Both Claim Victory In Final Drive

Tomorrow's Outcome Viewed Unpredictable; 55 Million Votes Seen

By LYLE C. WILSON United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON (UP) - The angry 1952 presidential campaign ends today and the polls open Tuesday for an expected record vote of about 55,000,000 aroused citizens.

The outcome is unpredictable. Republican candidate Dwight D. Eisenhower consistently has led the straw polling. Democratic candidate Adlai E. Stevenson steadily has been gaining on him.

Top issues were well defined and bitterly disputed in the stretch drive.

Democrats: Prosperity - you never had it so good.

Republicans: Korea - you never had anything so bungled.

The weary electorate and even wearier candidates will go through one final orgy of campaign oratory tonight. Eisenhower speaks at a rally in Boston Gardens which will be broadcast to the nation at 10 p. m. e. s. t. over the combined NBC and ABC radio and television networks.

At 10:30 p. m. e. s. t. Stevenson and his vice presidential partner, Sen. John J. Sparkman, take over the airwaves speaking from Chicago over all major radio and TV nets. The Republicans come back again at 11, featuring Eisenhower and his running mate, Sen. Richard M. Nixon, on an hour-long program that also will be carried on all networks.

Election eve brought the usual victory claims from both camps. Stevenson's campaign manager, Wilson Wyatt, predicted the Democratic candidate will carry at least 32 states with "not less" than 400 electoral votes. Republican National Chairman Arthur E. Summerfield retorted that there'll be a landslide all right—but it will be for Eisenhower.

There was general agreement that:

1. The vote will greatly exceed the record to date, 49,815,000 in the 1940 Roosevelt-Wilkie contest. Prospects for a big turnout were heightened by the Weather Bureau's forecast that Tuesday will be generally fair over most of the nation.

2. The popular vote is likely to be close. Pollsters have been dismayed by the persistently large percentage of undecided voters, or voters who said they were undecided to avoid disclosing their voting intentions.

3. Republicans have their best chance since 1928 to crack the Solid South. The GOP threat was emphasized Sunday night by the surprise announcement of J. Strom Thurmond, former governor of South Carolina and States Rights candidate for president in 1948, that he will vote for Eisenhower.

All hands ended the campaign slugging from their heels in a rough political contest as the United States is likely to experience in many a year.

Big Draft Call

WASHINGTON—The Army today issued a draft call for 48,000 men in January.

It is the highest monthly call since last January, when 59,650 men were inducted through selective service.

The new call brings to 1,302,430 the total number drafted, or earmarked for induction, since Selective Service was resumed in September, 1950.

Saturday's Aldermanic Session Loosed Tempers... Accusations

By JESS POINDEXTER Reflector City Editor

Accusations and denials flew thick and fast around the polished table - and tempers waxed warm - at a special session of the Greenville Board of Aldermen Saturday afternoon.

When the brief but stormy half-hour session was adjourned, the board had voted to accept SBI Agent S. G. Gibbs' letter of application and employ him as the city's new chief of police effective November 16.

Gibbs' application was the only one submitted for the position, which was left open after former Chief Guy C. Langston tendered his resignation recently to enter private employment in the city.

Immediately after the meeting convened, Mayor Lester D. Page read a prepared statement to the board. In his statement the Mayor said:

"I have called this meeting at the request of six members of the board. As I have stated to each member who requested the meeting, I do not feel it necessary or urgent that a meeting be called at this early date.

"In fact, I think it would be better to wait and give this matter

Unrest Persists In Ohio Penitentiary

Unruly Convicts Still Giving Trouble; One Shot To Death, Others Wounded In Attempting Escape

COLUMBUS, O. (UP) - A prisoner was shot to death and two others wounded today as they tried to escape from Ohio state penitentiary here where 1,900 prisoners are rioting.

Warden Ralph W. Alvis said that Carlisle Noel, 30, of Cincinnati, was shot through the head. He died a few minutes later. He was serving a two to 10-year term for house-breaking.

Alvis said that three other prisoners were shot yesterday, but none as wounded seriously. The shootings today brought to five the number shot since the prisoners staged their $1,000,000 Halloween riot.

The warden said that highway patrolmen and national guardsmen were being issued "heavier equipment" as they prepared to move against the prisoners.

The prisoners fired six buildings and caused about $1,000,000 in damage Friday night. All but about 200 were quiet early Saturday morning. The 200 convicts were later brought under control with tear gas. Again Sunday the prisoners became unruly, this time about 1,900 of them being involved.

Alvis said there was little danger of any prisoners escaping. The men creating the disturbance are in cell blocks but cannot be kept in individual cells because the locks were smashed. Alvis said the prisoners continued to storm into the corridors in front of their cells.

The convicts trying to rush into the corridors were being driven back by highway patrolmen who sprayed the area with shotgun pellets to keep the men within the cells.

Alvis said the problem is to keep the men inside the cellblocks until the locks can be repaired or the men can be moved elsewhere.

Flurry Of Peace Moves In Offing

Expected To Be Presented To UN After Election Finished

UNION NATIONS, N. Y. (UP) - A flurry of Korean peace moves marked the opening today of the fourth week of the United Nations General Assembly. They are expected to be presented formally after the U. S. presidential election is completed.

There was a possibility, according to Communist sources, that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky might speak before the main political committee this afternoon and perhaps outline a new policy on Russia's receptivity to middle-road moves.

These were the main compromise efforts in the Korean crisis: 1. An Indonesian plan to "marry" the American and Russian resolutions already before the committee. It probably would go along with the Reds in saying that the return of all war prisoners is normal diplomatic practice but would call for an "exception" in Korea because of the special nature of the U. N. "police action" there.

2. A Mexican resolution providing that prisoners unwilling to go home be re-settled in U. N. member countries willing to accept them.

3. A Peruvian plan, which may be embodied in a formal resolution when Peruvian Delegate Dr. Victor A. Belaunde speaks today, providing for an immediate cease-fire and creation of a new U. N. commission to settle the prisoner impasse.

The American proposal, unveiled last week and co-sponsored by 20 other nations, provides for U. N. endorsement of the principle of non-forcible repatriation of prisoners and for an appeal to the Reds to accept a truce on these terms.

will sit down with either member of the board as a whole-at any time and discuss our problems with an open and fair mind. As I have stated before if my opinions do not agree I shall certainly not hold it against any member of this board.

"I want to make it clear to this board and to the people that I intend to fully cooperate with the chief you have selected, and I do not intend to let the department down.

"I will always be available for consultation on any problem the chief has and will advise him to the best of my ability as to what is best action to take for the interest of the people of Greenville."

Ended Statement

At the completion of his prepared statement, the mayor told the board he thought the decision had been pushed forward when it should have been given more thought, at least until the regular meeting of the board Thursday night.

"You have not told me who you have selected for the position as chief of police, but that information has come to me in a round-about manner," Mayor Page stated. He then accused aldermen

Club's Newstand Dedicated Today

Booth For Blind Program Is Center Of Ceremonial Program

Formal ceremonies were held this morning on the lawn of the Pitt County Courthouse for the opening of the Lions Club Newsstand, operated to further the work of the club's blind program.

City, county, and state officials participated in the brief ceremonies which were tape recorded for broadcast by WCTC. R. H. Lewellyn, Business Enterprise supervisor of the State Commission for the Blind spoke briefly.

He stated that the Greenville Newsstand is one of 83 such projects being operated all over North Carolina. He explained that the booths are operated on a cooperative, non-profit basis and organized under a program sanctioned by the State Commission for the Blind.

The booth was built with funds provided by the commission under the direction of the Greenville Lions Club. The booth is operated by Preston Cherry, blind World War II veteran of Bethel, Cherry and his wife also took part in the ceremonies this morning.

A number of local and state dignitaries were present at the ceremonies including Henry Swayne, first vice-president of the Greenville Lions Club; Larry Averette, Lions Club committee for the blind president; and Frank Brown, president of the Pitt County Association for the Blind.

Also present were Mayor Lester D. Paige, H. A. Wood of the State Commission, W. J. Strickland of Raleigh who is area supervisor of business enterprise for the blind members of the county commission, other county officials, and Miss Jennie Manning, case worker for the blind in Pitt County.

Has No Build-Up Order On ROKs

TAEGU, Korea (UP) - Brig. Gen. Cornelius Ryan, who built the present battle-proven South Korean army, said today he has received no orders to add new divisions along lines which President Truman asserted had been approved in Washington.

In an interview, Ryan said he is ready with a pool of trained South Korean officers and men to create new divisions as soon as he gets the order.

But, he added, "equipment and supplies would have to be forthcoming."

In Tokyo, Gen. Mark Clark, supreme U. N. commander, refused to say whether he had received from Washington or passed on to Gen. James A. Van Fleet in Korea authorization to expand the South Korean army so as to relieve American units on the battle front.

Clark sought to stay out of the political campaign controversy touched off by Dwight D. Eisenhower's charge that the Truman administration has failed to make maximum use of South Korean manpower to reduce the combat burden and casualties borne by American troops in Korea.

Stevenson And Eisenhower Prepare For 'Grand Finale'

Adlai Shares Radio-Television Broadcast With Truman And Barkley Tonight; Warns Eisenhower Views On Korea Could Lead To Another World War

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UP)—Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson, urging renewed negotiation backed by military strength to end the Korean fighting, winds up his presidential campaign today with a nationwide television appeal for voters.

He flies to Chicago sometime this mid-afternoon for a national television-radio broadcast from 9:30 to 10 p. m. c. s. t. tonight, a program he will share with President Truman, Vice President Alben W. Barkley, and Sen. John J. Sparkman, his running mate.

He left with the warning that Dwight D. Eisenhower's campaign statements and views on the Korean conflict could lead to World War III while doing nothing to end the fighting there.

Stevenson will remain in Chicago until Tuesday when he votes at tiny Half Day, Ill., and then returns to the executive mansion here to await the verdict of the American people.

Publicly at least, the Stevenson camp was confident of victory.

Wilson Wyatt, Stevenson's campaign manager, flatly predicted that his man would receive "at least" 400 electoral votes—226 are needed for election—and would carry at least 32 states including New York, California, Illinois and Pennsylvania.

Stevenson, meanwhile, delivered his sharpest attack on Eisenhower's foreign policy statements, claiming that the Republican presidential candidate was "sapping" the courage and resolution of Americans, and advancing proposals which "might well increase the risk of a third world war."

In doing so, the Illinois governor set forth his own position on ending the Korean war.

He said in a 1,700-word statement handed reporters Sunday night that only "a single issue" blocks a negotiated truce in Korea.

The Communist demand that North Koreans and Chinese held in United Nations prison stockades be forcibly repatriated. To yield on this point, Stevenson said, would be "to lose our moral position... to lose everything."

"It seems to me therefore, that while we are building up our strength in Korea we must continue to seek a formula for settling this one remaining issue by negotiation without compromising our national honor and our friends. We must use all our ingenuity and flexibility to explore one avenue of approach after another until we discover the avenue that leads us to a peaceful and honorable settlement," he said.

"The important thing to remember is that a third world war must be avoided. Many wars have been avoided by patience and many started by recklessness," he maintained.

Stevenson's statement came in reply to a letter addressed to both himself and Eisenhower by a group of American war correspondents in Korea. The Democratic candidate charged Eisenhower with "persistent political exploitation of foreign policy," which he said had tended to divide Americans, both at home and with their allies abroad.

He took direct issue with Eisenhower's promise to go to Korea if he is elected president, and with the former general's recommendation that more South Korean soldiers be trained in order that American fighting men can be relieved from front line duty.

Eisenhower's proposal to visit Korea, he said, would mean a "loss of prestige" for the United States in Korea because it promised "no immediate solution" of the Korean problem.

"The Americans are fighting in Korea," he said, "because it is a 'test case' with Russia, a measure of this country's determination 'to meet aggression with force, and a supreme bid to avoid 'more aggression and bigger wars.'"

Slot Machines In U.S. Fall Off After New Law

WASHINGTON (UP) - The number of "one armed bandits" operating in the nation has dropped by two-thirds since Congress passed a ban on the interstate shipment of slot machines three years ago.

Bureau of Internal Revenue figures showed today that federal taxes were paid on 23,069 coin-operated gambling devices during the 1952 fiscal year which ended June 30. This compares with 444,831 in 1951 and 66,278 in 1950, when the ban first became effective.

Government officials attributed the sharp decline principally to the law forbidding shipment of machines or parts across state lines, except in cases where the state, such as Nevada, exempts itself from the ban.

