The acetylene torch and the Adams garage, located on the New Bern highway, sometime over the papers shown with the cutting equipment were found wrapped up in two blankets along with the tanks, submerged in the river near the location from which the safe was recovered. Most of the records were found to be intact and useable. One arrest has been made in the case. (Reflector Photo by Roy Hardee)

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP) — Communist staff officers agreed today to the wording of the armistice draft on repatriating prisoners of war, but not to the Allied interpretation of it.

The agreement came in a 40 minute meeting between the No. 2 truce teams. The high level truce talks are temporarily recessed.

The staff officer talks began over the weekend at the request of the Reds, who said they wanted to discuss the wording of some paragraphs in the armistice draft.

In particular, the Communists objected to the U.N.'s terms in the Korean language for "United Nations" and "Korea."

Col. Duncan S. Jernville, senior U.N. staff officer, said he did not think the problems were important.

At today's meeting, he said the Communists brought up the question of "no forced repatriation" by stating they agreed with the wording of the paragraph on prisoner repatriation but not to the Allied interpretation.

Somerville said as far as he is concerned that meant the Reds—at least on the staff officer level—"have accepted the wording of LAKE CITY, S. C. (AP) — Flu-cured tobacco price averages on the 11 South Carolina markets beginning their sales season yesterday jumped $4 over last year's opening day.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture today reported opening day sales totaled 3,537,383 pounds averaged $56.04 per hundred.

Last year's opening day comparative figures were 3,693,538 pounds averaging $52.05. Last year there were nine instead of 11 markets involved on opening day, accounting for the difference in poundage.

Steel Mills Strive For Full Output

Big Plants Expect Production Reach 80 Percent In Next Few Days

PITTSBURGH (UP)—The back-to-work drive in the steel industry gained momentum today but workers in allied occupations idled by the 53-day strike faced new layoffs.

Even though there were arguments over contract settlements through the industry, the nation's largest steel producers drove for full production.

U. S. Steel, No. 1 corporation in the famed "big six," had almost half of its 55,000 Pittsburgh district employees on the job yesterday and expected production to reach 80 or 90 per cent of normal within the next few days.

The company also put 8,000 men to work in the Chicago area and joined hands with Inland, Republic, Youngstown Sheet & Tube and other producers in an effort to restock depleted defense and civilian supplies.

As they prepared to pour first "heats," the steel companies also rushed strike frozen stocks of tin plate and other types of steel by rail and truck to consumers.

Allied industries got an economic shot in the arm by the settlement of the longest steel strike in history and coal miners, railroaders, automotive workers and water transportation men punched time cards for the first time in weeks.

But Henry H. Fowler, defense production administrator, warned in Washington yesterday that thousands of employees of steel's allied industries would be laid off temporarily before effects of the strike wear off.

Fowler said the walkout depleted steel stocks, meaning that thousands of industries dependent on steel must do without it while efforts are made to resume full production for defense.

He said the government would take firm steps to stop a "mad scramble" for steel when the industry reaches full production.

Fowler pointed out the government would give top priority to military, atomic energy and machine tool output, shunning aside all other orders until defense requirements are met.

During this period, he said, there would not be enough steel to go around, thus necessitating the unemployment of many of the 4,000,000 workers in the nation's metal-using industries.

ATLANTA (UP)—Cooler weather moved today into parts of a South blistered by new record-breaking temperatures and still suffering from weeks of drought.

Lower temperatures were predicted across Tennessee and North Carolina, extending lower into the Southeast Wednesday with increasing cloudiness and scattered showers.

This signal of a change in the weather followed a heat wave that set new temperature records and continued to parch drought-damaged crops. There was still no prospect of general rains.

At Tupelo, Miss., the thermometer reached 105.2 degrees and touched off fires in melted tar and oil dripped from auto along downtown streets.

At Nashville, Tenn., the mercury repeated the all-time high of 107 degrees first set last Sunday and at Memphis the temperature set a new official all-time high of 106, topping the 105° reached Sunday.

Forest fires raged across 4,500 acres of dry timber near Spring City, Tenn., endangering the small Reed's Chapel community near Grandview Mountain.

major new saucer study, it was learned today.

A CAA official said the control center radar first started picking up the strange "blips" about 1:30 a.m. and that they continued showing up on the radarscope until 6 a.m. this morning. At some times, he said, there were as many as eight to 12 of the objects on the scope at the same time.

The Air Force will rely primarily on physicists for its "flying saucer" investigation.

This is in line with a tentative opinion already reached in some Air Force circles that the variously described mystery objects in the sky actually are physical phenomena, however imperfectly understood up to now, rather than actual flying discs.

A high Air Force officer, who informed the United Press of these developments, said, "We are fairly well convinced that the so-called 'flying saucers' are not anything posing a threat to air defense of the United States."

Air Force spokesmen insisted there was no military secrecy veiling the quest for "saucer" data. Any seeming reluctance to give out information was based on unhappiness on "ignorance" on military security, they said.

Sightings so far unexplained and increasingly regarded as physical phenomena "show no pattern which would indicate that the objects are being controlled by a reasoning body," the Air Force said.

Anti-American

TEHRAN, Iran (AP)—Bitter attacks on the United States highlighted a debate today in which the Iranian Parliament overwhelmingly approved Premier Mohammad Mossadegh's program for economic and social reforms to head off national bankruptcy.

The seriousness of the anti-American demonstration was underscored when Deputy Ghanat-Abadi demanded the ouster of all Americans from the country. Ghanat-Abadi is the right-hand man of Ayatollah Seyed Kashani, Iran's leading religious figure and a close supporter of Mossadegh.

The demonstration began when a deputy, interrupting his speech on the new government program, shouted:

"We don't need the American military missions. They only bring us headaches. I demand that they be kicked out starting tomorrow."

"They must go," shouted another deputy. "They must go." Then Ghanat-Abadi leaped to his feet, screaming: "Not only them but every American in every office must go."

At that time it was feared the generator might be off the line for more than a week due to the extent of the damage done when a bearing went out. The last casualty in the recent epidemic of breakdowns, a boiler, is being repaired today.

The superintendent explained that two General Electric engineers have been working 24 hours a day since the breakdown in an effort to put current back on the lines uninterrupted.

"Not only the engineers have been working overtime, but our own force voluntarily put in long hours to put the plant back in working condition," Swartz said. "We certainly appreciate their interest and effort in our dilemma."

At the same time, he commended the commission's customers for their exemplary attitude during the crucial period of current failure. "We want to also express our appreciation for the consideration they gave us those three days," he stated.

The trouble began Tuesday night when a boiler blew, forcing out of operation the 5,000 kilowatt generator. It went out at 11 o'clock that night. Wednesday, the added load on a 3,000 kilowatt generator blew a gasket in it and a second generator went out.

Current was interrupted a short time Tuesday and much of the day Wednesday and Thursday. Thursday afternoon late, service was continued and has been in effect since that time.

"Barring unforeseen difficulties, current will continue to flow through our lines in the future," Swartz asserted. He said he had no idea just how much the breakdown cost the commission as he had no report from the company relative to parts, labor and other items.

CAIRO, Egypt (TP) — A high authority said today that deposed King Farouk was personally involved in Army scandals that were a prime factor in costing him his throne.

The statement was made by Mohamed Azmi Bey, former attorney general who led an investigation into charges that 13 high-ranking Army officers, officials and business men were guilty of graft during the Palestine campaign against Israel.

But Azmi said Farouk himself could not be prosecuted because under the Constitution the king is above the law.

An Army spokesman said documentary evidence of Farouk's corruption was being piled up.

"What we knew about Farouk's corruption before the coup was only 5 per cent of what we know now," the spokesman said.

He indicated numerous members of Farouk's royal household also were involved in corruption, and that more additional evidence of the extent of graft in high circles was being uncovered.

Graft during the Palestine war was one of the main reasons for Saturday's lightning "anti-corruption" coup by the Army. It was charged that Army leaders and others supplied the fighting forces with defective equipment.

Reliable sources said Ahmed Kamel Bey, commander of the police guards of the royal palaces, and Mohamed Hilmy Hussein Bey, chief of the Royal Automobile Corps, had been added to those arrested by the new regime.

All Generators At Utilities Back In Operation Again

Supt. Swartz Reports Crisis In Power Service Is Ended

By JESS POINDEXTER
Reflector Staff Writer

All generators are back in working order at the utilities plant this morning and Superintendent Martin Swartz reported the crisis in electrical service has passed.

Swartz said the 5,000 kilowatt generator which kicked out last Wednesday morning and interrupted service for two days went back on the line at 3 o'clock this morning.

At that time it was feared the generator might be off the line for more than a week due to the extent of the damage done when a bearing went out. The last casualty in the recent epidemic of breakdowns, a boiler, is being repaired today.

Petitions Against One-Way Street Traffic Offered

One Alderman Behind Movement; Another Reportedly Sponsoring One

Although yesterday's rumors of circulating petitions against one-way streets were unconfirmed, today they became a reality.

It was learned this morning that petitions opposing the present system of one-way streets in Greenville are present in the city, but it is not known exactly how many are being passed around.

It is a fact that one petition is being publicly displayed in a service station owned and operated by recently elected Alderman George Pugh. The petition sanctioned by Pugh had approximately 50 signatures late this morning.

An employee at Jimmy Wells service station reported Wells also has a petition but it is not publicly displayed. Wells is also a recently elected alderman.

Neither Wells nor Pugh could be contacted this morning for comment, but employees at the two service stations said the infant one-way street system was damaging to business.

The petition displayed at Pugh's station was dated July 26, and read: "We, the undersigned citizens of Pitt County, do hereby disavow the present one-way street system and petition the board of aldermen of Greenville to discontinue same."

It was also rumored that many of the petitions are being circulated among the farmers of the county who will presently bring their tobacco into Greenville for sale.

NAPLES, Italy (UP) — Ousted King Farouk of Egypt came to Italy today, with 40 cases of whiskey, champagne and gin and more than 200 pieces of luggage, to begin his exile.

The palatial 4,561-ton royal yacht Mahrussa, in which playboy Farouk sailed from Alexandria Saturday after being ousted in a lightning "anti-corruption" army coup, tied up at a Naples dock at 1:05 p.m. (7:05 a.m. EST).

With Farouk were King Ahmed Fuad II, his six-month-old son and successor as ruler of Egypt's 19,000,000 people, and 18-year-old Queen Mother Narriman Sadek.

The yacht tied up only 70 feet from the U.S.S. Adirondack, flagship of Adm. Robert B. Carney, North Atlantic Treaty Organization Commander in Chief for Southern Europe. Carney was in Paris, conferring with NATO leaders.

NEW YORK (UP) — A good-humored Sicilian motorist observed today while stopping over on a 62,000-mile international automobile tour that New York City's traffic program is "chuckleheaded."

