Urge Coal Miners To End Tie-Up

Cool Response To Operators' Plea; Some 350,000 Men Staying Home

By UNITED PRESS Soft coal mine operators urged their striking miners to come back to the pits today and end a mass protest walkout that mushroomed when the government chopped 40 cents off the workers' latest pay raise.

John L. Lewis called the 200-man policy committee of his United Mine Workers union to a meeting tomorrow in Washington to discuss the "rank and file" strikers.

Miner reaction to the operators' request that they return to work was cool. And it was not likely that large numbers of the some 350,000 idle coal diggers would respond until they got some word from Lewis.

A check of the soft coal fields yesterday showed that at least 350,000 miners stayed home from their jobs, honoring their principle of "no contract, no work."

The UMW recently negotiated a $1.90 daily pay boost, but when a delayed Wage Stabilization Board ruling finally came through Saturday it lopped off 40 cents.

Harry M. Moses, president of the Bituminous Coal Operators Association and chief industry negotiator, wrote Lewis yesterday that Northern operators are willing to start paying the miners the scaled-down $1.50 raise immediately.

He asked Lewis to "strongly urge our employees to return to work so that our contract may be carried out to the extent permitted by law."

The Southern coal producers did not join in the plea, but they traditionally follow the lead of the Northern operators in such matters.

Meanwhile, violence flared briefly at Grundy, Va., where the UMW is picketing mines which are operating with non-union employees.

Sheriff Ishmael Fletcher said that six shots were fired from a wooded hill into a cabin housing pants of the house returned the fire. Fletcher said the attackers were "presumably" striking UMW workers.

In Uniontown, Pa., a coal leader of the Robena mine of U. S. Steel Co. said he was ready to sit it out until he got the full $1.90 raise.

A miner at the Vesta mine of Jones and Laughlin Steel Co. near Brownsville, Pa., said it was "all or nothing."

"Every time we fool around with the government, we get fooled up," a digger at the Harwick, Pa., mine of the Duquesne Light Co. growled.

A pit miner at Harlan, Ky., said, "Harry Truman double-crossed us."

"If Harry had been in Washington instead of politicking, we would have gotten our raise," another said.

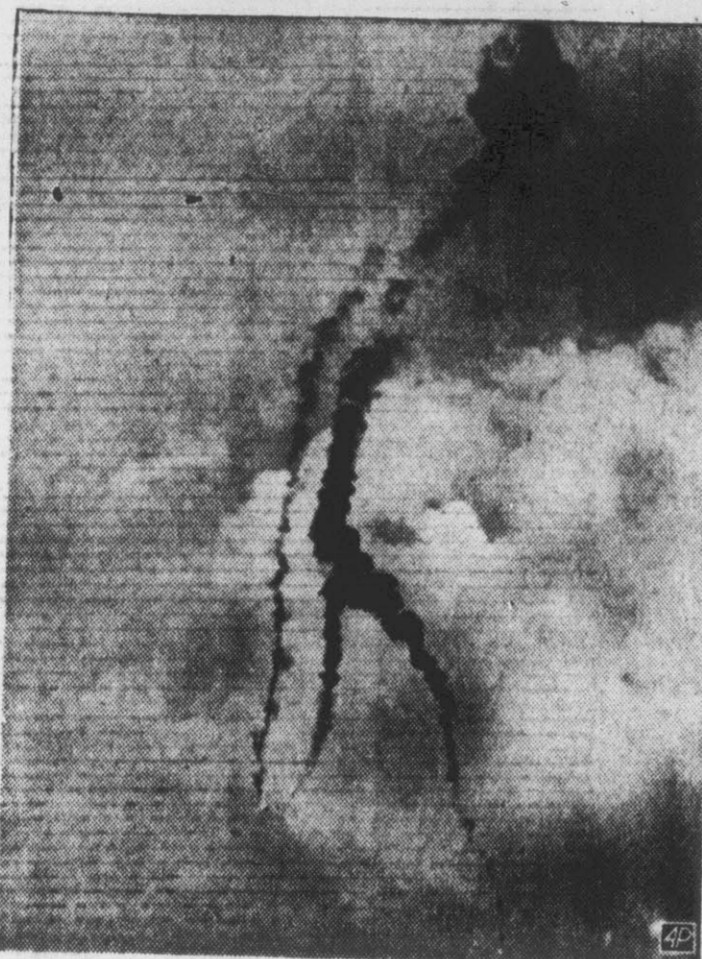

There were some dissident voices among the men.

"I think if the miners could take the cut, maybe everything would be all right," one Uniontown miner said hopefully. He was worried about his wife and three children.

"If the government wants us to work for a $1.50 increase, I think we should," said a digger at the Library works of the Pittsburgh Consolidated Coal Co.

Lewis, for the time being was keeping mum. He had issued no strike call and neither had the local leaders. The strike was apparently a genuine rank-and-file protest.

Block Red Move In UN Debate Of Germ Warfare

U. S. Deters Russian Move To Call In North Korea And Red China

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—The United States today blocked a Russian attempt to issue an immediate invitation to North Korea and Communist China to take part in United Nations debates on germ warfare.

The U. S. did this through a procedural motion shutting off debate immediately after the 15-nation steering committee had voted, 12-2 with President Lester B. Pearson of Canada not voting, to recommend inclusion of an American request for U. N. investigation of Red germ warfare charges on the Assembly agenda.

The adjournment of debate motion was carried 11-2 (Poland and Russia) with one abstention and Pearson not voting.

Russia's Andrei Gromyko called this a "cowardly move" and served notice that he would raise the subject again on the floor of the Assembly or in committee when the item came up.

Before the germ warfare wrangle broke out, Poland charged that the United States had deliberately sabotaged the truce talks at Panmunjom and called on the Assembly itself to find a speedy solution to the Korean war.

Polish Foreign Minister Stanislaw Skrzyszewski's speech, urging that the Assembly take up the question, left little doubt that the Communists consider discussion here a substitute for the talks at the front.

After U. S. Delegates Ernest Gross said this country did not oppose U. N. airing of the Korean question and other sections of the catch-all Polish "peace plan," the committee unanimously recommended its inclusion on the Assembly agenda.

Reds Building Up For New Assault

Calls Meeting On Fire Sub-Station

Mayor Believes Work Can Be Done For Less Than Was Bid

GREENVILLE, N. C. (AP)—About 1,500 Chinese Reds attacked in a blinding rainstorm tonight in a renewed assault on mud-coated Sniper Ridge.

The Communists struck under cover of an intense artillery and mortar barrage. But South Koreans held them at bay with heavy rifle and artillery fire.

An officer predicted the Red attack would build up during the night. It was aimed at Pinpoint Hill, highest peak on the ridge.

"They came down the ridge from the north," the officer said. "We can't use flares because of the overcast and rain."

The night was so dark the South Koreans couldn't see the Chinese almost upon them.

An ominous quiet hung over nearby Triangle Hill where U. S. Seventh Division troops awaited an expected Chinese onslaught.

Some 20 miles to the east, South Korean troops battled to within 40 yards of the crest of Iron Horse Mountain at noon today. They pulled back, however, because their supporting tanks could not find their targets through heavy fog that covered the valley floor.

A chill rain fell across the battlefield.

Overcast skies grounded U. N. warplanes.

Reports from the front said the Reds lost more than 7,500 men killed or wounded in the first week of fighting on Triangle and Sniper Ridge.

Seventh Division officers said the Reds suffered 4,640 casualties on Triangle alone.

These estimates brought reported Communist casualties for October to more than 25,000.

All-weather B26 Invader bombers last night attacked two Red supply concentrations in North Korea. Pilots reported 20 explosions—probably ammunition—at one of the targets north of Pyongyang.

ROKs Hold Enemy At Bay From Mud-Coated Ridge; Ominous Quiet Over Triangle Hill; Reds Have Lost 7,500 Men During Week's Battle

Traffic Death Is Ninth For Year

Tenant Farmer Killed On Walking Into Auto's Path

A 55-year-old Negro man was killed last night as he walked into the path of an automobile, raising Pitt's traffic fatality toll for the year to nine.

Ashley Page, tenant farmer of Route 5, Greenville, was killed instantly around seven o'clock last night on the Paeolus highway, four and one-half miles from Greenville.

Patrolman James W. Boykin, investigating officer, reported that a car operated by Derwood Otis Stancel, 52 of Washington, N. C. was traveling in the direction of Washington from Greenville when the man was killed.

The driver was quoted as saying that Page was walking about three feet on the highway, and as the car was cut to miss the man, he moved directly into its path.

The force of the impact sent the body some 20 feet along the road. Coroner Griffin H. Rouse, who ruled that an inquest will be held Wednesday night at 7:30 in the court house, released the driver without bond.

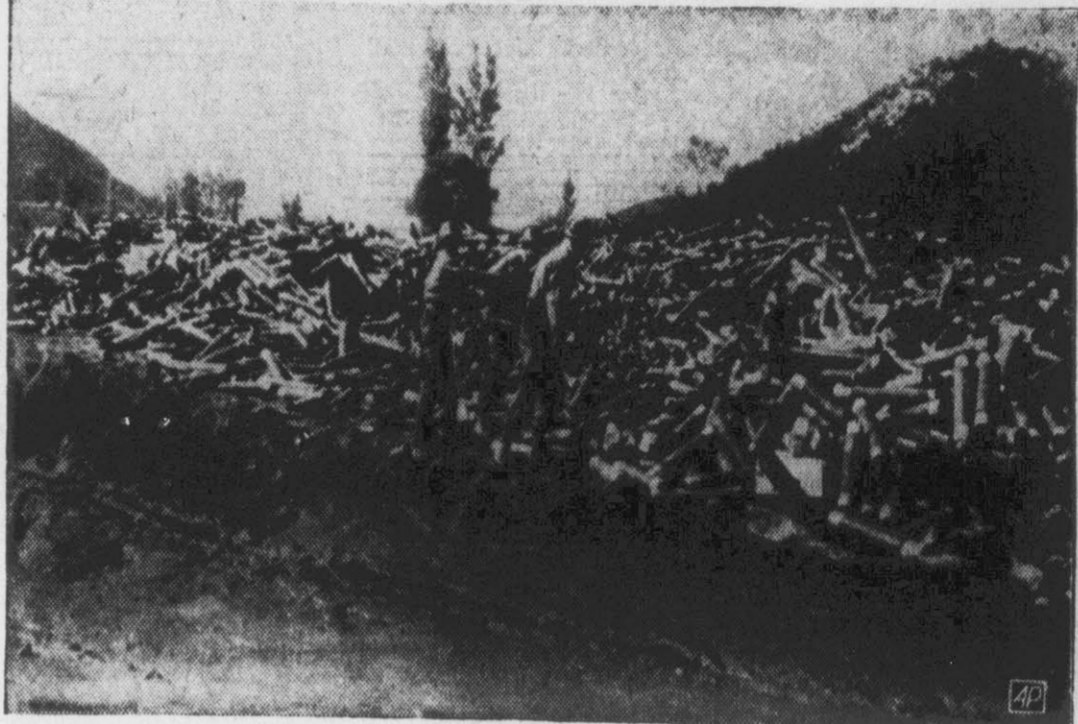

Rouse stated that Page died either from a head or neck injury; either one could have killed him. His entire body was broken by the impact, the coroner stated.

When struck, Page was walking with his wife, who was not injured in the accident.

Boykin reported that the woman was in such a state of shock she could not give an account of the accident and the officers had not been able to talk with her.

Pile Of Headaches For Reds

ABC Officer Is Leaving Agency

Claude Manning's Resignation Is Effective Today

CLAUDE MANNING Former ABC Officer

This certainly has been a bad week for local law enforcement agencies.

Coming only a few hours after Police Chief Guy Langston submitted his resignation to Mayor Lester D. Page, Claude Manning, local ABC officer, announced he is leaving that department.

Effective as of today, Manning is leaving the ABC force after six years to enter private business. He plans to take over the operation of a service station at the corner of Third and Cotanche Streets.

After serving in the Marines four years during World War II Manning joined the ABC force in 1946 and has served with that department uninterruptedly since that time.

Regarding Manning's resignation, J.M. Ward said today, "We hate to see him resign because he has made us a mighty good man."

Ward reported that thus far, there are no applications for the job being vacated by Manning.

The retiring officer's resignation leaves one vacancy in the department. The Pitt County ABC force was organized in 1935 and J.M. Ward and J.L. Taylor have

Angry Eisenhower In New England

Scarlet Thread Of Anger Runs Through His Speeches Against Truman Administration; Enthusiastic Crowds Turn Out Despite Weather

By DON WHITEHEAD ABOARD EISENHOWER SPECIAL IN NEW ENGLAND (AP)—An angry and bitter Dwight D. Eisenhower drove his presidential campaign through New England today accusing the Truman administration of trying to capture the presidency with lies and slander.

Pushing himself and those around him at a machine-gun pace, the GOP presidential candidate put aside lofty appeals for the most part in favor of ramrod counterattacks against the Democrats.

Through virtually every speech he made in this industrial Northeast ran a scarlet thread of anger against his one-time friend, President Truman and charges he said have been made against him and his party.

Eisenhower was drawing big and enthusiastic crowds at each stop. Even snow flurries and cold winds failed to drive the people indoors.

Late yesterday—as Eisenhower was running behind schedule—crowds waited in the cold for more than an hour to see him and hear him talk.

