The lawn fête given last night on Mrs. E. B. Picklen's beautiful lawn by the ladies of the End of the Century Club and St. Paul's Guild was a success from every point of view. A financial and artistic success is the proper way to describe the fête.

Promptly at 8:30 p. m. the entertainment started and by that time a good crowd had assembled. Every number on the program was faithfully rendered and loudly appreciated by the audience.

The music numbers were excellently rendered and the announcer, Mr. W. Haywood Dail Jr., did not lack friendly support from the audience.

About $100 were realized from the fête. Through the combined efforts of the ladies responsible for last night's entertainment some worthy young lady will be able to secure an education that her circumstances in life deny her.

Mother Asks For Road Sentence

WILMINGTON (UP)—A Superior Court judge considered a mother's plea that he send her son to a prison road camp "to help make a man out of him."

Mrs. Alma Chavis, mother of six, told Judge Howard G. Godwin that her son William, 16, "has always been a nervous child. I think some time on the roads might straighten him out."

The youth was charged with stealing canned goods valued at $5.

Mr. and Mrs. LeeRoy Taylor of Fort Worth, Texas, were recently married in private ceremonies. Mrs. Taylor is the former A2-c Joyce Tripp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Tripp of Greenville, Route 3.

New Ayden Rotary Club President Takes Up Gavel At Friday Meeting

AYDEN—Ralph Hardee last week took up the gavel as president of the Ayden Rotary Club and his new term of office was officially underway.

Presiding for the first time in his new capacity as president, Hardee last Friday night called the group to order and introduced Harry Mumford, who presided over the program.

A bingo competition was held and cigarette packages were awarded all members who completed the game. Corey Stokes was in charge of the spinning wheel.

Rotarian Warren Kinlaw entertained D. W. Allen as his guest, and Paul Chaucery was the guest of Rotarian Will Bullock. Kinlaw conducted a song program with Wilbur Ormond at the piano.

President Hardee called his first meeting of the board of directors into assembly immediately after the club session. It was announced that District Governor Stanley Woodland of Morehead City will make an official visit to the club next Friday night.

Strike Affects Trash Collection

GARY, Ind. (UP)—Garbage collections were three weeks behind schedule today and city fathers blamed it on the steel strike.

Mayor Peter Mandich said thousands of striking steel workers who have been home for six weeks are spending much of their time cleaning out basements and attics.

"They're throwing out everything from stuffed parrots to fringed surry-tops," the mayor said.

Mother of Local Resident Dies
Mrs. Gertrude Bozeman, 82, died at her home in Abokisk this morning. Mrs. Bozeman is the mother of Mrs. J. T. Hale of this city, who has been with her for the past three weeks.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Way Cleared To Obtain Land For Proposed Park

RALEIGH (UP)—The way was clear today for acquisition of lands for a proposed Cape Hatteras recreational area on the windswept Outer Banks, despite protests of bankmen.

A federal-state agreement signed by Gov. Kerr Scott and Conservation and Development Director George Ross on behalf of the state opened the way for the National Park Service to begin purchasing land for the park area. Some 8,000 acres including the recreation area at Buxton-on-Hatteras are available at present.

The state has $618,000 with which to buy land and the sum will be matched by an unidentified donor who has already turned over the money to the National Park Service, Ross said.

BATTLE FLAG 'RECOVERED'
TUPELO, Miss. (UP)—Ten-year-old Bobby Lundy, exploring 100-year-old Bethany Presbyterian Church, discovered a trapdoor and a basement, inside which he found a bullet-riddled, blood stained Confederate flag. Historians said it was the banner used by Rebel forces in the Battle of Bryce's Crossroads, June 10, 1864, which disappeared after the bloody conflict.

Impressions

By MARTHA S. FORBES

Are you a collector? Practically everybody is, whether he or she realizes it or not. Only the rich can indulge in collecting things like china, glassware, paintings or furniture, but all of us are amateurs of a sort when it comes to things like string, rags, old letters, snapshots, broken lamps and coat hangers. Check the closets in your home and see if you do not find dozens of things which you never use. If you do, you are a collector. Half the stuff relegated to the deep recesses of the closets should be thrown or given away to clutter up someone else's space, not only because those items are fire hazards but also because they are the reasons why housewives never have enough storage space. In fact, the trend towards more closet space encourages us in the habit of saving everything that falls into our hands. Attics and basements are other places where "things" gather. Take a day off from your habitual chores and visit your attic. Go with your hair tied up in a dust cap, arm yourself with a broom to sweep away the spider webs, carry a dust pan in which to brush all the loose debris which you will find, and if entrance space permits, hoist a barrel to fill with the trash which you will decide to

If you stumble over them every day, you will be rushing the season and calling for the collectors long before December.

Don't leave those old letters and papers up there either. Ever heard of spontaneous combustion? It causes a lot of fires, and if, in the group of letters, you have some tied in blue ribbon which your husband wrote you before or shortly after marriage, they are probably too old enough to start a blaze without help from natural forces. Besides that, do you want the world to laugh at your private business when you are dead and gone? Better sort them out while you know what you are doing.

On the other hand, some member of your family might become famous, and old letters and communications form many a text for a best seller.

But you can safely discard all those broken bits of sports equipment, automobile accessories, flower pots and such. Better hang on to any furniture, because almost anything passes as an antique after it has been sheltered in the attic or basement to age.

By now you are hot and tired and thoroughly surprised to find that you have been harboring so many useless things. The barrel is full and too heavy to lift down the stairs. So you will probably decide to leave it where it is until a later date, which means that it becomes one more of those collector's items which you have determined to reduce in size and number. The next time you plan to make more storage space available for the things which cannot be thrown away, start with your husband's clothes and fishing tackle. Those things won't seem so attractive to keep.

Now that they are out of the way, go through that collection of broken toys. Make a mental note to give them to some civic club next year for repairs at Christmas; or better still, take them to the lower floor now and leave them in a conspicuous place so you won't forget them.

Sheriff Clings To His Prisoners

RUFFIN (UP) — Rockingham County Sheriff Leon Worsham had a prisoner, a car and 48 gallons of bootleg whiskey today, and he "wasn't about to turn the prisoners over to Caswell County."

A jurisdictional question followed yesterday's eight-mile chase of the car when Worsham's officer pursued the vehicle into neighboring Caswell. After the fleeing automobile overturned near here, Caswell Deputy Roy Fowles arrived on the scene.

He protested the Rockingham officers' removal of the prisoner, arguing he should be delivered to Caswell County. But Worsham, handy with his statutes, quoted a 1921 state law. The law makes it a felony to have a deadly weapon in a car transporting illegal whisky — and gives officers the right to chase a bootlegger anywhere in the state. Worsham said the possible fines and confiscation of the car would add about $1,000 to the county treasury and "I wasn't about to turn the prisoners over to the Caswell County."

The officers arrested two men, but one escaped. The other man was identified as Berkley Sloan of Ruffin.

The man Worsham said was believed to have been the driver of the car, 21-year-old Bobby Scott of near Danville, told officers he lost a wallet containing $211 when the car overturned. As officers searched for the wallet, Scott slipped away.

TAKEN FOR SIDE OMAHA, Neb. (UP)—Omaha police investigated the complaint of a 24-year-old architect. He charged that two youths jumped him, locked him in the trunk of his car and then drove around in the vehicle for more than an hour with him in the trunk.

Eva's Condition Said Unchanged

BUENOS AIRES (UP) — The condition of Eva Peron, ailing wife of Argentine President Juan D. Peron, was reported last night as unchanged.

Peron did not go to his office yesterday and the foreign diplomatic corps cancelled almost all social activities, causing speculation that she had taken a turn for the worse.

A medical bulletin described the first lady's condition as "stationary." It was announced a week ago that her condition was unsatisfactory, following a medical examination.

Mountain Lodge Razed By Fire

JASPER, Alta. (UP) — A flash fire levelled the ritzy $4,000,000 Jasper Park Lodge in the Rocky Mountains early today.

Hundreds of volunteers working in bucket brigades fought the flames roaring through the rambling one-story wooden lodge which was a show-place of Western Canada and claimed to be the biggest resort of its kind in the world.

Two hundred guests escaped safely. Most of them had been dancing in the main ballroom. Tourists pay up to $130 a day to stay at the beauty spot.

Strength for the Day

IMPOSSIBLE — BUT IT HAS HAPPENED
People talk glibly about the Christian gospel. The word "gospel" really means good news. Most people associate good news with a worldly conception of progress. Instead of being good news, the gospel is more widely regarded as good views—sound evaluation of persons and principles.

The gospel of Jesus Christ is this, but it is vastly more. It is the good news that God has forgiven our sins. We may feel, upon hearing that statement, as a dead man would feel who heard that he had been forgiven a debt which he never had any intention of paying. The truth is that people bother very little about their sins. They measure themselves by their neighbors and conclude that, on the whole, they are not too bad. The oppressive weight of sin, the displeasure of God which our willful choosing of evil has called forth—this bothers us but little.

But it bothered God a great deal, if we may use such a word in connection with deity. God was so concerned over the human sin problem that He made the ultimate in sacrifice, namely, the giving of His own Son that sins might be forgiven through the imminency of that love and sacrifice.

