

Acheson's Report Watered Down

Address To UN On Korea 'Police Action' Stated This Afternoon; Earlier Plans Of Showdown Debate With Reds Shelved; Not Enough Voting Support

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (UP)—Secretary of State Dean Acheson hands the United Nations today a watered-down version of the U. S. position in the Korean war.

American sources said the address would be more "moderate" than a maneuver planned originally to rally support for a showdown with the Communists on the stalled efforts for a Korean truce.

Acheson's opening shot in the Korean debate, which is expected to dominate the Assembly's seventh annual session, was described as a general review of the U. S. conduct of the Korean war and peace efforts, lacking any specific proposals or demands for settlement of the conflict.

The American statesman was scheduled to speak late this afternoon. He was the first foreign minister of a major power scheduled to appear in the Assembly's general — or policy — debate.

Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky was expected to speak Friday afternoon.

Russia took the initiative in the Korean issue late Wednesday by pressing for a full Korean debate in the Assembly's powerful Political Committee before the American presidential election on Nov. 4.

There previously had been general agreement to defer the Korean debate until mid-November. It had been intended for the Political Committee to start work next week collective measures against future aggression and then move on to discuss the fruitless efforts of the 12-nation Disarmament Commission before reaching the Korean item.

However, Russia's Andrei Gromyko demanded that the Political Committee be instructed to give first consideration to the Korean war. The Steering Committee, which took no action on his request, and left to the political group to decide its own order of business. The demand probably will be renewed when the Political Committee meets.

There was no indication that Acheson wanted a Korean debate before the election. Actually, well-informed diplomats said the United States without enough voting support at this time (a two-thirds vote is needed for substantive action) to get any "tough" proposal Korea through the Assembly. Delay in starting the debate, they reasoned, would work on the side of the United States.

Forecasts of Acheson's Assembly speech reflected a drastic "softening" of the American position as it was reported a week ago. At that time, it had been understood that the U. S. was ready with a three-fold program: an appeal for blanket endorsement of its stewardship of the Korean war effort; efforts by Assembly President Lester B. Pearson of Canada to get the Communists to agree to a truce; and, failing success in those two steps, a demand to the Assembly for more active help in fighting the war.

Fourteen Killed In Airline Crash

BUENOS AIRES, (UP)—Fourteen persons were killed when a Brazilian airliner crashed on a farm in southern Brazil and burned, Aerovias do Brasil announced today. Four persons survived the wreck.

The DC-3 crashed late Tuesday afternoon while flying from Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, to Buenos Aires. The 14 victims were trapped in the plane and burned to death, reports from the scene said.

Greenville Girl Competing In Williamston's Festival

Miss Barbara Cozart of Greenville will represent the city in competition for the title of "Queen of the Harvest, 1952" when Williamston holds its Fifth Annual Harvest Festival next week.

Miss Cozart, a Greenville High School senior, will be the princess from Greenville in the contest which will be held Wednesday night, October 22, at the Harvest Ball. Dean Hudson will furnish music for the ball.

The Greenville High band, under the direction of James E. Rodgers, will be one of the 10 bands in the Harvest Parade which is also scheduled for Wednesday. Following the parade, Cameron Morrison will deliver an address.

The festival, which has grown to be one of the largest events of its kind in eastern North Carolina, will start Monday evening with a street

Optimism Voiced In Discussion Of Securing Plant

Greenville Industries Spokesman Hopeful Announcement Is Forthcoming

By MURIEL SHOTWELL
Reflector Staff Writer

Further plans and details concerning the location of a new Artloom Carpet Company plant in Greenville were discussed extensively yesterday at a meeting of the company's representatives and the directors of Greenville Industries Inc.

No definite details were worked out at the meeting but a Greenville Industries spokesman voiced an air of optimism for a favorable outcome in having the industry locate in this community.

The spokesman for Greenville Industries said more details and arrangements would have to be worked out but they were hopeful of an announcement in the next few weeks concerning the definite location of the mill.

Tentative sites for the new industry were discussed at length by Herbert J. Adair, Artloom Company president, and other representatives of Greenville Industries. Each site under consideration was discussed at length.

Ty Wagner, president of Greenville Industries, said this morning this is the first opportunity Greenville has had to get a new major industry, recently, to locate in the community; and in order to have the plant locate here, it will require everyone putting their efforts behind Greenville Industries in actual work and money.

The board president also pointed out that not only would the plant involve a sizable payroll but would be a good investment for the people of Greenville who are interested in putting money into the industry.

Several representatives of insurance companies and financial institutions talked with the group before and after the meeting, discussing ways in which the industry can be financed. Wagner said those details would be worked out further to make a satisfactory arrangement.

Greenville Industries will continue to negotiate in efforts to bring the industry to the community and the directors are reported to be proceeding to handle the proposition from a financial standpoint. "Such things will take time," stated Wagner, "but we are working to close this deal."

Auto Price War May Be Started By Announcement

DETROIT, (UP)—The motor industry studied a surprise Dodge price cut today amid speculation it may have set off the first big automobile price battle since before World War II.

Dodge caught competitors unaware Wednesday with an announcement that price tags on half its 10 new body styles for 1953, to be unveiled Oct. 23, will be reduced—more than 5 per cent on one model. It will be the first time in more than seven years that a major auto maker has introduced a completely restyled car and chopped prices at the same time.

Coming less than a day after Kaiser-Frazer's announcement that prices of its 1953 Kaisers and Henry J's will be decreased an average $15.70, the Chrysler Corp. division move sparked rumors in automotive circles that other companies will be forced to follow suit.

URGE CONTINUED TALKS

WASHINGTON (UP)—The United States today urged Britain and Iran to continue their efforts to settle the 18-month old oil crisis, despite announcement that Iran will break diplomatic relations with Britain.

Offers A 'Steal', And It Is Stolen

VANCOUVER, B. C. (UP)—Automobile dealer Dick Dickson was out $3,000 dollars today because he believed the old adage that "it pays to advertise."

Dickson advertised in a local paper he had an auto that was "a steal at $3,000."

Somebody stole the car the same day.

First Mission Feared His Last

SEOUL, Korea, (UP)—The young second lieutenant radioed a plaintive farewell to his flying mates as his crippled P-54 Thunder jet fell to earth after being hit by Communist anti-aircraft fire.

"Here I am on my first combat flight," he said "It's my birthday and look what's happening to me." Seconds later, the jet crashed. No parachute was seen.

A Handshake For The Start Of New U.N. Meeting

Prepared To Use Atomic Weapons

U. S. Military Awaiting Only Word For 'Punch' In Korea

WASHINGTON (UP)—The U. S. military is ready to hand the Chinese Reds an atomic clobbering any time it gets the word.

Whether that word ever will be sought or given cannot, as of today, be foretold.

But America did some atomic muscle flexing yesterday that can hardly be ignored either by the Communists already warring against the United Nations in Korea or by any others plotting, similar aggressions.

A high defense official said the military is prepared to recommend use of atomic weapons in Korea when and if the right sort of targets develop.

And the army publicly demonstrated a battery of atomic cannon and announced it also is perfecting guided atomic missiles for "close support" of ground forces on the battlefield.

Hitherto the U. S. military has relied solely on the Air Force for delivery of its atomic Sunday punches. If the grim necessity of throwing them should arise, the army is now on record as saying it, too, can give an enemy large doses of atomic firepower.

If atomic violence should be loosed upon the Reds in Korea any time soon, however, it would be in the form of A-bombs dropped by airplanes. This country has a lot of them in a variety of sizes.

WSB Renews Its Study Of Coal Wage Agreement

WASHINGTON, (UP)—The sharply-divided Wage Stabilization Board today resumed consideration of a $1.90-a-day wage boost for 375,000 soft coal miners who are ready to strike unless the full increase is approved.

The board met in another effort to decide whether new contracts in the soft coal industry can be approved under its wage regulations. A ruling was not expected today.

In their first two meetings, labor and industry members of the board clashed sharply on the issue. Informants said tempers flared in the closed sessions when labor sought quick approval of the increase and industry representatives objected.

Should the board seek to top off part of the increase, it was almost certain John L. Lewis would close down the industry in protest. Full scale walkout might not come until later this month when the miners receive their October paychecks. However, wildcat walkouts could be expected immediately upon an unfavorable board ruling.

Union Support

NEW YORK (AP)—Dwight D. Eisenhower today received the endorsement of the president of the AFL-Carpenters' Union as he pointed his hard-driving campaign onto the Eastern seaboard.

M. A. Hutcheson, general president of the AFL-United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, announced he will support the Republican presidential candidate.

Hutcheson, a Republican, said Eisenhower had given him "his solemn word that he will promote a sincere effort to eradicate unfair sections" of the Taft-Hartley Law.

Rally Set For 2 Pitt Precincts

Party stalwarts from two Pitt County precincts will come together in Eastern Pines Community Building tonight at 8 o'clock to hold an "Old Fashioned Democratic Rally."

Democrats from Greenville No. 7 and Chocoma No. 2 will rally at the meeting in an attempt to instill into the minds of voters the importance of being registered and voting in the General Elections Tuesday, November 4.

The executive committees from those two precincts are urging all Democrats in those areas to attend the meeting. All persons are invited to attend, whether they are registered or not.

Ladies Invited

Officials are especially accentuating the fact that ladies should also be present tonight. Democrats have been promised a stirring party speaker.

"Let's all roll up our sleeves, attend the meeting tonight and see that every Democrat in our precincts is registered and votes on November 4," executive committee officials emphasize.

Democrats from all over the county are expected—and expressly urged—to meet with other members of the party tonight at the community building.

Trial Left Several Questions 'Hanging'

By JESS POINDEXTER
Reflector City Editor

After many days of anxious waiting, the trial of Fred Porcelli is history this afternoon.

Porcelli, 20, and Herman Socie, 19, were sent to prison for life Wednesday afternoon, after pleading guilty to being accessories before the fact in the murder of Police Officer Jesse Mills.

But though the trial is ended and the prisoners have been removed from the scene of a life's experience, many questions remain unanswered by both the defense and state.

Observers remain in the dark to many details that were not brought out in the trial which ended abruptly in Superior Court late yesterday. The end climaxed the longest trial held in Pitt County since the "Daniels case" was tried early in 1950.

Questions Unanswered

As to the trial of Porcelli and the sentencing of Socie, what explanation can be offered for:

1. Why did Mills, an officer who had never been known to fire a pistol from his left hand, have his gun in that hand the night of the murder — if he did?

2. How could Porcelli possibly have been shot on the front portion of his head in the position he testified to on the stand?

3. To what extent have the two Marines been participating in crime

Blame UN For Disrupting Talks

Top Red Commanders In Korea Blast Indefinite Recess

TOKYO, (UP)—The two top Communist military commanders in Korea accused today of disrupting armistice negotiations and said it must bear full responsibility.

The blast was contained in a letter to Gen. Mark W. Clark, U.N. commander in chief, from Kim Il Sung, North Korean premier and commander in chief, and Gen. Peng Teh-Huai, Chinese Communist commander in chief.

It seemed evident the letter, bitterly phrased and restating the entire Red position on the truce, was timed to fit in with the U.N. Assembly in New York.

The Russian delegation moved Wednesday to force a debate on Korea in the U.N. Political and Security Committee.

"When the people throughout the world including the people of the U.S. were eagerly awaiting the realization of peace in Korea, when complete agreement was nearly reached in the Korean armistice negotiations, your delegation... suddenly declared unilaterally an indefinite recess... refused to negotiate and broke up the negotiations," the Kim-Peng letter said.

"This unreasonable action is in itself sufficient to prove your side has no sincerity at all for an armistice in Korea and that your side must bear the total responsibility for the disruption of the armistice negotiations."

Has Her TV Set But No Husband

CHICAGO (UP)—Alice Vokik had her television set today but not her husband.

George Vokik left their home last March and took the television set with him because his wife was "glued to the set" and didn't have time to fix dinner.

George returned the set Wednesday when Alice promised to drop alimony demands in her divorce suit.

"What consolation will a TV set be on a cold and lonely night?" Judge Julius H. Miner asked.

Hard Fight Costs Reds 2,500 Men

Triangle Mountain Captured After Three Days Of Savage Assaults

SEOUL, Korea (UP)—American infantrymen captured "Jane Russell" Hill on towering Triangle Mountain today, completing a conquest that cost the Chinese Communists more than 2,500 casualties in three days of savage fighting.

A hard-hitting assault by fighting men of the 7th Division's 31st Regiment battered the Chinese Reds from the holy-contested peak and gave the U.N. troops all three heights on the central front hill mass—Jane Russell, Sandy Hill and Triangle itself.

However, the Reds clung desperately to their last stronghold on Pike's Peak, a knob on the northeast corner of the mountain.

U. S. soldiers took the knob at 2:15 p.m. (12:15 a. m. EST) against little resistance, but the Reds counterattacked and forced the Allied troops back 300 to 400 yards.

Seventh Division officers estimated that in three days of fighting for Triangle, a total of 2,535 Communist soldiers were killed, wounded or taken prisoner. Only 37 were counted killed in action, but another 566 were estimated killed and 1,192 wounded.

Warplanes from six 5th Air Force fighter-bomber units flew more than 100 sorties in support of Allied ground soldiers in the Kumhwa area. In addition to hits on bunkers, gun emplacements, shelters and caves, pilots reported exploding stored Red ammunition.

South Korean troops at nearby Sniper Ridge said they had "pretty well cleaned up" stray Chinese by dropping TNT charges into the mouths of caves where it was suspected the Reds were hiding.

South Korean officers estimated they killed or wounded 571 Chinese Communists in the battle for Sniper, besides capturing 50,000 rounds of small arms ammunition, 850 hand grenades and a handful of rifles and burp guns.

Seventh Division infantrymen were "mopping up" on Jane Russell Hill, scouring out surviving Red soldiers.

United Press War correspondent Fred Panton reported from the scene, however, the Reds were "constantly" building up their forces on a northern front leading to Triangle. He said reinforcements were believed coming from a regiment of about 3,000 men hidden in nearby foothills.

Some 700 bugle-blowing, screaming Reds from the hidden regiment assaulted the Americans on Triangle during the night, but got nowhere. The first attack began at 8 p.m. (6 a.m. EST) Wednesday.

"We had good foxholes," an officer said "Our wire was up and machine-guns zeroed in. We didn't give an inch. We completely busted up the attack. We cut them down with machine-guns when they got close."

Another attack came at 4:40 a.m. today (2:40 p.m. Wednesday EST). The fighting continued all day until the Allies launched their successful attack on Jane Russell knob.

Air Force Plane With 26 Aboard Reported 'Lost'

TOKYO (UP)—An Air Force C-46 with 25 servicemen aboard disappeared today on a short 150-mile flight over mountainous South Korea.

The Air Force in Tokyo said more than 20 planes from the 5th Air Force searched the rugged area where the twin-engine plane might have crashed, but found no wreckage or other clue to the fate of the missing aircraft.

Aboard the C-46 courier plane from the 315th Air Division (combat cargo) were 21 passengers and four crewmen. All were service personnel.

The plane has not been heard from since it left a base on the east coast a short distance below the 38th Parallel. Its destination was another air base down the coast. The flight normally would have taken 40 minutes.

Truman Says Ike May Bring War

Ike Voices Fear Of Retaining Old Demo Leadership

Suggests Poor Judgment May Result In Spread Of Korean Conflict

NEW YORK (UP)—Dwight D. Eisenhower, feeling fine but bearing a Democratic victory in November might cause the Korean conflict to spread, wooed New Jersey voters today.

The Republican presidential candidate was slightly hoarse Wednesday night when he returned to his Morningside Heights home from a tour that had taken him through Texas, Louisiana and Tennessee.

Eisenhower's two-day Jersey tour will be interrupted Tuesday. He will speak tonight at the eighth annual Alfred E. Smith Memorial Foundation dinner here and on Friday at Wilmington, Del.

It was at Memphis Wednesday that Eisenhower voiced fears that a victory for the Democratic party on Nov. 4 might lead to a conflict even greater than Korea.

"We have a right to be deeply worried by the terrifying possibility that the same leadership that let us drift into the Korean war might bungle us into still greater conflict," he said.

"We have a right to be distrustful of a leadership which has allowed the godless Red tide of Communism to engulf hundreds of millions of people who once were our friends and allies."

