

Eisenhower Raps Personal Attacks

Invades Stevenson's Home-State Today After Telling Madison Square Garden Throng This Was "The Most Scurrilous Campaign In American History"

EN ROUTE WITH EISENHOWER (UP)—A tired but increasingly confident Dwight D. Eisenhower made an early-hour plane trip to Illinois today in a move to take 27 home-state electoral votes from Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson, his Democratic opponent.

The Republican presidential candidate seemed to be driving harder than at any time since his nomination and he appeared more robust than many of the younger aides in his campaign party.

"This is the toughest thing I've ever been in," Eisenhower said. He will make four speeches in the Chicago area, including a major address at Chicago Stadium at 10 p. m. e. d. t. tonight.

Eisenhower smiled often but he was bitter Thursday night when he told a rally at Madison Square Garden this was "the most scurrilous campaign in American political history."

He said President Truman and other opponents had turned against him when they realized the Republican party had not been split by his nomination.

He said Nazi Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels and Nazi Jew-baiter Julius Streicher "had done quite a job on me for a number of years" and Soviet writer Ilya Ehrenburg and "the poison pen artists on Pravda have been working on me for quite a spell."

"I have been worked over by experts," Eisenhower said. "But one had ever engaged in such unrestrained slander as to charge I would trim my principles to run for office."

Eisenhower said the attacks on him had not weakened his faith in America.

He said he would work even more intensely to get rid of "boodling, bribery and influence peddling" and drive wrongdoers out of office.

He told the crowd, estimated at 23,000, he was proud he still retained "my own" principles as the campaign entered its tense closing days.

"I have made no deals in this campaign," Eisenhower said. "No one has a claim on me. No one has a promise from me. No one has captured me. I am my own man."

On the other hand, he said, the Democrats had wanted him to become "their man" in 1948.

"They thought I might be the man to defend governmental corruption, excuse their coddling of Communists and apologize for the vacillating policies which have caught us in an inflation at home and a war abroad," he said.

"How could they dare think I was their man?"

Eisenhower said, "Because they could not exploit me they are determined to destroy me; to destroy my lifelong friendships, my reputation, my spirit."

"But ladies and gentlemen, I have been through real bombardment, and I am unscathed by their fusillade of blanks and blankety-blanks."

Eisenhower seemed particularly angered by the introduction of racial issues in the campaign.

"One of the many examples of this was the charge, at first only whispered, but then openly spoken that I am anti-Catholic, anti-Semitic and anti-Negro."

"That charge was made by the senior member of the partnership running against me," Eisenhower said, referring to President Truman.

Notes Honesty In Young Listeners

READING, Pa. (UP)—When Gov. Adlai Stevenson was nearing the end of a whistle-stop speech here Thursday some of his enthusiastic listeners shouted, "No, no, don't stop now."

A boy's voice filtered through the chorus. "We don't want to go back to school yet."

"There," observed the Democratic presidential nominee, "is an honest fellow."

Adlai's Campaign Train Is Rolling On Without Him

Candidate Hopes He Can Return For Scheduled New York Appearance

ABOARD STEVENSON SPECIAL (UP)—The presidential campaign train of Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson rolled eastward without its candidate today.

The Illinois governor dropped his campaign as Democratic presidential candidate to fly home and try to settle a riot in the state prison at Joliet.

The campaign train was left in charge of aides and supporters for a swing across West Virginia, Maryland and Delaware with the candidate hoping he could be back in time for a six-speech schedule in New York topped by a major appearance in the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

Sen. J. William Fulbright of Arkansas, a campaign adviser, was pressed into service to appear on behalf of the candidate at whistle stops along the way.

Efforts also were being made to get Vice President Alben Barkley as a stand-in.

Stevenson, accompanied by a few aides and representatives of the three major press associations, took off for St. Louis in a personal effort to settle the prison riot shortly after a speech in Pittsburgh Thursday night winding up a two-day tour bidding for Pennsylvania's 32 electoral votes.

With an eye on Halloween and reference to what he denounces as shifts in the position of Dwight D. Eisenhower, his Republican rival, Stevenson told a crowd in Pittsburgh's Hunt Armory Thursday night "the great crusade has turned into the great masquerade."

Drawing a contrast between the record of the Democratic and Republican parties over the last 20 years, he said he was "proud" to lay them "before the American jury" in next Tuesday's election.

He charged that "Old Guard" control of the Republican party has turned the GOP into "a shadow" of the party of Abraham Lincoln, its first president.

Abandon Search For Man's Body

The search for the body of Seth Arthur, Greenville man who was electrocuted on board his boat and knocked overboard in Bogue Sound has been called off by the Coast Guard.

Arthur brushed against steel rigging Monday when the mast hit a power line carrying 15,000 volts. Arthur brushed against steel rigging on the mast and was electrocuted, the shock throwing him overboard.

Coast Guard boats from the station at Fort Macon have been used in the search since Monday but the body has not been found.

The search was abandoned yesterday until further notice.

The accident occurred late Monday afternoon in the vicinity of the Atlantic Beach bridge.

Kissing Bandit Returns; Caught

NEW YORK (UP)—A well dressed young man who stole $90 and a kiss from candy saleslady Kathleen Taylor, returned Thursday for more of the same.

Instead of kiss and cash, however, the bandit got cash and caught.

Mrs. Doris Emerich, the owner of the candy store, was on duty when the holdup man entered and pressed a burglar alarm. After snatching $127 from the cash register, Henry Wilson, 27, the thief, walked into the waiting arms of a policeman.

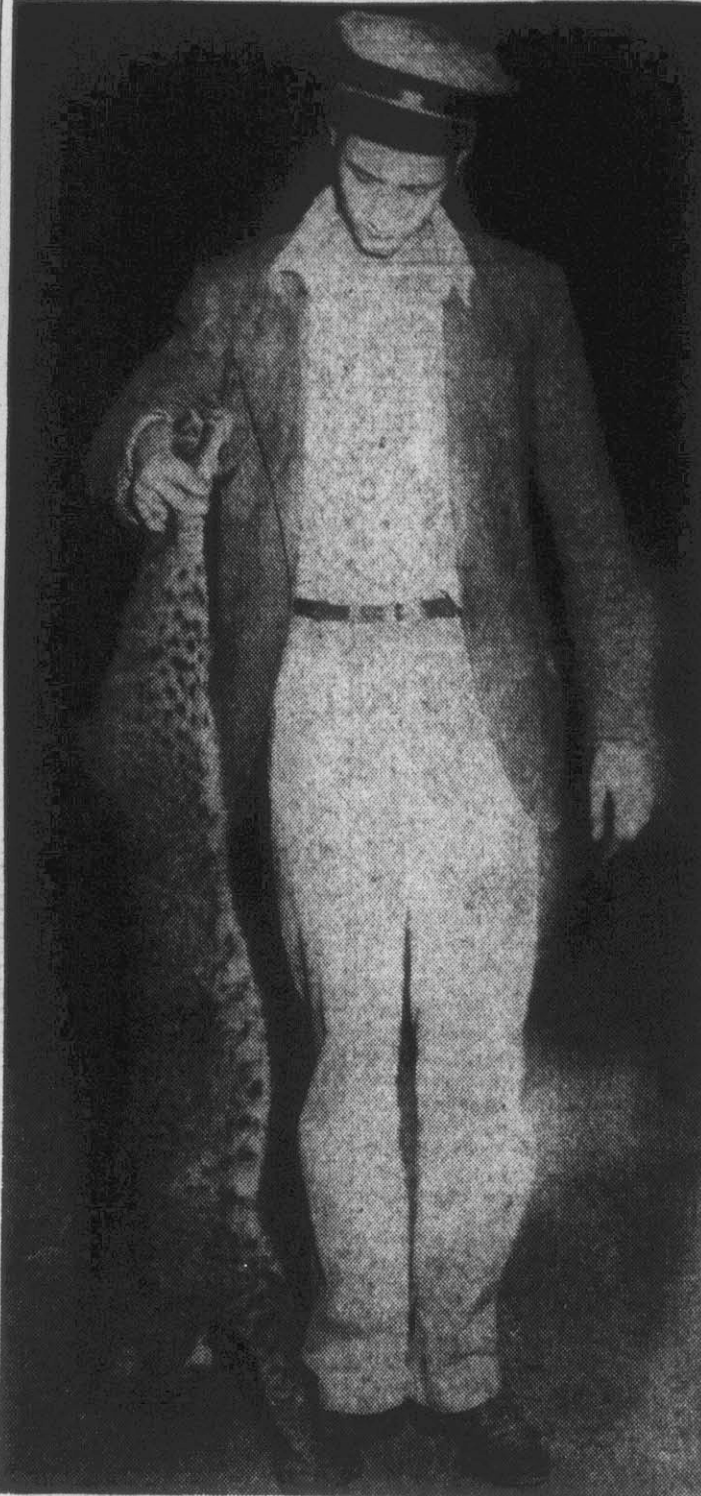

Replies show that 22 per cent of the 682 freshmen chose East Carolina because of its location, 20 per cent because of the teacher training program, and 16 per cent because of the reputation of the college as a "friendly college" brought in by the 682 new students.

Other answers given by freshmen indicate that the recommendations of friends and teachers influenced 14 per cent in the selection of the college. The reputation of East Carolina as a "friendly college" brought in by the 682 new students.

Nine per cent selected East Carolina because it offers courses which they desired to take. Others enrolled because the cost of educational services is low, because some members of their families had attended the college, or because they had been impressed by visits to the campus on High School Day or at other times.

Those indicating that they chose East Carolina because of courses offered in a specified area include students interested in business education, music, physical education, home economics, library science, the pre-professional courses, art, English, the social studies, science, and the Air Force ROTC program.

Squirrel Hunter Bags Bobcat

Luke Cates of the Clayroot Neck section holds the bobcat he shot yesterday in the woods during a hunting trip. The boy shot the 31-pound animal as it jumped at him. The one remaining shell in his 12-gauge shotgun found its mark in the neck of time. (Reflector Photo by Muriel Shotwell)

Big Bobcat Shot By Young Hunter

31-Pound Cat Jumped At Him, Single Shell In Gun Sufficed

"Son, what did you get?" asked the father, both of them just returning from a hunting trip yesterday afternoon in the Clayroot Neck section.

