McCarthy's Talk Draws Comments

Demo Nat'l Committee Says Senator Helped Stevenson's Cause; Men Accused Of Leftist History Quick To Respond With 'Smear' Cry And 'Falsehoods'

WASHINGTON (UP) — Political circles greeted sen. Joseph R. McCarthy's "expose" of Democratic presidential candidate Adlai Stevenson today with a variety of comment.

The Democratic National Committee said the first result of the speech, coming "two minutes" after McCarthy finished, was an "immediate campaign contribution" for Stevenson.

Democratic vice - presidential nominee Sen. John Sparkman, making a campaign speech in Stockton, Calif., called McCarthy' address a "pathetic smear" and "last ditch defense of the Republican Old Guard."

"The soviet masters in the Kremlin must be laughing now," the Alabama senator said.

Sen. Frank Carlson, a prominent backer of GOP candidate Dwight D. Eisenhower, said the general does not owe McCarthy "anything" for the speech and remains "a no deal man."

Stevenson, who had warned his followers to expect "the most magnificent of all smears!" from McCarthy, said he did not hear the speech. But he referred to McCarthy in his own speech Monday night in New York's Harlem district.

He accused Eisenhower of "speaking with the voice of Taft, sometimes the voice of (Gov. James) Byrnes, sometimes the voice of Sen. (Richard M.) Nixon, and tonight, I am told, by the voice of Senator McCarthy."

Individuals in the Stevenson camp who were attacked by McCarthy for alleged Communist ties or background were quick to respond.

James A. Wechsler, editor of the New York Post who has assisted Stevenson in preparation of speeches, said "McCarthy's real targets are not Communists but free Americans who happen to disagree with McCarthy."

"I suggest to my fellow editors whether they support Eisenhower or Stevenson that McCarthy's attempts to silence anti-McCarthy editors are a very real threat to the freedom of the press," Wechsler said in New York.

Arthur Schlesinger Jr., a writer on the Stevenson staff, said McCarthy "tore a sentence out of context for the purpose of insinuating that I am pro-Communist." McCarthy quoted a Schlesinger article saying Communists should be allowed to teach in universities.

McCarthy dropped the last words of the sentence—"so long as they do not disqualify themselves by intellectual distortions in the classrooms."

Archibald MacLeish, former librarian of Congress and a member of a Harvard University group raising funds to defeat McCarthy, said the senator's attack on him was "a threat to all other citizens who criticize the Wisconsin senator."

MacLeish said his literary works were a "complete refutation . . . of the lie that I am or ever have been sympathetic with communism."

Americans for Democratic Action (ADA) referred to as "left wing" by McCarthy, said in a statement issued in Washington that the Wisconsin senator was carrying on "an attack not against Communism but against liberals."

Stevenson's Aides Included In Line Of Fire; Claims 'Record' Speaks

CHICAGO (UP)—Sen Joseph R. McCarthy left for Connecticut today after telling 1,400 howling admirers that Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson and some of his associates have long records of associations with alleged left-wing organizations.

The Wisconsin Republican made his long-awaited "documentation" of Stevenson's record before a nationwide television and radio audience Monday night.

Stevenson, McCarthy said, endorses "the suicidal Kremlin-shaped policies of this nation."

The senator was given a standing ovation when he entered the Grand Ballroom of the Palmer House where a partisan crowd had gathered— at $50 a plate—to dine and hear his speech.

McCarthy said an article carried in the "Communist Daily Worker" Oct. 19, 1952 proved Stevenson's "left-wing" support.

"They damn (Dwight D.) Eisenhower and what they call 'Eisenhowerism' in the most vicious terms," McCarthy said.

"They refer, and I quote, to 'their hatred of Eisenhowerism' and then go on to say that they do not like Stevenson too well either, but that if Communists want to vote for Stevenson—okay, vote for him. . ."

Wilson Wyatt, former housing expediter and now Stevenson's personal campaign manager, was among the presidential candidate's assistants who came under McCarthy's fire.

McCarthy said that Wyatt was a former president of the Americans for Democratic Action and added that the organization's main goals were recognition of Communist China, repeal of the Smith Act, opposition of loyalty oaths, condemnation of the FBI and opposition to the House Un-American Activities Committee.

The Wisconsin senator also censured Arthur Schlesinger Jr., noted historian and a Stevenson speech writer, Bernard DeVoto, whom he called a speech assistant, James Weschler, editor of the New York Post, who was termed a "ghost writer," and Archibald MacLeish.

In citing the "record" of the Illinois governor, McCarthy:

1. Said that in 1943 Stevenson was given the job of formulating postwar policy for Italy while an employe of the State Department. He quoted from a book by Gen. Walter Bedell Smith which he said described State Department policy in Italy as an attempt to "connive" to bring Communists into the Italian government.

2. Accused Stevenson of belonging to the policy-making Central Committee of the World Citizens Association. The group, McCarthy said, advocated a "super-world government."

3. Said that Hiss, a convicted perjurer accused of Communist associations, and Frank Coe, who McCarthy said had admitted under oath he was a Communist, both recommended Stevenson as a delegate to a conference of the Institute of Pacific Relations. McCarthy recalled that the IPR had been investigated by the McCarran Senate committee.

4. Said that Stevenson's court deposition in behalf of Hiss called the former State Department official's reputation "very good" instead of just good. However, the senator said he did not consider the deposition "standing alone as an important matter." He said "it is only a link in the chain of events which prove the case against Stevenson."

5. Charged that Stevenson "invited, sought out and brought" Hiss

Swartz Outlines Proposed Change In City Lighting

Study Being Made By Research Bureau; Plan Installing By June

Plans for erecting a new street lighting system for the city were discussed last night by Martin Swartz before the Greenville Merchants' Association Board of Directors.

Swartz, superintendent of the Greenville Utilities Commission, told the board members that a study is being made for a new lighting system by the Research Bureau of Cleveland and that it is hoped the system will be installed by June.

The utilities superintendent said the new system is being studied from a "safety angle" and will give protection to "foot traffic". At the present time, Swartz explained, light on Greenville streets are thrown upward instead of downward.

The present lighing system was installed in 1922 and merchants and business firms paid so much per front foot with the utilities and city furnishing the current and upkeep. Swartz said the merchants of the city would not be asked to pay for the new system which is under study.

Recommendations will be made by the bureau which is handling the study of a new lighting system.

Recommendations Made

H.L. Ormond, chairman of the legislative committee, reported on three recommendations which will be made to the State Merchants' Association Legislative Committee. The recommendations were approved by the board of directors and they are:

"That the appropriation for Distributive Education, provided it does not involve an increase in our present taxes, be placed at the same amount as it was before it was reduced at the last General Assembly.

"That there be no change in the present Wage and Hour Law and Unemployment Compensation law in case a bill is introduced in the next legislature but that the present laws be strenthened for loopholes of enforcement.

"That our senator and congressman be asked to vote against extension of Office of Price Stablization regulations, other than from the manufacturers level."

Christmas Decorations

A report was made last night on the progress of the Christmas street decorations for the city. In addition to light stringers, mountain laurel, which has been sprayed to keep it green, will be used on the streets.

In the center of the each stringer there will be a lighted toyland placque, having Santa faces, reindeers, and other designs appealing to children. A suggestion was made that the committee include a religious note, possible floats, in the 1952 Santa Claus parade. The matter will be taken up later.

It was announced that Thanksgiving, which is Thursday, November 27, is one of regular holidays observed by the association.

The November meeting of the Board of Directors will be held Monday, November 4, it was announced.

Rioting Convicts Hold 7 Guards

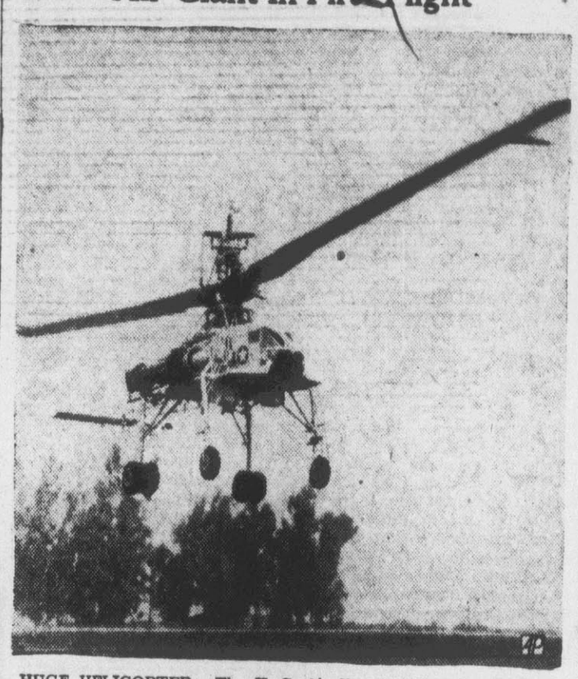

MENARD, Ill (UP) —More than 290 rioting convicts today demanded to speak with Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson and threatened to hurl seven captive guards from the top of a 40-foot tier of cells if authorities used gunfire to quell the riot.

The prisoners let it be known early today that they wanted to present their grievances about the state prison here directly to Stevenson, the Democratic presidential candidate.

When told he was on a campaign trip in the east, they said "if he can fly there he can fly back here."

Meanwhile 45 state policemen and 280 prison guards hemmed in the rioting convicts with riot guns, but were careful not to excite an incident that might cost the lives of the seven hostages.

Air Force's XH-17 largest helicopter ever built in this country, rises above the runway at the Hughes Aircraft plant in Culver City, Calif., where it was built, in what the Hughes company described as its first flight. It had risen off the ground a few feet in previous tests. The craft, equipped with rotor blades measuring 125 feet from tip to tip, is intended to carry heavy equipment such as artillery, bridge sections, trucks, etc. (AP Wirephoto)

Electrocuted In Fishing Accident

Coast Guard Hunts Body Of Local Man, Knocked Into Sound

ELECTROCUTED (34) P S. S. Arthur of Greenville was electrocuted yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock while on a fishing trip aboard his 22-foot sailboat.

The Coast Guard reported this morning that the accident occured in the vicinity of the Atlantic Beach bridge. Arthur was reported to have been pulling up the anchor when he brushed against steel mast riggings.

The mast, which was 31 feet above water, had just hit a power line carrying 15,000 volts of electricity. Arthur was knocked from the boat by the impact and disappeared into the water.

Coast Guardsmen from the lifeboat station at Fort Macon began searching for the body after the accident but the body has not been recovered by noon today. His wife was with him on the fishing trip. She was uninjured.

Arthur, a pipe-organ expert and salesman, married to the former Verna Stancill, came to Greenville a number of years ago from Kinston. They made their residence in Greenville at 213 Paris Avenue.

Kills Dog Pack That Attacked, Slew Salesman

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (UP)—Sheriff Madison Spears said today he and his deputies had destroyed a pack of nine "blood-thirsty" dogs which Saturday attacked and killed a crippled magazine salesman near here.

Spears said the animals belonged to farmer Wesley Trussell and were beagle hounds, German Police, shepherd and mongrels.

The victim, 47-year-old William Pierce, was set upon by the animals as he peddled his papers and magazines. There were no witnesses but Spears said ground marks indicated the dogs chased Pierce into a deep ditch near the highway and there bit him to death as he struggled to get away.

The man's body was partially devoured. County Atty. L. G. Weir said the left arm was "stripped of flesh. All the toes were eaten from the right foot and parts of the right arm and lower legs were gone, too."

Byrnes Says His Objection Is To Carpetbaggers

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Gov. James F. Byrnes of South Carolina says he is supporting Gen. Eisenhower because "some of the carpetbaggers now in control of the National Democratic Party have caused the party to desert" its fundamental principles.

Byrnes, a lifelong Democrat who was war mobilizer, secretary of state and Supreme Court justice in the administrations of Presidents Roosevelt and Truman adds "I have not deserted the principles of the Democratic Party" in supporting the Republican presidential candidate.

He said in a radio and television speech over a Carolinas network last night that Eisenhower "could do more than any other American to put an end to the Korean War, avoid World War III, and restore confidence in government."

IT WASN'T GAMBLING

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UP)—Judge Beverly Boushe dismissed gambling charges against 11 men when they explained that "drink or smell" was just a friendly card game where the loser got to drink a beer while the loser merely got a sniff.

Biggest Yet

RALEIGH (AP)—The number of Tar Heels registered for next Tuesday's election undoubtedly is the largest in history.

Raymond Maxwell, secretary of the State Board of Elections, said so yesterday and put the figure at upwards of 1,800,000. He said this compares with 1½ million to 1,600,000 registered for the 1948 general election.

During the three-week period which ended last Saturday, Maxwell estimated 100,000 persons were registered. Every registration official he spoke to, he said, told him registration was heavier than anticipated.

The big registration has led some to predict the state may see its first one-million vote election. Twice the state has gone over the 800,000 mark.

Fire Sub-Station Given Go-Ahead

Work Expected To Start Soon, Says Mayor Page

City officials yesterday afternoon gave the "go ahead" sign on the fire sub-station project in West Greenville, and work is expected to begin almost immediately.

Mayor Lester D. Page reported this morning a special meeting of the Finance and Building committees of the Board of Aldermen was held late yesterday at the old curb market, and at that time members of both committees gave the project their immediate approval.

Page said remodeling work will not begin until he contacts other members of the board, which, he stated, he plans to do either today or tomorrow. "Work should begin sometime this week," he declared.

The work will be done by a private contractor under the supervision of the city, the mayor disclosed, and will be done more or less on a "cash plus" basis. Cost of the project has tentatively been set at $11,500.

"The plans originally drawn up and approved by Fire Chief George Gardner will be followed almost to the letter," the mayor asserted. "The only changes will be possibly some discrepancies in materials."

Third Appeal To High Court By Lafayette Miller

RALEIGH (UP) — The State Supreme Court received a third appeal yesterday from a Beaufort County Negro sentenced to death for the shotgun slaying of a young white farmer.

LaFayette Miller, 22-year-old Negro who had been sentenced to die last April 25, has had appeals rejected by the Beaufort County Superior Court and Gov. Kerr Scott. He appealed to the high court last spring and the appeal was docketed yesterday.

Miller has contended in all three appeals that his constitutional rights were violated. He charged that Negroes were barred from the grand jury which indicted him and the jury which originally convicted him.

He is charged with the fatal shooting of Harvie C. Boyd, 21-year old farmer.