He spoke in some cities where Truman spoke last week and although Truman had the better of it in weather, police figured the general was out in front on crowd-pulling appeal.

Police estimated the two broke about even on crowd sizes in Providence, R. I., 12,000 and Worcester, Mass., 8,000, but they said that in Fall River, Mass., and Taunton, Mass., Eisenhower had out-pulled Truman 2-1 in each city—10,000 to 5,000.

Eisenhower got his biggest responses when he assailed the Democratic administration. He was making liberal use of such words as "lies" and "falsehoods" and "corruption" and "distortions." He was fighting to smother whatever Democratic fires Truman might have started on his swing through this same area last week.

The politically doubtful state of Massachusetts again was the main Eisenhower target today. After an opening speech in Manchester, N.H., he was to speak in Boston at noon and then fly to New York City late in the day for an evening address before the New York Herald Tribune Forum.

Yesterday he began his last-lap campaign with 12 speeches and he had another seven on the schedule for today. And there was no sign he intended to slacken this pace before election eve regardless of weather.

The GOP presidential candidate opened this final phase of his campaign by saying that he intended to discuss throughout New England the relationship between world peace and American prosperity.

On this theme he said that the cornerstone of peace must be a strong America—strong economically, spiritually, militarily.

Truman Denies 'Soft' Attitude

Says Demos Rooting Out Reds; Scoffs Civil Right Parley

EN ROUTE WITH TRUMAN (UP)—President Truman bitterly assailed the Republicans today for "spreading the outrageous falsehood" that his administration has been "soft toward Communism."

Mr. Truman also scoffed at Dwight D. Eisenhower's plan to call a conference of governors to discuss the touchy civil rights issue. He said the Republican presidential nominee: "He obviously does not know the hard facts of life" about civil rights and "doesn't know what it takes to get something done in this field."

Setting forth on his third whistle-stop tour of the campaign, the President said Democrats have fought Communism successfully both at home and abroad. And he asserted that the Reds would be "delighted" to have the Republicans win the November elections "because Communism thrives on reaction and depression."

Mr. Truman left Washington aboard his special train early today for a three-day rail and auto tour of Delaware, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and West Virginia. He will arrive this afternoon in Philadelphia and tonight will be at Pottsville, Pa.

In his address prepared for delivery at Jersey City, N. J., he said the GOP has resorted to "every propaganda technique" in an effort to put over "the big lie" that Democrats are soft toward Communism.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. John Sparkman found his voice gone today and called off a planned trip to Rocky Mount, N. C., for a campaign speech.

The Democratic vice presidential nominee, hoping the laryngitis condition would clear up over night, scheduled a plane flight at 8 a. m. (EST) tomorrow to Anderson, S. C. He has engagements to speak at a luncheon in Anderson tomorrow noon and at a rally in Atlanta tomorrow night.

In another attack on things that Eisenhower has said during the campaign, Stevenson said: "He says our diplomats are incompetent, but formerly he worked enthusiastically to carry out the policies of these same diplomats with no hint that he regarded them as unfit."

Power Plant Case Is Again Before Court

WASHINGTON—A four-year controversy over who should build a power plant at Roanoke Rapids, N. C., comes before the Supreme Court this week.

The court agreed in May to decide whether the federal government or private industry is to build the plant on the Roanoke River near the North Carolina-Virginia line. Just when the arguments will be heard is uncertain, but they may come Wednesday afternoon.

Secretary of Interior Chapman has appealed a decision by the U. S. Circuit Court which approved a Federal Power Commission ruling that Virginia Electric and Power Co., should construct the plant.

The Supreme Court's decision is expected to have direct bearing on who will build a similar plant at Gaston, N. C., where the same company also seeks a construction license from the commission.

Chapman says the government should build both plants. He put it this way: "The whole question is whether the federal government can develop a river basin plan and follow through on the entire basin. If this case stands on the commission order or VEPCO to build the Roanoke Rapids dam, whenever

Adlai On Last Big Talk Tour

Declares Eisenhower Is Leading Party With No Policy Or Program

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UP)—Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson began his last big campaign trip today after picturing Dwight D. Eisenhower as a sort of split personality leading a party with no policy or program.

Stevenson told a crowd of about 5,000 persons Monday night that Eisenhower was waging a campaign of "expediency" because his party has "no policy, no program and no real faith in the future of America."

The Democratic presidential candidate said Eisenhower shifted his opinions from day to day and asked "which general are we supposed to believe?"

For his final campaign tour Stevenson dropped his airplane "propeller-stop" technique and aimed an old-fashioned railroad "whistle-stop" trip at 12 eastern states with a lucrative total of 206 electoral votes.

The itinerary, which winds up with a large party rally in Chicago the night of Nov. 1, runs through Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware and West Virginia.

On his way to Chicago today he will make stops at Decatur and Champaign. Once in the Windy City he will appear on another of his nationwide radio-television "fire-side chats."

The Illinois governor left on his last big trip expressing confidence in a Democratic victory "if the people can clearly see and understand their choices."

He said the Democrats offer "confidence and faith in our destiny, expanding our economy, extending the social gains of the last 20 years and building up the strength of the free world against the day of peace and security and disarmament in the world."

Stevenson opened up on Eisenhower before a near capacity crowd in the Springfield Armory.

"Some days the general seems to stand with the Democrats for positive action at home to prevent depression and improve the freedom and security of our people," he said.

"But on other days, and these seem to be in the majority, the general stoutly advocates the election of all the Republican senators and congressmen who vote against just such positive foreign and domestic policies."

He accused Eisenhower, in effect, of insincerity in some of the major issues like inflation, social security, foreign aid and Communism.

"For a time," he said, "he told the crowds that inflation was the result of administration fumbling but now he says it is the 'deliberate policy' of the government."

"He said that Communists in government were the result of incompetent, loose security policies. Then he expanded this one and directly implied that the federal government is deliberately concealing more Communists."

"But, he doesn't say anything when Gen. Belvid Smith, the head of the Central Intelligence Agency, says that the country has nothing to fear if the next President can do as good a job of keeping Communists out of government as Harry Truman."

In another attack on things that Eisenhower has said during the campaign, Stevenson said: "He says our diplomats are incompetent, but formerly he worked enthusiastically to carry out the policies of these same diplomats with no hint that he regarded them as unfit."

Republicans Call For Presidential Apology

WASHINGTON (UP)—Republican leaders said today nothing short of a "personal apology" to Dwight D. Eisenhower will make amends for President Truman's "unfortunate attempt to introduce bigotry" into the election campaign.

They rejected as inadequate the statement which Mr. Truman issued late Monday, denying that he called Eisenhower anti-Catholic and anti-Jewish.

The bitter controversy centered around a message which Mr. Truman sent last Friday to the National Jewish Welfare Board. He accused the Republican presidential candidate of "moral blindness" or endorsing GOP senators who, Mr. Truman said, had displayed anti-Catholic and anti-Jewish feelings by supporting the McCarran immigration bill.

In his "characteristic" statement, Mr. Truman said Republicans were trying to "distort his message into a charge of religious bias" against Eisenhower. He said he knows that Eisenhower "is neither anti-Jewish nor anti-Catholic." But he said he will "not withdraw" or "soften" his criticism of the GOP "for its support of senators who have with so-called 'master race' faculty."

Republicans for the Republicans, Rep. Conrad W. Hall (N.Y.) said in the U. S. House of Representatives. He called the charge "no amount of explaining" will change the fact that Mr. Truman made a "below the belt attack" on Eisenhower. "The President was deliberately smearing the general, and he knew it," Hall said.

Hall added that he does not expect Mr. Truman to extend such an apology because he "long ago discarded all standards of decency in political campaigning."

Sen. Pat McCarran (D-Nev.), co-author of the controversial new immigration law, accused both Republicans and Democrats of "misrepresenting" the law to win votes of the minority groups.

"The American people are witnessing a shameful display of demagoguery with reference to the immigration and naturalization act," McCarran said in a statement.

He said both Eisenhower and Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson "have been misled" about immigration quotas assigned by the new law. He said it uses the same quota system that has been in effect since 1924.

Mr. Truman pointed out that Sen. Richard M. Nixon (R-Calif.) the GOP vice presidential nominee, and Sens. William E. Jenner (R-Ind.) and Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis.) voted to override his veto of the McCarran bill.

He said Eisenhower has "embraced" Jenner and McCarthy, along with ex-Sen. Chapman Revercomb of West Virginia.

He called Revercomb "the champion of the anti-Catholic, anti-Jewish provision" of the original legislation and said the original displaced persons law which was superseded by the McCarran bill.

Four Democrats For One GOP Is A 'Good Trade'

WASHINGTON (UP)—Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn.) says he'll gladly swap four Southern Democratic leaders for Sen. Wayne Morse (R-Ore.).

"I will trade Shivers, Kurnon, Byrd and Byrnes for Morse any day," Humphrey told reporters yesterday. "It's a healthy thing to separate conservatives from liberals."

The Southern Democrats he referred to are Govs. Allan Shivers of Texas, James F. Byrnes of South Carolina, and Robert F. Kennon of Louisiana who are supporting Republican presidential candidate Dwight D. Eisenhower, and Sen. Harry F. Byrd of Virginia who refused to endorse the Democratic ticket but has not said how he will vote.

Francis Lee Neel Speaks To Members Of Local D.A.R.

Francis Lee Neel, acting director of the department of art at East Carolina College, was guest speaker at the Benjamin May Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution meeting in Greenville, Saturday, October 11.

Mrs. J. Vance Perkins, Mrs. T. E. Hooker and Miss Eunice McGee were hostesses at the home of Mrs. Perkins on East 5th Street.

Mrs. Ellen Lewis Carroll, regent, presided and heard reports from the chairmen of committees. Mrs. Louise Harris asked that clothes for the Crossnore School be prepared for collection, October 14. A report of the district meeting in Mt. Olive was given by Mrs. Hooker.

Mrs. Carroll suggested that the women of the chapter take steps to encourage all farm people to register and vote. Mrs. J. O. Pollard, Defense Chairman, urged all members to vote and Mrs. John B. Wright, Jr., stated that flags would be used at polling places, November 4, and suggested that a bridge party be held at the Chapter House after the luncheon on November 4. Members voted in favor of the party.

Mr. Neel, who has exhibited his work at the Sheppard Memorial Library and at the Annual Pitt County Community Arts Festival, recently won a major prize for his painting, "Color and Design" in an art exhibition at the Missouri State Fair.

Mr. Neel has traveled extensively in the interest of art, and his last trip was taken to Mexico. In referring to his Mexican trip, he stated that the country had majestic pyramids and described the beautiful mural paintings of that country. The artist spoke mainly on the subject of early American art, explaining that the first settlers of this country were too busy making a livelihood and protecting themselves from the Indians to spend much time in creative arts.

Home Missionary To Address Group Here Thursday

Mrs. Patsy Bratton Turner, renowned missionary on the Home Missions field, will address the Women of the First Presbyterian Church on Thursday, October 23, at 3:00 p.m.

Mrs. Turner, who is visiting churches in this Presbytery, has spent many years working with the mountain folk of Kentucky. She is a native of Virginia, who early in life answered the call to serve on the home mission field. She went to Kentucky in 1913 and has remained there ever since. She has built churches, schools and hospitals in the community where she lives, and delights in recounting some of her experiences for the many audiences which she addresses each year.

During the month of October, which is being emphasized as Home Missions week in this Presbytery, Mrs. Turner will visit churches in Tarboro, Wilson, Kinston, Goldsboro, Farmville, Washington and Rocky Mount, in addition to Greenville.

No one who has ever heard her talk about her work can wonder that she is in such demand as a Home Missions speaker, one commentator said. In spicy, vivid language, bubbling over with love, she paints pictures of her people and her work. Deeply spiritual and with a great love for her work, she is coming to share with women of the local church some of her experiences.

Mrs. John King Bridge Club Hostess

FARMVILLE — A lovely bridge party was given Wednesday afternoon of last week, when Mrs. John King entertained members of the Wednesday Afternoon Bridge Club and twenty other guests at the D.A.R. Chapter House.

A fall color scheme of red, green and yellow was artfully and beautifully carried in the decorations used in the Chapter House. Magnolia leaf greenery was used as a background setting for arrangements of red berries, red gladioli and yellow chrysanthemums. The hostess greeted the guests and presented each with a nosegay of yellow pom-pom chrysanthemums, red rose centered. Card tables also carried the color scheme.

A delicious sweet course was served at the conclusion of the games. For the refreshment hour, the tables were spread with white linen cloths and were centered with floral arrangements of red and yellow flowers.

The course consisted of angel food cake, yellow-iced and topped with heavenly hash and red cherry. Mrs. King assisted by Mrs. Ben Lang presided at the coffee table where demitasse and cheese straws served from a silver service followed the dessert course.

Score winners for the afternoon were: club, Mrs. R. T. Mank, high, and Mrs. George Moore, low, guests, Mrs. Ed Davenport, high, and Mrs. H. F. Eason, of Wilson, low. The hostess presented them with attractive gifts.

Train Timetable Troubles Reds

VIENNA (AP)—One thing Communism in Czechoslovakia can't do is make the trains run on time.

The Prague newspaper Rude Pravo recently complained that "the irregularity of trains is threatening the security of our railroads."

The newspaper said 65 per cent of all trains arriving and leaving the Slovak capital of Bratislava were late. "The total loss of time of trains in and out of Bratislava is 800 minutes a day," the paper said.