"I got a butt-headed deer," answered 20-year-old Luke Cates.

The "butt-headed deer" turned out to be a 31-pound bobcat, shot with a 12-gauge bird gun in which there was only one shell left when the cat, stalking the hunter, leaped.

Luke was hunting squirrels in the Clayroot Neck section. He had been standing still watching for squirrels for around ten minutes when the cat walked by. It turned, saw the hunter, and jumped toward him.

The boy aimed, fired. And the one remaining shell in his gun hit the mark.

On display last night at a filling station on the Bethel Highway, the animal caused much comment. The cat's eyes were still open, showing yellow slits of hate even in death.

The tan fur with brown spots was clean, save for a few splashes of the animal's blood.

Luke Cates will go on other hunting trips, but no matter how many squirrels he'll get next time, there probably won't ever be that look of pride in his eyes as there was last night.

Bobcats are common in this section of the state.

Fresh Angle To Red Philosophy

TOKYO (UP)—A bandit gave a new interpretation to a political philosophy today when he robbed a downtown post office of 60,000 yen ($170).

"I'm a Communist," he shouted as he shoved a pistol through the cashier's window. "I need money."

Wynne said the fire is burning in the heart of the almost inaccessible swamp and is difficult to battle. Firefighters said it has brought death to "a large amount" of wild game, including deer and bear.

The Pitt County Selective Service office sent 34 men for pre-induction tests in Raleigh this morning.

There they will be given mental and physical examinations.

Draft calls for November include three pre-induction calls, and one induction call for 35 men into the armed forces.

Prediction

RALEIGH (AP)—State Democratic Chairman B. Everett Jordan thinks the party's presidential nominee, Adlai Stevenson, will carry North Carolina by a margin of from 250,000 to 300,000 votes in next Tuesday's election.

Jordan said yesterday he feels that Stevenson will roll up a total of 600,000 votes in Tar Heel and Republican nominee Dwight Eisenhower will receive from 300,000 to 350,000.

Arrest, Charge Man With Fires

Capture Suspected Woods Fire Arsonist After Chase

ASHEVILLE (UP)—A 10-mile highway chase through smoke-dimmed mountains resulted in the arrest of a carpenter who was charged with setting between 20 and 40 forest fires which have destroyed about 20,000 acres of timberland.

Henderson County Sheriff W. G. McCall and highway patrolmen arrested Ely Sumner, 47, of Edneyville, after a wild chase near Hendersonville yesterday. Sumner was charged with arson.

District Forester B. H. Corpening had insisted since the fires first sprang up in the tinder-dry mountains of this area that they were "pretty definitely" set by someone "regarded as a pyromaniac and a real menace."

Police also filed other charges against Sumner saying he failed to produce a driver's license and had produced a gallon of non-tax paid whiskey in his car.

Meanwhile, foresters reported that the fire situation, though still dangerous, is somewhat improved.

The big fire threatening the Pisgah National Forest was reported "tentatively" under control, but a new one sprang up across the state line in Tennessee and was burning toward Hot Springs, N. C.

Although the mountains of Western North Carolina have taken the worst beating during the past week, District Forester O. J. Wynne at Elizabeth City reported that the 10,000 acre blaze in the Dismal Swamp is still causing trouble.

Wynne said the fire is burning in the heart of the almost inaccessible swamp and is difficult to battle. Firefighters said it has brought death to "a large amount" of wild game, including deer and bear.

Announce South Korean Army To Be Built Up Soon

Defense Department Also Denies Van Fleet To Be Relieved From Post

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Defense Department today countered mounting Republican criticism by announcing that the South Korean army will be increased substantially "in the near future."

The Defense Department denied published reports that Gen. James A. Van Fleet would be relieved as commander of the U. S. Eighth Army in Korea as a result of his apparent support of Dwight D. Eisenhower's criticism of the South Korean training program.

President Truman also issued an official denial from his campaign train that Van Fleet would be removed as a result of a letter by Van Fleet made public Wednesday night by Eisenhower.

The Republican presidential candidate read excerpts from Van Fleet's letter in a television program to back up his repeated claims that South Korean troops could be trained more rapidly to replace American troops in front line fighting in Korea.

In his letter addressed to Maj. Gen. Orlando C. Mood, former chief of staff of the Eighth Army, Van Fleet said there were a "goodly number" of South Korean troops "in the pipeline."

But he added, "I have done this on my own responsibility with very little encouragement and never any approval for increases."

While denying that Van Fleet would be disciplined for his implied criticism of the administration's program in Korea, the Defense Department answered the Eighth Army commander's complaints by issuing a statement claiming it has "pushed vigorously the expanded training program" of Korean troops.

The 1,000-word statement, issued at a special Pentagon news conference Thursday night, also disclosed that the Defense Department has approved recommendations by Gen. Mark W. Clark, U. S. commander in the Far East and United Nations commander in Korea, for an increase in the South Korean army "in the near future by a certain number of divisions and several additional regiments."

"General Clark has also submitted a longer range program for the further expansion of the Korean army which is under intensive study by the Department of Defense," the statement said.

Truman Invading Taft Territory

Enters Ohio Today; Outlines Administration's Work

EN ROUTE WITH TRUMAN (UP)—President Truman took his "Give 'em hell" campaign into Ohio today from Michigan where he said the administration was reaching a "turning point" against Red aggression.

The President ventured into the home state of his No. 1 enemy, Sen. Robert A. Taft, in an effort to put Ohio's 25 electoral votes in the Democratic column.

He planned stops at Toledo, Ottawa, Sidney, Troy, Hamilton and Cincinnati. He will speak tonight in Cincinnati, Taft's home town.

Mr. Truman finished a one-day whistle stop tour of Michigan with a speech Thursday night to a crowd estimated at 5,500 in Detroit's State Fair Coliseum.

He pointed to the three "great achievements" of his administration: progress in stopping Red aggression without another world war, progress in civil rights and prosperity.

The President said all three projects are "still incomplete" but "we are now reaching a turning point in a struggle to make the Kremlin aggressors come to terms and drop their plans of conquest."

He said the election of Democratic presidential candidate Adlai Stevenson would carry all three programs to "final success."

Mr. Truman accused Dwight D. Eisenhower, GOP presidential candidate, of embracing Sen. Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin and other "practitioners of the big lie, the weapon so widely used by the Nazis, Fascists and Communists."

Cheers And Boos Greet McCarthy

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UP)—Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy attacked Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson for the second time in less than a week and was met by boos and catcalls, as well as cheers from his admirers.

About 150 spectators walked out on the controversial Wisconsin senator's speech Thursday night.

McCarthy said that the mass walkout was engineered by "members of the opposition plotted in the hall."

"One hundred members of the opposition were planted in the building and they were instructed to get up and leave all at once," the Republican senator said.

Weary ROKs End Battle For Crest Of Triangle Hill

Hostage Guards Freed By Police

Illinois State Police, Acting Under Gov. Stevenson's Personal Order, Storm Cellblock; Seven Hostages Unhurt

MENARD, Ill. (UP)—State police acting on orders of Gov. Adlai Stevenson broke the week-long riot at Menard state prison today and freed all seven prison guards held as hostages.

State troopers, most of them armed with riot guns, invaded the strife-torn east cell block and fired several shots as they rushed in.

Order was restored half an hour later with no further violence. The seven guards, held captive by the convicts since the siege began last Monday, were tired and hungry but unharmed.

Stevenson, Democratic candidate for president, stood outside in the prison yard as the troopers filed into the cellblock.

Immediately after order was restored Stevenson left the premises, apparently untroubled. He permitted newsmen escorted by state police Capt. H. W. Nois to enter the cell block.

The prisoners were herded into their cells as the troopers stood by with their weapons ready.

The riot had ended and the men were a tired, dirty, dejected lot. The cellhouse floor was littered with accumulated debris, but there was little visible damage to the building.

Troopers and guards collected plumbing pipe the prisoners apparently had contemplated using for clubs, and began a search of the cells.

One cell, in contrast to the others, was freshly painted in white and red by the inmates. Other cells were littered with broken stools, torn blankets and trash.

Nois said some of the prisoners had refused to go along with the rioters, and were separated from the others last night and removed by guards from the cell house.

William I. Flanagan, Stevenson's press secretary, said the state police fired "four or five" gunshots into the ceiling before the hostages were released.

About 200 state troopers, most of them armed with tommy guns, rushed the buildings after Michael S. Seyffert, director of public safety, told them "we are going into the cell house with state police armed with guns, and we will use whatever force is necessary to restore order."

Stevenson, who broke off his campaign for the presidency just before midnight to fly here, entered the prison yard shortly after 10 a. m. grim-faced but outwardly calm.

A short time later word was relayed from the east cell house that all seven of the prison guards held as hostages have been released to safety.

Langston Steps Down Saturday

By CHESTER WALSH
Reflector Staff Writer

Police Chief Guy C. Langston, who resigned last week, effective November 15, will step down Saturday instead.

Langston said today that Mayor Lester Page had informed him it would be all right to leave on the first of the month so that he might lay the groundwork for his new job. He has been employed by a local firm as a safety engineer and as contact man for the company's customers.

One application for the post of chief of police has been received at the mayor's office. S. G. Gibbs, member of the State Bureau of Investigation and former State Highway patrolman, has applied for the position.

"During my two years in Greenville as chief of police I have enjoyed the support of the Mayor and aldermen and various organizations of the community," Langston said.

"And I want to extend my thanks and appreciation. I have learned a lot about the arduous duties of being chief of police. We have tried to enforce the laws without fear or favor, and in this the people have given us generous support."

Langston praised members of the Greenville police department and commended them to his successor.

Crime Tour Of Kidnap 'Maniac' Ends In Capture

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UP)—The "good time" crime tour of James (Three-Gun) Hill, a self-styled "maniac," ended today when he and a convict he had freed of gunpoint ran into a police roadblock.

The man who had terrorized motorists in three states for almost two weeks gave up meekly, although he was heavily armed.

"I had a good time while it lasted," Hill said as troopers rushed the bandit car with drawn guns.

Hill and two companions who were previously arrested had kidnapped so many persons and changed cars so many times since their crime spree started Oct. 20 in Chattanooga, Tenn., it was difficult to keep the record straight.