Dr. Franco Nacci of Palermo said he saw too many "no parking" signs, heard too many horns honking and thought there were too many careless jaywalkers.

WASHINGTON (UP)—Although he is a four-way loser on the Korean battlefield, a 23-year-old Ayden soldier has somehow mastered the art of being happy — he is called the "Life of Ward 33" at Walter Reed Hospital here.

Ward 33 is the amputee ward. Private First Class Huddell Whaley, the Tar Heel, is there because he lost both hands, both eyes and parts of his face in a battlefield blast near Pyongyang, Korea, March 22.

But if he lost these important parts of himself, Whaley didn't lose his sense of humor, or his kidding nature. "I kept his love for his Army buddies, G. I. razzle, and hillbilly music. His high spirits are good medicine for his war-maimed."

Whaley, son of Mr. & Mrs. Owen Whaley, Route 2, says he knows this is hard to believe, "but I don't regret what happened." And he says he has always been happy, and intends to continue to be — "the only way to be happy is to act happy and feel happy," he explains.

When he gets "fixed up," he's going back to his parents' farm and crossroads store near Ayden, First, he's going to "build Mom and Pop a new house" and then he's going to "start working — any work I can do — anything to keep my mind busy."

Whaley was a farm helper when he enlisted at 18. He had quit school in the fifth grade to work the farm so his aunts could run the store. He didn't mind leaving the farm though. He liked Army life and regularly sent home all but $10 of his monthly pay. He still does, explaining "Mom and Pop are getting too old to work."

Whaley doesn't know this day whether he was hit by an exploding mortar shell, or by dynamite. But whatever the force, it blew his right hand off completely, and half of his left hand. The rest of that hand had to be amputated.

At Walter Reed, he has undergone postamputation surgery especially designed for the handless blind. The surgeon divided the two bones of each forearm, and their nerves and muscles, to a point below the elbow.

Each arm thus ends in a fork-like stump, with the oversize "fingers" of the patient's own bone, flesh and skin. He can learn to use these "fingers" pincer-like to handle eating utensils, toilet articles or other small objects.

More important, the twin stump ends are sensitive "feelers," helping the blind to identify things by touch, and even some day to read Braille.

Whaley said he will keep his left stumps free, to carry his cane and for his touch sense. He'll get artificial claws for the right arm stumps, "to lift things and do other heavy work."

Whaley is going to miss his war buddies when he leaves. But he's in a hurry to go — he wants to get that house built for his parents. And when doctor's have finished plastic surgery on his face, he's going to head back to Tar Heels.

Recreation Report Says Playgrounds 'Doing Well'

Despite such handicaps as limited supplies and limited finances the leaders on city playgrounds are reported to be doing an outstanding job.

In the June report to the Recreation Commission, Mrs. Betty Gordon, assisting recreation director, said the playground leaders are presenting city children with a full, well-rounded program, even with the handicaps present.

In checking the playgrounds twice daily, the director said she had observed a tremendous amount of interest and enthusiasm among both the leaders and children.

"With everyday problems, collecting supplies, gathering all new ideas possible and having two and three special events per week, we have had a busy summer which promises to be even more active during the next three weeks," stated Mrs. Gordon.

"The fruits of our progress are definitely more visible with an average attendance of 3,000 children each week. Parents as well as children have visited the playgrounds and have entered into the programs. With all nine playgrounds collecting the friends they have, certainly we can consider them 'good investments' in our program of giving to the citizens of Greenville their money's worth, their time's worth and their own personal satisfaction in a good job well done by the Recreation Commission," asserted the assistant director.

Funeral Wednesday For Mrs. R. J. Smith

Mrs. Lucy Stocks Smith, 44, wife of R. J. Smith of Greenville, died in Pitt Memorial Hospital at 11:30 Monday night, after having been in declining health for the past two weeks and critically ill for two weeks. Funeral services will be conducted at the Chapel of the S. G. Wilkerson & Sons Funeral Home Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock, and burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery. The Rev. H. E. Johnson, pastor of the Greenville Pentecostal Holiness Church, assisted by the Rev. J. W. Bunch of Greenville, will conduct the services. The body will remain at the home and will be returned to the Chapel Wednesday morning at ten o'clock.

Mrs. Smith, daughter of the late I. E. and Mary McLawhorn Stocks, was born and reared in Pitt County near Ayden. She was married to Mr. Smith in 1920, and they had spent their married life in Pitt and Greene Counties and had lived in Greenville for the past six years. She was a member of the Greenville Pentecostal Holiness Church.

Surviving are her husband; a daughter, Mrs. Bruce T. Evans of Greenville; three sons, Ernie and Durwood Smith of Greenville and Billy Ray Smith of the home; six grandchildren; four sisters, Mrs. Lloyd B. Smith of New Bern, Mrs. Howard Smith and Mrs. John Stokes of Greenville, and Mrs. Clarence Cannon of New York; and two brothers, I. L. Stocks of Chattanooga, Tenn. and Andrew Stocks of Ayden.

Attend Family Reunion
Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Brooks have returned from Charlotte where they attended a family reunion on Saturday.

The reunion was held at the home of their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Merrell. All children were present for the occasion except their youngest daughter, Ernelle, who is serving as a medical missionary with the Baptist Foreign Mission Board in Nigeria, West Africa.

The occasion was also the 42nd wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Brooks.

Miss Greenville Asserts Event Kept Her On Run

"Miss Greenville of 1952" returned home with a number of exciting stories about her part in the events which took place at the "Miss North Carolina" contest in Winston-Salem this past weekend.

Patsy Smith, an 18-year old brunette, who represented Greenville, said the most thrilling part of the events was riding through Winston-Salem with police sirens clearing the way for them.

"We didn't have one minute to ourselves," said Miss Greenville. "We were on the go constantly and I have five blisters to prove it."

Patsy also had the opportunity to talk with "Miss America of 1951" who sat beside her at one of the luncheons. "Miss America" gave us many valuable pointers on every detail at the rehearsals," related Patsy.

The pretty Greenville girl said they spent a large part of the time at rehearsals and practiced the complete program. "When we weren't at rehearsal, we were running to luncheons and parties planned for us."

The luncheons were held in a private dining room of the Robert E. Lee Hotel and just the contestants and judges were present. The chaperones, who were termed as "producers" and "directors" were honored also at dinners held in the evening.

The highlight of the events of the weekend was held in the R. J. Reynolds Auditorium and was termed by Patsy and Mrs. Smith as "very elaborate," complete with an orchestra and excellent master of ceremonies.

Mrs. Smith, Patsy's mother, also shared the limelight at the events. During a tour of the city for the chaperones, Mrs. Smith took part on a radio program and was interviewed by reporters.

Mrs. Smith went along with other chaperones to tour "Old Salem" of which a restoration program is underway. Mrs. Smith had already returned from the tour when she was asked to appear on a radio program concerning "Old Salem." The chaperones were taken through the historic town by costumed guides.

"It was one of the most thrilling events of my life," said Miss Greenville, "and I'll never forget one minute of it."

10 Girls Attend State 4-H Week
Ten girls who are members of 4-H clubs in the county attended State 4-H Week in Raleigh last week.

Those taking part in the 4-H activities at Raleigh were Lelia Davenport, Lois Simmons, Rosalie Moore, Lela Harris, Geneva Flake, Maggie Costelloe, Rachel Speight, Rose Waters, Neel Dupree, and Fay Moore.

Lelia Davenport took part in the State Dress Revue and Rose Waters was a participant in the State Health Pageant.

Blame Humidity

It wasn't the heat, but the humidity, which made local people think Monday one of the hottest days in the year, reports weather observer Mrs. Carl Malden.

The temperature lacked one degree of reaching the century mark on the U.S. Weather Bureau thermometers here yesterday. Highest temperature of the day was 99 degrees, lowest last night 74.

Mrs. Malden explained that the relatively high degree of moisture in the ground contributed to making people think new heat records were breaking.

Last Rites Held For Mrs. E. C. Ipock

Mrs. Hattie Brown Ipock, 60, widow of E. C. Ipock, died at nine o'clock Sunday night in Sandston, Virginia, at the home of her son, Thomas Ipock. She had been an invalid for nine years.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Chapel of the S. G. Wilkerson & Sons Funeral Home Tuesday afternoon at five o'clock and burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

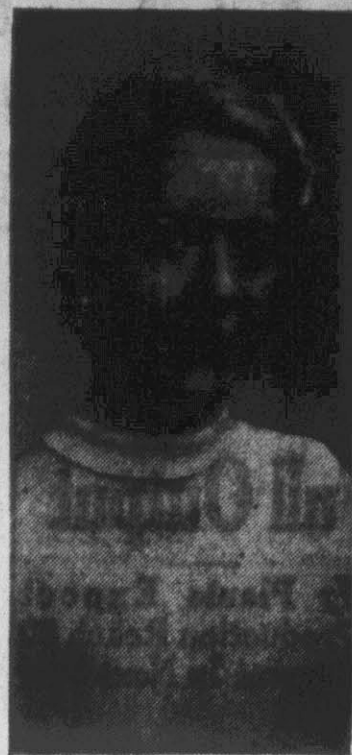

The Rev. Leon Russell, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, will conduct the service.

Mrs. Ipock, daughter of the late William R. and Rachel Murphy Brown, was born in Pitt County and had lived in Greenville until she went to Sandston to make her home with her son. She was married to E. C. Ipock in 1909, and he died in 1948.

Surviving are two sons: Thomas and John E. Ipock, both of Sandston, Va.; two brothers: Jeff Brown of Grantsboro, N. C., and Grover Brown of Ayden; and a sister, Mrs. Wyatt Manning of Grantsboro.

Monday's Cases In Police Court

By CHESTER WALSH

In Police Court Monday, Judge Charles H. Whedbee found Margie Clemmons, Negro, guilty of assault with a deadly weapon—a glass jar.

Testimony was that the woman struck Peggy Hardy, Negro, with the receptacle, inflicting painful wounds. The court's judgment was that she serve 30 days in jail, sentence to be suspended on payment of doctor's bill and $15 court costs. The order also provides that she is to remain of good behavior and not violate any law for a year.

John B. Taylor, Negro, assault with a deadly weapon, 30 days in jail, sentence suspended on condition that he not be in the company of Lois E. Daniels, Negro, at any time. He was to pay $10 on costs and remain of good behavior for six months.

In the case of Dave Whichard, Negro, 1216 Battle Street, charged with assaulting a female, the court ordered that the prosecuting witness, his wife, Mildred Whichard, pay court costs.

Mamie Page Hall, Negro, failure to yield right of way, case dismissed on payment of $10 costs.

In the case of James Anderson, Negro, charged with assaulting a female—his wife—he was given 30 days in jail, suspended on payment of $15, and he is not to molest or harm his wife, Louise Anderson.

Make-Up Should Be Matched With Tan

AP Newsfeatures Beauty Editor
If you're one of those girls who look a little grotesque with a summer tan, it may be due to your makeup.

