Electric Power Troubles Eased; Crisis Not Over

Swartz Reports No Circuits To Be Pulled If Consumers Will Cooperate

Yesterday's blistering temps among Greenville citizenry tended back toward normal this morning as electricity flowed uninterrupted through utility lines.

Utilities Superintendent Martin Swartz reported early today the trouble at the plant that caused a near shutdown and necessitated discontinuing electrical service yesterday has been alleviated somewhat today.

The superintendent said the 3,000 kilowatt generator which went out of order Wednesday night was put back to work yesterday afternoon, and since that time current has been furnished throughout the system without interruption.

"No circuits have been pulled since yesterday afternoon," Swartz stated, "and with continued cooperation of our customers we do not anticipate any situation requiring split service."

Swartz added, however, the crucial period will exist for several days yet and he cautioned consumers to disconnect all electrical equipment not absolutely necessary.

Eastern N.C. Delegates Confer At Convention

A group of eastern North Carolina delegates here hold a minor caucus of their own over things in general at the Democratic national convention in Chicago. Included in the group are John Clark, Frank Wooten and Jack Spain of Greenville; Congressman Herbert Bonner of Washington, and Woodrow Jones; Mr. and Mrs. Bill Johnston of Raleigh and Emmitt Winslow of Hertford. Tar Heels Let Their Hair Down During Nominations

Majority of Delegation Jubilantly Participated In Russell Demonstration; Guarded Standards Against Rival Delegates

By DAVID J. WHICARD (Special To The Reflector) CONVENTION HALL - North Carolinians let their hair down yesterday and had more fun than at any other time during the week in Chicago.

They were dancing in the aisles, shouting at the top of their voices and waving banners, flags and standards in support of Senator Richard Russell of Georgia.

For the vast majority of Tar Heel delegates, the Russell demonstration was the one which meant most. And they made the most of it.

When Russell's name was presented, 80-year-old Cameron Morrison, chairman of the delegation, stepped into the aisle holding the North Carolina standard high to lead the demonstration.

The Tar Heels pranced and shouted behind Morrison. The aisles were jammed with shouting, happy people waving about the convention floor. Some carried pennants with "Russell" in big letters, others waved huge signs, some carried oversized pictures of the Georgian.

Everyone wore a Russell hat and Russell buttons ranging from nickel-size to saucer-size. C. B. Hartin of Robersonville carried the standard of the alternate delegates of North Carolina, while John G. Clark of Greenville carried a big Russell sign.

The demonstration progressed and the North Carolinians really got into the spirit of the thing. Senator Willis Smith confiscated the unguarded New Hampshire standard and marched away with it. Leroy Martin of Raleigh grabbed the unguarded Rhode Island standard while delegates were too engrossed in watching the demonstrators to hold on to their standard.

When delegation chairman Morrison took his seat after the first tour around the convention floor, Smith took over the North Carolina standard, and passed the New Hampshire sign to Jack Spain of Greenville.

On and on went the demonstration while North Carolina delegates gave vent to their enthusiasm. But while confusion reigned in the hall, a few Tar Heels sat conspicuously in the nearly empty seating section of the North Carolina delegation. Governor Kerr Scott sat plumply, virtually alone with his huge Stevenson button on his lapel.

Washington (UP) - Oscar Collazo was "dazed and stunned" by the news that President Truman—the man he tried to kill—had commuted his death sentence to life imprisonment.

Donald Clemmer, director of the District of Columbia jail, said today the Puerto Rican nationalist had no comment on Mr. Truman's action when notified late yesterday Collazo, 38, had been convicted in the slaying of White House guard Leslie Coffelt in an attempt to assassinate the President Nov. 1, 1950.

"He appeared dazed and stunned for a moment," Clemmer said. "Later, he seemed a little glad." Clemmer said Collazo would be moved from the death house to a cell block. He said it would be up to James V. Benezet, director of federal prisons, to decide where Collazo will serve his life term. Collazo had been scheduled to die in the electric chair Aug. 1.

Heat Wave Ends

Cool breezes brought temporary relief to the Carolinas today after a five-day heat wave that saw high temperatures average near the 100-degree mark.

The Weather Bureau said the cool air mass arrived from the northwest, causing temperatures to drop to the mid-seventies early this morning. A general high of from 92 to 95 was forecast for the two states today.

Meantime, violent thunderstorms struck some areas of the two states, bringing welcome rains but doing considerable damage to crops and utilities.

French Beat Off Screaming Reds

SEUL, Korea (UP) - French troops holding "T-Bone Hill" on Korea's explosive western front beat off an assault by screaming Chinese Communists today in a savage, close-in battle that choked the French bunkers with enemy dead.

The hard-fighting battalion, which has won more U. S. heroism awards than any other U. N. unit of its size in Korea, counted more than 200 enemy casualties from a force of 600 ordered to seize their hill position.

Of the casualties, 64 were killed and 150 were wounded. The Chinese have assigned an army of about 30,000 men to pummel U. N. positions blocking the Chorwon "gateways" on the invasion route to South Korea.

From this army, the Chinese hurled a battalion at the French unit. The attack, which began about 2 a. m., was preceded by 2,000 rounds of artillery and mortar explosives.

Artillery of the U. S. 2nd Infantry Division to which the French battalion is attached caught the Chinese attackers on their way into the French positions.

District Jaycees Hear N.C. Head

National Director Also Addresses Quarterly Meeting

"North Carolina is recognized nationally as one of the top two or three states in Jaycee organization and in my opinion it is deserving the number one spot," State Jaycee President J. B. Brame of Durham said last night.

Speaking here before approximately 150 rollicking, frolicking Jaycees at the Eighth District quarterly meeting, Brame cited the four basic principles of Jaycee organization and stated, "We must set up a goal and believe in it enough to bring it about."

As reviewed by the president, the four Jaycee principles are: 1. believing in and doing; 2. developing leadership among young men; 3. affording sound educational opportunities; and 4. giving young men a voice in the affairs of locality, state and nation.

To live up to and support our convictions is not only the Jaycee way, it is also the American way," he asserted. "I came into the Jaycees as you did and I worked as you did. All of us are given the opportunity to contribute constructively to the organization—and more of us should do so."

Brame revealed the possibility of having Negro Jaycee organizations. "A young Negro man called me the other night and wanted to know the possibility of organizing a Negro Jaycee club in the western part of the state," he said. "I presented the possibility for your consideration before the question has come up before and it will again."

The speaker emphasized "the thought that in the group before he spoke last night is material for a district, state or even national president. "It depends on guts and a willingness to work."

National Director Mike Harper of Sanford, national director from this area, spoke briefly to the gathering and explained the immediate goal of Jaycees in the Eighth District. "We anticipate a 10 percent increase in membership and at least one more club in the district this year," he said.

He suggested such towns as Grifton, Vanceboro, Belhaven and Aurora as being fertile spots for a new organization. "I emphasize Jaycees because we are a distinct and separate organization from Chamber of Commerce and we should segregate the idea that they are the same."

Business Men 'Sweated Out' A Day Of Interrupted Electricity

By MURIEL SHOTWELL Reflector Staff Writer Tempers were still frayed today in business establishments, industries and in the homes over the interrupted service of electrical power.

Reports from these sources in all portions of the city and other towns served by the Greenville Utilities plant indicated both time and merchandise were threatened by costly losses if the irregular power service continues.

On Thursday the electrical service was generally discontinued at two-hour intervals due to the breakdown of two generators. The smaller of the two was subsequently returned to operation, but the 5,000 kilowatt unit is expected to be idle for several days.

Stowed Away To See Quake Area

SAN FRANCISCO (UP) - Dicky Love, 8, saw television pictures of Southern California's earthquakes and decided he wanted to see effects of the disaster on the scene.

He stowed away on a commuter bus and train at Redwood City and made his way here. Then he slipped aboard a Lo. Angeles-bound plane by flashing the stub of a 25-cent flight insurance policy.

Two meat packing industries and one wholesale meat supply business were brought almost to a standstill under the power shortage. None reported the loss of meat to spoilage, but production was slowed considerably.

Finally Happens; Steak In Museum

CHICAGO (UP) - It finally happened. A steak went on exhibit in a museum here.

The steak exhibit has nothing to do with high prices. It is on display at the Chicago Natural History Museum as an illustration of the structure and functions in a wide variety of animals and man.

Everything Happened! In Long Session Of Democrats Thursday

By DAVID J. WHICARD (Special To The Reflector) CONVENTION HALL—Everything happened in this big building yesterday. It was a 14-hour panorama of confusion, chaos—and accomplishment.

A Southern delegation was read out of the party and brought back into the fold. A Northern delegation walked out of the party, and came back after thinking things over with a cup of coffee. The Democratic Party threatened for hours to burst wide open along sectional lines; but by 2 o'clock this morning the patch had been effected. Whether it would hold or not, only time would tell.

Tempers ran high, words became short, and for a few strained moments practically every person in the convention hall experienced the horrible thought of death by fire. The flames which shot up behind Governor James Byrnes of South Carolina during a crucial moment in the party's history were quickly extinguished by level headed delegates and efficient firemen. There was little doubt, however, that the embers of dissatisfaction between the rival factions of the party still remained after the soothing chemical compromise had been applied.

North Carolina delegates who sat through the long session were still carrying conflicting feelings when it was all over. John G. Clark of Greenville asserted, "If they had not seated Virginia, I was going home. When delegates are legally and regularly elected by their state conventions, I don't think the national convention has the right to tell them they cannot represent the people who elected them." There were many North Carolina delegates who shared Clark's sentiments. On the other hand there were in the delegation individuals who shared the opinion of Governor Kerr Scott who termed South Carolina's behavior as that of "a spoiled child," and labeled Virginia's position as "stubborn."

"I think the states should have been seated," the Governor said, "but there was a lot of child's play on both sides. All this could have been settled if both sides had not been so stubborn."