Back Slowly Down Steep Slope After Fighting For Nearly Twenty Hours With Stand-Or-Die Communists; Survivors Of Overrun Units Found; Peak Often Changed Hands

SEOUL, Korea. (UP)—South Korean infantrymen called off their attempt to recapture the bloody crest of Triangle Hill late today in the face of fanatic last-ditch resistance by Chinese battling from deep bunkers and trenches.

The weary Republic of Korea soldiers backed slowly down the steep slopes of the central front height after fighting for nearly 20 hours with stand-or-die Communists entrenched on the peak.

United Press correspondent Victor Kendrick said today's fighting was "probably the toughest." Allied soldiers have faced in 18 days of battle for Triangle Hill and nearby Sniper Ridge.

As the ROK's withdrew, they took with them a "large party" of survivors from three chopped up units overrun in the first 3,000-man Red attack early today.

About 175 of the wounded, bloody South Koreans were found among the bodies of their comrades, who fought against overwhelming odds to blunt a red attack that threatened to break the main Allied defense line.

The Reds captured the peak at 2 a. m., lost it at 9:15 a. m. to a ROK counter-attack, recaptured it at 10 a. m. and then repulsed the second South Korean drive.

Maj. Robert S. Galer, an American advisor to the ROKs, told Kendrick that of the three ROK units engaged in the initial Red assault, two were "completely gone" and a third was reduced to 18 men.

"But those who remained came back for more," Kendrick said.

Kendrick said that South Koreans made the second counter-attack at mid-morning were ordered during the afternoon to get off the hill.

"They refused to go," Kendrick said.

There was no immediate word from the front on whether the attackers found any of the 100 or more U. N. soldiers who had been cut off in the earlier fighting and were believed to be still on the hill.

Both the Reds and the Allies reinforced their fighters this afternoon, sending fresh troops scrambling up the steep, slippery slopes of the pyramid-shaped peak to join the battle.

The Communists showered down intense barrages of mortar and artillery fire, with many of the shells coming from large 1 and 150 howitzers. Allied gunners replied with tank, mortar artillery and .50 caliber machine-gun fire.

At nearby Sniper Hill, Red troops made a light attack which was driven off in 30 minutes with an estimated 44 enemy killed.

But the fighting on Triangle high-landed battle action.

The intensity of the Communist artillery barrage aimed at the attackers appeared to be slackening at one point during the day.

"They're going to run out of ammunition some time," an American officer at the front said, "by God, they'd better."

In the air war, 13 B-29 superfortresses hit a Communist supply area at Suncheon and an enemy military headquarters at Nam, two miles southwest of the Communist capital of Pyongyang.

Another case: Another Winterville Negro, Waddell King, who had been charged with murder at the outset of the trial, also had charges reduced to manslaughter. He was allowed to plead guilty to assault with a deadly weapon and Judge W. C. Harris sent him to the roads for not less than eight months nor more than two years.

Facts of the case indicate that King hit Robert Earl Dixon, also Negro, over the head with a whiskey bottle during an Easter Monday argument and subsequent scuffle. Dixon was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Other case heard were: George McKinley Jones, driving drunk, found guilty in jury trial and sentenced to six months on the roads, suspended provided he pay a fine of $100 and costs and surrender his driver's license for one year.

Lester Moore, driving drunk, not pros with leave.

General co-chairmen of the affair were Mrs. Robert Arthur and Mrs. James Roberts. The decorating committee headed by Mrs. Meredith Posey and Mrs. Donna Taber created the Halloween atmosphere throughout the building, using the traditional orange and black with the lavish use of witches, skeletons and pumpkins. Lovely arrangements of colorful autumn leaves and stacks of cornstubs gave additional charm to the scene.

Supper was served from 6 p. m. by the Kitchen Committee, of which Mrs. S. G. Gibbs was chairman. Hot dogs, homemade chicken salad, sandwiches, doughnuts and homemade fudge were among the good things which the Food Committee had prepared for the occasion.

Mrs. H. C. Coe was in charge of this occasion and Mrs. Charles Gaskins was responsible for all the donations of food. Cold drinks were dispensed by the men of the Air Force R. O. T. C. of East Carolina College, with M. Sgt. Herbert Sails as chairman of this group.

The large crowd of children in their gay costumes enjoyed many games during the evening, including spin the wheel, the fish pond, grab bag, cake walk, and others. A committee headed by Mrs. James Moyer arranged these events. Mrs. Alton Clapp supervised raffles of a ham and several homemade cakes, which drew a great deal of interest from the crowd.

Proceeds from the party, which Finance Co-chairmen Mr. and Mrs. Don Saled reported as highly successful, will go toward purchasing additional playground equipment for St. Raphael's School.

October 31, 1932

Last Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. J. B. James entertained in honor of Miss Effie Yeager, of Knoxville, Tenn. The hostess met the guests at the door and ushered them into the hall where in "Halloween Corner" hot tea was served them from a caldron under which tiny red lights peeping through logs of pine made a typical Halloween picture.

Halloween Corner was decorated with witches, black cats, autumn leaves and pines lighted over by pumpkin lanterns. Six tables were set for six handed euchre. Miss Yeager, the guest of honor, was presented with a silver picture frame. Mrs. C. S. Forbes won an orange paper broom filled with chocolates. After the card games a salad course was served and favors passed.

Miss Yeager wore a white lace robe over orange satin and a green chiffon overdress trimmed in lace.

Bethel Bride Feted At Coffee Hour

BETHEL—Mrs. Roland Modlin and Mrs. E. H. Matthews of Washington entertained at the home of Mrs. Modlin a few days ago in honor of Mrs. Charles Swan Ives Jr., who has recently returned to Bethel to make her home.

Mrs. Ives, a bride of a few months ago, has been with her husband who was stationed in other parts of the country while serving a term with the United States Army.

Decorations of fall flowers and foliage formed a festive setting for the informal coffee hour and shower party. Guests were greeted by the hostesses and the honoree as they arrived and were invited into the dining room for refreshments. Mrs. Ives was wearing a corsage of tiny yellow chrysanthemums presented to her by the hostesses.

Mrs. W. H. Wootard of Greenville poured coffee from a table appointed with a centerpiece of yellow fall flowers.

Guests served themselves to party accompaniments. During the conversational hour which followed Mrs. Ives was presented with a collection of gifts for her new home from her relatives and friends who were present.

The guest list included Mesdames George Bullock, Dennis Hardy, Francis Dory, Clayton Carson, John Linwood Gurganus Jr., Curtis Martin, Robert Joseph Whitehurst, Alvin Carson and Walter Clayton Carson, all from Bethel; and Mrs. C. V. Swan and Mrs. Harold Lane from Washington.

Dinner Party Given To Honor Birthday

VANCEBORO—Mrs. C. V. Willis complimented her husband, Dr. Willis, with a supper party in honor of his birthday Wednesday night at their home on North Main Street.

Guests were greeted at the door by the hostess and honoree and invited into the dining room where a delicious barbecue supper was served the honor guest and approximately 35 gentlemen.

The table was centered with a three tiered birthday cake. Dr. Willis was remembered with numerous gifts from the guests. Assisting in serving were Mrs. H. E. Smith and Miss Betsy Smith.

Robersonville Church Holds Homecoming

ROBERSONVILLE—The annual Homecoming at the First Christian Church in Robersonville was a successful occasion in every respect.

Two hundred and twenty-eight attended Sunday school and every available space in the sanctuary and adjoining classrooms was occupied at the morning worship service. An estimated 500 persons enjoyed the bountiful picnic dinner served on the church lawn.

Because of the crowded condition, it was impossible to get a complete registration of the guests attending. However, there were a large number from eastern and central North Carolina, with a goodly sprinkling from Virginia and Maryland. The day was an outstanding success. "This church practices union; it has no creed, it seeks to make religion as intelligent as science, as appealing as art, as vital as the day's work, as intimate as home and as inspiring as love," said one of the members.

FFA Members Attend State Fair In Group

ROBERSONVILLE—On October 17 forty FFA members chartered a bus to the North Carolina State Fair. Those who took this trip were:

At the FFA meeting at the Agriculture Building 26 new members were sworn in. After the roll call by the president, George Robert James, the green hands were initiated. Before the meeting adjourned hot dogs and Pepsi-Colas were served.

Leper Missionary Appeals To Group For Help To Colonies

"Don't call them lepers!" This urgent appeal was made here by Mrs. Thomas R. Husk of New York, national field secretary of American Leprosy Missions, Inc., in a plea for a "fair deal for those with leprosy," before an audience at the Meadowbrook Presbyterian Church on last Wednesday evening.

Recently returned from a tour of 17 leprosy colonies in the Belgian Congo and the Cameroun in Africa, Mrs. Husk is in the city visiting in the home of Rev. and Mrs. C. D. Patterson.

In her appeal to eliminate the word "leper," Mrs. Husk pointed out that it has acquired a completely unjustified meaning which unfairly stigmatizes leprosy patients.

"People who have leprosy or Hansen's Disease, as many prefer to be called, are simply people ill with a disease much less contagious than tuberculosis. In fact, leprosy is such a mildly infectious disease," she said, "that with the widespread use of the new sulfone drugs, it will eventually be wiped off the face of the earth. But it's going to take the combined forces of government, science and Christian missions to do the job," she added.

Estimates of the number of leprosy cases in the world range from seven to 10 million, Mrs. Husk said, and there are thought to be about 5,000 in the United States.

A frequent visitor to Carville, U. S. national leprosarium in Louisiana, Mrs. Husk explained that while the government provides maintenance and medical care for the patients, the Protestant chapel and services of the chaplain are supported by American Leprosy Missions.

It was while she was in Africa that Mrs. Husk saw what could be accomplished by close cooperation between governments and missions in combating the disease from which at least one million Africans suffer.

"Most of the work now being undertaken by national governments was initiated in mission colonies," she pointed out, "but mass treatment is definitely a job for governments." Countries in which the governments have taken over complete responsibility for their leprosy populations are Japan, Brazil and the Philippines.

Well-known in religious circles throughout the South, Mrs. Husk has been national field secretary for American Leprosy Missions since 1949.

Before entering leprosy work, she served as public relations counselor for Southwestern College in Memphis and Belhaven College in Jackson, Miss.