After your skin has deepened several shades, you will need new cosmetics. But the effect of the sun is only to deepen natural skin tones, so you can wear darker shades of colors you've already chosen. It depends on the amount of tan you've acquired.

When selecting a new lipstick, make a test of different shades on your arm to see which is most flattering to your tan. In using a color chart, keep in mind that there are many color tricks to help overcome problem skin colorings. Rose-tinted make-up will add warmth to an olive complexion. Pale tan powder and make-up lotion are excellent for toning down florid complexions.

If you choose the right cosmetics shades for your tan, you will be able to wear some of the difficult colors.

Brunettes as well as blondes who have elected to stay fair this summer should avoid using very dark make-up to give the illusion of a summer tan. Warm color on the cheeks and lips of blondes will permit them to wear beige or yellow without looking washed out. Pink and rose-hued cosmetics will permit you to wear black prettily, although it normally tends to draw color from the face.

Older women as well as girls can give their complexions that debonair look by choosing the right cosmetics. One good way to find your personal formula is to refer to the color chart in a cosmetic catalog.

LIP LOGIC... A deeper hue of her rose-tinted lipstick helps flatter summer tan.

Couple Married In Morning Rites

Miss Brown Weds Naval Officer From Charleston

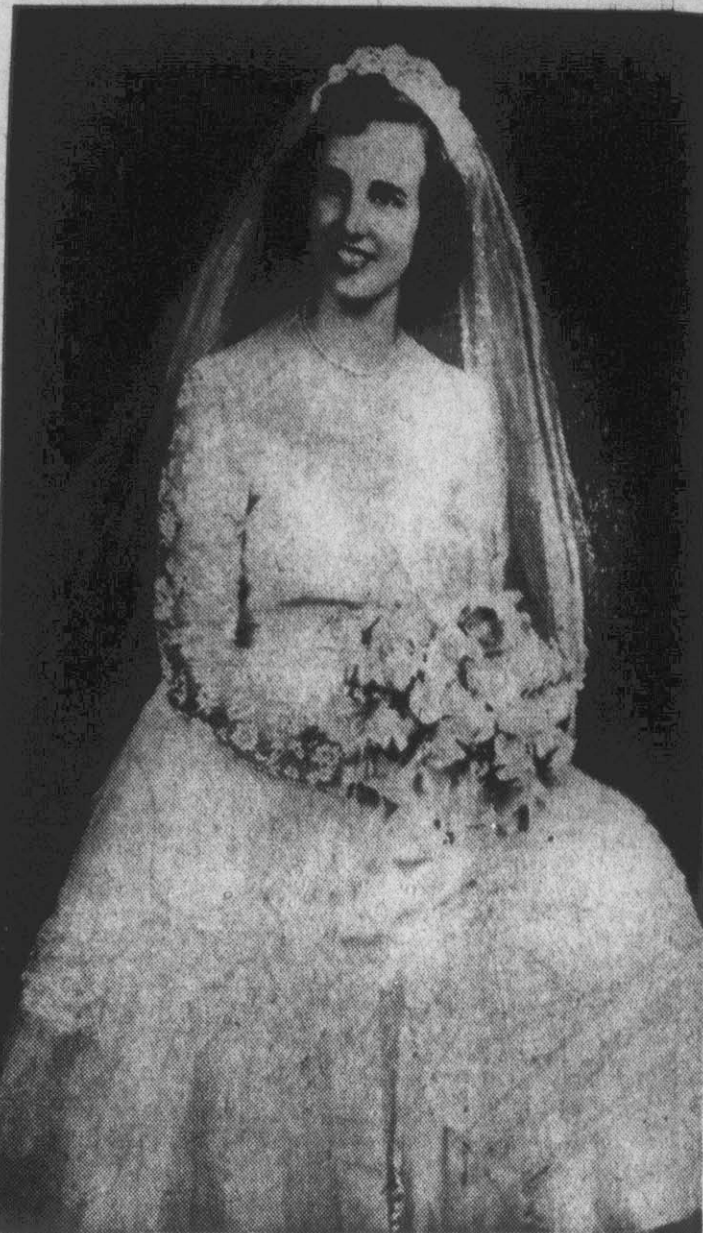

In a ceremony marked with dignity and simplicity Miss Rosalie Brown became the bride of Lt. Alonzo Burroughs McKee Jr., United States Navy. The rites were performed in Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church on Saturday, July 12, at ten thirty o'clock in the morning. The Rev. Leon Russell, pastor of the church, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Rosa Hooker Brown and the late Mr. Brown of this city. The groom is the son of Mrs. A. B. McKee and the late Mr. McKee of Norfolk, Va. Mrs. Paul Toll, organist, presented a program of organ melodies prior to the ceremony. She played selections from Bach, Beethoven and Brahms. Miss Margaret Hines of Roanoke Rapids sang "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden" and Mrs. Norman Wilkerson sang "Bless This House."

The bride entered the church on the arm of her cousin, William H. White Jr., who gave her in marriage. She chose for her wedding a gown of rose point lace and nylon tulle. It was fashioned with long sleeves, ballerina length skirt and lace insertions which were attached to the yoke of nylon illusion. The skirt also had wide insertions of the lace and she wore a pearl trimmed tiara of the same lace with a waist length veil of illusion. Her only ornaments were a pearl necklace and matching earrings. She carried a cascade bouquet of stephanotis and fern centered with a white purple throated orchid.

Miss Elizabeth Murray of Burgaw was her maid of honor and only attendant. She wore a white dress of nylon lace and tulle fashioned with a lace bodice with cap sleeves and small collar. The skirt was made of alternate bands of lace and tulle and she wore a white picture hat. Her bouquet was of American Beauty roses tied with matching ribbon.

Frank S. Pace Jr. of Norfolk attended the groom as best man. Groomsmen were Norman Warren Wilkerson, A. Hartwell Campbell, Robert Lee, all of Greenville, and Robert Morris of Atlantic N. C.

Honor attendants for the bride were Mrs. Wendell Jordan of Waycross, Ga., Mrs. Howard Waldrop, Miss Mary Eakes, Miss Margaret Johnston, Miss Laura Elizabeth Haskins, Mrs. Carl Pierce, Miss Elizabeth Wilson, Miss Helen Perkins, Miss Carmen Dunn and Miss Doris Brown, all of Greenville; Mrs. Cecil Whitehurst of New Bern; Miss Sara Ann Elliott of Massawadox, Va.; Miss Alice Ferabee of Burlington; and Mrs. Fred Turnage of Burlington.

Mrs. Brown chose for her daughter's wedding a powder blue crepe dress with a high V-neckline buttoned with pearl and rhinestone buttons. Her accessories were of white and she wore a shoulder corsage of an orchid. The mother of the groom was gowned in a dress of pink nylon with a small rolled collar, shirred sleeves and a shirred full skirt. Her corsage was a purple throated orchid.

Mrs. A. Hartwell Campbell directed the wedding. Reception immediately following the wedding Miss Doris Brown and Mrs. Wendell Jordan received in the social hall of the Educational Building of the church in honor of Lt. and Mrs. McKee.

Guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. J. Lindsay Savage and introduced to the receiving line, in which were standing the hostesses and the bride party. Traditional green and white were used as decorations, and the refreshment table was centered with a magnificent bouquet of flowers.

After the bride and groom cut the first slice of cake, guests were served by Mrs. Hartwell Campbell. The honor attendants assisted the hostesses in serving the other accompaniments of bridal ices, nuts and mints.

AP Newsfeatures
Vacations can be lonely... at times. Particularly if you go away on a late vacation with Mom and Dad to a resort where there are few young people. But don't let it throw you.

One good way to spend odd vacation hours is at the drawing board. And don't give the excuse "I can't draw." You never can tell until you've tried.

Artist Inna Garsolan suggests that no matter where you while away the summer-seashore, city, country, mountains-you can make scenery pay off with your brush and pencil or drawing pad.

There are lots of vistas just begging to be caught on paper. Simple country towns can be delightfully illustrated, she says, adding:

"Take a sketch pad and pencil with you, or some canvas boards and oil paints—or water colors if your feeling runs in that direction—and try making pictures of what you see. These can be as much or more fun than photographs of your vacation spot."

Mrs. Garsolan uses her own art as a basis for many different types of work. She has designed costumes for plays, created sets for operas, designed furniture, done interior decorating, fabricated puppets and worked as an architect.

A simple little town offers endless possibilities for sketching and painting. The local firehouse, a street lined with maple trees, a cat on the window sill, a hammock in the back yard or a country store window, all have delightful charm.

City kids can depict the skyscraper or factory mill, the department store window or antique shop, a florist's or butcher shop. A city park has endless possibilities for an artist.

At the seashore, lake or stream, the possibilities for the sketch pad are endless. A rolling wave, tossing ship, rowboats, baskets of fish, a fishing pier with a catch of clams or crabs or lobsters, a sunbather, lighthouse, sandpipers and sea gulls all lend enchantment to the artist.

In the country, bucolic scenes are waiting for the artist's eye to capture them. Cows and sheep, pigs and horses, farmers on tractors, birds, bees and wild-flowers offer incentive to the creative.

Even if you are ill and confined to bed, the paint box can cheer you. A sketch or water color of a bouquet of flowers or a chair or table in the room can have real charm and keep you busy and your mind off your miseries for hours at a time.

Pets make interesting models, and if you have a devoted dog or cat put him to work posing for you. A little food on a cat's paw will keep tabby busy licking it long enough for you to get started sketching its main lines. Fill in can come at your leisure. A faithful dog will sit in position for as long as you like.

A bowl of goldfish or a pet turtle can make intriguing sketches. When you start on your artistic venture, you will not need the very best oil or water paints. Department stores have inexpensive oils and water colors which are perfect for experimenting. When you learn to like your new hobby, invest in more materials, read books on the facet of art which appeals to you.

As Mrs. Garsolan reminds us, a background of art can be useful in many endeavors, from fashions to architecture. And if nothing else comes of it, painting and drawing are relaxing hobbies for young or old.

Argentians File Past Bier Of Their First Lady

BUENOS AIRES (UP) — More Argentines filed today past the bier of their first lady, Mrs. Eva Peron.

Her body still lay in state in the Labor Ministry Building in downtown Buenos Aires near the room which formerly served as her office.

Last night huge crowds inched forward through a torrential winter rain and almost total darkness to pay homage to the vi' of President Juan D. Peron. Most street lights were draped in black crepe that cut their illumination to a glimmer.

Since midnight Saturday, several hours after Mrs. Peron's death, the streets outside the Labor Ministry had been jammed. At least four persons were killed in the crush and more than 3,000 were treated for injuries or fainting.