"We have a right to be suspicious of the judgment of an administration which failed to see the Red stain seeping into the most vital offices of our own government."

Eisenhower told his Memphis audience, which included many cotton farmers, that prices for farm products "appear on the surface to be good."

"But farmers know they are caught in a squeeze that is flattening their pocketbooks," Eisenhower said. "Their costs are rising alarmingly while their prices are weakening and their taxes soaring."

Eisenhower said if he is elected he will pledge "an administration that will cleanse all farm programs of partisan politics, that will decentralize their administration, that will increase farmer participation in their own programs."

"And I pledge you now," Eisenhower added, "there will be no Brannan plans."

He said outstanding farm leaders of the South would be invited to membership on a bipartisan farm commission, if the Republicans win.

Explorer Speaks Tonight For Executives Club

"The American Army and World Affairs" will be the topic of Sir Hubert Wilkins' address to the Pitt County Executives' Club tonight.

The Executives' Club will hold its first meeting of the year tonight in the dining room of East Carolina College at 7 o'clock.

The speaker is an Australian born explorer and one of the greatest authorities on Arctic and Antarctic information. He has made eight expeditions to the far flung reaches of the northern and southern hemispheres.

Since 1941 he has held a full time position as consultant to the United States government agencies, serving the Army, Navy, OSS, Department of Commerce and the Weather Bureau.

Pitt's UN Week Program Prepared By Local Group

Next week is United Nations Week. The Greenville and Pitt County Committee for United Nations week has planned a series of radio programs to inform the public about the organization's affairs.

Mrs. W. C. Krausnick, in charge of the arrangements for the program, has stated, "We all realize that no great ideas can succeed until it is supported by people at the 'grass roots.' We know that progress in our American Democracy and in the United Nations will depend on the kind of people we are and the kind of national and international leadership we will support. It is for this purpose that the local committee has developed informative programs to inform us as to what is going on in the United Nations."

WITH TRUMAN (UP)—President Truman said today the election of Dwight D. Eisenhower might result in "the most disastrous war" in the world's history.

Taking his "give 'em hell" campaign into New England, Mr. Truman said both national prosperity and world peace "are wrapped up" in this year's election.

The President told a crowd of 1,500 to 2,000 at North Haven, Conn.:

"When you go to the polls on Nov. 4, you either keep this country in the right groove or you may send it into the most disastrous war in the history of the world."

In a Hartford speech, Mr. Truman charged that the Republican presidential candidate is trying to auction off the oil-rich tidelands for votes.

At North Haven, Mr. Truman said Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson, Democratic presidential candidate, "says what he means for the entire United States."

"He is not just throwing out baited hooks to get votes," Mr. Truman said.

The President said "no man can promise world peace," but that the best hope for it lies in the election of Stevenson.

Mr. Truman told a crowd estimated by police at 10,000 at Wallingford, Conn., that the "Taft brand of republicanism" adopted by Eisenhower "won't do the country any good or the peace of the world, either."

The President, accompanied by daughter Margaret, left his campaign train at New Haven for a morning of auto stumping through Connecticut's industrial area. He was greeted along the way by a few hoos mixed with cheers and applause.

In his Hartford speech, Mr. Truman took caustic notice of reports, attributed to Eisenhower aides, that "the Republican candidate's compromises are all behind him."

"The plain fact is," Mr. Truman said, "the candidate doesn't have much left to compromise."

He charged that Eisenhower had already compromised his own beliefs on foreign policy and national defense in order to woo support from the "isolationist" wing of the Republican party. Also, Mr. Truman said, "he has compromised every principle of personal loyalty by abetting the scurrilous big-lie attack on Gen. George C. Marshall who was his own commanding officer."

Warning to his subject, Mr. Truman said that "only this week the Republican candidate compromised with your property."

He said Eisenhower's promise to sign legislation surrendering any federal claim to the so-called Tidelands amounted to an effort "to give away the oil resources which the Supreme Court has said are the property of every person in the United States."

VFW Auxiliary Honors Officers At District Meeting, Informal Party

Joint meetings of the V. F. W. Auxiliary and the Veterans of Foreign Wars of District Two were held in Greenville on Sunday.

Red Newton, district commander, presided. Greetings to the delegates were extended by George Johnson, Post commander, and Mrs. C. B. West Jr., Auxiliary president. At the meeting short talks were given by Forrest Dugan, department senior vice commander, and Mrs. Maurice Bumgarner, state president of the VFW Auxiliary.

District officers and honor guests were introduced by Mrs. Jack Tyson of Farmville, president of District Two. They were Mrs. Bess Hyman, past department president of Gaston; Mrs. Ferrell Stubbs, department junior vice president of Wilmington; and Mrs. Elizabeth Kalle of New Bern, president of District Four.

After the introduction of the guests, the group divided for district meetings, at the Post and the Auxiliary, which were conducted separately.

Auxiliary Meeting
At the Auxiliary meeting Mrs. Jack Tyson, district president, presided. Floor work was carried out by the District conductress, Mrs. Beverly Joyner, with the Greenville Color Bearers taking part. Seven towns were represented at the meeting. They were Pink Hill, Goldsboro, La Grange, Kinston, Farmville, Washington and Greenville.

The local Auxiliary presented all the Auxiliary presidents and honor guests with Buddy Poppy corsages. Outstanding reports were given by each Auxiliary president concerning the hospital work, community service, relief work and other activities carried on in the local units.

The resignations of the district senior vice president and of the junior vice president were announced by Mrs. Tyson. Mrs. Pete West of Greenville was elected senior vice president and Mrs. Jack Bright of Washington was elected junior vice president. They were installed by Mrs. Bess Hyman, past department president.

Encampment Report Given
State president Mrs. Bumgarner made a short talk concerning the hospital work and membership drive for 1953. She then told of the honors awarded the North Carolina group at the national Encampment held in Los Angeles, California, in August. During this Encampment it was announced that North Carolina led the nation in the gain in membership, and for this they were awarded a $100 defense bond.

Mrs. Mary Alice Moody, past state president, was selected as the third department president in the nation, and for this honor she was given a $25 defense bond. Mrs. Ruby Rheinhart, N. C. district president of the year, was named as the national district president of the year. A $100 defense bond was presented to her for this honor.

Mrs. Bumgarner got honorable mention as second choice for the senior vice presidency of the nation. She also had the pleasure of introducing to the assembly Phyllis Greene, former North Carolinian, who with three other members of her family, are living at the VFW Home in Eaton Rapids, Michigan, the home maintained by the Unit for widows, children or dependents of disabled veterans of foreign wars.

The district meeting was adjourned with the retiring of the colors, after which the supper was served to the attendants by members of the hostess auxiliary and host post. Approximately 80 delegates were present for the day's affair.

Informal Party
On Saturday night preceding the district meet on Sunday, an informal "get acquainted" party was held at the club house at 8:00 p.m. by the Auxiliary to honor the guests of the Post and the Auxiliary. Decorations of bronze chrysanthemums in many attractive arrangements were used to adorn the rooms. Under the picture of Charles Gray Morgan, for whom the Post was named, was a large basket of bronze giant mums and pom poms interspersed with blue plumes and tied with blue ribbon, carrying out the Post colors.

Mrs. Maurice Bumgarner, state president, and Mrs. Bess Hyman, past state president, were presented with corsages of roses, given in the name of the hostess auxiliary by Mrs. C. B. West Jr., president.

Refreshments of punch, party sandwiches, salted nuts, pickles and tidbits were served by the refreshment committee. Dancing was enjoyed by the attendants during the evening. Special guests were Mrs. Bumgarner, Mrs. Ferrell Stubbs, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hyman, Mr. and Mrs. Red Newton, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Tyson and members of all posts and auxiliaries in the district.

Commandments Study Started At Thalian Club

The Thalian Book Club began its year's activities with a luncheon meeting at the home of Mrs. W. W. Brown on Tuesday, October 14.

The house was decorated with arrangements of yellow chrysanthemums and other fall flowers. In the dining room where the main table was set for the luncheon, a centerpiece of harvest vegetables and fruits was used, and a dark green cloth covered the table. Auxiliary tables were placed in the other rooms.

In the absence of the president, the vice president, Mrs. Dan Wright, presided. She welcomed the members back after the separation of the summer and extended greetings to the guests.

Mrs. Dick Badham, who had charge of the program for the afternoon, had invited the Rev. H. G. Haney, pastor of the Eighth Street Christian Church, to speak to the club on an introduction to the study of the Ten Commandments, which is the program subject for the year. Mrs. Haney traced the growth and development of moral law from the earliest recorded history of the Hebrew people up to the time of Jesus. In a general summary of what the Ten Commandments are, he brought out the fact that five of them deal with man's relation to God, and the other five deal with man's relation to man.

"There are at least two meanings to each commandment," he said, "and it is believed that in the original Hebrew each commandment was expressed with the use of one word." He recalled the circumstances under which they were revealed to Moses on Mt. Sinai and of the events following the giving of the tablets of law to the Hebrews while they were still wandering in the wilderness.

The speaker also emphasized the fact that Jesus gave a new interpretation to the ancient laws and how His work was to fulfill rather than to destroy the historical moral law that bound the Jews to a rigid way of life. "The great commandment to love God and one's neighbor that Jesus gave as the first and greatest commandment encompasses them all," Mr. Haney pointed out in conclusion.

Special guests for the afternoon were Mrs. Ray MacKenzie, Mrs. L. W. Gaylord Jr., Mrs. Bancroft Moseley, Mrs. Fred Webb and Mrs. Tom Wilson.

Regional Conference United Church Women Scheduled For This Month

Church Women of North Carolina are urged to attend a Regional Conference of United Church Women of the National Council of Churches in Richmond, Va., October 21-23, at the First Presbyterian Church.

Women from Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia, and Virginia will also be attending this conference of information and inspiration. From the New York Board and staff will come Mrs. Norman Vincent Peale, Mrs. Emory Ross and Mrs. James M. Evans. Mrs. J. P. Haberman, president of the Louisiana State Council, is chairman and Mrs. David Jones of Bennett College, Greensboro, N. C., and Mrs. J. Birdsal Calkins of Arlington, Va. will share in the leadership.

The theme will be "Seeking Righteousness for the Nation" and the general program plan will include a discussion of Christian Missions and their relation to technical assistance programs and the importance of acting on current political issues. The conference will open with dinner on the 21st and close before noon on the 23rd.

"I hope a car load will go from each local council in North Carolina," said Mrs. E. L. Hillman of Durham, chairman of the Department of United Church Women of the North Carolina Council of Churches.

Registrations may be sent to Mrs. Frederick Overt, 9 N. Fifth St., Richmond, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Smith went to Raleigh this morning to attend the fair.

Considerable frost was in evidence this morning.

Mr. F. C. Harding, Democratic presidential elector of the first district, will speak with the county candidates at Grimesland on Saturday.

Walter Cherry of near Greenville spent Sunday in Winterville.

There is hardly any doubt that Woodrow Wilson will be elected, but this feeling of assurance should not lead Democrats to indifference about going to the polls, thinking their vote will not be needed.

Semi Centi Welcomes Five New Members

The Semi Centi Book Club held its first meeting of the fall on Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Floyd Phillips.

A short business meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. Floyd Phillips, after which Mrs. Frank Strawn gave a talk on the book of Matthew.

Mrs. Strawn outlined the book as to contents and told of the personality and character of the author. She stated that the purpose of the book was to picture the kingdom of God and was written about 60 A.D. It was the second of the Gospels to be written.

Five new members were welcomed into the club. They were Mesdames Warren Carroll, C. T. Fleming, Harry Douglas, Ed Harris and Norman Little. Mrs. Albert Johnson was a guest for the evening's meeting.

During the social and refreshment hour the new books were distributed, after which the club adjourned.

Local Church Shows Film Here Tonight

A religious motion picture entitled "Second Chance" will be shown at the Pentecostal Holiness Church located at 13th and Cotanche Streets at 7:45 this evening and the public is cordially invited to see it.

The service is sponsored by the Senior Youth Society of the local church, and President John D. Cannon would like to share this picture with as many of his fellow students as will find it convenient to attend. "It is by far the best sacred sound film the youth group has shown up to this date," according to the pastor, Rev. H. E. Johnson, who has already previewed the film.

Light Damage In Street Accident

Two cars were damaged when they collided at Evans and 11th Street yesterday afternoon.

The police report states that the car driven by William Hugh Fulle of Smithfield collided with the car driven by Grace Ward Cannon of near Ayden. The investigating officer quoted the drivers as saying the collision resulted from a confusion over signals. Damage to Fuller's car was $75; the Cannon car, $273. No arrest and none injured.

Ike Outlines Stand For Negro Question Panel

NEW YORK (UP) —Dwight D. Eisenhower made a newsreel today which the movie company said would be distributed to 400 Negro theaters throughout the country.

The film will show the Republican presidential candidate answering questions from three Negro leaders.

The questioners were James Nabrit, Secretary of Howard University in Washington, D. C. and a member of the legal staff of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Mrs. Irene McCoy Gaines, Chicago president of the National Association of Colored Women; and Fay M. Jackson, Los Angeles, a real estate broker and public relations agent.

One of the questioners said that the Democrats had made an appeal for the Negro vote on the ground that if a Republican administration should come in "there would be a great depression," and asked the general to comment.

Eisenhower said that he "already had gone on record very firmly on that subject," and said that under his administration "we would be very watchful for the first signs of a depression and use the powers of government to prevent it reaching the level of 1930, when there was so much suffering."

Another questioner said an appeal was being made to the Negroes that over the past 20 years "they never had things so good." Eisenhower said that if that was so it was due principally "not to a political party but to advances in science, technology and industry."

He then was asked bluntly: "What about civil rights?"

The general replied that the states where "we have made the greatest advances in civil rights are the states where we have had Republican governors."

The last question was to outline his position, if elected, on federal housing.

"I believe it is a paradox that a country could be as prosperous as this and still have inadequate housing," Eisenhower replied.

He added that in his administration "everybody would be treated exactly the same," and "with co-operation between private industry and government I think we can solve the problem."

"THINK ON THESE THINGS"
We often hear the statement that the Church is full of hypocrites. Is this true?
If by this statement we mean that the Church is full of people who fall to live up to the highest they believe, then every church member living today and every church member that ever has lived has been a hypocrite. This would include all the saints. But such a definition of hypocrisy is absurd. Only Jesus himself has been a perfect Christian. We, all of us, have fallen short of our highest ideals; but because of this we are not hypocrites.

The hypocrite is a person who is playing a part. The hypocrite tries to hide an evil life under a pious exterior. Let no one tell you that the Church is full of people of this sort, for that is not true. In a ministerial experience of about thirty years, I encountered just one only, sneaking hypocrite. I have never known a Christian who lived up to the best he believed, but we are not hypocrites because we fail to meet our highest aspirations. A hypocrite is a despicable deceiver, and such people, thank God, are scarce in the Church—and scarce, I believe, in the world at large.

"If there be any virtue or if there be any praise, think on these things."

A Case Is Closed; But The Lessons Linger

The trial of Policeman Mills' murderers has gone into the judicial archives of Pitt County.

The two youths who committed the murder, Frederick L. Porcelli and Herman J. Socie, have begun serving life sentences in prison. The youths were spared their lives in connection with the crime, and for that they should be thankful.

No price the youths pay for their crime can adequately compensate for the life of the man they slew. No price can compensate for the suffering they have caused the Mills family or their own families. Yet they must now suffer punishment of a life sentence in prison as a part of their payment for the crime they perpetrated against a fellowman and against society.

The slaying of the policeman was a terrible episode in the life of the Greenville community just as it is a terrible episode in the lives of the two young men who killed the policeman.

The families of the two ex-marines can not be blamed for the act of the youths, and neither youth can blame the other for leading him into the crime. In the eyes of the court and in the eyes of most people, both are equally guilty in the crime into which they went willingly and without coercion.

That they had a full and fair trial can not be questioned. The court took every precaution during the hearings to protect the interest of the two defendants and to make sure their case was heard by a jury which was unbiased and a jury which was competent to hear the evidence and hand down a decision based solely on the evidence presented in court. Even though the jury was not called on to render a verdict in the case, no stretch of the imagination could offer sound grounds for the assertion that the youths were not given a fair trial.

