Priority Voted For Indian Plan

United Nations Over-ride Russian Objections To Take Up India's Compromise Korean Peace Plan; American Proposal Shelved; Vishinsky Fails Block Action

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (UP)—The United Nations overrode Russia's lone objections today and voted priority in debate for India's compromise Korean peace plan.

By a vote of 49 to 5 with 1 abstention, the General Assembly's Political Committee put the Indian plan ahead of all other Korean proposals on the list for consideration.

Thus it shelved, with consent of the sponsors, a 21-power American-designed resolution and—over vigorous objections—a Russian proposal heavily loaded for the Communists.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky tried hard to throw the committee into a parliamentary brawl on the priority issue, but Western delegates refused to argue with him.

But Vishinsky persuaded only the five members of the Soviet bloc to vote against the priority resolution, originated by Iran. Nationalist China abstained.

The Russian foreign minister argued that it was against the committee's rules of procedure to put the Indian compromise plan head.

He declared that the 60-nation group must vote on the Korean proposals in the order in which they were presented—first the American plan and then the Russian, unless the United States and its co-sponsors failed to withdraw them.

When Vishinsky wanted to draw Western fire, he announced that he found it "regretful that the sponsors of this proposal find it impossible to come out in its defense."

There still was no reply, except from Iran's Nasrollah Entezam, who declared the priority resolution broke no rule of procedure.

The 21 co-sponsors of the American resolution voted in caucus last night to give priority in debate to the Indian measure and called for further "textual clarification" to make it fully acceptable to the West.

If India accepts the amendments, today's 49-5 vote was indicative of the eventual final ballot for passage of the Indian compromise, observers believed.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson skipped this morning's meeting. His place at the head of the American delegation was taken by John D. Hickerson, assistant secretary of state for U.N. affairs.

The 21 Western powers voted unanimously for priority to India's plan in a 50-minute meeting last night.

Rhee Said Ready To Back Down On 'Force' Demands

Korean President Is Convinced Forcible Unification Of Country Too Costly

SEOUL, Korea (UP)—Korean President Syngman Rhee will back down on his demands for unification of his country by military force in talks with U.S. President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower, qualified South Korean sources said today.

The sources said Rhee is convinced an invasion of North Korea at this time is unfeasible, especially in view of the economic status of South Korea.

Rhee's change of mind also was influenced by the heavy casualties the Republic of Korea army has suffered during the heavy fighting of the last few months, the sources said.

His long standing aim has been to unify Korea and he bitterly has opposed an armistice which would leave the country still divided.

The preparations for welcoming and safeguarding the President-elect reached a feverish tempo in Seoul today.

Koreans believed Eisenhower would arrive soon. School children were ordered to wait in school houses until 8 p.m. today to welcome "Ike."

As to the next President's safety, Mayor Kim Tai Sun of Seoul said he could guarantee Eisenhower will be "100 per cent safe" in the streets of Seoul.

"I know what I'm talking about," Kim said. "I used to be chief of police here and then I was chief of the national police. I have studied the Russian police system and I know we are better than they are."

Some American officials opposed Eisenhower's public appearance in this war-ravaged city twice occupied by the Reds and probably harboring Communist agents or "crackpots" who might try assassination.

But Kim said the city of Seoul was organized in 15-man "cells" alerted to spot any suspicious actions.

"We'll know immediately if the Communists try to start something. Our organization is built along the same lines as the Communists."

The entire South Korean cabinet arrived in Seoul today from the provisional capital at Pusan. This appeared to confirm talk that Eisenhower would hold meetings with Korean government officials in the Seoul area.

'Strong Cabinet' Shaping Up With Ike's Selections

Members Will Have Much To Do With Making Administration Policy

WASHINGTON (UP)—President-elect Eisenhower's choices for high office so far indicate that he seeks what is known around town as a "strong cabinet" which will have much to do with making administration policy.

Some presidents want it that way. Others do not. It is wholly a matter for a president to decide. Franklin D. Roosevelt, for example, did not depend much on his cabinet for policy decisions.

Jesse H. Jones, who served in and out of the Roosevelt cabinet, gives this peek at its operation in his book: "Fifty Billion Dollars."

"Matters of high governmental policy were seldom discussed at cabinet meetings. In opening the meeting, the President ordinarily would have something to say, but secretary of state if he had anything to report and went on down the line. There was not a great deal of discussion."

Some Roosevelt cabinet officers were forceful and effective in their own departments. Others were scarcely more than front men for decisions made entirely at the White House.

Mr. Roosevelt had a "brain trust" or "kitchen cabinet" to help him make high policy and the cabinet often heard about it later.

Most of the men Eisenhower has picked so far for his cabinet have large corporate business experience, either in management or as lawyers. They are decision and policy men in their own fields and, presumably, would expect their experience and judgment to carry some weight when administration decisions and policies are being made.

Acceptance of them on that basis would make for a "strong cabinet." Rejection of them as ineffective counsellors probably would make for difficulty and, ultimately, some cabinet vacancies.

The cabinet actually has no standing under the Constitution. The Constitution provides, merely, that the President may require the opinion, in writing, of the "principal officer" in each executive department "upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices."

Other Business Lilley, a former sergeant in the traffic division of the department, did not elaborate on his plans for the future but said yesterday afternoon he would remain in Pitt County in some other business capacity.

Yesterday's resignation leaves a vacancy in the traffic division, but Chief Gibbs declared this morning he will not elevate anyone from the ranks at the present time to fill the vacancy vacated by Lilley.

"However," the chief stated, "we do plan to replace Lilley with a new patrolman in the near future." He added that new applicants will be screened and investigated, then he will present his recommendations to the board of aldermen for consideration.

Informed Committee Chief Gibbs, who two weeks ago was sworn as Greenville's new chief of police to replace Guy C. Langston, disclosed he has already informed the police committee of Lilley's resignation yesterday.

Police Dept. Has A New Vacancy

Sgt. H. B. Lilley Resigns After Eighteen Months Of Service

As of yesterday afternoon the Greenville Police Department is short the services of one officer.

A policeman with the local department for the past 18 months, Sgt. H. B. Lilley submitted his resignation to Chief S. G. Gibbs late yesterday and immediately left the force.

Chief Gibbs said this morning Lilley made his resignation effective December 4, but as he had some vacation time due him under the accumulative leave time plan Lilley will not return to work.

Lilley, a former sergeant in the traffic division of the department, did not elaborate on his plans for the future but said yesterday afternoon he would remain in Pitt County in some other business capacity.

Yesterday's resignation leaves a vacancy in the traffic division, but Chief Gibbs declared this morning he will not elevate anyone from the ranks at the present time to fill the vacancy vacated by Lilley.

Informed Committee Chief Gibbs, who two weeks ago was sworn as Greenville's new chief of police to replace Guy C. Langston, disclosed he has already informed the police committee of Lilley's resignation yesterday.

Lilley was hired February 19, 1951, by former Chief Langston. He came to the Greenville force from Williamston, where he had been employed in other business.

ATLANTA (UP)—Sen. Richard Russell acknowledged Gov. Adlai Stevenson as "titular head" of the Democratic party today but indicated the defeated presidential candidate would have little say in party decisions.

Light Week

WASHINGTON (AP)—Announced U. S. battle casualties in Korea reached 126,997 today, an increase of 271 since last week.

This was the smallest weekly increase since June 18 when 259 casualties were reported.

The Defense Department said 46 were killed in action since the week before's report, making a total of 19,939.

Another Big Still Is Blown To Bits

Large Outfit Found In Woods Near Chicod; Operators Unknown

CHICOD—It rained alcohol-saturated mash and strips of lumber in a woods near here yesterday, but the unorthodox precipitation abated in a few moments.

It was not a freak of nature, however, because the unusual fall was preceded by a dynamite explosion which rocked the area—and the fuse was lit by Pitt County ABC officers.

"Chief" J. L. Taylor, member of the Pitt County ABC department, said this morning the local scourge of illicit whisky manufacturers destroyed the largest "still" yesterday since the one blown up at Grimesland last Spring.

The still was located on the lower edge of Chicod Township in the Chapman's Crossroads section near the Greene County line.

Full Of Mash Taylor reported there were 12 mash vats of 500-gallon capacity each, and five of them were full of mash. "The seven empty vats had recently been 'stilled' out," he said, "and it appeared the operators were waiting for the remaining five full vats to work off."

Thanksgiving Day Arrives At Front, Cold And Quiet

Blizzard Covers Wide Territory With Ice, Cold

At Least Twelve Are Killed By Storm Extending From Texas To Minnesota

OMAHA, Neb. (UP)—A prairie blizzard, blown by winds of up to 75-miles-per-hour, turned the sprawling territory from the Texas Panhandle to the Minnesota lake country into a frozen, glistening wasteland today and killed at least a dozen persons.

The storm caused the deaths of four persons in Nebraska alone. And the choking snow and treacherous ice were likely to cause more fatalities.

The stinging snow, driven almost horizontally by the gusty wind, will probably slow Thanksgiving travel to a crawl, even with the big rotary snowplows biting through the drifts.

But, rail, auto and air travel was completely paralyzed in Nebraska and throughout much of the Midwest. Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of motorists were trapped in their cars or in little wayside towns.

The storm hit the Great Plains states of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, the Dakotas and piled drifts high in Wisconsin and Minnesota. It hurled itself against the mountain states of Colorado, Wyoming and Montana, threatening stock herds.

A milder snowstorm moved into Illinois early today, and forecasters said snow flurries were likely for much of the state later today. The first fall hit Quincy and the Moline area.

It was a "warm" blizzard, with temperatures ranging generally in the 20's and the snowfall seldom heavier than six inches. But the gusty winds blew the snow into every draw, gully and road cut from Amarillo, Tex., to Rochester, Minn., isolating whole areas.

The Kansas National Guard was mobilized, with guardsmen turning back motorists at all roads leading out of Russell. Roads out of Wichita, Kan., were also closed, and Kansas border guards were halting cars at the Missouri border.

Many of the 6,000 University of Nebraska students who begin their Thanksgiving holiday today may have to spend it in dormitories at Lincoln. Bus transportation in the big Prairie State was almost paralyzed.

Natives of the Texas Panhandle say there is nothing between them and the Northpole except a barbed wire fence, and weathermen were inclined to agree, even though the snowfall in the far Southwest was diminishing.