Delegation chairman Cameron Morrison took a more middle of the road view of the situation. Morrison declared, "Democrats always would wrangle and pull each other's hair; that's the free American way. We'll nominate a great president and elect him. We are going the right way now."

As things developed during the turmoil of controversy and nominations, North Carolinians came forward to play a prominent role in the day's events. Senator Willis Smith's plea on behalf of the Virginia delegation was a factor in the outcome of the vote of the convention. Lieutenant Governor H. P. Taylor made a seconding speech for the nomination of Alben Barkley as a presidential candidate.

Had not fate taken a hand in the day's events, one of the freaks of political history would have taken place. The nation would have seen the Governor of North Carolina and the Lieutenant Governor of North Carolina making seconding speeches for opposite candidate. Governor Scott was slated to make a seconding speech for the nomination of Governor Stevenson of Illinois. But when the list of nominees for the party standard bearer became so long, it was agreed that Stevenson would receive only two seconding speeches instead of three. Governor Scott bowed quietly out of the picture. He was asked to make a seconding speech for the Illinois Governor and agreed to do so, but when things developed as they did, he relinquished his speaking time on the candidate's behalf to Delaware which was ahead of North Carolina on the convention roll.

RALEIGH — After visiting East Carolina College at Greenville with the advisory budget commission several days ago, your reporter wrote about the "subtle" changes which have taken place there during the past years. It was reported that the name of the college had been changed by eliminating the word "Teacher" from official title, to conform to the broadened scope of the courses as well as in teacher training. It was also noted that the college now performs the multi-purpose job of not only training teachers but providing educational opportunities for young men and women in other fields. No criticism of the changed concept was stated or implied. The fact of the change was reported.

One member of the official college staff expressed appreciation for the story. Another voiced resentment, stating that it seemed the reporter was "employed by the University and not interested in the people of Eastern North Carolina." That indictment is difficult to understand, in view of the fact that the original story emphasized the change was made in response to apparent demand of the people of Eastern North Carolina, and that the broadened curricula offered opportunities for wider diversity in courses for those who might otherwise not have such opportunity.

There has been for several years a trend in that direction, not only in North Carolina but throughout the whole country. The Greenville institution was the first in this state, but by no means the first in the nation, to drop the "Teacher" designation as evidence of the new purpose to serve a larger number of students clamoring for admission. Many institutions which still retain the word in the official title have broadened the curriculum base so as to make it a misnomer. At the same time some other institutions which have not previously specialized in training teachers are devoting more attention to that phase.

Another significant item in the East Carolina College story was omitted from the original report for lack of space. A much larger number of the students taking teachers training courses are specializing in elementary school work. That is where the acute shortage has been and is apt to be for several years. During and since the late world war there has been a fairly adequate supply of high school and special course teachers, a serious shortage of teachers for grades one to seven. It has been necessary to employ teachers for these grades who have

Lots Of Rain

Nearly three and seven-eighths inches of rain fell in the Greenville area during thunderstorms Wednesday and Thursday.

The highest temperature here yesterday was 97 degrees. Lowest last night 72, and at 5 a. m. today the mercury registered 77 degrees.

Yesterday a year ago, the highest temperature here was 100 degrees. Lowest that night 70, and at 8 a. m. next day it was 72.

Nearly two and a half inches of rain fell here that day, Mrs. Carl E. Maiden, local observer for the U. S. Weather Bureau, reported.

not had sufficient training to do a top rate job. It appears that under the new policy inaugurated by President John Messick at East Carolina, effort is being made to supply the acute need for elementary teachers as well as to afford opportunity for students interested in general education. Whether that is good or bad depends upon the viewpoint. The fact is reported for its news value, not for propaganda one way or the other.

Demand is being made upon other white teacher training colleges at Boone and Cullowhee, and upon the three Negro teacher colleges at Elizabeth City, Fayetteville and Winston-Salem for broadening the curricula, so that students who cannot attend other schools may still obtain a general college education. East Carolina has moved faster and further in that direction, but the trend is general. Certainly it will require larger appropriations to meet that demand, just as it requires more money to provide courses in the public schools other than "reading, 'riting and 'rithmetick." It is believed that the people who dig up the taxes to provide these wider opportunities are entirely willing to pay the bills. They have a right to know what they are paying for and what they are getting for their money.

Gov. Scott Adds Much To Color Of Demo Convention

By DAVID J. WHICHARD (Special to the Reflector)

CHICAGO — With thousands of Democrats gathered here for the 131st National Democratic Convention, there are many colorful characters on hand to provide page upon page of copy.

Some of it may be good; some just run-of-the-mill.

In a way the convention is a reporter's nightmare. In another it is the answer to a dream. Good quotations which will be read and remembered back home are being uttered here and there — if a reporter takes time from the serious side of the activities to listen for a moment to the lighter side.

Even in the face of competition of hundreds of publicity hounds, Governor Kerr Scott gets this reporter's vote as one of the most colorful characters at the national convention. He almost always comes up with the unexpected answer-filled with the home-spun philosophy he has learned in years on the farm and in North Carolina politics.

For instance this morning about 1 o'clock after the day's convention he and a reporter had a little chat. They were in the alternate section of the North Carolina delegation where the Governor was just talking and waiting for another event of the already long, eventful day.

In view of the fact that Scott is the Chief Executive of the Tar Heel state, and titular head of the Democratic Party there, the question was posed, "What does all this wrangling and action here on the convention floor today mean?"

The Governor propped his foot on an unoccupied chair and thought for a moment. Then in his familiar flat drawl he said, "I don't know what it means. This is a mighty long way from Haw River."

To that the reporter replied in jest, "Governor, I believe you are one of the few people here I have asked a direct question and have gotten a perfectly honest answer."

Well, that started it.

Governor Scott took the cue. "I haven't had but one man to tell me the truth since I've been here," he said dryly — "all due respect to these distinguished gentlemen" — making a gesture to include the thousands of people in Chicago. "That man is the elevator boy at the hotel. Everytime I go in the elevator he tells me to watch my step. That's the only sound advice I've had since I've been here."

That is the kind of thing men spend weeks trying to think to say, but with Governor Scott, well, it just seems to come naturally.

IN SPITE OF HEAT— Huge snowbanks defy July sunshine near the top of Logan Pass, through which this highway crosses the Continental Divide, Glacier National Park.

Chicago, July 25 — (By Special Correspondent.)

In a sensational development today, it was ascertained that Chicago is not the only town to harbor conventions. A Billy Goat who smuggled himself into the Convention Hall in a cattle car claims that Philadelphia is as conventional a city as he has ever seen. But a stranger, a delegate from the State of Maine, whom he bumped into in a shower bath where he has been living, claims that New York also has conventions. The Stranger, a moose, said that the proof of this was the fact that here he was right in that very town of New York attending the Convention of the B. P. O. E. despite the heat and the rain.

It was pointed out to the moose that this was Chicago and, whereas it certainly was warm, it was not raining at the moment. As we turned off the shower for the moose, he said he had been waiting for three days for the management to fix the roof which he figured had been leaking at a pretty steady clip. He was a sort of soggy moose as he climbed out of the tub.

He was rather discouraged to learn that he was not attending the Elks Convention and said that he would resign probably and join the Loyal Order of Buffalo. The worst thing he claimed was that he had been sending wet postcards back to the hometowns telling them what things were like in New York. He concluded himself by remembering that it could have been raining in New York if I went off looking for a job that he said had not been filled since 1912, the position of a party symbol. Before he left he played a solo on one of his horns: "As Maine Goes, Pogoes the Nation."

Bell Arthur

Mrs. Earl Hemby was hostess to the C.W.F. of the Arthur Church last Monday evening at her home. Mrs. Jack Smith, president, presided and gave the devotional from the women's page in "World Call," using as Scripture passages from the book of Acts. She closed with a prayer. The program was given from the first chapter of the new book the group is using this church year, "The Church Invades the Pagan World," and was presented by Mrs. G. S. Nichols.

At the business session, Mrs. Deshields made several important announcements concerning the work of the church and it was voted upon as to how much the group would contribute as a goal to the work of the whole church this year. Mrs. G. T. Tyson, secretary, called the roll and read minutes of the last meeting in closing the missionary benediction was prayed in unison. The hostess, assisted by her daughter, Mrs. McCaskey, served delicious strawberry ice cream and assorted cookies. There were two visitors present, Mrs. Fannie Willoughby and Mrs. Robert McArthur of Clearwater, Fla.

Friends will be glad to know that J. M. Reel, father of Mrs. Bruce Strickland, has returned home from Duke Hospital following an operation. Mr. Reel is 82 years old and makes his home with Mrs. Strickland part of the time. Mrs. K. M. Crawford was a weekend visitor of her sister, Mrs. Ray Olesby, in Winterville. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Nichols were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Vandford near Lizzie. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Coward and daughter Patricia of Portsmouth, Va. were visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Nichols last week. K. M. Crawford and Jessie R. Young visited the Georgia tobacco market this week.

Friend Is Decoy For Rifle Expert In Bagging Reds

WITH U. S. FIRST MARINE DIVISION, Korea (AP)—A sharpshooting sergeant using a fellow marine as a decoy claims a perfect but highly unofficial record—nine Chinese snipers killed with nine bullets.

But the company commander put a stop to the bizarre tactics. The Marines today released the story.

Sgt. John E. Boitnot of Chicago, a medal-winning marksman, and Pfc. Henry A. Friday of Nekosoa, Wis., were stationed on an outpost far forward of the Marine division's main line of defense.

They devised this deadly game: Friday, acting as a decoy, would expose himself until a Chinese sniper opened fire. Boitnot, armed with a rifle mounted with a sniper scope, would fire just once and exclaim "scratch one" enemy.

Boitnot said "the whole idea started one day when Friday made the mistake of standing up in the trench. A sniper fired at him and I fired back. I killed him."