The case of Porcelli and Socie is now closed until some day in the future when each of the defendants will become eligible for parole under the North Carolina statutes. At that time it will be the duty of a designated group of individuals to consider the merits of the individual criminals and ascertain whether they have earned the right once more to seek a useful place in society.

The lessons learned in Officer Mills' death must not soon be forgotten.

Every precaution—better lighted allies, better patrolling methods for officers—must be taken to prevent a similar fate befalling another police officer of the City of Greenville.

Permanent Improvement Projects Of Note

Two permanent improvements for the city of Greenville given the green light by the Utilities Commission this week are going to mean a great deal to the citizens of the city.

One will be more obvious than the other, but both will play a major part in benefiting the citizens. One will contribute to a better appearance and safe downtown section at night, and the other will afford better electrical service to consumers throughout Greenville.

The commissioners approved the installation of mercury street lights in the two blocks of Evans Street between five points and the court house. These new street lights—designed to give light in abundance—are being installed by cities and towns through the nation to actually light up the streets at night. They will replace the ornamental street lights which were installed in the business section of Greenville in 1922.

Cost of the installation of the first 16 units of new lights in the business section is estimated in the neighborhood of $4,000. At the rate of $250 per unit, it seems to us the commissioners would not be amiss in setting up a program to replace all the antiquated street lights throughout the business sections over a period of a year or perhaps a little longer. Thought also should be given to the possibility of going into the new type street lighting in other parts of the city as well.

The project of a loop circuit of high tension wires around the outskirts of the city to feed into the business section will not produce benefits as obvious to the casual observer as the new street lights.

The present power lines into the business district already are loaded to capacity, and when air conditioning units were running at full speed a few weeks ago, there were a number of instances of low voltage.

The new loop circuit will provide ample power to the business district for some years to come, and at the same time will do away with some of the difficulties which have been experienced recently. In addition, the new circuit will give a more even flow of current throughout the city system.

The estimated $60,000 cost for the project—which officials say is 25 per cent of the cost of bringing adequate new lines from the power plant to the business district—appears a wise investment for better service to the people of Greenville.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—Diplomatic analysis of Stalin's schemes as foreshadowed at the recent Communist Congress in Moscow provide both good and bad news for the embattled democracies, especially the United States.

The conduct of the Red carnival has dispelled any belief that Stalin intends to relinquish control of the Party or Government, although he is expected to advance Malenkov as the top Communist politician and Molotov as the potential heir in the Kremlin.

It is significant that there has been no mention in the Soviet press about Anglo-American speculation on a possible successor. In Russia, editors don't dare to speculate on this subject.

STALIN BOSS—Stalin remains as boss, visibly or invisibly. His sinister ambitions for worldwide expansion of Russia's totalitarian and authoritarian system stand as the permanent marching orders for Communists everywhere. Always an opportunist, he will wait upon circumstances to determine whether he shall seek to achieve his goal by continued cold wars or by an actual attack on the West.

Regardless of which avenue toward world domination he chooses, he looks upon the United States as the only obstacle in his parade. So long as his World War II ally and benefactor stands as a stronghold and inspiration of the so-called democracies, he knows that he cannot achieve the Lenin-Marx-Stalin dream.

That is the bad news as such students of Russia as excommunicated Ambassador George F. Kennan and Secretary Acheson review Russia's latest demonstration of her aims.

WAR IN RUSSIA—It is the details of Stalin's program for destruction of the United States and world conquest which encourage western experts to believe that he is talking through his hat, as he has frequently done before. They attribute his optimism to the fact that he wants to prepare his people for further hardships and sacrifices.

Stalin minimizes another global conflict involving the Russians because, in his opinion, the capitalist powers will fail to fighting among themselves. He maintains that defeated Germany and Japan will eventually try to throw off the American yoke. In fact, he invites them to make the effort.

The dictator's dreams on this question may fool the Russians, but they do not disturb the State Department or 10 Downing Street. Stalin is the last man to want a strong and rearm Germany and Japan on his borders. And the fear of the Reds in Western Germany and Japan is counted on to keep them on his side.

ABSURD SPECULATION—Stalin also engaged in another absurd speculation. Continuing his attempt to drive a wedge between ourselves and our European allies, he castigates the day when Britain and France may side with him as against the U. S.

It is true that London and Paris are lured by their dependence on us. But their hope is to form a third power composed of Marshall Plan countries, vis a vis the United States and Russia. There is no fear along Pennsylvania Avenue that such a European regrouping would ever seek friendship with or membership in the iron curtain brigade.

TALK TOUGH—An especially astute diplomatic reporter likened the Moscow gathering to the national conventions of our major political parties. Each damns the opposition's record, and promises Utopia if the "rascals" are thrown out. Their talk, of course, is for the voters' consumption.

Since there is no opposition in Russia, Stalin attacked the United States. And, like the orators at Chicago, the Politburo's spokesmen had their eyes and tongues on the Soviet people rather than the 1,300 delegates in the palace of the czars.

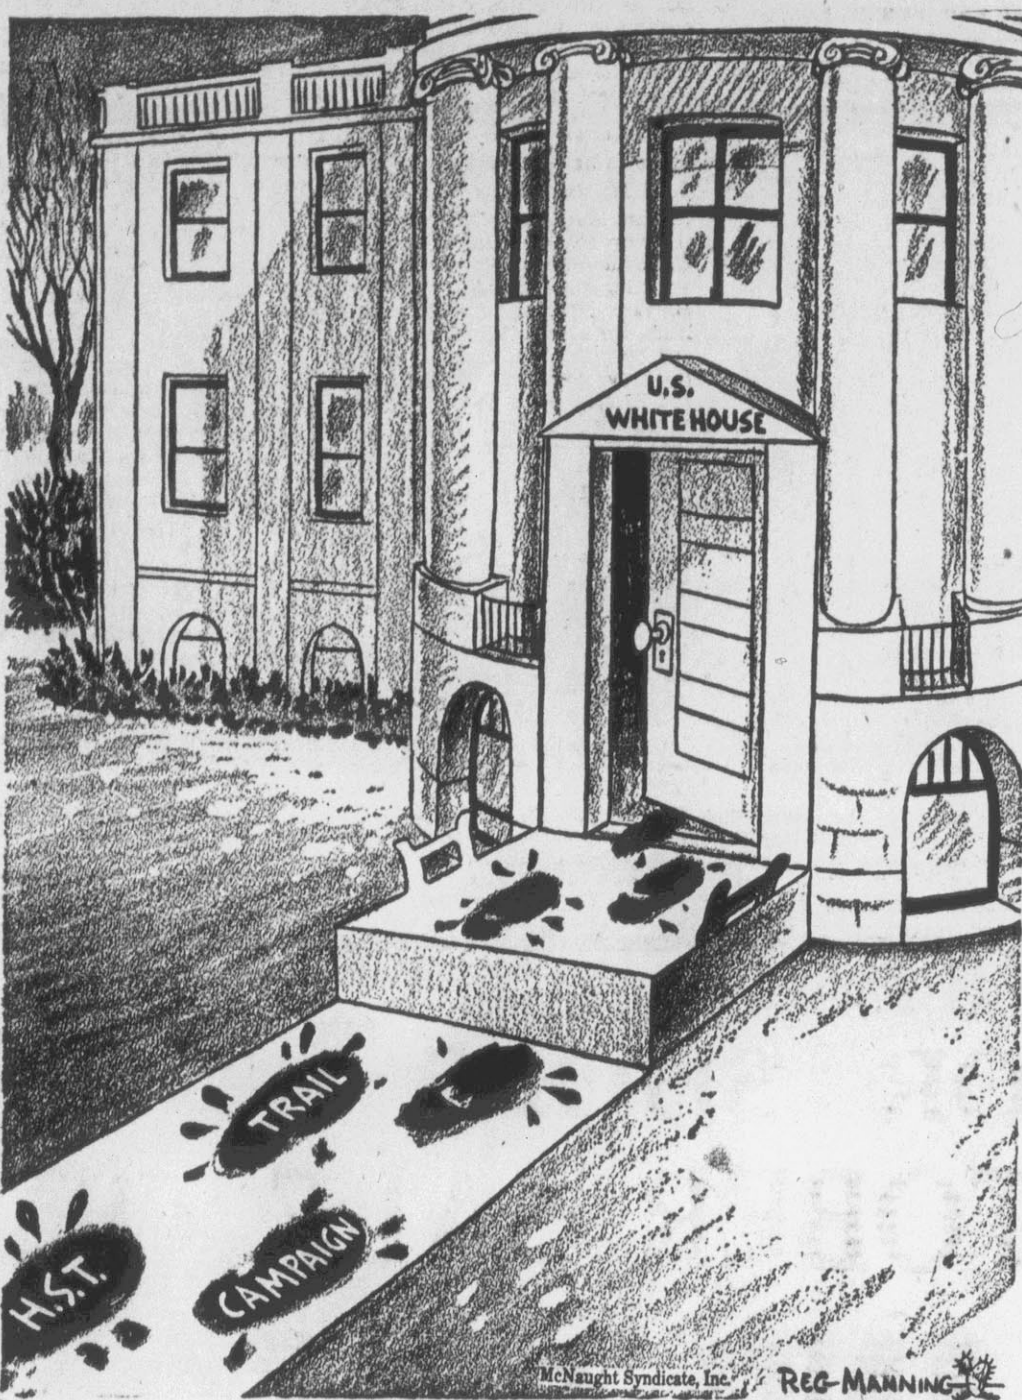

Unlike the politicians' promises at Chicago, Stalin and his boys had to talk tough to their people. It is the content of these speeches which seem to prove that Russia is not ready for war, and will not be for many years. They give warning that living conditions, already harsh, will become worse rather than better.

WESTERN OPPOSITION—Russia is suffering from our economic and military pressure, according to this analysis, and will be pinched even more severely henceforth.

The Communists have not been able to conquer or infiltrate as they had expected because of Western opposition. The economic blockade deprives the Soviet of productive machinery and consumers' goods. The new five-year plan will prevent any approach to decent living standards. Meanwhile, the West is growing stronger every day in anticipation of a showdown on the battlefield.

In other words, Stalin has as many troubles as Harry S. Truman, probably more!

Tracking In His Mud

Somebody Told Me

By L. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Last night at a meeting of the Local Organized Reserve Corps units I ran into a real American soldier, the type that takes us through the wars as victors. First Lieutenant Henry McNichols of St. Louis was a member of an instruction team that was here to discuss Korean war tactics with the reservists.

As a lecturer, Lt. McNichols is an expert; and from the tactical point of view he is a military expert. But I was especially interested in his expression of his personal experiences, which he didn't cover in the lecture.

He is my age, 28. During World War II he was an enlisted man in the Navy. After a college education he applied for a commission in the Army, which was granted. A short time later he found himself in command of an Infantry platoon in Korea.

"When I arrived," he said, "we had 36 in the platoon and a short time later there were only seven." Lt. McNichols also told of a mission which included 87 men in the beginning and ended with 25 men.

But the biggest eye-opener of all was the story of Lt. McNichols' capture. He was on patrol, heard the shouts of an American GI calling for help. When he investigated he found himself a victim of a booby trap. Actually, it was North Koreans speaking English, and he fell for it. McNichols grabbed the gun from one and escaped. But only a few minutes later he was captured by a group of 15.

After he was his prisoner for 10 days it seemed evident that American soldiers were going to take the N. Koreans' position. At this point McNichols became excess baggage, so a N. Korean First Lieutenant tied him to a tree, shot him four times, and left him for dead. Two bullets went through his neck, one through his mouth, and one in his shoulder.

This happened about eight at night and around four in the morning he woke up and started calling for help. At first Americans thought he was a booby trap, just as the one he was a victim of. But they soon realized he was an American and came to his rescue.

"How did you live through it?" I asked him.

"Didn't you know," he asked, "that you can't kill an Irishman by shooting him in the head?" And I thank Lt. McNichols.

Around Capitol Square

By LYNN NISBET

SEAWELL—Some of the Democratic campaigners who complain about the hardship of making four or five speeches a week Seawell, Republican candidate can sympathize with Herbert F. for Governor. He has spoken at least once every day this month except Sundays and Monday of this week, and has a schedule full until election day. A Republican rally at Asheville on Tuesday, October 15, with Seawell as chief speaker, conflicted with the fourth district Democratic rally fixed for the same date, and which was changed from early afternoon to 4 o'clock.

DATES—Other engagements for the Republican candidate include: Denton on the 17th, 8:00 p.m.; Wayneville on the 18th, 8:00 p.m.; Wake Forest on the 20th, 10:00 a.m.; Washington on the 21st at noon, and Plymouth in the afternoon; Troy on the 24th at 7:30 p.m.; Wilkesboro on the 25th, 8:00 p.m.; Charlotte on the 28th, Women's Breakfast Club; Goldsboro on the 30th, 8:00 p.m.; Benson on the 31st, 4:00 p.m.; and Waccamaw High School in Brunswick County on November 1 at 8:00 p.m. Seawell has already spoken in about half the counties of the State from Asheville to Elizabeth City.

SMITH—Reaction to Senator Willis Smith's lukewarm endorsement of the Stevenson-Sparkman ticket has been varied. A few extremists among the Eisenhower folks have been critical because the senator did go all out against Stevenson, and some of the regular party liners have expressed disappointment that a Democratic office-holder would hedge at all. The senator's office reports that preponderant majority of the messages received have approved his stand and many of them recall that he won the nomination two years ago in a campaign that featured lack of enthusiasm toward the present national administration. Many of those who supported him then are glad that he has not changed his attitude, and that while supporting the national ticket he gets into the record his opposition to some particular items in the Stevenson program.

EMPHASIS—Most observers concede that Stevenson is gaining position over Eisenhower in North Carolina during the past few days, and the gain is attributed to realization that in early stages of the campaign too much emphasis was put upon the personalities of the candidates. The impact of arguments presented by Democratic speakers at the numerous rallies being staged throughout the state that the real issue is party control rather than personal leadership is having effect. It is true that many people do not like the apparent close affinity between Stevenson and President Truman. Just as many do not like the apparent subservience of General

Eisenhower to the group of Republican Senators headed by Taft, McCarthy, Jenner and Kern.

CONTROL—The voters are being bombarded with arguments that Republican victory means loss of control of the Congress by the South, with particular reference to the certain demotion of Representatives Cooley, Barden, Bonner and Durham, each of whom heads a very important committee. For that reason a good many people who frankly confess they like General Eisenhower and his personal platform better than Governor Stevenson and his program, now say they will vote for the Democratic party in order to retain control of the Congress. A few who have traditionally voted the Democratic ticket say they are so fed up with the present administration they want a change, even at expense of congressional dominance. Still fewer say they feel that best interests of the country will be served more by changing control of Congress than by a new man in the White House—which they would get in any event. This group is not so much against Truman himself as against the whole administration congressional and bureaucratic policy. Outside of the Republican party there are not many of this last school of thought. Great majority of the Citizens for Eisenhower insist they will continue to vote the

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
The question of store hours has sharpened many retailers' tempers. There are sharp disagreements among merchants in many cities; there are often equally sharp differences among the executives of a single store.

There has been an increase in night openings; a recent survey shows they prevail in 83 per cent of the cities studied. More significantly, openings more than one night a week occur in 12 per cent. To add to the confusion, E.B. Weiss, contributing editor of Printer's Ink and a nationally known authority on marketing has been saying that eventually the retail week will consist of five days, and from noon to 9 p.m. each day.

In some cities merchants who have added night openings have been severely criticized by their competitors. In other cities those who have refused to go along with community night openings have been scolded just as severely. Some meetings of retailers have ended in a clamor of unfriendly shouts.

In Norfolk, Va., food retailers thought they had a general agreement on Thursday night openings and full-day closings Monday, but so many disavowed the agreement and stayed open Mondays that the experiment lasted just one week.

The discussions will become calmer when merchants realize that they have little to say about the final decision. It will be made by shoppers—and the laws of economics.

Store operation is based on ratios of sales to costs. Costs rise with added hours. Whether sales rise to compensate for those added costs determine whether any store will remain open longer. And since the consumer has the power to determine whether sales go up or down, the consumer will decide the hours.

If a store can increase the ratio of sales to costs by opening at two o'clock in the morning, it will. In fact, a West Coast store, near a three-shift defense plant, does just that.

Some stores may keep open evenings at a loss just because a competitor stays open. But they won't do it for long—not at today's operating costs.