Most Of Miners Follow 'Orders', Return To Work

All But A Handful In Pits Again; No Holdouts Reported At Fields

By HERB LIPPINCOTT
United Press Staff Correspondent

PITTSBURGH (UP) —All but a handful of the nation's 375,000 soft coal miners returned to work today on orders from their boss John L. Lewis to end their one-week protest walkout.

The first miners reported to the pits yesterday after the United Mine Workers president issued his back-to-work statement in Washington, following a White house conference with President Truman and industry leaders.

The miners struck in protest to a Wage Stabilization Board decision which cut 40 cents from the $1.90 a day wage increase granted by the soft coal operators.

An industry spokesman said that West Pennsylvania mines were working at 95 per cent of capacity today and that the situation was "good." He said a few mines failed to open because the "word had not reached some districts until "late."

In the Southern fields, a spokesman for the producers said the miners resumed work in "practically all the mines" in the district.

There were no reports of holdouts in any of the fields.

Lewis' telegram to district UMW leaders pointed out that a "joint industry request to the executive branch of the government for approval of the industry agreement is pending" and "will take a reasonable time" for a decision on the wage boost.

Economic Stabilizer Robert L. Putnam said in Washington today he will not act on the industry-union petition to reverse the WSB until the coal operators come up with further material supporting the request for the full increase.

Putnam said he could either send the petition to the WSB, rule on it himself or send it "upstairs" to the White House. Indications were that a decision would not be reached until the middle of next week, after the elections.

Meanwhile, Harry M. Moses, president of the Bituminous Coal Operators' Association, was reported to be drawing up evidence to support granting of the full $1.90 a day wage increase. It was expected to be turned over to Putnam in "a day or so."

UMW officials across the country reported that miners in their districts were complying with Lewis' request to return to work and would be back in full strength today.

Olla Ray Boyd Calls Demo Rally Friday Evening

Olla Ray Boyd, perennial candidate and Pinetown pig breeder, will hold a Democratic rally here Friday night, at 8 o'clock in the Pitt County courthouse.

A candidate for the presidential nomination, Boyd said in his statement to the press that he was the first candidate to pull out and support Adlai Stevenson by proclamation.

At the rally Friday night, Boyd said he would speak on why he picked Stevenson. Boyd also stated he would not answer questions at the rally but would invite Democratic candidates for public office to speak with him.

Reported Crime Was 'Rehearsal'

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (UP) — Telephone calls poured into police headquarters Monday when two men were seen pumping bullets into a body in a field outside town.

Police raced to the scene and quickly caught the two men.

They were FBI agents engaged in a crime problem. The "body" was a dummy.

All Hills Guarding Seoul Re-Taken In Bloody Battle

Full Chinese Regiment Of More Than 2,000 Men Destroyed In Fight

SEOUL, Korea (UP) — U. S. Marines recaptured all lost vital hills guarding Seoul today after destroying a full Chinese regiment of more than 2,000 men in 36 hours of bloody fighting.

Attacking in heavy fog, the leathernecks mopped up "The Hook" and seized the outpost hills "Frisco", "Ronson" and "Warsaw" by 8:40 a.m. (6:40 p.m. Monday EST) against little opposition. The reds had captured the heights in a "human sea" assault Sunday night.

"We are now in complete control of the situation", said Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Pollock, commander of the 1st Marine Division. "It will take a hell of a big force to kick us off again. I consider one full Chinese regiment has been destroyed in this fighting."

All the contested heights lay on the Western front near Panmunjom scene of the abortive Korean armistice talks. They guarded one of the main invasion corridors to Seoul.

Although the Communists at one time early Monday penetrated the principal Allied defense line, an 8th Army briefing officer said the main defenses "were not seriously in danger" any time during the enemy's "little offensive".

Small Red groups punched at the U.N. line as far east as Kosong near the coast.

Two Red platoons clawed their way up steep Heartbreak Ridge and seized two bunkers. Allied troops quickly cleaned them out.

Other probes along the front, northwest and northeast of the Punchbowl and near "Luke the Gook's Castle," also were beaten off without trouble. An attack against Sniper Ridge on the central front likewise was thrown back.

Eisenhower Angered By Charge Korean Issue Could Have Delayed Armistice; Stevenson Tells Big Harlem Audience Problems Cannot Be Solved By Promises

Stevenson tackled today one of the toughest schedules of his campaign, a program that called for a 90-mile tour of New Jersey as a preliminary to a big Democratic shindig tonight at Madison Square Garden.

Stevenson's itinerary for the day also included an automobile ride through New York's famous garment district and a 10-minute address to women Democrats at the Commodore Hotel.

The Democratic presidential candidate went into Harlem Monday night and told an estimated 125,000 listeners, most of them Negroes, that the civil rights problem could not be solved by "easy promises."

He also denounced Dwight D. Eisenhower as a political chameleon, saying he changed his political ideals to match those of his audience.

"I am not a Vandenberg internationalist in Michigan and a Chicago Tribune isolationist in Chicago," Stevenson said. "I talk the same way about tidelands oil in Texas as I do in Michigan and I talk the same way about civil rights in Richmond as I will talk here tonight."

Stevenson told his audience he would only earn its contempt if he promised "we could infallibly attain peace or maintain prosperity, or achieve equal opportunity."

"All I can say is that these are my objectives and I shall work toward them as devotedly and as untiringly as I can," he said.

He told the Harlem throng he had found a bug in Eisenhower's proposal to convene state governors and work out a solution to the fair employment practices problem.

Stevenson said that was a "neat formula." But he added that he, as governor of Illinois, had tried to enact an FEPC bill in his state and "it was the Republican legislators who killed" it.

NEW YORK (UP)—Dwight D Eisenhower, angry over charges his pledge to visit Korea "may have delayed an armistice," took his campaign today to two heavily populated Long Island counties.

He devoted the entire morning to a trip by automobile through the counties of Queens and Nassau, where voters have set new registration records, in a renewed bid for the state's 45 electoral votes.

The Republican presidential candidate returned to the city by train following a one-day stumping tour of Pennsylvania, also a key state in the election just one week away.

Eisenhower was particularly angered by Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson's charge that his promise to visit the Korean battlefront could have delayed an armistice.

He co...charged at Pittsburgh Monday night that Stevenson, the Democratic candidate, had a mentality "completely untutored" for the "tough business" of dealing with Russia.

He repeated his promise to make the Korean trip the top item on his agenda if he is elected president of the United States.

"If a journey to Korea and a close study of our military and political problems there can save the life of a single American soldier and bring peace of mind to a single American family, I must make that journey," he said. "I shall make that journey."

A crowd of 11,000 persons that jammed the Hunt Armory at Pittsburgh cheered the former general when he pictured Stevenson as an advocate of concession to Russia.

Plan To Meet Reign Of Terror In Protectorate

TUNIS, Tunisia (UP)—Worried French authorities met here today in a "council of war" to plan measures to stamp out a mounting reign of terror.

Bombings, shootings, murder and sabotage have been employed by fanatical nationalists in recent weeks to draw attention to their demands before the United Nations for home rule for this French North African protectorate.

French sources said the terrorist tactics have "increased to an odious extent."

The French residency refused to discuss the decisions taken at a hurriedly called morning-long conference that brought together the commanding general of French troops, the commanding air general, the director of security services and the inspector general of civil control.

'That Was Fun', Says Young Trio

SALIDA, Colo. (UP)—A state patrolman chased an automobile for 15 miles at speeds up to 95 miles an hour Monday before forcing the car to a halt.

Three young boys, all under 14 years of age, stepped out of the stolen vehicle.

"Boy that was fun, let's do it again," one of them said. They were held for automobile theft.

Tobacco Barn Slaying Goes To Trial In Superior Court Today

The case of James "Bud" Nicholson, Clayroot Negro charged with the first degree murder of a fellow tobacco worker late this summer, is slated to go on trial in Pitt Superior Court today.

Nicholson is alleged to have shot a fellow worker in the back with a rifle following an argument at a tobacco barn near Clayroot. He was placed in Pitt County jail after the shooting and has been held there since that time.

It was not known early today whether the state will press for a first degree verdict, but with three other murder cases on the calendar it is conceivable Solicitor W. J. Bundy might accept a plea of guilty to a lesser charge.

Cases Heard

Criminal cases disposed of yesterday by Judge W. C. Harris are:

Henry King, pleaded guilty to driving drunk, sentenced to 60 days on roads suspended on condition he pay a fine of $100 and costs and surrender his driver's license for 12 months.

H. Gradis $28.

Linwood C. Dail, pleaded guilty to giving a worthless check and sentenced to six months on the roads, suspended for two years on condition he make good the amount of the check and pay a fine of $25 and costs.

App Edwards, assault with a deadly weapon, pleaded not guilty and adjudged not guilty.

Earl Jones, pleaded guilty to breaking and entering and larceny and sentenced to 12 months on the roads.

A case against Lance Pitt was nol prossed with leave.

Court is scheduled to be in session through Friday afternoon.

Truman Raps 'One Party Press' For Criticism Of His Campaign

By DAYTON MOORE
United Press Staff Correspondent

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UP)—President Truman said today that newspapers and Republicans should be "shocked and horrified by the facts I have brought out" instead of criticizing his "Give 'em hell" campaign technique.

In a speech prepared for delivery here, the President lashed out at what he called the "one party press" and its "lofty editorials."

"Maybe they are all ashamed of this man they now support," Mr. Truman said of newspaper editors.

"Instead of hurling epithets at me, they should be calling on their favored candidate to face up to the grave defect in his own course of conduct and in his party's record."

The President was scheduled to stop at Winona, Red Wing and Hastings, Minn., before arriving here at 11 a.m. c.s.t. He will push on to Minneapolis, Duluth and Hibbing for a major night speech.

The President had bitter criticism for Dwight D. Eisenhower, the Republican presidential candidate. He went on to list the "facts" he had brought out.

He said he pointed out that Eisenhower's New York meeting with Sen. Robert A. Taft and the statement Taft issued later "meant surrender to the Republican Old Guard."

"When the Republican candidate began to shout that the Democratic party has been too well disposed toward the Soviets at the close of World War II, I pointed out—citing from his own book and his own testimony before Congress—that he had suffered more than most from soft delusions about Soviet intentions."

Mr. Truman commented that he had said that Eisenhower's promises for a budget cut "involved abandoning our Allies and crippling our own armed forces."

"The general's promises meant nothing but surrender to the policies of isolationism, in the guise of a budget cut," he said.

He said he pointed out that Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy of Wisconsin and Sen. William E. Jenner of Indiana, whom Eisenhower has endorsed, "falsely slandered his own great benefactor, Gen. George C. Marshall."

"I called that action a betrayal of morality and principle," Mr. Truman said.

Mr. Truman said that Eisenhower had "accepted" former Sen. Chapman Revercomb of West Virginia although "this man's record was so shameful and full of prejudice that even (New York Gov.) Thomas Dewey refused to endorse him in 1948. I stated that the present candidate must take responsibility for the company he chose to keep."

Monday night at Gary, Ind., Mr. Truman accused Eisenhower of being "thoroughly dishonest" about the Korean situation.

In a special statement issued on his campaign train, the President said that Eisenhower's speech in Detroit last Friday on Korea "was clearly an attempt to deceive the American people."

Many Activities Reported By Farmville Student Body

FARMVILLE — Farmville High School held its annual homecoming on Friday, October 24.

On Thursday night the cheerleaders held a snake dance and bonfire with the student body in a pep rally. Friday afternoon the band in full dress led a parade of homecoming kings and queens at 2:30 p.m. The football game on Friday night with Vanceboro drew a large crowd of football fans. The final event on the schedule was the coronation of the king and queen at a dance which is sponsored each year by the Commercial Club.

Those who competed for the homecoming kings and queens were grade 9 — Barbara Dilda, Mark Owens; grade 10—Ernestine Moseley, Jack Farrior; grade 11—Sylvia Allen, Van Mozingo; grade 12—Dotdee Jones, Billy Shackleford.

The Farmville High School Band has accepted invitations to appear in the Shrine Parade in Oxford on Thursday, November 6, and to participate in the Band Festivities at the Carolina-Virginia football game on Saturday, November 8.

The Farmville team will have only one more home game, which will be with LaGrange on October 31. The Farmville Midgets will play Tarboro Midgets in Farmville on October 29, and the LaGrange Midgets will play in Farmville on November 10.

The Farmville Junior Class has recently completed its annual magazine subscription drive and the total amount of subscriptions amounted to over $2000.00. The class receives approximately 30 per cent for their use.

The regular assembly periods for the high school and elementary school have begun and the band gave the first assembly program for both groups, and will be followed by Mrs. Williams' glee clubs. After that the programs will continue until all rooms have presented at least one program. In addition six programs have been scheduled from the Southeast School Assembly which includes educational and entertaining programs. The second one of these is scheduled for next Tuesday.

The Farmville High School students will vote on November 4. Under the direction of Miss Edwards, faculty member, and Jess Spencer and Harold Flanagan, who attended Boys State last summer, plans are now under way for the Eisenhower-Stevenson vote along with the nation. Homerooms have been set up as precincts and registration places. On November 3 an assembly program will be devoted to a discussion of the candidates and then on November 4 each homeroom will vote by Australian Ballot. The tally will be made and announced before the day is over.

Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Messick entertained last night at an informal reception honoring a group of educators who are spending this week at East Carolina College as representatives of the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education.

Faculty members at the college and supervising teachers in city schools called at the college president's home on East Fifth Street during the evening to meet the guests of honor and to enjoy Dr. and Mrs. Messick's hospitality.

The receiving line in the music room was made up of the host and the hostess and President Charles Spain of Morehead State College, Morehead, Ky.; Dr. Marjorie Palmquist and Dr. Monroe Wickers, also of Morhead; Dr. James Hillman of the Department of Public Instruction, Raleigh; Dr. W. A. Hartley and Dean Kenneth Brown of Maryland State Teachers College; and Dr. Wilbur Devilbliss, dean of the school of education, University of Maryland.

The president's home was attractively decorated for the social event in floral and fruit arrangements in brilliant fall colors. The table in the dining room had as a centerpiece an epergne filled with purple grapes, fruits, nuts and autumn leaves. A bowl of marigolds and acuba ornamented the mantel. A serving table in the sun porch was decorated with a design similar to that on the dining table. Elsewhere chrysanthemums and sprays of myrtle and pyracantha gave the spacious reception rooms a festive air.

