell of the Chicago Cubs had a .310 batting mark for Stamps, Washington outfielder, was hitting .308 after getting into 29 games.

Rhodes will be used to help build up the Giants' outfield defense which has slipped since the loss of Monte Irvin and Willie Mays.

Rhodes, 25, a left-handed batter and right-handed thrower, has a .354 batting average. He hit 29 doubles, four triples, 18 home runs and drove in 68 runs for Nashville.

Richest Race To Be Run Today

NEW YORK (AP)—The 64th and richest of all Brooklyn Handicaps will be raced over a mile and one-quarter at Aqueduct today with at least half of the field of 12 rated a good chance to take down the major share of the purse.

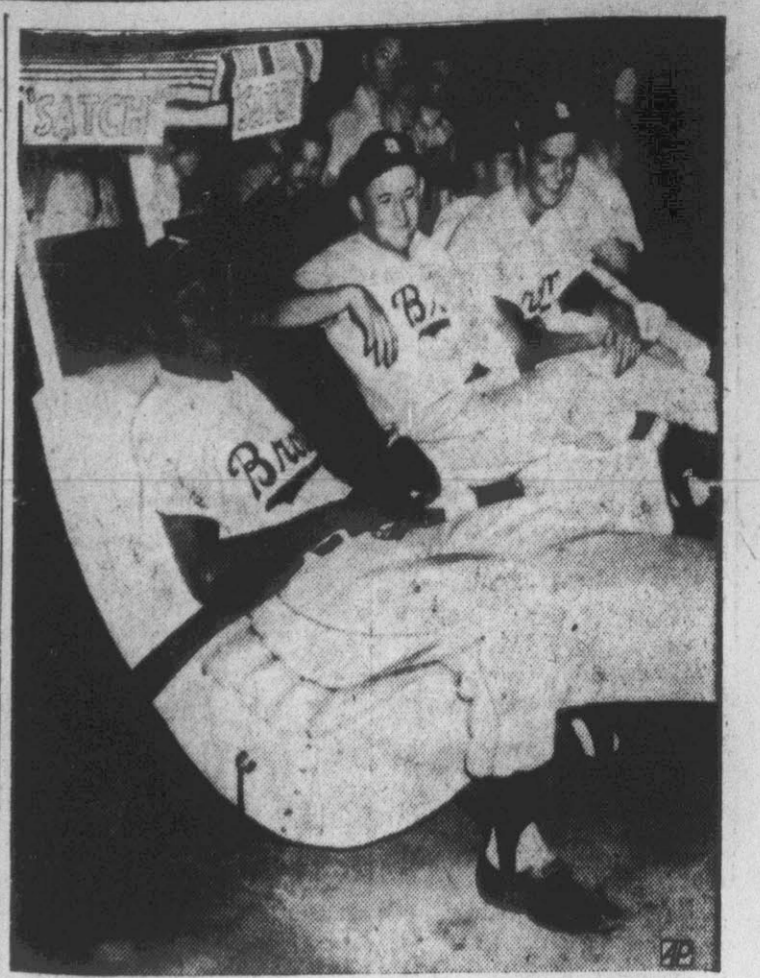

If all of the overnight entries face the barrier, the turf classie, first run at old Gravesend track in 1887, will have a gross value of $60,300 with the winner taking home $42,200.

County Delight from Paul Mellon's Rokeby stables has been assigned top weight of 122 pounds, four less than he packed in his recent third at Delaware Park in the Sussex Handicap.

Goodman Hits Six

BOSTON (AP)—Boston's Billy Goodman, who doesn't care where he plays in the field as long as he gets in his licks at the plate, is pulling away from the pack in the American League batting race.

Goodman collected six hits in yesterday's doubleheader against Detroit to raise his average to .348, 18 points better than Philadelphia's Ferris Fain.

Satchel Page, veteran Brownie relief pitcher of uncertain age, relaxes in an easy chair in the bullpen during a Yankee-Brownie game in Sportsman's Park. The chair was placed in the bullpen for the ageless "Satch" to relax in while waiting for those moments of great emergency when he is called on to pitch. Seated on the regulation wooden bench are (left to right) Catcher Less Moss and Pitchers Bob Cain, Ken Holcombe and Stubby Overmire. (AP Wirephoto).

Basketball Causes First Games Brawl

BY LEO PETERSEN
United Press Sports Editor

HELSINKI (UP)—Basketball, a sport usually dominated by the United States, provided the first international incident of the forthcoming Olympic games today.

The dispute was whether to admit Nationalist or Communist China to the games and it will have to be resolved by the International Olympic Committee.

Avery Brundage, vice president of the IOC, said the executive committee may discuss the China question today, although a final decision will not be reached until the July 16 meeting.