The only thing retailers can do, individually or in community action is to experiment and compare operating costs with volume in various combinations of hours. If shoppers want it that way, it will be more profitable to close at 5:30 every day—or stay open two nights a week—or open from noon to 5 p.m. The fact that irregular hours may mean overtime is of little import; overtime is just one of the costs.

CHRISTMAS STIRS COSMETIC PROMOTIONS

The approach of Christmas is bringing the usual bubble of activity in cosmetics. One company is bringing out a perfume at $100 an ounce, with production limited to 2,500 bottles. Each purchaser is given an option on buying a bottle next year. And another is bringing out what is described as the first cosmetic type of skin treatment cream for PRICES MOVE IN.....
BOTH DIRECTIONS.....
Those who try to chart the future of the economy by price trends are baffled these days. Prices seem to move in two directions at once.

Coal, steel and aluminum prices are up, reflecting wage increases, and they are carrying other prices higher. Zinc and lead have dropped. Some chemicals are up, others down. Chlorophyll, in the midst of a fantastic boom demand for the stuff, has gone down 25 per cent.

The disparity between wholesale and consumer price trends continues. Since February, 1951, all consumer prices except apparel have risen, according to a Federal Reserve tabulation. In the same period, all wholesale prices except foods have gone lower.

15% PERSONAL INCOME FLOWS FROM GOVERNMENT

Of every dollar of personal income in the United States, 15 cents comes from government, according to a National Industrial Conference Board calculation. This includes pensions and various other payments as well as Federal state and local payrolls. The same ratio exists in employment. About 15 per cent of those employed work for government.

NEW PRODUCTS

AUTOMATIC: Combination radios and clocks for use on desks are now being produced (by RCA Victor, Camden, N.J.). They can be set to turn the radio off or on automatically at any specified time or to ring an alarm.

DESK: A new steel desk for preschool children has a top that can be tilted to serve as a drawing board or turned over to become a slate-surfaced drawing board. (It is by Durex Co., Box 672, Chicago 90, Ill.)

ZIPPERED: A pocket designed to fit the rings of standard ring-binder note books used by engineers, students and others is being introduced (by Renick Borgs & Co., 412 N. Orleans St., Chicago 10, Ill.). It has a zipper closure, is made of translucent Vinylite, and can be used for keeping pencils, erasers and other objects.

Hal Boyle's Column

By SAUL PETT
(For Hal Boyle)

NEW YORK (AP)—All in all, I had a rather jazzy time at the National Hardware Show.

I met some lovely young blondes who know even less about hardware than I do, but more about hardware men. I talked with three talented Mynah birds who tried to sell me electrical appliances. I also watched a gripping puppet show and picked up a free sample of "Scru-Tite Screw Anchors."

All was relatively quiet in putty knives, plungers and peat moss but at the next booth a man said I'd be surprised what they're doing these days with doweling jigs, ratchet tap wrenches, feeler gages, tramline points and replacement resistors.

Early in my tour, I discovered that there is such a thing as left-handed cutting shears. Then I weighed myself on a piece of aluminum screening to prove how strong it was and that proved rather dismal. My weight, I mean, not the screening.

Crossing to another booth, I talked with an executive-type person who whispered confidentially that the trend is definitely swinging away from plastic back to wooden toilet seats.

Moving from power drills with an attachment for mixing whiskey sours or cake batter, I met a well-formed blonde coming down the aisle.

She wore a string of pearls, pearl earrings, black turtle-neck sweater, black shorts, high-heeled shoes and across her chest a sash indicating her heart belonged to "Lizmar Paint Brushes."

Rather bored with the question, the young lady said she wasn't supposed to know anything about brushes. She was just supposed to walk around. Most hardware men, she admitted, are nice but hardware wits don't flee from the obvious. Item: "You won't give me a fast brush, will you?" Item: "Can we paint the town red?"

Over the roar of power saws, drills and hammers, a strange whistling drew me to the Westinghouse booth featuring three talking Mynah birds named "Teevee" and "Acee" and "Deece."

"Acee" and "Deece" occupied a duplex cage with built-in microphones. A lady led them through some enchanting dialogue in which they said they were fine, darling, meowed like cats, whistled like a man and then, and octave higher, in a female voice.

Pulling a curtain off a third cage, the lady asked "Teevee" about Westinghouse and the bird said, "I'm fine, darling, how are you?" The lady said she was fine and how about Westinghouse and the bird said, after a tense moment, "Yes, I can be sure it's Westinghouse."

"It took me a whole year to teach him the full commercial," the lady said.

Another attractive blonde appeared in the aisle, wearing a "Weather-All" padded suit from her neck to her soles. This will keep you warm in 40 degrees below zero," she explained. "They are using them in ice cream factories."

In the Fishing and Hunting Department someone handed me an "I Like Lazy Ike" button. Turned out nothing political was involved. "Lazy Ike" is a fishing lure. Among the lawn mowers, seeders and fertilizers, another model showed up in a strapless ballerina costume. She wore an "Apex Garden Hose" sash and gave away lollypops. "A noisier than electrical engineers."

On my way out, I stumbled over a small sled with wheels on the runners. This is for underprivileged kids of Beverly Hills and Palm Beach who may be denied snow but not the thrill of belly-hoppers.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—The enormous canning industry is celebrating the 200th birthday anniversary of the man who made canning possible.

Nicholas Appert, born Oct. 23, 1752, an obscure candy-maker, brewer, distiller and baker of Chalon-sur-Marne, France, was the first to hold the theory that if fresh foods were put into an air-tight container and heated they would keep.

Hailed as the "father of canning" as well as the true inventor of what we call "pasteurization," later more scientifically perfected by Louis Pasteur, Appert was prompted to develop his theory when in 1795 the French government offered a 12,000-franc reward for a method of preserving perishable foods.

France, fighting most of Europe at that time, had to feed forces on land and sea, and losses from scurvy and malnutrition were almost as heavy as those from enemy bullets. Soldiers and seamen needed the kinds of food that would protect them against these conditions, but there was no way to keep them. After 14 years of testing the workability of his method, Appert was declared a public benefactor. Emperor Napoleon gave him the 12,000-franc prize.

The discovery started an industry that has raised living standards throughout the world. America has taken the lead in doing this. While Appert conceived the canning method and England invented the tin can, it was American genius that built a vast food production and distribution network. Today, there are more than 3,500 canneries in 47 states and the territories, annually producing more than 400 items of canned foods. Appert's discovery, a war baby, drew impetus from subsequent wars. The National Canners Association says that after the Civil War canned foods production boomed about six-fold because both boys in Blue and Grey had canned foods for the first time during their Army service, got to like them and carried their taste for them back to civilian life. Association figures show that in World War II two thirds of all the food that went to our armed forces and their allies went in cans.

Christmas Gifts Ideas Listed By Men In Korea

WITH MARINES IN KOREA (U.P.)—With the deadline for mailing packages to Korea for Christmas approaching, wives, parents, sweethearts and friends of servicemen in Korea probably are wondering what to send overseas for Christmas.

A survey conducted by the "First Word," official news daily of the First Marine Division, indicated that the Marines have no need for Argyle socks, plaid mufflers or long-handled underwear.

Regulation cold weather clothing and gear issued is more than adequate for their needs.

In their place, the Leathernecks would welcome inexpensive wristwatches of the waterproof-wrist-proof variety, portable radios with extra batteries and cigarette lighters.

Candles Welcome
Heavy-duty old-fashioned candles are welcome always and can be used to light up the inside of a dark bunker during the long winter nights.

Gasoline lanterns are issued to the front line troops but there are never enough to go around. If you send your Marine a gasoline lantern, be sure you include extra gas mantles and several extra generators.

To feed the inner man eliminate the cakes, candies and cookies and in their place substitute cheese, packaged soups, good soluble coffee, tea, bottled meats, crackers, sardines, or other delicacies in jars or cans. Fresh fruit of any type is at a premium during the winter but it must be well-packed to keep it from freezing.

Reading Rates High
To keep the soul, send your man plenty of reading material so he can keep up on current events. Books, magazines and home-town newspapers are high on their list. A pin-up calendar will brighten a bunker's drab interior and he will be able to mark off the days bringing him nearer home.

Last but not least, send plenty of pictures. Girl friends and wives not ashamed of their figures should send one taken in a bathing suit. It will keep your Marine warm during a cold winter.

On its first birthday—June 14, 1976—the Continental Army had approximately 20,000 men in it; on its 177th, it will have more than 70 times that.

The rhinoceros does not have true horns, but masses of congealed or matted hair worn smooth by constant rubbing so as to resemble bone.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC RENTAL OF REAL ESTATE BY GUARDIAN
Pursuant to the authority conferred upon me by the general statutes of North Carolina, as Guardian of the Estate of Julia Alice Stokes and Jay Leo Stokes, I will on Saturday, November 1, 1952, at 12:00 o'clock noon, offer for rent at the Court House door in Greenville, North Carolina, to the highest bidder for cash, for the crop year 1953, the following described farm land in Swift Creek Township, Pitt County, North Carolina:

Being share Number seven (7) in the division of the C. L. Stokes land, allotted to Julia Alice Stokes and Jay Leo Stokes, in the division of the said lands, and containing a total of 43.7 acres, approximately eighteen (18) acres of crop land and with a 1952 Tobacco Allotment of 3.9 acres.

This 8th day of October, 1952.

Slogans 'Pep Up' Red Anniversary

TOKYO (AP)—The Communist Peiping radio has revealed a set of slogans for celebrating the third anniversary of Red rule over China.

There were 61 slogans—most "Hail to street workers, transport workers, medical and health workers, radio and communications workers, rear service and front line cultural workers who are assisting Chinese People's Volunteers!"

Most of the slogans are the usual Communist anti-American stuff, such as: "Strengthen work of resisting American aggression and aiding Korea and strive for successful conclusion of war against aggression in Korea and peaceful settlement of Korean question!"

Antibiotic Aids Growth Of Corn

NEW YORK (AP)—Infinitesimal quantities of the antibiotic terramycin cause a significant stimulation in the growth of sweet corn and other plants, a Brooklyn pharmaceutical firm, Chas. Pfizer & Co. Inc., reported to the American Institute of Biological Sciences.

Growth responses occurred when plants were given antibiotics in concentrations as low as one part per million parts of water. The tests on corn, it was said, indicated that in addition to taller plants and heavier weights, antibiotic-treated corn germinated more readily than untreated samples.

WHAT'S AT STAKE IN U.S. SENATE

IF ALL DEMOCRATS WON, THEY WOULD TAKE THIS MANY SEATS.

IF ALL REPUBLICANS WON, THEY WOULD TAKE THIS MANY SEATS.

U.S. senators are elected for six years. It is highly improbable that all Democrats or all Republicans up for election this year will be elected. But even if they were, the other party would still have a strong Senate representation. The chart shows what the situation would be in the improbable event that one party made a clean sweep.

Film Star Admits Being A Redhead Has Drawbacks

By CHARLES DENTON
United Press Staff Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Take it from Arleen Whelan, girls, this business of being a red-head isn't all beer and skittles.

Arleen, who inherited flame-red hair and blue eyes from her Irish forebears, confessed with lowered eyelids today that red hair has a certain attraction for food-love males—and some who are not so foodloose.

But she advised blondes and brunettes to stay that way.

"Maybe red-heads are more striking than blondes or brunettes," she said, "but you always feel that all eyes are watching you. Whether you want to or not, you seem to attract attention."

And some of the attention is not so welcome, she added.

"For instance, when I walk down the street, strange men will say, 'Hiya, Red.' Why do they pick on red-heads? They never say 'Hiya, blonde' or 'Hiya, brunette.'"

As a young girl, the teasing about her hair and freckles got so fierce she tried changing colors to a "kinda brownish."

"But it didn't work," she recalled. "It was ghastly. Brown hair didn't go with my complexion, and I always felt a little strange."

Arleen, who just finished a role in "The Sunshine Is Bright" for producer John Ford, also pointed out that the temper legend does red-heads no good socially.

"People are kind of afraid of red-heads," she lamented. "They shy away from them because of the tempers they're supposed to have."

But she admitted reluctantly she has to watch her own temper "at all times" to keep it under control.

"Men have their pre-conceived notions about red-heads, too," she said. "They're supposed to be fickle, so they seem to attract men."

Arleen isn't thinking of changing colors again. Her locks look too good in technicolor. But she thinks other girls should think twice before breaking out the red dye.

"Remember, when a man thinks of marriage, he never thinks of a red-head," she said.

Advices Women On Feeding Bombed City

NEW YORK (UP)—Some day our women may need to know how to improvise outdoor kitchens in the midst of bomb rubble.

Edith Walker, 48-year-old head of the Emergency Meals Division of Britain's Ministry of Food, is here to describe, almost realistically, how it can be done.

She won't try to tell us how we should do it, but on her tour of 16 major American cities she'll be telling women's clubs and civil defense officials how battle-tested British housewives are alerted for instant action.

There are 61,000 British housewives signed up in the emergency feeding program. Miss Walker also has "food flying squads" to rush food to any stricken city.

"We called them the Queen's Messengers the last time, but now we have a queen, and the Queen's Messengers are the Foreign Office couriers," the brown-eyed, white-haired visitor explained. She talked with lively enthusiasm about her program.

"I really feel it puts it off if our enemies know how well prepared we are, don't you?" she asked.

There are 11 mobile food units stationed at key spots in England, Miss Walker said, each equipped to turn out 8,000 snack meals at once.

"We are going for enough equipment to do 6,000,000 snack meals at one cooking, though we don't plan to have food dumps as we did last time," she said. "Except for powdered soup, we will draw food from regular wholesale sources."

Washline Raids Ended By Police

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP)—Police here, uncovered some boxes and came up with some clean wash, thus apparently solving the mysterious clothesline raids that plagued 12 families.

One of the victims, the commissioner of public safety, looked through the three large boxes of clothes and came up with six of his freshly laundered shirts.

That clinched it for the police. They're holding two teen-age boys.

SOMETHING FOR EVERYBODY

Paid Many Lives To Take Hill, Then They Withdrew

By FRED PAINTON

United Press Staff Correspondent
WITH U. S. 31ST INFANTRY
REGIMENT, Korea (UP) — The survivors of Able Company lined up raggedly in torn, mud-caked uniforms to be counted off by the brand new company commander. Strangely, they didn't resent the clean-shaven, well-dressed officer who was replacing the man they had seen blasted helplessly by a Chinese mortar shell.

These men had paid with the blood of their friends for twin-peaked Jane Russell Hill, then were ordered to withdraw. Their eyes were bloodshot and they were so tired they sagged trying to come to attention. Mechanically they announced their names.

Then they went about the post-battle business of turning in weapons and changing equipment. A tall, skinny rookie from Brooklyn spoke to the supply sergeant.

"Sarge," said Pvt. Fred Loman, "keep this pistol for me, will you? It saved my life. Honest, I'm not kidding."

The bored sergeant looked at the weapon critically.

"I don't see how this could save anybody's life," he said, "it's all full of dirt."

Loman exploded.

"I'm glad to be back in one piece," he shouted. "Too many of my friends didn't make it."

"The Chinks came up in waves. We were in this shallow trench. We ran out to meet them. If we hadn't, we'd have been killed. The ones who stayed were killed because the Chinks rolled grenades on them."

"I saw this Chink the same time he saw me. He had a burp gun and I had this pistol. I shot him. If I'd missed, I'd been dead."

The men talked quietly among themselves. Most wondered how they had escaped the thousand ways to die on the hill.

"A grenade landed in our hole," one said, "but it was a dud. Just then one of our shells killed three Chinks right above us."

Cpl. Ules Pearson, Maywood, Calif., who will be 32 Friday, said: "I didn't think I'd make it. That damn hill was too high."

"It was the wounded that got me. We couldn't get them out. I saw three of them bleed to death because there was no way to get them out."

"We took them out and rolled them down the hill. But the medics down there were too busy with the ones who got it coming across the valley."

Above all, the men talked of a Lieutenant, Wright. I found him talking to a group of experts from Washington who were testing the reactions of combat troops to fatigue and fear.

Hiss full name is Lt. Thurman R. Wright. He is 21 and is from Houston, Tex.

"If it hadn't been for him," said Pearson, "it would have been slaughter. We were crowded into this trench and we got the order to withdraw. He kept saying, 'Take it easy, move out slowly,' and he was all over the ridge."

