Adlai Charting Independent Political Course While Ike Resorts To Old Indian Rite

Stevenson Not Promising Allegiance To Entire White House Programs Of Past Twenty Years; Own Ideas To Dominate; Eisenhower Following Tradition By Joining In Indian Ceremonial

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UP)—Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson charted his own course for the 1952 presidential campaign today without promising unwavering allegiance to the White House programs of the last 20 years.

The Illinois governor was relying on the polished professions of the Democratic national committee to prepare his campaign itineraries, after consulting with him and vice-presidential nominee Sen. John J. Sparkman of Alabama.

He planned to base the tone and nature of his campaign on his own ideas. "I propose to run my campaign, as far as the ideas and content of the speeches are concerned, entirely myself," he said.

Stevenson, who was "drafted" for the Democratic presidential nomination last week, even assumed that he would have "some control" over the campaign plans of President Truman, who has promised to stomp the country for the governor.

Stevenson has not yet prepared a blueprint for a campaign organization—a job he hopes to finish in the next two weeks. He did, however, give some indication of his views during a news conference under an ash tree on the lawn of the state executive mansion yesterday.

The governor was asked if he felt he would have any control over other Democrats engaged in the campaign and if he might be able to control how much Mr. Truman campaigns in his behalf.

"The President has offered every cooperation, and I would assume I might have some control over that," Stevenson said. "I think there are a good many others involved and will be, I believe, a great deal of coordination required for this effort and I'm sure it can and will be satisfactorily achieved."

The nominee was asked if he would try to limit Mr. Truman's activities and answered that he hasn't given that one moment's thought. "I would certainly want his help in every way I could get it," Stevenson said he did not think his 1949 divorce from Ellen Borden Stevenson would be a liability. "I think probably my biggest hardship is that I'm not well enough known, but maybe that's a virtue."

Britain Tightens Belt Once More To Gain Solvency

Parliament Approves Plan Reducing Production Of Armaments

LONDON (AP)—Financially embarrassed Britain prepared a new belt-tightening drive to get out of the red today after Parliament approved Prime Minister Winston Churchill's plan to divert some production from defense to exports.

The House of Commons okayed the Conservative government's new economic program, 299-277, last night after Churchill warned the alternative was bankruptcy. The plan also calls for a slash in imports and continuation of the wage freeze.

The prime minister said full schedules on the arms cutback necessary for solvency would be worked out at a commonwealth economic conference here next November. The government's proposal to build up exports at the expense of arms was not unexpected. Earlier this month, as the nation's balance of trade worsened and its vital gold and dollar reserve fell below $1,700,000,000, Churchill warned that "very serious measures" affecting the domestic and defensive aspects of British policies were under way.

Since Churchill became prime minister last fall, the nation's 13-billion-dollar defense program has been stretched out from three to four years. In explaining his program to Commons, Churchill made it clear that Britain still is "resolved to stand shoulder-to-shoulder with the United States and our allies in Europe in resisting any aggression."

"But," he added, "there can be no assurance of lasting military strength without a firm economic foundation."

Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr. (R-Mass.), Eisenhower's pre-convention campaign manager, arrived here late yesterday with a prediction that Eisenhower would defeat Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson in Illinois for the presidency in a "horse race."

Lodge said that if Stevenson should be elected the "same fat cats would be prowling around the White House at night no matter how it looked in the daytime."

MacArthur New Board Chairman

Plan To Declare 'Disaster Area'

NEW YORK (UP)—Gen Douglas MacArthur was elected chairman of the board of Remington Rand Inc. today.

The announcement was made by James H. Rand, president, at a luncheon at which the 13 other board members and company executives met MacArthur. Rand, who has been serving also as board chairman, will continue as corporation president.

Formal election of the five-star general took place at an organizational meeting of the board this morning.

Rand disclosed the company originally offered the board chairmanship to MacArthur in 1949. Reports of the offer at that time said the general's salary would be in the neighborhood of $100,000 a year. Those reports never have been confirmed.

Remington Rand employs 36,000 persons in 22 American plants and 23 factories in 15 foreign countries, manufacturing typewriters, calculating machines, electronic computers, and other office equipment.

MacArthur remains a general of the Army, unassigned to specific duty.

The hero of the Pacific, whose differences with the Truman administration about conduct of the Korean war touched off a great debate, was 72 years old last January. President Truman dismissed him from his Pacific commands in April, 1951.

Other towns and cities in this area he has been associated with. "And I have been in contact with several other municipalities in Eastern North Carolina," he stated. "Naturally there have been some weak administrations in Greenville's city government, but officials here are furnished with more information at board meetings than any of the other cities I am familiar with. Greenville is fortunate in having that service."

Prison For Klan Boss And Aides

Imperial Wizard Draws 4 Years; Seventeen Cohorts Also To Be Imprisoned

WHITEVILLE, N. C. (AP)—His hopes of a Klan empire shattered, Imperial Wizard Thomas L. Hamilton of Leesville, S. C. today faced a four-year prison sentence starting Oct. 1 for his part in a flogging incident last year.

Hamilton and 62 of his Ku Klux Klan cohorts were sentenced yesterday as the aftermath of a long investigation by officers and one of the biggest mass trials in North Carolina history.

Superior Court Judge Clawson L. Williams delayed the start of Hamilton's sentence because Mrs. Hamilton must undergo an operation for the removal of a tumor.

The pudgy Hamilton, 45, was ordered to post $30,000 bond pending start of his sentence. Hamilton received the maximum sentence on two charges of conspiracy to assault. He pleaded guilty last week to complicity in the flogging of a Negro woman, Evergreen Flowers, the night of Jan. 18, 1951.

Seventeen defendants were given prison sentences ranging from 18 months to six years. Morris Walker of Whitesville received the longest term, six years. Forty-four others were placed under suspended sentences and ordered to pay fines ranging up to $1,500 and costs.

The group was charged with assault and conspiracy to assault in 10 violence cases. Judge Williams directed a not guilty verdict against one defendant, J. D. Nealy.

The veteran jurist had high praise for Solicitor Clifton L. Moore and state and county officers for their work in smashing Klan activities in this area.

In passing sentence, Judge Williams told the defendants, "The day has not come in North Carolina when a man has to barricade himself in his home with the setting sun."

Helicopters End Atlantic Flight Of 3,300 Miles

Experimental Trip Will Carry Craft Still Further, Into Germany

PRESTWICK, Scotland (AP)—Two U. S. Army Sikorski's, the first helicopters to fly the Atlantic, arrived here today after a 3,300-mile "hop-along" flight from Westover, Mass.

The two flying windmills had taken off from Keflavik, Iceland, on the last and longest hop of their Atlantic flight.

The experimental flight was launched by the Military Transport Service to test the feasibility of delivering helicopters to Europe by air.

The planes started from Westover Air Force Base two weeks ago on a six-stop, 4,000-mile flight to Weisbaden, Germany.

For the history-making trip, the planes—Sikorski H-19s—were loaded with heavy supplies of gas and were accompanied by a C-54 transport. A pilot and co-pilot flew each plane, and expert helicopter mechanics went along in the transport.

The schedule called for the planes to stop over at Fresno, Calif., Goose Bay, Labrador; Narsarsuaq, Greenland; Keflavik, Iceland; Prestwick, and Manston, England. Their longest hop was the one from Iceland to Scotland—317 miles, less than 200 miles short of their 1,000-mile cruising range.

It was planned that the helicopters would be in the air about 40 hours. They have a cruising speed of 85 miles an hour and a top speed of more than 100 miles an hour.

Los Angeles (UP)—A "moderate" earthquake shook Southern California today and experts said it was merely another aftershock of the big tremor which rocked the area, killing 13 persons, 11 days ago.

Unescorted Bombers Level Big Plant Near Manchuria

More Uranium In Sight For A E C

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Atomic Energy Commission said today precious uranium ore soon will be coming into the United States from at least two foreign sources, and that this country has made substantial progress in developing improved atomic weapons during the last six months.

The AEC report also disclosed that a new atomic furnace being built at North Carolina State College at Raleigh will be ready for uranium fueling late this year or early in 1953.