Districts Rotary Head Addresses Local Club

Stanley Woodland of Morehead City, governor of Rotary district 79, spoke to local Rotarians last night at the annual governor's visit to the Greenville club.

Woodland's address to the club was the climax of afternoon and evening sessions held at the Rotary building here yesterday. During the afternoon session Woodland discussed Rotary problems with the officers and committee chairmen of the Greenville club.

In his address to the club last night Woodland referred to Greenville as the "cradle of Rotary in this part of the country" and congratulated the club on its officers and committee chairmen.

"I find here there are no such things as shortcomings," Woodland commented. "It is a pleasure to get into a club where things are running as smoothly as they are here."

Turning to the purposes and goals of Rotary, Woodland said, Rotarians by their daily conduct should assume leadership in their communities. He pointed out that though Rotary is not primarily a religious organization it seeks to inspire lives that will give religious leadership to the community; though it is not a charity organization it constantly seeks out charity work and sees that it is done; though it is not a political organization it seeks to inspire interest in government and interest in politics.

The district governor discussed briefly the highlights of a conference of Rotary International district governors which was attended by Rotarians from 64 nations. "There we got to know and appreciate the calibre of men who are representing Rotary from all over the world," Woodland said. "Almost without exception they were outstanding men from their respective nations." The part Rotary is playing in international relations was also discussed by Woodland who pointed out that most of the Rotarians from other nations indicated their people are looking to the United States for international leadership, and are not looking for American dollars but for technical assistance and confidence.

Woodland was presented to the club by Jim Butler, program chairman.

Two Collisions During Weekend

Yesterday's police reports list two motor vehicle collisions during the weekend.

The investigating officer stated that a car driven by Edward F. Ward, 403 East 10th Street, while backing out of his yard yesterday, collided with a car driven by Lilly Rouse Carr, 2321 East 10th Street. The Carr car was damaged to the extent of $50. Ward's car was not damaged. No arrest.

Police arrested Russell Whitfield, 16-year-old youth, Sunday night after his car collided with a tree and a parked car. The department reports states, Whitfield, driving a dump truck owned by Robert Freeman of the Fleming's Crossroads community, collided with a tree on the 100 block of East 13th Street Sunday morning and then struck the parked car owned by Jack Bryant.

Warrants issued charge Whitfield with driving without an operator's license, driving while drunk and hit-and-run.

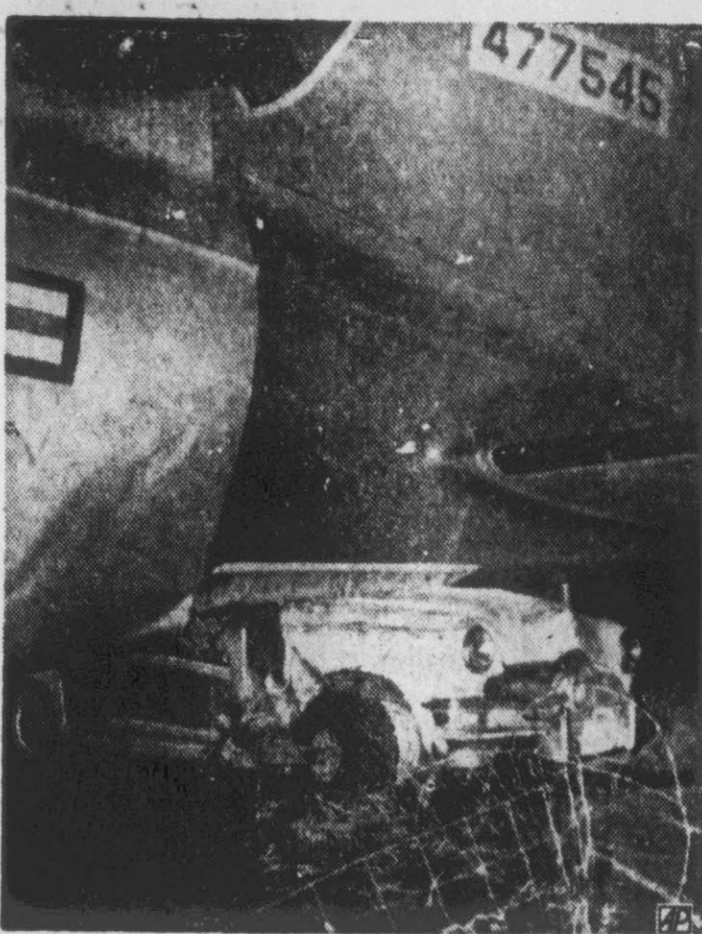

Women In The Church

By Mary Fowler

Miss Elizabeth M. Lee, of New York, an executive secretary of the Woman's Division of Christ the King Church, is now in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, on a three months visit to the Board's mission fields. From Brazil, where Methodism has a hundred or more churches and mission centers, Miss Lee will go to Uruguay, Argentina, Chile, Bolivia, Peru, and Panama. In Chile, she will participate in the Central Conference of Latin America.

Mrs. William Dalton, of Augusta, Me., is the newly elected president of the National Council of Catholic Women. Other new officers: Mrs. Michael Geraci, of University Heights, Ohio, first vice-president; Mrs. Enrico Liberto, San Antonio, Tex., second vice-president; Mrs. George A. McCalpin, St. Louis, third vice-president; Mrs. George P. Coyle, Jacksonville, Fla., secretary; Mrs. Harold Brady, Anderson, Ind., treasurer.

Speaking to a conference in St. Andrews, Scotland, called to study the place of women in Christian churches, Dr. Sarah Chakko, president of Isabella Thoburn College, India, and the only woman among the six presidents of the World Council of Churches, said that "what is happening to women in the world today is an urge toward usefulness." She pointed out that in earlier agricultural or craft societies, women worked beside men, each undertaking the phase of the work for which he or she was especially endowed. But with the coming of industrialization, man became thought of as the wage earner and woman as a decorative adjunct. Though woman has had plenty of power, both in the church and in the community, Miss Chakko pointed out, the thing woman misses is the sense of creative work — of worth and responsibility; even her function as a homemaker has been assigned largely to mass production channels such as schools, playgrounds, movies, and clubs. Miss Chakko suggested that in church and community women endeavor to assume a "complementary relationship" to men.

PLANE SMASHES AUTO.—The big tail section of an Air Force C-46 smashed an auto at Memphis, Tenn., after the pilot swung his plane around when a motor failed on a night takeoff. Injured in the car were four people, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Edmondson and their daughters, of Memphis. The 24 airmen and crew on the plane were uninjured. The plane went to the end of the runway, ploughed through a fence and when the pilot swung the tail around, it smashed the auto on a highway next to the field. (AP Wirephoto).

They were in the cases of: white — Ervin Coward vs Marjetta Coward; Negro — Amie Knight vs George Knight, Daisy Harris vs Carey Harris, Clifton Williams vs Lena Bell Williams, Robert Belcher vs Adell Belcher and Harry Worthington vs Thelma Worthington.

Jaycees Drive To Register Voters

Have you registered yet? That's the question Greenville Jaycees are asking every eligible voter in the city and county this month. It's part of their "Voter Registration Drive" to increase the vote turnout here this year.

Don Calloway, chairman of the local club's vote committee, said today figures compiled by the show only 44 percent of the nation's eligible voters went to the polls in 1950.

"In view of the fact that many voters are turned away from the polls every election year, we believe one of the paramount reasons for the scant vote turnout each year is that people forget to register," Calloway asserted.

Especially important "Voter registration is especially important during this presidential election year. Throughout the nation Jaycees are telling the people the important thing is not how they vote; it's whether they vote. According to Calloway's figures, throughout the United States in 1950 a total of 78.4 percent of the nation's eligible voters took part in elections. By 1900 the percentage had dropped to 73.5 percent.

By 1920 — the first time in history that women voted in this country — the percentage had shrunk to 49.3. In the 1948 presidential election only 48,833,680 — or 52 percent of the eligible voters — went to the polls and voted.

Great Number It is estimated that 30,000,000 eligible citizens will not vote this year unless they can be persuaded to do so between now and November 4. When less than half the eligible voters of any community turn out for an election, their officials are not the popular choice of the people.

Calloway reiterated previous warnings that the people of Greenville and Pitt County should not fail to get registered this year and they have only one more day to do so — Saturday, October 25. After next Saturday registration books will be closed, and thousands of local citizens may be disenfranchised of their "cherished" right of ballot because of their own lack of interest.

NEW YORK (AP)—Persons on a diet who dine out will no longer have to get themselves in a dither over whether the food on the hotel menu is fattening—at least not at the Hotel Edison. Next to each dish on the menu will be listed the number of calories it contains. In addition, a note at the top of the menu will give the dieting women the advice that they limit themselves to 800 calories for the meal, while dieting men shouldn't have more than 1,200.

Strength for the Day

NOT WITH THE AXE
The smoke from your neighbor's bonfire has ruined your wife's clean laundry on the line; your neighbor's children have just trampled down your flowerbeds; and now his dog comes up and bites you in the leg. What will you do?
If you take the family axe from the woodshed and go over and decapitate him, you can be sure of a great deal of publicity. The courtroom will be packed at your trial, and photographers will elbow each other aside to take your picture. You will certainly become well known—even though you won't have solved your original problem.

If, on the other hand, you settle the affair tactfully and politely, no one will read a word about you in the paper. Friendly reconciliation doesn't attract much attention; violent hostility does. But there is no question about which kind of settlement does the real good.

People whose actions are guided by the desire to be spectacular are limited in their usefulness. There is so much good that can only be done quietly, so many necessary jobs for which we never get credit, which hold no incentive for the glory-seeker.

When Jesus went about the country healing the sick, the blind, and the lepers, he characteristically sent them away cured, and commanded, "Tell no man."

Another Pillar In The Groundwork

Framework for another pillar in the groundwork for the proposed four county-four city airport for Eastern Carolina has been constructed.

A bill calling for the creation of an authority for the airport has been drawn, and if it is passed by the 1952 General Assembly of North Carolina, the pillar which is now framed will have been filled with concrete.

Whether the proposed airport will ever become a reality remains in the future, but efforts toward the actual work on the joint airport has been progressing with encouraging speed during the past few months.

City and county officials from Greenville, Wilson, Rocky Mount and Tarboro, Pitt, Edgecombe, Wilson and Nash counties have voiced their approval of the idea of a joint airport owned by the cities and counties to serve the four-county area. In spite of the fact that each governmental unit would like to have its own air service, through cooperation they have come to the conclusion that chances for obtaining air service to the area would be greater through joint action rather than individual action.

Admission of that fact is indeed indicative of the overcoming of a handicap which has held back the progress of air transportation in this area for years. Yet more strenuous tests of the spirit of unity and cooperation among the four counties and four cities will come before the joint airport will become a reality.

No one seems to know just yet how much the joint airport will cost, but it is certain the cost will be in the millions. It is expected the federal government will help in the cost of the project; but it is too early yet to ascertain to what extent.

According to the proposed legislation, the cost of the project will be distributed between each of the four counties and cities. The counties will pay 12-and-one-half per cent each; Greenville will pay 11 per cent, Rocky Mount 18 per cent, Wilson 18 per cent and Tarboro six per cent. The percentage figures sound reasonable enough as such, but the real crux of the project will come when each unit is asked to put up in dollars and cents its proportional part of the money for the project.

A joint airport is the answer to the air transportation dream of the four-county area. We only hope the spirit of cooperation which now prevails will be exemplified when it comes time to lay on the line money for the project.

Will They Make It An Even Half Dozen?

The now extinct nickel telephone call is only a token of the advancement in telephone rates which Eastern North Carolina has experienced under the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph company since the end of World War II. The Carolina company has asked for and gotten through the State Utilities Commission five rate increases in the past several years, and now it has before the commission a petition for the sixth rate increase.

In its petition now before the State Utilities Commission the Carolina company says it is of the opinion the new rate increases which will be needed to give its owners a 7.5 per cent return on their investments should come from residential service charges and intrastate rates.

So far as we are concerned, those are practically the same categories which have borne the freight on the other five rate increases which have been granted the telephone company in recent years. We doubt the advisability of the Utilities Commission's granting another rate increase to the company on the heels of the increase which was granted a relatively few months ago.

It is true that the cost of operations in the telephone business has risen since World War II just as the cost of every other business has risen. It is true also that it seems the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph company in the last few years has hardly had one rate increase approved by the commission before it begins work on another request for more revenue.

With each new request by the company for increased rates, the popular opposition to the increase has grown throughout the section served by the company. In the face of the most recent request for increased rates, the individual cities and towns have banded together to fight the proposed hike in residential and intrastate rates.

Perhaps with the concerted efforts now in progress to oppose the new telephone rate increases, the people in the area served by the telephone company will be able to win favor before the Utilities Commission which they have not been able to do in the last five times the issue has come before the commission.

After all, it is the duty of the commission which sets rates of utilities not only to protect the interests of the companies which operate the utilities, but likewise to protect the interests of the people who are served by those utilities.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—Although General Eisenhower and Governor Stevenson have pledged support of the United Nations, a serious undertone of misgiving about the permanence and effectiveness of this body as now organized has marked the current convocation of the General Assembly in New York. It is not entirely unconnected with our Presidential campaign.

As evidence of a concern recognized but discussed only behind diplomatic doors, Foreign Ministers Eden and Schuman have delayed their arrival until after the November 4 election of a new President and Congress. They have indicated that they want no controversial questions considered lest it affect the outcome in a manner prejudicial to U.N.