As the low pressure storm system swung north and slightly eastward, it promised to bring more snow to the Northern tier of states. The Chicago weather bureau said there was no chance of a warm, thawing spell before Friday.

That meant trouble for thousands of persons who have their hearts set on a Thanksgiving trip.

Hot Turkey Dinners Carried In Insulated Containers To GIs In Battleline; Generals Note Cause For Thanks In Message To Troops; Planes Raid Red Center

SEOUL, Korea, Thurs. (UP)—Icy-cold weather and a lull in the fighting ushered in Thanksgiving Day today for American GIs huddled in trenches and foxholes along the 156-mile Korean battlefront.

The last major activity was a tremendous U.N. aerial attack yesterday on a sprawling Communist supply and troop center in eastern Korea. American fighter-bombers hurled tons of bombs and flaming jelled gasoline on the target, touching off huge fires and explosions.

As the ground war simmered to scattered patrol actions, GIs looked forward eagerly to the traditional Thanksgiving fare of hot turkey, dressing, cranberry sauce and pumpkin pie.

The dinner was sent to the front in insulated containers to keep it hot for the shivering soldiers, who had to eat it right away. Otherwise, it turned into a hard-icy mess in the bitter Korean weather.

United Press correspondent Victor Kendrick reported that a full moon shone over drifting wisps of overcast during the night along the central front, where the battle for Sniper Hill has raged for 42 days.

U.N. commander Gen. Mark Clark and 8th Army commander Gen. James A. Van Fleet took time out from preparing for President-elect Eisenhower's visit to Korea to issue Thanksgiving messages to their soldiers.

In Tokyo, Clark reminded the fighting men they still have much to be thankful for, despite the war. He said America's strength and courage, its high moral determination and the preservation of its dignity, freedom and rights as human beings were among their blessings.

"As we solemnly give thanks for these blessings, let us also pray that our determination and our faith shall never falter," he said.

Van Fleet, in Seoul, said that Americans at home were thankful that their loved ones in Korea have been spared. At the same time, he said their tears "will be shed for those of us who have gone to a better world, the men who gave their lives that we might live in freedom."

"Let us be thankful today that we are still free to celebrate this Thanksgiving Day," he said.

Yesterday's air attack was carried out by Air Force and Marine fighter-bombers on a vast Red center southwest of Wonsan, an important east coast port.

"The whole area was left in flames," one pilot reported. Others said they saw at least five secondary explosions, indicating the Allied attack destroyed stores of ammunition.

The fire sent towering billows of dense smoke swirling into the sky which prevented Allied pilots from making accurate observations of the results.

2 Cabinet Posts Still To Be Filled

Eisenhower Confounds Would-Be Timetable Writers By Staying On Job

NEW YORK (UP)—President-elect Eisenhower today confounded would-be timetable writers for his Korean trip by scheduling another full day of callers at his headquarters here.

While Eisenhower planned to leave for Korea shortly one thing was certain—he will not be there for Thanksgiving with the troops. When he does leave, his departure and his arrival in Korea will be secret under strict security regulations.

The President-elect still had two cabinet vacancies to announce—his secretaries of labor and commerce—and it was indicated he would disclose his nominees before the weekend along with several other who will fill top posts in the new administration.

Walter Williams, a Seattle mortgage banker who served as co-chairman of the Citizens for Eisenhower group during the campaign, still appeared to be the best bet for the Commerce Department post.

Williams appeared at Eisenhower headquarters in the Commodore Hotel for several hours Tuesday. While visiting the President-elect during his recent vacation at Augusta, Ga., Williams told reporters in answer to an admittedly hypothetical question, that he thought his business background made him better fitted for secretary of commerce than any other cabinet post.

Speculation ran wild on who Eisenhower had selected for secretary of labor. The latest name to appear in the "guessing derby" was M. J. Pitzele, chairman of the New York Mediation Board and a labor expert for the McGraw Hill Publishing Co. He was scheduled to meet with Eisenhower today.

Other callers on today's list included Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin of Maryland; Laurence F. Lee, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce; Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, assistant secretary of defense for manpower; Brig. Gen. Cornelius W. Wickersham, New York City attorney; Walker City stockbroker, and George Mantzinos, governor of the Bank of Greece.

McKeldin made the major nominating speech for Eisenhower at the GOR convention in Chicago and was a sparkplug in the campaign. Lee is an ardent supporter of GOP economic policy.

U. S. Steel Has New President

NEW YORK (UP)—The United States Steel Corp. has announced that Clifford F. Hood will succeed Benjamin F. Fairless as president of the world's largest steel producing firm on Jan. 1.

Hood, 58, who has been executive vice president of the U. S. Steel Co., a subsidiary of the corporation, was elected to the presidency of the parent firm yesterday.

Fairless relinquished the presidency May 6 this year when he was elected chairman and chief executive of the corporation. He had been president of the corporation since 1938.

Fewer Cases, Costs Up In Welfare Work

Ten new Old Age assistance cases were approved at a meeting of the Pitt County Welfare Board last week and 12 cases were closed.

Others cases approved and closed by board members included: Nine approved and four closed for Aid to Dependent Children; and four cases approved and two cases closed for Aid to the Totally and Permanently Disabled.

K.T. Furelle, superintendent of the welfare department, said with the change in the Federal participation in money for Old Age Assistance effective in October, the average grant has moved up about $4.00 a month per case.

There has been a drop of 67 Old Age Assistance cases during the year, Furelle stated, and for the same period, assistance is given to 33 fewer cases for Aid to Dependent Children.

Two Die In Crash Near Kinston

KINSTON (UP)—Two camp Lejeune Marines were killed and four others were injured, one seriously, when their car plunged off the road into a ditch about 15 miles north of here yesterday.

Highway patrolmen identified the two victims as Pfc. Robert W. Lex and Cpl. William R. Ross of the 2nd Marine Division. Pfc. Vernon P. Will was listed as critical at a hospital here.

The following personnel changes in the local welfare department have been made: Dorothy Bolton replaced Mrs. Peggy Evans as case work assistant; Mrs. Margaret Arledge, a transfer from Randolph County as case work assistant, replaced Mrs. Lena B. Reynolds; Mrs. Joyce Y. Smith replaced Mrs. Evelyn Green as case work assistant; and Mrs. Carrie G. Oakley is serving as temporary case work assistant while Paul Hodul is attending school.

Approximately $2,400 per month is being received and paid out to 78 families each month from persons under court order. The welfare department has requested those receiving money call for it on Friday afternoons and Mondays only. The superintendent said no information will be given over the telephone concerning the money.

Humber Reveals Art Society Is Willed Big Sum

RALEIGH (UP)—More than $200,000 will go to the State Art Society from the estate of the late Robert F. Phifer, North Carolina industrialist.

Robert Lee Humber of Greenville, chairman of the society, announced the legacy yesterday at a meeting of the executive committee here. He said officers of the New York Trust Co., trustee of the Phifer estate, told him the bequest became effective upon the death of Adeline W. Williamson of New York, niece of Phifer, on Nov. 9.

Terms of the will specify that the money can be used only to buy works of art or for construction of a museum to be named "Phifer Memorial Art Museum." Humber said. He said the sum was sufficient for construction of a suitable museum.

Last Confederate Veteran Of Two Carolinas Is Dead

ORANGEBURG, S. C. (UP)—Arnold Murray, 106, sole surviving Confederate veteran in the Carolinas, died at his home near here early today after an illness of about a week.

Death came at 12:15 a.m. to the bearded old veteran who had been active and healthy until he became ill last week. His death reduced to five the number of known surviving Confederate fighting men.

Several days ago, a delegation from the United Daughters of the Confederacy visited him and presented him with a cake. "Uncle Arnold" as the white bearded old gentleman was called, lived in a tiny, three-room farm house near here. He spent most of his time during the final years sitting in his rocking chair and listening to his radio through a hearing aid given him by friends.

Three Carloads Of Ammunition Explode In Fire

CHALONE-SUB-MARNE, France (UP)—Three freight cars of ammunition destined for the U. S. army in Germany exploded in a railroad yard here today.

American officers from three army posts rushed here to investigate whether the blast was an accident or sabotage. First reports said there were no casualties.

One car of the munitions train caught fire and set off the explosion.

French police evacuated all persons living and working within 2,000 feet of the scene. The railroad yard was roped off and passengers on other trains were forced to alight or get on trains outside the restricted area.

The blast ripped up tracks and all traffic through this rail junction city on the main Paris-Strasbourg line was stopped. Passenger trains were re-routed.

Women Surpass Own Goal In Chest Drive

The Women's Division of the Greenville Community Chest campaign has gone "over the top" in the quota which is "unofficially" assigned itself in the residential solicitation.

Chairman W. W. Lee had high praise for the excellent work of the workers in this division who were headed by Mrs. J. B. Cummings. To date, the Chest has received $10,000 toward the goal of $14,000.

"There's a lot of work involved in the ringing of doorbells and collecting the 'small change' from home-makers' purses," Mrs. Cummings said, "but the women are proud to have had a part in financing the activities of the Community Chest and supporting the agencies represented in the organization in the current campaign."

Reports are lagging from many teams, and Chairman Lee is urging workers to complete their canvassing in the areas assigned. All reports should be received by the end of this week, Lee said.

Mrs. Cummings reported the workers in her division included: Mesdames J. J. Perkins, K. B. Pace,

Joint Hostesses To Sunday School Class

The Wesley Philatha Class met at the home of Mrs. V. P. Scoville, Monday evening. Assisting hostesses were Mrs. Wiley Brown, Miss Addie Johnston, Mrs. Cora S. Powell, Mrs. W. D. Bailey, and Mrs. C. T. Munford. The meeting was opened with prayer led by Mrs. K. T. Futrell, after which Mrs. A. W. Baker led the devotional. Her thoughts were based on Scripture taken from Psalm 116:12 "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me?" She said, "We must express our gratitude to God for His blessings by the right and proper use of our talents, and material possessions. And if we were not thankful enough to serve Him as a token of our gratitude there is a false note in our formal expressions. Most important is the dedication of our lives in personal service." After devotional, roll was called with 23 members present. The report from the treasurer was given and dues collected. The minutes were read by Mrs. J. R. Barker in the absence of Secretary Mrs. E. L. Willard. The class decided to consult Mr. K. T. Futrell concerning a worthy, needy family to be helped at Christmas. Following the business session one of Mrs. Rose's students, Miss Gayle Clapp, gave a reading called "Jane." Delicious refreshments of fruit cake and block cream were served by the hostesses.