Wright, a tall, lean youngster, led his men through two enemy counterattacks where the Chinese charged through their own artillery.

"They kicked their own dead and wounded out of the way to come at us," said Pearson. "Lieutenant Wright kept saying 'Save your ammo, wait till you get 'em in firing position.'"

RESEARCH — The Council of State this week gave further testimony to the importance of agricultural research by approving the project for a poultry diagnostic laboratory in Wilkes county. Poultry products constitute a major source of farm income in Wilkes and adjoining counties, and epidemics of disease during the past two years has cost them hundreds of thousands of dollars. The State already has diagnostic laboratories at Raleigh and at Waynesville. The action by the Council means that the State will take over a large part of the cost of operating the lab at North Wilkesboro which has been supported by private funds. Local poultrymen will supplement State funds to assure the best possible scientific research into the cause and treatment of diseases in their flocks.

DEFINITIONS — The meaning of words, and the implications of titles have changed a lot within the past 14 years. Witness a clipping handed your reporter by a friend. It was taken from a newspaper in 1938 and lists the "definitions" of five ideologies as given by a college professor of that day:

"Socialism: You have two cows and give one to your neighbor."

"Communism: You have two cows; you give both to the government and the government gives you back some of the milk."

"Nazism: You have two cows; you give them both to the government and the government sells you the milk."

"New Dealism: You have two cows; the government shoots one

IKE CUTS BIRTHDAY CAKE:—General Dwight D. Eisenhower gets ready to cut a birthday cake presented him on the eve of his 62nd birthday by Eisenhower workers in New Orleans. ROK GENERAL QUESTIONS RED:—Lieut. Gen. Paik Sun Yup (left), chief of staff of the ROK army and once a member of the United Nations' mistice delegation, questions a Chinese prisoner captured on White Horse Hill in Korea. Officers in center are unidentified. The hill has been the scene of savage fighting between the South Korean troops and the Red Chinese. (AP Wirephoto from U. S. Army via radio from Tokyo).

MAMIE MAKES A WISH:—During a tour of New Orleans, Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower (left), and her mother, Mrs. Elvira Doud, pause to toss pennies in the wishing well of an old French Quarter courtyard. The wish, made as the pennies are tossed into the bucket, is supposed to come true. Mrs. Eisenhower's wish was—well, if you tell, the wish won't come true. (AP Wirephoto).

"Fascism: You ain't got no cows."

Of these terms only Communism is heard much now, and its meaning is much less complimentary than implied in the professor's definition.

Stole Baby For Relief Checks

NEW YORK (UP) — Police pressed a kidnapping charge today against a 32-year-old mother who said she stole another couple's baby from a hospital so she could qualify for a relief allowance.

Mrs. Carmen Rodriguez, a Puerto Rican woman who speaks no English, was arrested in a tiny Midtown apartment Wednesday night. Police found her with the eight-day-old girl she had kidnapped from the Bellevue Hospital nursery last Sunday.

The baby, Gloria Hernandez, was returned quickly to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rafael Hernandez, who had prayed for the child's safety since the kidnapping was discovered Monday.

Doctors said Gloria apparently was in good health but would get a thorough checkup at the hospital today.

Mrs. Rodriguez, herself the mother of eight children in Puerto Rico, told detectives she took the baby because her own newborn child was ill at Bellevue and "I wanted another one."

She said she wanted to have a new baby in her home so she would be eligible for a relief check.

Kinston Man Is Guest Speaker Of Ruritan Club

WINTERVILLE — Charles McCullers, manager of the Kinston Chamber of Commerce, was guest speaker at the Ruritan Club's "ladies' night" banquet Tuesday night. President W.B. Dillingham, presided.

McCullers, known to so many people in Eastern North Carolina, talked informally. He lauded the work of civic organizations—urban and rural, and reminded the guests that "You are here for a good time and a good feast, and I'm going to make my talk brief." The speaker entertained the group with recital of interesting current events.

Mrs. William May sang two solos and Miss Marjorie Boyd's dancing class of the Winterville School entertained with two numbers.

Women of Reddy Branch Free Will Baptist Church served the supper in the Community Building.

Artificial Lake Is Wasted Work

WESTVILLE, Ill. (UP) — Local sportsmen watched their expensive efforts go down a king-sized drain today.

They had spent $45,000 and many hours of hard labor to build a 28-acre artificial lake, but overlooked the fact their new lake was located over an abandoned mine shaft.

Blind Man Faces Larceny Charge

DETROIT (UP) — Salesman Walter Brake, 55, faced a larceny charge today for allegedly stealing a valise belonging to Matthias Morvitt, 70, a blind piano tuner.

Police said Morvitt checked the valise at Receiving Hospital and a nurse handed it by mistake to Brake who made his way to a pawn shop.

Brake is also blind.

TB Association Sponsors Shows

The Pitt County Tuberculosis Association will sponsor a series of radio broadcasts over WGTC entitled "The Constant Invader" beginning this Sunday, October 19.

Each of the 11 dramas are subtitled and feature some phases of combating tuberculosis. The drama will be broadcast each Sunday afternoon from 1:30 to 1:45.

The first of the series will be "TB in Older People" and is a story centering around old Tom Watson who would not believe that elderly people can get tuberculosis. Stubbornly he refused to face the facts, until the day when his beloved only grandson came down with tuberculosis meningitis. Tragedy was averted, but Tom had to realize that his failure to listen to medical advice amounted to criminal negligence.

Other dramas which will be presented carry the following titles: "Problems of the Living", "Community Agencies", "General Hospitals", "Importance of Hospital Care", "Community-Wide X-ray Program", "Importance of a Health Department", "Adult Health Education", "Rehabilitation", "School Health Education", and "Medical Research".

Bible Words to Live by

My favorite Bible verse is ROMANS 1:16.

"I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

More young ministers have used this text for their first sermon than any other text in Scripture. Romans one-sixteen may not be equal to John three-sixteen in its hold on the affection of mature Christians, but it does contain the essence of Christianity in a nut shell. In this text Paul states his conclusion that the gospel of Christ is superior to all current religions in the pagan world. This is God's revelation of himself and contains good news fitted to every man and every age. The Christian evangel is world-wide, Cross-high, sin-deep, vast in its range, and adequate to meet the total human situation.

U. S. Politics Again Amaze Staid Britons

LONDON (UP)—Britons once again are gaping in wonder at the goings-on in the American presidential campaign, which they are exposed to at long distance every four years.

The newspapers give front-page space to U. S. pre-election stories almost every day so that millions of readers are kept abreast of developments. Whether they grasp them is another matter.

The political influence wielded by a black-and-white spaniel and Humphrey Bogart's change of heart are noted. The austere London Times observed that Sen. John Sparkman, Democratic vice presidential candidate, published his income tax returns but everyone seemed to have lost interest. It also noted that three senators were following President Truman around pronouncing everything he said to be "poppycock."

Dwight D. Eisenhower is still beloved here and when he was nominated it was the impression here that he was virtually a certain winner. This prospect was pleasing to Britons in view of his great efforts in behalf of building up Western Europe.

The press has reflected surprise in discovering the campaign put up by Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson. At the same time it has found a warning kinship in the urbane manner of his speeches, combined with the fact that Britain has fared well at the hands of a Democratic administration.

One of the more lively observers of the American scene is Alistair Cooke, correspondent for the Manchester Guardian. Of the three main figures in the campaign, Cooke has written:

Truman: "As for Mr. Truman's contribution by whistle-stop, his speeches have been so violently abusive of the general that some people fear he will have alienated as many voters as he charmed. From the rear end of trains he spouts a kind of plain English as direct as Cicero and salty as Huckleberry Finn."

Stevenson: "He has captivated the left wing of the Democratic party, the intelligentsia, organized labor, the Negroes and the thoughtful young. It is a lot of disciples to win, if the price was a professorship in political science at Princeton or even the secretaryship of state in a guaranteed Democratic administration. But the prize is the presidency of the United States and the Stevenson managers see... great areas of the country that are not responding to his austere, witty and confident approach."

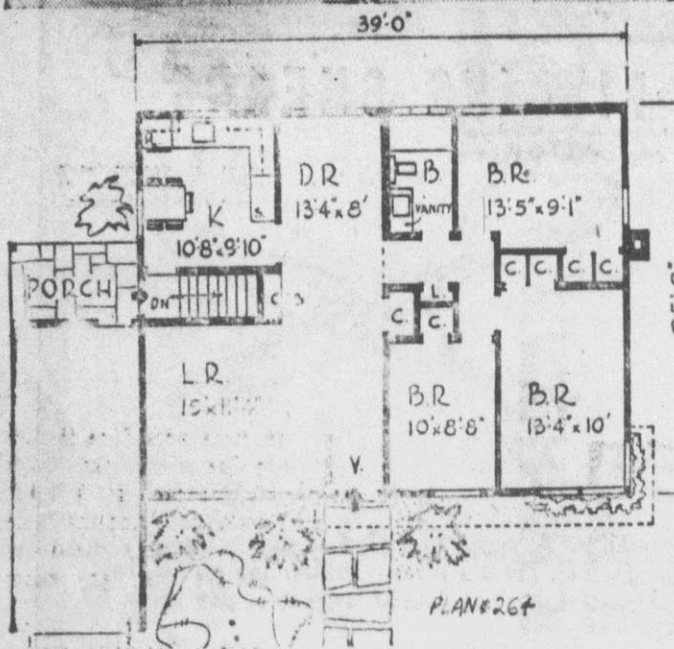

Eisenhower: "It probably does not matter very much that he balks the issues or over-simplifies them. The crowds come to see if Ike is the candid, engaging giant of an American he has been cracked up to be. Evidently they find he is."

Sailfish Bit On Tuna He Hooked

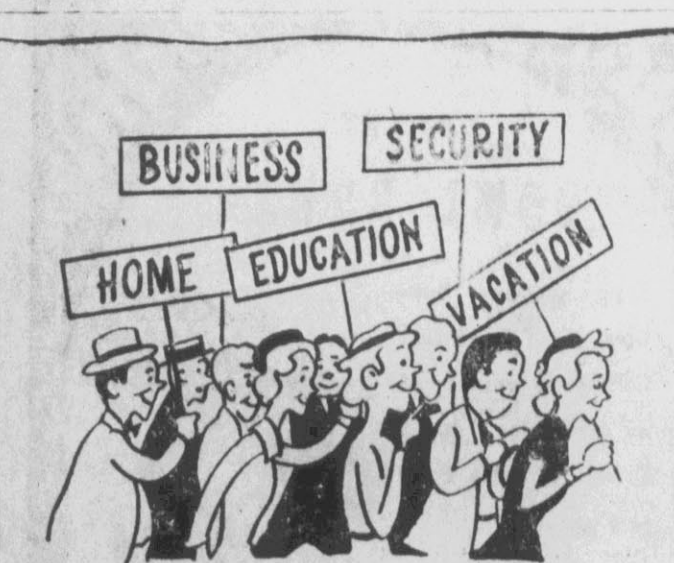

NEW ENVOY:—George Wadsworth, veteran career diplomat, talks to a newsmen in his office in Washington after President Truman named him U. S. ambassador to Communist Czechoslovakia. Now ambassador to Turkey, Wadsworth is a native of Buffalo, N. Y. (AP Wirephoto).

HATTERAS, N. C. (UP)—Fisherman Edward De. Bennett of Norfolk Va., said today he was reeling in a small tuna he caught off Cape Hatteras Tuesday when a 480-pound sail fish swallowed his catch, hook, line and sinker. The sail fish measured seven feet four inches.

TEEN TALK

(Dear Judge)

AP Newfeatures
Too many young girls think a kiss is the most important part of the date. But 'taint so, says cute 17-year-old movie starlet, Marlene Cameron.

Marlene oughta know because she's just had her first kiss (on the screen, that is). She thinks girls who kiss on the first date are a wee bit teched. Says she: "How can you have established a like or dislike at the first meeting? It's ridiculous to get so romantic when you hardly know the boy."

She thinks it is to bad that some girls kiss a date merely because "they're afraid the boy will not call again." Says she:

"So, what—supposing they don't date you again, what have you lost with a boy of that type?"

She's not too popular with boys, she admits, but thinks it is because she's shy. As a matter of fact she remembers one boy who lived next door to her who absolutely hated her. But once he invited her to a movie and they had a wonderful time and were pals from then on.

Marlene thinks girls should be popular with boys if they "just act natural, instead of pretending to be Lana Turner or some other glamor girl." The pixie-like, blue-eyed Marlene finds the main trouble with teen-agers is that they are likely to do anything to get attention when they are just emerging from the "cocoon stage."

She recalls that there was a time when she got annoyed because some boys didn't like her. But now she realizes that she just wasn't extrovert enough to entice them. Says she:

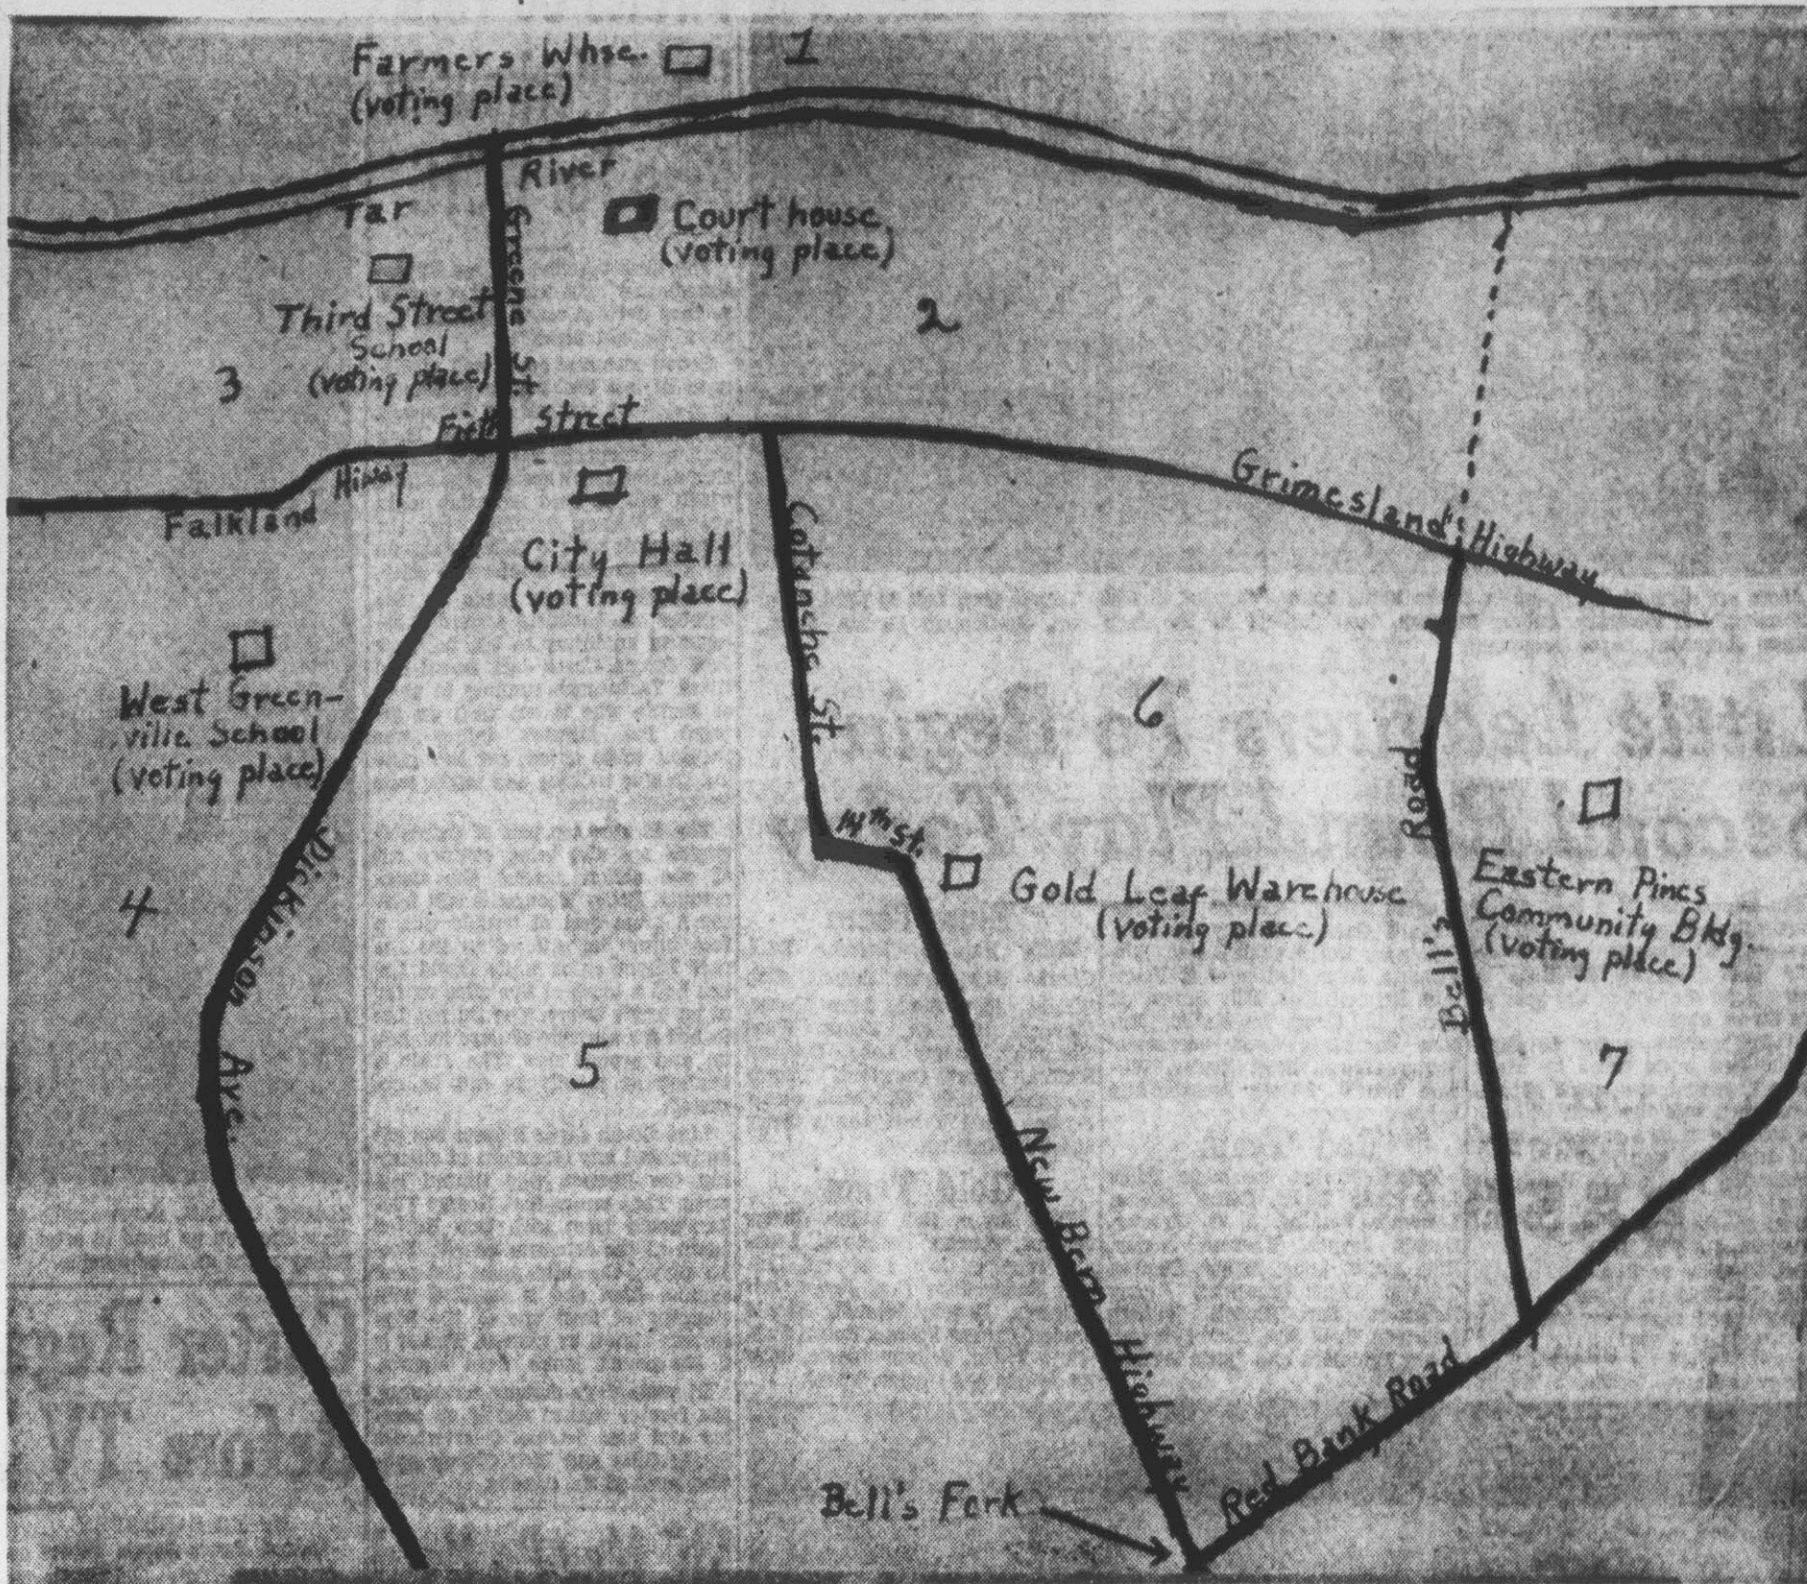

"Take Bobby Driscoll, who had to kiss me in 'Happy Time,' the movie we made together. He wanted to get it over with real fast at first, but he got used to me after we'd rehearsed the kissing scene 15 times, and didn't seem to mind a bit."

In the picture Marlene plays the part of a 12-year-old tomboy (a role she adores). She wears braces on her teeth and "is pretty repulsive for most of the picture," she says. But lo and behold, a magic wand touches her and Cinderella emerges from her pumpkin as a pretty, attractive teen-ager. (This is what captivated Bobby, apparently.)

The talented Marlene comes from a show-biz family. Her mother was a George White Scandals girl and her father was a musician. Her 24-year-old sister is a Rockette. Marlene combines the talents of all three.

She can sing anything from Bop to Opera, and has only studied voice for 3 years. Besides being a lyric coloratura and singing in

Precincts Outlined For Voters Who Are Not Certain

The above drawing shows Greenville Township's seven voting precincts as created in October, 1950, and currently in effect. Each of the individual precincts is numbered and boldly outlined in black. Black circles denote registration and voting places in each precinct, and specific locations are identified by name. The outer perimeter of Greenville Township is not shown, but it should be understood that lines extending off the above map lead all the way to adjoining townships. All potential voters living inside those specified areas should familiarize themselves with their registration and voting places. Voters who have not registered and voted since the May Primary elections in 1950, must register to vote in November.

Italian, French, Spanish and Latin, she dances tap or ballet. She is a good pianist. In her spare time she loves to knit—particularly argyle socks.

Marlene loves to entertain and her simple buffet suppers usually consist of cold cuts, roast beef, frankfurters or hamburgers, all boy-food specialties.

Although she had her first date at 15, she's never really gone steady with a boy, she says. She wants to go to college, then travel, and she'd like to be successful "at something" before she gets married, which she doesn't plan to do until she is at least 24 or 25. Then she hopes to find a man who is a little sympathetic to her career and will let her carry on for a year or two.

Marlene is happy with her family (named Blatz) though and isn't too anxious to leave her Ridgewood, Queens, home even for travel which she adores. Says she: "If a teen-ager wants to be successful in the theatre, you must have the help of parents. That's half the battle when you are trying to get ahead."

Before signing with Columbia, Marlene had been popular on radio and the stage. She plays brat parts as a rule and enjoys them, although she says they are difficult to do without being so obnoxious you antagonize the audience. Some critics can't bear "fresh child actresses," she says.

The biggest thrill she's had to date occurred at 15 on one of her radio appearances with Peter Lawford.

He kissed her on the cheek and she's never forgotten it. She blushes when she thinks of it.

Says Differences Being Opposed

RALEIGH (AP)—The fifth annual North Carolina Rural Health Conference was told last night, "There is a tremendous force in operation today to destroy any element in the country that differs with the federal government."

The speaker was Allen B. Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation. He told the conference "The federal government seeks to disorganize any group that disagrees with it."

"This kind of rural health conference is the sort of process out of which progress comes," Kline stated. "There is nothing in the field of health that rural people can afford not to be interested in."

Approximately 300 persons from throughout North Carolina attended that all-day conference sponsored by the North Carolina Health Council and the Committee on Rural Health of the State Medical Society.

Other speakers yesterday included: Aubrey D. Gates of Little Rock, Ark., field director for the American Medical Association's Council on Rural Health; Dr. J. Street Brewer of Roseboro, president of the State Medical Society; and Dr. George F. Bond of Bat Cave, chairman of the Rural Health

Close Questions Deemed A Factor

RALEIGH (AP)—The State Supreme Court ruled yesterday that a jury might have been influenced in convicting a Yadin man because the judge questioned a defense witness too closely.

The court granted a new trial to Rodney C. Kimrey, who was convicted last February in Yadin of illegal possession and transportation of whiskey. A patrolman testified he chased a vehicle and that when it stopped, the driver fled, leaving 132 gallons of non-taxpaid liquor. Kimrey was identified as the driver.

Kimrey's attorneys presented witnesses in an effort to prove he was in another county at the time. The high court held that close questioning of a witness by Judge Don Phillips was "in a manner calculated to discredit and impeach them and cast doubt upon their testimony before the jury." Four other opinions were handed down. In one case, the court ruled that five Elm City residents had failed to prove that a hammer fee mill is a nuisance. The residents Emma Wheeler, Red Winston, Jo Fugate, Thomas C. Cobb and L.C. Cobb objected to having a hammer fee mill erected near their homes. In Wilson Superior Court last July, Judge Walker Bone continued their restraining order against Alton B. Sharpe. Sharpe appealed and the high court held that Judge Bone had erred.

"No, we didn't figure to win this game and we wouldn't have either if the breaks hadn't come our way," said Coach Wally Shelton just after his Mt. Airy had handed the Phantoms their worst licking of the year.

"Don't get me wrong now, I'm not taking anything away from our boys, they played a fine game and I'm just as proud of them as I can be. But the breaks came our way and we capitalized on them, it isn't always you can do that you know."

Coach Shelton has been coaching high school football for more than 20 years and has had numerous state champions during this time. He has coached and developed some of the finest football prospects in North Carolina.

Some of the players who took their basic training under Shelton are Freddie Folger, who starred at Duke during the Justice era, Billy Cox, formerly of Duke, now with the Washington Redskins, John Grubbe, now at Tennessee, Billy Coble, who starred at Appalachian, and many others.

"What did you think of Perry?" we asked, anxious to hear the wily mentor's opinion of the Phantom's star running back.

"Who did you say, oh yes, you must mean the boy that ran the kickoff back for a touchdown," he said, pulling at his chin thoughtfully. "That's right," we urged. "Number 45."

"Well, he seemed to be terribly fast and after the way he stepped off that long run I was sure we were going to have plenty of trouble trying to keep up with that boy. Having that run nullified was a big turn in our favor, it's always tough to spot a team like Greenville six points then try to beat them. I credit our line with contributing most of our victory. That first quarter safety did a lot to boost the team's spirit.

"Greenville looked exceptionally good at times and I was afraid that they would break loose most any time and catch up with us. That number 40 (Guy Smith) had a lot of speed, I thought he was going to cause us some trouble too."

The conversation drifted around to the Mt. Airy star halfback. "You know," he said with a twinkle in his eye, "We held our breath every time Greenville (Sydnor) carried the ball, he has been out of practice with injuries all week."

We suppressed a shudder upon wondering what a physically fit Sydnor would have done. He only scored all three Mt. Airy touchdowns, once on a 56 yard run, and personally engineered the other TD drives.

As we entered the Mt. Airy dressing room, Shelton volunteered, "I like the way your quarterback passed the ball and somebody said he was only a sophomore. With a year's experience I dread to face him next year. The way he throws the ball and the way that big end (Bobby Conway) goes after them, it's a wonder we didn't get beat."

By this time we were already in the Mt. Airy dressing room and the happy players were shouting at each other and replaying bits of the game that they participated in. Finally they spotted Coach Shelton and converged in a little tight circle around him and pined him with questions and listened intently to the genial coach's praise of their work.

Feeling a little better after Coach Shelton's sage comments about the Greenville team and players, we quietly tucked out of the happy scene of a group of players who had come back to upset a favored team after suffering three setbacks in a row.

Phants Are Given Second Day Off In Rest Week

Greenville's high school Phantoms were given the day off from practice again yesterday. The Phantoms have an open date coming up Friday night and the free afternoon yesterday was the second one they've had this week.

The one practice the Phantoms have had this week was a full-scale scrimmage Tuesday in which four squad members received minor injuries. All four are expected to be available for action by the time the Phants travel to New Bern for their game on October 24.

Thus far this year, Coach Bill Kittrell's club has rung up wins over Kinston, Edenton and Morehead City while losing to Hertford and Mount Airy. A tie with Washington is also on the record books.

The contest with the Bears on October 24 is expected to be Greenville's most thorough trial against Northeastern Conference teams. The wins over Kinston and Edenton were both by comfortable margins while the tie game with Washington was a contest in which the Phantoms rolled at will until they got within scoring distance.

Carolina, Wake; Duke, State Feature Big Football Week

Duke

DURHAM (UP)—Duke's Blue Devils today eased up on the workouts for the game against North Carolina State after running through scrimmage against two simulated Wolfpack teams yesterday.

The top offensive crew tried its ground and air attack against one squad of Jayvees clad in red jerseys yesterday and the defensive leaders took a crack at halting State plays run by another red-jerseyed-Jayvee team.

Wake Forest
WAKE FOREST (UP)—Anticipating aerial strikes by University of North Carolina freshman quarterback Marshall Newman, Wake Forest Coach Tom Rogers drilled a defensive backfield combination today.

His own reserve quarterbacks, Nick Consoles and Doug Alexander, pitched passes while halfbacks Jim Bland and Bobby Frederick and safetyman Bruce Hillenbrand toured the secondary covering simulated receivers.

Hillenbrand also worked in the offensive backfield during drills to sharpen the Deacon attack, including the passes of quarterback Sonny George.

N. C. State
RALEIGH (UP)—North Carolina State College headed into its last practice session today as it continued all-out efforts to give

Duke a warm welcome to the state capital.

Coaches sought ways of halting the Blue Devil's split-T offensive attack during scrimmage yesterday against the Jayvee squad.

The Junior Varsity team, quarterbacked by Eddie Frantz, threw all of Duke's basic plays against state's defensive line. Wolfpack flankers managed to stop most of Duke's simulated attack and were particularly effective against wide pitchouts.

Carolina
CHAPEL HILL (UP)—North Carolina winds up its heavy workout in preparation for Saturday's invasion by Wake Forest in a game which the experts call a toss-up.

The Tar Heels had a long pass defense drill yesterday with quarterback Ernie Liberati emulating Wake Forest's Sonny George.

Tar Heel defenders were Leonard Bullock and Dick Lackey at halfbacks and Sonny Ridenhour at safety.

Dave Sisler Gets Bonus To Sign

PRINCETON, N. J. (UP)—Dave Sisler, son of Hall-of-Famer George Sisler and captain of Princeton's baseball team, has signed a bonus contract estimated at between $35,000 and $45,000 with the Boston Red Sox.

NCAA Examines Ten Top Colleges

CHICAGO (UP)—Investigation of charges of violation of the National Collegiate Athletic Association constitution has been completed against three schools, it the Policy-Making Council has received a report of the cases.

The council, holding its regular fall meeting, was expected to decide whether to recommend convention action against the alleged violators. However, Executive Director Walter Byers said no announcement would be made now of any council decision.

The Subcommittee on Infractions of the Membership Committee, charged with enforcement of the constitution, submitted the report to the council. It said in addition that there are seven cases against other schools in which preliminary evidence has been received and that in some of these investigations have begun.

It was expected the council probably would recommend that the convention declare proven violators "not in good standing."

There was an indication that no recommendation to "terminate" membership would be made as members facing such action must be notified by Sept. 1 and no such notice was announced this year.