The gospel is good news—the best news the human race has ever heard proclaimed. We sinners are forgiven. Impossible—but it has actually taken place.

A Big Vote Is Of Vital Importance

The day is almost at hand in which tobacco farmers will decide whether to continue their marketing quota and price support program another year, two years or another three years, or do away with the program entirely.

There is little doubt that the vast majority of tobacco farmers are in favor of continuing the controls program which has meant so much to their economic security in recent years. Yet there is some question about how many of these farmers have enough interest in the program to go to the polls Saturday to vote for its continuation.

If there were a highly organized movement to abolish the program, there can be little doubt that the vote would be heavy. But with most every farmer realizing that most of his neighbors favor the program just as he does, there is the inclination to leave the "burden" of casting a vote to someone else.

It should be remembered that a two-thirds majority vote in favor of the controls program must be obtained for the program to continue in operation. If enough farmers stay away from the polls Saturday through neglect, there is the outside chance that the program could be killed. That possibility admittedly is unlikely; but there is another point for serious consideration.

This is the year when a new administration will be elected by the people of the nation, and another Congress likewise will be elected. Whether the new administration which takes office next January will be enthusiastically in support of the tobacco program or only lukewarm for the program, no one can say. The same may apply to the new Congress. Unless the tobacco farmers vote for the program—preferably the three-year extension of acreage controls—in overwhelming numbers, they will provide ammunition which will be used by those elements who oppose the tobacco program.

If tobacco farmers expect their influence to be felt in Washington, they must show in unequivocal terms at the ballot boxes Saturday that they are vitally interested in the marketing quota program being continued.

Why Won't They Take His Word?

It seems Governor Adlai Stevenson of Illinois can not say "No" to the Democratic presidential nomination loud enough for his enthusiastic boosters to believe him.

For five months Stevenson has been saying he is not interested in the Democratic nomination, yet each time possible nominees are mentioned, his name appears high on the list, and current reports say he is the most likely man to receive the nomination.

In spite of the overtures from supporters who would like to see him seek the nomination, Stevenson this week made his strongest statement so far against the nominaination. "I have been trying to slam the door for the past five months," Stevenson said. "For the last time, I am not going to run for the Democratic presidential nomination." Although he did not say flatly he would not respond to a draft, he did quip, "I'd shoot myself."

Well now, it seems that the party big-wheels would be reasonable about this thing. We surely do not want any good Democratic governors being forced to take the nomination against their better judgment—particularly when there are other good men (and some perhaps more capable) already in the field for the nomination.

Stevenson's coyness toward the nomination sounds like the Eisenhower statements of several months ago.

The Reflector has stated before, and still maintains its position that Senator Richard Russell of Georgia is the most capable man the Democrats can name for the presidential post. We believe the party big-boys should stop trying to create a Stevenson bandwagon in view of the fact the potential principal occupant continues to refuse to climb aboard.

As the Democratic convention nears, it becomes more apparent that the fireworks over the nomination will equal those of the Republican convention. We can see little to be gained by unnecessarily pouring oil on the raging waters which already will be covered with flames.

By RAY TUCKER
CHICAGO—The Republican platform's savage and categorical condemnation of the Roosevelt-Truman foreign policy assures a campaign debate involving many top World War II politicians, diplomats and military heroes. It may launder shiny but soiled linen hitherto concealed in White House closets.

Whereas the party's 1948 declaration of principles gave only about 52 words to the problem of managing world affairs, the current document's indictment fills almost two newspaper columns. It marks the end, or at least a reorientation, of the so-called "bipartisan" program.

With specific criticism of "secret understandings" at Teheran, Yalta and Potsdam, which were not even mentioned four years ago, the two key sentences for summation and fall refrain are:

"We charge that the leaders of the Administration in power lost the peace so dearly earned by World War II. . . . With foresight, the Korean War (not a mere "police action," as President Truman characterized it—Ed. Note) would never have happened."

IGNORAMUS—The strategy with which the GOP plans to support and elaborate on these polemics makes it fortunate that Truman does not plan to run again. It may also necessitate the nomination of a Democratic presidential candidate who had not even the remotest connection with the ill-fated agreements which, according to the Republican platform, imprisoned 500,000,000 people behind the "iron curtain," dispossessed the Western powers throughout the Far East, and precipitated a costly, tragic "cold war."

Although the writer cannot reveal the source of his information at this time, the platform makers framed it on the basis of evidence that Truman was an utter ignoramus on foreign affairs when, at Potsdam and afterward, he reaffirmed the Teheran-Yalta pacts and refused to recognize warnings that Stalin would doublecross us in both Europe and Asia.

INCAPABILITY—In most of the secret sessions where Truman disregarded this sound advice, which was given to him by military leaders and a few diplomats overseas, he was so pathetically ignorant and lacking in historical background that he relied entirely on Secretary Dean Acheson.

It was also Acheson who counseled American resistance in Korea, despite Pentagon doubt of our ability to fight there, rearm Europe and rebuild a defense machine at home.

Truman's lack of detailed information on Teheran and Yalta is understandable, for Roosevelt saw him only once between the January inauguration and Franklin D. Roosevelt's death four months later.

But the Missouri's incapability of understanding problems after they had been explained to him in the simplest terms was what appalled his advisers.

SECRET—It is almost unbelievable that the secret has been kept for more than seven years, or until the Republican Resolutions Committee here called upon experts familiar with this unexplicated episode in American history.

Although overseas during most of this tragic era, three distinguished American generals were briefed in full about it on their return home.

Oddly, they were Generals Dwight D. Eisenhower, Douglas MacArthur and Omar N. Bradley, now chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Other fighting men turned politicians are also aware of these facts—Wendover, DeWalt, Collins, Vandenberg.

Their recognition of Truman's early timidity and reliance on Acheson instead of men of experience explains why so many members of the military hierarchy have decided to get into politics openly and on their own account. They don't want it to happen again.

It may be that they hope to repair the blunders of the Truman-Acheson combination.

INDICTMENT—These are the background reasons why the Republicans, in an hour of grave international tension and in disregard of the so-called bipartisan foreign policy, have written the most damning indictment of the conduct of these affairs in American political annals.

It may be that this chronicle, as it will be elaborated during the campaign, will loosen the tongues of hitherto silent participants in these disastrous wartime and postwar parleys—at Teheran, Yalta and Potsdam, and at the White and Blair Houses on Pennsylvania Avenue.

COOPERATION—Sitting in at these fateful conferences at Washington, besides Roosevelt and Truman, was the following cast:

Admiral William D. Leahy, military adviser to the White House; General George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff and Secretary of State; James F. Byrnes, Secretary of State; Edward R. Stettinius, Secretary of State; Acheson, Secretary of State, and the late James V. Forrestal, Defense Secretary.

It is obvious that some of these men have talked already, or this account could not have been written. Without the cooperation of Republican minded Army, Navy and Air officers, the GOP would not—could not—have framed a document that blamed civilians at Washington for throwing away the victory and peace—which the generals and the GI soldiers won.

Thus the 1952 presidential campaign will be a continuation and a political autopsy of World War II.

ANECDOTE—Seventy-four-year-old Alben W. Barkley, who wants the presidential nomination, should paste this MacArthur anecdote in his hat:

When an old friend asked the 72-year-old general how he was kept about a presidential or vice-presidential chore, Mac replied:

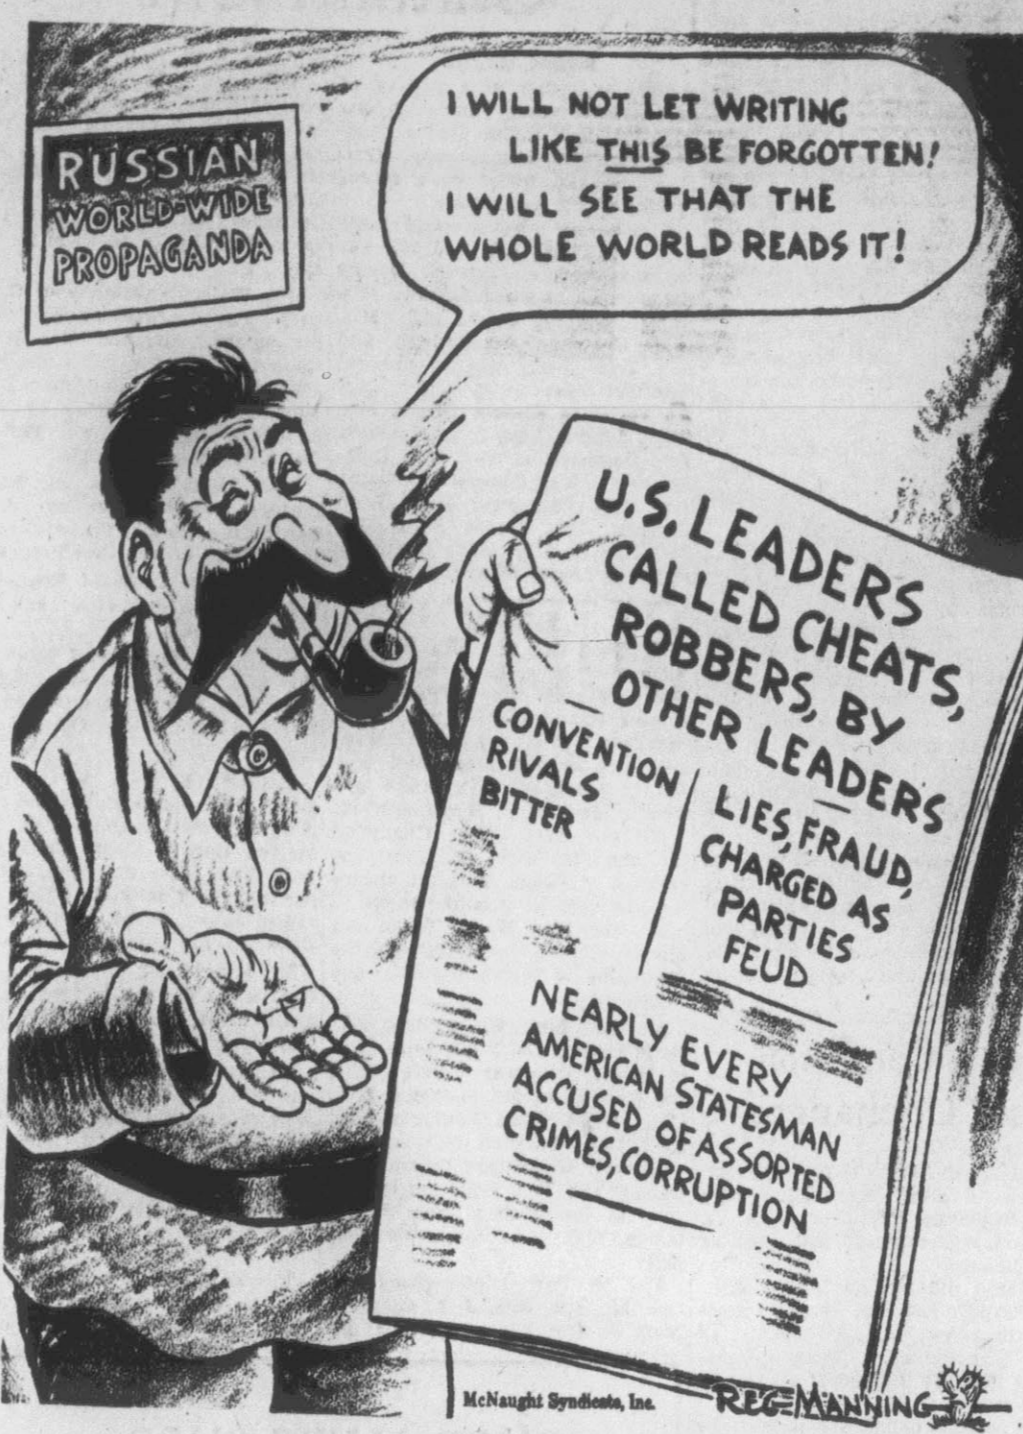

"Listen, George, be sensible. Suppose you were only 21, a new voter, and were asked to vote for me, what would you think or say to yourself?"

"To be frank, Doug," was the frank answer, "I'd be wondering what held you up—or together."

MacArthur agreed. But he still enjoys the lights, the hoarings and the theatrics.

KNOXVILLE, IOWA, EXPRESS: "Our government experts say that many foreign countries could be made into self-supporting nations. Perhaps like charity, these things should start at home. Even in this country nothing appears able to support itself without government help. . . . here we are in a far away foreign places telling them how to become self-sufficient."

This Literature Will Live

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Captain Bill Turcott of the U.S. Marine Corps is now a solid citizen of Greenville by virtue of his marriage to the former Janet Gowen of Greenville. Whenever duty allows, Janet and Turk are in Greenville, living in their home at 1704 East Third Street.

Turk recently returned from a tour of duty in Korea, where he was a member of a photo squadron. The mission of a photo squadron is to take pictures of terrain that will help ground and air troops in their combat operations. Instead of being equipped with guns, their jet planes have cameras in their noses. Consequently, when a photo squadron sees the enemy in the air it runs as fast as possible, which in this case would be about 600 miles an hour.

All of the stories that come out of Korea are gruesome compared to Turk's. He was one of the few who had a pleasant tour, if there is such a thing. He was stationed about 200 miles behind the lines, where facilities are excellent. The Marines there live in prefabricated huts built by the Japanese, good movies are available and the food varies from steak to turkey to chicken most of the time. The emphasis seems to be on steak, which they have two or three times a week. Also, USO shows come to that area.

While we are praying for rain here, Korea is experiencing its annual rainy season. In June and July there is always excessive rain. The weather there is comfortable in the day time and cool at night.

Air Force men bearing the brunt of the war are the pilots of the fighter bombers. Their mission is to give close support for front-line troops, knock out enemy gun emplacements, and deep support, which consists usually of cutting out enemy railroads and destroying equipment.

Turk told an interesting story that illustrates the attitude of the Japanese toward the Korean war. When Marine officers go into Japan on rest leave they stayed in a barracks-type Officer's Quarters, where an elderly Japanese couple stayed as housekeepers. Whenever an American leaves there this couple gives him a send-off just as if he were their own son. When he returns he is given a royal welcome by this couple, because they are so glad that he makes it back alive.

The Japanese people are very friendly toward Americans; in fact, they are adopting more and more American customs as time goes by. Their dress is a particular example of this trend. American-type clothes are very common there.

In Japan you can leave your money lying around for days and nobody will bother it. Most Japanese are very honest.

And I thank Turk.

BONUS — The Republican National Convention last week amended party rules to afford further "bonus" to states which stand by the Republican ticket. The new provision gives membership on the national committee to State chairmen whose states receive a popular majority vote.

One effect of the new rule is to upset the equal representation of women—the most significant effect is to curtail influence of the South in Republican party councils. For many years the Republican policy has been to penalize congressional districts which fall to turn in "decent" Republican votes by cutting their delegate representation in the national convention. The new plan is in nature of a bonus for performance, rather than a penalty for non-performance, and provides larger representation for the faithful on the permanent controlling board.

CONTRAST — Democrats several years ago inaugurated the plan of accrediting bonus delegates to states returning large majorities for the Democratic ticket. For 100 years prior to 1936 the Democratic conventions operated under a rule requiring two-thirds majority to nominate presidential candidates. The present bonus system partly compensates strongly Democratic states for loss of that implied veto power and operates to the benefit of the South in Conventions on the national committee, however, the State of Vermont has the same representation as does North Carolina or Texas. Application of a rule similar to that adopted by the Republicans would give North Carolina, as well as every other predominantly Democratic State, an extra seat on the permanent governing board of the party. In the long run that might be more valuable than three or four additional delegates to quadrennial conventions.

CLEAN-UP — The amendment to the Republican rules came as a part of the general clean-up program growing out of the publicity given to activities in several Southern States. Real Republicans had long protested the unsavory practice of using committee men and delegates from the opposition party and do some cleaning up around their own premises. Odds are that they will not do it this year, unless forced to do so by the same thing that forced Republican action.

PUBLICITY — That was publicity. The Republican gathering was better publicized than any comparable event in history—before, during and after—by every known method of disseminating news. Newspapers, magazines and commercial-professional house organs spent more money and did a better job of coverage than ever before by means of the printed word. Improvement in radio facilities made possible far more complete coverage through that method. The new idea of television was utilized to maximum capacity, and because of its novelty was perhaps the most potent factor of all. The combination of printed word and radio before, during and after the television view of proceedings while they were going on, left few secrets from the public.

There were still the closeted conferences at which deals were offered and "wads made, but this time they were "secret" only as to actual words and facial expressions. The fact they were being held and the complete results of agreements were known to the world immediately. Participants in these causes were fully aware of this prompt and full publicity, and undoubtedly were influenced greatly by that knowledge.

COMPLIMENTARY — These several methods of news dissemination complement each other rather than duplicate or conflict. The printed word is still the most important element, because it constitutes the permanent record that can be checked and re-checked. But printed words lack the force of spoken words because they cannot give the vocal inflections and accents afforded by radio. Then comes TV with facilities for showing the facial expression of the speaker. It is no longer possible for a speaker to say he was misquoted, or that he wasn't

A FITTING CLIMAX (Henderson Dispatch)
It may be pleasant experience and all that, but one can imagine it is difficult nevertheless to sit silently on a rostrum and listen to eulogies of one's self. The heart warms in gratitude and humility to sincere tributes paid for long and honorable service, either public or private, such as were heaped upon the venerable and beloved Congressman Robert L. Doughton in that ceremony in Concord last Saturday. Those who participated, either by speaking or merely by their presence, honored themselves even as they did the chief guest of the occasion.

The event was a fitting climax to the retirement of Mr. Doughton at the age of 91 after forty long years in the national House of Representatives. Representative Harold Cooley waxed eloquent in the manner of which he is abundantly capable when he made the principal address. He has long been a sincere admirer of Mr. Doughton and has relied upon his advice and judgment in public matters. His remarks at Concord were in keeping with his oratory a few days earlier in Congress in paying eloquent tribute on the floor of the House to the service of this distinguished American and North Carolinian.

It was appropriate that Mr. Doughton should be honored at Concord, seat of a county he represented for more than a gen-

Last year's French sunshine is causing trouble in California today.