Antique Show Well Attended

ROBERSONVILLE—The annual antique show which the O. E. S. sponsors in November was well attended by the people of this community and the many yearly visitors from a distance. Although the weather was very bad both days, Wednesday and Thursday, the nineteenth and twentieth, more than 150 registered. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Harrison of Wilmington, N.C. and Mrs. J. A. Binford of South Hill, Va., a newcomer, had a big display of beautiful furniture, mirrors, oil paintings, pictures, silver, china, jewel cases and lamps. Mrs. Reeves, who has been here for several years, was unable to be present. Knowing that the people in this county are very interested in her lovely painted handmade lamp shades, she sent a supply of her work. The members of the Chapter had an apron sale which quickly ended by the rapid buying of their handiwork which covered the walls of the cloak room in the Masonic Hall. There was a nice variety of kitchen aprons, some were for cloths and there were several gorgeous, dressy sheers. Meals were served in the building at noon and at 6 o'clock. Wednesday's menu was a fried chicken dinner and a cold plate. Thursday the ladies served oysters and a salad plate. Punch, cookies and Ritz were served to all the guests. Admission to the antique show was fifty cents.

Mrs. Thomas Wilson Continues Club Study On The Bible

Mrs. Thomas E. Wilson was hostess to the Lector Book Club on Tuesday, November 18. The president, Mrs. Louis Gaylord Jr. opened the meeting and welcomed Mrs. William Brown, Mrs. Bancroft Moseley and Mrs. V. C. Fleming Jr. as guests for the afternoon. The club voted to buy $3.00 worth of T.B. Seals and after a discussion voted to help two or three families for Christmas. Mrs. Wilson gave the program using the Book of Ruth in the Old Testament. She brought out the fact that the Book of Ruth is an idyll that will not let the world forget the dream of a happy home and homeland. The book puts a gleam of brightness into the first stages of Israel's history of lawlessness and homelessness. A fact of interest is that Moabites Ruth, one who is non-Israelite, is represented as the ancestress of the House of David. Mrs. Wilson then served a dessert course with coffee. The books were distributed and the club adjourned.

Strength for the Day

A THANKSGIVING PRAYER
Almighty God, gentle in thy love for us and for all thy children, look upon us with mercy as at this season we offer to Thee—sincerely, though in halting tones—our thanksgiving for thy blessings to us and to our loved ones.
We thank Thee for plentiful harvest, for the full employment of our people, for the many blessings and comforts which this great land of ours makes possible. We remember thy many preservations of us and the times without number that Thou hast placed thy hand between us and an assaulting multitude of circumstances. We live in a land for which we give Thee thanks, and amid liberties which we prize higher than our lives. We thank Thee for the homes in which we live, for the offices and mills in which we work, for the farms on which many are privileged to toil with Thee in the production of food.
Our gratitude goes up to Thee as we look upon our churches and in their spires reaching to heaven see the aspirations of our souls set forth. Bless with every material blessing our land and us, but especially vouchsafe to us and to our loved ones preservation of body, mind and soul, and the growth of such faith in Thee that we may lay hold upon the gift of eternal life.
Keep us from the further ravages of war, and especially bless the gallant men who at this time are standing firm in the defense of human liberty. In Christ's name we ask all these things. Amen.

Another Season Of Thanksgiving

Another season of Thanksgiving is at hand.
The golden harvest has been reaped and the nation pauses a moment to give thanks to the Almighty for His bountiful blessings of another year.
No nation in the world has as much for which to be thankful as the United States. No nation, no matter how torn or how miserable the circumstances in which it finds itself, has not many things for which to be thankful in this season.
The same is true of the individual. Each has a great deal for which to be grateful to Him who is the Creator and Preserver of all life.
On that wintry day in 1621 when the humble little band of pilgrims gathered to offer up thanks to the Almighty, they were mindful that their achievement was not of their own doing, but was consummated in the strength of their God. For their very lives, for their very freedom to offer thanks in their own way, they were grateful.
Yet their existence on that first Thanksgiving Day was miserable indeed compared with the life even the most destitute person in the United States has today.
Today as we look out across this great nation, we are aware, as were the Pilgrims, that the richness, the abundance, the beauty and the power which the United States represents would not have been, save by the grace of Almighty God.
We are aware that the individual blessings which come with health, a family and loved ones; freedoms which have been handed down from generation to generation; the way of life which we enjoy, were not wrought by the efforts of man alone.
We, like the Pilgrims, are insufficient in ourselves.
We, like the Pilgrims, must find in our inner selves the desire to offer up our individual prayers of Thanksgiving for the fruits of another year — for the fruits which have grown to maturity and abundance through the generations in the New World.
Another Thanksgiving Day finds the men of the world locked in deadly strife. It finds parts of the world wrecked and bleeding because of the greediness, the folly of men.
Yet in the midst of the strife, there is so much for which each of us has to be thankful. There is so much for which thanks should be given to Almighty God.

A Little Story Of Serious Import

It was a small article in most newspapers throughout North Carolina.
Most of the readers probably scanned the headline and let it pass, thinking it of little consequence and of no personal interest to them.
For every citizen of the Tar Heel state, it was an important story. It was a barometer of the people's carelessness — and it indicated a rise. It told of the few additional dollars which must come out of the pockets of every owner of a motor vehicle in the state. Added together it meant some three million dollars added to the "living expenses" of the families of the state.
Effective this week automobile liability insurance premiums in North Carolina were authorized to jump $4 to $8 for private automobiles and $8 to $15 for commercial vehicles.
Insurance Commissioner Waldo Cheek in connection with the announced increase in the cost of automobile liability insurance in North Carolina said the public hearings held on the matter clearly showed the old rates were not adequate to take care of the present and future losses resulting from highway and traffic mishaps in the state.
In more down-to-earth terms, the announcement meant the accident rate in North Carolina has increased to the point it is necessary for the insurance companies to have more money in order to assume the risk of insuring automobiles used in North Carolina. Because of steadily rising losses in highway accidents in the state since the auto inspection legislation was done away with, it was necessary that the rates for liability insurance be increased.
It means more than just a few more dollars out of the automobile owners' pockets. It means every time a person gets in a motor vehicle in the state, he has less chance of arriving at his destination without mishap than he did a few years back. His chances of having an accident are increasing almost daily.
Certainly the situation should prompt the 1953 General Assembly to give new consideration to auto inspection laws and other legislation to help cope with the highway problem which is becoming more serious in North Carolina every year.
Certainly the situation should prompt individual citizens to take greater precaution while traveling by motor vehicle.
Highway safety is everybody's business.
In North Carolina, unfortunately, highway and traffic safety is rapidly becoming the business of only the Highway Patrol and other law enforcement officers.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—Such technical terms as "re-examination" and "de-authorization" will become increasingly familiar to Congress and the American people under the Eisenhower Administration's plan to cut Federal expenditures by $10 billion for fiscal 1954 and an additional $10 billion in the following year.
Such economies in the swollen budgets of recent years may permit a possible reduction of 10 or 12 per cent from the current peak rates, which now produce a revenue of almost $70 billion annually.
The transfer of this amount from the tax collectors' bill to consumers for spending or investment is regarded by economists as one safeguard against a serious recession, when rearmament outlays decline to more normal levels.
CONTROL LOST—Several Capitol Hill committees have been studying Federal finances in executive sessions during the summer. Their surveys show that Congress has lost complete control of public monies because it has been giving a blank check for long-range purposes and the downtown spenders, and then forgotten about and failed to police the handout branch of the government.
Unless this careless and wasteful system is revised in accord with proposals to be submitted to the 83rd session early next year, it is estimated that Federal agencies will enjoy the exclusive power of derelict purpose and program for using this vast amount may become obsolete.
UNEXPENDED BILLIONS—The military, for instance, now have an unexpended balance of almost $60 billion, and President Truman is expected to ask for another $40 billion for the 1954 fiscal year, which ends on June 30 of that year. The total will represent funds allocated over a 3-year period.
During that time there have been tremendous advances in such weapons as planes, tanks, artillery, etc., not to mention the many hundreds of billions of dollars spent on the H-bomb. Large-scale production, naturally, has reduced the cost per unit for many of these war items, despite inflation. Even strategy and tactics have been revised.
Defense, however, is never asked to review its actual household needs and costs today, as against conditions which existed when they first presented their requests for funds. There has been an era of blind appropriating and blind spending at both ends.
CONDITIONS DENOUNCED—Senator Bridges of New Hampshire has promised an inquiry and review that may disclose what he regards as "scandalous conditions." Since he may be Senate Majority Leader, and also will have his choice of chairmanship of the Appropriations and Armed Services Committees, his attitude will make the Pentagon "snap into it." It is the presence of a military expert in the White House to be discounted.
"The whole defense program," says Bridges, "needs a top-to-bottom re-examination, reevaluation and possibly de-authorization of some funds already appropriated."
"The record is already replete with faulty procurement, purchases of antiquated equipment, failure to install economies on the basis of new discoveries and deficiency in war materials vitally needed in Korea and elsewhere. Congress must review the total military budget, past and present, and do it continuously."
OTHER AGENCIES CRITICIZED—Two other Presidential agencies—Interior and the Army Engineers—have also been hauled over the coals at these committee sessions for their handling of public funds. It is estimated that they have ancient appropriations and authorizations totaling from $10 billion to $20 billion for river and harbor projects, waterpower structures, reclamation, irrigation, etc.
Many of these construction and conservation jobs are now unnecessary because of economic, geographic, population, agricultural and industrial shifts in the affected areas. Local interest, state or regional, often rescind their earlier requests for proposed improvements. But both agencies will go ahead with the obsolete program, albeit with superficial modifications, unless Congress intervenes.
With the Democrats in control of Congressional committees and downtown departments, all attempts to install this businesslike system have been blocked. Now, the GOP economists have a chance to regain a grip on the public purse by constant review through the processes known as "re-examination" and "de-authorization."
It is the only method that can produce budget economies and tax cuts of any substantial size!