Likewise, Secretary Acheson has been persuaded to revise his original proposals for U.N. action on international problems. Whereas he had planned to voice sharp demands for greater aid from member nations in Korea, he has toned them down.

TALK CHEAPER THAN WAR—European spokesmen have informed him that their governments are not entirely satisfied with our policies in the Far East. Refusal of his requests might hurt Stevenson's Presidential chances. Even more important, it would encourage various groups on and off Capitol Hill, including certain factions in the next Congress, to resume their criticism of the U.N.

Few expect that the United Nations will go the way of the ill-fated League of Nations. Its value as a forum for debate of supercharged world issues is conceded, despite Moscow's attempts to use it as a propaganda sounding board. Talk is cheaper than war in lives and treasure.

STRENGTHEN U.N.—Nevertheless, there is a definite belief at Washington and New York that the United Nations must be strengthened or revised, if it is not to degenerate into a futile debating society. It is not now fulfilling its function of preventing bag-in-bag-out war or building a will to peace. Nor can this failure be attributed entirely to Russian recalcitrancy, as apologists argue.

Even Dr. Luis Padilla Nervo of Mexico, president of the 1951 session, told the delegates that "after seven years of life of the United Nations, we must recognize objectively that, instead of having reached our basic aims, we are faced with a situation in which the possibilities of peace are darker for the world."

Nobody arose to try to refute this assessment, probably because Mexico has made no contribution to our forces in Korea.

DOMINATION—Ironically, although the United States inspired and now finances the U.N., our role in the international body has come under severe criticism from small-nation members. They maintain that the U.N. is dominated by the great powers, and that their interests have been sacrificed and jeopardized as a result.

They feel, for instance, that they were "dragged" into the Korean conflict by this country. Although their attitude may be incomprehensible to us, they think that they have become mere pawns in our "cold war" with Russia. Many U.N. members, including India and South American countries, would like to sit out our feud with Moscow, as many did during World War II.

They note, too, that we are building up a defensive-offensive system outside the U.N. organization. They are critical of our regional alliances with Japan, the Philippines, Australia, New Zealand, Greece, Turkey and with the Marshall Plan nations in Europe. In their opinion, these bilateral agreements reflect our own skepticism toward the U.N.'s future effectiveness.

EMBARRASSING DILEMMA—Another explosive and embarrassing dilemma concerns the Tunisian and Moroccan demand for independence of France. As the historic advocate of self-determination of peoples, which we have practiced with respect to India, Indonesia, China, etc., Secretary Acheson should support the North Africans' position in U.N. debate. But such a stand will alienate our principal allies, France and Britain, who still have colonial empires. Therefore, we must abide by our "four freedoms" policy or play old-fashioned power politics, which presents an extremely embarrassing choice. France insists that this is a domestic problem outside U.N. jurisdiction.

This incident, which will recur frequently, furnished further ground for Capitol Hill questioning of the value of our U.N. association. In assuming these international responsibilities, they maintain that the U.S. stands in peril of becoming a "buttnski" nation, which will progressively antagonize both powerful and humble members of U.N. In other words, Uncle Sam will be damned if he does it and damned if he doesn't. With all these ramifications, it is obvious that the U.N. or Aciat will have an unexpected U.N. problem on the White House doorstep after January 20.

Somebody Told Me

By L. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

A car radio is something everybody should have. Although 95 per cent of my driving is in town, the short trips are more enjoyable because of my car radio. In the morning as I drive to work I always pick up the weather report. Then as I go to the Post Office I usually hear Carl McKinney digging at someone on his "Mac's Music Rack."

The other afternoon I was making a short trip across town and one of those ladies' programs was on. The master of ceremonies was asking a group of ladies the same question: "When you married your husband, did you plan to make him over into a better person, or just accept him as was?"

Before I could hear the answers I had arrived at my destination. However, when I walked into the store I spinned it on the two married men there. Immediately they agreed that such a plan is quite absurd.

Then, at home I asked Wife Rachel about it. She said, "I had no idea of making you over when we were married; in fact, then I didn't know of anything that would need changing."

"But now..." I asked. "Not much even now," W. R. politely said, but went on to name a few things. "Never forget my birthday again. (Last time I remembered it three days late.) Don't play with electricity. (I always assume that I can fix anything around the house that an electrician can.) In a crowd, don't always say what you are thinking. And don't throw your clothes all over the house."

All of this time that W. R. was gently telling me off there was one bombshell in the back of my mind that I was saving when she finally asked, "OK, what do you have for me?"

"Tonight," I said, "when I came home from work there was one room in the house where the light wasn't on. The neighbors probably think we are trying to increase the revenue of the Water and Light Commission."

"Is that all?" W. R. asked. "Just one more thing. Stub checks. I suppose you realize that not once since we've had a joint bank account have I been able to balance the statement at the end of the month."

Let's all agree that making a person over is almost as near impossible as jumping over the moon. But frankly I'm hoping that 50 years from now W. R. and I will still have only petty items to want corrected.

And I thank you.

CONGRESS—There is cumulative evidence that Republicans are putting forth greater effort to elect one or more members of Congress from North Carolina than to carry the State's electoral vote for Eisenhower and Nixon. Indications of this strategy were found in all the districts which have enough Republican votes to constitute even a minor problem for the Democrats. It was more obvious in the 8th, 9th and 10th districts, in each of which Republicans have some hope of winning the congressional seat. There is a Republican candidate in every district except the 5th, where Forrest Bebell was ruled off the ticket by court action when it was found he was registered as a Democrat.

CANDIDATES—The Republican nominees are Clarence Dozier of Elizabeth City in the first district; W. B. White of Norfolk in the second; Everett Patterson of Clinton in the third; Paul West of Raleigh in the fourth; L. F. Ferec of High Point in the fifth; D. R. Johnson of Winnabow in the sixth; Walter B. Love of Monroe in the eighth; Walter P. Johnson of Sparta in the ninth; Charles Raper Jones of Lincoln in the tenth; George Pritchard of Marshall in the eleventh; and Hugh Monteith of Sylva in the twelfth.

PROSPECTS—Even the most optimistic Republicans do not claim any prospect of winning in the first, second, third, fourth, seventh and twelfth districts. They have very lively hope in the tenth, only a little less in the ninth and claim at least a fighting chance in the sixth and eighth, and a long shot gamble in the eleventh. Democrats, of course, deny these claims, but they are not letting the campaign go by default, and in the ninth and tenth districts they admit they are running scared. Careful analysis of the situation would seem to justify the Democratic position—both as to denial of Republican prospects for winning and as to being scared that they might.

STRATEGY—Basic Republican strategy is to concentrate on the Congress and local county offices with the idea that one who votes for a Republican congressman will almost certainly vote for a Republican President; and to leave to the citizens for Eisenhower and other independent groups the burden of campaigning for the presidency. Radio commentators and political writers have reported similar conditions in other States. Methods vary among the districts, depending upon peculiar local circumstances.

OPTIMISTIC—Aggressively open campaigns are being conducted in the ninth and tenth districts, where Republicans are not optimistic. The ninth district seat is being voluntarily relinquished by Robert L. Doughton, who is completing 42 years in congress. Although his majorities generally have been impressive, it is of record that when his great prestige gave the Democrats only 6,000 lead a few ago. The Republicans are counting on hangerover animosity from a heated primary to help them beat Alexander, the youthful Cabarrus county lawyer nominated to succeed Doughton. There are obvious efforts to promote and capitalize on Democratic factional differences. Closer attention is being given to the tenth district where Charles Raper Jones is conceded by all observers a chance to win over incumbent Hamilton C. Jones. No secret is made by either Democrats or Republicans in that district that the seat in Congress is regarded as the major plum. One observer reported that Democrats would swap two votes for Stevenson for one vote for

What Other Papers Are Thinking

ON SLANTING THE NEWS (ROCKY MOUNT TELEGRAM)

We remember some years back when Senatorial aspirant Bob Reynolds was putting on his campaign show to defeat former Governor Cam Morrison. Bob was speaking at Nashville, and we saw him before the speech to ask for a script of what he would say. The candidate came back with the statement that he did not know what he would say, that we knew what would be good copy and to just go ahead and quote him. Knowing the tenor of Bob's speeches it wasn't hard to do.

Evidently no such authorization was given by our Democratic nominee for Governor, Bill Umstead when he spoke this week and was quoted by a North Carolina morning paper.

In fact, the statement that Bill Umstead said to have made caused that gentleman to rise up in righteous wrath and publicly call upon the newspaper to retract. Bill said he didn't say it. Bill said he was not accustomed to say things like that. Bill said he was having words put in his mouth. And Bill didn't like it.

Neither did a lot of people that contend that they can be Democrats and still vote for General Eisenhower. They called Bill Umstead and wanted to know why he had talked about 'em that way. They didn't like being called "political fakes."

And the newspaper probably didn't like being called to account for the verbiage of a reporter. They had spread the original story with a large headline on the front page. Their first recognition of their reporter's "free interpretation" of Umstead's remarks was a short paragraph in a column. Umstead said this wasn't enough.

So they have now printed what was demanded by our next governor. It has been placed on the front page which probably meets the requirement that Umstead laid down that it should have equal prominence. The headline wasn't nearly as large, but you could see it.

Newspapers enjoy the freedom of the press. But they do not enjoy license to "slant" the news.

What the next governor of our great State says now is news. It should be presented with only the slant that he gives it. Even if a reporter thinks he knows what is meant he is not privileged to say so in a news column.

Being an "Ike-Democrat" they were so labelled in the headline of that first and repudiated story, is no disgrace. Whatever being a "political fake" is we wouldn't know. Maybe it is had. Maybe it is just exercising the right of a citizen to vote as he pleases.

Voting is the prerogative that too few take advantage of. Probably the over-enthusiasm of that reporter and the resulting storm of words will cause more "Ike-Democrats" to go all out for the General if for no other reason than to show that no newspaper can force them.

The ardent composition of that reporter may have been doing a disservice to Adlai after all. Which may be another good reason for a newspaper to be careful not to "slant" the news.

Business Today

Here are some footnotes on reports that recently have appeared in this space:
NIGHT OPENINGS: When one of the largest department stores in Philadelphia announced it would stay open a second evening a week, members of its clerk's union voted to strike. The store obtained a temporary injunction.

The National Retail Dry Goods Association has published a report on night openings in more than 600 department and specialty stores across the country. It concludes that night openings are individual problems for each store and decisions should not be based on what the other fellow does.

CONSUMER CREDIT: It was pointed out here that figures on what consumers must pay each month would be more valuable in assessing the impact of rising credit than figures of totals outstanding. There is one monthly report that offers some clues; it is the Federal Reserve's report on consumer installment loans owed to commercial banks, small loan companies, industrial banks and loan companies and credit unions. The most recent report, for August, shows loans outstanding totaled $5,559,000,000 and repayments of $755,000,000 during the month. The second figure is an approximation of the monthly obligation of consumers, but only for installment loans to those institutions.

Incidentally, the figures indicate that the average loan maturities in about seven and a half months.

BOOM IN DIETARY FOODS: Newest entrant in this field is a low-calory bread by General Baking. Each slice is said to contain only 55 calories. Ingredients include celery, pumpkin, carrots, spinach, parsley, sesame seed, invert syrup, malt-syrup, yeast, salt, honey, yeast nutrients, oatmeal, wheat germ, wheat flour, flaked wheat flour, rye flour and regular flour. All that, and a bathing beauty on the wrapper.

The calory count is now appearing after each dish on the menu of the Edison, a New York hotel.

FROZEN DESSERTS: The Food and Drug Administration is showing considerable interest in this rival to ice cream. It has seized 15,600 pounds of one product. The label said the product contained "vegetable fat," "is not an ice cream" and "contains no milk or milk fat."

Not enough, said the FDA. The fat should be described as "soybean oil" or "cottonseed oil," as the case may be, and the label should say "imitation ice cream."

The FDA is studying the labeling of several other frozen desserts. It concedes that the products equal ice cream in nutrition.

ents and flavor. They generally have less vitamin A, but who buys ice cream for vitamins? NEW YORK SALES UP..... ON A TECHNICALITY.....

Department store sales in New York have lagged greatly behind the rest of the country. For 26 weeks they have failed to reach year-ago totals. But when this week's sales are tallied, they will probably show a sizeable gain over the same week last year.

That's because Columbus Day—always a big shopping day—fell in the previous week last year.

OLD PROMOTER

BUBBLES WITH IDEAS
"One of the worst ideas about being a traveling salesman is the wait between appointments," said the Old Promoter. "It's demoralizing. Of course, if a salesman is staying in town overnight, he has a hotel to wait around in, but many are forced to take sleeper-jumps and many stay at tourist courts outside of town. If a married member of the Elks or some other club, he has a resting place. But when I was on the road I did most of my waiting in bars and I often waited too long."

"Not a New York enterpriser has established 'Gentlemen's Den,' where for $35 a year a man can rest, shave, shower or look at TV and for extra fees use an office for business transactions and get mail, phone and messenger service.

"I hope it succeeds so well that dens are established in every city." We dutifully gave the Old Promoter a cigar. It must have been better than usual, because he went on:

"I'll toss this in: When unnecessary employment first became an issue, it was called 'featherbedding' because in those days that was the acme of comfort. Now that the issue is going to the Supreme Court, why doesn't the rubber industry try to get the term changed to 'foam rubber bedding'?"