"Fifty-one was a glorious year in France. The rain fell generously at just the right time. The summer sun was warm without being scorching. So the vineyards, which have been getting more care each year since the war, produced one of the most bountiful crops France has ever known. France has so much wine it doesn't know what to do with it.

The French, not having a Commodity Credit Corporation to buy up excess crops, is trying other means to dispose of the wine. There is a plan afoot to double the French soldiers' daily ration of vin ordinaire. Wine growers have united with Communists to renew the campaign to outlaw Coca-Cola and other capitalistic drinks. The government is encouraging exports.

The heavy crop has made prices low and the American tariff on non-sparking, bottled wine is only 37 1/2 cents a gallon. So exporters are able to lay down wine at Eastern ports at prices competitive with American wine. Beverage retailers who never harvested more than three or four French wines before now carry scores of varieties, each with an intriguing name and a continental label.

At the same time, the French government is planning to include wine exporters under its tax incentive system, whereby certain taxes are rebated in ratio to the amount of French produce sold abroad. This could make French wine even cheaper here.

This flood of French wine at competitive prices has cut deeply into the sales of California and other American wines. The cuts might have been deeper if many Americans had not shifted to wine from high-taxed whisky.

The American wine industry is planning a counterattack. The Wine Institute is gathering facts for presentation to the Tariff Commission in support of a request for a return to the 1930 tariff, when imported wines were taxed $1.25 a gallon. This would add 17 1/2 cents to the cost of each bottle of French wine and more if percentage markups were applied. On that basis, the Institute says, American vintners and bottlers can compete.

IN COLORS CHARTERED
Coloradans favor pink tiles in their kitchens and baths. So says the Tile Council of America which has made a survey of American color preferences.

In general, grays and pastels are most popular, although a minority prefers deep, brilliant colors. Regionally, yellow, cream and grey are favored in the East; pale green and blue in the South; blue and peach in the Southwest; yellow and cream in the West. Rose is the favorite in Tennessee, maroon in Alabama and pink in Colorado.

ON TRADE AFFAIRS
The National Labor Relations Board has ruled an employer had a right to fire a 360-pound worker who was too big to get between machines. The first accredited school of advertising may be established next year at Whitworth College, Spokane. Gas sales to consumers in May declined 4.1 per cent. In May, 1951 the American Gas Association reports. The editor of Sales Management magazine says he carefully read five of those business service letters the other night and got five different "confidential" forecasts on the future of business.

NEW PRODUCTS
ICE: Non-melting, reusable ice for commercial uses is being produced (by Sno-Gel, Inc., Oakland, Calif.) from a mixture of processed powder and water. Since it holds liquid in colloidal suspension the product can be frozen and thawed numberless times without shrinkage or deterioration.

ABSORBENT: An absorbent fluid said to turn dust into easily-disposed-of lint, is being marketed (by Endust Corp., Washington, D. C.) It's also a furniture polish, it is claimed, and will work as well when used with paper as with cloth.

JUICE: A process for the manufacture of frozen juice concentrate, said to prevent separation, has been developed by General Foods Corp., Birming. Div., 383 Madison Ave., New York 17. It is said to allow storage of reconstituted juice for 72 hours without loss of flavor or vitamin content.

LINER: A lunch box liner with compartment for salads, vegetables and desserts is being offered (by Sal-San Corp., Decatur, Ill.). Made of odorless plastic, it's easy to clean, and is said to fit all standard lunch boxes, leaving room for thermos.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK (AP) — What is the most widespread disease in the modern world?

A good case might be made for that death in life, that ennui of the spirit, called boredom.

It is the high price modern man pays for having so much leisure he doesn't know what to do with himself. It is peculiarly virulent in civilized nations. Savages aren't so susceptible to the ravages of boredom. They are too busy trying to stay alive.

Many physicians, if pressed, will admit that perhaps one third of the patients who crowd their waiting rooms are suffering basically from nothing but boredom. They go there hoping the doctor will find something wrong with them, something to give them the excitement of a real worry. But the medical profession from so far hasn't been able to concoct a really effective boredom pill.

"You are too lousey you need to relax," such patients often are told. This only encourages them to feel more bored with it all. My theory is it would be better if the doctor said to them: "You have a bad heart you may die at any moment."

There is nothing that gets rid of boredom faster than the fear you won't live to enjoy it. More people, weary of living, commit suicide in hotel bedrooms in peacetime than destroy themselves on the battlefields of war.

We do our children wrong in educating them to believe freedom from worry will bring them happiness. A man with nothing to worry about is only too fall asleep. That is the nature of the critter, and human nature doesn't readily change.

Boredom strikes the very poor as well as the very wealthy. Psychologists have found that the Boverly bum isn't happy because he has ducked his responsibilities in life. He is even more bored and frustrated than an idle rich man, who has at least one thing left to fret over: He can't take his money with him when he goes.

Most boredom seems to spring from a feeling of lack of accomplishment. The tedious tasks, the routine of the daily rat that wears out the lives of many people in our complicated civilization, gives them too small a sense of importance, of being really needed.

A man isn't depressed so much by the fact that he is only a cog in a big machine as by the realization that even as a cog he isn't really essential to the machine. It is easy to go another cog.

The further men get from nature the more they suffer from boredom. They weary their mind by fretting indoors when they should be tiring their muscles with normal, healthy exercise outdoors. A man who chops wood for two hours will not only relieve himself of boredom he will have something to burn in his fireplace.

This is the best cure for boredom—use your energy doing something worthwhile. You can't help but feel better.

I know one city dweller who solved his boredom by buying a parrot and teaching it to eat spaghetti.

"Everybody said I couldn't do it, but I did," he said. "I never heard of anybody in the world before ever teaching a parrot to eat spaghetti."

Today he is a happy man. The only bored member of his household is the parrot. Unless there is a crowd around watching him eat spaghetti he feels restless and unhappy.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS
WASHINGTON — Scholars in India call the U. S. the "land of libraries," says Murali Lal Nagar, a handsome, intellectual young man from Uttar Pradesh, here on a special mission under a Fulbright grant to work at the Library of Congress.

Mr. Nagar is helping to organize the South Asia division of the Library's Orientalia division. This section covers not only India but Pakistan, Ceylon, Nepal, Bhutan, Sikkim and Tibet. It has some 400,000 books. About 7,000 books are in 14 Indian languages, such as Hindi, Sanskrit, Bengali, Urdu and Marathi, all of which Mr. Nagar speaks.

Mr. Nagar is so enthusiastic about his mission that he works far into the night, and Saturdays and Sundays as well. "As soon as I entered the library," he told me, with shining eyes, "I said 'This is the nation's pride, a great library of a great country.' He was greatly impressed by my warm and friendly greeting which greeted him upon his arrival by air in New York last October. I felt just as in my own home, and this feeling grows daily," he said.

Working quietly and efficiently at his side is his slender young bride. She is thoughtful and shy, with long dark braids, and her face too lights up as she talks of the work they're doing and how happy they are to be here. A graduate of Agra University at Uttar Pradesh, her favorite subject is math, but her master's degree is in Hindi. Her name "Sarla" connotes simplicity.

"When Indian girls marry, they change their first names, but Sarla's fits her so well. I wanted her to keep it. Mr. Nagar, smiling fondly at Sarla, who he described as "more a friend than just a wife."

Mr. Nagar himself is a graduate of Benares University and son of a great scholar and authority on the Atha Veda, last of four sacred scriptures of the Hindus. The young Nagars already have many close friends in Washington. When they celebrated their first wedding anniversary they were hard put to whom they'd ask to help them. "We didn't know whom to exclude, but we couldn't accommodate all our new friends in our small apartment," Mr. Nagar explained. "At last we chose 14. One was an Indian, the other 13 were American — one an American Indian."

Strange Passage

By William Lynch AP NewsEditor

Chapter 31
The beam of light streaked down again and spotlighted his passage up the farther slope, following with ease, sometimes anticipating a maneuver to avoid an obstacle, but returning always to its point of focus, the struggling, cursing, sweating figure that half-climbed, half-fought its way towards the summit.

The searchlight stayed with him until he breasted the surface and disappeared into the shoulder-high shrubs that lined the adjacent roadway. Then it snapped off with an air of finality and a sickly moon picked up the fleeing figure as it moved along the road, towards Thirteen Grover Street.

He forced a rear window of the house and felt his way through the darkness of the lower floor room to the narrow staircase. He found his way without difficulty into the studio. Through the uncovered window panes the moon threw its pale light across the room and into the mirror of the dressing table.

He strode to the dressing table and reached for the drawer. His fingers felt into the farther right corner and fastened upon an automatic pistol. Bringing it forth, he felt with the heel of his hand the magazine. Then he shifted the safety catch and with his thumb pulled back the hammer until it gripped after the second click. Instinctively, he closed the drawer and glanced up into the mirror.

He fell back as the dulled features of Kate stared out at him from the mirror, and raised the pistol, but did not fire it.

It was an illusion, like the rest of it! Like there being no rotting carcass at the bottom of Wade's Hole. Like his marriage to Melisande and the menace of the ubiquitous Danny. It was an illusion of the mind, all of it, and this was his studio in Grover Street and this of seeing Kate in the mirror was the result of a disordered imagination.