Friday volunteered for decoy duty. In two days they set a "remarkable if highly unofficial record" of nine Chinese snipers claim with nine bullets. The men said they checked their kills with a powerful telescope.

Boitnot, whose wife lives at Comfort, N. C., is a Marine Corps distinguished rifleman. The release said he won a silver medal in Marine Corps matches in 1949, a bronze medal in Southeastern matches in 1950 and placed second in the Wirgman Trophy match in 1948 at Quantico, Va. After word of the loss spread, offers of help and book contributions began to pour in from church, school, civic and veterans organizations, newspapers and book companies. Book contributions and messages came from all over the United States and also from Africa and Hawaii. Temporary location for the library was obtained in a nearby frame house. Volunteers repaired and redecorated the structure. Miss Ruth L. Barnard, the librarian, says the library lacks books in only a few categories such as travel, navigation and the sea, biography and more volumes on Cape Cod.

How 2 Platforms Compare

CHICAGO (UP)— A comparison of main planks in the 1952 Democratic and Republican platforms:

FOREIGN POLICY
Democratic — Peace with honor is our goal, and can be attained if post-war Democratic policies are continued. We have hurled back the Reds from South Korea, showing the Communist that the United Nations will resist aggression. The United States can't face aggressors alone, so it will support allies around the world.
Republican — Democrats lost the peace, fumbled and vacillated in a futile attempt to contain communism. They invited war in Korea, then refused to fight it to win. The GOP will fire diplomats who engineered our present plight, will wage peace and win it; will support collective security, but limit foreign aid.

NATIONAL DEFENSE
Democratic — Pledges continued development of balanced defense forces, land, sea and air; rejects afford all the defense necessary for security.
Republican — 'rnc program is "disgracefully lagging." Russia may not wait. GOP will develop defense force "in being, as distinguished from paper plans." Adequate air power will be built as fast as possible.

CORRUPTION
Democratic — Party commends congressional disclosures "under vigorous Democratic leadership," of derelictions in public service, and pledges to continue investigations as needed. But slander and defamation of character won't be tolerated.
Republican — Administration record of "fraud, bribery, graft, favoritism has shocked and sickened the people." GOP will end corruption, oust crooks and grafters, restore honest government.

CIVIL RIGHTS
Democratic — Party favors federal legislation to guarantee all, regardless of race, creed or origin, equal rights to jobs, personal security, the ballot. Also urges action to end Senate filibuster "after reasonable debate."
Republican — GOP believes states carry main responsibility in maintenance of civil rights, but pledges federal action against lynching, poll taxes, and segregation in national capital. It will enact law "to further just and equitable treatment in the area of discriminatory employment practices," but this won't apply where states end such practices on their own.

COMMUNISM
Democratic — Administration has been alert to dangers of disloyalty in government service, has exposed and punished those guilty. President's loyalty program "has served effectively to prevent infiltration by subversive elements and to protect honest and loyal public servants against unfounded and malicious attacks."

Republican — Administration has appeased communism at home and abroad. Reds have infiltrated government, at cost of lives, dollars, and atomic secrets. There are no Communists in GOP.

PRICE AND WAGE CONTROLS
Democratic party promises to remove controls when conditions allow, but will retain them "so long as the emergency requires them." Democrats will try to redress injury done white collar and fixed-income families by "weakening" amendments Republicans in Congress forced into anti-inflation laws.
Republican — Democrats have used controls to bolster party power, not control inflation. Republicans will end "injurious" price and wage curbs and halt "senseless" use of other restrictions or business GOP will fight inflation by encouraging full production.

TAXES AND SPENDING
Democratic — Party rejects "reckless promises" to cut taxes, but favors reduction, especially for low income groups, "as rapidly as defense requirement permit." Nation can't escape bill for security, but spending will be kept to lowest practical level. Opposes general federal sales tax.
Republican — GOP goal is balanced budget, reduced debt, economy in government, cut in taxes. Taxes will be collected impartially and without political interference.

a mild flurry of excited preparations... and then little or nothing was done.

If a political party is entitled to claim the credit for accomplishments during their tenure of responsibility, they must also bear the burden of the errors and sins of omission and commission.

In the 1952 Democratic platform, the party "commends" congressional disclosures "under vigorous Democratic leadership"... but in addition to this, there is a strong feeling that Senator Estes Kefauver has been by-passed by administration leaders in his campaign, bid largely because he aired too much dirty linen.

Since the conclusion of Senator Kefauver's corruption-hunt and crime probings there has been no concerted effort to carry on his work. Half-hearted efforts became so bogged down in the morass of technicalities and red tape that one is left to doubt the sincerity of those activities. It is difficult to believe that a truly crusading spirit of uncovering corruption in government could have been actually sidetracked by anything less than a lack of interest.

Surely, it would have been a more reassuring than discouraging gesture for the Democratic convention to have dwelt at more length on their outrage at misdeeds and Red activities. There would then have been left no doubt in the public mind as to just how seriously this rot is regarded.

Strength for the Day
 BROOKLYN

Some time ago I stood at the bedside of a friend about my age who has passed through a severe illness. His outstanding symptoms were profound melancholy and a conviction on his part that his life had been a failure. "How little I have accomplished," he complained. "What, as a matter of fact, have I ever done that can really be called worthwhile?"

Well, the truth is that he has done many good things, just as we all have. A person who calls himself a complete failure is undoubtedly sick—in both body and mind. For we all have done something in life in which we can take a great deal of satisfaction. Human life is a vast enterprise. None of us is ever permitted to do anything except lay just a few bricks. Quickly we lay them and pass on. Some day a great super-structure will lower into the heavens and our few bricks will be in that resplendent wall of glory. But even the greatest saints and world leaders will have laid but few. Everyone of us has had significance. Everyone of us has significance today. If you feel otherwise, call the doctor. You're sick.

Yes, we have all laid a few bricks, and personally I thank the Lord that I have been able to throw a few. How about you?

CHICAGO—The Eisenhower-Nixon ticket's principal plan and hope of November victory depends on several factors.

Democrats preparing to depart from this convention are praying that Ike will stumble because of political ignorance or his reliance on unwise men from the East—mainly, Governor Tom Dewey of New York and his Wall Street cronies, political and financial.

General Eisenhower and Senator Nixon must stage an aggressive and sparkling campaign against Trumanism and "new dealism," which no GOP combination has dared to do in recent years under the Willie-Wilkie leadership.

Ike must get rid of the ballot-box saboteurs which Albany and downtown Manhattan have hung around his party's neck since 1940, according to the new GOP leadership.

CRUCIAL—The GOP, as even the Democrats concede, have named their strongest ticket in a generation. If they cannot win with this duet, and if they suffer a fifth successive defeat on November 4, the Republicans might as well fold up.

In a real sense, Eisenhower's domestic, political "crusade" is as crucial as his landing on Normandy beaches eight years ago.

But there is strong evidence of Republican suspicion, pain and dissent in Taft territory in the politically important Mississippi Valley, Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, etc., and in Warren-Knowland's Far West.

Midwesterners do not like the rejection of Senator Taft, who has framed, spoken and voted their conservative views on Capitol Hill for many years. However, being conservative people, they will vote for Eisenhower under certain conditions.

How he reacts to their demands may determine whether Eisenhower will be the next president of the United States.

HATRED—The people in the Middle West—straphangers on the subway, as well as the politicians—hate Tom Dewey. They regard him as the architect of political defeat. To them Dewey is a man of disaster.

Furthermore, it is awfully hard for people in New York or northeastern United States to realize how great and deep is the hatred of Dewey out here.

Unless he publicly repudiates the New York governor, which would be difficult to do without a show of ingratitude, Eisenhower may run as poorly in the non-heartland as Dewey did in 1944 and 1948. He lost ten normally Republican states.

The people out here "like Ike." But they don't like his Dewey, Aldrich, Henry Luce backers, the same financial and publicity New York crowd which put over Wendell Wilkie in 1940 and Dewey in 1944 and 1948.

Unless Eisenhower finds a way to tell off these eastern politicians and financiers, he is gone goose.

AMAZING—In view of Dewey's great executive ability as Governor of New York, it is amazing that he should be the most hated and despised man in American politics. He probably ranks with such disliked political characters as Henry Clay, John Calhoun, James G. Blaine and William Jennings Bryan.

In the opinion of Midwest political authorities he must throw Dewey to the wolves, or lose about 100, midwestern electoral votes.

TREATMENT—California's two great political leaders, Governor Warren and Senator Knowland, are not too happy over their treatment by General-Nominee Eisenhower at Chicago.

After he was nominated, he was given a list of seven vice-presidential potentials. He picked Senator Nixon because he was the least vulnerable to attack.

JEFARDIZED—But the important and anti-Eisenhower factor is that he did not consult Warren or Knowland before deciding on young Nixon. Earl and "Bill" might as well sit on their hands on November 4. Had Ike behaved so ineptly in his World War II relations with Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin, we might have lost World War II.

His managers' poor strategy at Chicago has jeopardized his chances of victory. Ike's must be a sparkling campaign to offset Dewey delinquencies.

Somebody Told Me
 By L. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

This week in Greenville we have had plenty to talk about: the new one-way traffic system, the frequent interruptions of our electrical current, and the Democratic National Convention.

Wednesday night was the first one during either convention that television reception was excellent in Greenville. Before, it has been readable but not good enough to give the details.

And fortunately, the program Wednesday night included two good speeches, by Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn and Vice President Alben Barkley. As the TV camera swept through Convention Hall there was one very noticeable circumstance: no one seemed to be paying any attention. Yet, ironically enough, newsmen say that Barkley's speech was the best listened-to of the convention thus far.

But the TV camera didn't lie. Many delegates were reading newspapers. Many more were in bull sessions, and still more seemed to be just wandering around the convention hall. You have to consider that by now they've heard so many speeches that they need a rest. But it was surprising to me to see the gross lack of attention. It almost reminded me of Congress.