The atomic reactor at Raleigh will be the first non-AEC reactor built in the United States. It is being built through gifts to the college and will be operated by the college physics department.

The AEC disclosed that new sources for uranium in the United States are nearly ready for initial production. It also said Canada will step up its supplies to this country. The new foreign sources are South Africa and Australia.

While the AEC said nothing about scientific progress toward developing the H-bomb, its report gave some statistics on land acquisition and construction work at the Savannah River, S. C. plant where materials for the projected super-bomb would be made.

Acquisition of more than 97 per cent of the land tracts has been completed, the AEC said, representing more than 96 per cent of the total land to be acquired for the South Carolina project.

Of the estimated 30 million cubic yards of earth to be excavated, two-thirds had been moved at the end of June, one-half million cubic yards of concrete had been poured, and 10,000 tons of structural steel had been erected.

A total of 37,100 persons were on the job there. The plant will cost approximately two billion dollars. It is being built by the DuPont Co.

Sixty-Three B-29s Return Safely; Braved Intense Anti-Aircraft Fire And Fighter Opposition; Biggest Raid By Superforts In War Against One Target

Optimism Among Tobacco Growers

SEOUL, Korea (AP)—The U. S. Air Force said 63 American B29s returned safely to bases in Japan and China early today after leveling a huge Communist aluminum plant near the Manchurian border in the biggest overnight raid of the Korean War.

The unescorted bombers braved Red anti-aircraft fire and fighter opposition which U. S. pilots described as "the heaviest in months."

Gen. James A. Van Fleet, U. S. Eighth Army commander, meanwhile, made a quick visit to the Old Baldy Hill sector of the Western Front as six days of rain ended. He conferred with field commanders and returned to headquarters.

The 12th factory of the Oriental Light Metals Co., 10 miles southwest of Sinuiju, went up in smoke and flame after the B29s hurled 630 tons of bombs on it and an adjacent troop buildup area.

Five other Superforts hit other North Korean targets. The 63-plane armada which blasted the metals plant was the biggest Superfort raid of the war against a single objective.

Pilots reported flak from the Manchurian as well as the Korean side of the border, about four miles from the metals plant. It was the northernmost penetration of the year by B29s.

Airman 2-C Julius W. Meintel, Wheeling, W. Va., was credited unofficially with shooting down a propeller-driven night fighter which rose to defend the sprawling target. The gunner's pilot, Lt. Richard G. Crane, Galveston, Tex., said the Red plane "blew up level with my wing."

Col. Walter B. Close, Los Angeles who directed the raid, said almost every other bomber was attacked by Communist fighters. A bombardier, Capt. Ralph R. Searle, Houston, Tex., said, "It was like high noon all of a sudden," when "eight searchlights locked on us at the start of the bomb run and kept with us for the longest five minutes I've ever spent."

Georgia-Florida Prices Averaging Well Above Last Season

Public Health Service Says 1,666 New Cases Last Week

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP)—Optimism prevailed among tobacco growers of the Georgia-Florida belt yesterday because prices were leveling off at an average well above last season.

In spite of some declines Tuesday, the U. S. Department of Agriculture reported the level was still high enough to boost this season's average to $52.04 and increase the gains over last season's average.

Last year the highest daily average of $54.11 per hundred pounds was established on opening day of the market. Thereafter, prices continued to settle until the season ended with an average of $46.46.

The opening day's average this season was $51.60. This was $2.51 lower than the first day's average of 1951. But a marked upward trend appeared later and tobacco men predict the higher level will continue.

They support their predictions with growing evidence that this season's crop will be short because of the severe drought.

Tuesday's sales of 9,138,108 pounds boosted the poundage sold this season to 61,552,319.

Seismologists at nearby California Institute of Technology in Pasadena described the after-shock as "moderate" but said they would have to check their instruments to determine its exact intensity.

The tremor gave Los Angeles only a gentle jolt and went unnoticed in the police station at Long Beach, scene of a tragic quake in 1933.

Swedish Convicts 6 Commies Of Selling Secrets

COLUMBUS, O. (UP)—A telephone operator said today she didn't get a chance to explain to a man who mistakenly thought he had dialed a number to get the time of day by tape recording.

The angry man ignored the girl's attempted explanation, shouting: "You can't argue with me, you're just a recording," and hung up.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP)—Six Swedish Communists were convicted of selling vital defense secrets to Russia today and two were sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor. A seventh was acquitted.

The Swedish government charged them with turning over to the Russians full details of their country's northern defense against any Russian attack across neighboring Finland.

Priitlo Enbom, 33-year-old confessed mastermind of the Soviet spy ring, and his chief accomplice, Jugo Gjerovold, both drew life terms at hard labor. The ringleader's younger brother, Martin Enbom, drew a seven-year sentence.

ASKS ACCOUNTING HUNSAN Korea (AP)—The United Nations Commission today added 45 names to the list of U. N. personnel it says were captured by the Reds and asked for an accounting.

Van Fleet's blunt statement is certain to have important repercussions.

For one thing, it will confirm Gen. Douglas MacArthur's assertion that only one enters wars to win, and with it the corresponding belief that in order to choke off the Chinese military effort in Korea it is necessary to destroy supply bases inside the Manchurian sanctuary.

Pro-Taft Aide Works For Ike

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois has been appointed to a special "strategy board" to chart tactics for the Republican campaign to put Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower into the White House.

Dirksen was a leader in the unsuccessful drive of Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio to capture the GOP presidential nomination. He touched off a demonstration at the Chicago convention with a speech blasting Gen. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, an Eisenhower strategist, as the man who twice led the Republicans to the party's presidential candidate.

Strong Demand On S. Carolina Tobacco Markets

FLORENCE, S. C. (AP)—Strong demand characterized the action on flame-cured South Carolina tobacco markets yesterday, with average prices up from Tuesday's quotations.

Increases ranged from $1 to $6 per hundred pounds, according to reports from the U. S. and N. C. Departments of Agriculture. Low to good lugs and primings registered most of the gains, with cutters and leaf offerings remaining firm.

Total sales yesterday were $1,200,696 at an average of $55.64 per hundred pounds. This marked a drop of 65 cents from opening day. The season sales now stand at $3,242,055 pounds, averaging $56.07.

Peggy Tucker Complimented At Bridge Party

Miss Peggy Tucker, who will soon be married to Carlson Wilson, was extended a courtesy on last Saturday evening when Miss Theresa Saiced entertained at bridge in her honor. For decorations the hostess had arranged assortments of summer flowers, consisting of snapdragons, roses and carnations in pastel colors. These were on tables and the mantel in the front hall and the living room. Three tables were arranged for play, and during the games led drinks and iced nuts were served. After the scores were tallied, the hostess served a dessert course of fruit jello, cream and individual cakes.

Miss Irene McGowan was awarded a jewelry box for high score and also a box of newspapers as holder of the floating prize. Miss Sadie Hatch was given a china plate as holder of low score and the honor was given a gift of crystal in her selected pattern as a remembrance from the hostess.

Mrs. Myrtle H. Wilson and Mrs. Malons Tucker, mothers of the honoree and her fiancé, were guests for the refreshment hour.

Thief Unnerved, Ran Out Of Door

CENTRALIA, Ill. (AP)—A man walked into a rural night club at 6 a. m., flourished a gun and told some 30 persons: "This is a stickup. Line up against the wall with your hands in the air." "One patron refused his order to hand him the money from the cash register," Centralia police said that no one else obeyed the man either. The whole thing made the would-be holdup man so nervous he turned and ran out the door.

Duo-Piano Team To Be Presented Monday Evening

The Entertainment Committee of East Carolina College is presenting Allison Nelson Neal and Harry Lee Neal, noted duo-piano team, in a concert on Monday night, August 4. The performance, which will begin at 8:15 in the Austin Auditorium, is free to the public. It is one of the several attractions which the Entertainment Committee has sponsored during the summer sessions at the college.