But he was suddenly strong and in his hands here was the power to destroy the false and restore reason.

"Hullo, Paul."

Illusion had a tongue, then! It spoke!

Four times he pressed the trigger, smashing the glass of the mirror into a fantastic pattern of jagged streamers. The room spun with the detonation of .45 calibre stuff within its tiny confines and the air was thick with the pungent smell of gunpowder.

"You can't do it that way, Paul. I'm over here."

He wheeled, then, to face the settee. There was the figure of Kate, grinning perpetually outwards at him—Gardiner yelled a howl of fear and aimed the pistol, but at the moment of his aiming an orange streak flashed out from the settee and once again the walls of the room shuddered under the weight of sound.

Gardiner's pistol fell from his relaxed fingers and clattered dully upon the floor. The figure upon the settee rose and approached the stricken artist. Her arms reached out and broke the momentum of his fall and when the body was full relaxed upon the uncovered boards, she folded his arms neatly across his breast and straightened his legs until it seemed that he merely slept. Then she gave him a final, wistful look and silently left the room. At the foot of the stairs she paused and began to fumble with a rose that was pinned to her dress, but she thought better of it and went quickly out into the darkness of Grover Street.

On a late afternoon of mid-summer, Melisande sat staring through the window of a stationary carriage. John Taylor stood on the platform, idly leaning against the open window.

"Well, it's all over now, Melisande—"

"Perhaps you were a trifle lucky, all things considered."

"Lucky, John?"
Taylor squirmed.

"Oh, I know what you're thinking. I expect you blame me for the whole business—"

"I think all the blame has been fixed. Paul's dead. Kate's plea of self-defense—his her out—you proved your point—and all Danny's got to worry about is dying of cancer in two year's time. I'm on my way home and everything's fine."

"You're bitter, aren't you?"
The train whistle blew its first warning.

"I'm a little disappointed with you scientists, that's all. You had to wait until Paul tried to kill somebody before you discovered he was mad—then you hounded him to his death. It's a funny business—"

"Killing's not very funny, Melisande—"

The train began to move slowly away. Taylor walked along beside the window.

"I knew he was mad the day I married him," Melisande said. "Then why did you do it?"

"I won't know that until I get back home. Maybe I won't know until I have a few bazaar afternoons with the Vicar. But when I do find out, John, I'll write you a letter about it—for use in your next text-book."

She was sitting, now, from some distance.

"It's been nice knowing you. But—you should've been an artist."

John Taylor stood at the end of the platform, waving, until the train vanished round a curve. He strolled slowly down the length of the platform, his mind thoughtfully preoccupied with the proposition that the children of the vicarage should associate only with God and the church committee, and the children of the streets with the devils of their own creation—and any deviation from this principle should rightfully bring that registered by a fowling hen when it suddenly sees a portion of its brood nonchalantly taking to a mud pool.

The smile pleased him and he was resolved to write Melisande that very night and tell her about it. Better still, he would telephone her. Or maybe he would take the week-end excursion train—

Motorcycle Cop Is Hill-Climber

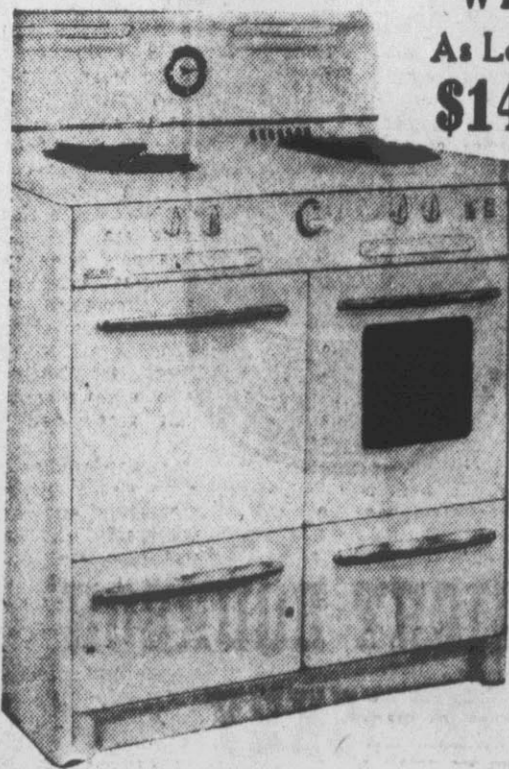

ENCINO, Calif. — (AP) — Two -year-olds, having a wonderful time chucking rocks at traffic recently failed to reckon with the hill-climbing skill of motor officer W. W. Offutt.

Offutt watched a few rocks bounce off the roofs of passing cars then took careful aim and sent his heavy motorcycle hurtling off the boulevard and up the hill toward the two boys.

Juvenile authorities took disciplinary action later, but they doubted if it made as much of an impression on the pair as the charging motorcycle.

By BOB HILLDEUF

The major leagues have nothing on Greenville.

Tonight at 7:30 p.m. the Pony League All-Star squad will meet a group of boys from the rest of the league at Guy Smith Stadium. This game will give the fans of Greenville a chance to see the team that will represent them at the Regional Six tournament at North Charleston, South Carolina. This tournament begins on July 21 and runs through the 25.

In order for these boys to go to Charleston at least $300 is needed. This money would go to cover transportation and food expenses. No money is charged for the game but the hat will be passed and it is hoped that the contribution will be liberal.

The boys from the Greenville Pony League have a good ball club and should be able to make a very creditable showing in the South Carolina tournament.

There have been some big plans made for the youth of Greenville in the next few weeks but unless the citizens are wholeheartedly behind them then all the hard work that has been done will go to waste. Let's get behind these youngsters and help to further baseball in Greenville.

Down at the Recreation Department in the City Armory there is quite an interesting sign tacked on the wall. Warren Carroll, the Recreation Department head, says that he hung the sign just for people that come in raising the devil about how he does his work. It seems that everybody thinks that his special little department is the most important and therefore deserves the most attention.

Anyway, back to the story. When this type of person shows up and starts to beef Carroll merely points to the wall and that usually shuts them up. Here's the story. If you have the Stamina of a jackass. The Guts of a billy goat. The Nerve of a news photographer. And little enough sense to think that you can please 20,000 people. Then You need this job. Pretty good, huh?

The Proctor Hotel is really doing a fine job in serving those free meals for the Little League team members. Seeing those boys enjoying themselves last night was really great and it's nice to find such a fine bunch of fellows participating in the league. Incidentally, last night was only the first. For two more nights this week and three next week the Proctor Hotel will act as hosts to the remaining teams of the league.

There was a fine brand of men at the city armory last night. These men were representatives from Williamston, Rocky Mount, Greenville and Farmville who came all the way down here to speak for the Little Leaguers of their cities.

The meeting was to decide certain issues that concern the playing of the district tournament here on August 5, 6, 7. Some mighty big plans were laid and it seems that the people of Greenville are going to be treated to some fine baseball.

If all the citizens were as interested in their youngsters as the men that were here last night then there would be no need to beg for support for the local Little League program. There is still time to volunteer your services. Anyone interested in helping the future citizens of America can contact Warren Carroll at the Armory.

Spahn Receives Threatening Note

CHICAGO (AP) — Because of a threatening letter, star pitcher Warren Spahn of the Boston Braves will get police protection during a three-game series with the Chicago Cubs starting today.

Andrew Aitken, chief of detectives, said in assigning a detail to guard Spahn the letter ostensibly was inspired by the June 8 injury of Cub outfielder Frankie Baumholtz. One of Spahn's pitches struck and broke Baumholtz' right hand.

The unsigned letter, received in Pittsburgh by Spahn during a recent Braves' series there, contained a newspaper clipping of Baumholtz' injury. It read in part:

"... when you come back to Chicago, I'll see you and make good. I know what hotel you stay at, you —. This is not a crank letter but a sore head like you will get it from me. I'll get you somehow, you can be handled."

Aitken said a crank "obviously" sent the letter, but added "we are taking no chances."

Little League Representatives Meet Here And Plan District 1 Tourney

A meeting of representatives of the Little League teams that will compete here beginning on August 5 in the district tournament was held last night in the city armory.

A total of 12 men were present from the various cities of Farmville, Williamston, Rocky Mount and Greenville. Warren Carroll, state Little League director, presided over the meeting.

Carroll stressed the fact that all players must turn in their birth certificates to their managers in order to avoid any dispute as to age.

Discussion then arose on the matter of having Rocky Mount's two teams paired in different brackets so that they would not face each other in the opening round of play. The matter was settled by the drawing of the pairings for the tournament.

Had Rocky Mount's two teams been paired in the opening round of play then Williamston would have changed opponents with one of the Rocky Mount teams.

The pairings for the tourney, which begins on August 5 and runs through the 7th, are:

August 5, Tuesday, at 5:00 p.m.—Farmville, home team, vs. Rocky Mount, American League visitors.

Wednesday, August 6, at 3:00 p.m. Rocky Mount, National League home team, vs. Greenville, visitors.

Wednesday, August 6, at 5:00 p.m. Williamston will play the winner of the game between Farmville and the Rocky Mount Americans.