NEW PRODUCTS

HALVED: As a result of a recent survey indicating that a majority of buyers cut bacon before cooking, half-pound packages containing half slices of bacon are now being introduced by Deerfoot Farms Co., Southbridge, Mass. Each slice is said to be longer than usual, because he went on:

LIFE: A detachable lift for shoe heels, said to lengthen heel life, is being marketed by Scot Rubber Co., Inc., 124 Atlantic Ave., Lynbrook, N.Y. It is held in place by suction.

SEALS: A unit said to seal protons in one simple operation, thus saving time, labor costs and prepackaging materials, is being offered to retailers (by Dobeckmum Co., 3301 Monroe Ave., Cleveland).

NEW YORK (AP)—Both men had stayed too long at the bar, and they knew it.

It was two hours since they had insisted there was time for only one quick one. Somewhere in the long ago, they had missed dinner at home, missed kissing the kids goodnight.

And so, as it must to all men who stay too long, a feeling of guilt came to them. They talked of their wives.

"Helen's a good kid," said Harry.

"Mabel's tops," said Phil. "Wonderful girls. Deserve the best."

"The very best." And, as it must to all men who stay too long and feel too guilty, a sense of matrimonial benevolence now came to them. "Only one way to handle wives," said Harry. "Only one, surefire, foolproof way."

"How's that?" "Now and then—mind you, not all the time—but now and then, when the situation demands it, slap 'em. Makes 'em happier in the long run."

"You say it works, Harry?" "I say it definitely works," Harry said, definitely. "Listen, I love my wife as well as the next guy, maybe more. I'd sooner cut off this right arm than hurt her. But slapping helps, now and then."

"In moderation," Phil nodded. "There's a time to kiss and a time to slap," said Harry. "And another thing. Keep separate things separate. Long time ago, I told Helen, I said, you run the house but stay out of my office. That's strictly my business. She doesn't even visit me at the office. We've been happy ever since."

"You know," Phil confessed in a whisper. "I never hit Mabel not once."

"Good for 'em," Harry said expansively, drawing on a fresh cigar. "It's really simple psychology. Gives 'em a sense of security. It comforts 'em in the long run, to know who's boss, to know somebody else is running things, making the big decisions, carrying the load."

"A point, that." "Helen and me, we've been married 12 or 13 years," said Harry. "In all, I'd say I hit her just three, maybe four times. Always cleared the air. No matter what they say, a woman feels safer knowing she's being led. I remember the first time I hit her, the night the big blizzard ended—" sports to politics, to religion, to drinking.

After an hour of that, Harry suddenly fell into a silent gloom. "What's worrying you?" Phil "Nothing much."

"Well, frankly," said Harry. "I'm worried about Helen. Not that she bothers me. Never argues, never fusses. But she's been drinking an awful lot lately. Even taken to drinking alone. I can't figure it."

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—The Department of Agriculture reports that American food production will set a record this year, with somewhat bigger supplies of beef and veal, poultry products and frozen fruits and vegetables.

Department nutritionists say, however, there will be little change in the nutrients available in the coming year except for a slight increase in vitamin C, to be found in expected larger supplies of fresh and frozen orange juice, and vitamin A, due to an expected higher consumption of sweet potatoes.

This means the national diet will continue to be of a quality markedly higher than before World War I because of an increase in consumption of dairy products, citrus fruits, leafy greens and yellow vegetables, meat, poultry and fish. In the order given, these food groups are important contributors of calcium, vitamin C and protein. The enrichment of grain products also has contributed greatly to the increase of iron and the B vitamins.

Food economist Rosalind Lusk of the Department's Bureau of Human Nutrition, says these changes have also caused a shift in the important nutrients in our diets. "For example," she told me, "grain products now provide relatively larger proportions of iron and the B vitamins while meat, poultry, fish and potatoes contribute less."

Dr. Hazel K. Stebeling, chief of the bureau, says the trend in recent years toward increased consumption of foods that provide generous quantities of proteins, minerals and many of the vitamins may be due in part to the increase in the purchasing power of consumers and a shift in the distribution of income (after taxes) that has benefited the lower brackets.

Dr. Stebeling wonders, however, how far we have gone toward the goal of good nutrition for everyone. "There has been great improvement since the mid-'30s," she says. "Nevertheless, even today, more milk and more of the vitamin-C-rich vegetables and fruits, such as raw cabbage, tomatoes, and citrus fruits, would go far toward helping many-rich and poor alike—to progress toward what I believe would be desirable nutrition."

"That's the reason enough." "That night," Harry continued, "I worked all night at the office, catching up on deliveries. Finally I come home around 8 in the morning and Helen says, where you been? And I said, I been working all night, and she said, Really? And I just hauled off and slapped her one right then and there. We been happy ever since?"

"No trouble at all?" "None."

Georgians Involved In Heated Debate Over County Vote System

By AL KUETTNER
United Press Staff Correspondent
ATLANTA (UP) — Most of the political oratory in Georgia during these pre-election days is not on the presidential level but centers around a red-hot state issue that Gov. Herman Talmadge is trying to push across.

The State Democratic Executive Committee, which ordinarily would be beating the bushes to shake out the vote for president, is working instead with Talmadge on behalf of a constitutional amendment that would write the state's county unit system of elections into Georgia law.

The amendment would leave the general elections conducted on a popular vote basis but would require that candidates for state offices who run in the general elections must first be nominated in a primary in which the unit vote is used.

The Georgia voting system— which Talmadge argues is patterned after the electoral college, an argument the opposition claims isn't so — leaves the balance of political power in the hands of small counties.

The state's eight largest counties get six unit votes, the next 30 largest get four and the remaining 121 have two each. The Democratic party is the only political organization using the system in the state, and that in primaries only. Its primary contests are decided on the basis of unit votes rather than popular vote.

Up to the present, other parties in Georgia, including the Republican have picked their candidates by convention or petition. The only restriction as to getting their candidates on the general election ballot is that the party either must have polled five per cent of the vote in the last previous election or must present a petition signed by five per cent of the voters.

Opponents of the county unit amendment have warned it would have the effect of eliminating other parties in the state because of the expense involved in conducting statewide primaries. They also contend an "unscrupulous" governor could perpetuate himself in office regardless of a constitutional provision against succession.

Talmadge, whose main strength lies in the smaller counties, has been making daily speeches urging passage of the amendment on grounds it would keep control of government out of the big cities, would preserve racial segregation and would prevent the future election of a "renegade" governor by the "bloc vote" of Negroes in Atlanta.

An earlier attempt by the Talmadge organization to get approval of an amendment to conduct the general election itself on a county unit basis was defeated by about 30,000 votes in the 1950 general election. The new issue will be decided Nov. 4 by popular vote.

The unit vote issue has had rugged sledding several times since its passage in 1917 but it has survived 11 court battles since 1947— four of them in the U.S. Supreme Court which ruled that the system as used in primaries was strictly a state matter.

Under the system, the governor's father, the late Eugene Talmadge, was nominated and later elected governor in 1946 although he failed to win a popular vote majority in the primary.

Shotgun Pellets Hit Her In Heel

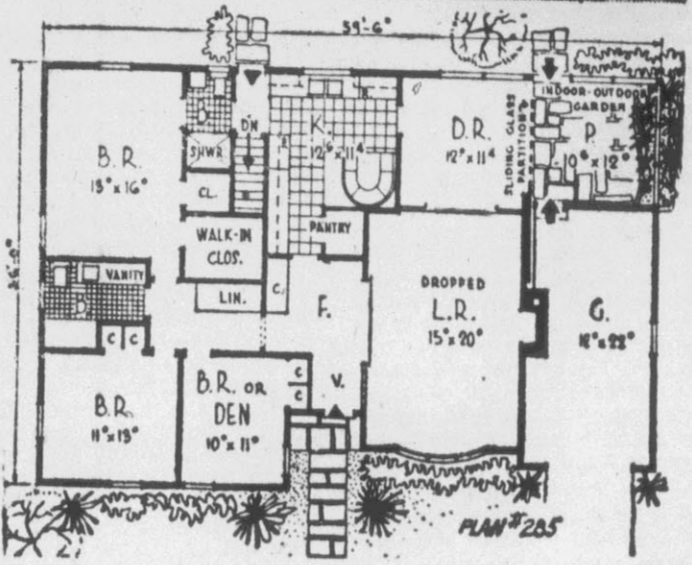

FACTOLUS — A Negro housewife got a heel full of shotgun pellets here over the weekend but was resting comfortably in a Washington hospital today.

Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson reported this afternoon that Richard Little, husband of Martha Little, was arrested by Pactolus Constable Preston Woolard over the weekend and placed in Pitt County jail on charges of assault with a deadly weapon.

The sheriff said that according to reports, the two became embroiled in an argument over another man and Little shot Martha in the heel with a shotgun. The alleged assault took place at the couple's home in Pactolus.

The woman was not thought to be in serious condition but will probably be confined to her bed for "about a month", officers said. The Pactolus constable said Martha's shoe was full of shot when she was taken to the hospital. Little was being held in jail under $200 bond yesterday and had not been released late in the day. He will be tried in County Court when his wife is well enough to testify.

Get First Issue Of Cadet Paper

Air Force ROTC cadets at East Carolina College received this week the first issue of "Sky Pirate," campus publication of the group.

Contents of the four-page mimeographed newspaper include news articles, notices, features, and cartoons dealing with activities and interests of the cadets. "Sky Pirate" will be distributed on the fifteenth of each month during the school year.

Robert P. Hilldrup of Frederickburg, Va., sophomore at the college, is editor of the paper. He has had experience as a student journalist on the staff of the college weekly the "Teco Echo" and is now serving as its managing editor.

Other cadets on the staff of "Sky Pirate" are Percy Wilkins, Benson, managing editor; and Howard P. Williams, Elm City, art editor. Staff reporters include William A. Peniel, Goldsboro; Furney Powell, Weedville, Pa.; Ray Sears, Greenville; and Larry Thompson, Princeton.

Lt. Col. Roger G. Fuller, professor of air science and tactics, and Captain William R. Roney of the F ROTC staff are assisting the cadets with their publication.

Grange Advised Rely On Self-Help

RALEIGH (AP)—Expanding government and rising taxes are largely a reflection of "the failure of the people to solve their own problems," State Grange Master Harry B. Caldwell declared today.

Caldwell warned delegates to the Grange's annual state convention that, "We must either face up to our social and economic problems and solve them or we are in real danger of losing both freedom and democracy."

With the warning, Caldwell gave a strong defense of the nation's farm programs which he said became necessary "as a result of basic changes in our economic system."

Caldwell pointed out that only 15 per cent of the eligible voters participated in the last general election. "The voting record of farmers was even worse," he added.

"The fact is that too many citizens want liberty and freedom but they want someone else to do the job of making democracy work," he said in price support and other regulatory farm programs.

"Farmers and their government are working together in solving problems in a free, democratic manner." This type of program minimizes the need for direct government action, he added.

Caldwell accused "a well financed group of business men" of resisting the farm programs "in the name of tax equality" and said farmers have been charged with "using methods not compatible with our private enterprise system."

"It is time for business men to wake up to the fact that farmers are business men too and that we must have a strong agriculture if we are to preserve freedom and our private enterprise system," he said.

He said farmers do not receive an income return comparable with that of other workers, and added that farm income has declined during the past several months.

The price support programs, he declared, are the consumers, "best guarantee of sustained abundance."

On the state level, Caldwell said, "There is an urgent need for additional class rooms in our public schools, for additional facilities at mental hospitals," and for additional funds for support of education, health, welfare and other public services.

"Campaign commitments seem to indicate that no new taxes will be considered by the General Assembly. This means that expenditures of public services will be limited by the available funds from our present tax schedule or that bonds must be issued," he declared.

Caldwell reviewed the work of the Grange during the past year and called for steps to strengthen the farm organization during the coming year.

Election of officers and an address by Gov. Scott were on the convention program this afternoon. The delegates will be the guests of Gov. and Mrs. Scott at a reception at the executive mansion tonight.

At a fellowship banquet last night, citations for distinguished service to agriculture were presented to Dean James H. Hilton of the North Carolina State College School of agriculture and Mrs. Fred Davis of Stoneville.

In addition, the Stony Point Baptist Church in Alexander County was recognized as the "Rural Church of the Year," and 10 Grange units were given awards for community service projects.

Matrimony Grange in Rockingham County won the $200 Saving Bond first prize for the fourth year. It is among 10 Granges competing for a $15,000 national prize. Olive Chapel in Wake County won the $100 second prize and eight other granges each got $50 bonds for projects.

Magician To Be Next Entertainer

Paul Fleming, distinguished magician, will appear at East Carolina College next Tuesday, October 28, in his "Evening of Magic." The entertainment, which has been favorably reviewed following presentations throughout the United States, will take place in the Wright auditorium at 8 p.m.

The program will be sponsored by the East Carolina College Entertainment Committee and will be the second in a series of nine offered during the present school year.

Dr. Fleming is no ordinary magician. A member of Phi Beta Kappa and a Ph. D. graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, he now teaches economics there and is the author of several well known works on economics. He has the distinction of being listed twice in "Who's Who in America," once as a magician and again as an economist and university professor.

Dr. Fleming has entertained audiences at colleges and universities in all sections of the United States, and at conventions of many professional and business organizations. He has also had the honor of giving his program at the White House.