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.
Attention: 1124 former Third Graders of the Greenville Training School. Your teacher, Mrs. Lindsay Savage, will play the part of Laurette Carpenter Styles in the Greenville Little Theater production of "Ring Around Elizabeth" to be presented in West Greenville School Auditorium December 8th and 9th. Perhaps you have seen your former teacher in other dramatic roles, but this one should top them all.
Monday night at rehearsal Mrs. Savage and I figured up the approximate number of Third Graders she has taught since she started in 1918. We agreed that West Greenville Auditorium couldn't possibly hold all 1124 of them. We also agreed that "Ring Around Elizabeth" is a delightful comedy that will warrant a full house, former Third Graders or not. Mrs. Savage is modest about her part.
One.
Other Greenville people in the play include James Savage, Patsy Baker, Annie Laurie Askew, Bert Sudor, Betty Gordon, Betty Pott Young, Katherine Walsh, Claude Taylor, Gay Ganagey and Joe Trotman.
The lead is played by Betty Gordon, Greenville's assistant Director of Recreation. Her husband is played by Claude Taylor of the Guarany Band.
Directing the play is Don Hower, one of the illustrations of the value of the DuPont plant coming to this area. Don has been with DuPont since 1936 and has been living in the same place, Danville, Pa., since 1937. Being transferred after living in the same place for 15 years was quite a concern to Don and his family at first, but they are well pleased with Greenville. "People are very friendly here," he says, "that we don't feel at all like strangers."
The Little Theater group is very fortunate to have a man of Don's talent as director of "Ring Around Elizabeth." Before going with DuPont he taught high school English and music in New Jersey and Pennsylvania. And Don has the necessary patience for directing a play, Monday night during the rehearsal of the second act he ironed out the rough spots with the greatest of ease.
One member of the cast, Annie Laurie Askew, is a charter member of the Greenville Little Theater group. She plays the part of Vida in the play. In rehearsal, Bert Sudor, in the part of 18-year-old Jennifer, acts more like 18 than an 18-year-old. And Bert is 28.
One glance at rehearsal would convince you that you should be there when the curtain goes up, and another consideration: all the profit goes to charity.
And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

By LYNN NISBET
BARDEN — Congressman Graham A. Barden is not at all unhappy about losing chairmanship of the Committee of Labor and Education in the House of Representatives. He said the other day that while the naturally regretted loss of Democratic Control in the Congress and his own demotion in prestige, his disappointment was not as great as his feeling of relief from the intense pressure to which he had been subjected during the past two sessions. His situation is somewhat like that of the soldier who wanted no place in the army between buck private and general, because in all the others the hours and the pay was not in proportion to the responsibility and the work. Your reporter has not had opportunity to interview other committee chairmanships to Republicans, but secondhand information is they share Barden's opinion.
RANKIN — The newsmen who cover Capitol square, particularly the Governor's office, are generally pleased at Governor Umstead's choice of a secretary. Fears that they might experience difficulty in getting along with the new Governor were largely dispelled when it was learned that Ed Rankin would be the man with whom they would deal. Experienced in general news reporting, at the editorial desk, and in the fields of both governmental and private industry public relations, Ed Rankin enjoys the respect and confidence of the reporters. Handling the press will be only a small part of the duties imposed on the new secretary, but it is an important part and the one with which the newspaper and radio folks are most directly concerned. If all Governor Umstead's appointments are as good as his first one, he'll get along all right for the next four years.
SPEULATION — Announcement of his private secretary and imminently expected selection of a legislative liaison man will stop discussion as to these appointments, but will accentuate speculation about other jobs to be filled by Governor Umstead.
DAMAGE — That brings up an interesting question of the narrow distinction between freedom of the press and liability for alleged damage done to the reputations of persons named in the speculative stories. If a considerable number of people have been heard to say that Joe Doakes is in line for the job now held by John Doe, should the newspapers print the story? If they do print it, does John Doe have the right to claim he has been damaged by suggestion of his replacement? And if Richard Roe also wants the job, does he have cause for resentment that he wasn't mentioned as a suitable candidate along with Joe Doakes and maybe a dozen others? In one instance the man who is in claims he has been damaged by suggestion of replacement, and in the other one of the many outside claims he has been damaged because some other names were used and his was not as a suitable successor.
EXAMPLES — There is pending now in Wake county Superior Court a libel suit for $100,000 damages claimed by Robert W. Redwine for that in a weekly newspaper column signed by James H. Pou Bailey it was said he was interested in getting money for organizing a movement for Eisenhower in North Carolina. That item is on court records. Many others of alleged damage by omission from prospect lists or of suggestion that certain persons were in line for particular jobs to the detriment of their business standing or employment, are not of court record and cannot be reported with names and dates. One man who used to be with the State and now has a good business of his own told your reporter he had been embarrassed by frequent appearance of his name as one likely to get a good State appointment, the suggestion in printed stories having no authorization either from him or from Governor Umstead. His relatively new private business connection suffered actual damage because some newspaperman, knowing he would be a good official and zealous to get a scoop, handled his name around in a speculative story. It is commonly understood that public officials are proper subjects for criticism and speculation. The extent to which newspapers can go in talking about private citizens without their consent is not definitely established. Freedom of the press does not and should not give license for damaging

What Other Papers Are Thinking

Will have to go deeper (Greensboro Daily News)
Some progress on a problem which has grown worse and worse in North Carolina, as it affects the public interest and concern, appears in the office with announcement from Raleigh that a special commission, set up by the 1951 General Assembly, will meet this week to try to formulate a report on uniform procedures for the 22 state licensing boards.
These, if you need to be reminded, are largely self-regulatory boards created by the Legislature and endowed with the full authority and responsibility of the state to set standards, give examinations and have the power of life and death where anyone wishes to enter the profession, craft, trade or whatever you prefer to call the areas which they regulate.
So far as the Daily News is concerned, relief in this regulatory business will have to go much deeper than mere uniformity of procedures. That will help. In our opinion the ailment of many, if not most, of these boards is organic. Their creation, the powers, which are left to them, their unaccountability to anybody tend more to self-interest than to public interest. That is the growing feeling among the public itself; there has been sharp criticism and substantial evidence can be marshaled to justify it. There have been too much freezing out, the name of public protection, and failure of certain of the boards to do the clean-up job which has also been turned over to them in their respective professions.
This turning of the authority and the power of the state over to professional, trade or craft groups is serious indeed. Where it is turned over, there should be public representation of some kind and a higher accountability which is not to be found now under the law. The regulatory boards, commissions and what-not go their way; and that, public interest, concern and victimization to the contrary, is that. There can be recourse to the courts, but that is cumbersome, long-drawn-out, costly and, in one or two professions at least, about as needless as it is ineffective.
This special commission, the Legislature set somebody with a broad perspective, which paragon the public interest ought to go beyond surface treatment of procedures and get at the unsatisfactory heart of this whole self-regulatory business.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
There are unexploited opportunities in the use of perfumes in merchandising, in the opinion of E.D. Kilmer, a scientist with an educated nose. He is said by associates in Lever Brothers laboratories to be able to recognize and identify odors of hundreds of individual perfume raw materials and to be able to name the majority of the components of many complex perfume blends as they appear in a bar of soap.
Tests, Mr. Kilmer said, have revealed the latent power of odors in selling many articles. Two identical lots of hosiery were displayed in a department store. One lot was scented. It sold out twice as quickly as the other.
A group of men, answering a questionnaire, said they preferred shaving cream without perfume. Each man was then sent two tubes of shaving cream, identical in all respects except that one was scented. Ninety per cent reported the perfumed cream was better.
"Men are self-conscious about scents," he said. "Furthermore, they are more voluble in expressing their dislikes than their likes. So they usually say they do not like perfumes."
"They readily admit liking cheese and smoke odors and most will concede they like woody odors, like the perfumes in the spruce, pine, bergamot and citrus groups. There is also a strong suspicion in men like the floral scents but won't admit it."
Scents are already being used to help sell other articles in addition to soaps and toilet goods. Perfumes are used to disguise certain less-than-pleasant odors in some kinds of plastics and tweedy and smoky scents have improved sales of leather goods. Offensive odors in industrial materials are frequently smothered with more agreeable odors. The use of disguising flavors in medicine is centuries old.
Further tests, Mr. Kilmer suggested, might show that woody and smoky scents might increase the sale of men's sports jackets and other apparel. A small amount of scent might make lubricating oils and household materials preferred over non-scented brands. Everything else being equal, the addition of pine, cedar and other wood odors to the packaging of saws, hammers, nails, etc., or the addition of woody scents to hunting and fishing equipment, or of floral odors to garden tools, might give them a competitive advantage.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK (AP) — Every man's life is a long war between the angel of neatness and the devil of disorder.
In any case the devil has had a hammerlock on the angel as long as I can remember.
I like it that way. My two greatest heroes of the Twentieth Century are the Collyers, elderly brothers who spent a lifetime filling their old brownstone mansion with fabulous junk.
Whenever I speak longingly of building a home, my wife, Frances, says:
"Where do you want to build it in the center of the city dump?"
She has this attitude because she has spent 15 hopeless years trying to cure me of the incurable habit of collecting trash and holding on to things that perhaps were better thrown away.
"You have never learned the art of letting go of things," she says. "Don't you know that is everything but your fingernail clippings, and I wouldn't be surprised to find you were storing them away someplace."
Well, I'm not that bad. But I have my own pet theory, too, about people who throw everything away—they are afraid of the past. I know a man who has such a passion for neatness that as soon as he unwraps one issue of a magazine, he throws the previous issue away, read or unread.
"I like to feel I start my life afresh every morning," he boasts proudly.
And all I can feel about him is that he must have a terrible existence.
The love of old things is a warming and sustaining thing, assuring a man of the silent company of many inanimate friendships.
Any man's mind is invariably a warehouse of the past. His home ought to be that, too. And so should his clothing. I am against the new vestless suits because they give a man four fewer pockets in which to store the souvenirs of his daily life—theater stubs, the cards of acquaintances, broken pencils, spare shoestrings and unanswered letters.
The future home I daydream of will have, first of all, a tremendous basement and a mighty attic. The basement is for my wife to keep as bare and clean as she houses.
"But the attic is for me to mess up anyway I want to," I tell her. "It will be locked and there will be a sign on the door saying, 'no admissions—this means you.'"
"If you do I'll call the fire department, and they'll break down the door with an ax. Rover," she says. "You can't create a fire hazard even on your own property. That's the law."
Law or not I am going to fix that attic against the rainy day of retirement. It is going to have 26 big storage trunks in it, each one initialed with a letter of the alphabet. Each trunk will be a treasure box of the things along the way I have worn, or gathered, or saved—the little leftover souvenirs of living that helped or hurt.
Old magazines will go in the trunk marked "M," old shoes in the one labeled "S," old letters in the one that says "L," and miscellaneous objects will be stored under "X."
"What are you going to put in the 'A' trunk—apparel or apple cores?" jeers Frances.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS
WASHINGTON—Col. Welf Wickliffe, whose parents wanted her to study music when she was a girl in West Union, S.C., today heads up one of the youngest and most unique corps in the nation's military organization. She is chief of the Women's Medical Specialist Corps, made up of dietitians, physical therapists and occupational therapists.
"There are some 600 of us, all members of the Army's medical team, devoted to the same single mission of safeguarding the health and well-being of the American soldier," she told me. "But we need to grow. We're seeking some 40 per cent more recruits."
Col. Wickliffe says members of her corps are serving in all overseas theaters, including Europe, the Far East, the Caribbean and Hawaii. "Our dietitians in the Far East are meeting the dietary requirements of a polyglot army composed of men from 20 nations who have joined American forces under the U.N. flag," she said. "In Germany our physical therapists are doing an outstanding job in getting disabled troops back on the job in record time. Our occupational therapists, wherever they are serving, are actively participating in a rehabilitation program... for orthopedic patients and those suffering from other disorders... which we believe is unsurpassed."
Col. Wickliffe, a slender and attractive brunette, was made chief of the corps a year ago after serving as chief dietitian of the Japan Logistical Command and dietetic consultant for the Far East Command. She received a Legion of Merit citation for her work in revamping hospital food service in this area.
An authority on military diet planning, she had been with the Army's specialist program since 1929—long before there was a Specialist Corps. She completed her dietetic internship at Walter Reed Hospital, served as staff dietitian until 1930 and came back six years later as chief dietitian. She got started on her career in 1921 when as a freshman at Winthrop College at Rock Hill, S.C., she decided to major in home economics instead of music.
"Like many Southern girls I'd been shoed out of the kitchen, so I didn't know much about domestic science first hand," she said. "But when I looked over the field for something I wanted to do, I decided home economics was the coming thing."
Col. Wickliffe is a talented hostess and loves to travel. She says she's always shopping for things to add charm and color to her home. She picked up a porcelain vase in the Russian Zone of Germany. An old brass candle warmer in Amsterdam, a marquette watch in Switzerland and hats and gloves in Paris.