Day Of Decision Also Is Awaiting Tarheel Voters

Governor, State Officers And Court Members On Ballot Tuesday

RALEIGH (UP)—Most attention is focused on tomorrow's presidential and congressional races, but North Carolina voters also will choose a governor and nine other state officers as well as three members of the State Supreme Court.

The election of the entire Democratic slate for state offices is regarded almost certain. Only the candidates for governor have made any attempt at serious campaigning.

Democratic nominee William B. Umstead of Durham, one-time school teacher, lawyer and state legislator, has toured the state with the Democratic caravan, drumming up support in the congressional and presidential races and getting in words for his own cause.

Republican nominee Herbert P. Sewell, Jr. of Carthage, a candidate for attorney-general in 1948, has made speeches in almost every county.

Umstead has told voters that the Democrats represent the party of prosperity and will give farmers the best break. Sewell, who is running for the same office his father once sought, says the Democrats have given North Carolina a "second class" state administration.

Industrialist Luther B. Hodges of Leasville, top man in a four way race in the Democratic primary, is opposed by Republican Warren H. Pritchard of Spruce Pine of Marshall Field, and Co. and has never held an elective office. Pritchard, a member of the 1949 General Assembly, is 32-year-old former Naval Reserve lieutenant and has been active in civic work.

Incumbent Secretary of State Thad Eure is opposed by Frank G. Carr of Brevard, president of the Pisgah Builders Supply Co., Inc. Eure, genial 53-year-old native of Gates County, served many years as principal clerk in the house of representatives. Carr, a graduate of Staunton Military Academy is a member of the board of trustees of the Transylvania Music Foundation.

State Auditor Henry Bridges, a native of Franklin County, is opposed by Republican J. A. Maulsby of Whiteville. Bridges, a graduate of Wake Forest college and law school, is a Baptist deacon. Maulsby, for 21 years a bank cashier, is president of the Whiteville Broadcasting Co. and was a delegate to the Republican national convention last summer.

State Treasurer Brandon P. Hodges, former Asheville police court judge and state senator, is opposed by Republican S. O. Eggers, a Boone real estate broker.

Attorney Gen. Harry McMullan, a native of Hertford and former practicing attorney in Washington, N. C., is opposed by Republican Avalon E. Hall of Mocksville, once a reporter for the Winston-Salem Journal and former district solicitor.

Labor Commissioner Forest Shuford, who was once boys' commissioner of High Point and President Truman's appointee to the international labor organization conference in Geneva as advisor to governmental delegates, is opposed by W. E. Rutledge, publisher of the Yadkin Ripple, and former Yadkinville postmaster and sheriff.

Acting Supt. of Public Instruction Charles F. Carroll of High Point was appointed by Gov. Kerr Scott following the death of Dr. Clyde Erwin last summer. Carroll is opposed for a full term by Jeter L. Hayes of Summerfield, former Yadkin County state legislator.

Agriculture Commissioner L. Y. Ballentine is opposed by Joel A. Johnson of Four Oaks, Insurance Commissioner Waldo Cheek is opposed by Republican John T. Day of Walkertown.

Cut To Bits

SEOUL, Korea (AP) - Deadly Chinese mortar fire cut to bits and stopped cold a series of heroic South Korean attacks today on bloody Triangle Hill.

At least four times the ROKs stormed the crest. Dug-in Chinese stood them off with pin-pointed mortar fire and showers of hand grenades.

Big U. N. guns literally blew the top off Triangle and saturated Red positions in a valley to the north. The barrage disrupted the Chinese artillery batteries, but it couldn't suppress the lighter, more accurate mortars, nor route Red troops from their holes and tunnels.

Savage fighting on the Central Front hill mass continued until dusk with the Reds holding grimly to the prized peak.

Then the ROKs pulled back and regrouped for the night.

For the second consecutive day Allied big guns poured out perhaps the most intense barrage-of the war.

Another Highway Death For Pitt

Tenth Victim Of Year Killed Sunday; Car Rolled On Him

By MURIEL SHOTWELL Reflector Staff Writer

Wrecks over the weekend raised Pitt's traffic fatalities for the year to 10 and resulted in high property damage to a number of cars.

John Robert Holland, 61 year old Negro of 504 Dickinson Avenue, Greenville, was killed when a car in which he was a passenger landed on top of him after he had been thrown from the car which was driven by William Tucker, 38-year-old Negro of 1614 Pitt Street, Greenville.

Tucker told investigating officer Highway Patrolman James Boykin, that he and Holland were traveling toward Greenville on the Packe Highway when he lost control of the car.

The car ran through a cornfield for 210 feet and turned over, throwing Holland from the car. The car then partially turned over again, landing on the victim. He died of a fractured skull and broken neck.

The accident occurred around 2:30 Sunday morning nine miles from Greenville. About $400 in damage to the car resulted. Patrolman Boykin charged Tucker, who was uninjured, with driving drunk.

Holland's death raised Pitt's traffic fatalities for the year to 10. An accident at the intersection of Highway 118 and St. John's road, four miles east of Griffin resulted in the injury of one person and property damage to two cars placed at $500.

Mrs. Walter Caroon of Kinston received cuts on her arms when the car in which she was riding, driven by Walter Caroon, struck a car driven by Lyman Haddock.

Patrolman William Whitehurst said Haddock was coming from St. John's and had stopped at the intersection but drove out onto the highway before he saw Caroon's car traveling east on 118.

Caroon's car struck the right side of Haddock's car, causing about $300 damage to the Caroon car and $200 damage to the Haddock car. Haddock was charged with failing to yield the right of way. The accident occurred about 3:30 Sunday afternoon.

A car driven by Sebia Lee Cox, Jr., of 2701 Dickinson Ave., 38 years old, crashed into a bridge on the River Road about two miles from Greenville late Saturday afternoon.

Cox was uninjured but property damage to the car was set at about $400. The driver told Patrolman Boykin that he hit a sand bed and lost control of the car. No charges were placed against the driver.

Earl McDonald Latham, Jr., 22 year-old white youth, collided with a mule early this morning on US 264, eight miles east of Greenville. Latham told Highway Patrol-

Ike And Nixon Put 'All The Issues' Into Final Radio-Television Appeal; Advisor Accuses Democrats Of Chicanery In Last-Minute Bid To Win

BOSTON (UP) - Dwight D. Eisenhower came here today to put all the issues of the 1952 presidential campaign in a $250,000 basket on an election-eve appeal over radio and television to the nation's voters.

Eisenhower and his staff of advisers were confident they would give the Democrats a "good whipping" as the GOP candidate's special train left New York on the final trip of the long campaign.

The climax of what Eisenhower has called the "toughest" fight in his life will occur when he and his running mate, Sen. Richard M. Nixon of California, appear at Boston Garden.

As soon as Eisenhower finishes his Garden address over combined radio and television networks of the National Broadcasting Company and American Broadcasting Company, he and Nixon will rush to a Boston radio station (WBZ-TV).

There they will take part in an hour-long program that will be carried by four major radio and television networks to more than 1,000 radio stations and more than 100 TV stations.

Staff members estimated the Eisenhower-Nixon blitz at approximately $250,000.

Nixon will make his first appearance with Eisenhower since the former general absolved him of guilt in using an $18,000 fund made available by a group of businessmen.

As the campaign went into its final day, Eisenhower's chief adviser, Gov. Sherman Adams of New Hampshire, accused the Democrats of political chicanery in a last-minute bid to win the election.

Adams said the Democrats were "up the same old tricks—attempts to rig farm prices for political advantage."

"They won't get away with it," Adams said. "This time the American people will give them a good whipping on election day."

The Republicans had charged, following the defeat of New York Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in the 1948 presidential campaign, that the Democrats had rigged farm prices during the last week before the election.

Eisenhower chose Boston for the finale of his campaign for two reasons: he wanted to do as much as possible to help elect Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, and he regarded Massachusetts as a key state.

Lodge, one of Eisenhower's first supporters, is opposed by Rep. John F. Kennedy, son of the former ambassador to Britain.

Adams' charge that the Democrats were "rigging" farm prices was made in reference to a letter which Eisenhower received from Sen. George Aiken, a Vermont Republican.

The letter said: "The administration has broken the price of corn by dumping an excessive amount of corn owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation on the market in recent months, and at the same time has been holding back on the food purchasing program for the ECA (Economic Cooperation Administration)."

"It is part of their smear and fear campaign," Adams said. "This time, however, they won't get away with it."

Eisenhower's staff also distributed an "Open Letter to American Farmers" by Edward A. O'Neal, former president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, in an attack on Democratic farm policy.

O'Neal's letter referred to "the desperate need for a change in administration" and "the great qualifications of Eisenhower, the leader and the man."

Truman Draws More Criticism For Declassifying 'Top Secret'

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (UP) - President Truman drew GOP criticism today for declassifying a 1947 "top secret" memorandum in which the Joint Chiefs of Staff recommended withdrawal of U. S. troops from Korea.

Mr. Truman added new fuel to the controversy over the memorandum as he settled down here to rest from an 18,000 mile "give 'em hell" campaign tour through 27 states. He plans to vote here Tuesday before returning to Washington to begin his last weeks in the White House.

The President announced Sunday he was declassifying the 1947 document "in order that the public may have access to the facts" about the preliminary decision to withdraw U. S. forces from Korea. He said "many untrue accusations" had been made in the campaign over responsibility for the decision.

The document, a memo from the secretary of defense to the secretary of state, was in support of Mr. Truman's charge that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower "misrepresented" the facts in blaming the State Department for the decision to pull U. S. troops out of Korea.

Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon, a Republican who deserted his party to support Gov. Adlai Stevenson, disclosed the contents of the memorandum at a political meeting last Monday at Minneapolis Minn. At that time he said the document was "top secret" but that his use of it was "authorized."

Mr. Truman's declassification of the memorandum drew a charge from Sen. William Knowland (R-Calif.) that the President was "trying to protect" Truman from being guilty of a breach of security. Knowland said that before Mr. Truman lifted the secrecy from the memorandum he (Knowland) had wired the Justice Department demanding an investigation of Morse's use of it.

"This shows the administration is picking out a few selected documents which they feel support their fatal policy in the Far East, while at the same time they are suppressing documents that would give the American people the entire truth," Knowland said.

Dr. McGinnis Named Coordinator Of Fund

Greenville has accepted an appointment by Dr. John D. Messick of East Carolina College to act as coordinator of work being done in the interest of the Pitt County Scholarship Foundation. The goal of the campaign for funds now in progress is to raise in Pitt County a sum of $100,000 to establish a substantial number of educational scholarships at East Carolina.

Ercell Webb and Bager Johnson, Greenville business men, are serving as co-chairmen of the city campaign. Nineteen teams have been organized in Greenville for solicitation of funds, and other groups are at work elsewhere in the county.

Dr. McGinnis, who retired in 1950 after more than twenty years of service at East Carolina, is coordinating the work of various units throughout Pitt. He knows the needs of the college through experience, for he was East Carolina's registrar from 1927 to 1944, served as acting president of the college for two years, and became the first director of the Bureau of Field Services when it was established in 1946.

For many years he has been active in civic and religious work in Greenville. Recently he worked as a District Governor of the Rotary Club.

"The Scholarship Foundation," Dr. McGinnis said recently, "will be a sound investment for Pitt County."

In discussing the use of the scholarship fund, he pointed out that it will be handled by Business Manager F. D. Duncan, the bonded financial officer of the college. Capital funds will be invested, Dr. McGinnis explained, and only the income will be used for student scholarships. $32,000 has already been subscribed.

Intellectual capacity, talent, financial need, character and personality will be the bases on which scholarships will be awarded, said Dr. McGinnis, and preference will be given to applicants living in Eastern North Carolina. A committee appointed by the Foundation Commission will decide annually to whom the scholarships will be given and the amount to be received by each student, he added.

Among reasons why East Carolina needs a scholarship fund, Dr. McGinnis pointed out that:

1. Many capable high school graduates in Eastern North Carolina cannot enroll at East Carolina because they lack funds.
2. The college has no source of scholarship funds to benefit worthy and needy students other than gifts of generous and civic-minded citizens.
3. The scarcity of elementary school teachers in North Carolina indicates the desirability of training more students to fill positions in the lower grades.
4. Spending for education means an increase of wealth and reduction of welfare rolls and of crime.
5. College students spend an estimated $500,000 with business firms in Greenville each year.
6. 205 self-help jobs, available at the college and held by many students with high scholastic records in East Carolina, are not sufficient to provide assistance for all the worthy and needy young men and women who wish to enter East Carolina.
7. Continued progress by East Carolina College means much educationally, economically, and spiritually to Pitt County.
8. Of the enrollment of 2076 students on the campus this fall, 302 are from Pitt County, a fact which indicates the tremendous benefits the county derives from having the college in its midst.