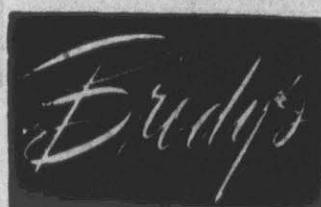

There were 43 Christian churches in New Mexico in 1626 and 34,000 Christian Indians.

Mossadegh Gets Confidence Vote

TEHRAN, Iran (UP) — Prime Minister Mohammad Mossadegh received an almost unanimous vote of confidence from the Majlis, lower house of Parliament today. Sixty-eight out of the 99 members present voted for him. The 69th member abstained.

Kiwanians Stage Amateur Show Thursday Night

Eli Bloom will direct the Kiwanis Club's amateur show at Austin auditorium, on the college campus, Thursday night at 8 o'clock.

The show will be given for the benefit of a Kiwanis recreation fund. In addition to amateur contestants, four professional entertainers will appear on the program. Three cash prizes will be awarded the three best contestants under 16 and three to the three best over 16. Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, vice-president of the Kiwanis Club, is chairman of the committee. John C. (Red) Clifford, Jr., is chairman of the ticket committee.

Eli Bloom said some of the best known amateur entertainers in this section will appear on the program.

Strength for the Day

UP AND OUT
Everyone is familiar with the expression "down and out" as applied to unfortunate people at the bottom of the social or financial scale. It is certainly true that being "down" in terms of money does tend to keep one "out" of a lot of activities, though never, let us hope, out of religious activities. Yet there is another condition even more serious, though less common—that of being "up and out."

All clergymen are familiar with up-and-outers: people who have all they need of their world's goods and who are prepared to be quite independent of religion. They are, in their own opinion, too intelligent to need moral and religious guidance from others, too self-sufficient to need help and reassurance, too enlightened to bother with such old-fashioned stuff as religion. They feel themselves above that sort of thing—as long as life leaves them untroubled.

But life does not leave them untroubled, and when they are in situations where only courage, faith, patient endurance, or resistance to temptation can save them, their real self-sufficiency becomes only too clear.

The ancient Greeks believed it dangerous for a man to become too wealthy, too powerful, too great, too proud: the gods would envy him and destroy him. Our own faith contains an even more valid warning: "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon."

The Democratic Picture Not All Roses

Democrats have gone home from Chicago now, to mull over the activities of the convention, and to evaluate conclusions in the peace and quiet of their home towns.

Those who think everything is rosy in the Democratic camp are in for a rude awakening. There are too many individuals from not only Southern states, but from other states throughout the nation who were shocked and disturbed by the activities of the young left-wing radicals who literally took charge of the convention for the first two days.

Big Democrats by the names of Humphrey, Moody, Lehman, Williams, Douglas and Roosevelt, Jr. apparently were determined to have the party conform to their ultra-liberal ideas, and those who would not conform were to be ruled out. Had not some of the older, wiser, more conservative members of the party taken a strong hand in the convention activities, there would have been an open split which would have left the Democratic organization floundering in many directions.

To say the least, there was more than a grain of salt remaining in the craws of many delegates after hearing FDR, Jr. evade the Southern delegations who were not willing to betray their people by signing the loyalty pledge concocted by the radical element. Particularly was this pill difficult to swallow in view of the fact that young Roosevelt himself saw fit to bolt the Democratic party to be elected to Congress on a so-called Democratic-Liberal ticket after losing the regular Democratic nomination for the office.

In Chicago, more than in any convention in the past, it was apparent there is a wide space between the party radicals and the party conservatives. In Chicago the two managed to sit in the same hall and name Stevenson as a common denominator to carry the party banner in November. The two elements likewise were able to compromise on a platform, but there was open ill feeling still existing between the elements after the gavel sounded ending the convention.

Whether a compromise can be effected four years from now is certainly doubtful at this point.

One of the most promising factors for the preservation of the fundamental Democratic principles within the party was the way Southern delegations whose loyalty was questioned stuck to their position of principle and refused to be run out of the convention by the left wing forces. The Southerners, North Carolina included, fought the radicals to a standstill, and before the convention ended, had registered a victory over the group which would have the Democratic party run their way or not at all.

The wounds from the Chicago convention are deep, and the scars will be remembered. And they should be, for they are not only reminders of what was attempted, but at the same time are warnings of greater battles for principles which are yet to come within the ranks of the party.

The Ear-Marks Of A Beneficial Change

Although it is in the early stages of a trial period, the one-way traffic system in Greenville is proving a successful change from the old system used for so many years.

With the volume of traffic on Greenville streets, it had been apparent for some time that a change of some sort was necessary. The city could not do anything about its horse-and-buggy streets, so the only answer was to be found in new traffic patterns on those streets.

There are people who are very much opposed to the new system, and were opposed to it even when the system was merely a plan on paper. In spite of this opposition, however, the majority of the citizens of Greenville and others who have come to town have been favorably impressed with the new one-way traffic patterns. The system not only makes the flow of traffic in the downtown areas more even and more efficient, but it has added to the on-the-street parking facilities in the business section. That is something Greenville needed as badly as it needed to have its traffic flowing better.

Now that the one-way system has been in use for almost a week, a few flaws in the system are being recognized, and steps will be taken to eliminate these flaws. They were anticipated even before the plan was put to work.

There are reports that an organized movement to do away with the one-way traffic system is being started in the city, but it is our considered opinion that to do away with the system before it has had a fair and reasonable trial would be a step backward instead of a step forward.

Greenville had needed a change in its traffic patterns, and the change which has been made is working out nicely. It has all the earmarks of being a success. For some small pressure group to force the city to do away with the system before it has a chance to prove its benefit to the city as a

National Whirligig

By RAY TUCKER

CHICAGO—Brushing aside Eisenhower-Nixon charges of corruption and Communism at Washington, the Democrats will emphasize two broad issues in the campaign—peace and prosperity. At post-convention conferences here, this strategy was agreed upon by the party's new bosses, and endorsed by President Truman.

It is hoped that this policy will enable the "ins" to divert the voters' minds from such things as labor's domination, the Hiss-Lattimore-Service episodes, Internal Revenue and other scandals, past expenditures and taxes, and the "police action" in Korea.

It is an old and elementary dodge, reducing the party's request for another four years of rule to three simple words: "Peace and prosperity." It is reminiscent of Wilson's "He kept us out of war." "Keep cool with Coolidge; Hoover's a New and permanent peak of prosperity" and Franklin D. Roosevelt's four-time campaign question "Are you better off now than you were before 1932?"

PLANS—The Democrats' contention will be challenged sharply by the GOP, in view of high prices and taxes, Korean casualties and loss of China to the Communists.

But the Chicago board of works, who would have planned an entirely different kind of strategy if Senator Taft had been named, figure that it will be difficult and embarrassing for General Eisenhower to counterattack.

As they preview the battle, Ike headed the European defense system that had helped to prevent a World War III. He himself so assessed the role and value of the Marshall Plan, NATO and the emerald bryonic continental army. And he has generally endorsed the Pentagon's demand for huge preparedness budgets.

It is not suggested here that Ike is vulnerable on these two points. I am merely reporting his political opponents' plans and viewpoints.

MENACE—It must be kept in mind, too, that he is no longer the country's great military hero, or the commander Truman was willing to help toward a presidential nomination, provided he turned out to be a Democrat. Eisenhower is now an avowed political foe, and a real menace to Democratic control at Washington—the first in 20 years perhaps.

It is in this light that the "ins" view him and they are scraping his military career, including all public or private statements for campaign material.

If this seems poor reward to such a gallant soldier, it must be remembered that Truman warned him of the perils and pettiness which result from participating actively in American politics.

The President might have added a peculiarly appropriate word of caution: "Remember MacArthur." OBJECTIVES—The Blair Moody-Hubert Humphrey-Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. attempt to break the South's power within the party has far more grandiose and ulterior motives than were revealed in the Chicago controversy over rules and credentials.

As leading members of the Americans for Democratic Action, which represents the Hyde Park radical faction, they have two well-defined objectives. (1) To reorganize and redirect the party so that it can carry national elections without the electoral votes of the southern states. (2) To elect enough like-minded congressmen from the North, Midwest and Far West so that "fair deal" legislation can be enacted on Capitol Hill. It has been stymied for seven years by a coalition of Byrd-Russell Democrats and GOP-ers.

Writing pro-labor and pro-minorities proposals into law, in their opinion, would attain these two aims. They have it all figured out. If their program enables them to carry fifteen heavily industrialized states from New England to California, largely by corraling the normally decisive but motley vote labor, racial groups, federal employees, etc., in the great cities, they believe that they can "kiss the South goodbye."