On August 7 the consolation and championship games will be held. It was decided that each team would have ten minutes of infield practice and twenty minutes of batting practice prior to the games.

Discussion also took place on the state tournament to be held at Wilmington. The winner of the tourney here will represent District 1 at Wilmington. Wilmington has scheduled some night games for the state tournament but the rules say that a team does not have to play at night if they do not wish to do so. A vote was taken and Williamston was the only team willing to play at night.

If Williamston should win the district play then the games at Wilmington would be played as scheduled but if another team wins then the games will have to be rescheduled in daylight.

The reason for not wanting to play at night is that all teams in District 1 except Williamston play all their games in the day.

Film To Be Shown
A film, "Little League Basics," will be shown at the Armory Thursday night at 8:00 p.m. The film is from Williamsport, Pa. The showing is open to all those interested in Little League baseball.

Elks Triumph Over Jaycees As Bryan Pitches Victory

Olympics Board Faces Problem

By LEO H. PETERSEN
United Press Sports Editor
HELSINKI (UP) — The International Olympic Committee faced some of its most explosive issues in years today as it met to resolve sports problems arising from the political conflict between the East and West.

The fireworks expected at the committee session overshadowed preliminary noncompetition scheduled today in which the United States was to make its first appearance of the games. The U. S. soccer team was an underdog to Italy in a soccer qualification game.

The most thorny situation facing the IOC was created when Nationalist and Red China each demanded permission to compete in the 1952 Olympics opening here Saturday. Both have picked squads for the games but thus far neither has been admitted.

Another tough question was whether East Germany should be permitted to enter a team as well as West Germany, which was admitted by the executive committee of the IOC when East Germany refused to co-operate in choosing one team to represent all Germany.

Both East and West Germany had demanded admittance. The West Germans already are here and will compete, regardless of any decision reached at today's meeting.

Because the time is so short, it seemed unlikely that either China or East Germany will compete. With the issue not settled, the International Basketball Federation originally included both Chinese groups in the Olympic basketball eliminations. Later the draw was cancelled and then reinstated without either China.

Inasmuch as the eliminations to decide which six teams from 13 nations should join the 10 seeded countries in the basketball championships proper are in the third round, it would not be possible to add either or both Chinese teams to the competition.

The Elks didn't get but four hits yesterday at Little League park but that was enough as they edged the Jaycees by a 3-2 score.

Bryan pitched the win for the Elks giving up a total of 4 base knocks. Nobles and Allen hurled for the losers.

Nichols, Jaycee centerfielder and lead-off man, was the only player to collect more than one hit during the contest. He had two singles in five trips to the plate.

The Elks jumped off to a one run margin in the opening frame and held the lead all the way. The Jaycees rallied for two in the bottom of the fourth but by that time the Elks had also added two to salt the game away.

Little Leaguers Dines At Proctor

The Proctor Hotel was the scene last night of a banquet given in honor of the Exchange entry in the Greenville Little League.

This was the first of six scheduled dinners to be given for local Little League teams. A total of 14 players and two managers were fed.

The affair started promptly at 7:30 with the guests seated at a long linen covered table. The meal consisted of fried chicken, slaw, french fries, biscuits, milk and pie.

Following the meal the boys rolled their napkins into a ball and tried to dislodge a cigarette pasted to the ceiling. Mr. J. Leroy Wheatley, host for the evening, offered a prize of $1 to any player that could dislodge the cigarette. Although the attempts were both numerous and vigorous no one succeeded and Mr. Wheatley announced that the prize would rise to $2 for tonight's dinner.

Both managers and the entire team expressed their thanks to Mr. Wheatley for his generosity. Tonight at 7:30 the Proctor Hotel will once more give a supper. The team tonight will be the Jaycees.

Indians Triumph In First Game

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP) — Rugged Al Rosen, who may go down as the first guy who ever worked the business end of a triple steal with a broken left foot, jubilantly joined his Cleveland boss, Al Lopez, today with a declaration that "the old Yankee Stadium jinx is smashed."

The hilarity came after the Indians topped the Yankees 7-3 last night, moving to within 2 1-2 games of first place for their fourth victory in five starts in the Bronx ball-yard this year.

Rosen started things off explosively in a two-run first inning when with the bases loaded and without any instructions to do so, he took a long lead, "decided I could make it and just slid in."

The other men on the base paths, Larry Doby and Luke Easter, decided they had a chance, too, and moved up along with Rosen.

Rosen got two hits, one a wrong field double, and a walk in a big night for the Indians, which also featured rookie Harry Simpson's third inside-the-park homer of the year, a homer by the returning hero, Luke Easter, and a five-hit pitching job by Early Wynn. Wynn, with a shutout in sight, eased up and was touched for late-inning homers by Yogi Berra, Joe Collins and Mickey Mantle.

Double Fun For Everyone!

TEEN TALK

Dear Judge

Vacation memories are all the more fun when you can give credence to your glowing remarks by exhibiting photographs of the resort spot and new friends. It is particularly important to have an album of vacation pictures to prove you really have met "the handsomest boy in the world."

Too, too, you will pose for other people whom you meet at vacation time. If you want a new beau to remember you when he goes home, learn how to pose for a photograph. Here are some tricks to remember:

1. If he wants to take your picture at high noon, be sure you beg off. That is the time of day when hard shadows are likely to be cast on your face because the sun is directly overhead. Mid-morning or afternoon, on the other hand, offer flattering lighting.

2. If you're inclined to squint when you face the sun, try tilting your head up at an angle so your features and facial contours are well lighted but the sun doesn't shine directly into your eyes. Or perhaps the person who photographs you will want to try the soft effect of side or back-lighting from the sun, using a supplementary flash attachment on his camera to "fill in" the front shadows on your face.

3. When it comes to your figure, the old rule in posing is worth remembering: Hips and shoulders should be at an angle to the camera and they'll look slimmer. Legs will seem trimmer and more graceful if they're kept close together or crossed slightly. Legs should be at an angle to the camera, too. Skinny girls can take a graceful pose by placing one leg a little in front of the other, and putting a hand gracefully on the hip. A seated position sometimes helps conceal figure flaws.

4. When posing for a swim suit picture, remember your posture. Slouching will create unattractive bulges and wrinkles. So stand or sit tall. A good way to get yourself in the proper position is to push the waistline back as far as possible. If you remember to do that, your bust will automatically lift, and your abdomen will flatten. If the camera is held low and tilted slightly upward you'll get a longer line in the snapshot.

5. Wet your lips just before the picture is to be taken and try to hold your breath for the second it takes to snap a picture. If your picture is being taken outdoors, you will be better off without makeup. Heavy eyebrows and mascara will make you look too made-up in direct sunlight. Foundation cream and powder, lipstick and perhaps a tiny line at the outer corners of the eyes is all the makeup you need for an outdoor picture.

6. Be sure that you suggest a good background to the picture taker. If he wants you to pose in front of a cluttered background, steer him to another spot. You can get lost if posed in front of crowds of bathers or eye-catching "Keep Off" signs or the like. The sky is an ideal background. A clear expanse of water and sand become excellent backgrounds. Rocks and simple foliage found at any lake or seashore add drama to a simple photograph.

So before the shutter clicks size up how you will look in the picture when it is developed. Pick the proper background, pose prettily, and you can bet the boy will have your photograph enlarged. He'll be proud of his photographic technique, even if he doesn't realize it was due to your ingenuity that the photograph is so perfect.

Two Drivers In Three-Car Crash Are Charged

Two drivers were charged by Highway Patrolmen for traffic violations as a result of a three-car accident on the Farmville Highway Saturday night.

Investigating officers Delton E. Perry and Bruce H. Jackson, stated that a car operated by Raymond Mays, of Route 1, Greenville was struck by a car driven by John W. Taylor, 49, of New York, and both cars were in turn hit by a third car driven by Elmer C. Lancaster, 17, of Route 1, Greenville.

Taylor was charged with driving while drunk and Lancaster with following too closely. Considerable damage resulted to two of the cars involved. No one was injured the officers stated.

Sen. Byrd Triumphs In Virginia Demo Primary

RICHMOND, Va. (UP) — Virginia's anti-Truman Democrats celebrated today the primary election landslide victory of Sen. Harry F. Byrd as a mandate for him to carry on a fight against waste in government.

Byrd, overwhelmingly renominated for a fourth full Senate term, expressed amazement at defeating by "such a large majority" Col. Francis Pickens Miller, who had bitterly attacked "the Byrd machine."

Campaign leaders called Byrd's renomination, tantamount to election in Virginia, a "triumph of all that Senator Byrd stands for," and a repudiation by Virginia of policies of the Truman administration.

United Press returns from 11,873 of the state's 1,780 precincts gave Byrd 212,460 votes to 124,841 in a record-breaking ballot for a senatorial primary in this state.

"I am tremendously gratified and proud," Byrd said. "I interpret the vote to mean that the people of Virginia approve of the policies I advocate in Washington."

The staunch critic of administration fiscal policies carried nine of the state's 10 congressional districts, losing by a slim margin in the southwestern Ninth District where the United Mine Workers voted against him.

Faced with the stiffest challenge of many years, the apple-cheeked Shenandoah Valley orchard man known as the "watch dog of the treasury" had sought to label Miller a "Truman Democrat."