Under her maiden name of Mamie Gene Cole, she has written religious poetry which has appeared in many periodicals and a number of religious anthologies.

American Leprosy Missions, Inc., which Mrs. Husk represents, is a national agency which aids or maintains 153 leprosy colonies in 38 countries in cooperation with 62 Protestant denominational and inter-denominational mission boards.

Prizes Given For Displays In Windows By Girl Scouts

During Girl Scout Week, which has been observed this week, a number of store windows in the downtown area of Greenville have featured displays arranged by the various troops in the city.

Judging of the windows was made yesterday and prizes awarded. The decisions were made by an impartial committee and their decisions were announced this morning.

Winning first place was the window at the Frank Wilson store, which had been planned by all the Brownie troops. It featured "live" Brownies working at some art or craft work each afternoon of the week. Dolls dressed like Brownies were grouped around a large globe of the world, stressing the international phase of scouting. Handicrafts, articles, posters, and other things made by the children in their troop meetings were on display. During each afternoon two or three Brownies demonstrated the art of weaving, painting, or other crafts which they had learned in their scout work. As winner of first prize, they were awarded $5.

Brownie leaders are Mrs. Sherman Parks, Mrs. Dallas Clark, Mrs. W. C. Goodwin, Mrs. Charles Bissette, Mrs. W. A. Bryan, Mrs. Troy Dodson, Mrs. R. E. Tunnell, Mrs. L. R. Finch, Miss Frances Marshburn, Mrs. J. B. Bass and Mrs. Richard Morin.

Winner of second prize of $4 was Troop 10, under the leadership of Mrs. Amos Evans and Mrs. Sherman Parks. This troop had arranged a window at Blount-Harvey's like an outdoor camping trip. A group of dolls dressed to represent many nations were placed around a campfire. At another fire there was a Scout cooking bacon and eggs, while yet another one was setting an outdoor table. There was a tent equipped for sleeping, and the scene was placed against a background of trees.

Troop No. 19 under the direction of its leaders, Mrs. B. B. Sugg Jr. and Mrs. Nelson Bowden, was winner of third place award of $3. A replica of Camp Hardee, complete with bunk houses, recreation hall, campfire circle, a sandy beach and the water, was established in a background of woods. The Scout figures made from pipe cleaners were shown pursuing various activities.

Troop 13, a Negro troop led by Miss Lottye Gray, won fourth prize of $1 with their window display at Penney's. This represented the many things which the Scouts had done in their meetings, and basket

Piney Grove News

Since we will be unable to see every one personally and thank them, for helping to make our Harvest Sale and Supper a success, last Friday night at the Winterville Community Building, we would like to use this method in saying, Thank You. We are truly grateful for everything that was done, it means so much to us. With your help we were able to meet our goal which was paying for pulp furniture, and again we thank you. Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Cassick, they are the proud parents of a fine baby girl.

Mr. Clifton Harris and Mr. Max Pollard who are still confined in Pitt Memorial Hospital, are very much improved. We do hope they will soon be well enough to be back with us.

James Bullock's — "Little Ladies" Choir had a part in the program at Marlboro F. W. B. Church Sunday. This Choir is composed of the "Little Ladies" of the Community. We are very proud of them. And they are bringing joy to others.

Mrs. Leslie Humbles, Mrs. H. P. Tyson, and Mrs. Bernice Causy, spent the week-end in Norfolk visiting relatives.

Our sympathy is extended to the family of Mr. Sam Walston. We were happy to have Roy Avery back with us Sunday at Sunday School although he states he has to return to McGuire's Hospital in Richmond, Va.

Mrs. R. O. Williams is still improving. We are looking for her to be back with us soon at Sunday School and Church services.

Several from Piney Grove attended the Revival Services at St. Delight last week to hear Rev. M. L. Hollis of Amory, Mississippi. He was very enlightening in explaining the scriptures.

So many of our friends are asking us about the success of our fifth Annual Harvest Supper and Country Auction sale and since the public helped to make it a success, we would like for them to have the final figures.

The receipts on the night of Oct. 22nd for everything, including the supper, the auction sale and the free-will offering, totaled $994.38. The total expenses, less the use of the club house, was $155.18, leaving a balance on hand of $839.20.

Strength for the Day

BRICKLAYING

One of the great Christian doctrines is the doctrine of vocation. It proclaims the fact that every man is put into the world to do something definite and that the definite thing he does is a holy thing. The ministry is a sacred calling, but it is not the only sacred calling. The housewife, the bookkeeper, the businessman, the lawyer, the farmer, the mechanic, the salesman—these are part of God's economy precisely the same as is the minister of religion. In the Christian scheme of things, the whole of life is a sacred vocation.

May is not be that if your job has got a bit heavy on your hands, the reason is because you do not regard yourself and your work highly enough? Under the providence of God, we are all engaged in the job of bricklaying. Nobody—even though he be president of the United States, or the world's richest man, or the university's greatest scholar—is permitted to lay many bricks. We have a few to lay and a very little time in which to lay them. When our row of bricks is laid and pointed up, and we put aside the trowel at life's end, it seems that we have done very little. But we have helped to build a glorious superstructure.

Look! Its battlements go up to heaven. Your row of bricks and mine are somewhere.

Natural Resources Up In Smoke

For the past two or three days smoke has been drifting across North Carolina skies.

As the gray pall billowed up to blot out the sun in some areas and cause a haze in others, thousands of acres of valuable timberland in the Tar Heel state were being laid waste.

The big blazes were concentrated in the mountains of the state and down east in a peat-like area along the Beaufort-Pamlico County line. In spite of the efforts of fire fighters, some of the forest fires are still raging out of control, leaving behind them a charred path which cost timber owners thousands upon thousands of dollars.

If the fires were unusual, the cause for alarm would not be so great. But they are an annual occurrence, and year by year they take their toll of one of the state's most valuable natural resources.

Some of the fires now raging in North Carolina's woodland could have come from spontaneous causes, but for the most part, it is a good bet they were caused by carelessness on the part of some person.

A hunter or a nature lover enjoying a walk through Autumn's beautiful court may have been careless with a match, a cigarette or a campfire. A farmer burning a ditch bank or brush may have let a fire get out of hand. Whatever the cause of the present series of North Carolina forest fires, precautions should be taken by everyone who ventures into the woods to see that they do not cause a fire in the dry underbrush.

In Pitt County alone last year almost 8,000 acres of woodland was burned over by forest fires. Timber damage from these fires alone has been set at $10,291 by the local fire warden.

It may be impossible to stop completely the forest fires which annually eat into North Carolina's valuable timber supply; but if the carelessness which is responsible for the majority of these fires could be done away with, the loss would be reduced considerably.

Bluff Or Not, How Far Can They Go?

"Hope springs eternal," and each time Andrei Vishinsky is scheduled to make a major speech before the United Nations, the rest of the world figuratively sits on the edge of its chair.

And just as inevitably, after a prolonged oration which one foreign minister likens to trying to prove black is white, the world again relaxes back into the accustomed state of nervous tensions.

Hopes were a little higher than usual Tuesday, before the Russian minister spoke. Secretary of State Dean Acheson built a strong case against the Communists in his accounting of the Korea "police action" to the United Nations. In fact, the case was so strong that some thought the Red spokesman might say something to indicate a change of strategy, or even a tactical retreat. Nothing like that happened.

And therein lies the most baffling disappointment of our times. A world organization of sixty nations cannot perform its designated functions to keep the peace. Its very intent is blocked by the policies of one nation; one nation whose conscience does not hesitate in adopting any conceivable policy to accomplish its goals.

One nation keeps the rest of the world from peace.

Is this really a bluff? Does Russia feel so confident in its might that it dares to defy the dreams and aspirations of everyone else?

And whether it is, or isn't a bluff, how far can they go before being "called?"

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—High Pentagon officers are deeply disturbed over the campaign confusion surrounding the question about when, if ever, the South Koreans can relieve us of the task of defending their country against Communist attack. The misconception has also aroused concern in world diplomatic and military circles.

They question the factual accuracy of the original estimate by Secretary Lovett that the South Koreans have more men on the front than the United States. What he really said was that the natives employ more men "on the battle line and in the field" than the Americans, including personnel working far behind the lines.

U. S. UNITS LARGER—Referring to troops actively engaged, Lovett declared that the Koreans have nine divisions on the front, as against four American units. Truman amplified this statement in a campaign speech, adding that the Seoul government had 400,000 in action, as against about 250,000 Americans.

Truman did not realize, or at least did not explain, that native divisions number only 10,000 men, and that few are up to full strength. U. S. units have from 18,000 to 24,000, and are better trained and equipped to hold a proportionately larger sector against the enemy.

Finally, U. S. reserves outnumber the Koreans by three to one. As another measure of the nations' respective contributions, the U. S. British and Canadians have about 30 per cent more in regular action than the South Koreans.

TWO-YEAR JOB—After precipitating this argument by his insistence that the South Koreans fight their own wars, General Eisenhower aggravated it by promising to visit the battlefield, if elected. Although appreciating the possible vote-getting value of this pledge, his brother officers doubt whether it could accomplish any good, except psychologically.

The Pentagon estimates that it will require at least two years, with a tremendous expenditure, to organize, train and equip a native defense establishment capable of withstanding Communist aggression. Even then, a great number of officers and men would be needed permanently for logistics and communication work, for commands of units above a regiment.

COMPLICATED—This delay is due to basic considerations more compelling than mere military calculations, based on the complexities of modern warfare. Having substituted as proxy and sentry under the Japanese conquest for almost 40 years, the South Koreans have no warrior instincts.

Since the peninsula was used by the Japs as only an agricultural and mineral storehouse, no industries were developed. The natives require long training to handle modern arms efficiently.

With their inhuman sacrifice of troops, and their use of less gadgetry in their equipment than the U. S. and its allies, the Reds match our mechanical superiority with the massed manpower of the North Korean and the Chinese Communists. Moreover, Moscow began to build this force as soon as Japan surrendered in 1945.

"APPEASEMENT"—In view of Korea's tragic history, and the fact that it is such strategic territory in the Japan-China-Russia triangle of interest, our failure to foresee Russia's aggressive intentions and to strengthen South Korea should be like real criticism. But even here there would be a babel of Administration explanations.