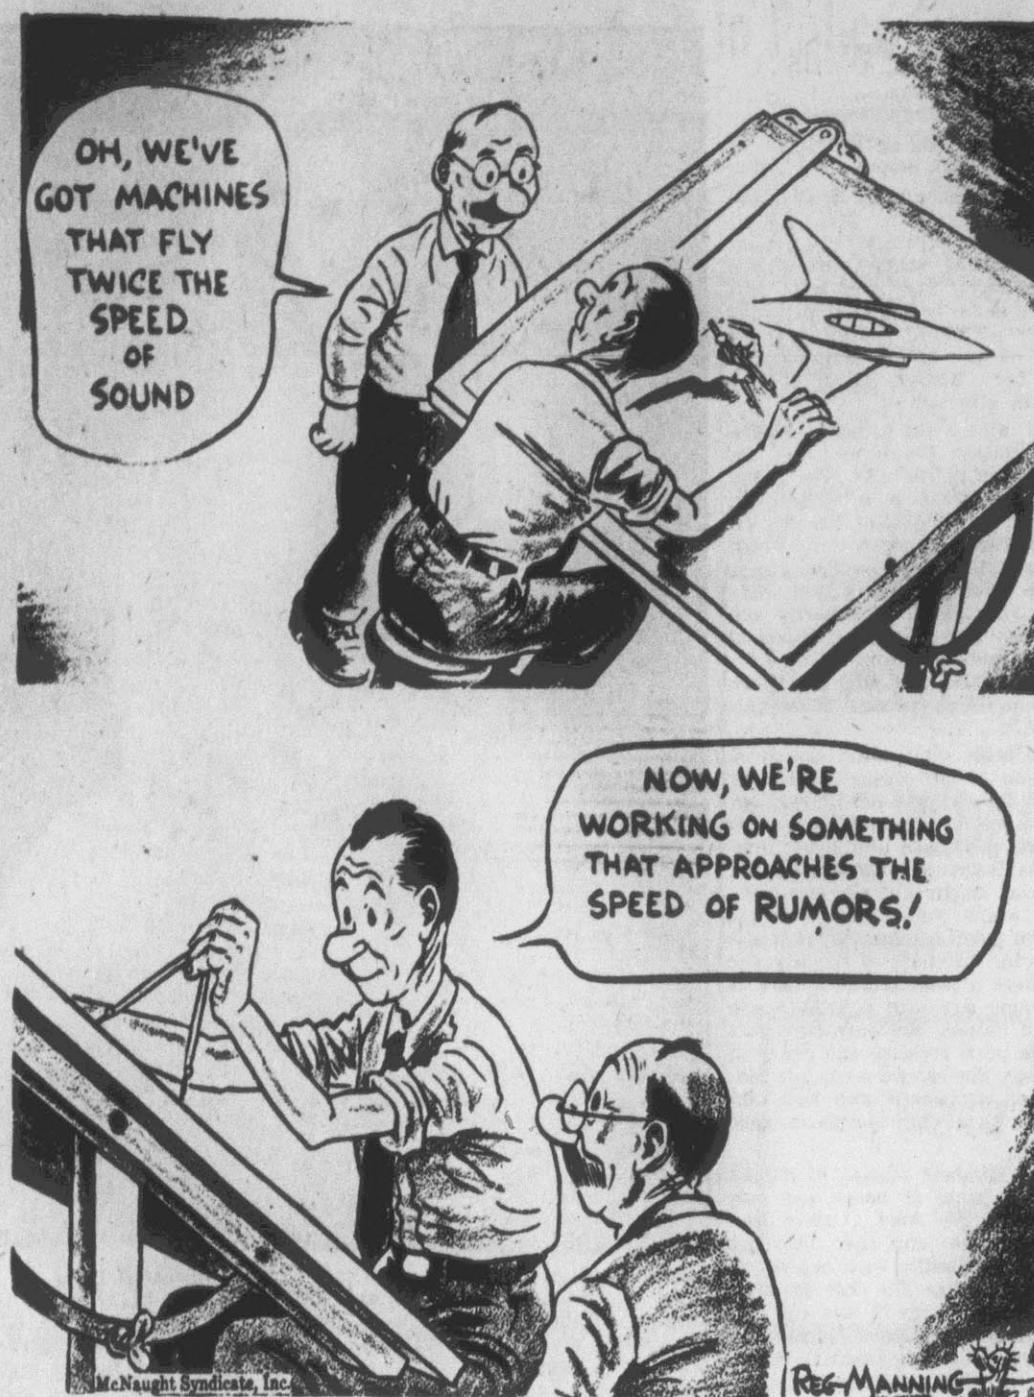

BLOCKED—"Honest Abe" Harriman was completely sympathetic to the scheme, and so was Estes Kefauver, a notable opportunist. But a few politically heads, including President Truman, blocked immediate success of their plan, for fear of inviting 1952 defeat.

However, they will try again in 1956, with the aid of CIO-AFL allies, assuming that they have not disappeared from the political scene four years hence. That will depend on what happens in November.

Any analysis of Moody's disturbing activities must be made against the fact that he faces reelection this year, in a hard tussle. Ike is popular in Michigan. The former Washington newspaperman will need the large CIO-AFL vote in the automobile state.

It is expected that Walter Reuther, head of the auto workers union and Barkley's executioner, will deliver the vote, although his decapitation of the "Veep" casts doubt on his possession of a sense of gratitude.

Unbelievable Speeds

Somebody Told Me

By L. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

While politics is still fresh in my mind, I think it appropriate that I write one of the few political columns that I will ever put my name to. Realizing that most Southerners are supposed to be Democrats, and also realizing that at times I have a tendency to go opposite from the majority, I gave Ike Eisenhower a good look-over, to see if I would go out on a limb and vote Republican.

What it all boils down to is this: What's wrong with Ike? One thing is certain: He will have to improve his public performances if he intends to win the Presidency in November. Being a military man all of his life, Ike will have to sit in a room by himself for every minute between now and when the vigorous campaigning starts, studying his P's and Q's. The reason Ike needs to study is that he simply doesn't know the answers to the questions that a Presidential candidate must know. Not only does Ike not know, but he doesn't enjoy sitting down for long hours by himself to study the problems of the world. He enjoys meeting people, talking to them and hearing what they have to say. But when it comes to studying why certain people did what, Ike isn't as interesting in finding out the reason.

When Ike gave his first press conference in Abilene, Kansas, he had to give the answer to a question: "I don't know." Nothing in the world is worse for a Presidential candidate. Right or wrong, he must know.

Ike gave a speech in Detroit, which everybody knows is one of the world's greatest industrial centers. Not once in the speech did he mention labor, when 90 per cent of his speech should have been centered around labor.

Ike's other speeches have had their weaknesses, too. Good speech writers, which most of the candidates have, can provide a cover for a man, if he can give them his ideas for their application. If a big man gives a little speech, it's just because he has been unable to convey anything productive through to the writers.

Ike is already looking for a chief of staff, the political equivalent of General Gruenther, his brilliant chief of staff at SHAPE. Of course the greatest thing Ike has to buck in this election is the prosperity we have enjoyed. True, Uncle Sam has collected too much of our prosperity in taxes, but the fact remains that we have still prospered.

Possibly the Republicans could maintain that prosperity with less taxes, but who wants to take the chance? Do you? And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

BUDGETS — It is a safe bet that the 1953 General Assembly when it convenes in Raleigh next January will have two budget reports presented for consideration. One will be that submitted by the advisory budget commission and it will be the biggest ever offered by any similar group. The other will be a separately prepared and individually signed budget recommendation offered by retiring Governor Kerr Scott—and it will be substantially bigger than the advisory commission report. Both documents will be offered pursuant to law, and neither will be binding upon the General Assembly. There may be a third budget offered by the new governor, William Umstead. The commission can advise and both the outgoing and incoming governors can recommend, but final authority and responsibility for levying taxes and appropriating state money rests upon the Legislature. Chances are that the General Assembly will set its own figures which will be different from those embodied in any or all of the several recommended reports, and that the final appropriations will be in larger aggregate amount than ever before recorded in State history—and probably in excess of the maximum set by any of the advisers.

SITUATION — The developing situation has some very interesting facts. There is no precedent upon which to base predictions. Traditionally the advisory budget commissions have been conservative, and the legislatures have pretty well followed their recommendations. The personnel of the advisory commission two years ago was normally conservative and recommended smaller appropriations than Governor Scott desired, although he was ex-officio director of the budget signed the recommendations on the top line. Subsequently he made a special appearance before the joint assembly and urged increasing total amounts by $36 million. Still later the General Assembly went him one better and upped the original suggestions by $42 million, four millions more than Governor Scott had proposed in his supplemental appeal.

SPENDERS — The significant fact here is that four of the six current members of the budget commission are the men who, as chairmen of the money committees in the last legislature, led the fight for the larger appropriation Governor Scott, who has been dubbed the "spendingest" governor of all, was out-spent by the men who had been chosen for their positions because they were rated as conservatives. Actually, all of them were proven to be pikers when State revenue exceeded maximum forecasts by some $15 million. Now the conservative (?) chairmen of the 1951 money committees, who are in control of the advisory budget group. They are expected to recommend much larger appropriations than the record-breaker last time; and Governor Scott has his "liberal" reputation to maintain, so he is expected to go them one better in his recommended recommendations. Incoming Governor William Umstead, who will face possibility of having to cut appropriations if revenue declines and appropriations have to be reduced—somebody else can worry about that.

POLITICS — Of course there is a large element of politics in all this state budget business. That must be, because politics is another word for government. Different men have different ideas about the primacy of needs. One governor may honestly believe that country roads are vital to state welfare, city streets just a necessary nuisance. One may re-specific items, because he might want more some places and less some others than does the retiring governor, but there is small prospect that the aggregate amounts proposed by his own budget recommendation will be much less than the others.

CAUTIOUS — Governor Umstead and the members of the advisory budget commission are expected to be a bit more cautious than Governor Scott. There are two reasons for that. Speculation First is that their individual private and public records show they are naturally more reluctant to take long-shot chances, they think through prospective developments more thoroughly, take less snap-judgment action. Second and perhaps more practical, reason is that they will have for two or four years the responsibility of living with and effectuating the budgets they submit, while Governor Scott will surrender all responsibility when he goes out of office early in January. He has all to gain and nothing to lose by proposing high spending. If revenues hold up or continue the upward spiral, he can say I told you so. If revenue declines and appropriations have to be reduced—somebody else can worry about that.

Umstead is a large element of politics in all this state budget business. That must be, because politics is another word for government. Different men have different ideas about the primacy of needs. One governor may honestly believe that country roads are vital to state welfare, city streets just a necessary nuisance. One may re-

What Other Papers Are Thinking

THE NATIONAL SEASHORE — Presenting more of the plans for the Cape Hatteras National Seashore than have heretofore been supplied the public, the North Carolina Bulletin, which is published by the North Carolina Department of Conservation and Development, says the establishment of the seashore will give the state a tourist attraction on the coast as unique as the Blue Ridge Park way in the mountains — there will be nothing else like it. Development will not be overnight, though announcement of the park plans may set off a new wave of real estate activity.

The National Park Service has announced that villages will not be disturbed and will be expected to provide sleeping accommodations and eating accommodations, as the Government plans none within the park. Nor does the Government intend to curtail fishing rights, but on the other hand to insure that they are kept free from "No Trespass" signs of private owners.

The National Seashore will include around 30,000 acres. On Bodie Island (north of Oregon Inlet), they will be developed for day use. Areas on Hatteras Island and south of Oregon Inlet, accessible by state ferry, are planned for camping and picnicking. Moet of Crookneck Island accessible by ferry from Hatteras and by mail boat from Atlantic (on U. S. 70 North of Morehead), will be included in the park.

Approximately 8,000 acres have already been obtained. These are for the most part public lands, but some were donated and purchased. This leaves about 22,000 acres to be acquired. Available for this is $500,000 voted by the state from the contingency and emergency fund, $50,000 transferred from the State Hatteras Park fund and $68,000 in funds of the State Cape Hatteras Seashore Commission; a total of $618,000. This is to be matched, dollar for dollar, by a donation to the National Park Service.

Business Today

By Elmer Koessner
Men's suits of Dacron fiber and Dacron blended with wool were a merchandising sensation this spring. But supplies will be short this fall and next spring, the National Retail Dry Goods Association is informing members after a survey.

At present, Dacron is being produced at the rate of 3,000,000 pounds a year, with half being allocated for Marine Corps uniforms. Work on facilities to increase production is under way. By late next year production is expected to be at an annual rate of 25,000,000 pounds of staple fiber and 10,000,000 pounds of continuous filament, but the increases will be too late to swell the supply of men's Dacron suits much before the spring of 1954.

The association estimates that this year's production of Dacron-wool blends is the equivalent of 85,000 tropical-weight suits and 35,000 fall-weight suits. In addition, 17,000 unblended Dacron suits were turned out. The most popular blend is 55 per cent Dacron and 45 per cent wool.

In addition to men's suits, the synthetic fiber is being used in slacks, sweaters, sport and dress shirts and ties.