Dr. and Mrs. Leo W. Jenkins received guests as they arrived. Mrs. J. L. Fleming, Mrs. Lloyd Bray, Mrs. Agnes Barrett and Miss Ruth White presided in the dining room and the sun porch, where refreshments of pie, mints, nuts and coffee were served.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
October 28, 1912

Charles Laughinghouse and Richard King, having one suitcase between them and each with a crisp new $5 bill in his pocket hiked it to the westbound Norfolk Southern train Monday evening for a trip to Raleigh to do the Capital City and Ringling's circus today. They were to be met at the station by Capt. J. J. Laughinghouse, grandfather of Charles Laughinghouse, who had invited them to come up and spend the night with him in the superintendent's quarters of the state prison and be his guests for the circus. So while the boys were "locked in" last night, it goes without saying that they were at large today and what they fail to see around Raleigh and the circus won't be worth looking for. They are the real article, those boys are, and will be able to report the time of their lives when they get back home. What they will tell their pa's and other boys will be a plenty.

Pictures Of Mexican Trip Shown Garden Club Group

The first regular meeting of Greenville's Garden Club was called to order by the new president, Mrs. Sam Mitchell. New members and guests were introduced as well as officers and executive board members.

In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Clara Shackell read the minutes of the last meeting and gave the recommendations of the executive board. Recommendations were as follows: to have a Christmas show at the Woman's Club; to sponsor a bird building contest; sell shrubbery from the Orton Gardens; have the annual Garden Club picnic. Mrs. Kyser gave the treasurer's report and read the committees for the year.

Mrs. K. B. Pace, program chairman, introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Francis Neel from East Carolina College, who gave a very interesting account of his trip to Mexico with the aid of his own personal motion pictures. Mr. Neel stressed and placed emphasis on the growth and vegetation of beautiful Mexico from the flat plains country to Monterrey's Saddle Mountain, thence to Victoria where the road crosses the Tropic of Cancer and enters the Torrid Zone into tropical country. Giant cactus and dense vegetation prevail in the valleys. This section produces orchids and bamboo and plowing with team of oxen and wooden plow is a common sight as are also the corn patches high on the side of the mountains. In Mexico City closeups of its many beautiful flowers produced by its excellent climate were seen.

Mr. Neel told of going to Xochimilco, the "floating gardens" where flower-decked boats carry visitors around. The gardens once were rafts built and anchored in the lake by the Aztecs who covered them with earth and vegetation. His movies then followed a route to Cuernavaca where pictures of the famous Borda gardens were shown. Cuernavaca is where Maximilian and Carlotta had their summer home. Mexico is a mecca for horticulturists and no motion picture can do the profusion of lovely growth and flowers justice, stated the speaker.

After Mr. Neel's talk Mrs. W. J. Stell gave a short talk on "garden hints," which was designed to give some practical advice to gardeners in the Greenville area. Mrs. Stell said that this was the time to plant and divide perennials and to plant annual seeds such as larkspur, flax, and straw flowers. Winter grass and bulbs can be planted up until Christmas. She urged members to try new varieties of daffodils and baby glads. Lilies, daffodils and tulips grown in clumps make more beautiful sights than those planted in rows, she suggested.

Mrs. Stell announced that Mr. Sprunt from Orton Gardens would be here on November 21 to lead a discussion on plant therapy and answer any questions any member would have about their plants.

The meeting was adjourned and guests and members were invited to delicious refreshments served from a beautifully appointed table. The decorations throughout the Club were masses of fall flowers tastefully arranged. The hostesses for the day were Mrs. J. L. Winstead, chairman, assisted by Mesdames J. L. Fleming, J. B. White, Ernest Woolard, W. J. Bundy, F. J. Diener, N. C. Brooks, R. V. Keel, P. E. Wells, Raleigh Bland, R. C. Deal and Miss Cammie Moore. Guests were Mrs. Zeno Edwards and Mrs. Sam Brooks. New members are Mrs. Victor E. Wells, Mrs. J. B. Boyd, Mrs. M. P. Duval, Mrs. K. N. Cuthbert, Mrs. Howard Fuller and Mrs. C. A. Scruggs.

Women In The Church

By Mary Fowler

The Methodist Church reports that enrolled in its Woman's Society of Christian Service and in its Wesleyan Service Guild there are now a total of 1,722,011 women of the Church. These constitute a major division of the Board of Missions of the denomination. Overseas the Methodist Women maintain about 700 mission stations and institutions in 27 different nations; 588 women missionaries and several hundred nationals of these countries are engaged in the work — from kindergartens to colleges, social settlements and churches; and for this overseas work they expend about $2,780,000 annually. Within the United States and its territories and possessions, these same women support 283 deaconesses, 22 home missionaries, and 1,200 unordained lay workers; and expend $2,340,000 per annum. In addition, the women maintain a "Department of Christian Social Relations and Local Church Activities" which has become a strong social action group on both national and local levels. Mrs. Frank G. Brooks, of Mount Vernon, Iowa, is national president.

Miss Catherine Lee Wahlstrom, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Los Angeles Calif., has been named associate executive director of the Department of Social Welfare in the National Council of Churches. A former USO director, and later engaged in church welfare work in Los Angeles and in New York, Miss Wahlstrom believes that ministers should cooperate with social agencies in handling many problems that are too complex for the clergy alone. "Churches," she says, "should be concerned with raising standards of living, helping people in trouble, and generally strengthening the spiritual base of social work."

Miss Cordelia Cox, who, as director of the Lutheran Resettlement Service, aided in the settlement of several hundred European DP's in the United States during recent years, was one of the church representatives who appeared before the President's Commission on Immigration and Naturalization urging that doors be opened wider to permit refugees to enter this nation. "Immigration should be recognized as desirable and valuable," said Miss Cox, "and an immigration quota in keeping with our need and with our ability to integrate newcomers should be established."

Testing Program Ups Production Of N. C. Cows

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—The average North Carolina cow being tested under the Dairy Herd Improvement Association testing program returned $197 more profit to the owner last year than the average untested cow.

Marvin E. Senger, state college extension dairy specialist, says it isn't the testing itself that makes the difference but the use of the testing results. The average cow in the testing program produced 8,156 pounds of milk and 351 pounds of butterfat last year, Senger points out. The average cow in the state not in the program produced only 4,450 pounds of milk and 198 pounds of butterfat.

The testing results enable a dairyman to feed each cow according to her production. Senger says the testing results also show the dairyman how his cows respond to various feeding practices.

Scientists think that nothing can go faster than light because it is believed that the weight of a body increases with its speed and at the speed of light it would have infinite weight.

MOULDING CHARACTER

Some time ago a fond grandfather was reading to his little granddaughter the story of the Garden of Eden. As the story unfolded and the snake kept urging Eve to eat of the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, the little child cried out in horror, "That snake's telling a lie."

It was a striking example of the innocence of childhood, the thing which Jesus had in mind when he said, "Unless ye become as little children, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven." Here was a child who had not become hardened to life's evil, for whom a lie was still a dreadful thing. Furthermore, the circumstance indicated how plastic is the nature of childhood and how readily it can be molded into anything we care to make it.

A great responsibility rests upon parents to establish very early in the lives of their children a profound sense of the shocking difference between good and evil. When they grow older and confront temptations, they will be delivered—if they are delivered at all—not chiefly by the exercise of common sense and reason but by the emotional set which has been established in their lives largely through the influence of the home.

Parents have an awesome responsibility resting upon them. They need the whole power of the Word of God behind them in molding the character of their children.

Is This Pitt County Or Chicago?

Is this Pitt County, Chicago . . . or Charlotte?

Most people who visit Pitt County and its various communities get the impression of nice, quiet, small cities and towns where nothing exciting happens except on occasion; and the people get along with one another in the easy-going manner typical of Southern communities.

If a stranger looked at the docket for this week's criminal term of Pitt Superior Court, he might, unfortunately, get an altogether different impression of the county.

When the term of court opened yesterday there were six people charged with murder and their cases slated either for trial or grand jury action. For one term of court that is a large number of murder cases for most any county — particularly Pitt.

If there were six murder cases on the docket in Mecklenburg County it probably would not cause much concern since Charlotte often has been ranked among the cities of the nation with the highest number of homicides per capita. If there were six murder cases on the docket in a single week in Chicago, it would cause no comment, for the city has earned the dubious distinction of having a great number of slayings.

Here in our own back yard it is an entirely different story. The citizens are aware of the fact that Pitt County slaughters more than its share of people on the highways. The Reflector certainly hopes the county is not now in the process of gaining a reputation for a high homicide rate in addition to its bad highway reputation.

The cause for the unusually large number of murder cases on the Superior Court docket this week can not be laid at the feet of any one group, nor can any unusual conditions or circumstances be blamed. There are a number of intangible factors which could enter the picture. It could be an attitude of apparent leniency on the part of juries or in the penal system of North Carolina. It could be any one of a dozen causes that are difficult to guage.

It suffices to say that half a dozen murder cases in one week of court in Pitt County are indeed too many.

Every effort should be made on the part of the citizens, the law enforcement officers and the courts to cut the homicide rate in the county before a marked increase in murders becomes a pattern.

Questions About The Jaycee Petition

With the circulation of petitions by Greenville Jaycees calling for a vote on the council-manager form of municipal government there are several questions which have been brought up by local citizens.

First of all, what does the petition entail; what does it mean?

The petition being circulated by the Jaycees requests an election be called by Greenville officials on the question of whether or not Greenville shall adopt the form of municipal government called "Plan D" in the state statutes on Municipal Corporations.

If the petition is signed by as many as 25 per cent of the qualified voters of the city, it is mandatory that an election be called on the question. At the time of the election — provided the petition is signed by the required number of voters — the citizens of the city will decide whether they want the new form of government or to continue under the present aldermanic form of government the city now has.

What is "Plan D"?

It is the only form of council-manager government which is provided for in the general statutes of the state that can be called to a vote in any municipality by a petition of the voters, without special legislation. Under Plan D there are five councilmen elected at large from the city, and one of the members is designated by the council as mayor. The council hires a city manager who, according to the provisions of the statute, has charge of all the department go into operation if adopted?

Can Plan D be altered?

Yes. But unless the vote on the plan were called an act of the legislature rather than a petition, the form of government to be voted on must be Plan D as provided for in the statutes. If the plan is adopted, and at any time the citizens of the city want to change any part of it, such changes can be made by legislative acts. In other words if the people wanted to vote on the mayor as a separate officer rather than just elect five councilmen, the council-manager Plan D could be altered by the General Assembly to provide for it.

The same thing would be true of any other alterations which were needed to make the council-manager form of government more suitable to the particular needs of Greenville.

When would the new form of government go into operation if adopted

If the council-manager form of government were adopted by the voters of Greenville before the city election in May, new officials could be elected at the regular city election, and the new form of government could begin operation at the beginning of the fiscal year July 1. If the election on the question were held before the General Assembly meets in January, any alterations in Plan D could be presented to the legislature during its regular session and the necessary changes which were desired session of the General Assembly which will be held in 1955.

Do the people of Greenville want to vote on the matter of changing to a council-manager form of government?

To that question we do not know the answer. The answer must come from the people themselves in the form of signatures on the petition which the Jaycees are circulating.

The Reflector believes a large majority of the citizens of Greenville would welcome a vote on the council-manager form of government. We urge the people of Greenville to sign the Jaycee petitions calling for the vote on the question so the citizens will have the opportunity to say at the polls whether they want a change to a new form of municipal government.

could be made. Otherwise the Plan D form of government, if it were adopted by local voters, could not be altered until the next

WASHINGTON—Indirect but effective political pressure by the State Department is largely responsible for the fact that so many European governments and peoples prefer the election of Governor Stevenson instead of General Eisenhower. In view of Ike's role in liberating Europe and building a postwar defense organization, this is one of the curious developments of the campaign.

Secretary Acheson has notified European capitals that he cannot guarantee continued financial aid after June 30, 1953. In a certain sense, this is only a routine notice that the outgoing Truman Administration can give no assurance that the next Congress will appropriate funds for military and economic assistance to our allies.

OVERSEAS PROGRAM—But the odd fact is that State has never before issued such a warning. It is also strange that the notice should be given on the eve of the election, and almost four months before the next Congress convenes. Furthermore, General Eisenhower has indicated that he favors the overseas program, although he may trim it for budgetary reasons, if elected.

In addition to issuing this warning, Acheson is slowing down on almost every other form of overseas activities until after the election. Although several hundred men and women have been trained and cleared for foreign service in diplomatic, Point Four and other fields, and are already on the Federal payroll, their departure has been postponed until after November 4.

PRICE WE PAID—As evidence of the Administration's outright but unpublicized repudiation of the Yalta-Potsdam deals, there is the recent note to Moscow concerning the future of German and the Japanese peace treaty. Both the note and the treaty are Truman-Acheson products.

The Japanese treaty provides specifically that the United States does not recognize Russian rights in the Sakhalin, Kuriles and other islands in that area, or Soviet holdings in Manchuria. All of these concessions were granted to Moscow by F.D.R. at Yalta, and underwritten by Truman at Potsdam.

They were the price we paid for Russia's eight days of war against Japan, although most of our military experts held that we did not need Red reinforcement. Postwar documents from Tokyo's secret diplomatic and military files reveal that the Japs would have surrendered without Russian intervention.

Almost the only military man who favored acceptance of Russian reinforcement was General George C. Marshall, then Chief of Staff. Generals Eisenhower and MacArthur are said to have thought it unnecessary for final victory.

They Don't Hate Everything American

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

If you read the newspaper you already know that a member of the Greenville Junior Chamber of Commerce will be ringing your door bell some time during the next few days to face you with a petition for your signature. That is, you will be confronted if you are a registered voter in Greenville. The JC's have a list of all registered voters to use as a guide. This list was mimeographed under the direction of the drive chairman, J. B. Kittrell Jr. No doubt it will be invaluable in the future for many other purposes.

What the petition amounts to is simply this: If 25 per cent of the Greenville registered voters sign it, then Greenville will have a referendum vote on the question: (1) Keep our present form of City Government, or (2) install plan "D"; that is, a Mayor, council, and city manager.

If you sign the petition, all you are asking for is a vote on this question. For a background on the question the JC's have had speakers from neighboring towns to discuss this form of government from every angle. The original intention was to find just as many speakers against the City Manager plan as were for it, but that was impossible. Every representative from a town that knows the City Manager plan came over to sing its praises.