Purge Trials In Czechoslovakia Point Up Tragedy

By PHIL NEWSOM
United Press Foreign News Editor

The great Communist purge trials in Prague point up the full measure of Czechoslovakia's tragedy.

The story is more than "confessions" of treason, espionage and sabotage by a few fallen Red leaders. They all have blood on their hands.

Their current "confessions" could be as phony as a three-dollar bill, and their immediate fate still be of small concern to the rest of the world.

The real story is what has happened to the Czech people.

The trials are merely the climax to four years of terror for 12,000,000 Czechs, whose nation today bears no resemblance to the free nation founded by Thomas G. Masaryk and Edouard Benes, or to the nation which, dead, was reborn after the fall of Hitler.

Along the way has been the unceasing campaign against the Catholic Church, which today is being extended against the Jews.

It has been four years of false charges, secret arrests and the purge of thousands whose chief crime was that they believed in a free Czechoslovakia.

We have had some classic examples of Communist "justice" in the last few years. One was the phony trial of American newsman William Oatis in Prague. Another was that of American businessman Robert Vogeler in Budapest, Hungary.

Oatis is still in jail. Vogeler and a few others have returned to tell how this "justice" works.

One wonders whether the present defendants also got the water treatment, the ice cold cells, the hours of questioning and the other physical and mental tortures. Or if, knowing the efficiency of their own methods, they "confessed" quickly.

Not many will waste sympathy over the fate of Vladimir Clementis, former foreign minister, or of one-time party secretary general Rudolf Slansky, or of any of the other 12 defendants in the current trials.

There was ironic justice in the trembling "confession" that tumbled from Slansky's lips last week in the courtroom adjoining Prague's grim Pankrac Prison.

It was in that same courtroom, in a trial staged and masterminded by Slansky, that Oatis heard Communist sentence passed on him. Even the judge, prosecutor and defense lawyer were the same.

Clementis, too, might have given a fleeting thought to the past and to the short life of a foreign minister under the Czech Reds. He took over after Jan Masaryk, son of Czechoslovakia's founder and last foreign minister under a free Czech regime, fell to his death from a courtyard window in Prague.

The indications are that both Clementis and Slansky fell victim to their own ambitions, that they lost a fight within the party that has caused thousands of others to be purged from the rolls.

It is interesting that the instrument used against them is the same that they applied to more honest men.

New Device Can Mix Paints To Desired Color

NEW YORK (AP)—A new push the precise color of a sample in less than 90 seconds. The mechanism, known as the automatic color carousel, mixes paint to match a selected color chip, putting into a container just the right amount of various colors to match the original.

The machine takes about half the space of an office desk. It stores specially formulated liquid colors in containers housed in a varicolored revolving drum atop its counter-high base and measures them with laboratory accuracy into cans of base paints, enamels or stains.

Through selective mechanical and electronic controls, code numbers on the color chips are transferred by dial settings into the matching color in flat, semi-gloss, gloss or deep-tone wall paint, house paint, floor enamel, decorative enamel or pigmented stain. The device was developed by Standard-Toch Chemicals Inc.

Porcupines Are Tree-Killers

DENVER (AP)—You can include the U.S. Forest Service among those that don't like porcupines. They are unsociable critters with all those quills and, besides, they are "murder" on trees.

Arthur L. Nelson, assistant regional forester here, says porcupine damage to timber in the Rocky Mountain area is getting serious. A single porcupine can damage or kill as many as 100 trees in a winter. They like to climb up a tree and eat the bark away in a complete circle, thus shutting off the flow of sap.

Robersonville Windsup As Coastal Conference Champ

The Coastal Conference football championship now has been delivered to the Robersonville Rams through courtesy of Ayden and Farmville.

At the end of conference play this season, Ayden's Tornados had defeated Farmville, Robersonville, Vanceboro and South Edgecombe, entitling them to retain the Coastal Conference championship.

However, it was discovered that through an unprecedented error, Ayden had played an ineligible player during the season. A conference meeting resulted in Ayden relinquishing the conference championship to runner-up Farmville and crossing out all conference victories.

At the same conference meeting, Charles Spencer, chairman of the State Advisory Committee on Athletics, interpreted the new state rules governing high school athletics in such a manner that Coach Charles Tucker of Farmville became uncertain of the eligibility of one of his players.

Sparks Polio Drive

A check with Morris Clary, principal of the conference, concluded that Farmville also had used an ineligible player during the season. Coach Tucker immediately withdrew Farmville's victories and Robersonville is now Coastal Conference champion.

C. B. Martin, principal of Robersonville High School, said in a telephone conversation this morning, "We didn't know anything about any ineligible players until a letter, stating Farmville's ineligibility, arrived yesterday from Sam Bundy, Farmville principal. Mr. Bundy's letter stated that Farmville was withdrawing their conference victories because of the ineligible player."

The 1953 March of Dimes program will get underway in January. Sports activities have always played a large role in the program and this year there is an even greater need Grantland Rice, dean of American sports writers, again heads national sports drive for MARCH OF DIMES, January 2-31, and urges all sports promoters, athletic directors, graduate managers and everyone connected with sports to lend a helping hand. The need is greater than ever so please contact your local campaign director and do all you can to help in the fight against infantile paralysis.

Eddie Stanky Is NL Top Manager

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP)—Stormy Eddie Stanky, the little banty rooster boss of the Cardinals, received the United Press National League Manager of the Year Award today for his scrappy work in bringing them home third in his first year on the job.

The rookie pilot, just as spirited on the bench as when he battled all comers as a second baseman, wrangled with opposing players and managers, sports writers, umpires, and even his own team. Although listed as a player-manager, he saw little playing service except as a pinch hitter when he frequently worked his specialty of wheeling walks in critical situations.

Actually, Stanky did not improve the Cardinals in the standings, because they also finished third in the 1951 campaign. Marty Marion got fired by President Fred Saigh for that job. However, Stanky had the club in pennant contention much of the while and finished with seven more victories than the Cardinals gained in 1951. They wound up 8 1-2 games out of first place, compared to 15 1-2 out for Marion's club.

Stanky was named on 10 out of 24 ballots for the award, winning comfortably from chipper Charley Dressen, the Dodger pilot, who received five votes. Leo Durocher of the Giants, the 1951 winner, Steve O'Neill of the Phillies and Bill Meyer of the Pirates, who never quit on his frightful last-place club, also received consideration.

Three East Carolina Stars On N. State All-Conference

Shoe, Cherry And Holland Selected For First Team

Dwight Shoe Is Unanimous Choice; Dick Cherry Is The Only Freshman Member

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Sports Writer

End Dwight Shoe, tackle Willie Holland, and freshman quarterback Dick Cherry of the East Carolina College Pirates have been named as members of the 1952 All North State Conference team. The squad was selected in a poll of conference coaches.

The poll was sponsored by the Greensboro Daily News and conducted by sports writer Moses Crutchfield.

Shoe, a senior from Salisbury and a leading candidate for Little All-America honors, was one of four unanimous selections for the team. This was his second year as a member of the team. Cherry, the former Washington High School All-Stater, is the only freshman member of the squad.

Lenoir Rhyne's undefeated Bears, striking tomorrow for their second straight conference championship, dominate the selections. Their first-string backfield—fullback Steve Trudnak, blocking back Jim Garrett, and halfbacks Gene and Jerry Robinson—forms half of the eight man backfield picked by the coaches.

In the line, the Bears contributed end Giles Setzer, tackle Harold Eeksky, and guards Bob Mauer and Arden Ray. There were three Lenoir Rhyne players who made honorable mention.

In addition to Shoe and Trudnak, Appalachian's Jack Groce and Catawba's Harold Carter were both unanimous selections.

Every football playing member of the conference, with the exception of Western Carolina, placed at least two men on the team. Lenoir Rhyne led the way with eight players. East Carolina, Catawba, Elon, and Appalachian placed three each and Guilford, a team which has failed to win a conference game thus far, placed two.

East Carolina Selections

Shoe, a leading end in North State Conference football for four years, earned his place on the team with a brilliant offensive and defensive record. On offense, he caught 24 passes for 323 yards and three touchdowns. On defense, he was the leader of a stout East Carolina line which brought six wins and two ties in a nine game schedule.