The Reflector's representative in Chicago, Managing Editor Dave Whitcomb III, mentioned in last night's paper the fact that Olaf Ray Boyd was looking for a N. C. delegate to nominate him for the Presidency. Everybody laughs at Olaf Ray's continued efforts to gain political office, when his primary concern is selling hogs and shrubs. But Olaf Ray is the man who should laugh at us. He gets more free publicity that helps him sell goods than any man in the State. He can approach anybody in the State with his sales-talk and nine of ten have heard of him.

A full page of advertising in the Raleigh News and Observer costs $500, but Olaf Ray rated a free full page when he ran for Governor. Kidding Jarvis Allgood, Delegate John Clark wired, "It looks like Boyd on the first ballot." Everybody loves a laugh, but by making himself the target Olaf Ray sells plenty of merchandise.

The Democrats are wisely plugging their claim to fame: they have given the country prosperity, which after all is what we want. On the other hand, there has been corruption. Which does the public care most about? There's your answer.

And I thank you.

You are likely to see a lot of ads with pictures of coins in them soon. When you do, don't go running to the Treasury of the Secret Service. It's probably legal.

In a little-noticed action, Congress eased the rules to permit the reproduction of illustrations of coins. It may now be done. Permission of the U. S. District Attorney is required, however. If you've ever served time on a counterfeiting rap, the chances are you won't get a go-ahead.

The first advertiser to take advantage of the amendment was the Bradford Dyeing Association, U. S. A. An ad in the trade press showed four pennies tumbling out of a purse to put over the idea that manufacturers can "buy repeat customers for pennies" by using the association's men's wear linings. There have been one or two other uses of coins and a lot of advertising agencies are working on the idea while it is still fresh.

They are finding out that federal permission isn't all that is necessary. Photographers and photostaters refuse to copy coins, engravers refuse to make engravings depicting coins, stereotypers refuse to make mats and some publications refuse to run them. Explanations that it is all legal now usually fall on deaf ears; the law against picturing coins is so old and tough that craftsmen and others want more than somebody's say-so. So if you plan to use pictures of coins better attach a copy of the law and of the permission to the job ticket.

The law prohibiting the picturing of paper money has not been changed.

It is now legal to import reproductions of foreign stamps in their original sizes and colors if the stamps have been demounted. This results, not from any change in the law, but in a new interpretation of existing laws by the Treasury.

A book titled, "The Royal Philatelic Collection," containing such reproductions, is about to go to press in England. While it was legal in England, previous interpretations would have prevented its importation here, which was silly because the stamps in question were British. So the Treasury revised the interpretation and agreed to let the book in if the British Embassy would certify all stamps were demounted.

HOW TO PROVE WASHER IS EASY ON CLOTHES

Convincing is the demonstration of an automatic washer put on by an Aurora, Ill. company. The demonstrator puts a pair of greasy overalls, a $10 bill and a raw egg into the washer and turns it on. When the machine is opened, the overalls are clean, the bill is uncut and the egg unbroken.

TIES GROW POPULAR

Nearer and narrower men's neckwear is popular and likely to become more popular in the fall, a survey by the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers indicates. In keeping with the trend, stores are stocking more smaller and narrower tie clips.

JUDGE APPROVES USE OF SACCHARIN

The use of saccharin in certain food products may be legal, Federal Judge Frank A. Picard, sitting in Columbus, Ohio, refused to condemn a quantity of soda wafers which add flavor and fix to drinks because they contained saccharin. However, he did condemn the shipment on the grounds that it was mislabeled.

The decision will probably go to higher courts for final determination.

BITS AND PIECES OF BUSINESS NEWS

Sales of toiletries and cosmetic products may reach a billion dollars this year for the first time, says the Toilet Goods Association. Two banks have agreed to finance tuition at Stevens Institute of Technology at 4 per cent with no handling charges. The National Potato Chip Institute calculates that Americans last year ate a pound of chips last year. A committee has been named to formulate a new safety code covering material, design, fabrication, installation, testing and operation of gas pipelines and related facilities.

The Blood program Is Up To Us

Possible loss of the Red Cross blood program in Pitt County would be one misfortune which the everyday citizen can help to avert.

The original enthusiasm expressed by generous donors faded after the first three visits, and the following three calls for blood met with only indifferent or little success.

Since inauguration of the program in our county, donors have provided 691 pints of blood; in contrast to this, patients at Pitt Memorial Hospital have required 424 pints during the same period.

The fact that their needs were easily and quickly met should add, in the minds of most of our citizens, to the stature of importance attached to this fact of Red Cross functions.

Lives were saved... right here close to home; and the course of disease and injuries was alleviated, meaning less time wasted in costly idleness and prolonged treatment.

Remember too, most of the donated blood was returned to the people from which it came, the citizens of Pitt.

The record of past benefits, while impressive, is overshadowed by the added security which each among us is assured with the full resources of the regional blood supply center at our disposal in the event of emergency.

There is no reason for our people to lose the benefits of that insurance against personal disaster. Nor, to be altruistic, should others dependent upon a continued supply of whole blood and plasma be denied that which can be so easily given.

Much may hinge on the next visit of the bloodmobile to Pitt County. Continuation of the program may well be at stake. The success or failure of the next and succeeding blood collections lies squarely in the hands of those who will benefit most by its retention.

Be there; won't you?

They Commend Clean-Up But Omitted Outrage

A weakening aspect of the national Democratic convention to date is an attitude of defensive arguments on issues of international and domestic import.

Most striking is the utter silence on past instances of corruption in high places; and the notorious case of Alger Hiss seems all but forgotten. The "red herrings," "influence peddlers" and "tax favors" may have been ignored by the political big wheels at Chicago; but surely they have not been forgotten by the shocked and incredulous public who look for and expect the highest standards of morality in the conduct of governmental affairs.

It was an "unfriendly" Congress that instigated a clean-up of government, both in the fields of morality and infiltration, by Communists and their sympathizers. When at last the administrative branch of government did take up the job, there was

They seem to control our rivers and streams, despite our court decisions, they grant power dams against our best interests; tell us whether we need more aluminum plants to cause a power shortage; whether we choose to keep our fishing industry, one of our best natural resources, or let an appointee of the President regulate our economy. We have watched their domination of the power industry to the detriment of private enterprise and the best interest of our citizens."

Such machinery requires capital investment and such investment can come only out of earnings."

Around Capitol Square

AFRONTED People around Capitol square and elsewhere in North Carolina have voiced sympathy and full support for the 24 y. ars. North Carolinians are slow to anger, but once aroused they can fight back as vigorously as anybody. The insulting attitude of some of the extreme left-wingers in other sections may tip the balance in this state away from the Democratic candidate—xxxxxxThere is nothing in North Carolina law nor in the Plan of Organization of the Democratic Party in this State that recognizes the national convention. Such recognition as has been accorded grew up as a tradition and a custom. Officials of the National Democratic Committee, in preparation for the convention now in progress, required sworn certification of delegates and alternates chosen by the recent State convention. The sworn statement was provided by Chairman Everett Jordan and Secretary Clifton Blue of the State Executive Committee. The fact remains that there is no authorization in the party plan of organization for sending delegates to a national convention. It has been done: wit' out question for years. An interesting question is what would happen if some North Carolina Democrat challenged the right of the folks now in Chicago to represent the State in the national convention.

NO LAW Not only does the Democratic Party Plan of Organization ignore the national setup, but there is no provision in State law for placing the name of candidates for President and Vice President of the United States on the general election ballot. The election laws are specific and detailed with respect to getting candidates for Governor and other State officials, members of the General Assembly and local county officers on the ballot. An act of the 1933 General Assembly provides that names of presidential electors shall not appear on the ballot, but that instead the names of candidates for President and Vice President shall be printed, and a vote for them shall be considered a vote for the electors whose names have been filed with the secretary of state. An act of the 1951 Legislature provides for nomination of electors in state conventions or by other method authorized in the party plan of organization. But the statutes and the plans of organization of both major parties are alike silent on the matter of getting the names of presidential candidates on the ticket.

OVERSIGHT - That gap in the chain of events probably occurred through oversight and in recognition of long standing custom which has been to accept newspaper reports of national convention action as authority for the State Board of Elections to print the candidates' names. When Ben Prince, Frank Taylor and other well-informed leaders of the Democratic party in North Carolina stated at Chicago that our State laws took care of the whole "loyalty" issue, they undoubtedly were speaking in good faith and in line with tradition. But they were putting something into their concept of the law that is not in the law books. The statute does say positively that names of candidates for president and vice president shall be printed

Editor's Note: Trellis Mae Peeble, America's most average wife, finds that every Democrat is a king-maker in the following letter to her husband giving an inside view of the Donkey Serenade:

By HAL BOYLE
 CHICAGO (AP)—Dea Darling Wilbur,

Well, Honey, the Democratic convention right now is like a barber-shop quartet where everybody wants to sing tenor.

This is the showdown day to pick the presidential nominee, and there are still more candidates than there are delegates. If the convention charged each one a nominating fee, it could wipe out the national debt.

The candidates are all so nervous they are trading each other up as well as delegates. But the one they are most angry at is Gov. Adlai Stevenson, the Illinois sphinx who won't say yes and can't say no.

Adamant Adlai still seems to add up as the popular favorite, but a lot of Democrats are getting annoyed at his coyness.

"I think Stevenson just confuses this convention wit', a radio give-away program," said one delegate. "He will accept the nomination all right, but he figures if he waits a little longer he maybe also can win an electric refrigerator, a new car—and a week's trip to Bermuda."

With balloting time so near, everybody is as nervous as a cat in a dog pound. The Donkey men are all ears, listening to the rumors that fly around like sparrows in a popcorn storm.

Here you are just a few, Wilbur, to show you how silly rumors can be:

1—"Taft has sent some of his best organizers here to work for Dick Russell."

2—"Eisenhower sent some of his best organizers here to disrupt the Harriman campaign."