His "Evening of magic" has been described as "dignified, hilarious, baffling, and altogether charming."

About Gen. Eisenhower he said, "The general does not have much hair up on top and should not let it grow too much on the sides. It is white there on the sides."

"Now Gov. Stevenson has none up on top," Juriga said, "so his haircuts all are done so that

The Sport Reflector

North Carolinians who attempt to judge the strength of the nation's football teams through the weekly polls of the Associated Press and the United Press have had their faith shaken more than just a little because of the treatment given Duke this week. Despite a 57-0 walloping of State, the Dukes dropped in the standings of both polls.

The loss of a fifth place position in the AP and UP polls is a little difficult to understand. It's true that State isn't any where near being a national gridiron power but, still, 57-0 looks good on any team's record.

Duke's place in the top five was taken by an Oklahoma team which knocked off Kansas to wrap up the Sooners' fifth straight Big Seven title. The Sooners, as you know, have not had a great deal of trouble this year except against Colorado, a team which tied Oklahoma 14-14 in the season's opener.

On the strict basis of records, you can hardly deny that Oklahoma deserves a place in the top five of the nation's football elite. But is that place to be taken at the expense of a team which has run through the best the South has to offer?

Perhaps we're prejudiced in our feelings toward Duke because first of all, we happen to be from North Carolina and, secondly, we happen to think right much of Duke. Maybe the Dukes are the nation's best football team—but nobody has proved it yet.

On a more local level, the Greenville Phantoms will get their big chance to move into the Northeastern Conference's top spot when they travel to New Bern this week. The game is the one which can "make or break" either or both of the clubs.

The Bears have one of the strongest teams they've fielded in years. Thus far, they have done well in their own bracket and they've even stepped out of North-eastern circles to take on a team which had trouble holding them.

The game we're referring to is a practice session which the Bears held with a AAA team. The practice session came before the season started and the Bears scored three times while the triple-A club scored just once. Since that time, we might add, that same triple-A club has pulverized two Northeastern Conference teams.

New Bern isn't too far away from Greenville and the game should attract quite a number of Phantom followers. We still can't forget the bus load of Mount Airy fans who traveled 200 miles to see their team play down here. We figure that if 50 people can come 200 miles, then 200 people ought to be able to go 50 miles for a football game.

Thus far, the local football fans have been outstanding in their support of the Phantoms. The home games have drawn good crowds and even the out-of-town contests have been attracting some followers.

It would do the team a lot of good Friday night if they knew they had a big lot of fans back of them.

The game should be a top-notch affair since both clubs are expected to be in top physical shape.

Phants Tied For Conference Lead

The Greenville Phantoms will travel to New Bern and Elizabeth City to play host to Kingston in this week's Northeastern Conference battles.

Greenville and Elizabeth City are currently leading the conference with two victories and a tie game each. Washington has two victories and two ties. Greenville and Elizabeth City both fought Washington in scoreless battles.

Kingston has lost all of its conference games this season but the Red Devils always present a threat to a team riding a victory crest. New Bern has been alternately a hot and cold team this year. They were cold against Washington and Roanoke Rapids but fell on Edenton for a 14-0 win and last week blasted Bayboro 34-20.

Greenville and Elizabeth City are slated to meet Nov. 7.

Phantoms Will Be In Top Shape To Begin Stretch Drive For Northeastern Title

Light contact work on passing offense and a thorough drill on pass defense occupied most of yesterday's practice session for the Greenville Phantoms. The Phants, idle last week, opened drills for their game Friday night in New Bern against the ball club which is presently posing as Greenville's most serious threat to the Northeastern Conference championship.

The Phantoms got some good news yesterday in the form of quarterback George Sideris who returned to practice after being out all season with a broken collarbone. Sideris, rated a top-notch field general, was slated to see plenty of action this year but has not had a chance to even practice up until yesterday. He'll become Pat Sawyer's top relief man at quarterback and will give the Phantoms a balance which has been lacking thus far.

The return of Sideris means that the Phantoms are in the best shape they've been in all season. The week off last week gave other injured players a chance to rest and recover from minor injuries. Coach Bill Kittrell has also lauded the team's spirit, an item which is at one of the highest peaks of the entire season.

Yesterday's workout for the Phantoms consisted mainly of practice in methods to stop the passing of New Bern's Bud Parker. Parker was the key player in New Bern's 34-20 win over Pamlico last week and has been the "spark" in the Bear attack all season long. He runs at quarterback in the New Bern T-formation.

Kittrell, who scouted the New Bern-Pamlico game, told his squad yesterday that the Bears are by far the best team the Phantoms have on their schedule according to what he saw. The squad members were told that if New Bern was to be stopped, then Parker and the passing had to be brought to a complete standstill.

The Phantoms will work on defense today and then coordinate the practice tomorrow to test both units. They'll continue to work heavily until Wednesday afternoon.

Sahuaro Lake's Bass Retrieved

SAHUARO LAKE, Ariz. (AP)—The Fisheries Division of the Arizona Game and Fish Commission reports that over 550 pounds of larger spawners have been retrieved from Sahuaro Lake which is in the process of being completely drained. A total of 130 brood bass were retrieved that were five pounds or over. The heaviest fish weighed eight and a half pounds. Many smaller bass were placed in holding ponds at nearby Papago Hatchery for restocking Sahuaro Lake when the dam is closed.

Duke Holds Down Sixth Place Spot

NEW YORK (AP)—Michigan State's rampaging Spartans continued their strangeness on the No. 1 spot in the Associated Press' weekly football poll today by nosing out Maryland in the fourth edition.

The result gives Michigan State a record of three out of four firsts. Only in the second week did the Spartans falter. That was when Wisconsin took over the top rung.

The undefeated Spartans, who are making the experts look good—they were selected as the best team in the country in the AP's pre-season poll—had a margin of 50 points over Jim Tatum's powerful Maryland outfit.

Maryland also was second last week but the margin that time was 65 points, so the Terps are gradually trimming the margin.

State garnered 1,191 points, along with 49 firsts, from the 138 sports writers and sportscasters from coast to coast who cast ballots. Maryland, which has won one more game than Michigan State, had 1,141 points and 36 firsts.

The votes are tabulated by giving 10 points for first place, nine for second, eight for third and so on down the line.

There were two newcomers to the first 10—Virginia, No. 9, and Wisconsin, No. 10. To make room for the pair, Kansas and Purdue, both of which were defeated last Saturday, went tumbling downward.

The most impressive gain, however, was made by Oklahoma, which vaulted from sixth to third and gained 23 first-place votes along with 913 points. The Sooners just about wrapped up the Big Seven title for the fifth straight year with their triumph over Kansas.

After Oklahoma came California, No. 4; Georgia Tech, No. 5; Duke, No. 6; Southern California, No. 7, and UCLA, No. 8.

The leaders with first-place votes in parentheses:

1. Michigan State (49)	1,191
2. Maryland (36)	1,141
3. Oklahoma (23)	913
4. California (9)	883
5. Georgia Tech (5)	803
6. Duke (5)	574
7. Southern Cal. (1)	503
8. UCLA (3)	476
9. Virginia (5)	188
10. Wisconsin	162

Pittsburgh Trade For New Talent

PITTSBURGH (UP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates acquired catcher Joe Rossi and outfielders Cal Abrams and Gail Henley from the Cincinnati Reds today in exchange for outfielder Gus Bell.

Abrams, 28 and left-handed all the way, hit .274 for the Reds while Henley, a former Southern California University star, hit .273 in the Texas League. Rossi, who appeared in 55 games, hit .321.

Pirates Look At Movies, Forego Contact Work

The East Carolina College Pirates took a peep at some movies, ran through a few non-contact maneuvers, and then called it a day yesterday as they opened preparations for their game Saturday night against Guilford in Greensboro.

The movies were of the 1951 East Carolina-Guilford game, a game the Pirates won by a slender 19-14 margin. The Pirates took the time to run through the movies in an effort to familiarize each player with the style of attack Coach Stuart Maynard has the Quakers run.

The light workouts yesterday were limited to a little work on kicks. After that, the Bus took off the rest of the day. They're expected to step up the tempo of their drills today and hold a heavy pace until after Wednesday if injuries to squad members will permit such action.

The injured list looked a little brighter yesterday even though there were a couple of new additions as a result of Saturday's rough-and-tumble game with Western Carolina. George Tucker, the Pirates' 60-minute man, will take things easy for a couple of days with a hand injury which isn't as serious as it was first thought to be. Preliminary examinations of the injury had suggested a fracture but a more thorough check has disclosed nothing more serious than a bad bruise. Tucker is expected to be able to resume his role at guard before the week is out and may even get some relief this week from boys who have been slowed down the last two weeks with injuries.

Both Bobby Thomas and David Lee are recovering satisfactorily from the ankle injuries which have hampered them for the past couple of weeks. Both saw limited action last week but they were deliberately withheld from a great deal of heavy work in an effort to give their injuries every opportunity to heal. On the dull side of the ledger is Don Burton's shoulder injury which is still something of a question mark. Burton reinjured his shoulder Saturday night and may not see any action this week.

The Bus' foe for the weekend, Guilford, is in the midst of a rebuilding program and have had little success this year. They've lost four games, one to a North State Conference foe, and are still searching for their first 1952 victory.

Thus far, the Quakers have had to rely upon freshman performers at almost every position. The frosh have improved vastly since the season first opened but their development has been held back because of a lack of experienced men to work with.

The Quakers took last weekend off.

Duke-Va. Clash In Tilt Of The Week

By NORMAN MILLER
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP)—The select list of 10 unbeaten and untied major college football teams will be reduced by two next weekend when California plays Southern California and Duke meets Virginia in clashes between perfect-record powers.

These four, along with Michigan State, Maryland, Georgia Tech, UCLA, Villanova and Holy Cross, emerged the only major teams with spotless records after a weekend highlighted by high-scoring games.

Kansas, Alabama, Nebraska, Navy, Stanford and Colgate were knocked from the undefeated and untied ranks.

California and Southern California, both unbeaten in five games this season, square off at Los Angeles next Saturday in a Pacific Coast Conference showdown that will play a large part in determining the eventual Rose Bowl entry. California trimmed Santa Clara, 27-7, last weekend while the Trojans bopped Oregon State, 28-6.

UCLA, the third PCC power with five straight victories, goes out of the conference to meet Wisconsin at Madison, Wis., in one of the weekend's top inter-sectional games. The Bruins retained their perfect record with a 24-14 victory over Stanford.

Duke (5-0) and Virginia (4-0) knock heads in the South's top attraction at Charlottesville, Va. No conference contention is involved, since Virginia is an independent, but the outcome will help determine national rankings. Duke walloped North Carolina State, 57-0, and Virginia trounced VMI, 33-14, Saturday.

Michigan State, which ran its winning streak to 19 games by drubbing Syracuse, 48-7, plays at home against Penn State, another strong eastern team, next weekend. Maryland, which knocked Navy from the perfect-record ranks, 38-7, and ran its victory ystring to 17 games, next is pitted against Louisiana State at College Park, Md.

Georgia Tech (5-0) faces a Southeastern Conference toughie in Vanderbilt at Atlanta, Ga.; Holy Cross (4-0) travels to play Syracuse; and Villanova (5-0) is at Xavier (O.), Sunday afternoon. Georgia Tech trimmed Auburn, 33-0; Holy Cross crushed Brown, 46-0, and Villanova beat Boston College, 28-7, last Friday night.

Oklahoma ruined Kansas' unsullied record, 42-20, last weekend; Tennessee accounted for Alabama, 20-0; Penn State dumped Nebraska, 10-0, and Harvard knocked off Colgate, 21-20.

In addition to the games involving unbeaten and untied powers. Next Saturday's program offers an important Big Ten battle between Michigan and Minnesota, as well as several top inter-sectional attractions.

Michigan and Minnesota are tied with Purdue for the Big Ten lead. The Wolverines walloped Northwestern, 46-14, last Saturday, while Minnesota provided one of the day's biggest upsets in dumping Illinois, 13-7. Notre Dame upset Purdue, 26-14. The national television feature will be a Big Ten clash between Purdue and Illinois at Champaign, Ill.

Inter-sectional games find Marquette at Miami (Friday night), and Kansas at Southern Methodist, North Carolina at Notre Dame, Arkansas vs. Mississippi at Little Rock, Ark.; Kentucky at Cincinnati, and Montana at Oregon.

Here is a rundown on other major games next weekend:
East: Army at Columbia; Navy at Pennsylvania; Colgate at Bucknell; Rutgers at Brown; Princeton at Cornell; Dartmouth at Harvard; West Virginia at Pittsburgh; NYU at Temple; Lafayette at Yale.

South: Mississippi State at Alabama; Florida vs. Georgia at Jacksonville, Fla.; Auburn vs. Tulane at Mobile, Ala.; Wofford at Tennessee; Virginia Tech at Washington and Lee.

Midwest: Ohio State at Iowa; Indiana at Northwestern; Nebraska at Colorado; Iowa State at Missouri; Kansas State at Oklahoma; Wichita at Tulsa; Detroit at Oklahoma A and M.

Southwest: Texas A and M at Baylor; Texas at Rice; Hardin-Simmons at Arizona; Houston at Arizona (Tempe) State; New Mexico at Texas Western.

Rockies: Denver at Brigham Young; Colorado A and M at Utah State; Utah at Wyoming.