Nelson and Neal, as they are known professionally, are a remarkable pair with broad accomplishments. Mr. Neal, a native of Tennessee, was for some years a radio announcer in the United States and did much radio commenting for the Australian Broadcasting Commission. Mrs. Neal, or Allison Nelson, was considered Australia's leading child prodigy. She concertized extensively throughout the country and, in 1944, she became the youngest person ever to tour the ABC Celebrity Concert Circuit, where she played in every major city and with every major orchestra in Australia. She has played on numerous occasions with orchestras directed by Eugene Ormandy, who was instrumental with helping her to obtain a scholarship to the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, where she met and fell in love with Neal, who was later to become her husband and her partner in a popular duo-piano team.

In addition to tours made in the United States, they have also toured singly and together in Australia. They have appeared on a number of television programs and have proved very popular both with "live" audiences and radio and television listeners. The public is cordially invited to attend their concert and to enjoy their brilliant playing of classical music.

Big Horn Sheep Put Under Study

HELENA, Mont. (AP)—A one-year study of the habits of big-horn mountain sheep is being conducted by the Montana Fish and Game Department and the University of Montana. The study is being conducted on Wildhorse Island, in the middle of Northwestern Montana's Flathead Lake. A survey last summer determined 30 adult bighorns and 11 lambs were living on the island.

Although there is some matter in open space, it is a much better vacuum than can be produced on earth.

The following is a scriptural text of special significance to me.
ST. JOHN 14:23 - "If any man love Me, he will keep My word."

This verse challenges our loyalty and love of God. Much in the spirit of a kindred text: "Not everyone that says to Me, Lord, Lord, shall enter the Kingdom of Heaven." Christ here gives us a means to measure our faith and to free ourselves from the plague of inconsistency. We apply such tests to our neighbor when we question his sincerity. What use for him to profess affection if he continually affronts us. Why not then apply the same sensitive gauge to our relationship with God? Too many who pray: "Thy Will be done" illustrate by their actions an attitude of "My will be done." We should all achieve greater happiness for ourselves and better peace with our neighbor if we measured our righteousness by conformity with God's WILL. We prove our love by our loyalties to God as well as to another.

Effects Of Television On Children Of Today Studied

Parents and teachers are becoming more and more concerned about radio, TV, comics and the movies viewed and read by their children. According to Professor Paul Witty, Director of the Psycho-Educational Clinic of Northwestern University and Dr. Harry Bricker of Emory University's Atlanta Area Teacher Education Service, these forms of entertainment have come to be increasingly important to our children in recent years. Sometimes it seems to adults that youngsters' leisure time is filled with little else. As for movies, children under 6 should go very seldom, say the authors. When they do go, parents should know from reviews or from some reliable person who has seen the movie, that it is a wholesome experience for a small child. And it is a good idea, they say for movie going not to become a habit. Since TV, radio and the comics are here to stay, say the authors, teachers can play a part, too, in helping children make better use of these media. By learning something about their pupils' habits they can also discover ways to use these as tools for helping children learn.

The authors of a little pamphlet, "Your Child and Radio, TV, Comics and Movies," published by Science Research Associates, Inc., of 87 W Grand Ave., Chicago, Ill., they point out that millions of children know comic characters better than they know our secretary of state or England's prime minister. Over 90 per cent of children between 6 and 13 years of age regularly read comic strips and comic books. Every Saturday, and often three or four times a week, 10 million children's eyes are glued to movie screens.

In addition, the average child in some communities spends two or more hours each day listening to the radio. Reading, studying, and other activities are often carried on with radio programs as background. It is known, too, that 5- and 6-year-olds are among the heaviest television viewers; they often watch TV four or five hours a day. Many children, ages 7 to 17, spend an average of three hours a day in front of television sets. Some watch video 27 hours a week—almost as much time as they spend on their lessons.

"What do all these facts mean?" the authors ask. "They mean that today's children live not merely in an age of atomic energy, but also in an age of mass communication. . . . Today—directly or indirectly—these forms of entertainment inescapably touch every child, and no amount of parental care can prevent this."

These media, the authors say are not in themselves harmful. Rather, it's the way they are often used and the things they bring to the eyes and the ears of children that cause the trouble. Parents are concerned, for example, with the horror and violence which run through so much of the material. They want to know if the constant repetition of true situations will stunt the creativeness of children exposed to them. Will children accept the standards and values stressed by these entertainments as their own even if these are opposed to those values stressed by most parents and teachers? Will the child who is a passive listener learn to participate in constructive activities? Won't grades go down? What can parents do to help them choose a balanced diet of fun and recreation? First of all, say the authors, moderation is essential. Only you and your child can decide how much time he should have for listening to the radio or watching TV, or

Mustering Out Pay Application Available Here

Pitt County veterans of the Korean conflict may now apply locally for mustering out pay.

Louis W. Gaylord, Jr. of Greenville, Pitt County veterans' service officer, said today all Korean veterans who wish to apply for mustering out checks may come by his office and make application.

Gaylord reported the only papers veterans should bring with them are forms DD-214, a report of separation from the service. This applies to all men who served in the armed services after June, 1950.

Kiwanis Show Is Slated Tonight

The Greenville Kiwanis Club will present its amateur talent show at Austin Auditorium tonight at 8 o'clock. It will be for the benefit of a recreation fund.

El Bloom, Kiwanis minstrel impresario, will produce and direct the show. Three cash prizes will be awarded for successful contestants under 16 years old, and three cash prizes will be given contestants over 16. Kiwanians are selling tickets and they will be available at the door Thursday night.

Raising Tropical Fish Has Hazard

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Raising tropical fish is a hobby that can easily get out of hand, explained Jules Corotis to Zoning Board of Adjustment officials.

They multiply so fast you have to find ways to get rid of them, he said. He has been selling them and even giving some away to neighbors. He seeks a use permit in connection with his fish enterprise in the basement of his home.

Miss Parrish, Lt. Lethbridge Speak Vows In Cherry Point Post Chapel

Miss Betsy Emmaline Parrish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis W. Parrish of Greenville, N. C., and Lt. John Dodd Lethbridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Lethbridge of Upper Montclair, N. J., were united in marriage Saturday afternoon, July 26, at 4 o'clock in the Post Chapel, Cherry Point, N. C. Chaplain N. H. Flowers officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Prior to the ceremony, Mrs. W. H. Holloway, organist, presented a program of nuptial music. Mrs. James Corey, soloist, sang "Through The Years" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Captain Eugene Millette of Cherry Point, wore an original Maurer ballerina length dress of imported Chantilly lace and nylon tulle having a high neckline with a yoke of tulle applied on to the lace bodice and short puffed sleeves. The fitted bodice of lace fell into panniers of lace over the full nylon tulle skirt. The fingertip veil of illusion fell from a modified Juliet cap of matching lace and tulle embroidered with iridescent sequins. She carried a cascade bouquet of white lilies, showered with stephanotis and centered with a white purple-throated orchid and tied with white bridal ribbon.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Eugene Millette, of Cherry Point, was her matron-of-honor. She wore a nylon tulle ballerina length dress of Nile green with a strapless bodice and accented with a net stole. With this she wore a matching open crown picture hat and Nile green satin pumps. She carried an old fashioned nosegay of mixed summer flowers tied with rainbow-hued ribbon.

The bridesmaids were Miss Emilie DuPre and Miss Nancy Elks, both of Greenville, Miss Shirley Reeves of Havelock, N. C., and Miss Jean Lethbridge of Upper Montclair, sister of the bridegroom. Misses DuPre and Lethbridge wore pale yellow dresses with the matching hats and pumps and Misses Elks and Reeves wore orchid dresses, all fashioned like that of the honor attendant. They also carried old fashioned nosegays of mixed summer flowers tied with rainbow-hued ribbon.

The mother of the bride was attired in a navy blue dress and her accessories were navy blue and white. She wore a corsage of white roses. The mother of the bridegroom was attired in a black and white print silk dress and her accessories were black and white. She wore a corsage of white carnations.

Mr. George M. Lethbridge Jr. served his brother as best man. Ushers were Lt. William Jackson and Lt. Theodore Forbes, both stationed at Cherry Point, Mr. Richard Ferencbach of New York City, and Lt. John Lee, stationed at Camp Lejeune.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the Officers' Club.

Mrs. Lethbridge was graduated from Greenville High School and for the past four years has held a position at the Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point.