Buddy Poppy Day Date Announced

Plans are being formulated for the 31st annual nationwide sale of Buddy Poppies by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the date of November 8th has been fixed for the distribution of these familiar flowers in Pitt County, according to Commander George Johnson of Post 7032.

As in previous years, these symbols of the fields of Flanders will be sold by the members of the Ladies Auxiliary to Post 7032. The goal for the 1952 Buddy Poppy sale has been fixed at 5000 Buddy Poppies.

"Most of the money that we collect in this sale will remain right here in our own community, to help finance the relief and welfare work which we have undertaken in behalf of our own veterans in need, and their dependents," explains Commander Johnson.

"The balance of the proceeds of the annual Buddy Poppy sale is used to help maintain the nationwide rehabilitation service of our organization," Commander Johnson added. "For example, we contribute one penny for each Buddy Poppy sold to the operation of the V.F.W. National Home for widows and orphans at Eaton Rapids, Michigan. This is the only home of its kind in the world. It was founded in 1925. Since then hundreds of orphans have been given the opportunity to become healthy, self-supporting citizens."

The poppies will be offered for sale on the downtown streets of Greenville all day Saturday.

Thomas P. Langley Funeral On Tuesday

Mr. Thomas P. Langley, 70, died suddenly at 8 o'clock Saturday afternoon after suffering a heart attack just a few minutes earlier.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Pactolus Baptist Church Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock by the pastor, Rev. C. D. Loflin and burial will be in the Langley Family Cemetery.

Mr. Langley was a lifelong resident of the Pactolus community and was a farmer. He was a member of the Pactolus Baptist Church. He was first married to Nettie Evans, and from this marriage three children survive: Arthur B. Langley of the Merchant Marines and now at sea; Hobson B. Langley of Washington, and Mrs. Robert Saxon of Beaumont, Texas.

He was later married to Allie Pittman, and she survives, and also the children, James L. and Thomas L. Langley of near Greenville; Cecil Langley of Washington, Douglas Billy Langley of the home; Mrs. George McLaughlin of Delair, N. C.; Mrs. Thedis Balafus and Mrs. William Ford of Greenville. Mrs. William Rogers of Pactolus; also surviving are 17 grandchildren; 2 great-grandchildren; and two sisters, Mrs. Mary P. Tigham of Norfolk, Va., and Mrs. Penny Griffin of Snow Hill.

Suspect Spies On Fishing Boats

TOKYO (AP)—Police suspect that Japanese Communists are using fishing boats and meeting Russian warships off Northern Japan to smuggle information and agents in and out of Japan.

They have seized some boats and a few arrests, but they report the traffic is hard to stop. The boats ply among the waters of small Russian-held islands off Hokkaido.

"INVITED" ARREST

Mr. and Mrs. Bishop Pate of Black Creek announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth Jeannette Pate of East Carolina College, to Mr. Frankford Milan Johnson of East Carolina College, son of Mrs. Rosa J. Harrell and the late Mr. D. M. Johnson of Eura. The wedding will take place March 1st.

Funeral Rites Today For Walter C. Hudson

Mr. Walter C. Hudson, 68, died at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon at his home in North Greenville after being ill for about six weeks.

Funeral services were conducted this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock by the Rev. C. D. Patterson, Presbyterian minister of Greenville, at the chapel of the Wilkerson Funeral Home. Burial will follow in Greenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Hudson was a native of the Ormondville community and spent most of his life there. He was a farmer, and was a member of Saints Delight Free Will Baptist Church at Ormondville. In 1897 he was married to Rosa Carter, and she survives him. Also surviving are two sons, Edward S. Hudson, of Ayden and James R. Hudson of Greenville; a daughter, Mrs. Lindsay Godley of near Greenville; 8 grandchildren; and a sister, Mrs. Nannie Williams of near Greenville.

Dad Suffers Too, On Daughter's First Date

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP) Do you know the pain a father suffers when his daughter goes on her first date?

Listen to what happened at the Nichols household on that fateful evening: It's 6 p.m.

Before Victor arrived:
Nick: What is his last name, dear?

Daughter Beverly: I don't know, daddy.

Nick: Where are you going?
Beverly: To the movies, just down the street.

Nick: What is the movie?
Beverly: It's a double feature, "Frankenstein"—that's the first one. The second is "Dracula."

Nick: (Under his breath) What a way to start a romance.
Veronica, the wife: What was that, daddy?

Beverly (not hearing): Never mind, you don't know Victor.

Veronica: When will you be home, dear?
Beverly: Well, it's six now. It's not far to the show. We should be back by nine.

Victor arrives.
Nick and Veronica: (in unison) Have a good time, kids.

Later.
Veronica: Golly, it's almost nine now. What could have happened to those kids?

Nick: (Drawing on his coat and fishing around for the car keys) Maybe I ought to run 'down and pick 'em up.

Veronica: Now don't get nervous. Nick: Who's nervous? Settle down, mama.

Veronica: Well, it's 9:10 and the goblins are out. It's Halloween, you know.

Nick: Did you get Victor's mother's phone number?

Veronica: That should have been your job. Beverly told you she didn't know his last name.

Nick: Look under "V" for Victor.

Veronica: That's his front name.

Nick: Well, then I better be going. With the ghosts running wild, the kids will be scared.

Veronica: All right, okay. Get going.

Nick leaves. He drives a block. He parks in front of the theatre. He goes inside and asks for two "lost" kids. He bites off 10 fingers nail. He roams the neighborhood. He calls Veronica for a progress report, if any. He starts home.

He comes puffing up the steps into the house. Who answers the door?

Beverly: Hello, daddy.

Nick: Where in thunder have you been?

Beverly: We had a wonderful time, daddy. Victor was so polite. We went Dutch, but I bought the popcorn. We loved "Dracula." But "Frankenstein" was a little on the awful side.

Formal Church Rites Unite Couple

Miss Van Nortwick Weds D. J. Whichard Saturday Evening

Miss Kathryn Ward Van Nortwick and David Jordan Whichard were united in matrimony in formal rites at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church on Saturday, November 1, at six thirty in the evening.

The Rev. Leon Russell pastor of the church, and the Rev. John Herbert Waldrop Jr., pastor of the Methodist church in Newport officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Oliver Van Nortwick Sr., and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Julian Whichard.

Before the ceremony Mrs. Paul A. Toll, organist, presented a program of sacred nuptial music. Miss Janice Roberson of Bethel, cousin of the bride, sang "Jesus Savior, Be My Guide" from a Bach cantata just before the entrance of the wedding party, and as a ceremonial benediction, she sang "The Lord's Prayer" by Malotte. The traditional wedding marches by Wagner and Mendelssohn were used for the processional and the recessional.

The church was decorated with banks of fern and tiered candelabra holding white cathedral candles which formed a background in the pulpit rostrum. Just behind the altar rail was a floor basket of white calla lilies, flanked by fern, candelabra and baskets of fern. On either side of the satin prayer bench were single wrought iron candle stands entwined with fern and large white chrysanthemums tied with satin ribbon and tulle. Ferns for the families were marked with small bouquets of single white chrysanthemums with nylon tulle fringes and satin bows.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of heavy ivory slipper satin fashioned with a Basque bodice and full gathered skirt which ended in a long cathedral train. The off shoulder neckline was designed with a yoke of Brussels lace embroidered with seed pearls and the long sleeves were of matching lace which ended in points over her hands. The skirt had medallions of seed pearls across the front, and she carried a bouquet of white cymbidium orchids and lilies of the valley. Her full length veil of ivory illusion was attached to a cloche cap of satin and Brussels lace embroidered with seed pearls and caught up at the sides with orange blossoms.

Mrs. Nathaniel Van Nortwick Jr. and Mrs. W. Alva Van Nortwick of Jacksonville, Florida, sisters-in-law of the bride, attended her as matrons of honor. They were gowned in dresses of pink cinnamon taffeta made with fitted bodices and trimmed in Venice lace. Their full taffeta skirts were waist length and they carried colonial bouquets of rust-colored chrysanthemums centered with green cymbidium orchids with moss green nylon net and ribbon.

Bridesmaids were Miss Mary Rose Crisp, Miss Lillian Wooten and Miss Mary Andrews Whichard of Greenville and Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Pop Moseley of Sylacauga, Alabama. Their dresses were identical to those of the matrons of honor, and they carried colonial bouquets tied with walnut brown ribbon.

Lt. John Suther, Whichard of Camp Gordon, Georgia, was his brother's best man. Groomsman were James C. Lanier Jr., William P. Moore Jr., Francis A. Jordan Jr., Dr. Samuel T. White II, Nathaniel O. Van Nortwick Jr., all of Greenville, and Dr. W. Alva Van Nortwick of Jacksonville, Florida, the latter two being brothers of the bride.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Van Nortwick chose a dinner dress of teal blue, fashioned with a draped skirt and a shadowed neckline of mauve chiffon and iridescent beads. Her corsage was of pink cymbidium orchids. Mrs. Whichard wore for her son's wedding a floor length gown of shell pink chiffon with an attached stole and a bodice trimmed with sequins. Her corsage was a pink cymbidium orchid also.

Reception Immediately following the ceremony the parents of the bride entertained at a reception in their honor at their home on Rock Spring Drive.

Floral designs of autumn foliage and pastel chrysanthemums were used as decorations for mantels and tables in the rooms where the guests were received. Lighted white tapers furnished illumination.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Ormond welcomed the callers at the door and Dr. and Mrs. S. M. Crisp introduced them to the receiving line, which was formed just inside the door to the drawing room. Parents of the bride and groom, the bride couple and attendants in their wedding were in the receiving line.

Col. and Mrs. Owen Marshburn directed the guests from the drawing room through the solarium to the den, where Mr. and Mrs. George Staples and Mrs. A. C. Sampietro registered the guests in the bride's book. In this room was the punch table, over which Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Lanier and Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Moore presided.

Directing guests from the punch room to the dining room were the Rev. and Mrs. H. G. Haney, and standing at the door to the dining room were Mr. and Mrs. Norman Wilkerson.

The dining room was decorated in a color note of bridal pink and green. The main table was covered with an organdy cloth with insertions of Venice lace over Nile green satin. The centerpiece was an imposing arrangement of blush pink roses, white pom poms and pale pink Marguerite chrysanthemums. Single tall pink tapers tied with bows of nylon tulle and sweetheart roses were placed on either side of the centerpiece.

The bride's table was centered with a three tiered cake with blush pink decorations. A net cloth over green satin, which was caught up at either corner with bows of satin ribbon and orange blossoms, covered the table.

Young Women Linguists Are United Nation Guides

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY

United Press Staff Correspondent NEW YORK (UP)—Ask questions in eight languages about the gleaming new United Nations headquarters, and the answers come readily from 15 glib young women dressed in new blue uniforms.

"They're the first of an international corps of guides hired to explain the city's newest spot for sightseers.

When the General Assembly building first opened to the public two weeks ago, curious crowds overwhelmed the reception service conducted by U.N. volunteer workers. The American Association for the United Nations, a non-profit organization, hastily stepped up its plan to hire girl guides.

"We're not as international a group as we'd like, because we can only hire girls eligible to work under our immigration laws, but our girls speak eight languages," said Carl Cannon, tour director, who set up the guide program for Rockefeller center 20 years ago.

"I never thought I'd be doing this again," said Cannon, nervously eyeing a mob of sightseers waiting their turn in the tour lounge of the General Assembly Building. "But the same thing happened here that happened at Radio City 20 years ago. Out of increasing pressure guided tours developed."

Three guides waiting to start their tours smiled calmly at the confusion Inez Zucker, 23, a lively brunette, lived in Paris several years with her father, painter Jacques Zucker. She answers questions in either French or Spanish.

Mrs. Nina Miness, 29, French-born wife of an American lawyer, took the guide job because her two children were in school and she was fascinated by the United Nations.

The third girl, Lila Davis, 26, blushed and admitted she spoke only English. Her last job was teaching a country school near Craig, Colo.

Other guides include girls who can speak Italian, German, Russian, Estonian, Portuguese and Greek. Their starting salary is $55 a week, plus two jaunty uniforms.

"We picked girls of college level or equivalent, who keep up on current events, and who are young enough to stand up under five one-hour tours a day," Cannon explained. "We don't want this to be a regular megaphone tour with a memorized spiel."

In Greece the ending of surnames indicates the region from which the family came: an "is" ending for a clan from Crete, "edes" a clan from Thrace and "as" a clan from Macedonia, says the National Geographic Society.