The Finnish organizing committee and almost everyone else connected with the games, except U.S. basket officials, were concerned over the controversy because of the complications which might develop. They included the possibility that if Nationalist China is admitted Russia and her satellites might decide to withdraw from the games. But chances are that neither Chinese group will be admitted.

The U.S., although keeping its hands-off the East-West dispute, let it be known that it was going all-out to win the basketball championship—whether Nationalist or Communist China be among the teams it must beat.

THE POLITICAL DOPE

AS TOLD TO WALT KELLY
By W. POGO

Chicago, July 12: (By Special Correspondent)

There seems to be some question as to who has control over what in the country. Three earthworms smuggled themselves into the convention in the bait can of a man who had told his wife he was going fishing. They were Democrats last time but think they will bolt the party and go underground. They were a little afraid of what will happen if the states get the rights to Tidelands. It means, says one, that people like us (ducks and like that) are no longer safe. If a duck flies over New Braska and is under the three mile limit, the state can claim he was a New Braska Duck. He might of been born in Winnipeg, but legally have to pay taxes in Lincoln, New Braska or have a pretty good excuse.

The Mouse told the earthworm that earthworms wouldn't have this kind of a problem because it was a sure thing that Earthworms wouldn't be flying over New Braska in this administration or any other.

The earthworm said well, the problem is not only high, it's wide and deep. Suppose, for example, a man drills down for oil and strikes earthworms. Whose earthworms are they? Or suppose he doesn't even strike earthworms, poor soul, but actual does strike nothing but dirty oil. However he is drilled so deep that he has some 7,000 miles. Now anybody knows said the earthworm (who seemed to talk with both ends at once) that this fellow is only one mile from China. But he is a far piece from home. Who does the oil belong to? His state, the Federal Government or China?

All of us agreed we didn't want to get tangled with the China question. (Copyright 1952, Walt Kelly)

South Greenville Park Project Has Its Beginnings On Friday

Approximately 150 Negro citizens gathered yesterday afternoon for work on the South Greenville Park Development program, following the laying of initial plans for the development last week.

D. D. Garrett, president of the Civic League, said that despite the fact they were late in beginning on the park development, he was pleased with the enthusiasm that was shown yesterday.

The 150 men and women reported for work Friday afternoon armed with rakes, hoes and the like to clear the area and begin the initial work. After two and one-half hours of work, they assembled for refreshments.

President Garrett presented Dr. H. B. Kelly, a representative of the Greenville Recreation Commission, W. P. Norcutt, and Dr. J. A. Battie. Each of the men congratulated the citizens for their excellent beginning and pledged their wholehearted support until the park site is cleared and completely equipped.

Dr. C. R. Graves tendered his resignation as general chairman of the park development program and Garrett was asked to appoint a steering committee for the development until a chairman is elected. Along with other civic groups, the Ministerial Alliance plans to take part in developing the park.

Hostesses for the event were Mrs. M. Bradley, Mrs. M. Garrett and Mrs. O. Perkins. The refreshments were donated by a number of stores in the city.

The Negro citizens will gather again Tuesday afternoon to work further on the park. Each person is asked to bring some implement with which to work.

Tobacco . . .

Legislatures in flue-cured tobacco producing states passed legislation enabling farmers to vote on whether they wanted the levy or not. Organized in 1947, Tobacco Associates has developed new markets and enabled farmers to sell an annual surplus of 40 percent out of the country.

Winslow opined that without the work of that organization, a surplus would be built up at home that would, in a few years, glut markets and reduce the selling price of tobacco. "If we are able to continue a favorable export program for flue-cured tobacco, we can ship our annual surplus abroad and hold the price up here at home," the speaker reported.

Legislation and Regulation Past-President Guy Smith, who substituted for B. B. Sugg, then introduced another pioneer in the tobacco program — Haywood Dall. Combining rustic witticisms with cold logic, Dall disclosed that abolition of marketing quotas also means the end of price support. He described price support as "the salvation of the tobacco grower."

"Legislation and regulation is the only way to handle the problem," Dall emphasized. Not only farmers, but every banker, warehouseman, merchant, and professional man should be vitally interested in keeping these programs in effect. "Even shoeshine boys should support the program," he explained, because farmers just don't get shoeshines when they sell their tobacco for eight cents per pound.

Dall reviewed the need for a large favorable vote on the two pressing issues—marketing quotas and Tobacco Associates—when the referendum is held Saturday, July 19. "It's just possible we may have a new administration for the next four years," he said. "But if we pile up a tremendous vote in the referendum, we can make everyone see that we are interested in the program and need it."