Lt. Lethbridge was graduated from the Hill School in Pottstown, Pa., and from Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va., where he was a member of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity. He held a position with Eastern Airlines in New York City prior to his recall to active duty.

For travel, the bride wore a beige faille dress and brown and white accessories and the orchid from her bridal bouquet. Following a wedding trip to Miami and St. Thomas, Puerto Rico, the couple will make their home in New Bern, N. C.

Langston Will Be Club's Speaker

HELL'S HORSEMAN

BY WILLIAM HOPSON

Chapter 13
 Montana had heard enough. Many things now were clear. It was plain why Black Jack and the Dutchman and their men had been waiting in the junction; spying to keep an eye on the herd and the new owner until Forrest and the girls left town. They were going to close in on the stage and take over, and then get in touch with Ramson. As for Ro Runder, the man was playing for very big stakes. He had crossed up the man who called himself King Ramson, apparently believing that, if he worked with Caswell and the Dutchman, the haul would in the long run be richer. He was an unscrupulous gunman, vain, believing in himself and his cronies.

Montana rolled over. With a lithe movement he twisted sideways, jerked the 40-66 out of the warbag, reached in for a belt of cartridges for the weapon, and slung them over his shoulder bandolier fashion. He crept down through the buckbrush, looking back, the big repeater gripped in his right hand. The stage showed up through the trees and his first thought was of Orndorf. The driver lay in a half-sitting position, his back against the trunk of pine, his mouth open and heavy snores coming from it. The whiskey had almost put him out. In covered pans the food was waiting among the ashes, and down by the creek the horses, fed and somewhat rested, stood with hips slumped, eyes closed drowsily.

It was a matter of moments for Montana to get his saddle. He slipped the Winchester into its boot and then carried saddle and bridle to the horses. He didn't know whether they were saddle-broken or not, but there was little time to bother about such things. Selecting the three gentlest-looking ones, he quickly removed their nosebags. No time to water them now. They couldn't run on bellies filled with water.

Orndorf had not unharnessed the animals, and Montana worked fast, almost frantically getting off the harness but leaving on two of the bridles. It was but the work of moments to cut lines into reins and lead the three mounts over to a tree. He tied them there and hurried back to the coach.

Bo's girls were sound asleep.

He bent and touched Belle Ramson, the half-sister he had never known, and her range-wise eyes opened at once. He placed a finger to his lips.

"Don't talk," he said, low-voiced. "Black Jack Caswell and Dutch Saunders are here with about a dozen men."

"Over there. You're both being held for ransom. Runder seems to have engineered the deal."

She was a woman of action. She turned to waken Helen, and Montana, knowing the hard-riding job that lay ahead, risked all by climbing up on top of the coach for Runder's saddle. But Orndorf was still asleep and too deeply to hear. When Montana reached the ground again Helen looked at him, her eyes widening. Gone was the well-dressed man of a little while before. In his place stood a Westerner in riding leather, gun-belted, and carrying a big Winchester, a third cartridge belt slung over one shoulder bandolier fashion.

"Can you ride?" he asked.

"Quite well, thank you."

"We'd better get going fast." Something about him, the stoniness of his countenance, the guns he wore, brought a doubt to her mind. She remembered McBean on the train.

"Who are you?" she whispered.

"Why did you come with us?"

"They call me Montana, Miss Forrest. And I came with you to save a man's life."

He hurried the two of them along, for sounds had come from over in the trees. They came to the horses and Montana slipped the saddle on what he took to be the best horse. He bent swiftly, grabbed the dangling girth, and cinched it tight, an unaided prayer going out that it might need no adjustment.

He dropped on his knees before Helen Forrest and before she was aware of what was happening the knife flashed and a two-foot rent appeared in her skirt. He spun her around and ripped again. Then she was being flung bodily up into the saddle. Belle Ramson calmly tore her own skirt.

"I played you for a square one all along," she said. "Maybe I was mistaken, maybe not. But any gamble with a gun fighter is better than to chance falling into the hands of Dutch Saunders. Help me up."

He grasped her foot and swung her to the saddle, and admiration filled him at the manner in which his half-sister had met the situation. He leaped astride his own mount and girthed the animal toward the creek. The horses tried to lower their heads and drink but were pushed on across. One of them stumbled on a smooth rock in the shallow water and the sharp noise sounded like a gunshot.

A yell came from behind, and that was the signal that Montana had been dreading. No chance now of slipping away unseen and getting a big head start. They would have to run for it.

With a slash of the long cut harness he sent Helen Forrest's mount plunging ahead and the three broke into a run through the timber. Montana spurred his own mount and plunged on beside them. His eyes went to the Eastern girl. Thank God she could ride!

Montana threw a glance back. A group of riders had come out into the clearing by the stage and were yelling and pointing. This much he could make out as his barebacked mount plunged on. He caught a brief glance of a startled Orndorf leaping to his feet, saw a movement of Dutch Saunders' right hand stabbing downward over the saddle. A report, faint in the rushing wind, drifted to his ears.

Saunders, in bestial rage, had shot down the renegade Ramson driver.

The others had not hesitated. They spurred hard through the trees and Runder suddenly appeared among them, astride an-

New Expedition Plans To Search For Noah's Ark

ISTANBUL (U.P.)—Great interest has been aroused in Turkey by the arrival here of Abbe Noel, member of a French expedition which intends to make another attempt to find Noah's Ark on Mount Ararat.

Undeterred by the failure of an American expedition to find any trace of the Biblical Ark in 1949, the French have applied to the Turkish government for permission to climb the mountain.

The expedition, which includes five people, is led by an archeologist, Jean de Riquer. Father Noel came in advance of the others to get the necessary authorization from the Turkish government.

It is by no means certain that permission will be granted. The expedition is already on its way to Turkey, and intends to visit other places of archeological interest if refused permission to look for Noah's ark.

Turks Skeptical
 People here are likely to smile a little and shake their heads when speaking about the search for Noah's Ark. There is quite a bit of headshaking in government circles, too, if usually reliable reports are to be believed.

Mount Ararat is near the Soviet frontier and the Soviet press has repeatedly suggested that all these people who profess to be so interested in Noah's Ark are, in reality, nothing but imperialist spies snooping around to do their dirty business.

The Turks, it is said, do not want to irritate the Russians more than is strictly necessary.

The Russians are all the more suspicious as, according to them, there can be no doubt at all that Noah's Ark never existed.

Aaron J. Smith, the leader of the American expedition which climbed Mount Ararat in 1949, afterwards advanced three theories for the expedition's failure to locate the Ark.

He said that 1) the Ark could have been decayed long ago; 2) it might have been covered by a glacier in one of the many deep crevices; 3) it might have been destroyed or covered with lava in one of the many volcanic eruptions which are known to have shaken the area since Biblical days.

Previous rumors about the Ark said that several persons had seen it from the air and from adjoining mountains but the reports con-other of the coach horses. For a mile Montana urged his charges ahead, ducking in and out of gullies while he tried every trick in the book to throw off the pursuers. Those tricks were few; there was no time.

Completes Tour At Air Station

Dr. John O. Reynolds, faculty member of the Department of Mathematics of East Carolina, returned this week from a two-weeks tour of duty at the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Florida.

Dr. Reynolds holds the rank of lieutenant-commander in the United States Naval Reserve and is the commanding officer of the Greenville composite unit 626-26, a group of volunteers.

During the training period at Pensacola, Lieutenant Commander Reynolds participated in maneuvers aboard the U. S. S. Cabot, an aircraft carrier operating in the Gulf of Mexico. Naval aviation cadets on flicted.

Some said a pilot had seen the Ark perched on the top of a mountain, others that the Ark was sitting in a small lake in the so-called saddle between the big and the little Ararat. Another report said a shepherd had found the remains of a gigantic boat in the mountains of Eastern Anatolia.

a training schedule in flight and landing planes on aircraft carriers were given close instruction on this operation. Reynolds reports.

Returning by way of the University of Florida at Tallahassee, Dr. Reynolds visited his brother, Dr. J. Paul Reynolds, associate dean, and conferred with Dean Charles Davis and members of the staff and instructors in the Departments of Mathematics, Physics, and Chemistry.