1945-1950 was the period of American "appeasement" of the Russians in the hope that they would keep their wartime promises. Militarization of our zone it was feared, might prod Moscow into aggressive action on a large scale. It would have been opposed by our United Nations allies lest it provoke World War III. The Lattimore group in State advised against it. Meanwhile, the U. S. had undertaken to furnish military and economic aid elsewhere around the globe—Western Europe, Italy, Greece, Turkey, Indo-China. We needed our arms output, then none too large, for our own forces at home and overseas. Korea remained the same forgotten orphan that it has been through the centuries, except that it had become our orphan.

BOOMERANG?—Another factor has always made the arming of natives in a far-off land a dubious prospect. It can boomerang in a big way.

Syngman Rhee, Korean president, is a headstrong individual. If we had made him too strong, militarily, he might have attacked above the 38th Parallel, and the United States would have been depicted as the aggressor, since he has been our protegee for years. Britain frequently suffered from these difficulties before she handed the job of world policeman to Uncle Sam.

Thus Ike will find that a post-election visit to Korea, if it appears that he will be the next Commander-in-Chief, may be disappointing with respect to any immediate settlement of this problem.

"The precept that government is all-knowing—the fixation that a group of bureaucrats should decide what is best for the people—is foreign to our very traditions. It is the harbinger of the socialist state in America."—Irving M. Ives

BOYNE CITY, MICH., CITIZEN: "We wonder how those who are concerned with social justice in wage matters can condone the actions of economic bureaucrats who would raise the potential earnings of one segment of the population while the millions who are not covered by automatic living cost increase clauses have to dig deeper and deeper into their purses and their reserves."

MONTPELIER, Vt. EVENING ARGUS: "Let's take a look at unemployment. On two occasions it was war and only war that saved the country from severe unemployment. . . . Unemployment in February, 1950, was 4,684,000. This was the highest since August, 1941. Both dates were shortly before the United States went to war. The CIO News commenting on unemployment in April, 1950, said: 'The situation is serious.' Even after the start of the Korean war, unemployment was a serious problem."

EAGLE RIVER, WISC. VILAS COUNTY NEWS-REVIEW: "This newspaper, without reservation, strongly recommends that its readers investigate several of the health insurance plans—and then subscribe to whatever one seems to be the best of them."

SYCAMORE, OHIO, LEADER: "The struggle in which we are now engaged may decide whether we are to continue as a nation of free men or whether the world, including the United States, is to be dominated and enslaved by Communism. Our freedom is placed in danger by excessive government spending and the threat of national bankruptcy, by the inroads of Communism at home and abroad."

ST. ANTHONY, IDAHO, CHRONICLE-NEWS: "The cost of government to the individual is fast reaching the prohibitive point. From there it is just a step to confiscation and after that the next step is Totalitarianism, whether you want it or not."

What are the limits of receiving television in Greenville? Many Greenville televisioners have rotators on their antennas and turn them in various directions in an effort to pick up various stations. Others have their antennas pointed in the direction of Norfolk and leave them there.

Out of this country Charlie has received stations in South America and Cuba. Many of these stations have acknowledged cards from Charlie and some have explained that televisioners much further away than he is have received their signals.

Charlie's equipment is not particularly unusual. His antenna reaches about 50 feet in the air. He has a double-stack Channel 4 antenna and a 21-inch table model set, equipped with a two-stage booster. He lives at 110 Manhattan Avenue, which is just off Dickinson Avenue.

When you are setting back enjoying Martin Kane with a good signal coming from Norfolk, Charlie is scanning the beam trying to pick up distant stations. He has even experimented with using a built-in antenna only, and has been able to get Norfolk.

And I thank you.

CAPTIVE — More people apparently are conscious of the way the electoral vote set-up distorts choices almost half the people, including this time North Carolina and other Southern States. The system gives the entire electoral vote of the State to the candidates for President and Vice President who receive a plurality, not necessarily a majority, of the popular vote. This system is just as unfair to other sections as to the South, and protest that it keeps the South "captive to the Democratic party" are no more true than the claim it keeps New England "captive to the Republican party." In 1948 for example, Truman got the entire electoral vote of North Carolina with 58 per cent of the popular vote, while Dewey got the full electoral vote in Maine with only 56 per cent of the popular vote. (Not many folks realized that Maine is more Democratic than N. C. is Republican.) Worse than that, Dewey got the full electoral votes in Maryland and Michigan; Truman got the full votes in California, New York and Ohio, and Thurmond got the Louisiana electoral vote, although in none of these instances did the winner get as much as half the popular vote.

PROPOSAL — An amendment to the Federal Constitution has been proposed by Senator Lodge of Massachusetts and has support of many leading Democrats throughout the country to retain the electoral college based on congressional representation, but to apportion the vote in each State on basis of popular vote. If that system had been in effect four years ago Dewey would have gotten about 4.6 electoral votes in North Carolina, and Truman would have gotten them in Michigan. As it was, the Democrats in Michigan and Maine were as much out of luck as the Republicans in North Carolina and Tennessee. They are "captive" but there is nothing sectional or partisan about the captivity.

PARTY — A great deal has been heard and read lately about "party" loyalty, reference being to political parties. There is another kind of party, and one of the other kind has no loyalty problem. Anybody who has attended the "party" given by the William Clarks—senior and junior—and Selby Anderson for the top men in Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company, Security National Bank, Carolina Telephone Company and other business associates and personal friends, is a "party" man from then on.

This year's affair was staged at Hilma Country Club at Tarboro, with "Cousin Willie" (as the senior host is affectionately known in two states) holding court in his composite capacity of genial host, feudal lord and story-teller par excellence. Presidents and directors of big banks and insurance companies and railroads mingled with present and prospective members of the General Assembly and folks somewhat lower in the economic scale—like newspaper men—in a practical exhibition of democracy in action. One proof of a common tie between the rich and the non-rich was the way all of them went after the barbecue and hushpuppies on the buffet luncheon table.

POLITICS — The occasion was personal and social rather than business or political, but it is

What Other Papers Are Thinking

ON WHOSE OX IS GORED

(Henderson Dispatch)

Southern governors and other high officials are denounced by straight party Democrats for deserting the reservation. They have received the highest honors in the gift of their people. One in particular, Governor Byrnes of South Carolina, is on the receiving end of a great deal of this criticism because he has held so many top positions, yet finds himself unable to go along with what he terms radical departures from traditional party principles.

But these same critics in Democratic ranks at the same time receive with a hearty welcome and open arms the extreme liberal Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon for deserting the Republican party to vote for Governor Stevenson.

fusing angles of this political campaign. Another is the Truman attitude toward Eisenhower, who is generally believed to have sought to induce the general to accept the Democratic nomination, and when he failed, and after Eisenhower won the Republican bid, turned upon the general with all the vituperation of which the Pendergast school graduate is capable. This is the same military chief, too, who was drafted by Truman from civilian life as the man he considered best fitted to take over organization of the Truman-designed North Atlantic alliance in Western Europe. In other words, so long as Ike was on Truman's side Ike was absolute top. Once he went over to the GOP, however, he is just about everything common Truman can think of to belittle him.

This is what is known as low level political campaigning. The Democrats are by no means alone in employing such tactics. Result is that the presidential race has been dragged into the mud for political benefits it is thought may accrue from that type of appeal.

After the election, a lot of these reckless assaults on capable leadership on both sides will die out and in large degree be forgotten. It is most unfortunate, however, that high officials consider it necessary to stoop to such levels in seeking the votes of the people. After all, it is in a measure a reflection upon the citizenship of America if the people are considered so gullible and so stupid as to fall for these things.

Much depends upon whose ox is gored, and the side of the fence you happen to find yourself on.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

Sumner Slichter, renowned Harvard economist, believes we will have permanent inflation in the United States, with prices rising 2 to 3 per cent a year from now on outward. He recognizes this will cause some injustices but believes these will be less than the benefits.

Rising prices tend to keep demand ahead of production and this will insure full employment, according to his theory.

This may be the tacit view of the Federal government. While few in Washington have espoused inflation, the results show that both the Administration and Congress have consistently acted to bring about continuous inflation. Both Republican and Democratic Congressmen have voted to spend more money than has been received in taxes and have pursued other policies that have produced constant inflationary pressures.

Let's suppose that instead of a tacit assent to inflation, the government openly undertakes a continuing policy of inflation, either because legislators and office holders think it is good or because the voters show they want it.

Suppose we are to have a 2 per cent inflation each year for the next generation. Then—

Few people will want bonds at present rates of interest. The buying power put into bonds will diminish almost as fast as the interest increases it. The alternatives are much higher interest rates, bonds with maturity values tied to price indexes, or compulsory bond buying.

Few people will be interested in most present types of life insurance. Few will care to scribble to pay premiums even in 50-cent dollars if their heirs are to be paid off in 25-cent dollars. Policies with ever-increasing principals might be an answer — if insurance companies know a magic way of underwriting them.

Labor troubles may increase, since workers will be faced with the necessity of getting a 2 per cent a year increase just to keep up present living standards. Contracts tied to cost-of-living indexes may solve the problem for some. Unorganized workers may have a harder time, just as many of them have had since the war. Persons dependent on savings, pensions and other fixed incomes will slowly sink into penury.

Meanwhile, the nation would see the most exciting markets in tangibles. People would rush to protect their dollars by putting them in common stocks, real estate, precious gems, works of art and other things that would tend to appreciate in price as the dollar sank.

A shift from pure savings to investments would raise the question of whence would come the new funds to finance new plants, homes and other expansion?

Some genius may have an answer. But on the face of it, it looks as if the government would have to furnish the constant stream of investment capital, further raising its inflationary actions. That would mean more inflation — so much more it might be impossible to hold the total down to 2 per cent a year. Instead of a slow, moderate inflation, we might have a soaring spiral.

MADRID (AP)—Few American mothers want their sons to grow up to be prize fighters. But in Spain many mothers—particularly among the poor—fondly hope their little muchachos end up in the bull ring.

That is one of the great dreams of Spanish poor children.

The dream is even stronger in recent years than in the past as the "take-home pay" of the matador has soared tremendously. A dozen years or so ago the leading bull fighter might get only a thousand dollars for an engagement which sounds like nice money, but matadors like bricklayers, don't work the year around.