Miller, accepting defeat promised to fight Byrd again, possibly in a gubernatorial campaign next year. He said the state must be freed of Byrd's grip after 25 years of control.

"This has been a very useful contest," he said. "It has aroused interest in Virginia's political affairs. It has provided an alternative team which forward-looking men and women of independent spirit could join."

Byrd, supporter of Sen. Richard B. Russell's campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination, stated he has "no aspirations to be a candidate on the Democratic ticket either as president or vice-president."

After 19 years in the Senate and terms as governor and state senator, Byrd had apparently wanted to retire until President Truman angered him with a remark that he felt there were too many "Byrds" in Congress.

F. D. Duncan At Air Force Base

F. D. Duncan, business manager and treasurer of East Carolina College, is attending an encampment of U. S. Air Force components at MacDill Field, Tampa, Florida, where he is observing the training phases of the training of the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps.

Duncan will note training schedules and will be introduced to new phases of the Air Force instructional program while at MacDill Field.

The East Carolina College business manager is expected to complete the observation of the MacDill training program during the middle of this week and is expected to return to his office in Greenville by Thursday.

Enrollment in the Air Force ROTC units at East Carolina College totaled more than 400 men during the past school year. An increased registration is forecast for the school term beginning September 8.

Dog Owners Told To Get Licenses

Mayor L. D. Page this morning served notice on Greenville dog owners when he reported dog license sales will be strictly enforced in the city this year.

"During the past year licenses have been sold for only a fraction of the dogs owned by people in the city," he said. "Only approximately 300 people bought licenses during the entire past fiscal year."

The mayor stated that dogs which have not been vaccinated, or do not have licenses, are not only in distinct violation of the law but are a definite threat to the health and well-being of young children.

"In the past we have been very fortunate in that we have not had a serious rabies threat in Greenville," he declared.

"However, if one child should be bitten and perhaps die of rabies, that one casualty would be more costly than the whole dog control program."

Page added that although the program has not been compiled with in the past, it is going to be strictly enforced this year. Cost of license for dogs is $1.00 for males and $2.00 for females.

THIS is—to coin a phrase—a "shopper's market." Folks are taking a keen look at what they get for what they pay—and they're taking a double look at price tags.

That's the kind of market where Buick really shines. Do you know why? Buick prices are down within easy reach of the folks who buy what's known as "the low-priced three."

Fact is—a big chunk of Buick sales comes from the folks who trade in one of this low-priced trio.

For very few extra dollars, they're getting a lot more automobile. They're getting more power—and the thrill that goes with it. They're getting "big-car" comfort. They're getting a ride that cost a million dollars and more to develop.

They like the room, the fabrics, the extra appointments they find in the smart-stepping beauty pictured here. And they like Dynaflow Drive.*

They like the way it handles. They like the way it's engineered. They like the belt they get out of touching off the power of its Fireball 8 Engine—and they like the miles they get from a gallon of fuel.

So Buick sales are booming. Not just the SPECIAL—but also the SUPER and ROADMASTER. Folks find that each one is the buy in its field.

When we tell you that business is great, we can back up that statement with figures. More people are buying Buicks than any other car at their price or above.

Why don't you come in and see for yourself what's behind this popularity? If you can afford a new car, you can be the proud owner of a Buick.

Stocks And Market Reports

NEW YORK (UP)—Stocks registered minor gains in the first half of today's session on sharply reduced volume.

With few exceptions the net changes held to fractions. The wider movers ranged between a net loss of four points in Amerasia and a 1 1/2-point gain in Barber Oil. A 10,000-share block of General Public Service sold at four 7/8-changed to feature the volume side.

Advances outnumbered declines in the main list. The declines—most of them very small—came into such issues as American Tobacco, Bethlehem Steel, U. S. Steel, Chrysler, General Electric, Johnson & Johnson, Kennecott, and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

Leading oils were narrowly mixed. The utilities scored a small gain in their average, rails gained a few cents and the industrials were 2 cents higher in their averages.

On the whole, the market was seen as strongly influenced by the failure to achieve a settlement of the 45-day-old steel strike. There was less investment trust buying than in the previous session.

Sales to noon amounted to 480,000 shares, against 570,000 shares for the first two hours of the session yesterday.

Officially, Pitt Has No Typhoid

Despite circulating rumors, the local health department this morning stated that typhoid fever in Pitt County had not been reported so far this summer.

However, a white man is suspected of having typhoid fever but the case has not yet been officially diagnosed as such. The man was sent to a hospital at High Point and no report has been received from there to the local health department.

But, as a precautionary measure, persons who have had recent contact with the victim received typhoid fever inoculations this afternoon at the health department.

One Negro child was recently admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital with typhoid fever but was a resident of a nearby county, therefore the case was not recorded in the county.

Added Load

In further remarking on enrollment, Dr. Messick told members of the commission students actually in the college in the 1951-1952 school year totaled 2,123, with an additional 552 receiving extension instruction off campus. Enrollment for the two summer terms last year was 2,124.

"Requests for rooms are far in excess of available facilities," the president said. "The college population is growing and the number of students enrolling at East Carolina College will continue to increase, placing additional load on facilities and instructional and administrative personnel."

Break In Truce Tie-Up Hoped To Be Indicated

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP)—Two surprise moves by the Communists indicated today a major break may be imminent in the Korean truce negotiations.

In apparently related actions, the Chinese Communists decided to recognize the Geneva Convention for the treatment of war prisoners, and Red truce negotiators asked for a further two-day recess in the armistice talks here.

An important development seemed likely when the two sides met Friday. The session presumably will be secret, as were the 10 meetings preceding the recess which began Monday.

Radio Peiping broadcast Chinese Communist Premier Chou En-Lai's recognition of the Geneva Convention. A few hours later, Communist liaison officers asked a two-day extension of the original two-day recess called at their request. Both sides were to have met again this morning.

Observers here were convinced the Reds either were preparing to make a new proposal or working over a United Nations suggestion that a neutral "protecting power" be called in to mediate the prisoner exchange deadlock.

Chou's statement emphasized the Geneva Convention clause providing for the use of a "protecting power."

The protecting power would assume jurisdiction over prisoners, although the Communists still would be responsible for U. N. prisoners, and the U. N. responsible for Communist prisoners.

The move might bring an armistice in a few days. The question of prisoner exchange would remain open, with the neutral "protecting power" intervening to mediate a solution while the armistice was in effect.

The armistice agreement is complete except for the paragraph dealing with the return of prisoners.

Chou also insisted that civilians come under the protection of neutral, even though they are in enemy territory at the time of the agreement. This would give Communist guerrillas now operating in South Korea the same status as captured soldiers.

Although the Communist announcement appeared to be a step in a new direction, it was possible they were throwing another block at the U. N.

The United States did not ratify the Geneva Convention of 1949, although it has announced it would abide by its principles. This puts the Reds in the position of being legally in agreement with the convention, while the U. S. is not.

Child Dies On Way To Doctor

Coroner Griffin H. Rouse this morning reported the death of a 5-year-old Negro child, Arlene Davis, en route to a local doctor's office for treatment.

The child, daughter of Bennie and Retha Davis, was pronounced dead on arrival, Rouse stated. No inquest will be held.

The Davis family lived on the Cotton Dale farm, near Greenville.

Ringleaders Of Prison Riot Are Hustled Away

LINCOLN, N. C. (UP)—Officials at the Lincoln County prison farm reported a thankful "all's quiet" today after removal of four convicts who kidnaped a guard during a day-long grievance riot here.

Supt. H. J. Schrum began a second round of questioning of the 51 prisoners whose complaints about food and privileges had already filled 16 double pages, but he expected no further trouble.

The four ringleaders were hustled into a caged truck after officials finished bargaining for the life of guard D. W. Reynolds, and sped to Central Prison at Raleigh.

Reynolds, 42-year-old father of 10, was haggard and nervous after serving as hostage in the barricaded cell block during the negotiations but declared, "they didn't harm me at all."

Prison Director Walter Anderson, who spent four hours taking notes complaints about food, mail, medical services other items after Reynolds was freed, said the four would be subjected to "disciplinary action."

"If we find others have taken part, some form of discipline will be meted out to them," Anderson said, but Schrum said he felt the additional investigation would not turn up another culprit.

The four brought from their cells under floodlights amid 15 armed guards were George Gibby, 30, who incited a recent six-hour riot at Central Prison; Peter Austin, escape artist and auto thief; William Dill, convicted of driving while under the influence of morphine, and Cecil Hamilton, convicted of larceny.

Armed with a pocketknife and two ice picks, they seized Reynolds, grabbed his keys, shackled him and forced him into the cell block, warning officials they would kill him if they tried to free the captive with force.

While some 30 state patrolmen, sheriff's officers and guards armed with pistols and shotguns surrounded the barred-wire enclosure with the prisoners, "only to talk with the prisoners," entered with two other officials and came out with Reynolds minutes later.

Waiting with some 100 townspeople outside was Reynolds' wife, who greeted him tearfully. Anderson then began recording the grievances, all of which another official termed "r-t-y."

"This thing had been brewing for two weeks," Reynolds said, before he started a two-day rest from further duty. "They didn't have to worry about being hungry. They had enough food stored in the block to last a week."