Germans Take To New 'Egg-Fever'

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP)—West Germany is enjoying a touch of egg-fever.

It's the incubated egg-cure which helped them to get rid of their troubles, they say. Millions of incubated eggs are being eaten these days.

The simple formula is: Eat one egg daily-incubated nine days-and do this for one month. The theory is that some particles in the egg embryo-called trephones-effect a renewal of the human cellular system and rejuvenate the patient. These trephones are said to be most effective after nine days of incubation.

The Sport Reflector

By BOB HILLDRUP

The Olympics at Helsinki are drawing to a close. In a few more days many a tired athlete will be in the trek back to his native land. All in all it has been a very successful period in the annals of sport. Many words of credit can go to all the nations that have competed.

There have been, of course, certain minor outbursts of temper and a few hurt feelings. But if one considers the state of tension that exists throughout the world then the few irregularities that have occurred have been minor indeed.

So far it seems that the vast political and ideological differences between the East and West have had little effect upon the games. On more than one occasion athletes representing both Communism and Democracy, have been seen strolling from the field of athletic conflict, arm in arm.

These 1952 Olympics, therefore, may be able to bring about more international understanding than all the political wrangling that the politicians have carried on in the last few years.

For whenever people gather to play through the inborn spirit of competition they will judge their opponents, not on his political beliefs, but how he plays the game.

Jaycees Take City Championship By Downing Lions, 6-1; Hudson Wins

Lions Pull Triple Play But Lose In Five-Game Series; Taylor Makes Spectacular Play For Jaycees

Three big runs in the opening frame were all that was necessary but the Jaycees went on to down the Lions 6-1 and thereby capture the city championship.

Yesterday's game was the deciding contest, each club having won two of the first four games. Charles Stator received the starting assignment for the Lions with John Wesley Hudson getting the nod for the Jaycees.

The Jaycees scored their three markers in the opening frame with the aid of but one hit, the first of three by Hudson.

The Lions came back for their first and only marker in the bottom of the opening frame. Mac McKenzie was hit by the pitcher, advanced by Edmondson's base hit, and scooted home from second on Johnny Harrison's base knock to left.

In the Jaycees' half of the third inning, Hudson led off with his second consecutive hit, a double. Sermons singled and Fisher walked to load the bases. Walker Lee Allen then sent a line drive to Edmondson at second who threw to first to double off the runner. First baseman Primrose then threw to catcher Harrison to stop Sermons from scoring. Harrison's throw to third erased Sermons and completed a triple play.

In the bottom of the fifth with one man out Edmondson came to bat with one man away and sent a towering fly ball to deep left field. Left fielder Taylor then made a spectacular rolling catch with his back to home plate to rob Edmondson of an extra base blow.

Hudson weakened slightly in the final frame. After retiring the first two men on fly balls to the infield he gave up consecutive singles to Aubrey Harrison and Stator. He then bore down, however, and retired Primrose on strikes to end the game and bring the city crown to the Jaycees.

Zoe Ann Jensen Finishes Third In Diving Meet

The little girl you named Zoe Ann back there on that happy natal day 22 years ago won't be taking a gold medal back to you Oisens, or to her husband, Jackie Jensen. But she's a real champ anyhow, pop.

Zoe Ann had a lot of rough jolts yesterday. First she was deducted points in the springboard dive which dropped her from third to eighth place and smashed these Olympic hopes. Then she discovered that $20 and the diamond wrist watch, which Jackie gave her on her 18th birthday, had been stolen.

Her blue-green eyes were filled with tears and her lips trembled as she went out for the diving finals. Zoe Ann was nervous and unfit mentally for such crack competition, and she was racked by a bronchial cold.

But it was you, pop Oisens, about whom she was thinking.

"It's rough on him," she quavered. "Pop thinks I'm the greatest in the world. I hate to let him down. For years he's been giving me everything, and hoping for something like this I'd liked to have won this one for him, just to show my appreciation. It's him I'm sorry for."

She gave it a helluva try, pop. If you could have seen her it would have paid you in full for all those years of devotion.

Anybody could see that she tried. Yet she pulled herself together and went out there at the bottom of the list with very dim prospects of getting up into the money.

She didn't show her agitation as she climbed the tower, a tiny, fragile figure against the sky. Even you, pop, couldn't guess her despair and desperation.

No, she didn't win. But it was magnificent performance as she fought back into third place.

On the first of those five final dives she collared France's Nicole Lissard. Now she was seventh.

On the second dive she flipped through the air and when the heat was over she had swept past Russia's Ninel Krutova and Britain's Phyllis Long. That meant she was fifth.

And on her third effort, Zoe Ann moved into third place, passing Russia's Lyubov Lzhiglova and Britain's Charmian Welsh. That left only Mrs. Patricia McCormick and France's Mady Moreau ahead of her—too far ahead to catch in the two remaining dives.

But you know her, pop, and nobody has to tell you she didn't quit.

For on the last dive, as Mrs. McCormick and Miss Moreau both faltered, Zoe Ann came through with an 189-7-pointer which was the second best dive of the entire championship.

No, she didn't win, but cherish that bronze third place medal she's taking home to you, pop. This kid went a lot farther yesterday as a champion than even you ever thought she would.

Wild Pitch

NEW YORK (UP)—One pitch by Johnny Klippstein of the Cubs threw the official scorer into a tizzy last night.

This was the setup: Bobby Thomson of the Giants was on third base, Don Mueller on second and Davey Williams at bat with a 3-1 count.

Thomson broke for home on the windup and slid in safely as Klippstein's hurried pitch eluded catcher Harry Chitt. Mueller also scored before Chitt could retrieve the ball. The pitch also was the fourth ball

Roberts Wins 16th Game For Phils As Giants Lose Ground

Zoe Ann Jensen Finishes Third In Diving Meet

NEW YORK (UP)—Old timers claim picture pitcher Robin Roberts, who has youth and a strong right arm on his side, is the major leaguer most likely to win 300 games in his career, and the 25-year-old Phillies' righthander was making them sound like true prophets today.

No pitcher has hit that magic number since another Philadelphia, lefty Bob Grove, reached it several years back. Bob Feller of the Indians and Bobo Newsum of the Athletics each has more than 200. But both of them have come close to the limit, whereas Roberts may have 10 or more good years.

Last night, the prize bonus boy won his 16th game by defeating the Reds, 7 to 3, as the Phils made it six victories in a row, 10 out of 11, and 18 out of 14. That made him tops for the year in the National League and it also gave him a lifetime mark of 79 victories in five seasons.

The Phils, now 13½ games out of first place, closed in on both the third place Cardinals, who lost 2 to 1 in Boston, and on the second place Giants, who won 10 to 6 from the Cubs, then lost, 6 to 2. The Dodgers, ending a five game losing streak, beat the Pirates, 4 to 3 in 10 innings, to take a 4-1-2 game first place lead.

In the American League, the pace-setting Yankees suffered a two-hit, 7 to 0 setback at Chicago on Lou Kretlow's second straight shutout, but runner-up Cleveland remained three games behind by losing 5 to 4 to Boston. The sixth place Athletics moved to within 8 1-2 games of the top with a 4 to 3 conquest of Detroit, and the fourth place Senators ended a four-game losing streak by defeating the Browns, 6 to 2.

Rookie Ed Mathews hit his 17th homer to give Warren Spahn a victory over Joe Pesko in a pitching battle at Boston as Stan Musial homered for the only St. Louis tally.

The Giants put on a four-run rally in the eighth to top the Cubs in the opener as Al Dark and Rookie Jim Rhodes homered. In the second game, the Cubs went in front to stay for Johnny Klippstein on a two-run homer by Hank Sauer, his 25th.

Roy Campanella tied it up for Brooklyn in the ninth with a homer and Carl Furillo singled home the winning run in the 10th in an uphill battle in which Joe Black won his fifth game.

The White Sox made 11 hits and drew 11 walks to win easily from the faltering Yankee hurlers. Rookie Jim Rivera hit a Chicago homer. Kretlow's two shutout victories are his only victories of the year.

The Red Sox took an early lead on the homers of Hoot Evers and Dick Barrett, then cashed in on fine relief pitching by Al Benton and Dizzy Trout to top the Indians, who threatened futilely in the ninth.