Today the fast man with the sword can pick up six thousand dollars or more for a show, and even that fee has been doubled. Visions of such fat fees in youthful heads have created a new traffic hazard in the cities here. Ambitious young boys practice the bull fighter's art by dodging among passing taxis and cars.

There are three schools in Spain which for a total fee of a hundred pesetas—about $2.50—will give a student a certificate entitling him to fight in any bull ring in this country. But the problem of these embryo fighters then is to find a promoter willing to gamble a good bull on him.

It isn't just a matter of killing the bull—a visiting Iowa farmer might do that with a baseball bat. The bull must be skewered in a way to please the crowds. To the fans bull fighting is more an art form like painting or sculpture than it is a science.

They like best the battle between a brave man who takes chances and the bull which attacks incessantly until, after receiving the deadly sword shaft, he turns his back to the arena wall, kneels and dies. It also has to be fast, colorful and neat. The crowd whistles at a ragged or cowardly performance on the part of either man or bull—the Spanish equivalent of the Bronx cheer.

"You have to see at least a hundred bull fights before you even begin to understand what it's all about," a veteran fan said. An experienced fan prides himself on the fact that he can predict by the first step he takes into the ring whether a bull is a bum or bravo. Nothing is more lonesome in the ring than a bull who says to himself "To hell with all this, I'm not mad at anybody." The crowd whistles in disdain as he is dragged out later with six black darts stuck in his carcass to show he was yellow.

His reward for being good, however, is to be dragged around the arena and by three mules to the crowd's applause. As he is dead in either case, honor or dishonor means nothing to him and no cow ever deliberately raises her bull calf to be a man fighter.

Professional bull fight schools will take aspirants as young as 14. But they so far have turned out no top matadors. The real champs start as kid cattle herders on ranches and they may begin as young as 10. One boy puts on a hollow bull's head and charges at a comrade who makes with the cape waving.

Promising kids are then allowed to test the bravery of female calves, for Spanish ranchers have a theory that cowardly female calves later will deliver cowardly bulls. If the lady calf won't keep charging at the boy, she is slaughtered.

Boys graduate from female calves to young bulls and they may become full-fledged matadors at 17 if they show enough skill. It is a short career. Most matadors are through by 25 and 30. For most of them, their dreams of wealth never come true. Only a dozen or so reach the financial top where they can afford to pay $250 or so for their costumes.

For ones have to rent their bull ring working clothes. But in terms of death, the trade of the matador is perhaps less risky than prize fighting in America. No matador has been killed in Spain since 1947, when the great Manolete slew the bull that, dying, turned and gored him fatally.

WASHINGTON—Citizens of Pakistan fight by the hundreds four and five nights a week to special programs at the Information Center in Karachi, Pakistan's capital.

Miss Saada Ishaq, pretty Karachi employee of the U. S. international Information Administration of the State Department, who is here for a three months boning-up on American life, vouches for this. She says the programs of recorded music, ranging from American Indian to New England folk songs, classical music and jazz, attract as many as 500 persons a night. Equal numbers attend the American exhibits, seminars and movies.

Men comprise about 80 per cent of the audiences, except when such subjects as child welfare and education are discussed, when about 40 per cent of the group attending are women. This, Miss Ishaq says, is because many women are still in "purdah" or veils, which cover their faces up to the eyes, and are not allowed to appear in public.

The All-Pakistan Women's Association is working to free Pakistan's women of this age-old custom and to bring them other new freedoms. Miss Ishaq told me. Women have the vote, she said, but many still do not use the privilege and women are not allowed to hold executive positions in government. Miss Ishaq, who speaks perfect English, still wears the picturesque native costume of Pakistan, the "shalwar," or trousers, made of 4½ yards of silk, a straight-hanging who says to "kameez," falling just below the knees and slit on each side, and waistcoat of wool as well as a colorful chiffon scarf over her head. Eke brought along a Western style wool topcoat.

"What you read about America and see in movies and pictures is different from what you actually find when you get here." "Miss Ishaq said. "Everyone is so hospitable and informal that I don't feel like I'm in a foreign country at all." She told of an American friend who asked her to dinner and took off her shoes because her feet ached and explained the procedure was "an old American custom." The following evening in the home of another American Miss Ishaq removed her own shoes. "Excuse me, this is an old American habit," she told her new hostess.

Miss Ishaq will visit New York and several other American cities before returning to Pakistan late in December. When she has any spare time she expects to do some shopping.

"My brother Asad, 9, is crazy after cowboys and wants a green and red cowboy suit," she said. "He tells me I must go to Texas and tell Roy Rogers how much he loves him and to invite him to Pakistan."

The Compassion of Jesus

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Matthew 9.

Jesus told a man sick with palsy, "Thy sins be forgiven thee," whereat scribes said He blasphemed. Jesus said, "The Son of man hath power to forgive," and to the man, "Arise, take up thy bed and go into thy house." The man obeyed.

Passing a customs house, Jesus saw a tax-gatherer named Matthew, and said, "Follow Me," and he did. The Pharisees were angry that Jesus went to Matthew's house and ate with publicans and sinners.

A certain ruler came to Christ saying his daughter was seriously ill, and might even be dead. Jesus went to his home, told the hired mourners that the girl was only sleeping. He went to her, took the maid by the hand, and she rose.

Two blind men came to Jesus, saying, "Thou son of David, have mercy upon us." Jesus asked them if they believed He was able to help them, and when they said they did, He gave them sight. MEMORY VERSE—Matthew 9:36.

THE COMPASSION OF JESUS

HE HEALED THE SICK AND FORGAVE SINS

Scripture—Matthew 9.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
OUR LAST LESSON told of Jesus' meeting human needs with His power of healing. Today that theme is continued, showing His infinite compassion for common people who were in trouble. Also it shows that even in the earlier days of His mission, the Pharisees and scribes were present to see His own words against Him so that they might have grounds to accuse and seize Him.

We have many scientists who have been of help to suffering mankind—Wilhelm Roentgen, who developed the X-ray; Marie Curie, who, with her husband, discovered radium; the doctors who first produced insulin, the sulfa drugs, etc.

There are people in the world today who believe that faith alone can cure disease. They are earnest souls who have a perfect right to their beautiful faith.

The majority of people believe, however, that we of today cannot perform the miracles that Jesus did during His brief sojourn on earth, and use the instruments of modern skill to help, believing that they too come from our Maker working through men. They too have faith.

Capernaum, "His own city," is he invited many publicans and sinners. Jesus ate with them, and for this the Pharisees criticized Him. Jesus answered them by saying, "They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick."

"But go ye and learn what that meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice: for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."

While Christ was explaining why His disciples did not fast as did John's disciples, because He (the Bridegroom) was still with them, and when He left them there was time to fast, a "certain ruler" came, saying that his daughter "is even now dead; but come and lay Thy hand upon her, and she shall live."

On His way to the girl's bedside, a woman who had long been ill touched the hem of His garment, knowing that if she could but do that she would be cured. Christ's compassionate words to her were, "Daughter, be of good comfort; thy faith hath made thee whole." The woman went away cured.

As the Lord came to the ruler's house, hired mourners were making a noise. "He said unto them,

"But when He saw the multitudes, He was moved with compassion for them, because they were distressed and scattered, as sheep not having a shepherd."—Matthew 9:36.

the scene of most of the miracles of healing assigned to our lesson today.

As He landed from a ship and came to the city, a man who was helpless from palsy was brought to Him by friends. Jesus said to him, "Son, be of good cheer; thy sins are forgiven you." Scribes said, "This man blasphemeth."

Jesus read their thoughts and said to them, "Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts. For whether is easier to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise and walk?"

"But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins (then said He to the sick of palsy), Arise, take up thy bed and go into thine house." And the man did as Jesus said.

Other accounts of this healing tell how the man was let down through the roof of the house by ropes that he might come into Jesus' presence. The multitudes who saw this miracle marveled and glorified God.

Then Jesus passed the "receipt of customs" and saw Matthew, a publican or hated tax-gatherer, an outcast from his people for his dishonest dealings. Jesus said, "Follow Me," and Matthew left his disgraceful job and followed the Lord.

So rejoiced was he at this deliverance from his task that he made a great celebration to which Give place; for the maid is not dead, but sleepeth." They laughed at Him, but when these people were sent away, Jesus went to the girl, and took her by the hand, and "the maid arose."

When Jesus left the house He was followed by two blind men, who cried, "Thou son of David, have mercy on us."

Jesus said, "Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said, Yea, Lord." Jesus touched their eyes, and they were opened.

A dumb man was brought to Him next, and when the devil that possessed him was cast out, the dumb spoke, and again all men marveled. The Pharisees said, however, "He casteth out devils through the prince of devils."

So our tender and gracious Lord went about in the cities and villages preaching and healing every sickness. And, "when He saw the multitudes He was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd."

Then saith He unto His disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that He will send forth laborers into His harvest."

He doubtless knows that we too are "as sheep having no shepherd," and need to feel His compassionate touch and healing spirit.

SATURDAY'S GAMES

The chilly, wintry weather has put a snap into everything so with the aid of Solomon, our Sultan of Selections, we will snap right into this week's predictions.

Duke vs. Georgia Tech
The big one, the game for both teams in this game.

A victory for Georgia Tech will almost certainly put them in line for one of New Year's big bowl games.

Duke is ineligible for a bowl game because of conference ruling, but the endowed college from West Durham has been struggling for six years to get back the national ranking they enjoyed in pre-war days and their goal is clearly in sight.

Both teams have plenty of incentive and both are loaded with talent. Look for plenty of offensive fireworks from leaders Worth Lutz of Duke and Leon Hardeman of Georgia Tech.

A close one to Duke, 20-14.

Carolina vs. Tennessee

The Tar Heels take on another tough team on their overloaded schedule.

If it's experience a team needs, the Tar Heels should be veterans after playing only three games this season. They pick on the nation's top ranking squads to inaugurate their experimental split-T formation against.

Even so the Carolina line can still hold their heads up high. The defensive team of the Tar Heels has stood up well this season under a terrific hammering by Texas, Wake Forest and Notre Dame.

Tennessee has the same team (minus Laurence) they had last year. They battled Duke down to the wire before losing 7-0. The Vols completely demolished a power laden Alabama team 20-0.