3—"A Kefauver supporter collapsed under the rain, sat down in a chair, and began to sturm his stomach—under the delusion he was a banjo."

4—"Harry Truman is working a ouija board in the White House trying to get it to tell him what candidate to back."

Somewhat, Dear, I think Alben Barkley is lucky to be out of it all if he really is. I saw him give his farewell speech last night, and I will remember that grand old man all my life.

I went as the guest of Mr. Petrol, that rich oilonaire from Texas. He isn't dubious delegate any longer. They finally seated him, and he said:

"Well, it's about time. That chair is getting moss on it."

When Vice President Barkley finished his speech, there were tears in the eyes of everybody, including Mr. Petrol, who said: "I haven't gush I like this since I hit my first oil well, Trellis Mae."

But, Wilbur, the thing I liked best about the Veep was that, when he was through and they called his wife to the platform, the first thing he said was, "How did I do, Dear?" I know he said it, because I could read his lips. And she just smiled and held his hand up in a V-for-Victory signal.

When the ovation was over at last and he had shaken the hands of all the politicians who came up to say goodbye, he just stood quietly there for a moment. He looked out past the waving banners, up to the big signs saying, "61 Million Jobs" and "Twenty Years of Plenty." He looked at chieftains-Jefferson, Jackson, Grover Cleveland, Wilson, Roosevelt, and Truman.

He stood there all alone at the summit of his life, and, oh Wilbur, his lifetime was in his eyes. He lifted his hands and shook them gratefully to the four corners of the great hall, like a solemn old Indian chief saying farewell to the sun, and then he turned and walked out of the light and into the dark.

Wilbur, it suddenly made me terribly homesick. Are you all right? Now just don't eat salads and things like that while I'm gone.

Trellis Mae
 P. S. Wire more money. Perle Mesta bought a new dress, so I had to, too.

Washington Letter
 By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON - State and county fairs are growing bigger, with 80 per cent of all those attending them living in cities and towns.

Harris Baldwin, chief of the exhibits section, Department of Agriculture, has designed, planned, booked and shipped its exhibits to fairs, farmers' meetings and conventions all over the country.

"We have to talk loud and fast," he told me. "By talking loud I mean we use vivid colors, life and animation. By fast, we try to design an exhibit so that within 30 seconds the average person can grasp our idea." Mr. Baldwin says the studies made at the New York World's Fair of the Department's own exhibits showed that people don't look at an exhibit a full minute. They also show you don't need a full minute to get an idea into somebody's head.

"People don't remember the details, so we don't try to get many into an exhibit," he said, "we just refer the visitors to our publications or to a local agricultural agent."

Exhibits for the big shows sometimes spread out 125 feet and take a freight car to ship. The fairs pay two thirds of the freight and furnish space, labor and trucking costs. The Department sent carload exhibits to about 22 big state fairs and livestock shows last year, and some 70 little fairs, meetings and conventions.

Backing up his contention that fairs are getting bigger every year, Mr. Baldwin said the Texas State Fair at Dallas in 1951 boasted an attendance of 2,320,000, while Minnesota's state show drew close to a million and the Los Angeles County Fair 1,076,000.

The exhibit section starts making plans in June for fairs to be held in the fall. Exhibits range from subjects strictly agricultural, such as how to dry grain, to broader things like soil conservation and telling consumers how to know the quality of eggs. Currently, the section is working on an educational exhibit for the Sixth International Grassland Congress to be held in August in Pennsylvania.

In addition to making exhibits for fairs, the section works on show projects and posters for other programs sponsored by the Department. When I visited the section, carpenters, artists were busy turning out dozens of beaverboard bears modeled after "Smookey," the U. S. Forest Service's symbol of forest fire prevention.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

THE PRIMARY SYSTEM

For one would like to see us do away with the nominating conventions, turning the matter of selecting candidates over to the people. It was what we thought we were doing when we set up the Constitution. Through a system of state conventions we picked electors who in turn voted for the President and Vice President. However, our forefathers didn't foresee what later developed, the two-party system. And so, as time moved on, we had only the congressional caucus to nominate our candidates. When, in 1824, several of the candidates refused to abide by that caucus, so laid plans for the convention system.

In recent years, however, we've grown to dislike the nominating conventions. For they give us the voters, the choice of two. If it's Tweedle-de-dum and Tweedle-dee, that's it. In almost all cases in recent years, too, the platforms are all but identical. Slowly, then, we can see, we've been gravitating toward a one-party system. It was so in 1936 when Landon ran; it was so again in 1940 when Wilkie was the nominee, and it was so again in 1944 and 1948 when Dewey was the standard bearer. Whether it'll be so in 1952 depends on the issues Eisenhower supports. That's why so many are disgusted with the present convention system.

If, let us say, all states had primaries on the same day and if, from those who offered themselves, we could pick whom the public wants, not whom the politicians want, we might still get Tweedle-de-dum and Tweedle-dee, but if we did it would be because the people picked them. The likelihood is, however, that we'd get two different philosophies more often than we do now. The likelihood is, too, that we'd get issues in the campaigns, something we don't always get now. Unless we make some changes reasonably soon, however, we'll gradually drift into a one-party system and the totalitarian state.

God Prepares a Leader

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buscher

Scripture—I Samuel 1:1-4:1A.

Hannah, wife of Elkanah, was childless and she grieved about it. She went to the temple, and prayed fervently that she be given a boy child, promising that she would dedicate him to the Lord's service.

Hannah bore a son and named him Samuel. When he was weaned she took him to the priest Eli, saying, "For this child I prayed, therefore I have lent him to the Lord as long as he liveth, and she left the babe with Eli."

Samuel grew and served Eli. One night he was awakened by a voice calling him. He went to Eli, but he said it must be the Lord calling, and Samuel should answer, "Speak, for thy servant heareth."

The Lord told Samuel that Eli had sinned and would be punished. When Samuel told Eli what the Lord had said, he answered, "It is the Lord; let him do what seemeth him good."

MEMORY VERSE—I Samuel 2:26.

God Prepares a Leader

THE CHILD, SAMUEL, WAS DEDICATED TO JEHOVAH

Scripture—I Samuel 1:1-4:1a.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL OUR LESSON today begins with what our newspapers would call a "human interest" story—the grief of a married woman who was childless.

A man named Elkanah had married two women. His first wife was Hannah, the one to whom God had given no children. The second was Peninnah, who had borne several.

Peninnah taunted Hannah with her childless state, and Hannah was most unhappy. However, Hannah was the one whom Elkanah loved, and he asked her if it was not enough that she had him.

Every year Elkanah went to Shiloh, where the Ark of the Lord was kept, to offer sacrifice and to worship. Hannah went with him and kneeling in the temple she prayed fervently to Jehovah, asking that He would bless her with a child, and promising that if He did she would dedicate him to God's service.

Hannah prayed silently, only her lips moving, and Eli, the chief priest, seeing her, thought she of meat were offered on the altar they had their servants snatch the choice pieces for their own table, not even allowing the fat to be burned on the altar, which was the appointed way of consecrating the whole sacrifice.

They also took the part that the one who brought the sacrifice could lawfully claim as his. They were also guilty of worse sins. How could the people worship devoutly in a temple where such practices existed, where the priests, whose lives were dedicated to the service of God, were immoral? They were servants not of Jehovah but of the evil one.

Eli knew of his sons' practices but he had not the moral courage to dismiss them from their office.

In contrast to these evil priests, was little Samuel. He "was the doorkeeper of God's house in Shiloh. He ran messages for Eli. He opened the doors of the tabernacle in the morning, and he shut them at night. Samuel lighted the seven-branched candlestick at sunset and he put it out at sunmust be drunk, and he reproved her. She explained that she was praying, and then he gave her his blessing, and said, "Go in peace, and the God of Israel grant thee thy petition that thou has asked of Him."

Hannah went home much comforted, and in time she had a son and called him Samuel, saying, "Because I have asked him of the Lord."

Hannah did not forget her promise to the Lord, and when the child was weaned, probably when he was about three years old, she took him to Eli with sacrificial meat, flour and wine, saying, "Oh, my lord, I am the woman that stood by thee here, praying unto the Lord."

"For this child I prayed, and the Lord hath given me my petition which I asked of Him; therefore also I have lent him to the Lord; as long as he liveth he shall be lent to the Lord."

Then Hannah sang a beautiful song of praise to Jehovah for her blessing, a song that reminds us of the Magnificat of Mary, mother of Jesus. Little did she think what a great blessing she was bestowing upon her people who were so oppressed by first one enemy and then another.

Jehovah made Samuel a leader who was to establish the kingdom by choosing kings to rule over them and make them a great nation. Hannah, by the way had other children, so her great sacrifice did not deprive her of the joy of having children in her home.

Now Eli had two sons, who were priests in the temple, but they were corrupt men. They were greedy, and when sacrifices

The Sport Reflector

By BOB WILSON

Pittsburgh's Pirate Pirates as of yesterday stand to become the first team in either league to be eliminated from the 1952 pennant race.

As of Thursday the Pirates needed only a combination of 18 rookie victories or Pittsburgh do-eats to remove them from contention.

The Pirate team of this year hasn't been much, in fact one might even say that they haven't been anything.

With Branch Rickey as General Manager the Pirates one bright spot in their plans for the future.

Rickey is no mean horse trader and if anyone can improve the Pirates' future then Rickey is the man for the job.

The Detroit Tigers have been manhandled by the press on and off during the current campaign for not bringing up Russell "Rabbit" Sullivan from their Buffalo farm to strengthen their sagging outfield.

North Carolina papers have a high opinion of Sullivan's ability because of the talented display he gave while he was with Danville.

In his three years of organized ball Sullivan has not failed to bat at least .310.

Sullivan was discovered while playing for the Fredericksburg, Va. "All-Stars." How much he received for signing has never been disclosed but it probably was a pretty fair price.

The night that the scouts were in the stands Sullivan blasted a ball over 500 feet from home plate.