Bob Porterfield took it out once more on his favorite opponents, the fourth time this season.

Allie Clark supplied all the necessary offensive with a pair of two-run doubles in Philadelphia's triumph at Detroit. Dick Fowler, though tagged for 12 hits, stuck it out to win his first game of the year.

Easterners And Southerners Win

CINCINNATI (AP)—A team of Easterners and Southerners wiped out a three-match deficit in the final round yesterday to win the mixed team championship of the American Contract Bridge League Tournament.

Members of the winning combination were Mrs. Robert Burnstein and Harold Harkavy of Miami, Fla., Mrs. Edith Seligman of New York and Alvin Roth of Washington.

They won 21½ out of 28 matches in the third round to nose out the team of George Raape of New York, Mrs. Emma Jean Haves of Fort Worth and Mrs. Oliver Peterson, Sidney Silador and John R. Crawford of Philadelphia by one match, 58 to 57.

The latter team led through the first two rounds.

The master team matches, considered the most important of the summer tournament, began tonight. The winners will compete in the world championships next November.

The master pairs championship was to start today. The entry list of 288 pairs is the largest in the history of the national tournament.

Play Commences At Tam O'Shanter

CHICAGO (UP)—More than 100 of the highest rated golf pros in the world began play today in the Tam O'Shanter.

Among the starting field were 22 foreigners, most of them champions of their own nation, who were invited with expenses paid by the Tam sponsors to compete not only in this week's 72 hole medal tournament but also in next week's 7 hole "world" event which has a $85,800 prize list.

None of the foreign contingent rated as serious challengers to the better known American players, particularly since Bobby Locke, winner of the Tam event, cancelled his entry a week ago. Locke, from South Africa, has been the only invader to show success in American tournaments.

All the American stars, with the exception of Ben Hogan, were entered in the meet and Lloyd Mangrum, who claims Tam O'Shanter as his "home course," but rarely plays it, was the best regarded in the field.

Little League Play Will Begin

The district one Little League Tournament will begin in Greenville on Tuesday, August 5, at 3 p.m. when Farmville will meet the Rocky Mount Americans.

Teams from Farmville, Rocky Mount, Williamston and Greenville will compete for the right to represent District 1 in the state tournament at Wilmington later in August.

The second round of play will begin Wednesday afternoon when the Rocky Mount Nationals meet Greenville and Williamston plays the winner of the Rocky Mount American-Farmville game.

The final day of action will be Thursday, August 7. At 3 p.m. that afternoon the consolation game will be played and at 5:00 the championship game will be held.

Little is known of the visiting clubs.

Carolina Native

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Tulane University has announced the appointment of Edison (Eddie) Allen, Charlotte Observer sports writer and columnist, as sports director of the University News Bureau.

Public Relations Director Horace Renegar said last night that Allen will begin his new duties Aug. 18. He will be accompanied to New Orleans by Mrs. Allen and their 4-year-old daughter.

Allen, a native of Greensboro, N. C., and an alumnus of the University of North Carolina, has been with the Observer since 1942. He has covered professional baseball and a major Southern Conference sport, in addition to conducting a column, for several years. He is president of the Tri-State League Baseball Writers Association.

Southern Invitational Open At Wilson Tonight

WILSON, N. C. (AP)—The highlight of the beauty pageant here tonight, which begins the Southern Open Invitational AAU Swimming and Diving Championships, is the assault on the national 300-meter medley relay mark by three Raleigh swimmers.

Frank Nauss freestyle, Paul Arata breaststroke and Tommy Dunlap backstroke will try to better the American record, as the opening event in this meet which saw four national records established last year. The meet lasts through Saturday night.

The Southern AAU Beauty Pageant queen will be selected tonight by a panel of judges and crowned by the recently-named Miss North Carolina of 1952, Barbara Ann Harris of Salisbury.

Thirteen qualifying trials will be run off tomorrow morning, with the finals set for tomorrow night. Saturday morning, 13 more time trials will be held, with the finals in these set for Saturday night.

The race for unofficial team honors promises to be close this year, with such outstanding entries as Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., Raleigh, Army Medical Center, Washington, D. C., Baltimore, Atlanta, Maple Grove Swimming Club, Lancaster, Pa., Richmond YMCA, Chapel Hill, Durham, Roanoke Rapids, High Point and Kinston.

There is plenty of individual talent on hand too. Some of the front-rank Southern tankmen and women entered in the swims this year are:

ON THE HOUSE

By DAVID G. BAEUTHER, AP Real Estate Editor

In these days when we get stiff necks and backs from sitting in front of fans, the idea of forcibly circulating plenty of fresh air through a house without getting any direct blasts seems very attractive.

One way to accomplish this, whether you are dealing with air conditioning in the summer or circulating warm air in the winter, is to use diffusers.

These are bunches of concentric cones, one inside another, which you often see in restaurant ceilings and other public places. They work by spreading the rush of air from a high pressure duct into almost all the directions a light is spread from a bowl-shaped fixture on the ceiling.

The result is not draft. Although the full velocity of air is flowing from an outlet, it is so diffused that you can light a cigarette with no difficulty. Still the air in a room is continuously and pleasantly circulated.

You can get a convincing demonstration of these gadgets by having a high velocity air duct forked into two outlets: one merely grilled, as with a register, and the other capped with a diffuser. Stand in front of the first opening and it will knock your hat off. Stand in front of the second and you scarcely feel the flow of air. This was demonstrated some years ago when the first diffusers were exhibited at the Architects Samples Corporation in New York. Nowadays the diffusers are even adjustable.

The advantages of diffusers are of special interest right now for various reasons:

1. This is the season when prudent householders who need new heating plants have such systems installed before they are caught short by cold weather.
  2. Small pipe heating systems, circulating hotter air at higher velocities, are becoming more and more popular. The House and Home edition of the Magazine of Building finds manufacturers expecting these 3/4 and 4-inch heating ducts to be the accepted standard within five years.
  3. The development of air-cooling for the average house is making provision for cooled air desirable for when, as and if you want to add it. Air ducts pave the way.
  4. The circulation of air in a room from the center of a ceiling is much more agreeable than pouring it in along the floor, or spilling it out from the walls.
- The functioning of ceiling diffusers is explained most understandably by H.A. Baker of the W.B. Connor Engineering Corp., of Danbury, Conn. Baker says: "A regular forced warm air furnace is used as the heating element. Where the ordinary system has a large horizontal main duct in the cellar with branches fanning out to the floors or baseboards of the room above, this furnace bonnet goes straight up through the house to the attic and is concealed in a closet. Branch ducts are then laid across or under the attic floor and down to the diffusers in the center of each room's ceiling. Intake grilles return cooler air to the furnace from points in the baseboards below windows. These pull down, or siphon the air.
- "This action produces a constant, yet gentle and imperceptible, air motion throughout the entire house. Uniform temperature results."
- The incoming air in this system is discharged from the diffuser in an umbrella pattern. It entrains, as the engineers call it, about 4 1/2 times as much room air which acts as a brake as it is dragged along, slowing down the movement. Because of this mixing there is no draft, even with very low ceilings.
- A big advantage in ceiling outlets is that wall space is left free for furniture placement. The diffuser can be painted to match the ceiling, or it can form an ornamental collar for a chandelier in a dining room. In oversize living rooms you can locate diffusers on quarter centers.
- The Connor organization has been installing diffusers in commercial buildings for many years.

Mossadegh Has Enlisted Help Of Communists

By PHIL NEWSOM
United Press Foreign News Editor

In Tehran recent Iranian Communists tried to pull down a plaque honoring the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt on Roosevelt Street.

They were stopped by Iranian Nationalists who threatened to retaliate by pulling down a similar plaque honoring Soviet Premier Josef Stalin on Stalin Street.

Such a "my father can lick your father" game might be amusing except for the fact that in Iran all sides are playing for keeps.

Theoretically, the Communists—or Tudeh party, as they are known there—are outlawed in Iran. But they've come out into the open in the last week. And played a major part in throwing out Premier Ahmed Qavam and in the restoration of former and present Premier Mohammed Mossadegh.