Pirates Go Thru Light Workout In Prep For WCTC

The East Carolina College Pirates got another light workout yesterday as they avoided rough work for the third straight practice.

Squad members got a look at pictures of last week's Elgin game and then dummy scrimmaged for almost an hour before calling it a day. Their dummy scrimmage was aimed toward eliminating rough spots in the attack which will be used Saturday night against Western Carolina when the Catamounts come to College Stadium for a North State Conference clash.

One change was made in the number one backfield yesterday because of an injury to left halfback Jack Benzie. Coach Jack Boone had Lillard Yarborough running in place of Benzie who is out with an injured toe. Benzie's injury was thought to be serious but he's having trouble walking and might miss Saturday's game.

The Pirates' top pair of defensive guards are also being counted out of the action against the Catamounts. Bobby Thomas is still having a great deal of trouble with a foot injury he suffered in the Lehigh Rhyne game while David Lee has had a touch of flu piled on top of an ankle injury. The flu put Lee in bed for a couple of days but he's up and around now. The ankle is healing as rapidly as can be expected.

Line Coach Clyde Biggers has not announced any intentions of changing the linemen who started last week. That means that George Tucker would team with Don Burton again at the defensive guards. Tucker played the entire game last week against Elgin and is credited with stopping at least one of the Elgin threats almost by himself. Tucker is a 190 pound junior from Monroe.

In yesterday's dummy scrimmage, the Pirates worked mostly on passing and pass defense. Quarterbacks Sandy Siler and Dick Cherry handled most of the passing.

SIC May Be Used Wrong Approach

CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (UP)—The Southern Conference, which bans all post-season football, may be using "the wrong approach" to the problem, Gordon Gray, University of North Carolina president, admitted today.

"It is my personal as well as official view," said Gray, "that neither State College nor the University at Chapel Hill should participate in such games, however."

Gray, who said he has not altered his opinion against post-season games, feels the participation in such contests should be left to the "institutional conscience" of the individual schools.

Clarifying his position after a speech he made Tuesday night was interpreted as a sign that the conference might vote to relax its strict curb on post-season games, Gray conceded there are greater evils in college football.

He added, however, that he believes post-season contests "simply contribute to the problem."

However, a recommendation was made that the notice date be changed to Nov. 1 in the future.

BOBBY CLARK, Robersonville guard, will be one of the stalwart Ram linemen on hand to greet Tarboro when the two teams tangle Friday night at Robersonville.

Carter Regains Title Before TV Audience

By ED SAINSBURY
United Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (UP)—Jimmy Carter held the world lightweight championship for the second time today, the fourth man to boast such an achievement, but thousands of television fans probably questioned his right to the crown.

Carter, a 29-year-old New York Negro who knows all the tricks of the trade including counter-punching and how to protect himself in the clinch, blasted Lauro Salas, the only Mexican world champion, over 15 rounds Wednesday night in the Chicago Stadium to regain his title.

But to the television audience, Salas, a 132-pound plunger who can either fight defensively or go on the offense, made a tremendous defense of the crown he believed he held only to please the Mexican citizens.

Salas gave away three pounds to Carter, at 135, when the fight began and thereafter he did his utmost to stay within punching distance of his fast-stepping, nifty-punching foe.

Carter, though four years older than Salas, began leveling with both hands at the opening bell and he never eased up until he was certain he had a tremendous lead on points.

After 10 rounds, Carter had a practically insurmountable advantage on the United Press scorecard as well as that of judges, Jim McManus and Spike McAdams, and Referee Frank Gilmer.

Then Salas, who had emphasized defense only, began to attack. So successful was his assault that he won two consecutive rounds, but then Carter, coasting easily, rallied and never gave the Mexican another chance.

Even though a vast group of the crowd consisted of parts of Chicago's Mexican population, cheering Salas throughout, they failed to boo the obviously fair decision in which the votes of the judges and referee were 81-69, 84-66 and 82-68, all for Carter. The United Press card had it 82-68 for Carter, crediting him with nine rounds, two for Salas and four even.

Salas was cut over both eyes during the brawl and though his corner tried to stem the blood, he was a gory mess during the final three rounds.

There was no talk of a rematch, although Salas said he believed he could beat Carter again next time out.

Marshal Tito Makes It Difficult For West To Aid Or Rely On Him

By PHIL NEWSOM
United Press Foreign News Editor

Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito takes the interesting view that treaties are made either by weaklings or liars.

He adds that since Yugoslavia is neither, there is no need for her to enter into treaties. It makes him a tough man to deal with.

The case in point is the agreement by the United States, Britain and France to extend $99,000,000 in economic aid to Yugoslavia for the fiscal year ending June 30, and Yugoslavia's position in Western defenses.

Of the total, $79,000,000 will come from the United States.

The negotiations had their delicate moments. The Allies wanted to see that their money was well spent from their viewpoint, and they criticized Yugoslavia's pell-mell rush toward industrialization as damaging to Yugoslav economy.

At the same time they had to allay Tito's suspicion that they were interfering with Yugoslavia's internal policy.

They also would like to see Yugoslavia enter into a firm defensive alliance with Greece and Turkey. Here Tito balked.

He took the position that Yugoslavia's attitude toward a possible attack by Russia or her satellites already was clearly defined and that treaties were superfluous.

Roughly defined, the Yugoslavs say they will fight under any one of three conditions aside from a direct attack on Yugoslavia. They are:

1. An attack through Austria to get at northern Italy.
2. An attack on Greece.
3. An attack on Germany.

Either the first or second would mean the encirclement of Yugoslavia.

slavia. The third would endanger the whole defensive plan for Western Europe.

Since both sides fully realized Yugoslavia's strategic importance, the Allies were forced to take Tito at his word.

The United States has been extending aid to Yugoslavia since 1949, following a period of vacuum after Tito's break with Moscow.

It has had a vast range, extending from rehabilitation of mines and improvement of agriculture to machine guns and jet fighters.

War supplies now are flowing in to Yugoslavia from the U. S. in a steady stream, with jets the latest to be added to the list. The jets, incidentally, were held up until the U. S. was sure technicians would be on hand to keep them operating.

Yugoslavia has many of the problems common to most other European nations, including an unbalanced economy which requires more in imports than she has been able to export. Added to this have been disastrous droughts in 1950 and again this year.

Along with other nations, she also has felt the heavy burden of rearmament. Nearly 25 per cent of the national income is spent on arms. But her 16,000,000 people have built one of the finest armies in Europe, now estimated to total between 600,000 and 800,000 men.

Italians At Odds Peeling Grapes

ROME (U.P.)—To peel or not to peel a grape is the basis of a current hot scientific debate, according to the Italian National Institute of Nutrition of the Council of Research.

Prof. G. Di Macco, director of the institute of general pathology of the university of Turin affirmed that the skin and pits of grapes have only scarce nutritive qualities and form indigestible material.

Prof. Carlo Foa, director of the institute of human physiology of Milan university, said Di Macco should not forget the "efficacy of the fermenting qualities of the grape skin in moderating intestinal putrefaction."

Prof. E. Moracci stoutly supported his Milan colleague, declaring that the grape peel has a value "Not to be underestimated" since it contains cellulose.

Cellulose, he said, stimulates the undulatory motion of the stomach during digestion and is a natural corrective for obstinate constipation.

Prof. G. Bentivoglio of the university of Padua warned that "it is opportune to limit as far as possible the swallowing of seeds and peels unless they are first thoroughly masticated."

The institute said "The matter will be pursued."

Landmark In History

1836. The ALAMO, San Antonio, Texas.

AP Newsfeatures

Facing Alamo Plaza in the heart of San Antonio, this ancient thick-walled structure has been standing for over two hundred years. It was probably the chapel of a Spanish Mission and derived its name from the nearby grove of alamo trees. During Texas' fight for freedom from Mexico General Santa Anna led over 4000 soldiers against San Antonio, where Colonel Travis with only 188 men (including the famous Colonel Bowie and the hunter Davy Crockett) had intrenched himself in the Alamo. These brave defenders held off the enemy for eleven days until March 6, 1836, when every man had given his life. On April 21, 1836, the main Texan Army, inspired by their battle cry "Remember the Alamo," met and defeated Santa Anna at San Jacinto and won Texas' independence.

Ship Crews Will Benefit In Pact

GENEVA, Switzerland (U.P.)—Merchant seamen on the ships of eight countries are now assured that their quarters will be lighted sufficiently for the reading of a newspaper and that there will be no more than four men to a room.

These and many other provisions covering minimum standards of accommodations for sailors are guaranteed by a convention approved by Cuba, Ireland, Denmark, Finland, France, Norway, Sweden and Portugal. It becomes effective next Jan. 29.

The convention establishes the amount of sleeping space, ventilation and heating per man, and says that there must be one bath tub or shower for each eight men and one lavatory and wash basin for every six.

Although adopted seven years ago at an international labor organization conference in Seattle, Wash., the treaty could not become effective until ratified by a sufficient number of nations.

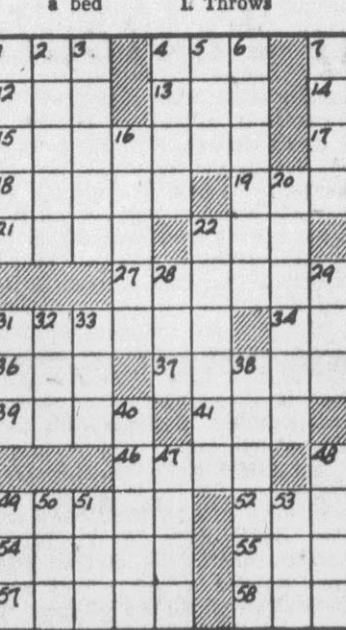

Britain delayed ratification, according to reliable sources, so it could get ship owners and crew members to agree to the applications of the convention. Complete agreement is believed to have been reached and it is expected that London will soon notify the ILO of its decision to abide by the treaty.

A United States official said America has failed to ratify probably because the federal government does not feel it has clear-cut jurisdiction over inland waterways and so is not sure it could apply the treaty in all parts of the country.

Schools' Share Of Taxes Shrink

NEW YORK AP)—In 1939 the nation's schools received about 16 cents of each tax dollar but in 1952 the figure is down to 8 cents, according to Dr. John K. Norton of Teachers College, Columbia University.

He said that while the average wage of all employed persons increased 167 per cent in the war years, the wage rate of teachers increased only 132 per cent.

The Scottish bagpipe has three drones, or sounding reeds, while the Irish has but one.

Test Your Economics Knowledge

NEW YORK (UP) — Everyone talks about money — how much they have, or how much they haven't—but many citizens do not know the meanings of economic terms they bandy about in daily conversations.

The Tax Foundation, Inc., has prepared these 10 questions for the average citizen to test his knowledge of such current words as inflation, deficits, taxes, spending, and bureaucracy; especially taxes.

How do you come out?

1. Is the total U. S. tax bill higher, or lower, than at the peak of World War II?
2. Will the expected federal expenditures of $79,000,000 this year be $5,000,000 higher; as the peak amount spent in World War II?
3. The federal government expects to go $10,000,000,000 in the red this year, bringing the total national debt to $288,000,000,000. Is this $472, $3,000 or $1,720 for every man, woman, and child in the United States?
4. If enough $10,000 bills (the largest in circulation; to equal federal budget expenditures proposed for fiscal 1953 were laid end to end, would the line of bills

- extend 275 miles, 920 miles; or, 826 miles?
5. How much income does a married man with two children need today, in the face of increased taxes and inflation, to reach the equivalent buying power of a married man with two children who in 1939 had $2,000? Is it $4,500; $2,000; or $3,700?
6. Do U. S. taxpayers pay more taxes, or the same, or less, than they pay out for food expenses?
7. Do federal budget expenditures proposed by the president for fiscal 1953 amount to $234,000,000 a day; $10,000,000 an hour; or $163,000 a minute?
8. Does the number of civilian employees in the executive branch of the federal government come to 1,523,000; 2,599,000; or 723,000 persons?
9. Is the federal civilian payroll higher, the same, or lower than at the peak of World War II?
10. Are there seven; 93; or 151 hidden taxes on a loaf of bread?

NEW YORK (UP)—Here are the answers to the questions about your knowledge of money:

1. Higher, with federal, state, and local taxes totalling a mere $50,200,000,000 in 1945 compared to $87,400,000,000 this year.
2. $20,000,000,000 lower.
3. $1,720.
4. 826 miles.
5. $4,500.
6. More with total food spending.
7. All three are correct.
8. 2,599,000.
9. Higher, with a civilian payroll of $9,500,000,000 in fiscal 1952 which soars $1,200,000,000 above the World War II peak.
10. 151.

Seeing Inauguration Is Comparatively 'Cheap'

WASHINGTON (UP)—Americans will get a break on seats at the inauguration of the next President, compared with what the British will have to pay to see their new queen crowned.

The Washington Board of Trade tells me that the going rate for our inauguration is from $1.00 to $10.00 a seat, according to where you sit.

Other seats, with not so good a view, are free on a first-come, first-served basis.

British papers say London's "West End clubs" are leading the way in the price of seats for Queen Elizabeth's coronation. The most expensive seats so far are at the United Universities Club. The rate at that spot to watch the coronation is 100 pounds a seat, or the equivalent of about $280 in American money.

One London paper said: "There will be room for 300 members and guests at this price. Two nights at the club—the eve and night of the coronation—are from the club stand on the corner of Pall Mall and Suffolk Street, there will be two views of the procession on the outward and return journey to the palace."

The prices come down from there. One club called White's is putting up seats for 89 members at 15 pounds a head, or about $42 dollars. The price includes breakfast, lunch and champagne. Inflation has touched Britain, too. White's charged 10 pounds a seat at the last coronation.

White's announced that women will be admitted to the club for the first time since the last coronation. One club is selling seats to its members for 10 pounds each, or about $28, including breakfast and lunch.

The club with the largest stand will be the Naval and Military in Piccadilly. Its site includes a courtyard. There will be enough room for 1,000 persons at a little over 12 pounds—more than $33—a person. As customary, the price includes breakfast, luncheon and champagne.

A few of the clubs figure to make a handsome profit, but most of the club owners, according to the London press, think they will be lucky to break even on expenses.

Commercial agencies thought they could make a cleanup by boosting the price of seats sky high. Higher than those for the club members, even.

The agencies have tried to take over the entire stands belonging to some of the clubs. As much as 25,000 pounds has been offered for a simple stand, which is a heap of money translated on the way. All of these offers have been turned down by the Coronation Committee.

At our own inauguration here in Washington, about the only persons to figure even to make expenses are the folks who sell peanuts, crackerjack, pennants, soda pop, and souvenirs.

Plus, of course, the hotels.

THAT'S GRATITUDE

ROYAL OAK, Mich. (UP)—Mrs. H. J. Pinkerton had a soft spot in her heart for wayward dogs until she provided shelter for a vagabond Boston bull. She was forced to call police the next day when the dog bared its teeth and refused to let her enter her house.

Training In Air Defense Is Major Job

By WILLIAM H. BURSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
BLOXI, Miss. (UP)—A sergeant who couldn't have been more than 20 pushed what looked like a miniature hat rack with numbers hanging from its arms across a gigantic table map of the Gulf states.

"That represents a flight of 82 enemy planes approaching Mobile, Ala., at 7,000 feet," he explained. "And this one is a squadron of our interceptors rising to meet them."

He was getting his information from a slender teen-aged airman huddled over a bright radar scope alive with blue and green blips in a darkened but next door. Other young men stood at giant charts translating the electronic impulses into planes, miles and times. Outside radar antennae which looked like giant hayrakes whirled furiously.

These youths are among the 13,000 mere boys who are getting men's training at Keesler Air Force Base here to safeguard the United States against another Pearl Harbor. When they have learned their lessons they will be assigned places in the nation's growing air warning system and chances are one of them may sound the alarm if and when the United States is attacked by an enemy air force.

The average age here is 18 and a half years. The airmen look like prep school cadets marching between classes. Some of them still are troubled by voices which have not completely changed. Many of them, were it not for regulations, would not have to shave daily. Most of them have never cast ballots.

"They are boys in years but they're learning to do men's jobs and learning them well," said Maj. Gen. James F. Powell, commandant of this compact, little-heralded base just a radar blip away from the bright lights and glitter of Mississippi's "Gold Coast."