Holland made the team largely through his work on the defensive unit of East Carolina's two-platoon system. A sophomore from Wilson, the 220-pounder teamed with Shoe to give the Pirates one of the strongest end-tackle combinations in the conference's history.

Cherry is one of those football players that coaches dream about. After a brilliant high school record at Washington, he was ticketed for Wake Forest but left the Baptist school after a couple of days. He walked into the East Carolina training camp, asked for a chance to try out for the team, and was made low man on the totem pole in a list of four quarterbacks.

The rise of Cherry to college stardom was a glittering rise. He saw little action in the first two games of the season but was thrown head-first into action in the game with Lenoir Rhyne. Since then, he's been Coach Jack Boone's ace in the hole.

He turned in brilliant work in every game but the last two when he was hampered by a painful rib injury. Even then, however, he managed to pull the crowd to its feet in the final game of the year when he and Shoe collaborated on a 64-yard pass play that spring-boarded the Pirates to a 34-7 win over West Virginia Tech.

In addition to the three members of the 22 man squad, the Pirates had eight men, make honorable mention.

Greenville JV's Win Over Belvoir

By WAYNE BISHOP

BELVOIR — Greenville High School's junior varsity basketball team swamped a thoroughly outclassed Belvoir squad 45-18 last night.

Sharpshooters Tommie Sateed, Harry Scott and Ike Riddick quicked the Green Phantoms to a quick lead which was never surrendered as the Phantoms pulled away from the county school.

The Phantoms' zone defense spoiled any attempts at an offensive show by Belvoir. Belvoir tried their hand at such a defense but it was broken up by the accuracy of Scott and Sateed who were hitting on their set shots.

Scott, hitting from the outside, and Riddick, leader in the fast-breaking offense, shared the scoring honors with 11 points. Sateed tipped in nine points.

Defensive play was led by 6-5 Clark Nobles of the Phantoms. Nobles hogged all the rebounds and, in addition, scored seven points.

Maryland Players Get Shrine Bids

MIAMI, Fla. (UP)—Quarterback Jack Scarbath and tackle Dick Modzelewski, All-America candidates from Maryland, today were named to lay with the South football team in the annual Shrine charity game here Christmas night.

Modzelewski, who weighs 230 pounds, is expected to start at defensive tackle and also share offensive tackle duties. Scarbath, an excellent runner and passer, will do much of the Dixie signaling.

The North team has announced the selection of two quarterbacks, Dale Samuels of Purdue and Harry Agganis of Boston University.

Grimesland Victor In Two Cage Games

By STAN OPOOTOWSKY

GRIMESLAND — Grimesland's boys and girls basketball teams turned in one-sided victories last night in a basketball doubleheader play in Grimesland. The Grimesland girls started the ball rolling by scoring a 50-31 victory in the opener while the boys closed the evening's activity with a 44-19 win.

In the girls game, there's not a great deal to be said except that Grimesland's girls grabbed the lead quickly and held it. Scoring was fairly divided but forward Becky Mills led the parade with 15 points. Joyce Tripp and Jane Tucker got 13 and 14 points, respectively. Moore led the Hookerton scoring with 12 points.

In the boys game, Bobby Andrews' jump shot from the center position kept Grimesland well out in front of the visiting Hookerton team. Andrews led the scoring for the night with 20 points. Other honorees went to Hookerton's Jones, with 11 points, and Grimesland's Reid Godley and S. W. Heath, both with 10 points each.

Biggie Munn, Mich. State Is "Coach Of The Week"

By STAN OPOOTOWSKY

NEW YORK (UP)—The secrets of his success are depth and "heart."

His future is as bright as his past and present.

And he has a secret hankering to parade his power in the Rose Bowl some day.

That's Biggie Munn of Michigan State, the United Press Coach of the Week. He guided his team to its 24th straight victory Saturday over Marquette, and thus finished the second undefeated and untied season for the Spartans.

Munn insists that "I'm old fashioned enough to know that 50 to 60 per cent of football is a matter of heart."

We were successful," he said, "because everyone on the team wanted to be good, and they never ceased improvement."

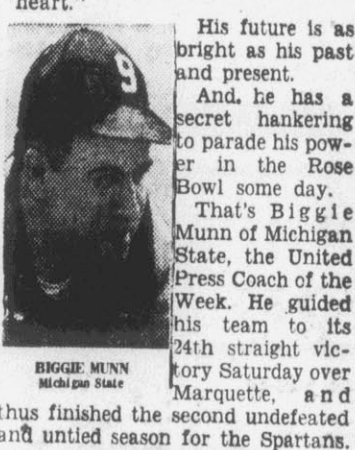

But along with that fighting spirit, Michigan State has plenty of fine football players. And that word "plenty" might tell the whole story of this powerhouse. In one game last year, Munn used 61 players. In another he used 60. The average was 48. And, remember, there was a time when 40 players comprised the entire squad of the average big college.

Looking back on the season, Munn remembers many ups and downs.

What was the toughest game of the year? Notre Dame, says Munn. "Others were closer (Michigan State won, 21-3), but Notre Dame was primed to score and upset and their squad was stronger than generally rated."

What was the most anxious single moment of the season?

"It came in the second game of the season, Michigan State was trailing 14-13 with time for only two plays. Gene Lektent, tried a Biggie Munn, Michigan State coach.

So much for the past. What of the future? Munn loses 19 seniors. That sounds bad at first. But last year Munn lost 21 and still came through with the perfect record this year.

Munn won't say so, but his friends know he has a hankering to show his team's might in the Rose Bowl. He may get the chance when Michigan State becomes a full-fledged Big Ten member next year. Although, actually, Michigan State's vote may be the one which kills renewal of the Big Ten-Pacific Coast Conference bowl pact.

Sam Snead Wins By One Stroke

SOUTHERN PINES (UP)—

Sammy Snead, the long-driving slammer from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., fought from behind to take first prize money in the Julius Boros Golf tournament here yesterday.

Going into the final nine holes, Snead was two strokes over the sub-par golf being shot by Doug Ford of Yonkers, N. Y. But he played smoothly on that last night to come out with an even par 72 and the $1,000 pot.

Snead's overall score for the three days of play was 207. Ford, who carded a four under par 68 yesterday, finished second with 208 worth $750.

Boros, the host pro in whose honor the tournament was being played, carded a two under par 70 which was good for only sixth place when added to his other totals. He had a 212 for the tourney and collected $225.

Collecting $57.14 each for 10th spot with 217's were Al Smith, Charlie Harper, Henry Williams, Art Wall Jr., Wally Ulrich, Joe Moore, and Pete Cooper.

First Thanksgiving Wasn't One-Day Event For Pilgrims

NEW YORK (U.P.)—The first Thanksgiving Day, when the Pilgrims and the Indians sat down at Plymouth to a feast of wild turkey and the fruits of a good harvest, wasn't really a Thanksgiving.

Actually it wasn't even a day—the affair lasted a week by some accounts, three days by others.

With a good harvest in the fall of 1621, Gov. William Bradford called for a "Day of Festival" but without mentioning Thanksgiving. According to the historian, H.S.J. Sichel, the "day" expanded spontaneously into a "week of feasting and revelry, not religious in character."

Even though it was not so designated, the first Pilgrim festival in America actually was a feast of Thanksgiving. During the previous winter half the colonists had died and the rest had existed during the summer on semi-starvation rations. Then, as Edward Winslow wrote to a friend in England, the Pilgrims found in autumn:

"Our corn did prove well and God be praised we had a good increase of Indian corn, and our barley indifferent good, but our peas not worth the gathering."

Plenty of Indians

To prepare for the festival, Gov. Bradford sent four men on a fowling expedition which was highly successful—and a good thing, too, because King Massasoit turned up for the feast with 90 braves, instead of the few the Pilgrims had expected when they invited him. However, the Indians did a little hunting on their own and contributed five deer to the occasion. So the 55 Pilgrims and the 90 Indians sat down to a real feast.

On the menu were turkeys, ducks, geese, venison, lobster, eels, clams, oysters and fish. For beverages they had the Pilgrims' first wine, made from New England grapes, and beer, which has been described as the Pilgrims' "almost universal beverage." They in fact brought beer with them on the Mayflower. John Alden, who later married Priscilla, was brought along as a barrelmaker.

The Indians taught them to make popcorn balls by shaking the corn over a fire in earthen jars and then pouring maple syrup over the popped kernels. Indian pudding—cornmeal and molasses boiled in a bag—is still a favored New England dessert.

After a couple of days of feasting the affair took on some of the aspects of a Fourth of July celebration, what with Captain Miles Standish marching his soldiers up and down and firing blank volleys to the amazement of the Indians who also were intrigued by the Pilgrims' bugs.

Idea Spread
Other festivals followed in later years and the idea spread through other colonies but they were all celebrations of an informal nature. It was not until 1876—56 years after the "first Thanksgiving"—that a formal proclamation was issued by the Council of Charlestown, Mass., to set aside a day for public thanksgiving—and that public thanksgiving—and that day was not in November but June 29.

George Washington proclaimed Thursday, Nov. 26, a Thanksgiving Day in 1789 and issued another Thanksgiving proclamation in 1795 but that was followed by a long gap until President James Madison set apart a day of Thanksgiving at the close of the War of 1812.

Not until Abraham Lincoln appointed the fourth Thursday of November, 1864, as a day of Thanksgiving did it become an annual national holiday. Up to that time some Southern states had opposed observance of such a day on the ground that it was a relic of Puritan bigotry.

International Issue For Clerk

RAHWAY, N. J. (UP)—Municipal Court Clerk Michael Mesaros had a problem in international finance on his hands today.

A traffic violator who was issued a $1 ticket for a parking violation, mailed the summons to Mesaros with a bill similar to the American dollar, but maroon in color. Mesaros believes it is a Dutch West Indies gulden.

The cop who issued the summons said the car was foreign and the license plate bore no country designation.