Pacific Coast: Washington at Stanford; Oregon State at Washington State.

North-South Meet At Pinehurst

PINEHURST (AP)—The first annual North and South Seniors Golf Tournament, opening here Oct. 27, has forced the final Carolina Golf Association one-day tourney into a postponement.

The CGA tourney, originally set for Sunday, Oct. 26, has been rescheduled for Dec. 14 at the Pinehurst Country Club, according to Bill Snow, executive secretary of the association.

There will be more than 200 players from all over the country here on Sunday to warm up for Monday's opening round in the Seniors, which has replaced the North and South Open. And there just aren't enough courses to handle all the traffic.

Cincinnati Had Improved Team

CINCINNATI (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds really pounded National League pitching this season at least in comparison to Redleg teams of yesteryear. The Reds as a team scored 615 runs to the 1951 club's 559; hit 45 triples a gain last year's 33; clouted 404 homers against 88 in 1951 and batted in 563 runs as compared to last year's 528. Also, this was the third Cincinnati team to hit over 100 homers in one season. The 1938 team hit 110 and the 1948 outfit had 104.

TOUGH COP

By JOHN ROEBURT

Chapter 21
The official was a fat man with a fleshy face that looked mauled. He had the sedentary air of a man who had spent his best years in the narrow corner behind a desk. Soon the general outline of Devereaux's story was told, and the official looked mystified.

"Sounds to me like a long ride for very little. Why didn't you just telephone?"

"I like everything firsthand and personal. Even failure."

"But I still can't see anything in our files here on Longo worth a minute of your time. He served time until his parole, and that's all," he looked at Devereaux's face, then flicked a button of the intercommunication system.

Devereaux waited through the official's instructions to the Sing Sing record room. "My idea is that Longo wanted to be arrested, convicted, and sent up. The way it happened has me convinced he asked for it."

The chin came forward out of its groove. "Maybe Longo asked to be arrested, as you say, but for a more likely reason. Not because he wanted to do time here, but just to be taken out of circulation."

"It's the more obvious answer, perhaps, but I won't buy it for now," Devereaux said. "The way Longo was sprung, and the character of his sponsor, Buloff, suggest a lot more than a penny-a-gate dip looking to Sing Sing for temporary cover from some personal danger. There was a deep game going on, with quite important people mixed up in it, and Longo was an important pawn."

An aide entered unobtrusively, deposited a file on the official's desk, and left without a word. Devereaux sighed heavily. As the official had argued, the findings were worth exactly five minutes on the telephone. The night ride had been a gratuitous and whimsical act.

"Ignoring the mechanical facts, what was the human story of Longo's stay here? For instance, who did he bunk with? Who were his cronies here? Who did he seek out to chum with?"

Devereaux added as a pointed afterthought, "And who did he war with?"

The official lifted a shoulder. "McGuire can answer that. He's head guard over in C-4."

"Get McGuire."

The official looked dubious. Dent want to be a wet towel, but is it worth it? McGuire's long on memory, but a regiment of prisoners come and go, and it's been a long time since Longo.

Five minutes passed, and a spare man with a deep pallor came in. Devereaux saluted his acknowledgment on being introduced. "The Warden says you're long on memory, McGuire," the detective said. "Remember Nick Longo?" he asked. McGuire's face lighted, and his head went up and down. "Mousy little fellow. In on a Sullivan Law conviction."

Devereaux said eagerly, "Remember him as clearly as that?"

McGuire savored his moment. "Sure do," he said, wearing figurative thumbs in his vest.

"What were your impressions of Longo?"

"Nothing special. Just another fellow serving time."

"Troublemaker?"

"No. Short termers never are."

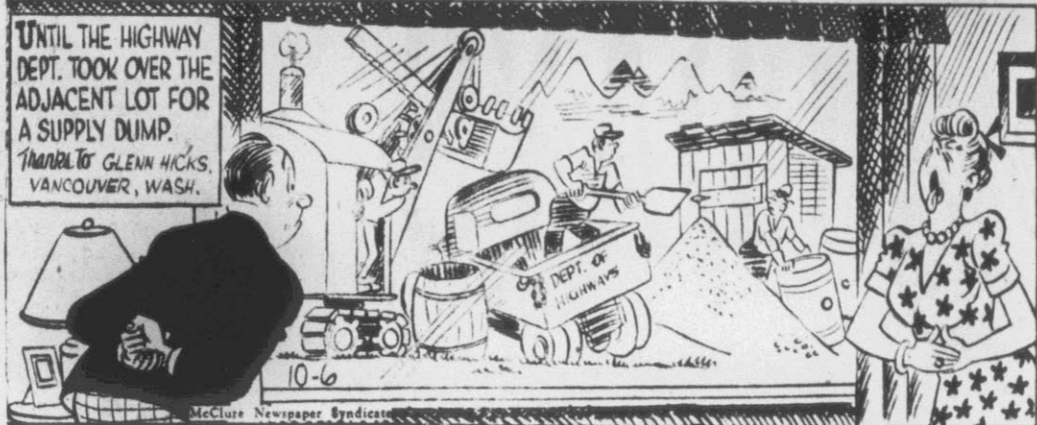

The guard paused, and his eyes looked vacant, as if sight was turned inward, on the past. "Matter of fact," he resumed after a few moments, "Longo was so easy to handle we put him to use."

"How?"

"Odd jobs. Inventory clerk in the work rooms. Messenger work

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW!

By FAGALY and SHORTEN

"I'm working on the theory that Longo wanted to be sent up the river. That he deliberately maneuvered his way into Sing Sing."

The guard looked incredulous, and Devereaux overlapped explanations impatiently. "Did Longo chum with anybody here? Who were his cronies?"

The answer came slowly. "Nobody specially, as far as I know. But I can check, ask around, he volunteered."

"Sure, do that," Devereaux ran teeth over his lower lip contemplatively. "Meanwhile, still off the top of your head. Were there any incidents during Longo's time here?"

"Incidents?" The guard was puzzled.

"Something Longo might have been implicated in, but behind the scenes. Some outbreak. A row, maybe."

The detective's eyelids were drooping when McGuire returned. He was carrying two large thick books, like ledgers. The date by year was lettered across them.

"Nothing," the guard said, shaking his head. "I went through the section record, page by page, day by day, for the period Longo served. No outbreak, no assault, no nothing. The record's clean."

Devereaux leafed through the ledger pages mechanically, his mind busily turning ideas and discarding them as quickly. The ledgers were a carefully detailed greengrocer's account of every great and small activity in the prison section. Devereaux looked up thoughtfully. "Deaths."

"Was there a death of unusual character?"

The guard nodded. "One accidental death. Frankie Hughes."

"What kind of an accident was it?"

McGuire looked distressed for the memory. "A freak accident, and pretty terrible. Scalded to death. He fell while showering."

"Not even an outside chance of foul play?"

The guard shook his head firmly. "It wasn't the first time Frankie Hughes pulled, even if it was the last. Also, Hughes was popular with everybody, unpopular with nobody? A reminiscent smile played across the guard's eyes. "A real gentleman, Hughes. Always reading books. Crazy about books. The guards liked him; the prisoners liked him. We called him Professor."

"What was Hughes in for?"

"Armed robbery and a shooting. He was doing sixty years. He'd already done twenty. That's all I can tell you about him, except that he was no more than a kid when he was sent up. He was hardly past forty when he cashed in."

Devereaux found a pad and pencil and made some notes.

The guard looked at the detective critically. "Don't bite too hard on it," he admonished.

To get the ice broken, have a March of Witches. This is particularly exciting if everyone is in costume. It works like "musical chairs"—partners change when the music stops. This is a good way to mix the crowd.

"Super-ghost," as played on television, permits adding to a word at the beginning as well as the end of the word to prevent becoming a ghost. If you're forced to complete five words, you're a super-ghost and you're haunted for the evening.

Refreshments can include a "Skeleton's Delight," an orange soda with chocolate ice cream. Use orange or chocolate colored straws to complete the effect. An inexpensive cake can be concocted by starting with a pound cake which can be cut into layers and filled with orange icing. On the top of the cake, arrange some gumdrops in the shape of a pumpkin; add a piece of green licorice for the stem of the pumpkin. A chocolate witch placed on orange sherbit is another Halloween treat.

Orange paper napkins and orange plates with skeletons imprinted add zest to the eating. Kiddy-pops in the shape of pumpkins can be scattered around the table. Late autumn flowers, dried leaves, colored corn can form decorations on the tablecloth to symbolize the completion of the harvest which Halloween signifies.

An apple race can help stir up to see who can walk across the goal line first balancing an apple on the back of the hand.

A game to test your lungpower is the ping-pong ball contest. Take two pieces of string and place them about a foot apart across a table. Paint the ping pong ball to resemble a Jack O' Lantern. Boys on one side, girls on the other. Place the ball equidistant from the strings. The object is to blow the ball across the opposite string to opponents territory. Three invasions win.

The candy race is fun. Tie a piece of candy to a long string. Get a guy and his favorite girl to start chewing the ends of the string, working towards the piece of candy. The one who reaches the piece of candy wins. The object is to reach it together, however.

Another apple race is a big favorite. Have four couples line up ten feet apart in parallel lines.

Each one facing each other. Give each one a toothpick and put the toothpick in the mouth. The players must carry the apple to his opposite corner, stick the apple into his partner's toothpick, and run back to his starting position. He then carries the apple back to his partner. The team who carries the apple five times wins.

That old Halloween standby, dunking for apples, can't be skipped at any Halloween party. Written fortunes or pennies, dimes or quarters can be inserted in the apples to add incentive to the game.

Dear Judge

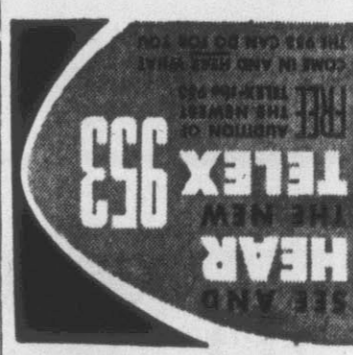

AP Neuseatures
Get out your biggest black cauldron, stir up your most potent witches' brew—it's Halloween party time.

All spooks aside, your gang should enjoy a party now that they've outgrown their Tricks or Treats routine.

There are new games, recipes and decorations to amuse the crowd. Carolyn Coggins, party consultant for Fanny Farmer candy shops, knows just what young party goers like, and she's cooked up a big pumpkin full of suggestions.

To get the party rolling, assemble the fellows and girls at a spot not far from where the party will take place. All the lights should be out in the house except for the Jack O' Lanterns and black cats. When the guests arrive a huge witch silently greets them. The witch is a girl or boy standing on a chair with long robes reaching to the floor. The tallest member of your crowd in this role can give a particularly scary start to the party.

In the party room, a witches' cave can stand in one corner of the room. It should be decorated in orange and black, with cutouts of bats and witches pasted about or hanging from strings from the ceiling.

COMMUNITY service is the aim of Hospital Saving in all its dealings with the public. While the Association's first concern is to protect the health of its individual members, it can readily be seen that healthier people mean healthier communities. With 437,000 people under Blue Cross-Blue Shield protection, this means a real contribution has been made to the better health of the state.

In addition, people who can pay their own way in health matters, relieve the community of the financial burden of providing medical care for them. It is not likely that a Blue Cross-Blue Shield member would ever fall under the classification of "indigent." This applies likewise to the business relationship Hospital Saving members enjoy with the doctors and hospitals of their communities.

There is still another way in which Hospital Saving contributes to the welfare of North Carolina communities: in the investment of its funds. Over a million dollars of the Association's funds are deposited in banks and Building and Loan Associations in this state. In addition over one half million dollars is held in U. S. Government bonds.

Seventeen banks in fifteen N. C. cities have Association funds on deposit and each of sixty-eight Building and Loan Associations holds HSA investments of five or ten thousand dollars. With a single exception, Hospital Saving has invested in every insured Building and Loan Association in the state—a total of $610,000.

Here is a list of the cities where Blue Cross-Blue Shield funds are working for the welfare of the community (in some places, investment has been made in several Building and Loan Associations):

Indo-China Struggle Is Similar To Korea

By PHIL NEWSOM
It's the dry season now in Indo-China. And like tinder awaiting the spark, the Indo-Chinese war has flared again, with the French suffering a serious defeat.

Once more the northern city of Hanoi is threatened.

Millions of the French now must decide whether to risk piecemeal destruction of their forces in isolated outpost fighting or to pull back for a perimeter defense of Hanoi itself.

The wars in Indo-China and Korea continue to build up strikingly similar characteristics.

One of the most recent developments was to add further proof that even the heaviest aerial bombing of enemy supply routes cannot prevent an enemy buildup.

The French have been attacking Communist supply routes persistently for a year. But despite all that, it has been estimated that during the just-ended rainy season the Reds were able to bring in 1,000 tons of supplies monthly from Red China.

The French have been desperately hoping for a truce in Korea, feeling that such a truce would have a direct bearing on their own situation in Indo-China.

They, along with most of the United Nations, believe that both wars are fed by the same flame—namely, Red China.

The French no longer believe they can win the Indo-China war, particularly so long as China continues to supply the Viet Minh Reds with arms and supplies. But they also believe that their own position is stronger and that they no longer can be forced out of Indo-China.

American aid has been increased to the point where it now comprises 40 per cent of the total military supplies.

Of further help in swinging the balance is the steady buildup of loyal Viet Nam troops.