Mrs. Whichard is a graduate of Ward Belmont Junior College in Nashville, Tennessee, and of Duke University in Durham, where she was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta social sorority and Phi Beta Kappa. She has done graduate work at East Carolina College and at Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois. She made her debut at 1947 Terpsichorean Ball in Raleigh.

Mr. Whichard was graduated from the University of North Carolina where he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Gamma Delta social fraternity. He served in the navy during World War II. Since graduating from the University in 1948 he has been vice-president and managing editor of The Daily Reflector.

Wedding Breakfast On Saturday at high noon, Mrs. W. I. Wooten, Miss Lillian Wooten, Col and Mrs. Owen Marshburn, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Ormond and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Waldrop entertained for the wedding party, their families and out of town guests at a breakfast. The breakfast was held at the home of the Wootens on Maple Street. A course meal was served to approximately 75 guests.

Out of Town Guests Among those from out of town who were here for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ward and children, Mrs. W. J. Taylor, Mrs. A. J. Crain, Mrs. Wayne Rogerson, Mrs. L. L. Strength for the Day

IT TAKES COURAGE
It takes a lot of courage to shut the door on what we want very much but cannot have. To be specific, here is a man who wants promotion but does not get it. Here is a candidate who lost the election. Here is a man who inherited money and lost it. Romantic love is replete with disappointments, and there are millions of people in every country who either did not marry at all or did not marry the person with whom they were in love.

Situations of this kind are hard to endure. There are some things on which we have to shut the door and forget about them. Many situations in life can be changed by our efforts, and we are culpable if we do not try to change wrong or imperfect conditions when we encounter them. But there are some situations that cannot be changed. The dead cannot be brought back from the grave. Unrequited love must be endured.

Things of this sort must be met with wholesomeness of mind, courage, and a continual reliance upon the sustaining grace of God. It takes more courage to shut the door on some great desire than to fix a bayonet and plunge recklessly into battle. But those who can shut the door on situations which cannot be changed have peace.

Vote Early! It Is To Your Advantage

Once every four years the voting citizen has his day. Tomorrow, he names the man who will be his President for four years. Other candidates and issues are also at stake, but the presidential race overshadows them all.

We hope you go to the polls early. It would probably be to your advantage if you do so. There isn't much likelihood that the voting in Pitt will be so heavy the pollholders would be unable to accommodate you, but it might be that late in the day there will be so many on hand that casting a ballot will take more time than you anticipated.

A lot of people are going to put off going to the polls until the last minute. For some, it will be unavoidable. For others, it will be just plain procrastination. So if you can avoid it, don't be needlessly late.

There are advantages in getting to the polls early. Everyone is fresh and ready, and eager to serve. You can discharge your duty and forget it and go on about your business as usual. Late in the day the long ordeal becomes trying and tiring for election officials. They will have been on the job since early in the morning and nerves will be frayed. And if you put it off, you yourself will have less enthusiasm for going to your precinct polling place to cast a ballot.

Everybody is looking forward to a record turnout of voters Tuesday. Everybody interested in such a turnout sincerely hopes it turns out that way. Each individual's vote becomes a part of the national voice, so join in the chorus.

In the evening, when the polling places are closed, the counting begins. As has been the practice for so many years, The Reflector will gather results from individual County precincts as they are reported and post them on a big scoreboard. State and national trends will be received on the Associated Press teletype circuit and relay those figures to the election party crowd outside on a public address hook-up.

On some election nights the gathering outside the newspaper's office has numbered several hundreds of people. Everybody's welcome, everybody's invited.

It Really Isn't Such A One-Sided Proposition

The nation's newspapers have been described as a "one party press" by no less a person than the President. And even Governor Adlai Stevenson has contributed to this description of today's Fourth Estate. Both talk like men dismayed by such an unequal sharing of favorable newspapers. Such an attitude is incomprehensible to responsible newspapermen.

Then, a couple days ago, Jonathan Daniels of the Raleigh News and Observer, strongly condemned what he regards as the prevalence of slanted presentation of campaign stories. At that, we (and we suspect others, too) had to suppress a smile.

It is generally regarded as true that a majority of newspapers have endorsed Dwight Eisenhower's candidacy. However, here in North Carolina Governor Stevenson has the announced support of eleven daily papers and eighteen weeklies, as against two dailies and six weeklies for his rival. There are scores of newspapers in Tarheelia who may lean in one direction or the other, but have made no outright endorsement.

It is also undeniable that there are newspapers who "slant" their news stories, headlines or pictures in favor of one or the other candidate. We believe them to be in the minority. No conscientious newspaper would so abuse their newspaper as to give an unfair presentation of the most important facts upon which a nation must base its voting.

Editorial endorsement of one candidate should not mean that the people in that newspaper's service area will get only one, biased side of the political argument. News pages are not, and should never be, "opinion" pages. Their headlines and positions are (by most editors) guided on the news value involved.

The editorial pages are something else. Those are strictly "opinion" pages as every reader knows who delves into them, and therein the editorialists and columnists are free to voice their views.

Freedom of the press carries with it the obligation of impartial presentation. Abuse of this responsibility is easily recognized by the readers, and it breeds distrust when consistently committed.

The majority of newspaper folk are very proud of their unique position to serve. They work hard at it, and if in a hurried impulsive moment they lose their impartiality, their regret is deep-rooted and instinctive.

So, despite the seeming dismay of the President, candidate Stevenson and editor-publisher Daniels, we cannot accept the view that most of the public is being offered one side of the political campaigns. It runs contrary to everything today's newspapers regard as their standard of ethics.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—As this weird Presidential campaign approaches its windup, a question frequently raised in political and military circles concerns the failure of General George C. Marshall and Douglas MacArthur to extend any reinforcement to their erstwhile friend and long-time Army associate—General Eisenhower. Indeed, it involves their indirect efforts to hurt Ike's candidacy.

While the behavior of the nation's top brass, except for Ike's, will not sway any great mass of voters, the Marshall-MacArthur attitude has perplexed friends and well-wishers of the Republican nominee. Without any partial display, according to this viewpoint, the two could have given public testimony to Eisenhower's ability in other fields than military.

On the other hand, their stiff-lipped silence could have an adverse effect, and every vote will count to favor MacArthur. In particular, he has a large and loyal following among civilians and the military. He is an elder statesman rather than a retired warrior.

ANTI-EISENHOWER—Unless there should be a last-minute utterance, MacArthur has not commented publicly on the campaign, or expressed a kind word for his former aide at Washington and in the Philippines. Nor has he insisted upon the withdrawal of his name as a Presidential entry in several states, where he might attract enough votes to injure Ike.

Rightly or wrongly, Marshall's flanking brush with the political battle has been regarded as anti-Eisenhower. When he was asked if he would vote in Virginia tomorrow, he replied sharply that he had never cast a ballot, and that he would adhere to that attitude in 1952.

Although seeming to reflect an attitude of neutrality, it also appeared in the light of a slap at the man with whom he once had a father-and-son relationship.

QUESTIONABLE EXPLANATION—A partial but questionable explanation is that MacArthur and Marshall do not believe they should take part in politics. Many Pentagon higher-ups fear lest the campaign review of military and diplomatic decisions, as well as the attacks on Ike, may react against their profession in peace and war.

That consideration certainly cannot apply to our former commander in Japan and Korea. He plunged into politics with his letter to Minority Leader Martin, which brought on his summary recall. He made a spectacular appearance before the GOP Convention, and secretly hoped for the nomination.

It could govern in Marshall's case. However, he accepted the political post of Secretary of State under Truman. Many other officers of a high rank have participated in the Stevenson-Eisenhower struggle.

His retirement makes him a private citizen. Thus, in view of the intense nationwide get-out-the-vote drive, his abdication of that primary responsibility in such declusive language had an anti-Ike tinge. Whether he meant it or not, it led many to believe that he planned it in the way it has been interpreted. Marshall is an extremely cautious man in words and actions.

MACARTHUR'S ATTITUDE—There may be personal and professional reasons behind their attitude. The emotional MacArthur frequently showed during World War II that he was not entirely happy over the fact that the more responsible war assignment had been given to his junior officer.

He boarded the Pentagon with complaints when weapons were directed to North Africa and Europe instead of to his island-hopping campaign in the Far Pacific. He thought that he was being slighted. Now, in politics as in war, Ike has topped the man who likes to be known, today and by history, as "America's greatest soldier."

FAR EAST POLICY—Marshall, of course, is soured by no such jealousies. He may have been wounded by Ike's enforced association with the Senators—Jenner and McCarthy—who have tried to discredit him. But, as a young Pennsylvania Democrat who could not win an appointment to West Point for that reason, he needs enough of practical politics to understand the need for Party unity.

A more likely reason is Eisenhower's general criticism of our pre-Korea policy in the Far East, with the alleged failure to support Chiang Kai-shek after the Japanese surrender. Ike has also attributed our Chinese program to the influence of leftists within the State Department.

What Ike may have forgotten is that, as a result of Marshall's report and action after his unsuccessful Chinese mission to reconcile the Nationalists and Communists, his old benefactor was chiefly responsible for that policy. Thus, in attacking the Truman-Acheson Administration as responsible for the Korean tragedy, Eisenhower is really assailing Marshall.

TEXAS TIDELANDS—A group of Texas geologists has just made a report on the value of their state's tidelands that may influence votes tomorrow. As against hostile hints that no great amount of petroleum may be discovered off the coast, they estimate the worth of the disputed and submerged lands at $60 billion. That's a lot of loot in any political language.

Credit Where It's Due

Around Capitol Square

GOVERNOR—It has been said many times that the Governor of North Carolina has less power than the chief executives of most other States, for that he is the only one of the 48 Governors without authority to veto acts of the General Assembly. Just as often this claim of less power has been countered by presenting facts about the budgetary set-up of this State, which gives to the Governor more complete control over the expenditure of tax money than that exercised by most other state executives. Denial of veto over legislation is embodied in the constitution. The executive budget act is statutory but none the less controlling, and it gives to our Governor more authority over State business and larger influence over legislation and administration than would be implied in constitutional veto power.

APPOINTMENTS—The North Carolina Governor does not have the right accorded some other chief executives to appoint members of his "cabinet," since our constitution provides for election of members of the Council of State by popular vote of the same people who elect the Governor. But appointive authority covering the departments of highways, conservation and development, personnel, revenue and the several administrators of the budget system including director of purchase and contract, compensates for any lack of authority in other administrative fields.

INCREASING—It is further noticeable that while trends in national circles and in many other states are generally toward larger control of the legislative branch, in North Carolina the trend is toward concentration of power in the governor's office. Witness the pending constitutional amendment providing for filling vacancies in the General Assembly by executive appointment, instead of by special election. Whether ratified or not, the very fact such a proposal was submitted is significant of the trend toward larger executive control over State affairs.

POWERS—Further evidence of that trend is found in the recommendation of forestry and wildlife administrators that the Governor be given authority to close woodlands against all activities in event the Governor should determine that presence of hunters, fishermen, picnickers, lumbermen or anybody else engaged in business or recreation constitute a fire hazard. The forests and streams can be closed to public use now by action of one or more State boards or commissions. The proposal to transfer to the Governor the interest of "closing time" is of great importance sometimes when legislation is pending and always when fire is raging.

"BUDGET"—The authority granted to the Governor's office, and occasional efforts to take some power away, is on an important issue. Governor Scott was offended when legislative leaders proposed last year to require approval of the budget commission for allocations out of contingency and emergency or "plus" funds. But the same legislators are still in favor of the idea, and at last accounts had tacit co-operation of incoming Governor "Lead."

It like the one to establish an authoritative parole board is not so much to strip the executive of any power as to afford sharper responsibility. Practically every General Assembly in recent years has striven to expand the Governor's power over State affairs. The next session may carry on the trend, not because the lawmakers want Bill Unstead to have the power but because they think it should be vested in the office.

INFLUENCE—Absence of veto power indirectly gives to the Governor more influence over legislation in advance. Despite Governor Scott's sometimes bitter criticism of the legislatures of 1949 and 1951 for being hostile and non-cooperative, he also says that he got through from 85 per cent to 90 per cent of his individually desired legislation.

SHIPPING—Ways and means for utilizing the newly developed state ports at Morehead City and Wilmington in the marketing of North Carolina corn and small grain were discussed here the other day. Representatives of the State Ports Authority, State College, the Department of Agriculture and some farm groups devoted major part of the day seeking to find what the needs of the industry might be, before giving thought to how to meet them. No definite conclusions were reached, but many ideas were tossed around in the informal discussion. One intriguing idea was that of a "plus" fund, which would be used to subsidize school plants provided by the local communities or counties and would be open only to the youth of the counties in which they were located.