The few suits available this fall will probably cost more. One manufacturer (Witty Bros.) has announced an increase of from $82.50 to $89.50 on suits and from $26.50 to $27.50 on slacks. The increases are attributed to the failure to gain expected cuts in textile and labor rates.

JUNE RETAIL SALES.....

UNDER MAY LEVEL

While there was a perky rise in sales in June, many lines, notably soft goods, in June, the total at retail did not reflect much of a general rise, according to Department of Commerce figures.

The June total was put at $12,830,000,000, which was 1 per cent higher than in June, 1951, but 1 per cent under May, 1952.

The steel strike was doubly to blame. It cut production of autos, resulting in an 8 per cent decline in the volume of sales, and it reduced employment, thereby reducing buying power.

The Department of Labor reports that the steel strike offset seasonal employment gain in other industries.

WALLPAPER DEMAND.

Before the conventions opened, the Old Proctor called attention to the fact that efforts would be made to get "free rides" on the telecasts.

One of the best rides was won by a wallpaper manufacturer. During the Republican convention, the speaker's rostrum was bare. But for the Democratic session, it was covered with wallpaper in a design to be induced this fall (by United Wallpaper, Inc.). As a consequence, hundreds of some owners have asked dealers for the paper.

COLLECTING LABELS
NOW NO. 1 HOBBY
The fact that the chief collectors' items among children are now seals and labels is disclosed by a survey by the American Hobby Federation. It seems that the older and rarer ones are highly prized and that such rarities as Fairy soap, original Lydia Pinkham's and Duffy's Pure Malt whisky labels are worth hundreds of current specimens.

Other hobbies in the order of their popularity were found to be: collecting autographs; making model planes; making woodcraft articles; collecting insects; collecting stamps; painting; model railroading.

BRITISH CUSTOMS TOUGH

ON PARCEL IRREGULARITIES

Postal authorities warn that the British government is continuing to seize gift parcels because the customs labels do not accurately describe the contents. Gifts of used clothing, food, medicaments and soap are admitted duty free but many people are inclined to include cosmetics and other gifts without listing them. When that happens, the British government confiscates everything. This situation should benefit firms that insure and guarantee delivery of gift parcels.

NEW PRODUCTS

SAFETY: Mattress and pillow filling, said to be flame-resistant, has been developed (by Union Carbide & Carbon Corp., 30 East 42nd St., New York 17). It's a blend of dural acrylic fiber and feather fibers, and is also being tested for sleeping bags and deep upholstery.

TUB: A 35 x 28 inch bathtub, standing about 14 inches from floor, has been designed for space-limited homes (by Kohler Co., Kohler, Wisc.). It's a good tub for children learning to take their own baths, too.

POWER: A foot powder with hexachlorophene, said to control odor and relieve itching, soreness and burning, is being marketed (by Coty Inc., 250 Madison Ave., New York 17).

GUM: A medicated chewing gum, said to help curb the smoking habit, is being marketed by Harry D. Koenig & Co., 216 Fifth Ave., New York.

OVER: A silicone ironing board cover to fit all standard size boards has been produced by Magla Products, 210 Washington St., Newark 2, N. J. Porous, color, fast and easy to clean with a damp cloth, its heat reflecting surface is said to save 25 per cent of ironing time as a flat work need only be ironed on one side.

Hal Boyle's Column

HOMETOWN, U. S. A. (AP)—When Trellis Mae Peble, America's average housewife, returned home from the national Democratic convention, she found her husband drinking a bottle of milk of magnesia.

"There's nothing else left in the house to eat," explained Wilbur. "The sardines gave out Wednesday and I ate the last of the canned chili yesterday."

"You poor dear you begin to fall apart every time I go away," said Trellis Mae, who took her husband's malnutrition as a personal tribute.

She phoned for some groceries, cooked him a square meal, then said:

"Well, I suppose you want to hear more about my trip? There is certainly nothing more fun than a political convention. Parties every night. And so cheap, too. I think every housewife in America ought to attend a national political convention."

"Cheap?" exploded Wilbur. "It cost me $425 to go to the republican convention, and I'm afraid to ask what you must have spent at that national Donkey Serenade in Chicago. You wrote for money every day."

"Oh, I just did that so you would not spend the money yourself," said Trellis Mae. "Here it is all back." And she opened her purse and handed Wilbur a big roll of bills.

"Let's see how much it really did cost me," she said. "There was $41.50 for the plane ticket to Chicago. $1.25 to the hotel, and fifty cents for the bellhop. That makes $43.25 all told."

"What do you mean $43.25 all told?" said Wilbur. "Didn't you eat all week? How about your hotel bill? How about your party, and your plane fare home? Don't tell me the Democratic National Committee paid for all that?"

Trellis Mae looked a little vague. "Oh, no, that was Mr. Petrol, the Texas Oilman's delegate I met," she said. "He insisted on taking care of all my incidental expenses."

"Now, Trellis Mae, you know better than—" began her husband suspiciously.

"Oh, don't be silly, Wilbur," said Trellis Mae. "He was old enough to be my father. Besides, what could I do? The man simply dropped $100 bills wherever he went. When I objected to his grabbing the hotel bill out of my hands, he said, 'If you are going to make a scene about this, I'll simply buy the whole damned hotel, and cancel your bill.'"

"And the same thing happened at the airport. He threatened to hit me with his ticket. When we shook hands goodbye, Mr. Petrol said, 'I'm going to name my oil well after you. See you at the 1956 convention.'"

"He certainly sounds fatherly," he looked with interest at Trellis Mae, who said:

"Mae removed two photos from suitcase and put them on her dressing table. One photo was inscribed: 'Dear Mrs. Peble. You were the hit of my party. Be sure to bring Wilbur and visit me in Luxembourg. Perle Mesta." The other photo said, "To Trellis Mae and her family. Yours, See you in the White House."

"I can't read the signature on this one," said Wilbur. "What does it say?"

"It says 'Adlai,'" said Trellis Mae airily. "Who else?"

WASHINGTON — Getting a medical education, in the Philippines during the Japanese occupation of her country was not easy for Dr. Virginia Basaca-Sevilla. "Textbooks, equipment, and sometimes even food were scarce," says Dr. Sevilla, who is in this country for study on a one-year fellowship from the World Health Organization.

"I took my whole family to get me through medical school," Dr. Sevilla is studying special diagnostic techniques at the Army Medical Service Graduate School here. "My mother and sisters copied hundreds of pages of borrowed books for me, and I had to spend most of my time in the library," she said.

During the liberation of Manila, doctors, interns and medical students worked day and night under great handicaps. "We had to remove shrapnel without anesthesia, and things like that, and we didn't even have enough food for the patients. The fighting went on all around and even in the hospital. Once for three days in February, 1945, we all had to hide in the basement."

Since graduating from the University of Philippines Medical College in 1948, Dr. Sevilla has been working with the Philippine Government Public Health Laboratory. Her father, also a doctor, studied three years at Johns Hopkins and Harvard Universities. He was told her much about America.

"The United States is a wonderful country," she said. "But I will be eager to get back to the Philippines. There is so much to be done. We can't make full use of the new antibiotics, drugs and treatments until we're able to make accurate diagnosis."

Dr. Sevilla's big job on her return will be training Filipino in diagnostic procedures. From Washington the bright, vivacious, "big-as-a-minute" doctor is visiting Duke University, the University of North Carolina, the U. S. Communicable Disease Center in Georgia and the National Institutes of Health in nearby Maryland.

Dr. Sevilla's colleagues at the Army Medical school here say she's a real worker, "in there pitching" and shy of publicity. When newsmen tried to interview her when she received her fellowship in Manila, she says she ran and hid.

Dr. Sevilla's husband, Jesse, a technician with the Philippine Schistosomiasis Field Unit, who is also studying medicine, and her 23-month-old son, Jose, are other reasons which make her look forward to going home.

HELL'S HORSEMAN

BY WILLIAM HOPSON

Chapter 11
The conversation was getting decidedly uncomfortable for Montana and he cast about him for a way to switch it to a less dangerous subject. A little more and Rundert, as little analytical as he was, might start piecing together the facts: that McBain had been on lookout duty in Smelter-A-Mile, had boarded the train within seven or eight miles of the place, and had gotten on there. He undoubtedly had apprised Black Jack of these facts, and Black Jack was no fool.

"I don't know who he is," Rundert half growled in answer to Helen's question. "Nobody does, except maybe Buckner."

"I heard in town," Belle said, "that Black Jack and Dutch Saunders were there. I saw one man with a black beard crossing the street that could have been that cheap horse thief. You know anything about it?"

"He was in town, all right. I talked to him."

It was Belle's turn to register surprise. "You talked to him to Black Jack Caswell? she demanded."

"For a few minutes. He wanted to know about McBain. I told him what happened that our friend plugged him when Mack, for some reason, went for his gun. What about it, Edmonds?" he asked.

"Sorry, but my affair with McBain was personal," Montana answered shortly. "Maybe he thought I was somebody else. Maybe he thought I was this Montana gent you've been talking about. Whatever it was, it's past history and I'd rather not mention it again."

He turned his attention away to indicate the subject as being closed, looking out the window and back along the road. A movement caught his eyes, far to the rear. The stage rocked on another mile and the movement came again, more plainly. Horsemen were back there in the rear.

They were being followed. Hour after hour the stage rolled on through wild, virgin country

Orndorf, taking frequent nips from a quart bottle, drove the horses on at an amazingly fast clip. Montana sat watching and occasionally added a word to the conversation. But for the most part he was thinking of those riders back there. Twice more within the next ten miles he had caught sight of them. They had pulled off to one side, keeping to the timber. It would be black Jack, all right.

Shortly after one o'clock the stage rolled down through an opening among the trees through which they were passing. Orndorf set the brakes and leaned down with a bellow. "We'll be here about an hour while I rest the horses and cook up some grub. Roll out and make yourselves comfortable."

Rundert got out, his hand solicitously sliding along Helen's slender waist as she alighted. All were a little stiff from the long ride and the earlier morning cold. Helen flexed her soft young body and looked about her, and again Montana caught the veiled look in Rundert's eyes.

Helen had, in the presence of the country's grandeur, forgotten for the moment the recent loss of her father. She glanced at the man who had come with them. He removed his coat, for it was now quite warm and again her eyes went with a slight revulsion to the big pistols he wore. She turned away as he clambered up on the stage and brought down his war-bag.

Montana placed it on the ground, then began giving Orndorf a hand with the traces. Orndorf, the quart bottle sticking from one hip pocket, took up the lines and drove the six down among the trees, with Montana following. He put down the warbag, brought out his working clothes, and began a swift change.

Montana, his good clothes in the bag, strode off toward the creek to wash up.

Montana finished his ablutions in the cold water of the creek, and returned to find that the girls had spread blankets beneath the rear of the stage and were sitting in comfort. Orndorf was almost ready to serve the food. And Montana heard Belle Ramson saying:

"Out with it, Ro. You've stalled long enough. What's wrong at the ranch?"