Carver Library

A library is not a luxury, but one of the necessities of life. The books which help you most are those which make you think most. The hardest way of learning is by easy reading. Come by the library from 2 to 8 p.m., daily except Sunday and select something to read.

The following new books have been added to our collection since July 1:

"Woman Called Fancy" by Frank Yerby, "Sarazan" by Yerby, "His Eye Is on the Sparrow" by Waters, "We Live in the South" by Lenaki, "Peanut Billy Ben" by Lenaki, "Real Book about Inventions" by Epstein, "Real Book about George W. Carver" by Coy, "Read Me More Stories" by Cooney, "The Talking Car" by Carlson, "Charlot in the Sky" by Bontemps, "Ways to Improve Your Personality" by Bailard, and "Man from Abilene" by McCann.

Book Review On "His Eye Is on the Sparrow"

"His Eye Is on the Sparrow" is Ethel Waters, her warmth, her faith in God, her lusty humor, and above all, her courage. Her story begins in a sordid Negro tenement in Chester, Pa. It ends fifty years later in a star dressing room on Broadway. She was born in the slums in Chester, unloved by her mother, pimps, errand girl, honky-tonky singer, and then, by turn, a fabulously successful blues singer and actress has never been discouraged.

Deep faith and belief in her God have given her the strength and determination to make the long, hard pull from tenements and cheap roadhouses to Hollywood cameras and Broadway lights.

"His Eye Is on the Sparrow" is as magnificently honest as Ethel Waters herself. It is the truly inspiring story of a great theatrical personality and a great woman.

Esso Extra Gasoline

Many motorists believe that all good gasolines are generally pretty much alike. But here are the facts as proved by industry-accepted road and laboratory tests!

Esso Extra gives you a remarkable combination of qualities that will improve the all-year, all-around performance of 9 out of 10 cars on the road.

We believe a trial will prove to you Esso

Extra delivers results no other gasoline can—in full power, long mileage, high anti-knock, quick starting, fast engine warm-up, and protection against vapor-lock stalling.

And while you're at your Esso Dealer's, there's certainly no better time to let him give your car a complete lubrication and careful check-up for the hot weather driving you'll be doing.

* Esso Extra Gasoline is good for ALL cars, but in 9 out of 10 it will give better all-around performance all year 'round than any other gasoline. Only a car with an engine that's poorly adjusted, badly worn, or one with unusual compression characteristics may be unable to use fully the many extra qualities of this great gasoline. See your nearby Esso Dealer today!

Lions Hear Two
4-H Club Guests

Two Pitt County 4-H Club members delivered brief talks before the Greenville Lions Monday night at their weekly meeting.

Sybil Jones, Chiefton school student, spoke on "What 4-H Work Has Done For Me," while Robert Bright, of the Belvoir High School delivered the oration with which he won a recent 4-H speaking contest.

The two speakers were followed by Pitt Farm Agent Sam Winchester, who spoke briefly on the tobacco control plan which will come up for vote this Saturday by tobacco growers in the county.

Winchester urged club members to talk controls for three years, even though "many of you present for this meeting can't vote."
President Bruce Gung Jr. presided over the meeting.

Non-Violent Civil Disobedience Used Against S. Africa Govm't

By HOMER JENES
United Press Staff Correspondent

A group of 25 Negroes walked in to South Africa's Port Elizabeth railroad station through an entrance reserved for white persons, the other day. They were arrested. Twenty other Negroes marched into a postoffice and tried to buy stamps at a window reserved for whites. They also were arrested. Eighteen Negroes walked along a Johannesburg street at night in defiance of the curfew for non-whites. They, too, were arrested.

So were a dozen Negroes in Worcester, near Capetown, who refused to show police the identity cards all South African Negroes must carry.

All these Negroes deliberately broke South Africa's "Jim Crow" laws as part of a new campaign of non-violent civil disobedience against Nationalist Premier Daniel F. Malan's "white supremacy" government.

It is patterned on the late Mahatma K. Gandhi's successful civil disobedience campaigns for Indian independence from Britain.

Although more than 500 South African Negroes have been thrown into jail since June 26 for their deliberate flouting of the apartheid (racial segregation) laws. More join them there every day.

And this is only the beginning, according to sponsors of the campaign. Dr. J. S. Moroka, head of the African National Congress, says it will go on until South Africa's jails are full to overflowing.

"Nothing will stop the fight except withdrawal of the discriminatory laws which are the cause of the present action," he said.

The Negroes are not alone in their fight against the Malan government's racial segregation laws. Also in the battle are half-castes and Indians, like the Negroes victims of apartheid, and the white opposition parties.

The Indians have joined in acts of civil disobedience, deliberately courting arrest. The half-castes are fighting for their rights in South Africa's courts, although Malan has tried to circumvent the courts by proclaiming Parliament supreme in matters of law.

Among whites, South Africa's Union Party, formerly headed by the late great Field Marshal Jan C. Smuts, the Labor party, and an organization of 250,000 war veterans, known as Torch Commando have united for a campaign to thwart the government in parliament and defeat it at the next election.

Probably none of South Africa's 3,500,000 whites advocates immediate equality for the nation's 8,000,000 blacks.

But Malan's white opponents advocate a gradual lowering of the racial barriers. They fear that the Malan policy of cracking down ever more severely on the non-white population, slashing its housing appropriations and disenfranchising even half-castes has brought the country to the brink of civil war.

New Regulations Govern Handling Of Welfare Aid

In April 1952, several new regulations governing administration of public assistance became effective in state welfare departments, said K. T. Futrell, superintendent of the county welfare department.

Among the changes affecting public assistance recipients are regulations regarding ownership of automobiles, trucks, and television sets.

The superintendent said no public assistance recipient can own an automobile or a truck unless such vehicle is being used to help provide an income for him, or unless otherwise proven to be essential.

Futrell also said no television set can be owned by a recipient unless it can be proven that the source from which he obtained the set does not also mean that he has sufficient resources within his family group to meet his needs.

In Pitt County, two cases have thus far been closed because of ownership of non-essential automobiles or trucks. One case has been closed because of ownership of a television set.

The superintendent said periodic reviews each 12 months for old age assistance and each six months for aid to dependent children, are bringing to light recipients who come under the new regulations.

Hit Sour Note

AYDEN — Corn makes sweet music but it hits a sour note when the final sentence is passed.

Following a search, and a find, by members of the Ayden Police Department, Tedock Bell, operator of a Negro "Honky-Tonk" received 90 days in jail with sentence suspended on condition he pay a fine of $100 plus costs and close his place of business in south Ayden Saturday afternoon.

The moonshine was found hidden in the juke box.

Accident Victim In 'Critical' Condition

The condition of Cpl. Thomas F. Meegan, young Marine who was seriously injured in an automobile accident near Farmville Monday morning was listed by officials at Pitt Memorial Hospital this morning as being "critical."

Meegan suffered serious head injuries when he was thrown from the back seat of an automobile which collided with a bridge abutment on Highway US 258, near Farmville, tearing away the entire right side of the car.

mad when he said it. (Looks like about the only thing left for the publicity boys to add is some way to transmit the "smell" over the air waves.)

WARNING—The Demos have the advantage of previous warning by reason of experiences of their Republican friends, who were almost caught short because they did not realize the advancement in publicity since the conventions four years ago. For that reason the Democratic strategists may try to work out more of their problems in advance and not attempt as much on-the-spot manipulation of convention procedure. The publicity boys no doubt have learned something, too, and rough spots in news coverage last week will be smoothed out. Which means that there may not be as much lively news but that what does happen will be made known to the whole world faster and more fully than ever before.

SALUTARY — It is a fine thing for good government that the men operating political machinery, streamroller or other kinds, realize that their off-side remarks and facial expressions, as well as what they want the people to know about, are swiftly transmitted all over the world. Remember how Chairman Hallman at one time when he didn't know what to do asked in an undertone "Where is Bricker?" — and every radio and TV spectator heard him?

Misplaced Pin Added Gyration

WASHINGTON (UP) — Strip-teaser Dorothy Harlinger claimed that a misplaced pin forced her to add some unladylike gyrations to her act.

In court to answer a charge of indecent exposure, Miss Harlinger explained that she was wearing two bras, one pinned over the other. "A pin - point was gouging my shoulder," she said. "I couldn't quit in the middle of my act, so I just had to shift my bra."

Trial Magistrate Nita S. Crane fined Miss Harlinger $50 with a 90-day suspended jail sentence.

Blaze Destroys Tobacco Barn

The fourth tobacco barn reported lost to fire in Pitt County burned Monday morning on the farm of O. J. Galloway, it was learned today.

The barn, and its entire contents were a total loss. The blaze was discovered around seven o'clock.

Galloway's farm is located one mile south of Grimesland on the Grimesland and Black Jack highway.

Part of the loss was covered by insurance, it was understood.

PAPER JUST KIDDING
BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (UP)—This city's only daily newspaper, the Battle Creek Enquirer and News, headlined a page-one story, "Mercury Drops to 27-Year Low" on one of the hottest days of the year. The paper had an explanation, however. A fine-print note said, "Reprinted for your pleasure from the Dec. 17, 1951, edition of the Enquirer and News."