Here are some facts that the JC's will tell you about the City Manager plan: There are 24 North Carolina towns with a population of less than 9,000 which do have the Mayor, Council, City Manager form of municipal government. A few towns nearby that use the plan are New Bern, Dunn, Chapel Hill, Elizabeth City, Goldsboro, Hickory, Kinston, Oxford, Rocky Mount and Wilson. The City Manager plan went into operation in Goldsboro in 1917, Rocky Mount in 1927, Kinston in 1948, Wilson in 1933, New Bern in 1947 and Elizabeth City in 1915.

The City Manager is a trained expert in the job of running a city government. He is highly paid; that is, compared to other city officials, but in every case on record his centralized direction has resulted in saving far more than his salary.

But let me emphasize that this City Manager will remain accountable to the Mayor and Council. Although he heads up the entire city government, he still has to answer to the Mayor and Council.

The JC's have heard probably a million words about the plan and have decided that Greenville at least should vote on the question. If you agree, sign the petition that a JC will present to you. And if you are missed, call me and I'll bring you one.

And I thank you.

COMMUNITY—There has always been, and perhaps always will be differences in the attidude of people living in different sections of the country and the state. The North and the South, the East and the West, the city and the rural community, each has its peculiar viewpoint and its own particular zeal for ideas affecting the life of its people. Regional and sectional differences are less marked now than they were a few years ago, and there is progressively less emphasis upon them. That is true with respect to the national arena, and particularly so with respect to North Carolina. Distinctive lines between East and West are becoming dimmer every year, and if the current trend continues they will be completely wiped out within the next decade or so. To greater degree than at any time within the past 100 years North Carolina is facing its problems as a unit.

CONTRAST -- Of course there remain some striking contrasts. The process of complete amalgamation of ideas is slow, but it is none the less certain and obvious. Evidence of that can be found in the Democratic congressional district rallies and the numerous county rallies staged on the side in advance of the November election. Attendance at all of them has set new records, indicating that Easterners are moving away from the concept that the election is over with the nominating primary. Eastern rallies have been as well attended as those held in the West, and in some respects have been more enthusiastic. Take the item of campaign finances. Very little was said publicly about money in the West, but at nearly every meeting county leaders buttonholed state party officials and put on pressure for more money to be sent into their territory. Down East the county chairmen got up and publicly boasted that they had raised and forwarded to State headquarters larger amounts than they had been asked for. That facts stands as testimony to the general election interest of Eastern Democrats, who have no serious opposition in their own bailiwicks but are willing to put up a few extra dollars for the campaign in those sections where there is always a fight for control of local government.

INDUSTRIALIZATION — The Easterners may be farsighted instead of entirely unselfish in this attitude. At almost every rally held in the East mention has been made of the changes brought about by industrialization and the impact of huge military installations on the economy and politics of the area. The traditional characterization of the "agrarian east and the industrial west" no longer applied. The boll weevil had something to do with that, and industrial engineering had a lot to do with it. As the center of cotton production moved westward from Craven to Robeson to Cleveland counties, and as industrial development woved eastward and westward from the Piedmont to Lenoir and New Hanover, to Buncombe and Transylvania, the local problems lost their peculiar sectional complexion and became more general.

DIVERSIFICATION -- Paradoxical as it may seem on the surface, the fact is that diversification of agriculture and industry has served to consolidate the economic and political philosophy of the state. Mountain counties are going into dairy farming to greater extent than ever before, while beef cattle no longer present an incongruous picture on eastern plains. Soybeans are grown on mountains sides and factories are springing up in the one-time bean and cotton fields of the coastal plains. Whether the economic changes or the political unification came first is another phase of the ancient argument about the chicken and the egg. For practical purposes it doesn't matter. The fact is that North Carolina has abandoned the east-west rotation of high public officials and industry has spread from the Atlantic Ocean to the Great Smoky Mountains. It does not matter too much, either, what brought this change about. Whether good roads and improved communities facilities came because they were demanded by the people who already had conceived a one-state idea, or whether that idea was fostered by good roads and improved communication, is not nearly so important as the indisputable fact that North Carolina has both.

IMPACT -- When the Democratic caravan was at Murphy party leaders heard that the com-

TRUMAN'S BIG MOUTH AGAIN
(The Albertan, Calgary, Canada)

The upper reaches of the American election campaign came close to southern Alberta on Tuesday, when President Truman spoke at Shelby, Montana, just 36 road miles from the Alberta boundary. But his effort was not one that would receive the endorsation of many Canadians. What he had to say should have been left unsaid.

The integrity and ability of the chief candidates had not previously been challenged. While in many ways the campaign has been personal, it has been so on a high plane. Mr. Truman dug deep in the mud.

He said for instance that General Eisenhower "doesn't know a single thing about the American economy.' The Republican candidate for president has been in the Army for forty years, "and all the army thinks about is how much money to spend."

Ike is ignorant about many things in the American economy, as he readily admits, but in two or three ways he is far ahead of Mr. Truman.

For one, he is not a mud-slinger. He believes in fair play and honest discussion in the business of politics.

For another, his Army experience has demonstrated rare and precious talent for persuading people to work together and getting the best out of them. He is a genius at administrative leadership at directing team-work, and it's team-work that the United States sorely needs now.

Then, too, Ike knows what principles must motivate and inspire Government leaders. He may be weak on details of steel production or cotton market, but he is far stronger than Mr. Truman on the need for integrity in Government.

Actually Mr. Truman doesn't believe everything he himself says. Four years ago he tried to get General Eisenhower to stand for the Democratic nomination. He has been an open and avid admirer of the general. And he is a proud Army veteran himself and now commander-in-chief of the U. S. forces. He knows full well how false it is that "al the Army [illegible] about is how much money to spend."

Government agencies have recruiting teams touring the country seeking stenographers and other white-collar workers for Federal jobs. A Seattle advertiser offered a "good opportunity for an inefficient stenographer to work until we can secure an efficient one." Elsewhere firms stress air-conditioning, coffee breaks and insurance benefits more than the requirements for a position.

These are symptomatic of the fact that the estate of the white-collar workers has changed. They are no longer an elite among employees. The prestige they enjoyed a generation ago, even if it was largely phony, has vanished.

This loss of prestige has made it difficult to recruit superior personnel for many white-collar positions and it makes it more difficult for employers to get the best possible effort from those workers. A worker's pride in his or her job has long been recognized as ranking with pay as an incentive for superior performance.

At a recent session of the American Management Association, C. Wright Mills, Columbia professor of sociology, gave these reasons for the changed position:

1.—The previous similarity of white-collar types of work to those of the old, entrepreneurial middle class is now less than it was.

2.--The skills they practice are not as various and do not permit the degree of autonomy they once did. The virtual monopoly of high-school education which white-collar employees once had is no longer theirs.

3.--The prestige whie-collar employees once employed by virtue of their being among them more "native whites of native parents" is no longer theirs.

4.--In the last decade the white-collar average income has been only slightly above, and in several important cases lower, than the average income of various wage groups.

5.--They are no longer immune to the threat of unemployment. White-collar workers recognize the threat of office mechanization.

6.--Benefits of white-collar employment--sick leave, income security, paid vacations, pleasanter working conditions—have been gained by wage workers. In some cases, wage workers have outstripped white-collar workers.

Professor Mills had one forecast: "It is only a question of time, and of the greater and more intelligent efforts of unions, before your office forces are significantly organized." But even that, he said, may not solve the problem of work incentive for white-collar people.

GOVERNMENT BOOKLET CITES ANTI-FREEZE

Garage and service-station operators who want to talk authoritatively with customers on anti-freezes may be helped by a 15-cent booklet. It is "Automotive Anti-Freezes," and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington 25, D.C.

It states salt-base and petroleum base distillates are definitely harmful, but that glycols and wood, isopropyl and grain alcohols are safe. That sounds as if rubbing alcohol or gin will be okay in an emergency.

FEDERAL BENEFITS RISE ..... ONE BILLION A YEAR .....

Higher monthly payments voted by Congress to persons on Federal welfare rolls will cost a billion dollars a year, the National Industrial Conference Board says after a study.

Larger benefits will go to 4,500,000 Social Security beneficiaries and 1,000,000 receiving civil-service retirement annuities, railroad annuities, pensions, unemployment and sickness benefits and military retirement pay. Half of the billion dollars will come from funds built up for the purpose and the other half out of taxes, the Board estimates.

Silver lining: This will increase consumer spending a billion a year. Welfare benefits are rarely saved.

Hal Boyle's Column

By SAUL PETT
For HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) Now, Doctor, here I am a grown man, father of two children and a supposedly hard-boiled reporter. Why is it I'm still afraid of school teachers?

As a reporter, I've talked with many people-a couple of presidents, generals kings, prime ministers, generals, senators, leading ladies, heavyweight champions, stripteasers, and scientists with half a dozen degrees. I may have been awed by some of them, but never paralyzed.

And yet, when I'm dragged to a "back-to-school night" and meet my kids' teachers, something happens. I feel numbed, my words run together like mushy cereal. I work up a large sweat trying to decide which hand to hold my hat in.

Is it, Doctor, that in the presence of a teacher, surrounded by those little desks, the ink wells and the crayon drawings, I unconsciously revert to being a boy again?

Can it be that I'm afraid that suddenly teacher will call on me for the Latin lessons I hadn't prepared 20 years ago?

Could be. In the sophisticated circles I traveled in as a boy and college man, it was considered subversive to crack a book. We were bold, tough rebels. We studied little but we used up more gray matter and time secretly worrying about the quiz the next morning than if we had crammed. I guess I'm still worried.

Do you think, Doctor, that another reason school teachers make me uneasy is that I feel guilty? Maybe it's because I still fear that at long last I'll be caught for covering the erasers with sneezing powder, for drowning caterpillars in the inkwells, for writing libelous notes about the flat-chested seventh grade teacher who always began class by barking, "Hark, hark."

Really, Doctor, I don't think I was hostile to teachers as a group. I may have distrusted one or two. I remember particularly in the third or fourth grade, during a hygiene discussion, the teacher said rather triumphantly:

'Do you know why Babe Ruth gets so many of those home runs? It's not because he hits the ball so far. It's because he can run around the bases so fast."

Well, you can imagine. Every boy in class knew that was the worst kind of malarkey. But I don't think I held that against all teachers.

True, I got into trouble frequently. I think I spent as much time in the principal's office as his secretary did. My parents were always being called in for great confrontations.

Once, I was called down from my eighth grade home room to the principal's office. His name was Mr. Burns. He was tall and gray and solemn, and he said I was in trouble. Serious trouble. He said I had done a criminal thing in cutting those pictures out of the magazines in the school library.

Mr. Burns paced up and down silently for awhile. He looked like he was measuring me for the electric chair. Finally, he said that the next time, the very next time I got into any kind of trouble, it would be automatically suspended.

Well, three weeks later, I was called down to Mr. Burns' office again. Why do principal's secretaries always make the culprit wait so long?

Finally, Mr. Burns came out and told me to follow him. Without a word, he led me out the door, down the hall and into the jam-full assembly hall. He led me down the main aisle and up to the stage and there, before the whole school, he gave me a five-dollar gold-piece, second prize in an essay contest on the subject, "John Hancock and the Declaration of Independence."

Well, I just couldn't believe it. Maybe I still can't. Especially since the very next day I bought a baseball glove with the gold-piece and the day after that someone swiped it.

Doctor, do you think that explains why I still feel uncertain about schools and teachers?

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON--There is stiff rationing of food, clothing and even of schooling for the very young in over-populated Israel. But, though there is black-marketing, a Tel-Aviv woman leader tells me most citizens willingly accept the sacrifices.

Mrs. H. Nofech Mozes, lawyer and ediotr, says rationing is necessary because the population has doubled in four years since Israel became a state. Of the 1,250,000 persons bulging the borders of the little country, some 600,000 are refugees from DP camps and Arabian countries. Each persons is allowed only two eggs a week, four pounds of potatoes a month, less than one glass of milk a day. Only sick persons and children can have poultry. Only children can have tomatoes in winter. Tea, rice, sugar and fats are rationed, and Mrs. Mozes says meat is a myth. Each person receives 40 coupons a year for clothing. Children under 10 can go to school only three hours a day.

"It is better that each person should have a little than that some have all and some have nothing," Mrs. Mozes told me. "These controls, which make people equal in food and clothing, are an antidote to Communism. Besides, we're so glad the Jewish people have a state that we're willing to bear the hardships. After genocide (race murder) and wars, what is it to go without some foods or an extra dress?"

Mrs. Mozes, a petite and most attractive young brunette, is a judge on the antiprofiteering court dealing with black marketeering. She is also legal adviser for the Israel Association of Women for Equal Rights, editor of a woman's magazine and writer of a column dealing with divorce, and maintenance. She is in the U.S. under State Department Sponsorship to observe domestic relations courts and marriage hygiene counseling centers.

She says mutual consent is all that is necessary to get a divorce in Israel but that divorces are granted only in religious courts and getting untied from a spouse is a solemn ritual taking four hours. If one party dissents, divorce is difficult, she said.

Wife of a lawyer and mother of two young sons, Isaac, 14, and Ronny, 7, Mrs. Mozes was graduated in law from the University of Geneva and speaks eight languages. She has also studied in England.

Eleven of the 126 members of the Israeli Parliament are women. The minister of labor is a woman, and there are about 600 women doctors. Military training is compulsory for both men and women between 18 and 21 and both sexes are eligible to vote for Parliament at 18.

State-Federal Dispute Over Tidelands Now 15 Years Old

...Editor's note: The so-called "tidelands" oil issue is an important one in the 1952 presidential campaign. The following dispatch gives the background and the current status of the dispute.

By CHARLOTTE G. MOULTON
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP) — The legislative fight between the states and the federal government over offshore oil—a fight which flared hotly in this year's presidential campaign—dates back 15 years.

The candidates have taken precisely opposite stands in the battle. The issue is particularly hot in California, Louisiana, and Texas off whose shores an estimated 15,000,000,000 barrels of oil lie under the ocean bed.

The question is whether the states or the federal government should collect the millions of dollars paid by oil companies for the privilege of drilling offshore wells.

The federal government is now holding in a special non-usable fund about $50,000,000 from California leases and more than $13,000,000 paid by companies drilling in the Gulf of Mexico.

Adlai E. Stevenson, the Democratic presidential candidate, has said he will abide by Supreme Court rulings in 1947 and 1950 awarding the federal government "paramount rights" to this rich coastal belt. He says he agrees with President Truman's veto of legislation to vest control in the states.

Republican candidate Dwight D. Eisenhower, on the other hand, has said he will sign such quitclaim legislation if he becomes president. He accused "Washington power-mongers" of a "grab"—a "federal encroachment upon the rights and affairs of the states."