"It's not only the ranch—it's a lot of other things," Rundert grunted, from his position on a nearby rock. He was making queer little marks on the ground with a sharp stick. "King seems to think that Black Jack and the Dutchman are back of it. He's been losing a lot more stock than even he thought I was supposed to clean the last of it off the ranch a week before the new herd got here from down South, but I wasn't long finding out there wasn't any. Belle, King's been rustled pretty badly. But it didn't take long to find out what I've been suspecting for some time: your own riders were long-looping KR stuff and selling at least some of it to Black Jack and the Dutchman. And that includes yore white-haired boy Austin," he sneered.

"How do you know?" Belle Ramson demanded while Helen sat quiet ly waiting.

"Through McBain. I met him in Buckner's one night a few months back." "Then Black Jack and the Dutchman intend a steal on this herd?" gasped out Belle, who found the audacity of the plan hard to believe. Six hundred head!

"That's my guess," grunted Rundert.

In The Services

A fifth cluster to the Air Medal is presented to 1st Lt. L. N. Leggett (right) of Martin Heights, Williamston, N. C. by Col. Thomas M. Wallington, 2nd Division Artillery commander in Korea. Master Sergeant Paul Sutton of Ayden is serving as an instructor with the Fifth Armored Division at Camp Chaffee, Arkansas. Sgt. Sutton is a veteran of service in Europe with the 8th Infantry Division.

Airman first class Sidney B. Ormond (above), son of Mrs. Hal Heath of Winterville, and the late Sidney Ormond of Grifton, has returned home from Korea where he served with the 8th Fighter-Bomber Wing. He will resume his duties at Brookley Air Force Base in Mobile, Ala. His wife is the former Blanche Smith of Clay Root.

Sgt. James H. Harris, son of Mrs. J. R. Roebuck of Greenville, Route 1, is a member of the Military Police Detachment at Fort Benning, Ga. Prior to his arrival at Fort Benning, Sgt. Harris served with the 448th Military Police Company in the Far East Command.

Pvt. James G. Whitehurst (above), husband of Mrs. Nettie Whitehurst, 304 Summit Street, Greenville, is nearing completion of a 16-week training cycle at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo. with a unit of the Sixth Armored Division.

Marine Vincent D. DiGirollo, husband of Mrs. Marjorie DiGirollo of 1108 W. Fourth Street, Greenville, has been promoted to the rank of Staff Sergeant at a forward air base of the First Marine Aircraft Wing in Korea.

Pfc. Raymond Brock Jr., whose parents live on Winterville, Route 1, participated in air defense exercises which wound up yesterday on the northern borders of the United States. Pfc. Brock is a clerk with the 51st Anti-Aircraft Artillery Brigade, guarding the Chicago-Detroit area.

Colored News

Because of the drought special attention must be given to more feed for livestock and fall gardens. Filling every nook and corner of waste land to grow something for the livestock to live on this winter is a "must."

Plenty of time to sow field peas, corn to cut and other pasture seeds to help to combat this shortage of feed for livestock. Now is a good time to plan and get ready to plant your temporary winter grazing crop.

For the fall garden, plant collards, onions, rutabagas, mustard, turnips, six-week beans, cabbages, celery, beets, and lettuce.

Watch the heat. It is a good idea to learn all you can about artificial respiration and take the knowledge of it with you to every farm. Also take a first aid kit too. Maybe you are the one who must save a life during these hot days.

Inflict Losses In Indo-China War

SAIGON, Indo-China (UP) — French and Vietnamese forces have killed or wounded at least 500 Communist Rebels in a four-day operation off the coast of Central Indo-China. French headquarters said today.

The announcement said troops had "cleaned up" the island of Solange located off the Tourane Cape near Hue. It gave no further details.

Refugee Record Is Broken Again

BERLIN (UP)—Authorities reported today that 900 East German refugees arrived in West Berlin yesterday to set a new one-day record.

The refugees requested asylum. They were said to include a high percentage of youths who said they fled the Soviet zone to escape forced recruiting in military or labor service.

Hunt For Woman Who Fell From Flying Airliner

RIO DE JANEIRO (UP) — Pan American World Airways has taken up the search for the body of Mrs. Marie Westbrook, who plunged 12,000 feet to her death when she was sucked out of the pressurized cabin of a Stratocruiser.

The Brazilian Air Force abandoned hope yesterday of recovering the woman's body from the sea about 25 miles off the coast of Southern Brazil, but the airline chartered a C-46 transport to continue the search.

Mrs. Westbrook, daughter of Mrs. Bessie Machris of Los Angeles, was drawn out of the Stratocruiser when its doors popped open in flight.

The Sport Reflector

By BOB WHEELER

The United States may lose out to Russia in the final point total of the Olympic games but as far as basketball is concerned, the U. S. is still top dog.

In what was supposed to be a grudge battle but turned out to be just another game, the United States speared the Russians soundly 86-58. Big Bob Kurland was too much man as he hooked in goal after goal.

The American-Russian contest was, in reality, the calm that followed the storm. In the previous contest, between Uruguay and France, a near riot occurred. Two Uruguayan players beat referee Vincent Farrell of Newark. New Jersey unconscious and another player tried to take on the whole French cheering section.

One Uruguayan became so upset that he had to be carted away by four policemen. France won 68-66.

In the game between the Red and the Blue, White and Blue Russia jumped off to a quick 1-0 lead. This was short lived, however, as Kurland swished in two hook shots to bring the score to 4-1. Russia managed to tie the score at 4-4 but from there on out the height of the Americans began to tell.

America, behind Kurland's sensational hookshots, took a 39-22 lead at the half and then coasted in.

The win left the Americans undefeated in the round robin tourney while the defeat was the first for the Russians.

It may still be the middle of baseball season as far as most people are concerned but at Greensboro they're thinking both of football and basketball.

On Friday of this week two eleven man basketball clubs, representing East and West, will arrive in Greensboro to commence practice for the annual battle to be played on Tuesday, August 5. H. A. Clemmer, of Sanford, will be in charge of the east squad and John Rackley, of Winston-Salem, will mentor the team from the west. This coming Sunday will see the arrival of two 24 man football squads, also representing the East and West, which will commence practice in preparation for their game at Greensboro Senior High stadium on the night of Friday, August 8.

The third game of the Little League City Series ended yesterday in a 7-2 triumph for the Jaycees thereby giving them a one game margin as the series reaches the fourth contest.

Up until the opening game of these playoffs, if memory serves us right, there had been but one home run during the entire season. In the opening round both Klutz Fisher and Billy Sermons cracked out drives over the fence. In yesterday's contest Sermon's came to bat in the first inning with one man on base and promptly sent another homer over the left field barrier. It looked as if Sermons had the home run crown wrapped up but what should Fisher, the next batter, do but send another four base blow over the left field wall.

The Jaycees really had the support yesterday. A group of fans were sitting right below the spot where we were broadcasting and they really got behind their favorites.

We don't know who they were but a world of credit should go to them. Now, if the Lion backers would only show up, we'd really have something.

Sermons And Fisher Homer To Spark Win

Jaycees Triumph To Take Series Lead

The Jaycees yesterday took the lead once more in the race for the Little League City Championship by downing the Lions 7-2.

The victory gave the Jaycees a record of two victories against one loss. Three wins are necessary to cop the title.

In the opening frame for the victors, Nichols walked and Hudson struck out. Sermons then came to bat and hit a towering drive over the left centerfield fence. The next batter, Klutz Fisher, also drove a pitch off losing hurler Staton over the left field barrier.

These three runs were all that were necessary as Arthur Andrews held the Lions in check until the final frame. He lost his shutout when he gave up walks to Edmundson and Roebuck and was touched for a two base hit by Johnny Harrison.

Walker Lee Allen, Jaycee second baseman, contributed two timely hits to his team's attack.

Leaders Falter In Stretch Drive

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (UP)—Casey Stengel and Charley Dressen are among the few managers they haven't got around to firing yet in the major leagues this hectic season, but the way things were going for them today, they could well be envying the other guys who got the boot.

For it looks as if the panic could be on for both the New York Yankees and the Brooklyn Dodgers. Despite the fact that both still hold comparatively comfortable leads, the immediate future looks none too bright.

Both Stengel and Dressen couldn't be blamed for wishing they didn't have the cares that were lifted from the shoulders of Tommy Holmes of the Boston Braves, Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Browns, Eddie Sawyer of the Philadelphia Phils, Red Wolfe of the Detroit Tigers, and now Luke Sewell of the Cincinnati Reds.

Hornsby, a bear for trouble, bounced back into action as Sewell's successor, but the others at the moment are enjoying peace of mind which can't be shared by the pilots of the two league leaders.

Brooklyn, which knows more painful experience about collapsing contenders than the Yankees empire, suffered the bigger case of jitters. Whipped into submission four straight times by the up-and-at-'em St. Louis Cardinals, their lead was reduced to four games over the idle New York Giants after last night's 3 to 2 defeat.

Little Walker Lee Allen, the Jaycees' tricky right-hander, has earned a rating as the "Little League Star of the Week" through his brilliant hurling against the Lions.

Allen cut down the high-flying Lions 7-0 Tuesday, allowing them only two well scattered hits. That game won the second half championship for the Jaycees, who have won the second half for two years straight. Walker Lee contributed a single to the winning of that game.

Later that same week Walker shut out Puryear and his Lion teammates 9-0 in a five hit affair. That game made a total of twelve consecutive scoreless innings pitched against them. This latter game was the first of a series to determine the Little League Champions.

Walker Lee batted out two singles for three times at bat to help win his own game.

Allen is winding up a two year career in the Little League with a fine account of his activities. As a pitcher-shortstop he has helped spark the Jaycees to two championship playoffs. He batted around 256 last year.

Walker Lee is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Allen who reside at 2305 East Fifth Street, Greenville.

Marciano Ko's Matthews With Second Round Blast

By JACK CUDDY
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (UP)—Challenger Rocky Marciano who knocked out Harry (Kid) Matthews with three explosive left hooks, looked forward with relish today to his battle for the world heavyweight championship with Jersey Joe Walcott, probably in New York on Sept. 24.

"I believe I can lick Walcott or any man I step in with," the jubilant, still unbeaten blockbuster from Brockton, Mass., said. Rocky belted out Matthews of Seattle at 2:04 of the second round before 31,188 in Yankee Stadium last night.

Walcott, 38, who saw the 27-year old challenger blast Matthews to the canvas for the full count in his own corner, said, "that Rocky will be a terrible, terrible tough opponent."

Promoter Jim Norris, disappointed somewhat at the gate of $215,707 said he would make the September match as soon as possible. It will be staged at a New York ball park if Walcott's manager, Felix Borchich, can get his New York State license renewed.