'Too Indifferent' "No one in the county is against either of the two issues coming up, but most people are just too indifferent to vote. The vote has been small in past years, but we must have a large vote this year — the larger the vote the greater the impression in Washington."

To pass, the program must receive at least a two-thirds favorable vote in the seven tobacco states participating. If more than one-third of the farmers vote against the proposals, the program will not go into effect in any of the states. "Let's get out and pile up a big favorable vote on July 19," Dall urged.

At the meeting last night, Dr. Leo Jenkins, vice-president of the Kiwanis Club, presided in the absence of President Milo Smith. B. B. Sugg, who is ill, made arrangements for the program.

Business Meeting The Kiwanians prayed for a moment of silent prayer and Past Lieut.-Governor El Bloom paid tribute to the memory of Kiwanian Hugh T. Smith, Greenville merchant, who died recently.

Herman Duncan, Joe Taft and Roger M. Collins had birthdays and they donated a dime for each year of their age to a Kiwanis fund.

President J. Glasgow Smith and Z. M. Whitehurst of the Farmville Kiwanis Club, Howard Bloom, East Carolina College student, and Jess Poindexter, newspaperman, were guests of the club.

The Greenville club announced receipt of an invitation from the Wilmington Kiwanis Club to attend a Seventh Division "Ladies' Night" banquet at Ocean Terrace Hotel, Wrightsville Beach, next Friday, July 18, at 7 p.m. Carolinas Kiwanis District Governor J. O. Tally and other officials have been invited.

DUNN (UP) A "Democrats for Eisenhower" club was being organized here today.

THE WORST KILLER

Rep. Doughton Is Honored Today

1 DEAN in 5784s 112 . . . CONCORD (UP) — Democrats, friends and admirers by the thousand gathered here today to honor "Farmer Bob" Doughton, the retiring dean of Congress.

It was "Bob Doughton Day" and well-wishers from all over the state joined with Democrats of his Ninth District in paying respect to Rep. Robert L. Doughton.

A towering figure of ruddy good health despite his 88 years, and doctor's advice not to stand for re-election again, Doughton was here to see his friends.

Rep. Harold D. Cooley was to make the principal address at ceremonies late today in the baseball park.

Doughton announced last February that he would not be a candidate for re-election, that he was stepping down from the House seat he has held since 1911. Since he first went to Washington he had been re-elected every term, most of the time without opposition.

Since the Ninth District adopted the primary method of choosing its Democratic nominee, Doughton had not been opposed in his own party. As a consequence, the May 31 Democratic primary in the district to choose a nominee for Doughton's seat was the first ever held by Democrats in the district.

Doughton, big, hulking financial genius of the House, insisted that he is not a "sick" man and has said that he will not withdraw from the political scene.

T: six-foot, two-inch legislator from Sparta has been mentioned prominently as a choice for the post of Democratic national committee man for North Carolina to succeed Jonathan Daniels.

The House paid high tribute to Doughton in farewell this week, praising him for his leadership as chairman of the important tax-writing Ways and Means Committee, a post he had held since 1933 except for the 8th Congress.

The state's most prominent Democrats were to pay added tribute to Doughton today.

Sen. Clyde R. Hoey, gubernatorial nominee William B. Umstead, Reps. F. Ertel Carlyle, Hamilton Jones, Charles B. Deane, Herbert C. Bonner, Carl T. Durham and Woodrow Jones were to make addresses.

Hugh Q. Alexander of Knoxville, the Democratic nominee to fill Doughton's place in Congress, was to present Doughton with a scroll after Cooley's speech.

Russell Waiting To Set Up His Chicago Offices

CHICAGO (UP) — Sen. Richard Russell (D-Ga.) has to wait for the Republicans to leave town before he can hang up his campaign signs.

Boosters for the Democratic presidential aspirant hung a big "Russell for President" sign on the facade of the Conrad Hilton Hotel yesterday while Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was at the convention hall accepting the GOP nomination.

The hotel management had them remove the sign "as a courtesy to the general," until the Republicans wind up their affairs here.

The Russell group, readying for the Democratic convention which opens July 21, has already moved into the space occupied for the past two weeks by Sen. Robert A. Taft's organization.

LIAISON — Custom rather than statutory authority has created a relatively new and very important "office," that of the governor's legislative counsel, the man who serves as the liaison officer between the executive and legislative divisions. This official is sometimes given the erroneous title of "lobbyist for the governor."

On rare occasions some men who have held the post might have earned that designation. Your reporter hasn't the slightest idea who Governor Umstead will choose for the job, but prediction is made, on basis of knowledge of the characteristics of the new Governor and majority of the assemblymen, that there will be very cordial relations maintained between the two co-ordinate branches of State government, and that there will be no undue influence sought to be exerted by either upon the other.