The history of the "tidelands" dispute actually goes back to 1906, when oil was first discovered in the undersea region off California. "Tidelands," although commonly used, is a misnomer, since federal claims involve only land seaward of the low-water mark.

Oil drilling had been going on under California state leases for about 15 years when the Justice Department in 1945 filed a federal claim in the Supreme Court to the so-called "marginal sea." This is the area between the low-water mark and the three-mile limit.

Meanwhile, in 1937, legislation asserting federal control of the offshore oil belt almost slipped through Congress undebated. Later efforts to pass such a bill were blocked in committees.

After winning the California case on June 23, 1947, the Justice Department filed a similar suit against Texas and Louisiana. The area claimed by Louisiana extended 27 miles into the Gulf. Texas asserted ownership to an area which varies from 70 to 140 miles offshore.

The federal government won a second favorable decision on June 5, 1950, thus preventing the three states from leasing any more underwater land.

Writing the court's opinion in the Louisiana case, Justice William O. Douglas said:

"As we pointed out in U.S. vs California, the issue in this class of litigation does not turn on title or ownership in the conventional sense. California, like the 13 original colonies, never acquired ownership in the marginal sea. The claim to our three-mile belt was first asserted by the national government.

"Protection and control of the area are indeed functions of national external sovereignty. The marginal sea is a national, not a state concern. . . . The problems of commerce, national defense, relations with other powers, war and peace focus there. National rights must therefore be paramount in that area."

As to Texas, Douglas found that the submerged lands were indeed part of the state's domain when it was independent. But he said that when Texas entered the union she lost the area to the federal government.

Meanwhile President Truman in 1946 vetoed legislation to vest title to the disputed areas in the states. This year he vetoed a similar bill.

Because of the opposition of states' rights proponents in Congress, no bill setting up machinery for federal administration of oil drilling has ever been passed, despite the Supreme Court's judgements. Secretary of Interior Oscar L. Chapman has been acting for the federal government under his implied powers as guardian of the nation's natural resources.

Although the California decision was issued more than five years ago, the Supreme Court still isn't done with the case. The high bench directed William H. Davis, New York attorney, to recommend a federal-state boundary line along the irregular coast. Davis's report is expected soon.

The Gulf boundary is awaiting determination of a yardstick in the California case.

TEEN TALK

Dear Judy:

AP Newsfeatures

Twins may dress alike, act alike and look alike, but they don't always think alike. And that's what makes this a wonderful country-most people reserve the right to think for themselves. Americans do not like to be regimented or herded into mass thinking. But they have no objection if their best friend disagrees with them on major issues.

That's why lots of young adults, who enjoy choosing sides for anything from football to parlor games, like to busy themselves with politics. Over all the country you will see buttons such as J'Aime Ike or Stevenson being worn by students who conduct rallies and soapbox meetings to propound their theories on their favorite candidates, even if they are not of voting age. Many of them work at local political head-quarters.

It is a good healthy sign for young people to actively engage in politics. By the time they get around to pulling a lever down in a polling booth, they might know something more of what makes this nation tick, and who are qualified best to keep it ticking with a good sound heartbeat.

Here are some of the reasons given by young people for choosing Ike or Adlai

From young people helping at the New York Eisenhower-Nixon headquarters come these reasons:

Says Carel Corcoran, age 19: "In my opinion, the one issue that affects everybody in this country, regardless of race, color or creed, is the Korean War. Everyone of us has a loved one either in that war, or earmarked for it. The policy now is to send them to Korea where they fight and die, and then new boys come in and take their place—and so the cycle continues. There must be a stop to this—there must be a better plan. Eisenhower won the last war. He knows war far better than Governor Stevenson does—he will know how to win this one. Let's get the youth of America home again."

Sydney Weaver, 16½, says: "We need a man who is honest, courageous and uncorrupted by political deals-someone who will put the interests of the United States above everything. That man is General Eisenhower."

From young people actively working in Stevenson's New York headquarters come these reasons for their choice:

Says Lois D. Goldsmith, 19½: "I am for Adlai Stevenson because he promises the American people only what he sincerely believes he can fulfill for them. He realizes, among other things, that taxes cannot be reduced without harm being done to national security. Other candidates must realize this fact but have not got the backbone to admit it. They even claim they can do the impossible. We need in the White House a man who will face the problems of this country without rose-colored glasses, and then go on to remedy the ills of the country without killing the patient. This is why I am for Adlai Stevenson."

"Although I am not of voting age, I am very interested in the forthcoming election. Governor Stevenson has shown in his own state that he has the executive ability necessary for the highest office in the United States. He faces issues squarely and doesn't avoid unpleasant questions. Most important, he has wholeheartedly endorsed Civil Rights, despite considerable antagonism from the South. We need a man like Stevson for our President."

Says Natha Lee Bluhm, 18: "I am working for and backing Adlai E. Stevenson because he is intelligent, honest, and able, taking orders from no one and expressing his feelings whether or not his audience agrees with him. We need such a man to defend us from communism and to lead us through these difficult times."

Troubled Austria Has Further Grief In Offering

By PHIL NEWSOM
United Press Foreign News Editor

Austria, unwilling bride of a four headed groom, is heading for even more trouble.

Not only does there seem little chance that the four occupying powers of Austria will agree soon on an Austrian peace treaty, the Austrians are developing internal political troubles of their own.

An uneasy coalition government rules in Austria today, unable to decide whether to limit government spending to income or to launch a vast spending program which would include nationalization of industry and a big increase in government social services.

In other words, whether to go all the way toward socialism.

So far as the world is concerned, the Austrians live in a vacuum.

They are held responsible for decisions they did not make

They have to await a peace treaty on a war they did not declare.

Americans are getting a first hand look at Communist delaying tactics in the fruitless peace negotiations at Korea's Panmunjom.

To the Austrians it's an old story.

In 258 meetings held between 1946 and December, 1950, the United States, Britain, France and Russia agreed upon all but five clauses of the original draft of the Austrian peace treaty, then the talks collapsed.

Among the Russian pretexts was that the West has not fulfilled the obligations regarding Trieste laid down in the Italian peace treaty. It seems far-fetched, but that's what the Russians said.

Meanwhile, the Russians have taken hundreds of millions of dollars out of Austria, and, despite new impending Western approaches for an Austrian treaty, there are no signs that they are willing to give up a "take" which includes Austrian oil and control of the Danube.

Which brings us to the Austrians' own troubles.

While Russian and U. S. troops perform police duty in Vienna together, the Russians carry on unremitting propaganda warfare against the Western powers. This, along with an upward inflation spiral, has its effect.

A grim preview of what may be expected this winter came late last month.

Communist toughs, 1,000 strong, fought a pitched battle with 800 police to protest a showing of "The Desert Fox," a film biography of the late Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel. The demonstration was foreseen. Its violence was not. Most Viennese love their comfort far too much to become involved in strenuous street brawls.

A great deal of the trouble springs from two sources. First, there has been a serious rise in unemployment. The figure stands at more than 115,000 now and is expected to top 200,000 during November, December and January—coldest months of the year.

At the same time, Austria showed a trade deficit for the first six months of this year of $100,000,000. The dollar rate is spiralling upward from its legal 1 to 26 to 1 to 30 or more.

It all adds fuel to the Communist fire. And it makes the Austrians understandably restless and unhappy. They are blamed for their troubles but are banned from settling them.

Primitive Relic Found In Canada

GILBERT PLAINS, Canada (AP)—The flint head of an ancient weapon has started federal archaeologists on a hunt for traces of primitive man near this town.

Recently a "Plainview" projectile point was found in a local collection. The find prompted Dr. R.S. MacNeish of Ottawa to launch a survey of the district and test excavations of the site where the point was found.

Plainview points — leaf-shaped arrow or spear heads with diagonal flaking on the flint – first were found in Texas. They have been associated wit the bones of extinct, ice-age animals. The men who made the Plainview points were of the first known culture in North America.

COTTON SAVES CHURCH

PRATTS COMMUNITY, Miss. (UP)—When Mount Zion Baptist Church ran into financial difficulty paying off a $2,900 debt, the members planted a 16-acre cotton patch and, donating their labor, harvested five bales of cotton which were accepted as payment in full.

Duke Defeats Va. Drops In Ratings

By LEO H. PETERSEN
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UP) — Michigan State retained the No. 1 spot in the United Press football ratings for the sixth consecutive week today, but six other teams were closing in with Maryland and Southern California leading the way.

The Trojans of Jess Hill, sixth last week, jumped up to third place as a result of their 10-0 victory over California to make the biggest gain of the teams in the chase to overtake Michigan State. The others in the parade, Maryland, Oklahoma, Georgia Tech, UCLA and Duke, also picked up points over last week.

With 19 first-place votes—the same as last week—Michigan State rolled up a total of 305 points to hold the top spot, but that point total was 21 less than it was voted last week by the 35 outstanding coaches who make up the rating board.

Maryland received six first-place votes and 273 points—one more than last week—in staying in the runner-up position while Southern Cal received three first-place votes and 242 points—a gain of 97 points.

California, third last week, dropped down to ninth place as Oklahoma retained the No. 4 spot with two first-place votes and 231 points and Georgia Tech fifth place with two first-place votes and 220 points.

UCL. and Duke exchanged places, the Far Western eleven getting two first-place votes and 193 points for sixth place and Duke dropping back to seventh with 149 points. But even though it dropped back a position, Duke wound up with 14 more points than last week.

There were two newcomers in the top ten—Purdue and Kansas. Purdue with one first-place ballot received 84 points for eighth place while Kansas advanced from a tie for 16th place to 10th with its convincing victory over Southern Methodist.

Wisconsin, ninth last week, and Ohio State, 10th, dropped out of the select group as a result of losing to UCLA and Iowa, respectively.

Points are scored on the basis of 10 points for a first-place vote, nine for a second and so on down to one for a 10th.

All of the top seven teams are undefeated, although Oklahoma has been tied. Purdue has the poorest record among the top 10 with one defeat and a tie to mar its record while California and Kansas both have been beaten once.

Purdue made the biggest position gain of the week, having been ranked in a tie for 22nd place with Princeton last week while in the second 10 Notre Dame remained on top with 29 points.

Pirates Open Drills For Game With Apps

Bob Howell Out Of Friday Game With Rocky Mt.

By WAYNE BISHOP

Members of the Greenville High School football team were put through a light workout yesterday afternoon as they opened drills for their game Friday night with the Rocky Mount Blackbirds.

Head Coach Bill Kittrell and assistant George Graybill sent the linemen through a blocking drill while assistant Frank Maennle put the backs through their paces on pass defense. Spirit was high yesterday despite the loss Friday night to New Bern.

The Phantoms came out of the contest with the Bears with only one serious injury. Fullback Bob Howell will be lost to the squad for an indefinite length of time because of bruised shin and a cut hand. Howell had played some outstanding football against New Bern until his hand was stepped on and cut rather severely. A replacement for Howell has not been named yet by Kittrell.

Speaking of the contest with the Bears, the game was actually closer than the score would tend to indicate. The Bears got their first touchdown as a result of a fumble which came about when a pitchout hit Guy Smith's knee and bounded crazily into the hands of a rushing New Bern lineman who merely stepped across the goal line for the touchdown.

Another factor which went against the Phantoms was the calling back of Bobby Perry's 69-yard touchdown run. The recall marked the third time this year that Perry has had a long touchdown run called back.

Clay is used as part of the "filler" in many types of high grade paper.

A short drill on blocking was all the contact work seen yesterday by the East Carolina College Pirates as they opened drills for their game Saturday afternoon against Appalachian in Boone.

Most of the afternoon drill yesterday was devoted to study of movies of past East Carolina-Appalachian games. Last year's game, played here in College Stadium, was the one which got the most attention as the Pirates began work on devising a system which would stop the Mountaineers, in general, and Jack Groce and Ray Triplett, in particular.

After studying the movies, the Pirates went onto the practice field where Line Coach Clyde Biggers had the linemen go through their paces in close blocking while Head Coach Jack Boone worked with the backs. After the two units had worked separately for a short while they got together and devoted a little time toward improving the Pirates' kicking game.

The Pirates apparently came through their 41-0 win over Guilford in good shape. Fullback Claude King is still something of a question mark because of an injury but he is expected to be able to play Saturday. King had his knee twisted Saturday while carrying the ball on a pitch out.

If King does round into top shape, the Pirates can expect to be in the best physical shape they've enjoyed since the season started. The linemen who had been slowed by injuries showed that they were in top shape Saturday as they continually rammed through Guilford interference to rack the ball carriers.

Line Coach Biggers had some special words of praise yesterday for just about every lineman on the squad so far as their performances against Guilford was concerned. Game statistics showed that the Quakers picked up only 56 yards on the ground and all of them came in the second half.

A Success Formula For Grid Coaches

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP) — If any young fellows in the audience are preparing for a career as a football coach, Fearless Fraley has the success formula today.

Don't let 'em sell you the idea that you have to be a great grid tactician. Nor, despite the mortality rate among losing coaches, do you have to win them all.

What you really need is the silver-tongued evasiveness of a middle of the road politician, the tragedian acting ability of a Barrymore, and the loquacious liberty of a Baron Munhausen.

Old Fearless arrived at this blinding revelation while listening to some of our most successful coaches. Successful, that is, in holding on to jobs longer than a District of Columbia Democrat.

In a nutshell, the secret is: Never play a terrible team.

It has been an effort at times to maintain a straight face, but for too many years now I have listened to coaches who every Monday look ahead to their forthcoming game with glowing words for the opposition. The imminent contest may be with absolutely awful academy but you will hear them described as anywhere from "good" to "great" and rival backs who couldn't carry the ball for Vassar begin to look like the fifth horseman.

One of the best in this department is Columbia's Lou Little, who has been in New York since before Peter Stuyvesant ran the first Army game against the Indians. Little's midgets this year lost to Princeton, Yale and Penn. But last Saturday they tied West Point and wise Lou is milking with the fury of a farm-hand late for breakfast.

"Army is the best team we faced this year," Little opined. "I was amazed at how much they have progressed and by next year they should be the best in the East."

Now don't you suppose the alumni are happy over the tie? Naturally, because it was a terrific performance. But it will look even better when the muse of Morningside Heights finishes his performance. Imagine tying the best team met this season. All in the past can be forgiven.

It is typical of the longterm coaches that, win, lose or oh-happy-draw, they put in a plug for the rival coach. Little coppered that one by praising Army's Earl (Red) Blaik for "the best coaching job he has done in all the years I've faced him."