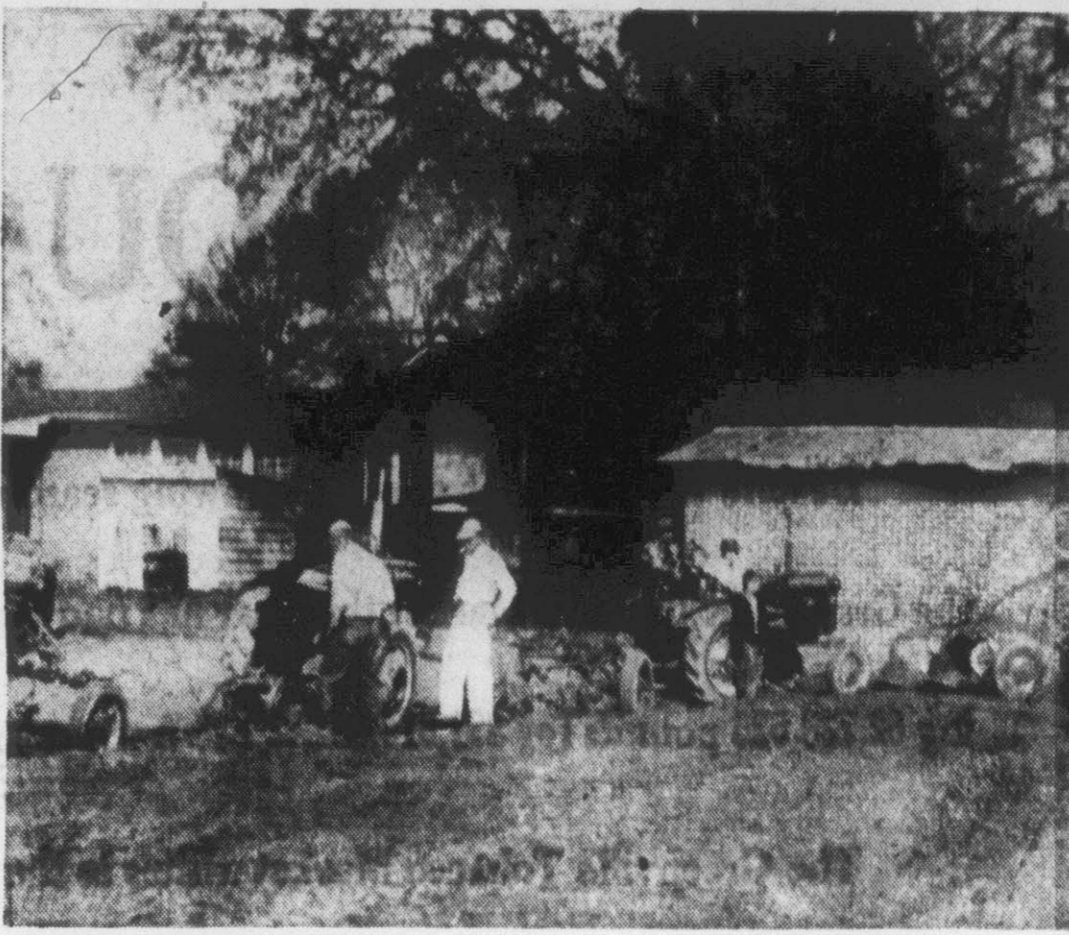

Parrots Cleared Of Bad Language

CHICAGO (UP)—Brookfield Zoo Director Robert Bean today gave 250 parrots a "clean bill for free speech" after a woman complained that a "wicked looking" parrot had cursed her.

"I've interviewed them exhaustively," Bean said. "The strongest words any of them said were, 'Oh fudge.'"

LOOT RAKED IN BAPTISTOWN, New Jersey (UP)—New Jersey state police, hunting a stolen garden rake, traced it to a farm here where they also discovered some $25,000 worth of other stolen goods, ranging from farm machinery to women's blouses.

They Turned Out To Fix School Grounds

FALKLAND—Despite a misty rain, more than 23 men of the Falkland community gathered on the school grounds Saturday, November 15, with farm equipment and began work on the school grounds.

"Face lifting" of the campus was planned weeks ago at a meeting of the school Parent Teachers Association and several men without children in school responded to the program.

Dead limbs were cut from trees on the campus to improve the looks of the ground, to prolong the life of trees and to make the campus a safe place for children to play.

A shapeless and sparsely planted old hedge was removed from the edge of the highway that had long served as a place where paper, trash, and dead leaves collected. Some of the hedge was transplanted around the new room which was added to the school building last year.

Several men went to various homes to pick up fertilizer, donated to fix the front lawn of the school. Used in the project were 13 tractors, discs, harrows, plows, distributors, and a road machine. In addition to the donation of equipment, time and fertilizer, and gifts of money were made by members of the community to help defray expenses such as gas, grass, and seed.

Workers were O.V. Harrell, Ben Harrell, Amos Harrell, Levi Wooten, David Moore, William Moore, Arthur Moore, Joe Moore, Julius Fleming, Frank Corbett, Jimmy Norville, Gus Little, Howard Garis, Sam Bland, Johnny Peaden, Otis Deans, Marvin Deans, Willard Wooten, Charlie Wilkerson, Calvin Moore, Leroy Allen, and Everett Cobbs.

Principal O.V. Harrell said the work done on the school was "a splendid example of community cooperation, school spirit, and hard work."

Chemist Believes Science Is Now Coming Of Age

NEW YORK (U.P.)—The research laboratories of America's rapidly-expanding chemical industry are developing new products and processes rapidly.

The year 1952 may be looked upon by future historians "as the era when science emerged from the Dark Ages."

That's the belief of Maurice F. Crass, Jr., secretary of the Manufacturing Chemists' Association.

Crass warned that the United States can maintain its technological advantages over the Communist world only if the industry can keep getting a steady flow of college-trained men to the research laboratories to help unlock new secrets.

"These men are urgently needed to help the endless possibilities of chemistry by taking apart and recombining chemical molecules which already have given us the miracle drugs," he said.

Mysteries Ahead
"They are needed also to help find more chemical mysteries which made American defenses more powerful by making us less dependent on foreign imports created new materials from new sources and new sources for old materials and aided in the production of better food and other health benefits."

Crass pointed out that the industry is in the middle of an expansion program costing some $6,500,000,000, a program from which the armed forces will reap many of the benefits.

He said that one of the major problems confronting the industry right now is "to facilitate production of stronger, faster, tougher, light-weight weapons for our military. "It is not generally known that almost every product of the chemical industry is funneled into the defense effort," he said. "It has been estimated that 200 different chemicals are required to outfit a infantry platoon and 1,500 to launch a battleship."

With the country recently observing Fire Prevention Week, he noted that the industry is making progress along that avenue, too.

Rugs Fireproofed
Among other things, the industry is developing a process to incorporate carbon and fluorine gas into a house paint to make a dwelling resist fire in a manner comparable to asbestos sheeting and lasting indefinitely. Also there is a fluorocarbon rug which cigarettes can't burn.

Other startling concoctions taking form in the bee-hive confines of the laboratories are such items as plastic enamels for kitchen fixtures that will defy flames, alcohol and the strongest chemicals; finishing on cooking utensils that nothing can stick to and a lubricant that will stand up for the life of the machinery, requiring no periodic check or replacement.

"In hundreds of laboratories," Crass concluded, "new developments are stirring with life, offering promise of greater and greater benefits to all. Like the unfolding of a book, each discovery leads to another of still greater importance."

'Neurotic Bear' Ate Turkeys

ROSSVILLE, Kan. (UP)—Mr. and Mrs. U. R. Zeller have a grudge against what they believe to be a neurotic bear.

Alaskan Air Disasters Underscore Arctic Peril

By CHARLES CORDRY
United Press Aviation Writer
ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UP)—A series of military air disasters this month tragically underscores the unending struggle between men and the elements in this far northern defense area.

Here an airplane gets little chance to forgive a mistake in navigation. In the air and on the ground, weather, menacing mountains and all but impassable tundra swiftly separate men from boys.

But despite the gigantic problems, U. S. military forces have learned to fly in the worst weather and to maneuver over the ground in temperatures down to 60 degrees below zero when mere survival is a struggle.

Military men commonly describe Alaska as a land meant to fly over, not to walk over. On the air arm falls the task of moving troops and supporting outlying bases as well as mounting fighter defenses and strategic bomber attacks.

The two C-119 Flying Boxcars lost here this month were rushing troops to defend areas under simulated attack. The first was a tragic lesson in what can happen when a plane gets off course on the busy air highway between Anchorage and the Fairbanks-Big Delta area. The wreckage was found on a "satellite" of 20,300-foot Mt. McKinley, 34 miles off course. As often as not, planes flying on instruments go through the pass adjacent to McKinley without ever seeing it.

Lt. Col. George War Kemp Jr., Detroit, commander of the 449th Fighter Squadron at Ladd Air Force Base, Fairbanks, tells of some of the problems of operating in Alaska's interior. Most treacherous is the winter ice fog. At 20 or more below zero, in calm air, moisture particles freeze and form vertical sheets of fog limiting forward visibility to a matter of yards. Such a condition may last for as long as 10 days and aircraft landings become touch and go propositions.

Kemp's squadron, which flies F- and F-82 Twin Mustang ground-support planes, has a remarkable record of no serious accidents in two years. New arrivals, like Lt. Mike Blazor, pilot from Evanston, Ill., and Lt. Lionel W. Levin, radar observer from Brooklyn, N.Y., have been landing their F-84 under cloud ceilings as low as 200 to 300 feet, Kemp says.

Anti-Stalling is another big reason Esso Extra performs best in 9 out of 10 cars all year 'round

Here's a new experience in gasoline performance... starting power that gets your engine going at a touch and keeps it going.

The only gasoline made to combat cold engine stalling... Anti-Stalling Esso Extra is also famous for quick starting, fast warm-up, high anti-knock power and long mileage. Try a tankful today for real Happy Motoring. Find out why more motorists use Esso Extra than any other premium gasoline in the area served by Esso Dealers!

While you're at your Esso Dealer's let him give your car a complete lubrication and careful check-up for the cold weather driving ahead.

Detroit's Automotive Engineers say that cold-engine stalling has been a persistent problem for years. Under certain conditions, powerful gasolines required for today's high-compression engines evaporate and freeze moisture out of the air, "icing up" the carburetor and causing temporary stalling. This stalling is practically eliminated by the new Esso Extra Gasoline. (No gasoline, of course, can correct stalling caused by mechanical faults or electrical failure.)

PLEASE DRIVE CAREFULLY... THE LIFE YOU SAVE MAY BE YOUR OWN!

TEEN TALK

(Dear Judge)

AP Newsfeatures

Is Santa a diplomat? If so, let's hope he plays like an oil smoothie come Yuletide. He can begin now by having intimate conversations with all his little debutantes on the subject of gifts. While he's about it, he might point out to his youthful carolers that Christmas is the time to ask for practical gifts, things not covered by the monthly budget, instead of seldom used presents.