And they apparently grow stronger each game.

Reports have it that Marshall Newman, Carolina quarterback, has continued to improve in the passing department. Paying close heed to any news that resembles what we like to hear, we will assume that Carolina will score twice. Tennessee 26-14.

Wake Forest vs. N. C. State

Sonny George and Jack Lewis, Wake Forest's sometimes brilliant passing combination, will likely have a field day against the inept Wolfpack.

State has been having an exceedingly hard time of preventing anything in the way of an offense this season, but Quarterback Carl Wyles gave notice last week that he may be the one to offset the lopsided defeats in the future, with some fancy passing.

Alex Webster, while being a marked man all year and shanked most of the time, is still capable of upsetting a team should he get some adequate help.

Nevertheless, it still looks like Wake Forest 37-7.

Davidson vs. Harvard

Neither team has any outstanding features, but both are good sound ball clubs. Coach Bill Dole is in his first year at Davidson and has already given them a scoring punch with some fancy aerial antics that have paid off with some measure of success.

Harvard isn't the power in the Ivy League it once was but the Wildcats will have to pull an upset to beat them. Harvard 19-7.

East Carolina vs. Appalachian

The Mountaineers are suffering their longest losing streak in North State history but they will get no sympathy from the Pirates who have progressed from a mediocre team at the first of the season to a devastatingly offensive minded eleven that is now rated on a level with any in the North State Conference.

Veterans Sandy Siler, Doc Thomas, Bobby Hodges, Topsy Hayes and Dwight Shoe, plus freshmen Dick Cherry, Harold O'Kelley and Frank Turner, are some of the reasons for the Pirates' recent success.

The Pirates should take this one 20-6.

Presbyterian vs. Catawba

This one will no doubt be close, but the vote goes to Harold Carter and the Indians, 14-7.

Lenoir-Rhyne vs. Newberry

The Bears' growl is getting louder every game. After a slow start Lenoir-Rhyne has been pouring it on recent victims.

The Robinson twins and Steve Trudnak should run up a 27-0 win.

Elon vs. Western Carolina

Everybody's beating Western Carolina these days and Elon has the power to do it even if everybody wasn't. Elon 21-0.

Washington (UP)—A 21-year-old University of Maryland student accused of attempting to bribe football players may fight extradition to Maryland, where he faces a fine and jail term if convicted.

Louis Leonard Glickfield, charged with offering three Maryland football players $1,500 to hold down the score in last Saturday's game against Louisiana State University, won a three-week delay Thursday in court proceedings aimed at returning him to Maryland for prosecution.

The youth, a junior at Maryland, was ordered to appear in court here Nov. 20 to face extradition proceedings brought by Prince Georges County, Md., authorities.

The state of Maryland has a law providing for fines up to $5,000 and jail sentences up to three years for persons convicted of attempting to bribe athletes.

Glickfield's attorney, Charles E. Ford, said the youth was "completely innocent" and termed the charges against him "much ado about nothing."

Glickfield surrendered Wednesday night to Washington police. Since the University of Maryland is located in College Park, Md., just a few miles from the nation's capital, Maryland authorities must serve extradition papers to bring him back for prosecution.

Phantoms Set Defense For Rocky Mt. Air-Ground Test

Phants Point For An Upset Victory Over Blackbirds

The Phantoms wound up final preparations for the Rocky Mount game yesterday afternoon by setting up defenses for the Blackbird air and ground attack.

Assistant Coach Frank Maenkle, who has done a remarkable job scouting Phantom opponents and spotting flaws in their attack, warned the Phants that Rocky Mount had a team that could roll either on the ground or through the air-planes.

In an effort to offset the Blackbird offense, Coach Bill Kittrell will use fast backs Bobby Perry, Doug Morgan, Guy Smith and James Speight in the halfback positions and at safety.

Linebackers Jimmy Cheatham and Billy Arnold will be on the alert for short passes and be ready to plug any hole appearing in the line.

The Phantoms aren't given much chance for a victory over the Triple A Rocky Mount team but a return to the form shown in the Kingston game could clip the wings of the high flying Blackbirds.

Since the loss of Pat Sawyer the Phants have missed the potent one-two, air-ground attack that served to mix up the opponents' defense so much.

George Sideris has been doing a lot of passing this week and should his passes begin to hit the mark, plus the hipper dipper running of Bobby Perry, James Speight and Guy Smith, the Phants could possibly pull their biggest upset of the season.

The game starts at 8 o'clock tonight in College Stadium.

Ayden High Holds Homecoming Day With Gala Parade

Friday afternoon festivities will begin in Ayden marking "Homecoming Day" for the Ayden High football team. Coastal Conference champions for four consecutive years.

The Homecoming events will begin with a gigantic parade starting Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Decorated floats, cars, pets, bicycles, plus any and all types of mobile objects will be included in the parade.

To top off the gala celebration, the Tornados will play host to the Plymouth Quakers in what is expected to be a nip and tuck affair. Last year these two teams fought to a 6-6 tie on Plymouth's homecoming day.

Game time is 8 p.m. and the Homecoming Queen will be crowned at halftime. As a finale to the occasion, a party and dance will be conducted at the Community Building in Ayden. No admission will be charged.

Duke-Georgia Tech Clash In Battle For Grid Glory

Defensive Backs Take Spotlight On The Gridiron

NEW YORK (UP)—When the defensive backs take the statistical spotlight away from the ball carriers that's news but that's what happened at Southern California, where Jesse Hill's unbeaten Trojans have the nation's leading major college punter, top punt returner and two high-ranking pass interceptors, figures released by the NCAA Service Bureau showed today.

Des Koch, who averaged 48.7 yards on six punts, and Jimmy Sears, who ran back a punt 69 yards for the only touchdown in the game, were key factors in last Saturday's 10-0 victory over California, undefeated until then and not held scoreless in 60 previous games.

As a result, Koch took over the punting leadership with a 44.8 average for 23 kicks, passing Colorado's Zack Jordan, the 1950 champion who now has 44.4 for the same number of kicks. And Sears, already the leader in punt return yardage, lifted his total to 431 far ahead of the second man, Gil Reich, of Kansas, who has 284.

Meanwhile, among the interception leaders, the Trojans have Jim Pasalis and Linden Crow. They have grabbed five apiece of the 16 USC has intercepted, with Pasalis taking two of his across the enemy goal line and Crow one.

Sharing interest with the exploits of the Trojans last week were the five-way battle developing pass receiving and the surge to first place in major-college scoring by Mississippi State's Jack Parker.

Parker scored all of his team's 19 points against Alabama for a season total of 86, consisting of nine touchdowns and 12 extra points. Oklahoma's Buddy Leake, who has six touchdowns and 26 extra points without a miss, fell to second with 61 and Villanova captain Bob Haner is now third with 58. Buford Long, of Florida, and Ron Drezewicki, of Marquette, at 54, and Charlie Hoag, of Kansas, at 50, are the others at or above the half-century level.

Stranahan Moves Ahead In Tourney

MEXICO CITY (UP)—Defending champion Frank Stranahan of Toledo, O., and five collegians from North Texas State College headed the survivors into the second round of the Mexican Amateur Golf Championship today.

Stranahan, who opened the match play Thursday with a 4 and 2 triumph over Mario Rudlo of Mexico City, remained the favorite to wrap up his fourth Mexican crown.

The North Texas State aggregation was headed by medalist Marion Hickey, and also included former U. S. amateur champion Billy Maxwell, Stan Mosel, Buster Reed and Monte Sanders.

Offensive Battle Looms Between Duke's Worth Lutz And Tech's Leon Hardeman

By WILL GRIMSLEY

DURHAM (AP)—The Southland's two prize football teams, Georgia Tech and Duke, come to grips here tomorrow and tension is so thick in this tobacco capital you can slice it with a butcher knife.

This city of 80,000 is seething with excitement. Its hotels are jammed. Duke stadium is a 45,000 sellout. Out-of-town writers and radio men are pouring in so heavily that it's necessary to park them on the roofs of the two press boxes.

The Techmen headed this way today, coming in by plane loads. They are favored by 1½ points, but Duke partisans are thoroughly unconvinced. It's homecoming for Duke and the Blue Devils give promise of being at their mental peak for the encounter. Both clubs are at near top strength physically.

The two Dixie powerhouses carry identical records—six victories without a defeat—into the fray and each will be defending a proud national ranking. Tech is No. 4 in the latest Associated Press poll and Duke is No. 6. Tech's defensive record of having held its foes to an average of 141.8 yards a game is best in the land with Duke fourth at 173.3 yards. Each is in the top ten offensively.

Both head coaches—Tech's Bobby Dodd and Duke's Bill Murray—maintained a cagey silence about the possible outcome, but Duke's chief spy, Herschel (Rosy) Caldwell, brought dire warnings of Tech strength.

"It's one of the fastest teams I ever saw," said Caldwell, who has scouted the Engineers in every game. "This Leon Hardeman is a terrific runner. He's five-six and 175 pounds, with big, churning legs. Very hard to bring down. The whole team has tremendous speed. The line has one of the fastest initial charges I've seen."

Bratton was stopped by Ike Williams and Beau Jack, two ex-lightweight champions. And his jaw was broken three times—by Williams, Beau Jack and Kid Gavilan, Miceli promised: "I'll break it the fourth time tonight. His chin is made to order for my left uppercut."

Each is a good puncher. Bratton belted out 29 of his 74 opponents, and Miceli knocked out 19 of his 51.

The fight contract specifies that neither can weigh more than 148 pounds.

Cities which are occupied by almost half the population of the United States contain only half of 1 per cent of the nation's land.

Duke pins its hopes on a bullet-picking sophomore, Worth Lutz, who grew up in the shadow of the Duke campus. Lutz has passed for 348 yards and eight touchdowns and hasn't had a throw intercepted in 44 attempts. Tech's passing is handled by a sophomore, Bill Brigman, who Dodd rates the equal of Lutz.

Roger Frey, Tech's defensive guard who has been sidelined with the flu, is back in action. Only Georgia Tech casualty is Larry Ruffin, a halfback.

Lutz is field general of Duke's snappy split-T which has cut down Washington and Lee, SMU, Tennessee, South Carolina, North Carolina State and Virginia in order. Tech is a straight-T team which relies largely on ground power. It has beaten The Citadel, Florida, SMU, Tulane, Auburn and Vanderbilt.