This is a valuable lesson, youngsters. Most coaches learn quickly that their rival across the field has a memory which would make an elephant look like an amnesia victim. The "friendly" rivalry promises to open the gates of mercy in the lean years.

In any other line of endeavor, you'd probably go out of business if you kept praising your opposition. But in football, you always meet at least a "good" team—so the win looks better or the defeat has an excuse— and you Damon and Pythias the guy on the other bench because he may have the big tackles the next time out.

It's an unbeatable system, but it keeps Tony Galento alive in memory as my favorite athlete. Old two-ton always announced, "I'll murder the bum." If he didn't, "The bum was lucky."

One thing sure. I never expect to see a football coach who will insist "They're lousy and we'll run 'em into the ground." Like half-baked ham, it simply isn't done, old boy

Dale Samuels Is Named In Up Back Of The Week Poll

By ED SAINSBURY
United Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (UP)—Dale Samuels tied a Big Ten passing record with four touchdown passes against Illinois Saturday to win United Press Midwest Back of the Week honors, but the modest Purdue quarterback gave major credit for his success to his linemen.

"I was getting better protection than ever," he said, "and my receivers were running a lot faster

"I didn't pass any better than usual, but the protection made all the difference."

It was the third year in succession in which Samuels has won Back of the Week mention. Two years ago, in what certainly will be called the greatest game Purdue played during his eligibility, he passed the Boilermakers to a 28-14 triumph over Notre Dame which broke the Irish string of 39 games without defeat.

But Samuels, even in that battle, threw no more accurately than Saturday, when his club posted its third straight Big Ten win to remain tied for the league lead and retain a chance at the Rose Bowl.

"I never saw Samuels throw a better game," his coach, Stu Holcomb, said. "He was cool and he made all the plays the way he wanted to. I think he and (Max) Schmaling were the difference."

Samuels had a star receiver to haul in his passes. End Bernie Flowers also tied a Big Ten mark for touchdown passes caught when he pulled in three of the Samuels throws, two of them for 25 yards and the other for three, to tally.

The fourth scoring pitch covered 30 yards and went to end Tom Redinger, replacing Flowers.

Overall Samuels attempted 14 passes and completed 12 for 179 yards.

The performance gave him a total of 50 completions in 91 attempts this season for 551 yards and seven touchdowns.

Don Chelf of Iowa was named Lineman of the Week for his play in the Hawkeyes' 8-0 upset win over Ohio State.

35 Horses Perish In Fire Disaster

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Approximately 35 thoroughbred horses burned to death last night in a fire that quickly engulfed a big barn at Douglas Park, a popular training track in Louisville.

Most of the barns at the one-time race track were filled with horses in training and others that were brought to Louisville for today's opening of the fall race meeting at Churchill Downs.

However, the fire was confined to one barn and officials said no big-name horses perished. A large number of those that died were yearlings getting ready for their first racing campaign in 1953.

Tom Young, track superintendent at Churchill Downs, which owns Douglas Park, said the yearlings were worth around $3,000 to $4,000 each and that total damage would be about $150,000. The 80-stable barn, biggest on the lote, was valued at about $35,000.

Mickey Mantle Is Again Rejected By Army Draft

WASHINGTON (UP)—The presence of Mickey Mantle's physical examination papers in the surgeon general's office indicated today the fleet New York Yankee outfielder would be declared unfit for Army service for the third time.

Maj. Gen. George E. Armstrong, Army surgeon general, said he knew nothing about Mantle's case but added his office receives only "questionable cases."

When a draftee passes his physical test, his papers are sent to his local draft board. Rejection usually is indicated when a man's papers are forwarded to the surgeon general's office.

Mantle, 21, one of the heroes of the Yankees recent World Series victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers, had been rejected twice because of a bone disease in one of his legs.

He recently underwent another physical examination at Fort Sill, Okla., but authorities there declined to comment on whether Mantle had been accepted or rejected.

Capt. John W. Turner, executive officer of the Oklahoma City recruiting station which received Mantle's papers from Fort Sill, said the result of the examination would be announced by the surgeon general.

Mantle, sole support of his pregnant wife, his widowed mother and four younger brothers and sisters, said he would request deferment if he passes his physical.

Youngster Sights New Riding Mark

LINCOLN, R. I. (AP)—Anthony Despirito — America's young riding sensation—moves to Lincoln Downs today with his sights on the all-time single year mark of 388 winners.

The little 17-year-old apprentice jockey—already past the magic 300 figure with 303 winners—hopes to get within hailing distance of the 45-year-old record during Lincoln Downs' 30-day fall meeting.

The record was set back in 1907 by the famed Walter Miller and equalled in 1950 by Willie Shoemaker and Joe Culmone. Last week the dark-haired Lawrence, Mass., rider entered the select group of eight jockeys to have booted home 300 winners in one year.

Otto Graham Leads Browns To 19-14 Win Over Redskins

By EARL WRIGHT
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP)— The Cleveland Browns, who once were offered jobs driving George Preston Marshall's laundry trucks, sent the Washington Redskins to the cleaners today and took their usual place as undisputed leaders of the National Football League's American Conference.

Cleveland rallied to beat the Redskins, 19-15, Sunday while the unbeaten San Francisco Forty-Miners boosted their front-running National Conference record to 5-0 with an easy, 48-21 triumph over the Dallas Texans.

It was Cleveland's fourth victory over Washington since entering the NFL from the now-defunct All-America Conference in 1950. Marshall made his Redskins a special Cleveland target a few years ago when he predicted at a Giriron Club dinner in Washington that the All-America Conference players would soon be glad to drive his laundry trucks.

Otto Graham, the Cleveland quarterback who also can pass out of a tuxedo, was at the dinner. Graham threw the conversational ball right back at Marshall and said the Browns would unstarch the Redskins anytime.

Graham sank the needle in Marshall again Sunday by scoring the winning touchdown on a two-yard quarterback seak in the fourth period after Lou Groza had kept the Browns in the game with four field goals. Graham put the ball on the two with a 56-yard pass to Sherman Howard.

The Browns, bidding for their seventh division title in as many seasons, got big assists from the Philadelphia Eagles and Pittsburgh Steelers as they broke a three-way first place tie with the New York Giants and Chicago Cardinals.

The Eagles upset the Giants, 14-10, and the Steelers surprised the Cardinals, 34-28. The Browns (4-1) now have a one-game lead over the Giants, Cardinals and Eagles (each 3-2). Pittsburgh has a 1-4 mark

In other National Conference games, the Detroit Lions whipped the Green Bay Packers, 52-17, and the Los Angeles Rams rallied to defeat the Chicago Bears, 31-7. Detroit (3-2) moved into second place, two games behind San Francisco. The Bears, Packers and Rams have 2-3 records, while the Texans (0-5) are the only team without a victory.

Wonderful Way to Start the Day!

Well, there he goes, backing out into the challenge of an October morning—and there's no denying that he's off to a wonderful start.

You see, he's at the wheel of a Golden Anniversary Cadillac—and there's no greater lift to the spirits than the deep-throated whisper of a Cadillac engine.

It says inspiring things to the man at the wheel.

It tells him, first of all, that life must have gone rather nicely—to take him from where he was—to a place where he owns and enjoys a beautiful Cadillac. Pretty good precedent for a good day today!

It tells him, too—that wherever he drives in the day's activities—the Cadillac crest will pave the way for the respect of the people he encounters.

Yes—he feels pretty good as he turns into the highway, touches his toe to the sensitive throttle, and heads into the adventure of another day.

The miles go softly by . . . the occasional tick-tick of the electric clock reminds him that he's ahead of time for his first appointment . . . and he settles back—relaxed and at ease. Nice, nice going!

Many men have told us that the drive to work in a Cadillac is the finest part of the day. Their heads are clear and their minds at ease as they roll serenely along—a wonderful time to think and plan.

Of course, this is only an extra value that comes with a Cadillac: comes in addition to comfort and safety—and dependability and long life—and all the other wonderful things that make this magnificent car the Standard of the World.

Why not come in and see us—and arrange to enjoy them all yourself?

We'd be happy to see you—any time.

Hunts Publisher For 840,000-Word Book

By RICHARD G. HARRIS
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK (UP) — Madison Cooper, 58-year-old businessman of Waco, Tex., was in town today to see about the publication of his first novel, "Sironia, Texas," which is twice as long as "Gone With the Wind."

It is the longest work of fiction ever published in the United States. Its 840,000 words requiring 1800 pages and two volumes. It is twice as long as "Gone With the Wind," which has 475,000 words, and half again as long as "War and Peace."

It exceeds the Bible in wordage. It comes out Nov. 3.

Interviewed in an office lent him by an executive of his publisher, Houghton Mifflin Co., Cooper said:

"I wrote it in the attic at home. The attic really was my real estate and investment business office. Ten years it took me. I wrote late at night or in between appointments...

'I never had to be 'in the mood' to write. Right in the middle of a passionate love scene, some prospective buyer would call me about a piece of property. I'd drop everything and talk about plumbing and heating and whether the toilets flushed properly, and then go right back to the love scene...

"The central theme of my book is that a strong character can survive anything. It's not a historical novel, it's a period piece about personalities and the conflict between individuals. There's a lot of shocking stuff in it, I admit, but it was not put in for the mere sake of shock or dirt..

'Some people have asked me if all this rape and sex and violence and tragedy could happen in one town. I say all of it and more can happen over the 20 years I describe. The community spirit is a conspiracy to hush up the things that are not good for the community. My book is not exaggerated, it deals with the things people try to hide...

"Somebody did some research and found that the longest book ever published was "Clarissa Harlowe," by Samuel Richardson, in England 250 years ago. It was 875,000 words. I wrote my publisher and told him, hell, if he wanted to exceed that record, I could turn it out. I think he fainted...

"Matter of fact, I cut 150,000 words out of the finished manuscript before I submitted it. I tightened it up here and there, you know, cutting out a sentence or two. But I also cut whole scenes and if they think some of my episodes are 'dirty,' they ought to see what I cut out...

"What one person considers dirty, another won't. I think that anything that glorifies vice untruthfully is immoral. I show the consequences of evil acts...

"Now that the young lady (the Houghton Mifflin executive's secretary) has stepped out of the office here, let me tell you about one of those scenes I cut..."

'Truth Squad' Is Trailing Truman

HOUGHTON, Mich. (UP)— The Republican "truth squad" trailed President Truman to Minneapolis today after accusing him of getting election day mixed up with Hallowe'en.

The squad members told a hockey rink audience in this Upper Michigan City Monday night that the President's speech at Gary, Ind., was a "bogie-man performance ful'l of goblins and spooks."

They said his criticism of the GOP-dominated 80th Congress was unfounded, and charged that he was "trying to frighten his audiences against a Republican president and a Republican Congress."

Three members of the squad flew here for the one-night stand—Sens. Francis Case (S.D.) and Andrew F. Schoepel (Kan.) and Rep. Hugh Scott (Pa.). They were to fly to Minneapolis today to pick up the fourth member, Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont.

At Houghton, in a sparsely-settled area that usually leans toward the Democrats, the three GOP legislators derided Mr. Truman's claim that the Democrats are "leading the country to victory in the struggle against Communism."

They said the "truth is that the Truman administration resisted the efforts of the Republican 80th Congress to provide for American security in the postwar period, abandoning plans for a 70-group Air Force and scuttling the program of Naval expansion authorized by the 80th Congress."

"The most tragic truth of all," the trio said, was that the administration "fumbled this nation into a grinding, stalemated war in Korea."

The squad said the 80th Congress was far from being what President Truman called a "do-nothing, care-nothing" Congress, and had an imposing number of solid accomplishments to its credit.

"Republicans took 7,400,000 working people off the tax rolls, liberated Americans from 76,000 regulations, directives and restrictions...reduced the national debt, balanced the budget and brought a measure of stability to the dollar while cutting taxes... provided funds for Greek - Turkish aid, launched the Marshall Plan and brought into being the North Atlantic Treaty Organization."

Long Discussed, Seldom Seen Hoover Cart

Busy weekend shopping crowds in Greenville gaped in wonder and disbelief just before noon Saturday as a tenant on the Willie Evans farm near the city nonchantly drove an appropriately decorated "Hoover cart" straight down Evans Street. The "depression mule" above seems oblivious to any political favortism, but the signs on the cart speak for themselves. Riding on the cart with the driver is Evans' teen-age daughter, outfitted to correspond with the depression theme. (Reflector Photo by Jesse Poindexter)

Canadian Cities In Far Northland Predicted Ahead

OTTAWA (AP)—Cities of 20,000 to 30,000 and maybe more will spring up in Canada's forbidding northland within this century. That's the prediction of the Defense Department's senior authority on the Arctic.

Mining, says English-born Graham Rowley, is the factor that will carry civilization into the Arctic and sub-Arctic in the next 50 years, building cities where now there are only isolated airfields, mining camps and tiny settlements.

Canada hasn't gone as far as other countries—the United States, Russia, Denmark — in developing her northland mainly because her tiny population has been too busy taming the southern part of the country. Nor has there been any pressure on Canadians to go north to seek land because there has been plenty in less-bleak places.

The Republican Party is like an hourglass. It believes in plenty for the men on top to be shared by those below by the trickling down process. When this prosperity by trickle was last tried, Mr. Hoover was the engineer in charge of the operation. His blueprint for "Two cars in every garage" faded until the builders became so confused they produced a "Hoover Cart" with no garage. As late as July of this year, Mr. Hoover was again before the people with the same discarded and discredited blueprint—but time ran out on this Republican philosophy twenty years ago. The people well remember how credit became restricted—how prices for all products of farm and factory went down—Agriculture became prostrate—Veterans sold apples or went hungry. Homes and farms we sold for taxes. Foreign trade was stifled. Banks bankrupted. Life earnings were swept away. The Hoover blueprint became the era of

DEPRESSION

Then, the people put the Democrats back in power, and under the dynamic leadership of a great President and a determined people, this Country experienced the greatest resurgence of spirit and progress in its history. More than 70 million people are gainfully employed at higher wages, with better homes, more money in the Bank, and better health conditions than exists anywhere else on this earth. Under the Democratic blueprint, all the people, not just a few on top, share in the good things of this Country. The Democratic Party believes in prosperity—a prosperity shared by all the people—a prosperity which starts at the bottom and works up the line bringing health and happiness to all as it moves upward.