The State Board of Education has looked with favor upon the local junior college idea for some time. Limited State funds for any purpose beyond that of operating the 12-grade public school system, however, have served to prevent the State thus far from attempting to establish or help finance this program.

Essentially the program is simply an extension of the high school course of study from 12 to 14 grades. The classes may be taught in the regular high school buildings, as in Charlotte, if the necessary room is available. The major items of expense in such cases would apply to the employment of teachers and provision of supplies and equipment. There would be no plant construction costs and little increase in plant maintenance costs.

The value of the community junior college appears to have been convincingly demonstrated in Charlotte, Asheville and Wilmington. It affords an opportunity for many young people who otherwise could not attend college to obtain the first two years of college work inexpensively in their home communities. And those schools also offer invaluable vocational training for those who do not plan to take a four-year college course.

The financial problem is the big handicap in setting up a State-wide system of community tax-supported junior colleges as a part of the public school system. However, this handicap may be overcome in time. One of the approaches may be that of establishing district or two-county junior colleges, such as one college for Stokes and Surry, or a district junior college at North Carolina State University. These two-year colleges would be oper-

Business Today

A Home Builders Research Institute has been formed by the National Association of Home Builders. It was created to coordinate scattered housing research of industry and universities to act as a clearing house for government and private research information, and to serve in liaison between builders and manufacturers of materials.

This may be a long step toward the home of the future. Now, the 1952 home is a dandy job, with its streamlined kitchen, picture windows, garbage disposer, built-in television and fine use of many new materials.

It is reasonably priced, too, in terms of 1952 dollars. Home building, as the N.A.H.B. points out, has been transformed since World War II from a handicraft to a mass-production industry.

But the building industry has only begun real modernization. On the basis of progress in other industries, it looks as if the home builders can still make enormous technological advances.

All measures of progress should result in far better construction and vastly greater conveniences at little increase in cost. (This is the opinion of the writer, an experienced home-liver-in, not the N.A.H.B.)

What these conveniences will be is merely a matter of guess. Perhaps they will include year-round air-conditioning with individual room controls, an advance that has appeared in relatively few new homes. Or miniature television-viewing rooms. Or rumpus rooms that are really ground-level playrooms, not claustrophobic rathskellers. Perhaps there will be built-in furniture, built-in gardens or built-in tanks to gather rain water from roofs.

It is the fault of home buyers that builders have produced only samplings of these benefits. Buyers have a tendency to become faddists, largely because they do not really know what they want. A few years ago the Hollywood bathroom became the vogue; since then almost every new home has one and, if some of the color schemes reflect the personalities of its buyers, the country needs a lot more psychiatrists. Now it's the ranch-type home, largely because everybody else wants them. Next year it may be outdoor swimming pools, astro-domes or anti-aircraft gun emplacements.

Research in depth is needed. Ordinary questioning won't do because most people's answers simply reflect the latest thing they have seen in a magazine. Deeper research, perhaps with a dash of psychology and a sprinkling of what is possible, might disclose that people really want to make a home a place of serene and comfortable living.

The pick-up in furniture sales in September has been reflected in new orders to manufacturers. Orders booked were 11 per cent higher than in August, reports Selzman & Selzman, industry accountants. September shipments were better than any month since April 1951.

OLD PROMOTER—IS OUT—PROMOTED
There is a bowl of pennies in this department's reception room. The Old Promoter dropped in today and remarked, "I put a few coppers in your bowl, but as an old promoter I think you would do better if you put up a sign saying what charity gets the money."

"No charity," we said. "That's where we keep the money for the postmen when postage-due letters arrive. It saves time hunting for coins. Besides, everybody who passes by automatically drops a few cents in. No matter how fast we pay it out to the postmen, the total keeps growing."

The Old Promoter brushed his eyebrows. "Look," he growled. "Who is the old promoter around here - you or me?"

SAYS BRANCH STORES—BENEFIT MAIN STORES
Establishment of branch stores does not weaken the prestige of downtown stores; rather, it adds to it. George Hansen, president of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, told a merchandising clinic sponsored by the University of Alabama. Mr. Hansen knows where of he spoke; he is head of a large Boston department store.

A quarter of a million dollars was spent on a book that appeared this week. It is "The Encyclopedia of Business," published by the National Bureau of Economic Research. It is a directory of business subjects. (It is $10 and by Prentice-Hall, 70 Fifth Ave., New York 11.)

SELF-CLEANING—A drill that cleans dust particles out of the hole it makes is being introduced by General Electric Co., Schenectady, N. Y. The automatic cleaning action is due to shallow, oval spiral and overhang on the cemented-carbide tip.

CONTROLS—A moth control unit containing chlorophyll, said to be effective for about 6 months, is being made (by Ralph Chemical Co., 5512 Fernwood Ave., Los Angeles, Calif.). Crystals are concealed into a solid case, allowing evaporation from top of cake.

MADRID (AP)—Snapshots from a touring typewriter:
The face of Madrid is changing more rapidly than almost any other capital in Europe. New hotels are rising to fill the demands of the tourist trade. Great chunks of pastel colored apartment buildings containing hundreds of apartments are being erected to meet the needs of a population desperately demanding more housing.

There is an air of crisp modernity about the city that in itself is stirring the American visitors who like an atmosphere of progress in a storied city. They also find the individual Spaniard one of the most likeable Europeans.

Most vacationists, of course, are more interested in having a good time here than in the politics of this colorful country which has such tremendous contrasts of ancient grandeur, new splendor and old poverty.

After dining at a palatial hotel spending for one meal enough to keep a poor Spanish family in beans and bread for a month, they ask idly, "Who runs this country anyway?"

To this question you can get many answers, just as a stranger might if he asked who really ran America.

"The Church rules Spain," is the reply often given by the man in the street, who may affectionately admire his own parish priest, but dislikes the top clergy.

"No, Franco is a true generalissimo," disagrees a nationalistic patriot. "If Franco went to Korea with our Spanish divisions, he would destroy the Chinese army."

TOUGH COP

By JOHN ROEBURT

Chapter 32

He rested on one knee, low to the floor, and let his energies revive. His head was throbbing, and there was cotton batting over his ears drums that insulated him against sound.

Bz-zzz, the sound came again. He strained to identify it.

It was a door buzzer.

He felt along the walls of the narrow closet, and found the door. He tested it, and again, then rattled the doorknob furiously.

The sound outside the chamber stopped, and Devereaux mustered his strength into a single flinging push.

The closet door held. He flung himself again, then sagged against a wall gasping for breath.

There was a new sound outside—a shout, reverberating in a vast echo chamber. He rattled the doorknob feverishly and banged with a fast.

Soon a key turned in the lock and the door jerked open.

The picture formed slowly before him. He saw the gun first, then the face.

It was Captain Anders.

"Hello," Devereaux grinned toothily.

"Where's Phillips?" Anders rasped.

"Powdered," Devereaux fell into a chair. "What brought you?"

"Elevator starter phoned headquarters. All puzzled and anxious. Said a detective came up here and never came down again." Anders made a clicking sound in his mouth. "We were to leave Phillips to you," he said ironically. "Solowey made a big point of that yesterday."

"Sorry," Devereaux said. "He got the drop on me, and was worked up enough to plug me."

Anders looked at him searchingly. "Why does Phillips rate special and exclusive handling?"

"He doesn't. Not any more."

"You've got a case on his daughter, huh?"

"She isn't his daughter."

"Okay, his so-called daughter. Quit being evasive," Anders said irritably.

"Shut up, Anders."

"Sure. Throw the kid gloves into the garbage can, and I'll shut up. Don't, and I'll yell you right into the mayor's office." He looked demandingly at Devereaux. "Now, how do we solve a murder case?"

"A mass murder case, I mean."

"Send an alarm out for Phillips."

"I already did. Was it Phillips?"

"He swears he didn't. Swears it was Maxim Buloff."

"Buloff is hard to catch. The alarm's been out since. Solowey fed me that piecemeal story you sent him down with, but no trace of Buloff." Anders rubbed his chin. "Who do you think the killer is?"

"Buloff, probably. If Phillips wasn't putting a show on for me. But I'm not going out on a limb." Devereaux started for the door.

"Coming?"

Anders brushed past him. "Going. You stay. Solowey's on his way over with your apple-cheeked charmer." He shook his head approvingly, then looked in Devereaux's face defiantly. "Give me one reason why I can't arrest the lady as a material witness."

Devereaux wet his lips. "You know the one reason," he said quietly. "Nothing will be withheld, I promise you. The whole story. If it is right down to the last comma, will go down on the blotter."

They stood eye to eye and Devereaux felt himself flush. "Okay," Anders said doubtfully. "Okay," he repeated, satisfied, and opened the door.

At the door he stopped suddenly. "You're not planning to marry her!" Anders said.

"Guess I am," Devereaux said softly. "I am," he repeated, sure of it.

Anders' whistle of surprise seemed to hang in the air long after the door had closed behind him.

It seemed hours later when Solowey came in with his arm locked in Jennifer's.

Devereaux smiled fondly at the picture they made. A fat Buddha and a misty-eyed nymph.

Solowey moved self-effacingly to a side, like a supernumerary yielding the center of the stage to the stars.

They stood apart for a moment, then moved in accord. Her arms crept around his neck.

"Tears," Devereaux chided lumpily. "What for?"

"You might have been killed," she wept softly.

"Somebody's been playing on your imagination, kid." He looked across to Solowey accusingly. "Some old fossil's been trying to make a dull trade sound like Dick Tracy."

"A libelous guess," Solowey said wryly. "And shame on you, Devereaux." He moved toward the pair.

"She knows the whole story. About who she is, about Phillips and the others." His voice sank to a barely audible register. "About her father, her real father."

Devereaux looked at her questioningly. "Early this morning," she said. "Phillips came home at four o'clock and knocked on my door. He was shaken, as if he had been through a horrible ordeal. He said he wanted to talk. He sat on the edge of my bed and talked, right through the dawn until forenoon."

Devereaux spoke to Solowey. "Buloff tried to kill him in the Sudor Garage at three a.m." He turned to Jennifer solicitously. "Where did you go when you left here?"

"To the park. I sat. I don't know how long. There was so much to think about, to think over." Her mouth trembled. "My mother, the tragedy of it. And my father, murdered in prison."

Devereaux took her hand and led her to a chair. "He gave you the whole dose at one, huh?" His voice granted. "He had to get it off his conscience, even if it killed you."

Solowey sought a share in the indignation. "She arrived at my office an hour ago, still suffering from shock, and looking for you."

"I tried to find you for hours." Her face turned up to Devereaux's. "I rang your bell over and over."

"I was here, holding a seance with Phillips practically since noon. Devereaux touched his head tenderly and motioned to the closet.

"I also took quite a long nap in there."

U. S. Policy On Africa Discussed

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The United States has been replaced as the world's melting pot, says a University of California geographer.

"Africa presents today an explosive situation which, in focusing attention on Asia, we have tended to overlook," said Dr. Kathleen Stokes of East Carolina College in a recent talk before the Pilots Club of Rocky Mount.

A member of the social studies department at East Carolina, Dr. Stokes spoke at a dinner meeting of the civic organization at the Ricks Hotel in Rocky Mount. Approximately thirty members were present to hear her discuss "Africa: A New Challenge to American Enterprise and American Diplomacy."

European powers which control Africa, she said, face the same problems in Africa which have confronted them in Asia. Communistic influence is a threat there as elsewhere, she stated. A desire for independence is beginning to be felt, she said, and "the first stirrings of the Negro peoples toward nationalism" are apparent.

"We must keep Africa within the Western orbit, Dr. Stokes pointed out. It is, she said, the world's richest source of stock pile materials. As a trading nation, she continued, we are particularly interested in developing African markets. As a key to Western security, she added, Africa should not be neglected.

American disquiet about the African situation is evident, Dr. Stokes told her audience. The goals of U.S. policy, she explained, are to help the people of Africa achieve independence provided they do it in a peaceful manner.

Sixty-Three Will Represent ECC At Baptist Meet

East Carolina College will be represented by sixty-three students at the Baptist Student Union State Convention in Raleigh November 7-9. Alice Jackson of Godwin, extension chairman of the campus BSU here, has announced that, along with six students from Atlantic Christian College, the majority of the group will go to Raleigh by chartered bus.