Benzie, King To Miss App Contest At Boone

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Sports Writer

BOONE—The East Carolina Pirates rolled into town today 40-strong but they were minus two players who have played important roles in the three straight North State Conference victories they have rolled up.

Both fullback Claude King and halfback Jack Benzie were left in Greenville by the Pirates. King is sidelined by a knee injury which was suffered last Saturday in the game with Guilford.

Benzie is out of action with the same toe injury which kept him from dressing for last week's 41-0 win over Guilford. The 170-pound senior from Portsmouth has not seen any action—game or practice—for almost two weeks and it's beginning to look doubtful that he'll be back in harness before the Pirates conclude their season on November 15.

Other than Benzie and King, the Pirates are in top physical shape—better than they have been all year long. They'll have reserve strength tomorrow that they haven't had before—a situation which might be termed "fortunate" because they're expected to be in for a rough evening at the hands of Jack Groce and company.

Groce is a 168-pound senior speed-ster who has been the big wheel in Appalachian's offense for four years. He was the leader in the App's 24-20 win over the Pirates a year ago.

To take up the slack left in the line-up by the injuries to King and Benzie, Pirate Coach Jack Boone is expected to rely on Tom Cannady and Illard Yarborough. Cannady, a 170-pound speed merchant from Manteo, was the star in last spring's Purple-Gold game but hasn't had a chance to crack into this year's starting line-up because of King's consistently brilliant play.

Yarborough, a 170-pound senior from High Point, has been a starter in the last two games and has scored two touchdowns. He's a good man on off-track plays in addition to being a good pass receiver.

The rest of the Buc line-up is expected to remain the same as it has been for the past two games.

Chapter 30

"What made you decide to pose as her father?"

Phillips flushed. "I'm not sure. As years passed, it seemed inevitable that I must. For convenience, and for appearances, too. Then, the child was growing, asking questions that were embarrassing direct. The decision in a sense, was compelled upon me."

"Perhaps, too, you found her a compelling child. Did that help motivate your decision?"

"I don't understand your remark," Phillips said.

"How old was she when you decided to come forward as her father?"

"Ten, I think."

"She was a beautiful child, who gave promise of growing into a beautiful young woman."

Devereaux hesitated. His mind was racing back over the mood of his first encounter with Jennifer. The girl had said little actually, submitting the mere sketch of a tyrannical overlord in her bid for his, Devereaux's help. What had really won him to her cause had been the great unexpressed revelation in her for Phillips.

"Your motives weren't altruistic or cavalier, Phillips," the detective said intensely. The same hot waves of anger he had once felt for the critic were surging through him now. "You didn't just adopt an orphaned waif, the misbegotten daughter of a man who was keeping faith with you while wasting in jail. You bought the girl as a beautiful object, as something to own and enjoy, like your sybaritic perfumes and exotic foods."

The detective watched the critic flinch. "I don't exactly know what you're about, or what classification of animal you really rate, and I give a hundred dollars for a clinical report on you. But this much is as obvious as your aromatic personality: you're not a man among men, and you're not a man among women, and playing father and counselor to an adolescent girl as you have is as unnatural and the obscene as a dirty drawing on an outhouse wall."

Phillips was on his feet, glaring with the gun held stiffly in front of him.

Devereaux watched the face purple and the colored veins sprout and lump over the skin. He watched the cheeks and hands tremble as if in the first warning stages of an epileptic convulsion. It showed the detective more than the disorder of a man at bay, more than the natural hyper-tensions of a man whose finely spun existence was unraveling, unraveled in fact. The lunatic moment was a close gauge of Phillips. The man was a psychopath, capable of violence, capable of murder. The cold reserve that was his professional habit was a cardboard facade.

The moment passed, and Phillips sank quivering into his seat, as if totally drained by his Jekyll like transfiguration. The detective observed quietly. "You're easily capable of murder, Phillips. You could have murdered me a minute ago. It cost you more of an effort not to."

Phillips said, "Shut up, dammit. Shut up."

The detective went on grimly. "A crime you'd gotten away with long ago when one of your crowd was nervous and loyal enough to take a solitary rap without squealing suddenly came alive all over again. An incident of your past suddenly dared touch you. People whom you despised suddenly broke into your sky tower, to corner you and touch you. Your one-time confederates, Hughes, Castle, Latimer. The crooked ex-insurance operative, Buloff. The tool, Longo. Me, a detective who popped up from nowhere with an infuriating curiosity about you. A lot of people suddenly crowding you. A lot of people telling you that while they lived, you couldn't ever again live alone in your sky tower." Devereaux nodded to himself, as if accepting his own outline. "A lot of people, Phillips. A lot of people to kill!"

A long while later, Phillips said tonelessly, "I didn't murder anybody."

A deep breath sounded in his chest, and Phillips said, "Buloff,

He killed Longo, Castle, and Latimer."

Devereaux cocked an eyebrow and said nothing. Phillips looked blindly at the gun pointing in his lap. "Buloff tried to kill me, too. I thought it was he when you rang my bell."

"When did Buloff try to kill you?"

"Last night, at three A.M., in the Stador Garage. I'd driven my car into the lower level, to park it for the night. Buloff was there, waiting in ambush. I sensed his presence, probably because I'd been expecting him to make an attempt on me."

"And?" the detective prompted.

"He came out of the shadows, and stood at the door of my car. I remained in the car, crouched to the floor, locked in and trapped. Then I honked my horn and created a mad din. A ghostly smile played on the critic's mouth. 'He fired through the plate glass twice, and fled. The thick plate glass deflected the bullets.'

"Did the horn and shots attract anyone?"

"Just the night attendant. I gave him a hundred dollars to keep mum about the incident and dispose of the shattered plate glass. The smile played faintly again. 'I told him it was a jealous husband, and that I wanted no scandal.'

"I'll check the story," Devereaux said. "And if it's true, a night attendant is going to jail for failure to report an attempted murder to the police."

The critic shrugged. "Check it and be damned."

"Now that you're getting it off your chest," Devereaux said "can I ask some direct questions?"

The critic shook his head slightly, then shrugged. "All right. Ask them."

"What made the elaborate plot for killing Frankie Hughes in Sing Sing so necessary?"

"Hughes had served notice that he was going to confess, implicate Latimer, Castle, and me, when brought back before the court."

"How did Hughes serve notice of his intention?"

"In a letter smuggled out and mailed by a freed convict."

"Mailed to whom?"

Phillips hesitated, and the detective prompted, "To Mrs. Cora Jennings, was it? I know all about Mrs. Jennings."

"Yes to Mrs. Jennings."

"What exactly was Mrs. Jennings' role in this whole affair?"

"A revolting busybody," Phillips said with flashing irritation. "The bering maternal heart come true."

Four Methods To Obtain Peanut Price Supports

How many Pitt County peanut growers obtain price supports for their 1952 crop peanuts?

James Meredith, secretary of the Pitt County Production and Marketing Administration, said this morning there are four methods by which support prices may be received by local peanut growers.

They are: 1. they may obtain a farm storage loan; 2. they may market their peanuts through peanut growers cooperative; 3. they may sign a purchase agreement; and 4. if the cooperative is not operating in the area, he may obtain a warehouse storage loan.

"The final date on which farmers may obtain price supports through any one of the previously mentioned methods is January 31, 1953," the PMA secretary explained. "To be eligible for supports, producers' acreage must not exceed the farm allotment or they must have been issued a within-quota marketing card."

Heated Exchange Among Delegates On Oatis Case

Procedure for marketing peanuts through cooperative is not a complicated one. Meredith stated. Producers will take their peanuts and within-quota marketing card to the co-op warehouse. A Federal-state inspector will grade the peanuts and warehousemen will weigh them and issue producers a draft on the co-op.

For a ton of base grade peanuts the producer would receive a draft in the amount of approximately $208.76 computed as follows: actual gross weight, 2,000 pounds, price support value 1.940 pounds at 11.5 cents per pound, $233.10.

Deductions are: three per cent foreign matter; inspection fee, $1.00 per ton; storage fee, $3.15 per ton; allowance for shrinkage, $10.04.

"The co-op, acting as agent for all producers, will store and handle the peanuts and sell as many as possible through the regular channels of trade," the secretary asserted. "Producers will receive their pro rata share of any net profits made by the co-op from the sale of peanuts."

Two Missing In Mine Explosion

HERRON, Mich. (UP) — Two miners were missing and three others known dead today after exploding natural gas ripped up a 270-foot mine shaft with such force that the blast sent frightened residents streaming from homes at Alpena, 12 miles away.

The miners, searching for uranium in the abandoned gold mine, were taking out their last samples before closing down for the winter when the blast shook the diggings shortly before midnight Thursday.

inevitable that in a gathering like that both business and politics will get some attention. It is also impossible to keep them entirely separate. Business has been, is now, and is expected to continue good for most of those who talked about it. Admittedly the forthcoming election may have some effect upon the economic conditions of the country and the whole world, but for most part the business men seem to be going ahead with plans that will fit into either Democratic or Republican Administration. To support that statement it is offered in evidence that there were more Stevenson than Eisenhower buttons and badges displayed by guests at the Tarboro party. It was a tribute to the hosts of the occasion that neither political partisanship nor economic status made any difference in the cordiality of welcome.

VIRGINIA — One of the questions most frequently asked is what will Virginia do next Tuesday. Senator Harry Byrd, long time recognized leader of the Democratic party in the Old Dominion, has declined to endorse either Eisenhower or Stevenson. Former Governor William Tuck has gone a step farther and indicated support for Eisenhower. Governor James S. Battle has come all out for Stevenson. During the past decade or so Tuck and Battle have been about equally important cogs in the political machine headed by Senator Byrd. Does the difference between them now mean the Byrd organization is disintegrating? That is doubted, because both have professed continued non-state differences on one or the other issue. Former Governor Tuck told your reporter the other day he would hazard only one guess: That there would be not more than 25,000 votes difference between Eisenhower and Stevenson. He declined to predict which way the majority would go. Another Virginian, who has been close to the organization and is now following Governor Battle, but who declined to be quoted by name predicted the Virginia vote will be better than 50,000 in favor of Stevenson.