Mossadegh is a thorough Nationalist, and has never shown any particular inclination to play footsie with the Russians.

But Mossadegh's overpowering hatred for the British had his desire to strong-arm his way back into office, if necessary, apparently led him to accept the Communists as temporary allies.

It could be an important mistake—both for Iran and the Western Allies.

The Tudehs were outlawed in 1949 because a member tried to assassinate the shah.

Their opportunity to come back into the open came on July 19 when Premier Qavam promised to try to reach a settlement with Britain on the long-smoldering oil dispute. The Reds immediately offered their help to the Nationalist supporters of Mossadegh in a campaign of terror and violence to unseat Qavam.

The man who actually made the decision to accept Red help was Seyid Sbol Qasim Kashani, a Moslem mullah (teacher), Iran's most expert manipulator of terror as a political weapon and probably Mossadegh's most powerful supporter.

"We shall all unite under one banner against imperialism," Kashani said. "Our aim is one and we accept Tudeh cooperation with all our hearts."

They could be famous last words. Mossadegh and Kashani may operate on the theory that once having used the Communists for their own purposes, they then can shove the Reds back into their proper places. They have only to look at recent history to see the disaster they court.

Only a few weeks ago, Hungary's veteran Communist premier, Matyas Rakosi, published a boastful article which gave the Communist coalitions. They then discovered a "conspiracy" against the state inside the ruling party. Then, with a small measure of power and continually posing as the true defenders of the peoples' interests, they took over police control.

Finally, the premier himself was accused of complicity in an American plot, and with the country in chaos the Reds swarmed to power.

We may hope that both Mossadegh and Kashani have read Rakosi's informative article.

If not, we may be in for another expensive lesson in political science as practised by the Reds.

Cases Heard In City Police Court

By CHESTER WALSH
In police court yesterday, Judge Charles H. Whedbee found Clifton A. James of Goldsboro, guilty of larceny of an automobile belonging to John D. Dickens of Greenville.

The court bound the defendant over to Superior Court for grand jury hearing in August.

Testimony was the James took the car from near the Greenville Elks Lodge. A deputy sheriff apprehended him on a Greene County highway after he had stopped when the car was out of gas. The car, slightly damaged, was returned to the owner.

It developed at the hearing in Police Court here today that James is in a lot of trouble. The court was informed that he has several charges involving traffic violations pending against him at Snow Hill.

Henry Tripp, who lives across Tar river, was found guilty of failure to comply with a Greenville city ordinance concerning plumbing. The court continued prayer for judgment, pending Tripp's compliance with the city sanitary ordinance.

Perry S. Mills, charged with driving drunk, was called and he failed to answer to his name. A capias was issued for him.

Robert E. McGowan was found guilty of failure to stop at a traffic light and was fined $10. The court fined him $25 and costs for not having an operator's license.

William H. Shavener, worthless check, the court ordered him to pay $20 for the check and $5 court costs and dismissed the action.

Lealon Sexton, Jr., Camp Lejeune, driving drunk and carelessly and recklessly. The cases were combined and the court fined him $100 and costs and recommended that his driver's license be revoked for a year.

George A. Yelverton, Negro, paid $15 for speeding.

John Bryant Kittrell not stopping for a traffic light, paid $10 and prayer for judgment was continued.

The case against Howard W. Allen, 18-year-old youth, of Greenville, who is at liberty under $4,000 bond in connection with the robbery of a safe at the home of J. W. Higgs, 1112 Dickinson avenue, was continued to next Friday.

Preparedness Required To Photo Flying Saucers

By IRVING DESFOR AP Newsfeatures

How would you photograph a "flying saucer" at night?

This was a matter of earnest discussion recently due to the experience of a seasoned reporter for AP newsfeatures, Saul Pett. Lolling comfortably on the porch of his New Jersey home, he was listening to the midnight news report one Saturday night. His attention was fully caught by a light which came into view in the skies.

"That's funny," he thought. "No light blinking on that plane. And no sound of the motor . . . and what a peculiar glow!"

Suddenly he became alert, observant. He followed its straight path across the heavens until it was lost from view. He noted it seemed to have depth and was lighted as though from within. He judged it was visible for about a minute, maybe a minute and a half.

When he recounted his experience at the office on Monday morning, Saul took a lot of kidding. There were varied allusions as to the state of his hearing, vision and general sobriety.

"Why didn't you take a picture of it?" I asked him.

"Aside from the fact that I didn't have a camera loaded with film and ready to shoot," he replied, "I wouldn't know how to go about it."

That night in a report from Washington, the Air Force disclosed that National Airport radar operators had picked up unidentified aerial "objects" on their radar screens around midnight of the past Saturday. At the same time they were sighted visually by two airline pilots aloft.

There's no harm in giving some thought to saucer photography. Obviously, a camera must be handy and ready for instantaneous shooting at all times. Getting it, setting the lens wide open, the lens at infinity and preparing to shoot should be a matter of seconds only.

After discussion with several news photographers, it was agreed that shooting this luminous object at night was similar to taking pictures of an eclipse. This meant a steady support for the camera, if it were not already on a tripod.

When the camera is aimed at the sky, it would be preferable to keep a landmark visible if possible—such as a tree top, a roof, a spire. Such a relationship is valuable, later on, in computing distance, altitude and possibly speed.

The shutter could be set on Time, Bulk, or a one-second exposure depending on which you could operate smoothly, continuously for a series of exposures on the same negative. To avoid jarring the camera, the camera could be set on Time, the lens opened. Then use the lens cap, film slide or a piece of cardboard to cover the lens at intervals. Actually, you would be plotting the course of a luminous object across the film.

Depending on the brilliance of the object, it might barely be possible to take a single snap of the object at a tenth or a fifth of a second. It would be something to try, if time permitted, but much longer time exposures would be more likely to record something on the film.

If you wish to practice for the night when you might sight a glowing "light," nature and man have provided convenient stand-ins in the shape of the moon and passing airplanes. With the moon you can have plenty of time for unhurried preparation and calculations. Passing airplanes provide the elements of suspense and luck and will prove whether you can shoot a moving target with hair-trigger accuracy.

Of course if "flying saucers" had any consideration at all for the peace of mind of amateur photographers, they would make their appearance in broad daylight in a cloudless sky just as Mr. Shutterbug is shooting Junior's picture with a sky background. It would be a real snap then.

Stocks And Market Reports

NEW YORK (UP)—The stock market rose to a new high in more than 22 years on reduced volume today.

Railroad shares with gains ranging to more than a point sparked the advance. Outside the carriers, improvements were generally in the fractional zone. The rise in the carriers moved prices in that section to the best level since March 10, 1931. Industrials now reach back to April 26, 1930.

Despite the advance, dealings were restricted. Sales in the first two hours totaled 480,000 shares, compared with 520,000 in the same period yesterday.

Santa Fe was the bellwether in its section. The stock tacked on a gain of 1 1/2 points to 91 3/4. Seaboard Air Line rose a point to 96. Other pivots in this group rose fractionally. New York & Harlem, which moves widely, cracked 50 points to 450.

Elsewhere, steel shares were in a lull. Bethlehem Steel eased and Youngstown Sheet & Tube held unchanged at 47 1/2. Directors of Bethlehem Steel will meet after the close today to take dividend action and also will announce first half earnings.

Utilities rose slightly. The modest advance in this group was enough to advance prices in this group to their best levels since Sep. 12, 1931.

Area Development And Planning Discussed At College Workshop

Area development and planning were discussed by Dan E. Stewart, assistant to the vice president of the Carolina Power and Light Company, of Raleigh, in a major address on technical aids before the Resource-Use Education Workshop now under way at East Carolina College.

Co-ordination of community facilities in getting the story of an area's assets which will build economic stability is one of the projects being undertaken by the workshop, declared Dr. E. J. Carter, co-director of the workshop.

Stewart introduced his presentation of the topic of area development by indicating that initiative, research, and freedom of opportunity for private capital have been encouraged and up to the present time have given American citizens their present high standard of living.

The speaker, introduced by Alumni Secretary James W. Butler who is also participating in the workshop program, declared that area development, including the agricultural, industrial, community, city and area planning groups and resource-use education studies will result in a raising of the income and of promoting better public relations for the territory.