He was fortunate enough to be in the stands that night and after the game had a chance to see the ball.

If ever a baseball was flattened that was it. There were six stitches broken.

It is this type of hitting that the Tigers need if they are to continue to keep their record of never having finished in the American League cellar.

The Tiger front office says that "Rabbit" is one of the three top prospects with their farm system.

Red Rolfe said that Sullivan could easily play in the majors. Dick Herbert, News and Observer columnist, said that he could feel no sympathy with the Tigers' plight as long as they allowed players of Sullivan's caliber to remain in the minors.

Everyone seems to think that he's a wonderful prospect but in the bushes he remains. It's a crazy world.

The Jaycees seem to have the Lions' number. At least that's the way it looked at Little League park yesterday when the Jaycees shut out the Lions for the second game in a row.

Yesterday's game was the opening contest in the battle to decide the city Little League champion and though the 9-0 margin was a trifle one sided the game had its highlights.

Up until yesterday only one ball had been hit over the fence at the Little League park. Yesterday two departed beyond the field's confines.

Klutz Fisher, the Jaycees' stellar third sacker, popped a three-run job over the left field barrier in the opening frame and then in the second inning Billy Sermonts smashed out another three-run four master.

Sermonts' blow traveled an estimated 220 feet which is pretty good for a Little Leaguer.

Sermonts is a big boy and can hit the long ball but his hitting would really be sensational if someone would correct his batting stance.

When battling Billy dropped his rear shoulder and swings up. If he ever learns to level down on that ball then it'll be more than one ball going out of the park with his name on it.

Though the Lions lost they did turn in some fine plays. Mack Roebuck at shortstop played one whale of a game.

That boy has all the earmarks of a great ball player.

Little Charles Puryear was battered roundly by the Jaycees but he pitched gamely all the way.

He also came up with some really great fielding gems.

Only one slight incident marred the contest. A certain Lion player who has built up a good reputation as an athlete refused to run out a ground ball to the pitcher and threw his bat down in disgust.

No criticism as of yet, just thought we'd mention it.

Game today starts at 5 and we're hoping to see more people out there to watch some of the best baseball available anywhere.

Russians Greet American Guests With Talk, Vodka

HELSINKI (UP) — Nine U. S. Navy midshipmen sampled Russian vodka and propaganda and found it heady stuff.

"They had us pretty well convinced that only Russia want peace and we want war," Charles Manning of Cleveland Heights, O., coxswain of the gold medal Annapolis eight-oar shell, said.

"They really were swell to us. Even sent their bus to bring us back to camp."

Six of the crew were luncheon guests of the Russians at the Otaniemi camp restaurant yesterday where Russian waitresses served up caviar and vodka.

"It was terrific," said Frank Shakespeare of Dover, Del., bow man on the Navy eight that beat the Russians in Wednesday's final.

"You could feel that vodka all the way down to here."

He pointed to his belt buckle.

"We went over there determined not to talk politics," Manning said.

"We just wanted to find out what made them tick. But they tried to get across the idea that the Russians really want peace and that it is the U. S. that is keeping the world on edge."

Lucky Fans Will Get A 'Contract'

OMAHA, Neb. (UP) — Officials of the Omaha Cardinal baseball organization have decided to do something about shouts of "sign him up" that they hear whenever a fan catches a foul ball in the bleachers.

Cardinal President Bob Hall said starting Thursday night, the first fan who catches a foul will be signed to a Cardinal "contract."

The fan will be given a miniature "contract" attesting to his fielding ability and thanking him for his loyalty.

Jaycees Capture Opening Contest, 9-0

Fisher And Sermonts Homer; Allen Wins

A Lion killer has been found. Walker Lee Allen, ace Jaycee right-hander, yesterday set the Lions down for the second time this week without a run.

The Jaycees posted a 9-0 shutout to take the opening game of the city series to decide the Little League championship.

Allen hurled a neat five hitter yesterday and was given some tremendous support at bat by Klutz Fisher and Billy Sermonts.

Allen hurled a shutout win over the Lions on Monday to put the Jaycees in the playoffs. Yesterday's game gives him a record of twelve consecutive scoreless innings pitched against the Lions.

The victors tallied three times in the opening frame. Nichols led off with a scratch single down the third base line and was forced out at singled by Hudson. Sermonts then Hudson and put two men on the bases.

Klutz Fisher, Jaycee third baseman, then came to bat and unloaded a pitch over the left field barrier for a three run homer.

This blow won Klutz and his family a free meal at the Proctor Hotel as guests of Mr. Ken Phillips.

The Jaycees tallied six more times in the second frame off losing hurler Puryear. Big blow of this rally was a home run over the center field wall by Billy Sermonts with two men aboard.

Sermonts' blast cleared the fence at the 185 ft. marker by a good 25 feet.

This hit won Sermonts and his family a free dinner at the Proctor Hotel also.

Charles Puryear went the route for the losers and gave up 11 hits.

Unperturbed By Wallet's Theft

CHICAGO (UP) — Pvt. Robert Goehring, on a 30-day leave from Fort Bragg, N. C., cheerfully told police two holdup men took his wallet.

Goehring thought the situation was comical because he was carrying all his money in his pocket and the thieves fled with an empty wallet.

Tiger Fans Hail Dropto As Hitter Like Greenberg

MAJORS 5 HP 521a 25 By CARL LUNDQUIST United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP) — There is precious little for fans of the battered Tigers to cheer about this season, but they were hailing wallopin' Walt Dropto today as a worthy successor to Hank Greenberg.

The parallel is somewhat remarkable because the two tall, powerfully-built slugging first basemen — Greenberg of the past and Dropto of today — resemble each other enough to be brothers.

Dropto, like an assembled machine, couldn't click consistently with the Boston Red Sox, and finally was traded Detroit, Greenberg's old stamping ground, in the big deal just before the 1952 trading deadline.

Since Dropto electrified the baseball world by racking out 12 straight hits to tie an all-time major league record against the New York Yankees and Washington Senators on July 14 and 15, he has kept banging away and has boosted his average to .300 from a puny .265.

He now is tied for the league lead in runs batted in with 63, and yesterday he won another ball game with a two-run homer, his 16th, which beat the Senators, 4 to 2.

The blast came in the eighth inning to counter a two-run homer by Mickey Vernon in the top of that frame. It gave lefty Bill Wright his sixth victory of the year.

The defeat prevented Washington from gaining ground on the Yankees, who lost 4 to 2 to the fourth-place Indians. Cleveland climbed to within one percentage point of the third-place Senators.

The runner-up Red Sox, four games behind, also muffed a chance to gain when Chicago topped them, 3 to 0, on Lou Kretlow's two-hitter.

St. Louis, the Browns ended a seven-game losing streak with a 4-3 triumph over Philadelphia.

In the National League, the Brooklyn Dodgers stayed seven games ahead of the New York Giants by dividing, a doubleheader with Cincinnati, losing the opener, 3 to 2, then winning, 2 to 1 in 11 innings when Duke Snider broke things up with a home run, the 100th of his big league career.

The Giants defeated the St. Louis Cardinals for the second time in a row, 9 to 5, and the Boston Braves edged the Chicago Cubs, 3 to 1.

Philadelphia and Pittsburgh had an open date.

Hornets Battling For First Place

By UNITED PRESS The Charlotte Hornets are roaring mad, but they still can't get back into the lead in the Tri-State League pennant race.

The Hornets, just a few percentage points behind first place Gastonia, took out all of their fury on seventh-place Knoxville last night, 13 to 3.

The Hornets flew into three Knoxville hurlers for 25 hits and tallied for six runs in both the third and sixth innings.

However Charlotte didn't gain an inch as Gastonia calmly toppled Asheville, 3 to 1, to hold a firm grip on the top spot.

Rock Hill banged out 16 hits, but Greenville used 12 hits to edge the cellar-dwelling Chiefs, 9 to 8, and Spartanburg walked over Greenville, 7 to 1.

YESTERDAY'S STAR By UNITED PRESS Walt Dropto, whose two-run homer gave Detroit 4 to 2 victory over Washington.

Harrison Dillard Sets New World Hurdles Mark

By OSCAR FRALEY United Press Sports Writer HELSINKI (UP) — The ambition born 16 years ago in the heart of an awed adolescent paid off today for a man who never quit when faced with frustration.

That is the success saga of slender Harrison Dillard. And his victory in the Olympic 110-meter hurdles marked the end of a dedicated journey far longer than the distance between his native Cleveland, and the winners' tribune in Helsinki's sprawling stadium.

For this was a troublous trip which started in 1936 and winded its anxious way through the perils of war in Italy, heartbreak in London and four frantic years of added waiting.

It all started for Dillard the day 16 years ago when the great Jesse Owens went back to Cleveland after his triumphs in the international games at Berlin.

"I was 12 years old at the time," Dillard recalled as he clutched that long-coveted gold medal in one hand and the winner's bunch of red and white carnations in the other.

"They held a big parade for Jesse and I was sitting on a curbstone when he went by.

"That's when I made up my mind to come to the Olympics," Dillard said.

In the days that followed, Dillard went back to his classroom at East Tech High School — the same school from which Owens had gone forth just a few years before — and concentrated harder than ever on his studies. He wanted nothing to bar him from track competition.

As the years passed, Dillard's fame began to spread. The skinny Negro kid filled out into a young man with lean, rosy muscles and long legs which swept him swiftly over the hurdles.

That's when he took his first "tour around his desire. For there was a war. And young Dillard went into the Army for 32 months. His " hitch" included 16 months of combat as an infantryman in Italy.

Back again, he picked up where he left off as a budding national track figure at Baldwin-Wallace College. Soon he was regarded as the peer of the world's hurdlers.

But he failed to qualify for the 1948 Olympic trials in his specialty. In desperation, he tried out for the 100-meter dash, made the squad — and was a surprise winner of the sprint at London.