Several of those who attend will appear on the convention program, based on the theme "Christ Shall Reign." Nell Grantham of Fairmont, president of the Immanuel Youth Fellowship, will lead the devotional at the Sunday morning session. Lionel L. Bishop of Greenville and Ramona Outlaw of Kinston will participate in entertainment programs, and Hattie Jo Bryson of Apex and Jack Painter of Tarboro, will lead discussion groups.

Philippine Farm Progress Slow

MANILA (AP)—A U. S. Mutual Security Agency expert says the Philippines is below par in agricultural production because of slow progress toward mechanized farming.

Robert T. McMillan, MSA sociologist, compared the islands' rice yield in 1918 and 1951 and found that last year's crop was the same as 33 years earlier.

He said one of the chief reasons for the slow application of better farming methods was due to the old system of "one peasant, one plow, and one work animal" on small plots of land.

Cross-Breeding Improves Bees

SRINAGAR, Kashmir (AP)—Government officials say the importation of Italian honey bees has improved the local strain.

The development of hybrid types by crossing Kashmir's native bees with queen bees of superior type imported from Italy was so successful that 17 bee colonies including several million insects were bred in one year, officials reported.

Honey production by the new types, bred from the Italian Apis Mellifica species, is said to be far superior to that of the usual Indian types. The Italian-Kashmir honey makers will have their first general showing next year when the All-Indian Beekeepers Conference meets here.

BOONE—With freshman quarter- back Dick Cherry leading the way with two touchdown passes, the East Carolina College Pirates turned on the steam in the fourth quarter to roar to a 22-19 victory over Appalachian Saturday afternoon. The game was the final North State Conference contest of the year for the Pirates.

Cherry, who had sneaked across with the first Pirate touchdown in the early minutes of the game, pitched perfect strikes to ends Bob- by Hodges and Dwight Shoe for the touchdowns which wiped out a 19-9 lead the Mountaineers had possessed as the fourth quarter started.

While Cherry's passes enabled the Pirates to come from behind, the most important scoring of the day was a ten-yard field goal by Hawk Grissom in the early minutes of the second quarter. The boot moved the Pirates into a 9-0 lead over the Apps at the time it was kicked but late scoring by both teams ultimately turned the three points in the actual margin of victory.

The value of Grissom's kick be- came evident almost immediately after he kicked it as the Mountaineers began the three scoring marches which wiped out the 9-0 East Carolina lead. Two quick TD's in the waning minutes of the second period and another fast one in the opening minutes of the third quarter moved the Apps into the lead and set the stage for the last quarter passing parade for Cherry's passing parade.

The Pirates had jumped into their early lead in the game largely on the running efforts of Cherry and halfback Illard Yarborough. After Topsy Hayes had covered an Appalachian fumble on the Apps' 38 to set the stage, Yarborough started the scoring drive with an eight-yard gain off-tackle.

A pass fell incomplete and a try at the line by Bobby Strickland also failed to gain any ground so the Bucs turned to Yarborough again. On the same off-tackle play, he picked up 20 yards to give the Pirates a first down on the ten. Paul Gay then took over the running duties and moved the ball to the one. Cherry sneaked over from that point. Grissom's attempt for the extra point never came off because of a bad pass from center.

Field Goal Good
Grissom made up for the missed extra point, however, when he boot- ed the ten-yard field goal in the opening minutes of the second period. The Pirates had marched from their own 18 but stalled when they got within the shadow of the Apps' goal posts. With a first down on the 16, the Pirates gained only six yards in three tries so Grissom was sent in to boot from a slight angle to the left.

That 9-0 lead began vanishing two minutes after the field goal was kicked. The Pirates and Mountaineers traded fumbles but the host Apps more than made up for their error when halfback Shirley Gabriel intercepted one of Cherry's passes on the Appalachian 23 and set sail. Gabriel set up his blocking nicely and when Jimmy Kiser cut Cherry down, the fleet 165-pound Gabriel had no trouble going the distance. Jack Groce's attempted conversion sailed wide to the left.

Another pass interception paid off for the Apps two plays later. Jackie Jones had stopped one of Cherry's tosses on the East Carolina 35 and returned it to the 25 before he was stopped. On the first play from that point, both sides jumped the gun but the Apps got their touch- down on the second play when Gabriel took a wide pithout to the right, then stopped and heaved a perfect pass to Bob Clendenin on the five. Clendenin carried the ball across for the touchdown. Groce's conversion attempt sailed wide but the Apps had a 12-9 lead which lasted until halftime.

The Apps wasted little time in get- ting their third touchdown. They exchanged punts — and fumbles — with the Pirates in the opening minutes of the third quarter and finally wound up in possession of the ball on their own 32.

E. Carolina Has Chance To Win Conference Title

Pirates Finish Confer- ence Play With Four Wins, One Loss, One Tie Record

East Carolina, which has finished the league season with a 4-1-1 North State Conference football record, could conceivably win the title, although Lenoir Rhyne and Catawba remain the favorites.

Lenoir Rhyne leads with victories in all three conference games and Catawba is next with three victories and a tie. It's likely that their game on Thanksgiving Day will decide the title, although before that Lenoir Rhyne will meet Elon (1-3) and Guilford (0-2) while Catawba also will play Guilford.

East Carolina won a 22-19 thriller from Appalachian Saturday, marked by two second-half touchdown passes by Dick Cherry, freshman quarterback from Washington, N. C. The loss gave Appalachian a 2-4 conference record, the first time they have lost four games in one season in the tenure of Coach E. C. Dug- gins, now in his fifth year.

Western Carolina won its first league game after four losses by surprising Elon, 12-0. A couple of new tailbacks, Fred Henry and Bob Moore, scored the touchdowns on plunges of two yards. It was the third loss in four conference games for Elon, which played without its No. 1 fullback John Platt and tail- back Lou Rochell, out with in- juries.

Lenoir Rhyne outclassed Newberry, 40-7, as Steve Trudnak scored twice and passed for two more touch- downs. Gene Robinson scored the other two Lenoir Rhyne touchdowns. Trudnak, previously handicapped with a knee injury, went into high gear for the first time this season. He set a league scoring mark of 119 points last season.

Catawba had a successful home- coming, edging Presbyterian 20-19 as tailback Harold Carter started on the offensive. Harvey Stratton's two placements were the margin of victory.

His first toss, to halfback Jim Stanley, was good for a 17-yard gain but someone had clipped someone else somewhere along the line and the Pirates were pushed back to the 46 yard line by the penalty. Cherry didn't let that bother him too much, however, because he picked out Stanley again and hit him with a pass on the 40 yard line. Stanley, running well but without blocking, moved the ball to the 16-yard line from where Cherry pitched to Bobby Hodges for the final touchdown. Grissom's extra point was good and all that Pirates had to do for the remainder of the game was protect that 22-19 lead. They did.

Silent Hairston Fights In Paris

PARIS (UP)—Charles Humez of France was a slight favorite to defeat Eugene (Silent) Hairston of New York tonight in their 10-round middleweight challengers' bout at the Palais Des Sports.

Humez, third-ranking contender for the middleweight championship of the world, hoped that a victory would move him into line for an "elimination title bout" should champion Sugar Ray Rob- inson retire. Hairston, a deaf- mute, is the fifth ranking con- tender for Robinson's crown.

Football Should Be Fun: Dodd

By WILL GRIMSLEY
DURHAM (AP)— Coach Bobby Dodd's formula for football success at Georgia Tech is a simple one: "Be loose. Relax. Have fun."

Perhaps no team in the country gets greater relish out of the au- tumn season than these enthusias- tic Rambling Wreckers from At- lanta, who now have gone through 21 straight games without a defeat.

The reason is easily traced to Dodd, a tall, Gary Cooperish indi- vidual who was one of Tennessee's great field generals and ball-car- riers before going to Tech as as- sistant to the late Bill Alexander in 1931. He became head coach in 1945.

"After all, this is just a game," the 44-year-old Tech mentor re- marked after carving up Duke, 28-7, in the South's big game here Saturday.

"We like to keep it that way. We don't scrimmage at all after the season opens. We don't drive our boys. We don't try to get them up psychologically for a particular game."

"I think that is one of the rea- sons we don't have many 'flat' Sat- urdays. Every game is more or less the same to us—just a game. Some- times the boys get themselves up for a tough opponent, just as they were against Duke, but we don't try to lift them ourselves."

Dodd is a refreshing departure from the old school coach, the strict disciplinarian who believes in driving players with a whip hand, pushing them through bone-crack- ing scrimmages for toughening pur- poses and then exhorting them to die for the dear old Gold and Black.

His aides say he never criticizes a player on the field or during practice. He holds a private con- ference with any bowl he feels is remiss in his work.

There's never a locker room buildup before the game. The coaches, in fact, leave the dressing room for several minutes before every contest. The halftime inter- mission is not devoted to inspira- tional oratory such as made famous by the late Knute Rockne, but to cold technical details.

If every coach copied Dodd's at- titude toward bowl games, there might be no movement under way to banish them.

"Bowl games are a fine thing," Dodd said. "Our president likes them. We have a lot of fun at bowl games."

"Aw, I know I get criticized and am warned my boys are going to get their brains kicked out because we don't go in for heavy practice at the bowls."

"We don't scrimmage, just run through a few plays. At Miami last year, for instance, we had a hotel on the bay. We didn't lock the boys up in hotel rooms like sheep. We didn't tell them they had to be in at a certain time."

"The boys played around in boats, went fishing and sight-seeing and visited the horse and dog tracks."

their line broke through to block a Fitzgerald punt deep in Farmville territory. A few plays later, Dickens scored from the four yard line.

In the final quarter Allen swept through the line, bowled over a La-Grange tackler and crossed the line standing up to put the Red Devils out in front.

Minutes later Dilda added the clincher when he ripped across from the two yard line to cap off a sus- tained drive by the Red Devils from the LaGrange 40.

Defensive standouts for Farm- ville were Tommy Norville, Jess Spencer, Carroll Wooten, and Char- lie Fitzgerald.

College Prexy's Favor Bowl Ban In SIC Football

RALEIGH, N. C. (UP)—A sur- vey of college presidents indicated today that the Southern Confer- ence will vote overwhelmingly to retain its ban on post-season bowl games if the matter is put to a test at the conference's annual meeting in Clemson, S. C., Dec. 12.

Ten presidents, enough to insure that the ban would be retained, told the United Press that they oppose bowl games. There are 17 colleges in the conference but only 15 presidents will be eligible to take part in the meeting because Maryland and Clemson are serving a one-year suspension for ac- cepting a bowl bid last season without permission of the other member schools.

The 10 presidents who indicated their belief that the ban should be retained were those of North Carolina State, Duke, Wake For- est, West Virginia, William and Mary, VMI, VPI, Washington and Lee, Davidson and Richmond.

Robert Poole, president of in- digible Clemson, was the only ex- ecutive who favored a return to unrestricted participation in bowl games with the comment:

"I think we need more bowls instead of fewer bowls to sell our colleges in good wholesome sports."

J. W. Harrelson, chancellor of North Carolina State, went on record at the opposite extreme.

"All bowl games ought to be abolished," Harrelson said.

Hollis Edens, president of Duke and a leader in the writing of the ban, said he had "heard no senti- ment expressed for a change in the rule."

Duke normally would be a logi- cal bowl candidate despite a 28-7 loss to Georgia Tech last Sat- urday. The other logical bowl can- didate in the Southern Conference is undefeated Maryland.

Dr. Irvin Stewart of West Vir- ginia University said: "I believe the bowl ban is beneficial as one step to help cut down on undue emphasis on college football."

Tennessean Wins Seniors Tourney

PINEHURST (AP)—Judd Brum- ley, who took a week off from his Greenville, Tenn., hotel job to play in the inaugural North and South Seniors golf tournament, was back today with the title.

He defeated a Pinehurst busines- man, Norfleet P. Ray, 5 and 4 in the finals Saturday. Ray, who had undergone treatments all week for an ailing back muscle, was consis- tently outdriven off the tee.

Brumley went ahead on the third hole and was never behind there- after as he closed out the match on the 14th.

Eppes Defeats Washington 25-0 In Homecoming Game

Eppes High School's Bulldogs put the perfect touch to their home- coming festivities Friday night by blanking P. S. Jones High of Wash- ington 25-0. The victory was Eppes' second of the year.

The Bulldogs got off on their first scoring drive early in the first quarter. They began the march from their own 20 with Clarence Williams, Henry Dupree and Fred Outerbridge alternating in the ball carrying. Williams finally took the ball across for the first score.