Keesler's task is to produce the personnel who constitute the "nerve system" of the Air Force—the essential electronics and communications specialists. It turns out radar specialists, radio operators and control tower personnel. But its most important job now is to train the men who will rob any enemy sneak attack of surprise.

"The job of the men trained here is to get the right plane to the right place at the right time and to keep the wrong ones away," explained Col. Thomas E. Powell, commandant of the 3380th Technical Training Group. "Unfortunately it doesn't have the 'wide blue yonder' glamor of other phases of the Air Force."

Half a billion dollars worth of equipment has been crowded into hangars converted into classrooms to meet the growing demands of electronics specialists. A gigantic building program is underway to expand the base capacity to 45,000 students.

Single pieces of equipment—like the gadget which simulates the enemy planes for student radar scopes—cost $1,000,000. One of the giant radar installations being spotted throughout this hemisphere and capable of detecting aircraft as far away as 500 miles costs $386,000.

Basic electronics training takes 22 weeks and specialization requires twice that. The airmen attend six hours of lectures and laboratory work daily and put in an equal number at study. Approximately 30 per cent of them wash out.

They are not conscious of their youth, however, for the average age of their 3,500 enlisted instructors is 19 and one-half years—a fact resulting from an acute personnel problem.

When General Powell came here two and a half years ago the base was using civilian instructors and was losing them to the higher salaries offered by civilian electronics firms as fast as they were indoctrinated. So he decided to train his own teachers.

"And that's what we did and are doing," he explained. "We take the top men in each class and plow them back in as teachers of the next class. We're getting results we never dreamed possible and at a saving to the taxpayer."

The graying commandant, who expects to retire next year, is proud of his youthful charges.

"It takes a young man to keep up with our fast-moving world," he said.

Killer-Bear Has Eluded Traps

CHATEAU, Mont. (AP)—A plundering killer has been stalking the outlying areas of this quiet town. Authorities believe the murderer of 32 sheep in a week is a grizzly bear because it killed six bucks during one night—something that a black or brown bear would not do.

U.S. Government Trapper Romy McCallum found a large track he believes is a grizzly's. Traps and decoys have so far proved to no avail against the wary bear.

When local men went after him at night, the bear disappeared. When two sheep were put out as decoys, the bear killed the sheep while rain forced the hunters to seek shelter.

Personal To Women With Naggng Backache

Naggng backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness may be due to slow-down of kidney function. Doctors say good kidney function is very important to good health. When some everyday condition, such as stress and strain, causes this important function to slow down, many folks suffer nagging backache—feel miserable. Minor bladder irritations due to cold or wrong diet may cause getting up nights or frequent passages. Don't neglect your kidneys if these conditions bother you. Try Doan's Pills—a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. It's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief from these discomforts—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Tank Truck Fleets Used To Stop Fires On Farm

AP Newsfeatures
FLEETS OF TANK TRUCKS are putting an end to the farmers' despair over fire throughout rural America. The trucks enable rural fire departments to bring their own water along to isolated fires. New water trucks carrying 500 to 700 gallons are designed to go down narrow roads or across fields where larger converted oil trucks may be mired. In other cases produce trucks carry milk cans filled with water. The National Board of Fire Underwriters sees these fleets giving 11 million farmers a greater chance to reduce their $100 million in annual fire loss plus hundreds of lives.

HERE tankers and trucks loaded with water-filled milk cans supply pumper with enough water to fight blaze.

HANDICAPPED by lack of water, this farmer saw the fire get a good start and destroy his barn.

Radar Trap Nabs 400 Speedsters

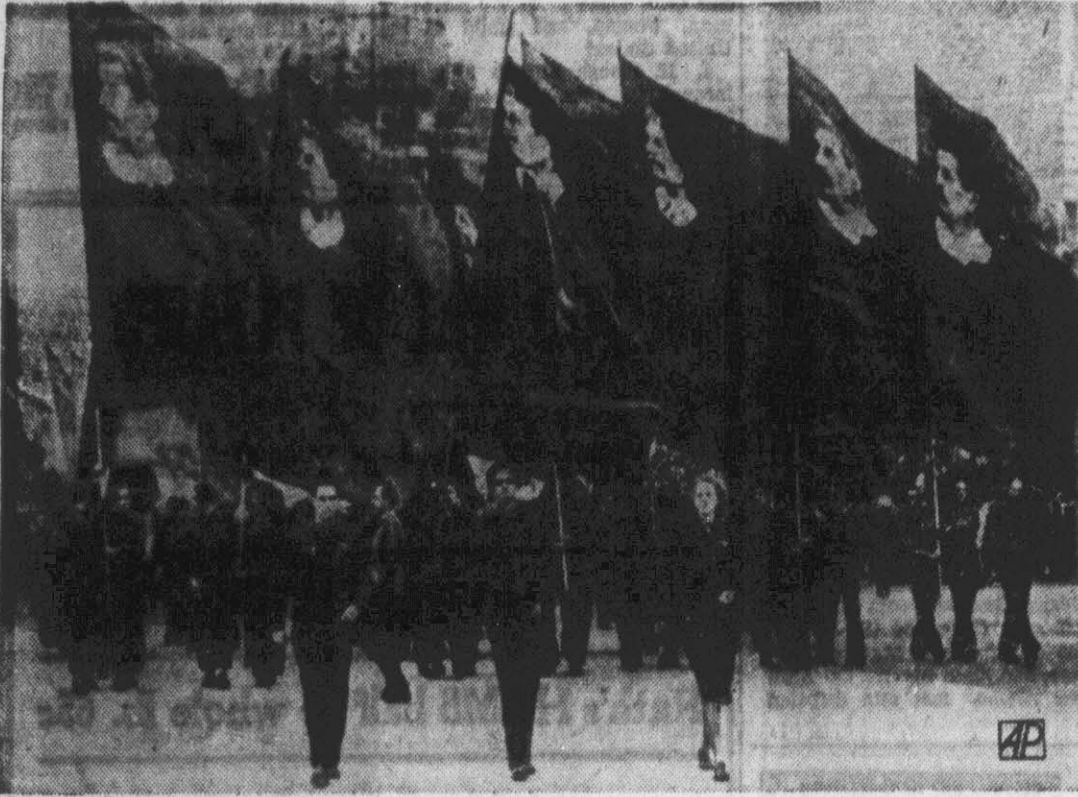

GREENFIELD, Ind. (AP)—Police, trying out radar equipment to catch speeders, caught 400 in just one evening, then called the whole thing off.

Mayor James L. Allen announced that traffic on busy U.S. 40 would be stopped in another way—by adding two stoplights.

His Conscience Gets Taxpayer

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP)—Deputy Taxation Commissioner J. A. Neale received $1,200 in an envelope with an accompanying letter signed "Anon. Conscientious."

Neale said it was the largest he had received since his appointment last year. The largest amount ever received was about $2,000 15 years ago.

Sen. Smith Hits Villification Of Ike In Campaign

ASHEBORO. (UP)—Democratic slogans and appeals echoed in Republican Randolph County today following a rally here yesterday. Sen. Willis Smith warned that the campaign is "degrading into name-calling, abuse and vilification." Smith said he objected to abuse of Gen. Dwight Eisenhower "who has served his country so well." But he said he intends "to support the Democratic party, unless, in the years ahead, I see I cannot continue to do so."

Rep. Harold Cooley said Eisenhower is unfamiliar with all-important farm problems. "They asked him how he stood on parity, you know," Cooley said. "You know what he said? He said, 'who is he?'"

Boys Admit To Sending Train Off Its Track

GRAHAM (UP)—Two nine-year-old boys have confessed to sending an eastbound passenger train off its main track onto a mill siding, police said here today.

Sheriff C. H. Moore said the boys broke the lock on the switch at the siding, opened it and sent the slowing moving train through a cyclone fence before it stopped just short of the mill's loading platform.

Moore said it could have been "one of the worst tragedies ever to hit Alamance County." Moore said if the train had been moving fast or if certain minor conditions had not existed to keep the train on its track, there might have been many people killed.

Steel shares as a group led the modest decline. Losses, however, were small in this group. Fractional declines were noted in Bethlehem Steel and U.S. Steel. Automotives were backward as Chrysler declined 1/8 to 80 and General Motors was down 1/8 to 59.

Mossadegh Will Sever Relations With England

TEHRAN, Iran, (UP)—Premier Mohammed Mossadegh announced today he has decided to sever diplomatic relations with Britain.

Mossadegh did not indicate exactly how or when the break would be made. But authoritative sources said earlier he intended to withdraw Iran's mission from London at once and give the British 10 days to close their Tehran embassy.

He made the announcement in a radio broadcast after a parliamentary session which he was to have addressed was cancelled because a quorum was not present.

The aged premier said he had taken the fateful decision because Iran had gained nothing through normal relations with Britain.

He said he hoped British authorities would recognize their mistakes so relations could be resumed in a friendly and cooperative spirit.

Mossadegh's announcement came less than 48 hours after Britain rejected his latest demands for a settlement of the long-smouldering Anglo-Iranian oil dispute.

Britain refused either to pay Iran $137,200,000 in disputed oil royalties or to send another negotiating mission to Tehran at this time. The British demanded that the countries submit their conflicting claims to the world court for arbitration.

The dispute stems from Iran's summary cancellation of the British-owned Anglo-Iranian Oil Co.'s 60-year concession and its nationalization of all Iranian property of the company. The concession was to have run until 1933.

Mossadegh had a long conference with Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi before he went before the microphone. The Shah was believed to have opposed a break with Britain.

In his 90-minute broadcast today Mossadegh said Britain was illegally supporting the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. and imposing difficulties so "British agents can promote Iran's chaotic state to their own ends."

He said the severance of diplomatic relations need not end friendly British-Iranian relations because "the Iranian nation always looks with respect on the British nation, hopes British authorities will appreciate the true world situation resumption of diplomatic relations, can cooperate and benefit by friendly relations."

As Mossadegh made his broadcast, Foreign Minister Hossein Fatemi said the government had put the northern suburbs of Tehran under martial law for one week. Many of last year's Tudeh (Communist) party demonstrations were organized there.

Funeral Set Friday For Mrs. Levi Tripp

Four-Legged Friend Of Law Helped In Arrest

Cases Heard In City Police Court

By CHESTER WALSH
In Police Court Wednesday, Roosevelt Roberson, Negro, learned that he was in a lot of trouble without a license to drive a motor vehicle in North Carolina.

Judge Charles H. Whedbee found Roberson guilty of driving without an operator's license, and gave him 30 days on the roads. Sentence was suspended on payment of $25 and costs. The court gave Roberson 60 days on the roads for careless and reckless driving. In this case sentence was suspended on payment of $25, costs deducted. The court's judgment provides that he is not to drive a motor vehicle for six months, unless he has a driver's license.

Worthless check: Duncan P. Smith (three charges), prayer for judgment continued on payment of court costs.

Driving drunk: Henry L. Braxton, $100 fine and costs. William J. Donaldson, $100 and costs. Conviction of driving while drunk automatically causes the defendant's driver's license to be revoked for a year.

Carraza Wilson, Negro, improper turning, 30 days in jail, sentence suspended on payment of $5 on court costs and he is to make restitution for property damage.

Joe D. Beverly paid $10 for failure to yield right of way.

Albert Lee Smith, Negro, drunk, 30 days in jail, sentence suspended on payment of $15.

Elijah Jackson, careless and reckless driving, three months on the roads, sentence suspended on payment of $50, costs deducted. The judgment also provides that Braxton is not to operate a motor vehicle for six months, and remain of good behavior and not violate any law for a year.

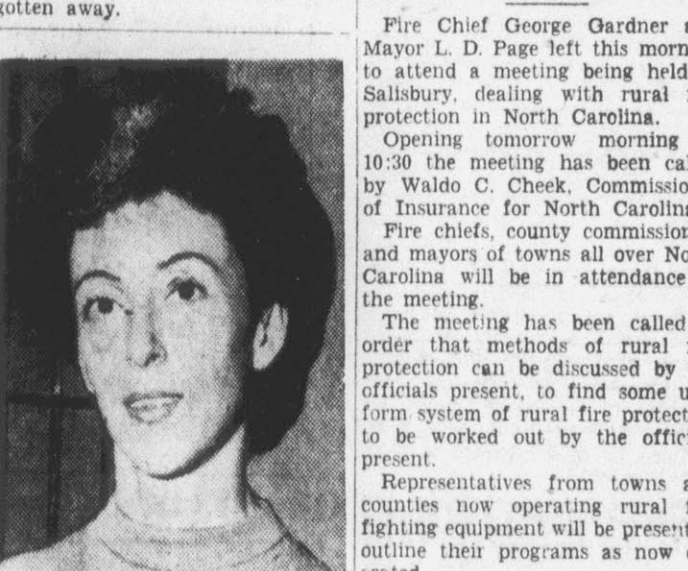

This kept up for some time; and acting on a hunch, the officer circled around the fence from the other side.

Both came up to the fence and looked down into a drainage ditch along whose bottom a Negro man was crawling.

Bringing the man out of the ditch they questioned him, discovering his reason for running was because his driver's license had been revoked. His name, Roosevelt Braxton, 23, of Route 4, Greenville.

In court, the judge placed a $200 fine and court costs on the man for his violation.

Had the man not acted strangely, possible the officers would not have decided to stop him. And again, had it not been for that four-legged friend of the law, he might have gotten away.

DIVORCEE HELD:—Mrs. Emily Bruce, 31, a divorcee, is shown in her cell in Atlanta, Ga., where she is being held on a murder charge. Detectives H. P. Brown and W. E. Petty said the former federal government secretary, in a statement she typed out herself, admitted she drowned her 22-months-old son, Tommy, in a bathtub after she became infatuated with an attorney who defended her second husband on a car theft charge a year ago. "I just lost my mind over him," she was quoted as saying. Mrs. Bruce was arrested after the baby was found floating in a bathtub. (AP Photo).

Jaycees To Hold Meeting Tonight

The regular semi-monthly meeting of Greenville Jaycees will be held at the Old Towne Inn tonight at 6:30. Club President Charles Horne announced this morning.

Following the dinner, Horne said, a short business session will be held. At that time reports on the annual Jaycee Home Show held at Guy Smith Stadium last Sunday will be made.

The president urged that all members attend the meeting.

Seawell Talks In Alamance Rally

BURLINGTON, (UP)—Herbert Seawell of Carthage, Republican candidate for governor, will address an Alamance County Republican rally in Snow Camp Oct. 23.

County Republican leaders said some 700 to 1,000 persons are expected for the event which will be one of the largest GOP rallies in the current campaign.

Could Have Had Home For Nickel

READING, Mass. (UP)—A two-and-a-half story house valued at $7,500 was placed on the auction block Wednesday with the stipulation that the successful bidder must move it to make way for a new school.

No one showed up for the sale and an amazed town official said: "It could have been bought for a dollar or even a nickel."

Find Barn Owl In Swank Hotel

NEW YORK (UP)—The fashion-able Hotel New Yorker was thrown into an uproar Wednesday when an uninvited and unregistered "guest" was found in Room 2752. The guest turned out to be a tyto alba, better known as the American barn owl.

The American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals said the brown and white owl with a four-foot wingspread, flew in the open 27th floor window. Society agents took the bird to a city park.

Fire Announced, They Only Smile

BEDFORD, Ind. (AP)— Nobody knows who started it, but for years a common practice joke here has been an excited announcement that the courthouse is on fire.

So, when Bob Abel dashed into the Bedford National Bank and shouted, "The courthouse is on fire, call the fire department!" everybody just grinned.

AYDEN—Mrs. P. Gardner was hostess to the Eva J. Louis Alumni Chapter on October 9 at her home.

AYDEN—A 61-year-old Pitt County farmer shot himself to death with a .32 calibre pistol near here early this morning. Coroner Griffin H. House reported today.

According to the coroner, the body of Jesse R. Smith, white, was found in a tobacco grading room on the farm of Frank Hart. Smith's wife discovered the body at approximately 6:15 this morning.

Smith had shot himself through the right temple, the bullet passing completely through his head and emerging from the left side of the skull.

He was still breathing when found. Rouse stated, and his wife, called a doctor. Smith was still alive when the doctor arrived and he was rushed to the hospital, but was pronounced dead on arrival.

No reason was given for the self-inflicted wound, and no inquest will be held.

The deceased is survived by his wife, two sons and one daughter.