He explained, "I wanted the hurdles championship on which I had set my heart so long ago."

The four-year interim passed slowly. Dillard is 29 now, an age of decision for athletes. And he knew it was now or never as far as the Olympics were concerned.

Admitting that he had lost some of his "sheer speed"; since the London games, he said:

"I figured that by the time I'm 33 — four years from now — I'd have enough of this," he said. "And I figured I could win."

He got the start he wanted — and a new Olympic record of 13.7 stands.

So Harrison Dillard is a satisfied man as he gets ready to go back to Cleveland. There will probably be a parade in his honor.

It would start all over again with another youngster sitting on the curb watching him go by. But the kid will need plenty of what Harrison Dillard had.

Goes Into Second Round Tonight

CINCINNATI (UP) — Southpaw Art Larsen of San Leandro, Calif., fires the first volley for the U. S. Davis Cup team today when he meets Japanese tennis ace Jiro Kamamaru in the first North American zone match.

Besides trying to get the American team off to its best foot towards winning its 15th cup, Larsen will have a special incentive when he meets the top-ranking Japanese star.

He'll be trying to avenge the lck he suffered at the hands of Kamamaru a year ago in the Japanese national tournament at Tokyo. Kamamaru defeated the sixth-ranked U. S. player, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2.

Vic Seixas of Philadelphia, ranked first in the U. S. plays Japan's Atsuki Miyagi in the second match of the singles event.

Builders Defeat Royal Crown

Royal Crown Cola gave Home Builders a scare before going down to defeat 17-12 in softball league play yesterday.

The game was called at the bottom of the fourth. Taylor at short stop and Conway at third base paced Royal Crown with three for three.

Home Builders banged out four home runs as part of their 17-hit attack. Rowlette and Carawan each had a circuit blast while Dash, Builder catcher, poked two out of the park and added a single and a double for a perfect day at bat.

Gordon was the winning hurler and Chattin the loser.

June Bond Sales Go Over $81,700

Sale of Series E, H, J and K Savings Bonds in Pitt County for the month of June totaled $81,712.50. This amount was in Series E and Series H bonds (combined). This sales announcement was made today by County Savings Bonds Chairman Waldrop based on the monthly sales report from Allison James, State Director of U. S. Savings Bonds in Greensboro.

The total figures for North Carolina's 100 counties were as follows: Series E and Series H Bonds (combined) $2,848,152.75; Series J Bonds $28,404.00; Series K Bonds $973,500.00; totaling $3,250,056.75.

County Chairman Waldrop, in announcing the above sales, explained that Series E and Series H Bond sales are reported as a combined total rather than separately because both Series are sold in the same market — to individuals only, and because the Series H is a companion bond to Series E.

Chairman Waldrop commented that the new current income B Bond is proving very popular, and expressed his gratification at the cooperation of all media in advertising and publicity informing the public about the new feature of all Series of Savings Bonds.

Safeguards Are Offered Against Dangers Of Heat

The excessive heat of late—and accompanying cases of heat prostration—has resulted in constructive comments from a local physician regarding safeguards.

One medical man said yesterday if preventive measures are not taken by private citizens in regard to farm laborers, farmers will suffer materially from loss of work-time.

In addition, he stated, physicians will not be able to care for illnesses brought about as a result of the unusually hot season.

Landlords and businessmen should insist that those people who work with or for them wear sufficient clothing to protect the body from the sun. In the matter of eating, people should include more salty meats, water, fruit juices, butter fat, breads and some sweets.

Abstinence or certainly more temperate use of tobacco and alcohol should be practiced. If working outside, sufficient clothing should be worn to protect the body from direct rays of the sun and colored glasses might prove helpful in some instances.

The physician stated his remarks are not designed to unduly alarm people, but that the abnormally hot weather really does present a critical health problem.

Panic Averted

CHICAGO — (AP) — Thousands of television viewers saw an unscheduled bit of drama at the Democratic National Convention early today when a burning newspaper threatened to set off a stampeding panic.

Assistant Fire Commissioner Anthony J. Mullaney expressed the opinion the blaze may have been set deliberately to force a marathon session.

Three men, including Amos Heacock, president of Air Transport Associates, Inc., of Seattle, were burned slightly while putting out the fire.

With TV cameras aimed at the scene, Peter J. Clougherty of Boston, an assistant sergeant at arms, grabbed a microphone from Gov. James F. Byrnes of South Carolina and cried out: "Don't get panicky. It's only a newspaper. It will be put out in a minute."

He kept repeating this until the blaze was extinguished.

Confusion Said Accident-Cause

Police reported two collisions of motor vehicles Wednesday and Thursday in connection with the installation of new traffic rules in Greenville.

Cars driven by Fred McLahorn, Route 4, Greenville, and William C. Taylor, 510 East 11th Street, Greenville, collided at the intersection of Evans and Third Streets Wednesday night. The crash apparently resulted from confusion about street signs and traffic lights. Damage to the McLahorn car was estimated at $65; Taylor's car, $20. None of the occupants was injured. No arrest.

Two cars collided on Evans Street at Fourth Street Thursday morning about 9:30. One was driven by Roy T. McDonald of Chocoi; the other by Roy R. Harris, Route 4, Greenville. Police quoted McDonald as saying he was confused by new traffic markers and failed to observe a traffic light. None of the occupants was hurt; no arrest was made. Damage to McDonald's car was estimated at $175; Harris' car, $125.

Capt. Raymond T. Rogerson, acting chief while Chief Guy C. Langston is away at a National Guard encampment, said these are the only two accidents of importance that occurred during inauguration of the new traffic regulations.

Much Overplanting Of Tobacco In Pitt Found

More than 40 percent of Pitt County's 2,777 tobacco farms were found to be overplanted at the completion of allotment measuring last week.

According to figures released by James Meredith, secretary of the Pitt County Production and Marketing Administration, 1,093 farms in the county exceeded allotments this year.

"Overplanting ranged from .2 of an acre up to as high as eight acres," Meredith said. "Farmers who are not overplanted above .1 of an acre are not considered as having exceeded their allotments and do not have to destroy that small surplus."

The PMA secretary explained that most of the farms overplanted did not go over an acre or two. He disclosed that in seven or eight acre surpluses were on farms where growers are attempting to raise their allotments and surplus tobacco will be sold on red penalty cards.

"However, we do not like to encourage such activity — in fact we frown on it," he stated. Meredith added that most of the 40 percent surplus has already been destroyed, and opined that less than one percent of the county's tobacco acreage is still Total number of farms in each farms overplanted number and percentage overplanted are: Ayden, 276 farms, 123 overplanted, for a percentage of 44.57; Beaver Dam, 130 farms, 34 overplanted, for 26.15 percent; Belvoir, 101 farms, 28 overplanted, for 27.72 percent; Bethel, 136 farms, 56 overplanted, for 41.18 percent; Carolina, 155 farms, 64 overplanted, for 41.29 percent; Chocoi, 468 farms, 185 overplanted, for 39.67 percent; Falkland, 81 farms, 37 overplanted, for 45.68 percent; Farmville, 191 farms, 87 overplanted, for 45.55 percent.

Paoctolus had the highest percentage of overplanted farms in the county, while Beaver Dam had the lowest. Meredith's figures disclosed there are 1,044 farms in the county engaged in peanut cultivation.

Foresters Kill Parasite Growth

ST. ANTHONY, Idaho (AP) — Foresters are trying to give a kiss of death to a variety of mistletoe in some forests of the Intermountain region.

It isn't the decorative or kissing kind of mistletoe. It's a dwarf or false mistletoe, a parasite which robs a host tree of plant food. The mistletoe slows the growth of trees, distorts their shape and sometimes kills them.

Grant A. Morse, Targhee National Forest supervisor, said selective herbicides (weed killers) are used to destroy the parasite.

Actress Miscast As An Alcoholic

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—Judge Wilbur F. Downs, who recently celebrated his 25th year as a Long Beach municipal court jurist, says a lot of strange cases have appeared before his bench.

For instance, says the judge, there was a former Broadway actress turned alcoholic. After appearing on drunk charges a dozen times she was treated at a sanitarium and released as cured.

Almost a year later, said the jurist, she appeared again bedraggled and bleary-eyed. It seems she had been screen-tested for a skid-row drunk part in a movie but the director decided she was completely miscast.

Casting Magic

Precise duplicates of hard metal parts used in everything from sewing machines to jet planes are harvested from these magic trees

Away back in the time of the Pharaohs a metal craftsman discovered how to make duplicates of his work by a unique "lost-wax" method of casting. For years this process has been used to make fine jewelry. And your dentist also uses it to make precise dental inlays.

NEW METHODS ALSO—And today foundries use also using the thin-shell process—as new as "lost wax" is old. It uses synthetic resins and sand to make a thin but highly accurate sand mold. Its advantages? Clean, smooth castings... made faster... with much less molding materials.

THEY'RE UCC DEVELOPMENTS—The people of Union Carbide perfected and are using Precision Investment Casting in its present form. And they developed and manufacture the plastics and chemicals that have helped make the thin-shell process valuable to modern industry.

FREE! Learn more about the interesting things you use every day. Write for the illustrated booklet "Products and Processes" which tells how science and industry use the ALLOYS, CARBONS, CHEMICALS, GASES, and PLASTICS made by Union Carbide. Ask for booklet K.

FROM WAX TO METAL—A wax pattern of the object is made and encased in a jacket of molding material. Then the wax is melted away and molten metal is poured in to replace it. The resulting casting is so smooth and accurate that little or no costly finishing is required.

HELL'S HORSEMAN

BY WILLIAM HOPSON

Chapter Eight

Ro turned slowly. His big body seeming to pivot on a boot heel. He looked the newcomer over carefully, from head to toe. "You can start asking any time," Montana said.

"Who're you?" Ro Runderd whispered.

"The name is Brand Edmonds. And while you're asking questions, you can do a little explaining about McBain—the gent you weren't supposed to know when he boarded the train last night."