Following the kickoff, Washington fumbled on their own 20-yard line and Eppes captain Joseph Whyr recovered for the Bulldogs. The second Eppes touchdown came shortly thereafter on a pass from Herman Hines to Ephraim Green.

In the second half, Fred Outer- bridge took the opening kickoff and returned it to the 30-yard line. On the first play from that point, Green got off on a 50-yard jaunt which carried to the Washington 20. A pass from Hines to Cherry was good for the touchdown.

With six minutes of playing time remaining, Washington took to the air in an attempt to score. Dupree stopped the drive, however, when he intercepted one of the Washington aeriels and returned it 68 yards to the Washington 14. Williams carried the ball on four successive plays for the touchdown. Hines passed to Green for the extra point.

Halftime ceremonies at the game honored Miss Jacquelyn Hines, se- cond Miss Jacquelyn Hines, se- cond. Eppes students as Home- coming Queen.

The Bulldogs will continue their schedule Friday night by traveling to Elizabeth City.

Pro Star Throws Six Inch Pass

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—Quar- terback Frankie Albert and end Gordie Soltau of San Francisco teamed on a six-inch touchdown pass against the Chicago Bears Sunday but they missed the Na- tional Football League record for the shortest completed pass by two inches.

The league lists Cecil Isbell's four-inch touchdown loss to Don Hutson for Green Bay against the Cleveland Rams in 1942 as its shortest completed throw.

Brecheen Will Coach For Browns

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UP)—Harry (The Cat) Brecheen, Cardinal southpaw pitcher, today looked over the St. Louis Browns' roster of pitchers whom he will coach next year.

The 38-year-old hurler was re- leased unconditionally from the Red Birds Thursday and immediately signed a one year contract with the Browns as a player-coach.

Brecheen, who achieved fame as the only left hander to win three World Series games, spent his en- tire major league career with the Cards. The three wins came against the Boston Red Sox in the 1946 series.

Both the southpaw and Browns Manager Martin Marion were said to be "enthusiastic" about the change. Marion formerly played shortstop for the Cardinals.

A Cardinal spokesman said the club "just couldn't come to terms with Brecheen on his role in our pitching lineup."

As Campaigns Go, This Is One To Long Remember

By JOSEPH L MYLER
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP) — It has been a weird and, er, wonderful campaign.

Whichever side wins tomorrow, Dwight D. Eisenhower and Adlai E. Stevenson can be sure the 1952 campaign will get more than passing mention by historians of U. S. politics.

It has been packed with "firsts" and "mosts," with strange parallels and odd contrasts, and with record highs and brand new lows.

For one thing, the nominees and their running mates established a political "first" this year by publicizing their personal finances. They dumped so many figures onto the front pages that some newspapers begged them to stop it.

For another, they did more airplane traveling and more radio and television talking than any candidates ever did before.

Both presidential candidates frequently switched from whistle-stopping by train to city-hopping by plane, making more appearances in a weekend than candidates of other years did in a week.

Other candidates have used TV and radio. But none ever exploited the hard-working electron as thoroughly as have Eisenhower and Stevenson. The industry performed prodigies for each.

Adlai introduced the TV fireside chat and Ike countered in the last two weeks of the campaign with a barrage of both TV and radio

"spot" programs.

It was a unique campaign in many ways. No Republican candidate before him ever campaigned as vigorously as Ike in the South. He invaded Dixie four times.

Stevenson established a record of some sort by promising to toss out of Washington the crooks who got there via his own party.

And what other campaign ever featured a pair of such reluctant dragons?

Eisenhower let himself be pushed into politics only a few weeks before the convention in which he won the nomination. Stevenson resisted the "draft" right up to the moment balloting started at the Democratic convention.

In no other campaign has a president campaigned as hard for somebody else as Mr. Truman did this year for Stevenson. Theodore Roosevelt put William Howard Taft into the White House as his successor in 1908. But in terms of mileage and wordage his campaign was no match for Mr. Truman's.

Another novel aspect of this campaign was the fact that some of the meanest blows were thrown not by the current candidates but by the candidates who had fought it out four years before.

Mr. Truman impugned Eisenhower's honesty and competence and accused him of embracing the Nazi philosophy. For doing that, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, the GOP candidate of 1948, paid his respects to Mr. Truman with such words as "filthy," "liar," "manure," and "mud."

The late campaign produced many a contrast. Ike captured audiences with a smile; Adlai wowed 'em with wit.

Adlai, the political pro, surrounded himself with amateurs; Ike, the amateur, surrounded himself with pros.

Eisenhower's campaign relied heavily on confetti and balloons, produced triumphantly at all stops by the general's logistics experts. Stevenson's side fired broadsides of "comic book" sketches glorifying him and Sen. John J. Sparkman, the Democratic vice presidential candidate.

Each side accused the other's No. 1 candidate of being somebody's "captive" and each charged the other with tactics of "smear" and "fear."

In one respect, however, the 1952 campaign has been like all the others before. Each side has done its worst to prove the other's nominee a bum.

A survey conducted for the four New York City municipal colleges indicates that the divorce rate among graduates are from one-fourth to one-tenth those of the nation as a whole.

Chinese Thought Him Dead; But He's Safe, Now

By RICHARD APPLIGATE
United Press Staff Correspondent
ABOARD HOSPITAL SHIP CONSOLATION, OFF KOREA (UP) — Marine Pfc Ronald Fitzgerald, 20, lived to tell this story because he played dead when his position was overrun by Chinese Communists.

He kept up the pretense even when the Chinese put a lighted match to his foot, jumped up and down on his ankle and kicked him beneath the heart.

Fitzgerald, of Colorado Springs, Colo., was wounded in the hands and legs during a front-line battle last Sunday when "they started whanging in the heaviest barrage I ever saw up near 'The Hook'."

"The Communists got me pretty early, throwing renades into our rabbit holes," the Marine private said. "I took off for help, limping but able to move fairly fast."

"Then I had to crawl into a hole and hide, and the Goonies overran us. I played like I was dead."

"They shook me and one of them took off one of my shoes and put a match to my foot to see if I was dead."

"I wasn't, but I might just as well have been. I had eight burp gun slugs in my legs and they were paralyzed so I couldn't feel the match very much. But I smelled my own flesh burning. It didn't smell very good."

"Neither do those Gooks. There were about eight of them in there, and they had been eating that stinking garlic that they eat and I almost vomited."

"They watched me all that day to see if I was dead. Sometime late in the afternoon, I passed out. I just couldn't pretend any longer."

"Next morning I came to. There were three or four of them outside the hole but none inside. I decided to make a break for it."

"Then I got it again. I couldn't run and the Goonies were shooting at me. I thought this is where I check out. Then I stumbled square into another Chinese."

"We looked each other in the eye, both of us surprised as hell. Then he threw a potato masher concussion grenade at me. I had used up all my own grenades, so I threw it back at him."

"I think it blew up about half way between us, because he hauled tail and it knocked me down."

"It paralyzed my hands. I prayed and kept trying to get out my little Bible, but I never made it. I kept praying and thinking how God was with me when I was in that hole and they were trying to kill me."

"You know, I felt it when they put that match on my foot and I felt it when one of them jumped up and down on my ankle. I felt it when one of them kicked me over the heart as I lay there."

"But I also felt that God was looking out for me and that maybe I could get out alive."

"I finally got out, by crawling on my elbows and dragging my body behind me, as far as our own barbed wire. That's where the other Marines picked me up."

Fitzgerald said he expected to get well, eventually, despite "all these bullet holes." But, he added, "I don't want to see or smell any more of this war than I have to."

Contrary to popular belief, high buildings do not sway appreciably in high winds.

A survey indicates that 23 per cent of the men and 14 per cent of the women graduates of four New York City municipal colleges in the classes of 1941 to 1947 work for federal, state or city government.

Hong Kong's population is estimated at about 500,000.

To Esso Dealers and our Other Customers:

Please help us give the right of way to the right to vote!

We at Esso Standard Oil Company believe that the right to vote takes precedence over all other rights on Election Day.

For that reason we are giving all our employees ample time off on November 4, so that they may all exercise their franchise as free citizens.

Because so many of our employees will be in voting booths instead of at their jobs on Election Day, we may not be able to serve all our dealers and other customers as swiftly and efficiently as we would like to. If you experience any inconvenience, please bear with us on this day of the year. You'll be inconvenienced for a mighty good cause!

Three Audubon Screen Tour Programs Planned

Three of America's leading naturalists will personally present their Audubon Screen Tour Programs at East Carolina College during the 1952-1953 term, according to an announcement by Dr. Harold C. Jones of the college department of science.

The series, prepared by the National Audubon Society, will be sponsored locally by the Greenville Woman's Club, the city schools of Greenville, and the East Carolina College Student Science Club, Dr. Jones states.

Allan D. Cruickshank, ornithologist from New York, will inaugurate the series Wednesday, November 12, when he will present his film "Below the Big Ben," which is described as a "brilliant wild-life motion picture." The program will take place in the Austin auditor-

Last Rites Held For Dixie Crosby

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — Funeral services for Dixie Lee Crosby, the singing and dancing star who gave up her own career to marry Bing Crosby and raise four sons, will be held today.

Services will be held at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Beverly Hills. Monsignor Patrick J. Concannon, who last week baptized Mrs. Crosby in the Roman Catholic faith and administered the final sacrament of the church, will officiate at today's solemn requiem high mass.

Mrs. Crosby died Saturday after a long fight against cancer. She would have been 41 years old tomorrow.

At her bedside in her Holmby Hills home when death came were her husband, their four sons, the singer's three brothers and her father, E. E. Wyatt of Camarillo, Calif.

Mrs. Crosby, who gave up her own career to devote her entire energies to her family, had been ill for several years. She underwent major abdominal surgery in July and her condition was believed improving when she suffered a relapse a week ago.

Circle K Club To Present Show

Members of the Circle K Club at East Carolina College will sponsor a variety review at the college Tuesday night, according to an announcement by Albert L. Harrington of Hope Mills, president.

The show will be staged in the Austin auditorium at 8 o'clock.

The program will offer an array of student talent. The Men's Variety Glee Club and the Bernie Ham Trio are among organizations scheduled to appear. Other performers will include singers, pianists, and humorists in original skits.

Robert A. Robinson of Franklin Springs, Ga., president of the Student Government Association, will act as master of ceremonies.

Minor Political Parties Possibly To Affect Result

WASHINGTON (UP) — Eight minor political parties have entered presidential candidates in one or more states to absorb whatever protest votes are cast Tuesday by voters unwilling to support either the Republican or Democratic nominee.

In contrast to 1948, none of these candidates can expect to win any of the 531 electoral votes for the presidency. But in closely contested states, they could affect the result by drawing votes that otherwise would go to the major party nominees.

The most widely known of the minor party candidates is Gen. Douglas MacArthur, whose name is being used without his consent.

His name was placed on the ballot in eight states — by the Christian Nationalist party in seven, the Constitution party in two and the America First party in Missouri. He was coupled with a different running mate by each party.

MacArthur's name appears under two party labels in both Missouri and Texas. The America First party tried too late to remove it in Missouri.

The names filed as MacArthur running mates were state Sen. Jack B. Tenney of California on the Christian Nationalist ticket; Connecticut industrialist Vivian Kellem on the Constitution party ticket, and Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.) on the America First ticket.

The left wing Progressive party, which was led in 1948 and later abandoned by former Vice President Henry A. Wallace, led all minor parties by getting on the ballot in 28 states. Its candidates are Vincent Hallinan, attorney who recently was jailed for contempt of court, for president, and Charlotte A. Bass for vice president.

The Liberal party, a New York organization which sometimes holds the balance of power in that state, has picked Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson, Democratic nominee, as its presidential candidate. President Truman received 222,562 Liberal party votes in New York in 1948.

Other minor party candidates on the ballot in some states:

- Socialist: Darlington Hoopes and Samuel H. Friedman, 14 states.
- Socialist Labor: Eric Haas and Stephen Emery, 22 states, including three under the "Industrial Government" party label.
- Prohibition: Stuart Hamblen and E. A. Holtwick, 19 states.
- Socialist Workers: Farrell Dobbs and Myra Tanner Weiss, seven states.

These groups and still other minor parties hope for write-in votes in states where they are not on the ballot.

Drab Picture Viewed By Visitors To Soviet Zone

BERLIN (U.P.) — An unsmiling Russian officer at Marienborn confers briefly with the American train commander, then waves the train on to the east and you are, as the Germans say, inside Russia, 110 miles west of Berlin.

Immediately, you are literally borne down by the oppressive weight of the scores of signs proclaiming that "the German people insist that the Soviet proposal for German reunification be accepted" and the giant illuminated shrieking "peace, freedom, unity."