Democrats of North Carolina well remember and can never forget the hat-in-hand attitude which they were forced to adopt when they went to Washington while the Republicans were in power. Our memories are not so short as to forget the poverty and scarcity of that era, nor are we unmindful of the great party which made it possible for us again to stand erect and face the future with renewed courage and faith in this great country!

Under the leadership of Bill Umstead and Adlai Stevenson this state and nation will continue its victorious march towards peace and plenty for all.

I am calling upon all the Democrats of North Carolina to go to the polls on November the 4th and give our ticket the biggest vote of confidence in the history of the party.

Chapter 27

Allie turned to Devereaux. "I got reason to believe Lippy Latimer was a tough orphan kid who grew up in the Ten Eyck-Bushwick Avenue neighborhood."

"You're sure?"

Allie patted a pants pocket. "I'll bet fifty of the money you gave me I seen Lippy floating around as a kid of maybe fifteen or sixteen. He used to go by the name of Terry for Terrence. I never knew his other name, but it wasn't Latimer."

"Go on."

"I got reason to believe he put the gloves on for the first time in Marco's Athletic Club, out in East New York. He used the name of Kid Young for a while."

Devereaux nodded to himself. It checked with the lead given Solowey's operative by the San Francisco sportswriter. An involuntary sigh heaved through him. Two principals, Hughes and Latimer, were finally linked to the common background of neighborhood origin.

"What about Frankie Hughes?"

Allie grinned. "I've been asked more questions about Frankie Hughes."

"Who asked you questions about Frankie Hughes?"

"The cops. When Frankie pulled that stickup, there was a regular platoon of cops roaming around the neighborhood asking questions. Just like you're here now asking questions. They closed me down for three months. Even tried to tear up my license to operate." Allie's mouth worked. "On Frankie Hughes your bet doesn't pay off. I can only tell you what I told the cops over and over again twenty years ago. I don't know a damned thing about that Electrical Appliance Company stickup and shooting."

"You could be lying."

Allie shook his head. "If I knew anything, maybe I'd of cashed in on it long ago." His eyes sought Devereaux's shrewdly. "That payroll money never turned up."

"What information have you got about Hughes and Latimore together, teamed up, chumming around maybe?"

"Nothing. Never saw them together. Hughes was just a young punk shooting pool in my place. I never took special notice of him until he made the newspapers."

Devereaux stared at the poolhall operator. "You could be lying," he said restlessly.

"I'm not. I thought about Latimore and Hughes together long ago."

"Why were you trying to connect Hughes and Latimore at all? What gave you an idea about Latimer, if you never saw the two together?"

Allie reddened slightly, like a man who'd unguardedly put his foot into it.

"Okay. There was an insurance dick around a few years after Frankie Hughes' trial. He asked me the same questions you're asking. He gave me the idea about Latimer."

"What was the insurance detective's name?" It was a struggle keeping his tone level.

Allie hesitated. "Hagendorf, or some name like it."

Devereaux nodded to himself. Jagendorf-Buloff had cut himself a piece of apple pie after the original crime. The insurance detective had followed the scent to a blackmail bonanza.

"How much did the insurance detective bet with you?" Devereaux inquired caustically.

Allie kept silent. The answer was as obvious as Allie's petty greeds. Buloff, too, had purchased cash cooperation.

"What about the photograph I showed you—the men I indentified as Martie Phillips and Fed Castle?"

"Like I said, I can't place them at all."

"They had other names in their youth," Devereaux suggested.

Allie shook his head. "Can't tell you a thing there. There were so damned many kids." A pause later he suggested. "Try the schools. There's P. S. 147 over on Siegel and Bushwick. There's a school on Boerum Street, and one on Scholes Street. If they were neighborhood boys, maybe they graduated from somewhere."

Devereaux considered it. "They were all about eighteen or older at the time. Too old for public school."

"There's Eastern District High School over in South Brooklyn. A lot of neighborhood kids travel out to the Hamilton and Erasmus High Schools." Allie laughed shortly. "I'm making like a detective." His eyes glinted. "A detective, like you," he said positively and finally, believing it.

"What about Hughes' people? Where can I find them?"

"Search me. Okay, I've said two-sixty's worth."

Devereaux regarded him quietly. "You said I could come around tomorrow for some more cash cooperation."

"Sure."

"Then you've more to tell."

"Come around and see."

Devereaux went to the front door that opened on Broadway under the "L." He paused outside the plate-glass window momentarily somehow feeling soiled and defrauded. He arched his head for a last withering look at the pool-hall operator, and his expression suddenly became intent.

Allie was stooped over his counter, scribbling on some surface. An innocuous thing and meaningless in itself, but a sudden thought started through Devereaux and shook him violently. He edged back over the doorway, then flung rapidly back into the pool hall.

Allie hurriedly palmed the surface he had been writing on, and Devereaux fought it out of his hand. It was a business card. On the back of it the pool-hall names: Martie Phillips and Fred Castle.

"Just made a note of those names." Allie was conquering a spasm of panic. "In case I could turn up some information for you."

"For yourself, you mean. You were going to check into these names, and see whether some blackmail angle could be worked up." Devereaux tore the card into fragments and flung them into the pool-hall operator's face. "Cough up," he commanded.

"Cough up what?"

"Two hundred and sixty dollars."

"Welshing a bet?" Allie said nastily.

"Welshing on a skunk."

"You'll have to take it back."

"One more provocation and I will." Devereaux's facial muscles quivered.

Allie dropped a crumpled roll of bills on the counter.

Devereaux pocketed the money. 'Remember those two names and I'll make a career of hounding you."

Solution of Yesterday's Puzzle

Man-Eaters Are Cautiously Kept In Their Cellar

OMAHA, Neb. (UP)—Faber Jensen keeps three man-eaters in his basement. They are savage piranha fish which can peel a man like a banana.

The 30-year-old Jensen is careful when he drops hunks of meat into the aquariums of his "twin" piranhas and their vicious "big sister." Jensen's mother came within an inch of losing a finger one day when she held a tantalizing piece of rabbit liver too close to the top of the twins' home.

"One of them jumped right out of the water and snatched the liver from my hands," Mrs. Jensen recalled. "It was gone so fast I took a good look to make sure I still had all my fingers."

The piranhas tolerate pork, kidney and liver but would like to sink their razor-sharp teeth into a more appetizing dish — fresh human flesh.

Also Lie Detectors

Frequently, that's what many piranhas do in their natural home in the Amazon when schools of the deadly fish reduce a plump native to a skelton in seconds.

It's part of piranha lore that natives suspected of lying are sometimes held over a patch of water boiling with the fish and threatened with a quick dip. That form of third degree questioning usually produces the desired result.

"They generally 'confess' to just about anything," Jensen said.

Jensen and his mother claim that the brother piranhas are the only two which ever have lived together in captivity for very long. They tried the same experiment with two others once and the pair remained on friendly terms for exactly 30 days.

"The next day I came down to take a look," Mrs. Jensen explained, "and found one and two-thirds fish still swimming around."

Just Family Row

Apparently there had been a family squabble and one of the two had decided to have a bit off the other for breakfast.

The twins are only about seven or eight inches long and weigh around two pounds each. The perch-sized demons dart around their quarters in lightning spurts and very close together — probably each with one eye cocked on his pal's teeth.

The bird fish, elderly and slower-moving, weighs a fat 10 pounds and is about a foot and a half long. She occupies a separate aquarium, for safety's sake, and eyes human visitors with a longing look.

The 10-pounder has lost her teeth. Mrs Jensen said they were taken out after she sliced a piece of skin from the face of a former keeper before the Jensens bought her.

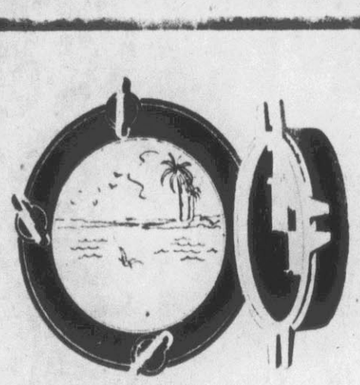

Key Personnel Studying Atom

NEW YORK (AP)—Ten young men representing British industrial firms recently began a course in nuclear engineering at London University, the British Information Service reported here.

They will conduct research into atomic energy and its use in medicine and chemistry. The practical course work will be done in a laboratory 40 feet underground. The students will work under the direction of the staff of Britain's atomic energy staff at Harwell.

The course was started at the suggestion of industrial firms having contracts connected with atomic energy who prefer that key personnel have a knowledge of nuclear physics.

Firefighters On Forest Fronts Praying For Rain

By UNITED PRESS

Forest fires blackened timberlands across the country today, and frustrated firefighters prayed for rain.

But none was in sight.

Fires crackled in at least 20 states and hazards mounted elsewhere.

Forests from the Pacific Coast to New England were placed out of bounds in many places to hunters and campers in an effort to thwart outbreaks of new fires in critical areas.

Some of the fires that flamed after weeks of dry weather were attributed to careless hunters.

Firefighters, including thousands of National Guardsmen, prisoners, students and volunteers, were meeting with some success in several states.

Only two small fires were still burning in Colorado,the remainder of 50, and both were minor. Eleven were extinguished in Big Horn National Forest in Wyoming. Hunting was banned on the eastern slope of the Colorado Rockies Oct. 19 and won't be resumed until snow or rain wets down the dry areas.

National Guard units around Bloomington, Ind. controlled all but one fire, in many cases saving homes and buildings. Civil Air Patrol pilots, who helped direct the fighting, continued a daylight patrol. A fast drop in temperature with a resultant increase in humidity was expected to help ease the danger.

All Indiana camping and picnic grounds were closed and no fires were permitted except in closed shelter houses. The deer season, scheduled to open November 6, may be postponed if the emergency continues, state officials said.

The Ohio adjutant general's department reported that fires there were under control but National Guard units and volunteers were standing by in several areas. Officials reported evidence that some fires were deliberately set.

Four hundred and fifty fires raged in West Virginia, and volunteers in Kansas and Missouri battled nearly a hundred blazes. In Texas from 60 to 80 fires were reported. Winds in Kansas and Missouri were diminishing and were expected to help prevent the spread of the flames.

The Pennsylvania game commission was expected to ask Gov. John F. Fine to set back hunting and fishing dates temporarily.

FIFRE-SPITTING:—Nothing sissy like swollowing gold fish for Ohio State University men. Current fad is spitting fire! SEATTLE (AP)—Mrs. Agatha Hamill, 105, filled out her Nov. 4 general election absentee ballot yesterday with the help of her son Arthur, 65, who guided her trembling fingers.

"They don't think they can beat Franklin D. Roosevelt, do they?" she cut in.

Which one she finally selected, of course, was secret.

Flynn Again Is Alimony-Loser

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Errol Flynn has lost another court alimony battle with his former wife, actress Lili Damita-to the extent of $105,712.90.

The latest decision in the long dispute, handed down yesterday by Superior Judge Clarence L. Kincaid, paralleled one by Superior Judge Elmer D. Doyle in 1950.

The latter one is on appeal. The actor's attorneys said the Kincaid decision also will be appealed.

Miss Damita's lawyers obtained the award after they claimed Flynn has paid nothing on $1,500-a-month alimony since the appeal of the 1950 decision. Judge Doyle held that a property settlement Flynn made with Miss Damita was not part of the divorce decree and thus could not be changed. It provided Flynn was to pay the alimony and the income tax on it.

Judge Kincaid ruled Flynn owes $61,160 in income taxes on the payments and is in arrears $40,500 in his alimony.

He awarded Miss Damita's attorney $5,000 in fees and the actress 7 per cent interest from the date each alimony payment became due.

No Polio Vaccine Practicable Yet For General Use

WASHINGTON (UP) —The Medical director of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis said today science still has not developed "a vaccine that can be used safely and on a large scale" to prevent polio.

Dr. Hart E. Van Riper said much research lies ahead despite recent optimistic reports from Batimore, Texas and Iowa. He described a vaccine developed from killed polio virus by Dr. Howard Howe of Johns Hopkins University as "just too dangerous" for general use.

The vaccine is likely to cause an "allergic encephalitis" in human beings, Van Riper said. The chances of contracting this, he said, would be greater than the ordinary chances of developing paralytic polio. Howe's research was a big forward step, but most experts believe a good vaccine will be developed from a live — but weakened—virus rather than a dead one, Van Riper said.

"I do not honestly feel that there will be any vaccine which would be available for effective use next summer," he said in a copyrighted interview with the magazine U. S. News World Report.

Van Riper said use of Gamma Globulin in Texas and Iowa indicates such treatment would be "very useful, although of quite limited application. . .certainly it is not anything like a complete answer to our problem."

The gamma globulin treatment involves the injection of the gamma globulin blood fraction of adults who have had polio into children to give them immunity. The immunity "lasts for only a period of weeks," but may be used in localized epidemic areas to prevent the spread of the dread disease, Van Riper said.

SUBSTITUTE FOR MAMA:—Accepting her fate as an orphan of war. "Miss Hap,55 a two-week old Korean kitten, opens her mouth for canned milk piped to her by medicine dropper with the help of Marine Sgt. Frank Praytor, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Praytor, of Birmingham, Ala. The Marine adopted the kitten after its mohter was killed last week by a mortar barrag near Bunker Hill. The name, "Miss Hap," Praytor explained was given to the kitten, "Because she was born at the wrong place at the wrong time." (AP Wirephoto)

Terrying Calls Heard By Air Rescue Teams In Korea

By RICHARD APPLEGATE
United Press Staff Correspondent

AN AIRPORT IN WESTERN Korea, (UP)—There is a terrifying call which echoes over the airwaves on both coasts of Korea—the Yellow Sea and the Sea of Japan.

The agonizing call comes from United Nations pilots down in freezing waters north of the 38th Parallel, or from fellow pilots seeking aid for the downed airmen.

The appeal usually is addressed to relatively slow, 150-knot Grumman Albatross amphibians and today I talked to a pilot of one of these ungainly World War II Albatrosses, who got two such bone-chilling calls 175 miles apart in the same afternoon.

Capt. Edwin Leonard, a Spokane, Wash., retired, told me this story:

"It was pretty far north on a routine orbit (an orbit is the circling just outside the combat area that rescue planes employe) when the flight leader of a fighter squadron yelled 'May Day, May Day.'

"The pilot of an F-86 Sabrejet had been hit in the engine on an inland strafing mission. He was losing altitude and had only 6,000 feet. He headed for the open sea and bailed out. His wingman hung around and gave him cover as long as he could — and stayed around so long that he had to crash land on the way home — and it took us at least 30 minutes to reach him.