"Why did you kill McBain last night?" he queried coldly.

"Because," Montana answered softly, "he tried to pull a gun on me."

Austin's dry, amused chuckle sounded hard in the silence that followed. "So that's how it was? I allus figured, Ro, that you were playin' both ends against the middle, and this shore bears it out. Kinda funny you gettin' all worked up over McBain being plugged. You'd mebbe call that a coincidence, hey? Mebbe you'd call it another 'coincidence' that you don't hardly get in town until you head for the saloon where Black Jack's horse-stealing coyotes are hanging around and have been ever since that herd got here."

And then his gun was out in a flash, covering them all and at the same time keeping its muzzle half tilted at Ro Runderd's side.

"Clear out, Ro," he ordered. "And you other bussards too. Edmonds here has already done the country a good favor by plugging McBain and I don't aim to have him risk getting killed in a two to a dozen game. Clear out!"

They went, filing silently through, but it was noticeable that Runderd went back alone to the hotel as the men from the back country slouched down the street.

ing swiftly. An idea was forming, making little ripples on the surface of his mind and spreading wider.

"Suppose Ramson was stopped?" he asked Austin. "What about Black Jack Caswell and Kutch Saunders? You think they'd try it?"

Austin shrugged his shoulders. "I doubt it. They're more sneaking hoss thieves than rustler on a big scale."

"I hear they don't exactly love this Ramson man," Montana pressed on.

"Few people do. What you got in mind, Edmonds?"

"I can stop Ramson," Montana said.

arson charges today in connection with a $30,000 fire that destroyed the Red River school last May.

Both were being held in York County jail, one under $10,000 bond and the other under $20,000 bond.

Officers said the two also may have been connected with a series of break-ins in the Rock Hill area. A 12-year-old brother of one of the youths was also arrested, but he was released in custody of his mother.

The meat and coffee were brought and Montana started to eat. He said, between hungry bites: "Why did you buy?"

"I got wiped out in a sudden crash back East. Cleaned. Then Ramson came along, dabbling a bit in finance himself—the big, bluff, hearty cattlemen from the West. He had Belle with him and the two girls became good friends. He told me about the possibilities in cattle ranching out West and that he was figuring on heading South. Wanted to sell his ranch at a fair price, minus stock. It sounded good to me. I had enough left from the sale of my estate and a few securities, and I knew I was about through anyhow. I figured it would be something substantial for Helen, who's been wanting to leave the East and come out here. So I bought the ranch. I put the last money I had into six hundred head of good breeding stock. And now this business. It's hard to believe that the man I called friend is what he now seems to be. But after over-hearing Austin here, there seems little doubt that I've been taken in. So I'm offering you a job. Run that ranch for us and name your own salary. Hire any men you want. But run it so that when the—ah—time comes I can go out knowing Helen is secure."

"I'm not looking for that kind of a job, Forrest. But I'll throw herd on to the ranch and let the women rest up. Then send them on in by stage. I don't know where Ramson is—"

"I do," interrupted Austin calmly. "He pulled out of here and headed over in the back country. He's probably rounding up some of his tougher case hands to start rustling a few head along. So I'd personally advise you to wire for some cars and load the whole six hundred up and ship 'em East to the packing houses. They're lean and tough and stringy after that long drive North, but it's better to take a big loss from that than to risk the whole caboodle."

Forrest leaned against the bar. "Perhaps that would be best," he finally said.

Tobacco Growers Continue Feel Drouth Effects

VALDOSTA, Ga. (UP)—Growers of the Georgia-Florida flue cured tobacco belt continued to feel the effects of the drought on their pocketbooks today.

While almost all grades were showing price gains the general quality of offerings was showing a gradual downward trend thus far during this first week of the 1952 auction sales.

Three Southern States Forcing Issue Of Status

CHICAGO (UP)—Three Southern states today forced the issue of their status in the Democratic convention by demanding that Chairman Sam Rayburn rule specifically on whether they may vote.

Gov. James F. Byrnes of South Carolina, John S. Battle of Virginia and Robert F. Kennon of Louisiana who head their delegations, sent Rayburn a joint letter calling for a specific ruling "as to whether we are, or are not, members of the convention."

"We wish a ruling as to whether or not we are entitled to full participation in the deliberations and votes of this convention," they said. A spokesman for the three governors said that if Rayburn did not rule by the time of the first roll call, they would force the issue from the floor.

Stocks And Market Reports

NEW YORK (UP)—Stocks lost half of yesterday's gains in the first half of today's session. Profit-taking reduced prices over a broad list, although losses held to small amounts in most instances. Industrials, hardest hit, were down 1.16 points in the average. Rails lost 20 cents and utilities seven cents.

Sales to noon exactly matched the 570,000 shares of the previous session. First hour volume was large—380,000 shares, best since June 6. In the second hour sales were only 190,000 shares, against 200,000 shares in that period yesterday.

Wider losers included Rohm & Haas, Texas Pacific Land Trust, Crown Cork & Seal, Atlantic Coast Line and Standard Oil of California—off one to three points.

Steel shares drifted down on the good news of a steel strike settlement. Motors balanced off tiny gains and losses. Chemicals eased and coppers held firm.

Test Of Untried Serum Near End

SIoux CITY, Ia. (UP)—A mass inoculation test of an unproved polio serum drew to a close here today with the last of 16,000 children getting shots.

Children crowded five clinics in such numbers this week that the testing program closed sooner than had been originally planned.

A team of 25 medical specialists administered the injections of gamma globulin and a harmless gelatin solution. Doctors know the serum will not prevent polio, however, they hope it may eliminate paralysis from the crippling disease.

Children were not told whether they received gamma globulin or the gelatin substance. Doctors will keep the type of injection secret until results of the test, second in the nation this year, are compiled.

Sioux City, hardest hit in the nation by polio, was chosen for the experiment because of its high incidence rate. Sixteen persons died of the disease during the current epidemic.

Belvoir 4-H Youth Wins State Oratorical Event

After waxing oratorical, Robert Bright of Belvoir High School yesterday pocketed a fine gold watch and walked out of a Raleigh auditorium—winner of the State 4-H Speaking Contest.

The 18-year-old youth won over five other district winners in the state-wide speech competition. His address was entitled "What 4-H Has Done For Me, My Home and My Community."

The speaking contest was held as part of State 4-H Short Course taking place in Raleigh this week. This is the second honor to be won by a Pitt County 4-H clubber, William Harris, also of Belvoir High School. Tuesday was inducted into the State 4-H Honor Club.

Young Bright last spring was graduated with honors from Belvoir High School, where he was president of the student government, president of the FFA, president of NFL and member of the Beta Club.

In local 4-H work, he was secretary-treasurer of Belvoir 4-H Club, member of Pitt County Star Club and narrator of County 4-H Health and Achievement Program this year. Bright was runner-up in the district speaking contest in 1951. Bright was declared state winner.

Last spring, Bright won the county-wide "I speak For Democracy" contest sponsored by Greenville Jaycees. In yesterday's competition there were 12 district winners, six boys and six girls. Miss Patricia Aldridge of Tryon won first place in the girl's division and received a set of silverware.

This is a national contest and the best records of contestants will be entered in national competition. The youth is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Bright of route 1, Maccliesfield.

Tar Heels Let . . .

(Continued from page one) Stevenson demonstration, but again Governor Scott, an avowed Stevenson supporter, did not get into the mass of people in the aisles. The North Carolina standards remained in their holders by the seats of the delegates and alternates.

At one point during the Kefauver demonstration, an over-enthusiastic Kefauver supporter made a dive for the North Carolina alternates' standard to carry in the parade. When she snatched the standard, it broke in its holder, and both man and standard went plunging to the floor. C. B. Martin and Haywood Robins quickly recovered the battered sign and returned it to its station.

From then on the standards was under careful watch. Delegate Frank Hutton of Greensboro wandered by, looked at the standard and remarked, "It's battered and bruised, but it's unbroken." Chairman Morrison stroked back to pat the standard and said to Martin, "They didn't get it, did they? Hang on to it boys." Still later William B. Umstead who was at hand when the attempt was made to get the standard to lean over to Martin and said quietly, "If you leave, get somebody to guard it." And guard the standard they did for the rest of the long day.

By the time yesterday's marathon session ended, the Tar Heels were almost as broken down as the standard, but they were on hand again today when the gavel rapped to resume the business of the convention.

Pre-Ballot . . .

Jim Farley's bald head began to gleam from hurried huddles on the convention floor.

Arizona—

The black hair on the head of New Mexico's tall Clint Anderson marked other huddles where the old pros were moving in.

Arkansas—

The other side was beginning to move now, young Frank Roosevelt, Michigan's Gov. "Soapy" Williams, Moody and the rest. The galleries and the delegates came suddenly awake, fanned the confetti from their hair and ears and sat back for what all hands had been waiting for—an official roll call showdown on the Harriman-Kefauver combination which was out to stop Stevenson. It came fast.

on the ballot. The inference is clear that this means the candidates of the parties recognized by North Carolina law as set out in G. S. 163-1. There are only three now qualified—Democrat, Republican and State Rights Democrat, and the last named is inactive. Until these State-recognized parties certify their nominees there is no actual authority to place any name on the presidential ballot.

MESSES UP—The confusion between statutory provisions and the custom came about through attempts to effectively amend the constitution by statute, and the statutes do not complete the job. Chances are the State Board of Elections will do this year what it has done in the past four presidential elections and place on the ballots the names which newspaper stories report were nominated at Chicago as candidates of their respective parties. That will not be in violation of law, because there is no law on the subject. It will be non-legal rather than illegal. Lawyers and politicians both shudder when asked what would happen if some voter would go to court with a challenge of the authority of the Board of Elections to take that action. Conceivably the result could be to deprive North Carolina of its 14 votes in the electoral college. Nothing like that is expected, but the possibility should be removed by appropriate legislation.