Agricultural resources may be expanded through co-ordination of the efforts of vocational education teachers, agricultural extension workers and business men who desire to enrich the farm area and make better use of the better farming methods now being introduced. Stewart pointed out.

Intimate contact with community efforts and thinking on industrial development will help expand the industrial opportunity in an area. Stewart said. This means that business men, including bankers, realtors, property owners, and representatives of utilities, railroads and industrial organizations should keep "up-to-date" the information about sites, buildings, local financing, labor supply, and other pertinent facts, the speaker added.

Business clinics and other plans of work have been useful, Stuart emphasized, adding to his message the stories of successful efforts by many North Carolina communities in bettering the agricultural conditions and diversifying the industrial life of the community.

Communities should want to become better places in which people will want to live, earn a livelihood, and rear their families, and with the mechanization of farming, the urban population is growing, Stuart said. With this growth of industry new wealth has a turnover five times before the "new" money leaves the community.

Industry is decentralizing, Stuart declared, to get nearer to new markets, to move closer to supplies of raw materials, to new labor pools, to become strategically isolated from bombing areas, and to find places where employees can "live and breathe."

At the same time industry expects in the communities where it relocates, among other things, good plant sites accessible to railroads and highways, friendly relations with existing industry, fair treatment, municipal facilities, including good health conditions, clean streets, modern water and sewer systems, adequate fire protection, good educational facilities, churches, libraries, and recreational advantages on the local, county and state levels. In the latter, good financing and equitable tax levies weigh heavily, the speaker pointed out. Enthusiasm of local committees conducting negotiations with industrial representative is a factor not to be neglected, Stuart said.

The workshop students were told that community responsibility for industrial development rests with many agencies and organizations, including the schools. Studies should be made of agriculture, municipal facilities, zoning regulations, long-range plans for growth of the governmental unit, and the industrial-mindedness of the citizenry, and reports of the community assets published and effectively used to promote the area.

All groups have a definite share in building the community and should be urged to work to "tell the story of what we have and what we need."

U. S. Aviation Gasoline Supply Not Endangered

WASHINGTON (U.P.)—The United States will have adequate supplies of aviation gasoline by next year despite today's present tight aviation fuel situation, according to a government oil expert.

The official, who cannot be named, said the U. S. petroleum industry is expanding its facilities for producing aviation fuel and those facilities will ease the acute supply picture. He made this flat statement:

"There will be no (aviation fuel supply) problem in this country beginning next year."

He said that assumes continuation of the mobilization program at its present pace and Far Eastern fighting on about the present scale.

Enough For War

Should an all-out war develop, he said, the oil industry still would be able to build new capacity for making needed aviation gasoline "as rapidly as the war planes can be built to consume it."

Although production figures for aviation gasoline are a well-guarded secret, the fuel is admittedly short now. It has been scarce ever since outbreak of the Korean war and the recent oil strike had the supply picture tighter. Aside from the Far Eastern fighting, there are three major reasons why aviation gasoline is scarce:

1. Lack of highly-specialized refining equipment necessary to turn out the high octane fuel.

2. Shutdown of the Abadan (Iran) refinery which used to produce about nine per cent of the world's aviation gasoline supply.

3. Tremendous increase since the end of World War II in commercial aviation.

Alkylate Scanty

Aviation gasoline is made by mixing alkylate—a very high grade gasoline—with other components. At present, alkylate is the bottleneck in aviation fuel production.

During World War II both the government and industry built plants for producing aviation fuel, but they were largely high-cost producers. When demand fell off immediately after the war, the plants were dismantled.

Even if they hadn't been, they would be almost useless today because they produced a fuel far inferior to that burned in today's aircraft. Today's product requires twice as much alkylate for each gallon of gasoline as the World War II product did.

Refiners Aided

To get the extra alkylate needed, the Petroleum Administration for Defense (PAD) started shortly after the outbreak of the Korean war to encourage private refiners to build necessary equipment. Tax relief and other government help went first to the refiners who were

Japanese Student Is Ayden Rotary Guest

AYDEN—Masami Koizumi of Osaka, Japan, addressed the Ayden Rotary Club last Friday night. Masami has been a student at the University of North Carolina for the past 18 months, sponsored and financed by the Rotary Clubs of the 279th Rotary District.

Masami, whose name was shortened to "Mason" by army, navy and marine personnel at the time he served as interpreter, told the Rotarians that he realized his chief duty was to return to Japan and to help the people of his own land to a more thorough understanding of the democratic program in all walks of life. He was inspired when he declared that he would be a worthy ambassador of America.

Coming to America as a faithful Buddhist, Masami is returning a Protestant Christian of the Methodist Church. "I am returning as a missionary of goodwill," Mr. Koizumi stated. He was abundant in his gratitude and thanks to the Rotarians of the 279th District.

Leaving Japan in 1951, Masami knew the old political government, under occupation forces, but he is returning to be under a democratic government.

Jean Booth, superintendent of Kinston City Schools, introduced Masami. Mr. Booth had been to Japan on an educational mission in 1948, and Masami was assigned as interpreter. It was through their bonded friendship that Jean was primarily interested in his coming as a student to America. Masami spent his last week in North Carolina at the home of Mr. Booth.

Dr. Howard McGinnis, who was district governor at the time Masami was chosen to come to this country, was present and gave courage and thanks to Koizumi for his coming to us in North Carolina and for his fine achievements at Carolina. He expressed confidence in Masami for a successful career in his own country in the years to come.

Masami received the A. B. degree in December, 1951 and the Masters degree in July, 1952, both at the University of North Carolina. He was also selected as a member of Phi Kappa Delta honorary fraternity for his outstanding work at the University.

Chief John A. Jones was the guest of Robert Booth. John Jones Jr., son of the chief, was present as guest youth of the club. He gave a short skit which was delightful and pleasing.

Herbert Hadley and Charles White with past district governors Howard McGinnis and Jean Booth visiting Rotarians, were presented by Grady Dixon.

The on-time prize was won by Bob Booth and the Fellowship Prize was won by Chief John A. Jones. President Ralph Hardee presided over the meeting.

Capitol Square

(Continued from Page 4) does not justify the acquisition of land or construction of buildings for such use as a "municipal purpose." The opinion is quoted as saying "The financing of private enterprise by means of public funds is entirely foreign to a proper concept of our constitutional system."

PATTERN—Several proposals have been made for North Carolina municipalities to assist in locating new industries, following somewhat generally the pattern set by the federal Defense Plant Corporation. There have been tentative suggestions that the State itself might underwrite plant construction. If the Florida decision is regarded as controlling here, these ideas seem to be out the window.

Fighters Not Hampered

Even at that, the oil official said, the strike had no effect on actual combat flying operations in Korea because the military is using only a small per cent of the nation's aviation gasoline output to fly fighting planes in the Far East. The remainder of the military aviation fuel is used for training and supply operations.

The official also said that if it should be necessary to fly another airlift to supply Berlin there will be plenty of fuel for the planes. He explained that the aircraft that would be used in such an operation are flying elsewhere now. They might fly more on an airlift, he said, but not enough more to have an appreciable effect on present supplies.

HENS' DOING WELL

South Still Hot Despite Big Rain

ATLANTA (UP)—The South was still hot today in spite of the showers over scattered dusty fields and heavy "life-saver" rains in Tennessee, North Mississippi and Eastern Arkansas.

Weather forecasters signaled high temperatures throughout most of the South again today despite intermittent rains throughout most of the region.

Rains ending the prolonged Southern drought in portions of the three upper states of the region were swept in by high winds, disrupting power service at some localities.

Other damaging storms lashed portions of the Carolinas.

While the hot weather continued, there was a general decline from the record-breaking temperatures that for days had soared above the 100-degree mark in several cities. In addition, the drought continued unabated in many parts of the region.

One Mississippi official called the rains a "life-saver" in the Mid-South, although the relief was temporary, and farmers had already counted heavy losses.

In the relatively small Chattahoochee Valley area along the lower Georgia-Alabama border farm experts estimated crop damage at $10,000,000. Corn was reported a total loss throughout South Georgia.