Rocky proved he could take it, as well as dish it out, last night. He received a thorough trouncing during most of the first round. Boxer - puncher Matthews, though outweighed 187 1-2 pounds to 179, repeatedly knocked - armed Rocky back onto his heels with long left jabs.

And he countered Rocky's wild right-swing misses with beautiful straight right counters to the head.

Most plants which grow in meadow land are European imports. The clovers were brought here deliberately, but daisies, buttercups, thistles and others moved over by themselves.

Jupiter is less than a quarter as dense as the earth.

One of those right counters nailed Marciano so terrifically on the chin that it seemed Rocky must go down. But he just kept marching in.

The first round was Matthews' by a wide margin.

Rocky, the 11-5 favorite, continued his bobbing and weaving attack in the second session. Early he landed a left hook that staggered the scientist from Seattle.

Matthews fought back until a minute later Rocky suddenly caught him with another left hook to the head that stunned Harry in his own corner.

With lightning sequence, two more left hooks landed on Matthews' chin and dropped him to his haunches in the corner.

Hornsby Back As Redleg Manager

NEW YORK (UP)—Seven weeks after he was ignominiously fired by the St. Louis Browns, stoned-faced Rogers Hornsby returned to the big leagues today as the Cincinnati Reds' new manager.

And it was the same old Hornsby — unyielding in his demands on his players and brooking no "interference" from the front office. "I didn't tell Hornsby much about the team," Cincinnati General Manager Gabe Paul admitted as he announced the managerial change. "I started to but he cut me short. He said, 'Never mind, I'll wait and see for myself.'"

Hornsby will take command of the Reds when they return to Cincinnati on Aug. 5 from their current Eastern swing. Until then, he will continue his scouting trip while one of the coaches, probably Earl Brucker, runs the team.

The signing of Hornsby astounded the baseball world because the one-time great slugger apparently had been "black-balled" as a manager when the St. Louis Browns dropped him on June 10.

Brownie President Bill Veech announced then that the players had presented him with a plaque calling the firing of Hornsby "the greatest play since the Emancipation Proclamation." Since then, there have been stories that Veech actually presented the plaque to himself.

Paul, in his first year as general manager, said Hornsby's contract runs through 1953 and strongly indicated that Rajah's uncompromising attitude toward the game — the reason he was fired by the Browns — was the very reason he was hired by the Reds.

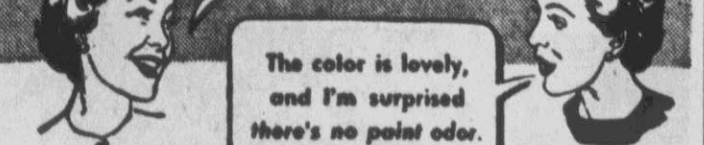

Correction

The Greenville Giants will play Sharpshooter here this coming Sunday at Guy Smith Stadium at 3 P.M. It was erroneously reported yesterday that the Giants would play at Sharpshooter.

On Saturday night at the Stadium the Giants will play an as yet unnamed opponent. Game time, 8 P.M.

Game Today

The fourth game of the Little League series for the city championship will be played this afternoon at five o'clock at Little League park. The Jaycees are currently in front with two victories over the Lions to one defeat. The Lions must win this afternoon in order for the playoff to continue.

A library is not a luxury, but one of the necessities of life. In spite of the heat, 67 children came to the library Tuesday, July 22, at 4:00 p.m. for their story hour which was conducted by Mrs. Maggie R. De-

Mrs. DeGraffenreid told the following stories, "Mr. Goose Bath,"
"he tried to bathe without water,"
"Little Bear Takes His Summer
Nap" and "The Horse Who Lived
Upstairs" while Miss Porter taught nursery rhymes to the smaller children. It was an enjoyable evening, after which the librarian talked with the club about making their book reports and getting their stars.
She also listened to the book reports and circulated 110 books.
On Tuesday, July 29, at 4:00 p.m.
Miss B. L. Souwell, librarian of the

Stocks And Market Reports

NEW YORK (UP) — Favorable earnings report by Southern Railway injected strength into railroad shares at mid-session on the stock market today.

The rails made the best percentage rise of the major groups. Industrials managed to gain modestly, while utilities eased. Illinois Central regained its poise after opening down 1/2. At mid-session it was nearly a point higher. Southern Railway rose almost a point also and Seaboard Airline Railway was up 2-1/2 points. Atlantic Coast Line gained 1-1/4 points.

Southern Railway reported higher earnings in June and for the first half of 1952.

In the industrial section most changes held to fractions. Steels ruled steady and motors steady to firm. Montgomery Ward gained almost a point. Leading oils held firm while some of the higher priced ones eased, notably Texas Pacific Land Trust at 161 off 3 and Amerada at 207 off 2.

Aluminum stocks rose more than a point. Coppers were narrowly irregular. Aircrafts firmed. Chemicals held steady.

Sales to noon totaled 40,000 shares compared with 380,000 shares in the same period yesterday.

900 Sticks Of Tobacco Destroyed

More than 900 sticks of the golden weed are shown going up in a fiery mass of smoke and flames last night as fire destroyed a tobacco barn on the Blount farm near Greenville, off the Washington highway. The barn caught fire around 8:15 last night and was burning furiously when the Greenville fire department arrived. Firemen centered their efforts on saving an adjoining shelter and nearby barn. act to the appeal of the mentally sick, while another just as sincerely thinks public schools are more important. And among the public school advocates there can be honest difference of opinion as to relative importance of teacher salaries and adequate buildings. One thing is certain: The budget adopted by the next General Assembly will be in the approximate amount of the highest expectation of state revenue.

ANTICIPATING — There is further conflict between the basic ideas of pay as you go, which means to spend all and only all the money expected to be received during the spending period; and the idea of borrowing against the future for present expansion, leaving the bill for the next generation. That is the basic distinction between the governmental philosophy of Governor Scott and that of the advisory budget commission. The budget folks, past and present, have been careful not to spend more than they felt sure would be collected during the period. Governor Scott just as sincerely believes in buying on credit what is needed now, in the also firm belief that utilization of the facilities and services bought now will increase future yields so that the payment for them will be easy.

GOALS — With that contrast, rather than conflict, of ideas in mind, a capitol square was remarked the other day that in the preparation of the budgets to be presented to the next General Assembly the budget commission would "shoot the works," while Governor Scott would "shoot

Death Ruled Due To Heat; Rouse Plans No Inquest

A 49-year-old Negro man was found dead last night, apparently the victim of the hot weather which has prevailed over this section for some time. Coroner Griffith H. Rouse reported this morning.

Rouse listed the dead man as Warren Payton Norcutt, 49, of 101 East Second Street. He died at 829 Fleming Street, the home of his father. The deceased was found around 11 o'clock last night. Rouse said that a doctor summoned to the scene stated that the man had been dead for some time, possibly as long as four or five hours.

No inquest is planned into the death, Rouse stated.

Sparkman Sees Stirring Fight

WASHINGTON (UP) — Sen. John J. Sparkman, Democratic vice presidential nominee, returned to the capital last night with the pledge that the Democrats will wage an "aggressive campaign."

"We are going to carry the good old Democratic doctrine to all parts of the country," the Alabama senator told a cheering crowd of 350 at Washington's Union Station. "I am going to participate fully in it."

Sparkman said the Democratic campaign will start about Labor Day, depending on the wishes of Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson, the party's presidential nominee.

Asked for a comment on the Democratic civil rights plank, Sparkman replied "We have a platform that all of us can stand on."

In reply to another reporter's question on whether he plans to talk with Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D-Va) and Richard B. Russell (D-Ga), he said "I hope to talk with everybody."

Sparkman plans to remain in Washington a few days to "straighten up work at the office," and then take a brief vacation before heading for his home at Huntsville, Ala.

Two Cars Collide At Intersection

A collision of two cars at Wilson and Chestnut Streets yesterday afternoon resulted in $450 property damage to the cars, a police report states.

A car driven by Willis F. Peaden of Falkland collided with the side of a car driven by Lucenia Mizelle, 404 Arbor Street, Greenville, at the intersection. The investigating officer quoted Peaden as saying he could not stop his car in time to avoid the collision.

No arrest was made. The police report does not list any of the occupants as injured.

Paragraph 51 concerning prisoners."

The staff officers meet again tomorrow at 11 a. m. (9 p. m. EST Monday).

Meanwhile, Peip radio accused the United States of "impudence" in calling the seven-day recess in the high level meetings. The Communist broadcast said the recess was part of a Washington-directed plot to "break up the negotiations and to extend the war."

The broadcast repeated the Red demand that the U. N. turn over 115,000 Red prisoners, including the 20,000 Chinese "volunteers" now held by the U. N.

The United Nations says it will return only 83,000 prisoners who have professed willingness to return to the Communist side.

Eisenhower Club Views Chances Of Visit Good

ROCKY MOUNT—The possibility of having Presidential Candidate Dwight Eisenhower to speak here became closer to a reality last night when telegrams and letters concerning his visit were read before members of the newly formed "Tar Heels for Eisenhower" organization.

A number of wires and letters connected with procuring Ike for a personal appearance in Rocky Mount were read to the group. A message from the chairman of the National Republican Committee acknowledged the invitation for Eisenhower to speak and said everything possible was being done to have the celebrated ex-general appear in eastern North Carolina.

Joe Johnson of Four Oaks, delegate to the National Republican Convention and one of the original supporters of Ike, spoke briefly before the group and was well-received.

A spokesman for the group said a number of prominent Rocky Mount citizens expressed the sentiments of those present by saying the newly formed organization's goal is not to be made into a partisan Republican faction but to back the man who can clean up government corruption. He said a large percentage of the people present are long-time Democrats who are disgusted with present conditions in the national administration.

In becoming a more permanent organization, a nominating committee was set up last night to bring a slate of permanent officers before the group at its next meeting.

The organization was temporarily formed last Monday night when nearly 50 persons, independent in their political thinking, met to form a "Tar Heels for Eisenhower" organization.

claim. Utilities Superintendent Martin Swartz said today, "If the claim is presented to the commission I will recommend that it be answered in court."

"The only way a claim can be collected is to prove negligence on the part of the commission," he said. "There has been no negligence and even though the situation is unfortunate, we certainly did not sabotage our own plant."

Swartz added that if Overton is entitled to collect for damages, so is everyone else on the lines which were out.

Emergency Truck Has Two Calls Here Yesterday

The Greenville Fire Department's rescue truck answered two emergency calls in Greenville yesterday.

Around ten o'clock yesterday morning, the department received an emergency call to the home of R. W. Dunn, 100 Woodlawn Ave., to take him to Pitt Memorial Hospital after he suffered a heart attack.

Yesterday afternoon, two small children, who had been injured in an automobile accident on Chestnut Street, were taken to a doctor's office for treatment by the emergency unit. The injured were Betty Earle Jackson and Sandra Mizell, both seven, who suffered from shock and bruises received in the accident.