Even the railroad locomotives and the street cars are plastered with the slogans, so numerous that they quickly lose all meaning, like a word repeated rapidly over and over again.

Many of the billboards declare "down with the West German war pact and remilitarization," and "the peoples police are your friend and helper."

Those are hard to stomach when you see the sullen Vopos (peoples police) carrying pistols and carbines patrolling all the main streets. The signs stating that "we joy for prosperity and freedom" are hard to believe after you see the thin, unhappy young girls with tattered sandals cleaning coal cars.

The trains are few and far between. Passengers are jammed in like sardines in a can. Railroad stations are unlit and unheated. Broken windows have simply been boarded up.

The people look drab, not well or warmly dressed. You get an overwhelming feeling of boredom as you race along between towns. It takes a while to figure it out.

There aren't any cars on the road. There aren't even any bicycles or horse-drawn carts to speak of. The country looks deserted.

The train stops in Brandenburg station for five minutes. If no Vopos are in evidence, women hold their children up so they can better see the well-fed Americans sitting in the dining car drinking real coffee, all the real coffee they can hold.

Few Red Army soldiers are in evidence. They are kept close to their cantonments, and those cantonments are placed away from the railroad, beyond sight of the foreigners.

At Werder, you glide past the first of the Berlin lakes, past the empty run-down little houses that used to be filled every summer with care-free Berliners on vacation. Then through Potsdam, past the great castle with the once-beautiful lawns now conquered by ugly weeds and the quiet ponds now filled with slush.

Then you are in Berlin, West Berlin, bastion of democracy, cold war front, the place to 15,000 freedom-loving Soviet zone residents fled last month.

city of broad streets and brave people, the city about which West German cabaret artists sing "I am so home-sick for Kurfurterstrasse" while tears course down their hearers' cheeks.

Woman Has New Election Issue

ST LOUIS (AP)—Some persons like Ike and others think we need Adlai badly. But Mrs. Gertrude Drury has a different campaign idea.

A staff member of the Central Public Library here, she recently appeared with an outside campaign button reading: "I'm For Two-Fifth All More Library Tax" (there are 10 mills in one cent).

Queen Prepares Open Parliament

LONDON (UP) —Queen Elizabeth II will open Parliament for the first time Tuesday in an ancient ceremony of tradition and pageantry.

It will be the first full ceremonial opening of Parliament in two years. It also will be the first of a series of ceremonies to be climaxed by the young queen's coronation next June.

Queen Elizabeth and her husband, the duke of Edinburgh, will drive from Buckingham Palace to the House of Lords in a state coach drawn by white horses. She will address a joint session of Lords and the House of Commons.

'Private Eye' Trade Picks Up

TOKYO (AP)—Kyodo News Agency reports the private detective business is double that of 1951.

As usual, a lot of the clients want to check up on spouses, or possible future spouses. One youth asked an agency to check into his fiancée's background to see if she had been running a He thought she spoke English too well.

A world bread grain crop of 254 million short tons — a new high record — is predicted for the 1953 year.

NEW YORK (UP)—Trading in the pre-exchange session on the stock exchange today increased to the highest level since last April 14 and prices improved over a broad front.

The rally a continuation of a vigorous rise on Friday, carried the general list to their best levels since Oct. 10.

Industrials with a gain of 96 cents would have been up $1.73 had it not been for several issues selling ex-dividend. The rails with a rise of 20 cents would have been up 31 cents but for their ex-dividend pull.

Sales in the first hour totaled 420,000 shares, against 280,000 shares in the Friday period.

Oils were active and strong with gains ranging to 2 points in Amerada, Deep Rock rose 1 1/2 and Continental point. Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line rose 2 points to feature the utilities. Steels rose fractions. Motors held steady to firm.

Carelessness Is Burning Woods

Woods fires in the Stokes and Black Jack sections of Pitt County have kept the forest wardens and their crews busy for the last three days and nights.

Forest Warden N. S. (Kid) Tyson said these fires are the result of carelessness on the part of hunters and some persons burning brush in fields.

"We have been fighting fires since last Friday. We are wearing out our equipment fighting these fires which are reported to be due to carelessness," the forest warden stated.

"We want to urge the people in rural sections to do all they can to stop the small fire when it starts in their community. The fires are destroying much timber, and at some points the blaze has swept through cotton fields and destroyed the crop," Tyson said.

"Motorists on the highways and dirt roads and workers in fields start some of these field and woods fires when they carelessly throw down a burning cigarette or cigar or empty their pipe in a dry and grassy area," a State Conservation and Development Department circular states.

Proclamation

November 3, 1952
 Whereas: By authority of Congress, the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States will conduct its thirty-first annual Buddy Poppy sale for the purpose of bringing aid to our needy veterans, their dependents, and the straitened survivors of veterans—

And Whereas: All contributions given in return for Buddy Poppies are used exclusively for the purpose intended—

And Whereas: Bringing aid to those who have suffered from war that this nation might live is a most fitting tribute to those who died for us—

I, Lester D. Page, Mayor of the City of Greenville, do hereby authorize Charles Gray Morgan Post No. 7032 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States and its Ladies Auxiliary to offer for sale to the citizens of Greenville and Pitt County the V.F.W. Buddy Poppy as made by the disabled veterans in government hospitals. The day of the sale shall be November 8, 1952.

I earnestly urge each of our citizens to support this most worthy of causes—to help those now in need who helped America when her need was greatest.

Signed: Lester D. Page, Mayor
 Attest: H. H. Duncan, City Clerk

Voters Offered Jaycee Service

Tomorrow is election day. If any citizen of Greenville desires free baby-sitter service or free transportation to the polls, it is urged that Greenville Jaycees be contacted at 5149.

Don Calloway, chairman of the Jaycees project, said this morning voters may obtain either of the free services by calling that number.

The project is one that Jaycees are sponsoring all over the United States tomorrow as part of their "get out the vote" campaign. Free transportation is being provided by members of the Greenville Automobile Dealers Association, who are furnishing the cars.

Calloway, in remarking on the project, urged that all eligible voters go to the polls and said it is being made easy as possible for them by the baby-sitter and transportation project.

INVESTIGATOR—David Sarnoff, Radio Corporation of America board chairman, has been named head of a commission to investigate the armed forces' use of manpower.

Tito Re-Affirms 'Joint Defense'

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (UP)— Marshal Tito today praised the Western powers for their unconditional military aid and pledged active Yugoslav support to a "joint defense" against Russian aggression.

In a 40,000-word speech before the Yugoslav Communist party congress, the premier blamed Russia for the present world tension. He said the world's troubles stemmed from the Tehran, Yalta, Moscow and Potsdam conferences.

But, Tito said, the Western powers must share with Russia responsibility for the outbreak of the Korean war.

Tito said the Soviet Union had "used its influence to push North Korea into aggressive war in order to bring South Korea under its influence."

"In making this statement I do not mean to diminish in any way the responsibility of the Western powers," he said, "for it was as a result of their bargaining for spheres of influence that the Korean war broke out in 1950, a war which might degenerate into a world conflict."

"If the role of the United Nations against aggressive attempts is to be effective, these incorrect methods of settling important international problems such as were adopted by the great powers at Tehran, Yalta, Moscow and Berlin must first be abandoned."

Store Entered Saturday Night

A store-service station near Penny Hill owned by Floyd Harrell was entered Saturday night and a small quantity of money and merchandise stolen, Sheriff R. W. Tyson reported today.

The sheriff said thieves gained entrance to the store by breaking a window. Missing were three cartons of cigarettes, 500 pennies and $5.00 in nickels.

An investigation was conducted by Deputy Sheriff Lloyd Manning and "Cap'n" S. B. Dorsey, city and county identification officer. The investigation is being continued, Sheriff Tyson said.

Short Career Of 'General' Ended

NEW YORK (UP)—The short career of "Brigadier General Robert J. Davis" ended today before a U. S. commissioner.

James Ralph Atkins of Toronto, Ont., was scheduled to be arraigned on charges of impersonating an officer. He was arrested Sunday after a two-week tour of fashionable Manhattan hotels and night spots in an Army officer's uniform.

FBI Agent Leland V. Boardman said Atkins registered at hotels as Brig. Gen. Robert J. Davis, and also used the names of Brig. Gen. Robert B. Stewart and "Jefferson Davis." He once obtained a staff car from Mitchell Air Force Base for use by "General Davis," Boardman said.

Saturday's . . .

 Robert Elks, R. E. Rogers and J. S. Jenkins of "rallying this thing through."

Alderman Rogers retorted, "I deny that emphatically. It seems to me the mayor and one or two more people are trying to run the board. It seems the mayor was trying to take all the power away from the aldermen in releasing Chief Langston today."

Accused Mayor

Rogers and Alderman Jenkins then said the mayor told them he wanted to get the job as chief of police for himself, and Rogers added, "I don't intend to sit up here on this board and see the mayor take all the power of the board for himself."

Mayor Page heatedly denied that he has ever made such a statement to Rogers and Jenkins or anyone else. Rogers then declared, "I think there's some underhand job-hunting by someone else. That's what I think."

The mayor brought out that he released Chief Langston effective November 1 because the chief requested it. "The chief is not being hired or fired, he is resigning," Page asserted, "and if he wants to leave anytime we can't hold him. That's why I agreed to his release November 1."

Splendid Chief

Relative to Chief Langston's resignation, Mayor Page said he has made a splendid chief. "I have never interfered with the police chief or any of the officers," he reiterated. "If Chief Langston's ideas and mine differed at any time they always went his way."

Alderman Rogers then moved to accept Gibbs' application and the motion was seconded by Alderman Elks. Capt. R. T. Rogerson will act as chief through November 15, and Gibbs will take over as permanent chief the following day.

Cars Collide On Bethel Highway

Two cars collided on the Bethel highway across Tar River, yesterday afternoon about 4:30.

The police report states that the car driven by Ralph C. Parkerson of Greenville collided with the rear of the car driven by Carrie R. Coffield of Robersonville. The investigating officer said the collision resulted from a confusion over signals.

Damage to the Parkerson car was estimated to be $100; the Coffield car, $25. No arrest; none injured.

Many Offices Of City, County To Close Tomorrow

Many of the public offices in Greenville—both city and county—will be closed tomorrow.

Due to the general elections to be held tomorrow all over the United States, the following offices in Greenville will be closed:

1. All offices at the city hall, including both city offices and the Greenville Utilities Commission.

2. All offices located in the Pitt County Courthouse.

It has been emphasized, however, that only county offices located in the courthouse will be closed.

Fair Weather On Election Day

WASHINGTON (UP)—The weather bureau today forecast generally fair election day weather for most of the nation tomorrow.

Only a few sections will have threatening weather conditions, the forecast said. It said showers are expected in extreme southern Florida, the mountains of northern New Mexico and southern Colorado, and coastal Washington and northern Oregon. Snow flurries are expected in the western Montana mountains.

India, Pakistan Forces Said In 24-Hour Battle

LONDON (UP)—Conflicting dispatches from India and Pakistan reported today a 24-hour battle between frontier forces of the two countries in the Punjab area.

Karachi, capital of Pakistan, said the fighting started Saturday night after "aggression" by Indian police on two Pakistan border villages.

Indian dispatches from Bombay said "heavy, 2-hour-long" fighting started after Pakistan police entered three Indian border villages and threatened a fourth.

Dispatches from both sides said the fighting ended with a cease-fire agreement between senior police officials.

There was no mention of casualties, despite descriptions of fighting with mortars and light machine guns.

possibility is establishment of a feed mill near the ports to use grain from upstate, molasses from the West Indies and fish meal from the coast—and then ship the finished feedstuffs to the west. Similar ideas have been suggested for the processing of other products from raw materials and shipping out the finished goods from North Carolina port.

MONEY—Did you know that a silver dollar is worth more than two halves or four dimes? The October monthly review of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond points out that silver dollars are authorized as legal tender. Silver money is 90 per cent silver and 10 per cent copper alloy, while the nickel is only 75 per cent being copper alloy. The interesting item is in the weight of silver coins. The dollar coin is required to weigh 412.5 grains; the half dollar weighs 192.9 grains, the quarter 96.45 grains and the dime 38.58 grains. In other words, in the silver dollar you have 412.5 grains of metal, while in two halves, or four quarters or ten dimes you have only 385.8 grains, or nearly seven cents less worth of silver. That same report says that if you have $100.02 in cash, you have your rightful share of all the paper currency and metal coins in circulation in the country. Currency and coin represents about 14 per cent of all "money," the rest being in intangible bank credits.