An increasingly great effort is being made in both Indo-China and Korea to turn as much of the fighting as possible over to native forces.

The Viet Nam army now stands at four divisions and two more are forming.

But, meanwhile, just as the truce lull in Korea enabled the Reds to build up their forces there, so has the rainy season aided them in Indo-China. They now have about 400,000 regulars and auxiliaries and are capable of massing 20,000 to 40,000 men for a single battle.

Back In Court Over A Parakeet

CHICAGO (UP)—Donald Ward, 26, was back in court because he didn't give his former wife the bird.

Mrs. Betty Ward, 20, who divorced Ward last week, charged Monday that her former husband returned all of her possessions except Budgie, a parakeet.

Ward said he gave the bird to his mother.

DOUBLE 'BOUNCE'

MANCHESTER, N. H. (UP)—John J. Calvert of Sharpshooter, Ky., got $25 change last month when he paid a $75 fine for drunken driving with a $100 check.

Today he was held in $500 bail on a worthless check charge.

The Gulf Stream is more than 6,000 miles long from the Gulf of Mexico to the seas north of Norway.

Army Is Looking For A New Song To Tell Its Story

NEW YORK (UP)—The Army is whistling while it works these days, but the tunes are all a little bit sour.

The Army is looking for a new Army song and so far some 250 citizens have thought they had just what the Army ordered. The pick of the entries got a top level screening here last week, but the song search goes on.

Frank Pace, secretary of the Army, started the search by telling music industry officials last June that what the Army needed was an official marching song all branches of the service could sing.

"The Caisson Song" is a field artillery song. "Drive Old Army Team" is a West Point song. Nobody's ever come up with an Army version of "Anchor Aweigh," which was written as an anti-Army football song by a midshipman, class of 1907.

Now the Army, six top record companies and representatives of Broadcast Music, Inc., and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, are in on the search. Dr. Harold Arberg, chief of the music unit in the adjutant general's office in Washington, D. C., screens the entries first. Then the Music Industry Board meets at Governor's Island here to judge them.

"We already have enough songs to make a terrific Army musical show," Arberg explained just after putting the latest batch of choice entries before the board. "We have pep songs, hymn-type songs, tongue-in-cheek songs."

The perfect answers to the Army's problem, he indicated reluctantly, had not appeared.

"We have songs written by wounded veterans, by families of deceased veterans, by professional song writers and by amateurs," Arberg continued.

"You'd figure the recorded songs would have the advantage, but it isn't true," he said. "These judges are professionals—they detect the musical window dressing very quickly."

Need Psychology In Changing Sox

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP)—Do you call a psychologist when you change your sox? The Army does, especially when it concerns climate.

Dr. Robert F. Utter, of the University of New Mexico psychology department, has just returned from a year's leave of absence during which time he's been working on how to keep a soldier happy when he changes his clothes.

Utter, who was head of the psychology unit of the Quartermaster Climatic Research Laboratory at Lawrence, Mass., said that "Among other things, I was testing the reactions of the men to new types of clothing material. Since these materials feel different, we wanted to find out how long it took a soldier to get used to them." This can have a definite effect on the job the man does.

Imprisoned For Sacrificing Car

MCARTHUR, O. (UP)—After pleading guilty to a charge of placing an obstruction on a railroad track, Merrill W. Brown, 35, was sentenced to prison for a term not exceeding 10 years.

Brown was charged with parking his automobile on the tracks and letting a train hit it.

He said a payment was due on the mortgaged car.

Re-Examined Drivers Fail In Driving Tests

NEW YORK (AP)—Re-examination of licensed drivers by the State Bureau of Motor Vehicles last year resulted in the failure of one in every seven drivers to pass some portion of the test.

Cullen Burke, head license examiner, said such persons are kept off the road until corrective measures are taken. Under the re-examination program, any person involved in such an accident is subject to a retest. A reportable accident is one in which a person is injured or which results in more than $50 damage.

Of 1,200 drivers over 65,300 failed the retest and lost their licenses, Burke reported. Of 9,600 drivers re-examined under the three-accident rule, 1,200 failed at least one portion of the test, either the road test, the written examination or the eye test.

Police Reporter 'Hands It Over'

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP)—Hollywood to the contrary notwithstanding, a newspaper police reporter reacts just about like you would if a gunman asked you to "hand it over."

Albuquerque Tribune Reporter Bill Slevin was held up as he entered his apartment by a bandit with a gun "as big as a cannon." He told Slevin to "hand it over."

Air Force Adjusts Bomb Sight Lens To Fit Eyes

(FOR PM'S MON OCT 20)
By HARMON W. NICHOLS
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—Felix E. Flores, a civilian employee in the bombsight maintenance shop at Randolph Air Force Base in Texas, went to the base hospital with a problem.

It seems that he was having trouble calibrating the bombsights. Because he wore glasses, he was unable to focus the sight to calibrate it the way it should be calibrated.

Lt. Lester Zeff, the optometry officer of the hospital's eye clinic, gave the matter some thought and finally came up with an idea.

The officer's reasoning went like this:

The bombsight eye piece contains a lens suited for a man with perfect sight. Wouldn't it be just as easy to substitute a lens corrected for an individual prescription and let him do away with his glasses while operating the mechanism?

Some thought "yes, and others thought no, but after a meeting of minds the Air Force decided to give lieutenant's idea a whirl.

A special order for a lens made to fit Flores' eyes was sent to the St. Louis medical depot.

In due time the lens arrived at Randolph Flores tried it out and found that his efficiency improved by 50 percent in addition, his job was less tiring.

Zeff then ordered more lenses for bombardiers at the Randolph crew-training B-29 schools. He explained:

"Many of the men are recalled reservists in training. Since they last served the eyesight of some has changed, through no fault of their own.

"Many with perfect eyesight during the war now wear glasses. Operating a bombsight in rough weather is bad enough. But trying to adjust the sight with glasses on is twice as tough."

Crew members arriving for training now are cleared through the eye clinic. Bombardiers and navigators are screened for faulty eyesight and corrected eye pieces are ordered right away.

"Why navigators?" I asked Flores.

He explained their sextants also have glass eye pieces. Corrective lenses improve working conditions, efficiency and ease discomfort.

Zeff has a natural interest in the project. A bombardier himself during the war years, he flew 35 missions. He was recalled this year as an optometry officer.

A grateful bombardier at Forbes AFB in Kansas wrote the lieutenant:

"I am writing to thank you for the service that you rendered me. Since receiving my ground lens for the bombsight, my proficiency has increased. I no longer have the strain and poor results I had been getting. In time I am sure that many good men with poor eyesight will have no trouble qualifying."

British Doctors Lured To Serve N. C. Hospitals

RALEIGH (AP)—Two English doctors, attracted to North Carolina by an advertisement in the British Medical Journal, are expected to join the state's mental hospitals system soon.

Dr. David Young, general superintendent of the hospitals, said yesterday one of the doctors, a woman, will take a post at the understaffed State Hospital for Negroes at Goldsboro. The other will go to Kinston's Caswell Training School for feeble-minded children.

There is a possibility the state will get one or two more doctors from abroad, Dr. Young said. Already about half a dozen British doctors, some disgruntled with Britain's medical program, have joined the state's hospitals staff since World War II, he said.

Rocket Plane's Speed Is Secret

MUROC, Calif. (UP)—The Air Force clamped a "top secret" label on results of the first test flight of the Douglas X-3 research plane.

Sources, who declined to be named, reported that the experimental aircraft might be capable of breaking all existing speed and altitude records.

Aside from describing yesterday's test flight as a "success," the Air Force withheld all information concerning the plane's speed and performance.

Douglas test pilot Bill Bridgeman, who last year flew faster and higher than any man in history during a test of the Douglas Skyrocket, put the X-3 through its maiden flight.

The Skyrocket has attained a speed of 1,239 miles an hour and reached an altitude of 79,494 feet. It was believed that no attempt at new records was made yesterday with the X-3 although the unnamed sources said they believed the plane is capable of flying three times the speed of sound at altitudes up to 30,000 feet.

Twin jet engines reportedly power the plane which has a stainless steel fuselage.

Farmville Market Has $56.93 Day

FARMVILLE—The Farmville tobacco market yesterday sold 821,284 pounds of tobacco for $467,543.04, an average price per hundred pounds of $56.93.

"Sales are relatively light on the Farmville market today," Moore said, "and will probably be light until Friday."

Everett of Norfolk; one half-brother, Calvin Stokes of Trenton; three half-sisters, Mrs. Leila Dudley of Grifton, Mrs. Otis Causey of Washington, Mrs. Annie Smith of Durham. Twelve grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren also survive.

The volcano Vesuvius buried Pompeii when it erupted in the year 79 A.D.

Sen. Morse Once Offered Office

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Truman offered Sen. Wayne Morse (R-Ore) the job of attorney general last December but Morse turned it down, it was disclosed today.

Morse, who announced Saturday he is bolting the Republican ticket to back Democratic presidential nominee Adlai E. Stevenson, acknowledged in an interview that Mr. Truman had offered him "one of the top positions in the government."

But Morse said he rejected it because "I don't approve of Republicans in a Democratic cabinet or vice versa."

It was learned that Mr. Truman's offer to Morse was made at a White House conference last Dec. 20, and rejected by the senator on the grounds that to accept would violate Morse's concept of the two party system and violate his own assurance to Oregon voters that he would follow the course of an independent Republican.

R. O. Everette On Hospital's Staff

C. D. Ward, Pitt Memorial Hospital superintendent, announced today that R. O. Everette had joined the hospital staff as credit manager.

Everette resigned from the State Bank and Trust Company October 18 where he had been teller for almost three years to assume duties at the hospital. Before going to the bank, Everette was employed by the National Wholesale Company.

The new credit manager is a native of Greenville and attended the Greenville City Schools. He served in the United States Air Force for one year and following his graduation from State College, Everette lived in Ohio for a number of years. He returned to Greenville three or four years ago.

Everette stated yesterday that he was very pleased with his new job and pleased to be associated with Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Show 'New Look' In Paris Mode Of Dog Fashions

PARIS (UP)—Paris brought out a "new look" in dog clothing today, marked by lower hemlines and an "evening dress" collar for males.

The 1952 winter fashion collections for pedigreed canines were revealed at Chien Elegant (The Elegant Dog), right around the corner from most of the world's most famous women's style houses.

They were keynoted by color, comfort and warmth. Less of the dog will show than ever before, in view of the lower length of the gaily-colored plaids and reversible coats.

For cold days, the dog-dressmakers offered reversible tartan overcoats priced at 3,500 francs (11) or camel hair coats lined with woolen jersey costing 5,000 francs (15) and up.

The evening dress collar is made of stiff white material and fits the dog's neck just like the collar worn by his master when he dons white tie and tails. It costs 3,500 francs (11) and is recommended for tough-looking dogs.

BABY'S CHEST REBUILT—Mrs. Werner Wetzel smiles down at her sleeping baby, Linda, at Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago, where the child underwent unusual surgery. The infant was born with an incomplete chest. Surgeons transplanted a breastbone and parts of several ribs which were missing. The missing parts were taken from a still-born child. Little Linda was born Sept. 28. Doctors said it will be a month or perhaps a year, before the success of the operation can be determined. (AP Wirephoto).

to go along with the Republican congressman, too. In the eleventh district where Woodrow Jones is seeking a second term he is opposed by George Pritchard, sometimes called the "wily fox of the mountains." The Republican approach here is insidiously quiet, reminiscent of an Eastern Democrat's plaintive statement that the Republicans are eating into our majorities. Pritchard won election to congress once some years ago, and has been his party's candidate for Governor and Senator, always getting more votes than pre-election forecasts gave him. Reports from the district are that he will be watching this year.

SUMMARY — Boiled down to essentials the North Carolina campaign indicates that Republican strategy has been smarter than that used by the Democrats. While laughing up their sleeves at Democrats fighting each other over the candidates for President, and letting the Citizens for Eisenhower carry the ball in that contest, the regular Republican party organization is digging in to elect one or two members of the Congress and as many as possible members of the General Assembly and the various boards of County Commissioners. The Republicans seem to realize more fully than the Democrats that a vote for Eisenhower does not mean a vote for Walter Love or Walter Johnson or Charles Raper Jonas or George Pritchard; but that a vote for Love or Johnson or Jonas or Pritchard does mean a vote for Eisenhower. The Democratic campaign orators talk a lot about starting at the bottom, but devote major attention to the top. Meanwhile, the Republicans are working on the under-pinnings in the counties and districts.

Jones, while Republicans would give three Eisenhower votes for one Jonas ballot. Theory back of that alleged evaluation is that both parties are much more certain that Stevenson will win in the state than that Jones will win in the district. Stated another way, the decisive battle that will determine whether North Carolina remains wholly Democratic will be in the tenth congressional district rather than in the state as a whole.

WISFUL—In the sixth, eighth and eleventh districts Republican claims can be classed as wishful thinking rather than real optimism. Concerted effort is being made in the sixth district, especially in Guilford county, which casts more than 40 per cent of the Democratic vote and nearly 60 per cent of the Republican vote—to defeat incumbent Carl Durham. It is recognized as an almost hopeless task. In the eighth district supporters of Republican Walter Love, prominent and popular Union county attorney, are emphasizing the fact that incumbent Charles B. Deane is the most "New Dealish" of all freshmen in Congress in appealing to independent Eisenhower voters