"But his coordinates were good and we found him, riding his little rubber raft like a bug in a rug, when we finally got there. We took him aboard and gave him dry clothes.

"His air cover sank the rubber raft with machinegun bullets so we wouldn't mix him up with the next mission.

"It was just off the mouth of the Yalu River and we didn't hang around, because the same planes that shot him down were still hanging around.

"American Sabrejets, however, gave us air cover on the way back as far as seemed sensible, and after they had left us we again heard 'May Day, May Day.'

"'May Day' is the equivalent of the mariners' worldwide SOS, and I realized another of our boys was in trouble.

"This time it was to the south, approximately 175 miles from the first pickup, and we still had the first pilot aboard.

"I swung the plane over and headed for this guy. He had been in a Navy AD-2, one of those single engine jobs which carry as many bombs as a World War II b-17, and he had flown his job right smack into the water on purpose because of an engine failure.

When we got there and picked him up the pilot had a little cut over his eye, and was sitting on his raft playing with his emergency radio.

"He seemed happy enough, and was obviously glad to see us. That made two guys in one afternoon. We were sure glad we found them both.

"But do you know what that guy was sending out on his emergency radio? The same thing we hear all the time when the boys are in trouble—'How long, Dumbo, how long?'

"You know, it gives you a hell of a thrill to be up there, knowing that they are depending on you, and no matter how, helpless they are and even if they do call us 'Dumbo,' we always tell them 'not too long, son, we're coming in to get you.'

"So How long, Dumbo, My God how long,' has a special urgency, and we guys in the Dumbos get there just as fast as we can. Maybe someday we will have jet Dumbo."

Guards' Comfort Brought To End

TORONTO (UP) — Provincial prison inspector T. M. Gourlay said today stools have been substituted for the comfortable armchairs used by guards at the Don jail because too many of them spent more of their time asleep on the job.

"If they go to sleep on the stools," he said, "they fall off."

Doctor Follows Mother's Bent

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)—Dr. Frances Zoeckler is following in the footsteps of her mother, who was a medical missionary in Iran for 40 years.

The 33-year-old doctor, who was born in Iran, is now interning in obstetrics in a hospital here. Upon completion of her work she hopes to return to practice in Iran. The doctor, who won her medical degree from Johns Hopkins University, had been in charge of work for women and children at an Iranian hospital.

Dr. Zoeckler's mother, Dr. Mary A. Zoeckler, recently retired and makes her home here. The doctor's father, a Presbyterian minister, died in missionary service in Iran.

Russian 'Buys' For The House; Mayor Gets Bill

VIENNA (AP)—In a small village in the Russian Zone of Austria, midafternoon wine drinkers in an inn looked sour whe a high Soviet officer stopped his car and walked in to relax.

Disturbed by the unfriendliness, the Russian ordered wine for all. Word quickly spread. Most of the villagers appeared. The Russian ordered more drinks as a sign of "AustroRussian friendship." The mayor and his wife were summoned.

After two hours' merriment, the Russian left. Several days later, the mayor received a bill for 'entertainment of population" from the innkeeper.

"The Soviet officer left without paying," he explained. "I tried to collect from the Russian Kommandantura, but they sent it back."

Shortest River Has Short Name

VERONA, Italy (AP) — People around here like to brag about their record-breaking river. They claim it has the shortest name — and runs the shortest distance — of any river on earth.

It's the R River. From its origin on Mt. Baldo to where it pours into Lake Garda, it is only 525 feet long.

But it does just about everything a river is supposed to do. There's a bridge, a waterfall, good fishing, several irrigation canals, and a couple of water mills. Once, back in 1882, it even had a flood and destroyed several houses nearby.

A new air route takes plane from Europe to Greenland and thence directly to Fairbanks, Alaska on their way to the Orient.

Steel Sought For School Is Denied

Application for steel to be used in a [redacted] School addition has been turned down by the Federal Security Agency, [redacted] school superintendent, said yesterday.

The request for the eight-classroom building is "in excess of the amount of steel that can be allocated under the present formula for this project," [redacted] said he was informed.

Further consideration will be given the request if the metal needs can be cut from 68 to 56 tons of carbon steel and from 36 to 24 tons of structural shapes and pilings, [redacted] said.

The school head said he had conferred with [redacted] and [redacted] architects for the project, and said they agreed that the plans could be tailored to meet the FSA criteria.

[redacted] Company submitted a low bid of [redacted] for basic construction of the addi-

LACK OF STEEL NEED NOT DELAY YOUR BUILDING!

The story at the left appeared in a big daily paper early in October. It points out that a school building was delayed for lack of steel . . . a thing that need not happen here in North Carolina, the brick Capital of America.

Load-bearing brick walls and columns are widely used by North Carolina designers to give you the best building possible for the money. This practice has meant less disruption of building, and has saved many tons of steel for defense.

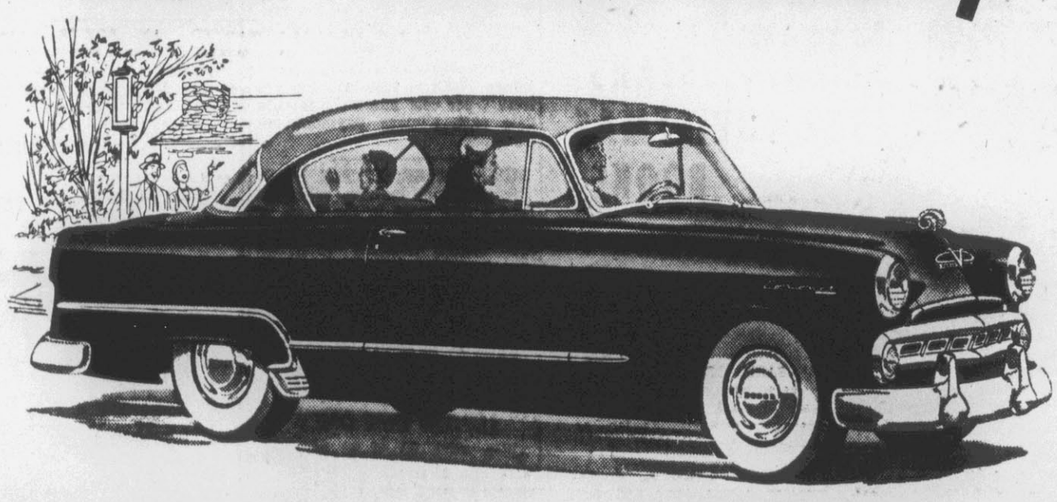

The average North Carolina brick is strong enough to bear the weight of a 150 ton locomotive. Load-bearing brick construction makes use of the great inherent strength of brickwork, and the need for large allocations of war-scarce metals is thus often eliminated in buildings up to three stories in height.

Therefore, your North Carolina brick industry is not only helping to beautify and weather-proof your buildings; by providing structural strength as well, it is making good buildings possible under today's conditions.

Spiritual Foundation Of Democracy Cited By Rabbi

The spiritual foundation of American democracy was discussed this morning by Rabbi Solomon Herbst of Goldsboro.

"When America was born the aristocrats of the old world, with few exceptions, scoffed and scorned," stated the speaker. "They called its democracy the lawlessness of mob rule; its culture the boasting vulgarity of trivial inferiors; and its religious freedom the unprincipled anarchy of the spiritually untutored akin to atheism.'

Tracing the spiritual background from its early beginning by quoting Lockey's saying that " it was Hebrew mortar that cemented the stones of American democracy," the speaker went on to the tremendous advances America has made in every field of human endeavor.

"America has become the homeland of the world's oppressed in the 19th Century and the arsenal and shrine of freedom in the first half of the 20th Century," Rabbi Herbst said. He further stated that in the years that lie ahead the fate of the entire world depends upon the leadership of America.

The speaker stated that it is not the blood but the spiritual tradition that flowed through America's founding fathers and "has quickened new men of every race and creed to be the loyal sons of its upward quest that made America different."

"The world will be dragged down into the vortex of ancient and tragic evils unless it is now lifted up by the virtues that gave our land its blessing," he stated.

"Much will depend on other nations but everything depends upon the people of America whether with brave minds and stout hearts we will now be true to the rock from which we were hewn and the fountain from which we sprang," said Rabbi Herbst in closing.

Record Vote Is Likely To Strain N. C. Facilities

By LYNN NISBET

RALEIGH — Whether the total vote in North Carolina reaches the near-million mark predicted by some, or barely makes the 900,000 figure most commonly forecast, the facilities for marking, casting and counting ballots in the State's 2,036 precincts will be sorely taxed.

The polls wil be opened from 6:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., an even 12 hours, 720 minutes. The unexpectedly heavy registration of the period that closed last Saturday finds dozens, perhaps hundreds, of these precincts with 2,000 and more names on the voting lists. Allowing just half a minute per voter, no precinct can accommodate more than 1440 during the day. Half a minute, 30 seconds, would seem to be about as short time as any voter could be expected to go through the necessary legal process of having the name checked on the registration book, ballots handed to him and taken to the private booth for marking, having the name then entered on the poll book as the ballot is deposited in its proper box. The most efficient election officials dealing with the most intelligent voting constituency could hardly be expected to better that speed record.

Unfortunately, all election officials are not highly efficient and if history of all previous elections is repeated a majority of the voters will require more than 30 seconds even to read the ballot after entering the booth. A substantial number of them will have to ask the pollholders which box to put which ballot in—all of that process being a part of the inherent right of every voter, but still time consuming when there is no time to waste.

A few precincts in Buncombe, Durham and Guilford counties have installed voting machines in place of the old system of marking booths and ballot boxes. Voters familiar with these machines find them faster, but unfamiliar voters may take more time with the mechanical levers than with the cross-marking pencil.

The voting machines are a big boon to tired precinct election officials when it comes to counting up after the polls closed. Results can be determined much more quickly than by the old process of going over every name on every ballot and calling out the marks to a group of tally clerks. Experience with the machines, however, raises serious doubt whether the process of voting is speeded up.

The important thing for North Carolina voters to remember next Tuesday is that they should be early at the polling place. The closing time of 6:30 p.m. is inexorably fixed by statute. The statutes have been interpreted to permit any eligible person within the voting enclosure at 6:30 to cast his ballot and have it counted. That consideration is not extended to all those in line down the street. It is doubtful that any single precinct in North Carolina can fully comply with the letter of the statute as to roped off spaces of 50 feet, 20 feet or 10 feet for the respective functions. It will not be surprising if numerous protests are raised by late arriving prospective voters—and more time may be lost by election officials having to fix the exact point from which would-be voters are declared eligible.

Picture Slides Of Tour Shown

By WYATT BROWN

"Europe through the Eyes of a Youth Caravan" was presented to the Rotary Club last night by Miss Catherine Flewellen when she showed slides from her summer sojourn in Europe and made running comments on each picture. She was introduced by Reverend Leon Russell who told how Miss Flewellen had gone to Europe this summer as a member of a Methodist Youth Caravan who went to serve as ambassadors of goodwill.

There were people and scenes and buildings from France, Switzerland, Italy, Austria, and both the East and West zones of Germany. Miss Flewellen made it clear that the value grew out of the Caravan's reaching people through work, fellowship, and worship. She called the Caravan the "best investment in peace and international goodwill that could be made.

A special word of greeting and salutation last night was extended to Hon. Fordyce Harding. It was his first meeting in about twelve months. Special note was taken of the return of Leon Russell to his Greenville pastorate for another year.

Scout Executive Ralph H. Mozo of Wilson was a guest of the club last night. H. M. Stott of Whiteville was a visiting Rotarian and also W. C. Windley of Whittier. Also four Rotarians from Washington: E. L. Roebuck Sr., Zeno Edwards, Herbert Cox, and Erlene Mercer. J. Knott Proctor, club president, presided.

Steamship Line On Sale Today

WASHINGTON (UP) — The American President Steamship Line, formerly the Dollar Line, will go to the highest bidder today.

Sealed bids will be opened in the board room of Washington's Riggs National Bank, which has been named trustee for the Commerce Department and shipper R. Stanley Dollar in their dispute over ownership of the line.

Announcement of the winning bidder's name probably will be held up while the trustees examine the lengthy documents accompanying the bids, but the bid-opening ceremony will be open to the public.

Dollar and the government have been fighting over the line for seven years, in and out of court. At one point, Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer was cited for contempt of court and threatened with a jail term, but the two parties agreed last June to offer the line for public sale, with a minimum asking price of $14,000,000.

Half the proceeds will go to the government, and half to the Dollar interests.

Light Damage In 2 Car Collisions

Greenville police investigated two motor vehicle collisions yesterday. Property damage was little over $500. None of the occupants was injured.

Three cars were in sideswipe collision at Evans and Fourth Streets yesterday afternoon. The investigating officers said the collisions resulted from confusion of signals while one car was parking. No arrest. Drivers were William E. Jones, Negro, 1212 Davenport Street; Ellen McGlohon, 306 Oak Street, city, and Prince Smith, Negro, Route 1, Winterville. Estimated damage was: $200 to the McGlohon car; $3 on the Prince car; Jones' car not damaged.

Two cars were damaged yesterday afternoon when they collided on Evans Street near the American Legion Home. One car was driven by Floyd L. Dunn, 214 Arlington Drive, city, the other by Fred M. ing of big industrial plants into the area beyond the mountains had changed the attitude of the people in many respects. At the eighth district rally in North Wilkesboro spokesmen for Hoke and Moore and Scotland commented on the influence of military installations at Fort Bragg. Later in the itinerary reports from Bladen and Brunswick and Columbus and Lenoir dealt with the impact of huge industrial installations in those hitherto wholly rural counties. Not only has the thinking of the home people undergone change, but the more significant factor of many new people bringing in from other sections their ideas and customs has enlarged the scope of community. One man humorously told of his surprise at finding that one of his new neighbors, whose friendship he had come to prize was a Republican engineer from Connecticut, while another was a military officer from Michigan. The intermingling of farm workers and employees in industry, to which the Piedmont has long been accustomed, is still some-what strange in the tidewater and transmountain sections. It means that people in the far edges and the central part of the state are coming into fuller realization of State unity, and that they can no longer contend their problems are different from the other sections

POLITICAL -- Politically it further means that there is likely to be an increasing Democratic vote in heretofore solid Republican counties, and a much more widely diffused Republican vote in areas where it has been hard to find enough of that party to man the voting places. While there is little prospect this year or any time in the near future for the Republican party to become a real threat to Democratic control of the State, it is quite obvious that the trend is toward that long cherished Republican hope of a "two party state."