Santa has his reminder on the right wave length, judging from a quick peek at his mail sack. So if you want a preview of what is in store for your little chimney this year, hark to some of Santa's personal correspondence.

There's that letter to Old Nick from Bill, that nice boy who took you to football games this fall. His letter says:

...and while you're about it, Santa, couldn't you arrange for my favorite girl to acquire a raincoat, umbrella, galoshes and a warm sweater in her Yule stockings? Oh, yes, sensible brogans would be fine, too. These things would come in mighty handy just in case I live until the next football season. Perhaps if she has her own protection from the elements, I might escape pneumonia from sitting hatless, coatless, and sometimes shoeless in the rain. Usually about mid-way in the first quarter just when the fear is in formation on a fourth down and a yard to go her feet are so cold, I've got to offer her my shoes.

A letter to the jolly fellow from Dad emphasizes a couple of important gifts, also.

...And couldn't you while you're about it give my darling daughter a subscription to my favorite magazine and newspaper. Then when I come home at night and settle in the easy chair, I'll be able to find a story in its entirety. The way things are now my reading matter has been punched full of holes before I get it. Fashion ads, movie stars, recipes, comics, radion and television programs have been torn or clipped from the paper. There is usually nothing for me to read but the obituaries, weather forecast, and want ads.

Big Sister's cable to the North Pole advises Santa:

...If you want real harmony in our household on Christmas morning, please give my young sister a few of the necessities for her wardrobe. For instance—she never has a pair of stockings when she has she's all set for a big date. And if she gets dressed for a party before I do, I'm left with nothing more up-to-date than my baby clothes. She selects my best lingerie and even my dancing shoes, to say nothing of my slickest party dress. Couldn't you please fix her up with at least one attractive gown or a couple of separates, dancing shoes and perhaps a big box of nylons?

From understanding Mom, Santa gets this SOS.

...My favorite daughter always insists on a ridiculous "wanted" list at Christmas. Her closet is loaded with seldom-used skis, tennis racquets, ice skates and even snowshoes. She has 488 charm bracelets and a couple of thousand records. But whenever she wants a handkerchief, scarf, gloves or evening purse, it's Mom's bureau that is raided. What's more she has a habit of losing things, so I never can count on anything being returned. Couldn't you buzz her friends so that they earmark a few useful gifts for her Christmas tree?

And here's one to St. Nick from brother.

...And so you see Mr. Claus it is pretty tough on a guy who likes to put on sheep-lined slippers and warm bathrobe of an evening, before he tackles his calculus problems. Sis beats him to his goon garb, preferring it to the chi-chi negligee and silly mules. She is saving for her trousseau. She must have 14 sets of that stuff piled up in her cedar chest. I know she'll hate you for it. But this year instead of another batch of that silk junk couldn't you give her flannel nightgowns, a heavy bathrobe and carpet slippers?

Santa is a fine fellow, and he can put all the right things under your Christmas tree. Why not list all the useful gifts first, and worry about the window dressing later?

U. S. Missionary Will Stay In Asia

HONG KONG (AP)—A veteran American missionary in China, Helen Bailey of Woodlief, N.C., has quit the Communist-dominated mainland and shifted her activities to Indonesia where she will work with the Chinese Protestant churches on Belitung Island.

Miss Bailey recently reached here from the remote Tibet border town of Kangting. Tibet is occupied by the Chinese Red army.

BEER PUT TO WORK

LONDON (UP)—British beer is being put under the microscope. New antibiotics better than penicillin and streptomycin, and drugs more powerful than cortisone may be the result of experiments now going on at the brewing research center in Nutfield, Hampshire, experts hope.

THANK YOU MR. FARMER

Despite the fact that our 1952 growing season was one of the most unfavorable in our entire history, the Greenville Tobacco Market this year has had the 4th best season in its entire 62-year operation by selling 62,723,626 pounds for $31,814,081.42 at an average of $50.72.

The Greenville Tobacco Market wishes to thank the thousands of farmers of Eastern North Carolina who have sold their tobacco in Greenville this season, and the hundreds of business and professional men who have been boosting the Greenville Tobacco Market, for making this record possible.

Chapter 17
"Velanto, huh? Jawn, you think you'll amount to any more down at Velanto than you have around here?"

"Can't see that I will, Hank. Lost my last chance when I got hooked up with you thorny peckerwoods. Th' old man always told me."

"Goddamn it! Get that wagon out the gate before —"

"Kinda hate to go off an' leave th' old woman here, but this ain't no scrape for womenfolks to mix into."

"Except for Miss Toni."

"Oh, well, Toni, she's different. I ain't bellyachin' none about havin' her along."

That had been the departure. That and Clay's final hard-ripping handclasp with Blair. That and Toni in homespun trousers and a buckskin jacket, determined to ride astride rather than side-saddle and winning her point to the intense amusement and satisfaction of the men.

All in all, it had been a good day's march. Half a dozen times he had ridden back and forth along the length of the marching column to see for himself how affairs were going. There was no formality as he passed, and he found himself replying to hails of "Mornin', Colonel, how you doin' today?"

"Clay, you ain't got a chey of tobacco you could spare, have you?"

"Colonel, you gonna have to transfer me to some other troop. These yellowbellies have heard all my stories an' they don't believe none of 'em."

Halfway down the column he found Sarazan, still unshaven, riding between two troopers, who had thoughtfully lashed his wrists together and then run rawhide ropes from the lashings to their own saddle horns. Clay frowned as he rode on, wishing that it were possible to execute Sarazan preempt-torily and have done with it. It was sound, it was safe, it was sensible—but the risk of creating resentment and dissension in Sarazan's old troop was too great. There was nothing to do but hope for the best. That and be sure Sarazan was guarded securely every hour of the day and night.

He turned and trotted back to the head of the column. Manuel Herrera had ridden up to keep Toni company and they were both laughing like children as he rode by. Manuel lifted his bronzed, aristocratically Castilian face in a start of misgiving as Clay reached them, but Clay raised his arm in a friendly salute and rode on toward the advanced guard.

And that was the end of the first day's march—and the end of peace and security, too.

It was past three in the morning when he felt someone shaking his foot.

"Colonel," someone was whispering insistently. "Colonel, Web wants you and he wants you bad."

"What's up?" he demanded. "Is Web hurt?"

"It's Sarazan, Colonel. The man who was guarding him's been killed—and Sarazan's gone."

Stumbling through the dark behind his guide, his mind a boiling ferment of impotent rage, he cursed the fatal infection that had led him to spare Sarazan's life. Unless Sarazan could be captured before he reached the settlements, the whole frontier would burst into flame. Morgan would be warned of their attack, all Palmenter's years of sacrifice and planning would be wasted and destroyed.

Web was waiting for him beside a low-burning fire. A shapeless figure sprawled on the ground at his feet.

"How long ago?" he asked hoarsely.

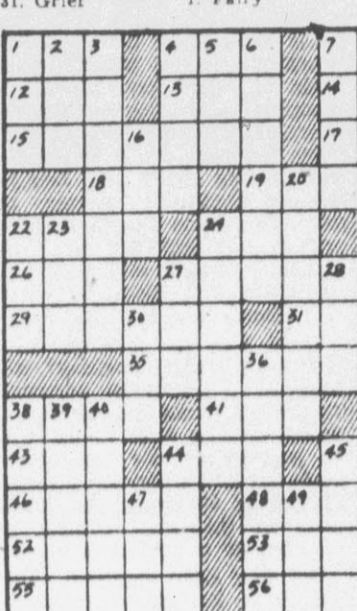

"Can't tell. Might have been four hours or so. Walt here," he jerked his head at the figure on the ground, "took over the guard at about eleven. When th' next watch come to relieve him, he found this. He lost some time comin' in to tell me about it, an' I reckon I've lost some time notifyin' you. Could've been an hour ago—could have been just 'fore midnight."

"All right." There was nothing to do now except accept the fact—accept it and try to ward off the disaster that gaped before them.

"Get Miguel Garcia over here and get his troop in the saddle. He's got a couple of trackers in his outfit and they may be able to strike a trail. If they don't catch him—"

CAPT. JOHNNY FALCON

"My men are here." "Nobody gone from our troop." The last report came in. Every troop was full strength, yet some man had freed him, some man who was like a hidden, festering sore within the regiment—and he was with them now, plotting new evil, hidden in anonymity, an ever present menace.

The sickening premonition of almost certain failure was seeping through Clay's veins like a slow poison, but his face was inscrutable, unyielding as he faced the circle of his officers.

"Saddle up." His voice was flat, deliberately stripped of all emotion. "We're pulling out. The more ground we cover before they catch up with us, the less we'll have to fight for later on. Let's go, men. Let's go!"

Loser Pays Up With Greyhound After Rash Bet

DENVER (AP)—When Jack Andersen got a call to pick up a shipment at the railway express office recently, he figured it probably was some lubricant for his gasoline station. It turned out to be a crate containing full-size racing greyhound.

It seems that Andersen's wife and Clyde O. Means, who owns a kennel of racing dogs, had gone to Colorado Springs track together last summer. One of Means' dogs, Kay Trump, was running. Andersen offered to wager his Cadillac car against the dog that Kay Trump wouldn't finish in the money. Means accepted, then watched his dog wind up far back.

Andersen forgot the incident until he called at the express Company to find Kay Trump. Andersen said he wasn't too happy to add a racing canine to his household and his wife wasn't either.

Guerrilla Victims To Share Grants

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaya (AP)—The J. Arthur Rank organization has decided to make grants to Malaysians who have suffered in the Communist rebellion on the proceeds of Malayan premieres of the film "The Planter's Wife." It announced this decision was reached after British planters had protested against the handing over of proceeds from the London premiere of the film to a charity not connected with the planting industry.

MOTHER LOCKED IN DES MOINES, Ia. (UP)—Children do it all the time but parents seldom do. Mrs. Darrel Cherry found herself locked in her bathroom and was unable to get out even after the lock on the door was removed. Finally a neighbor pulled her through the bathroom window.

ELECTORS—The 14 Presidential Electors have had less publicity up to now than any other candidates elected on November 4. Their names were not even printed on the ballots and it is doubted that as many as 10 per cent of the voters knew who they were technically voting for when they marked the circle above the names of Adlai Steven-

Dr Hurlburt Speaks To County Teachers

FALKLAND—A three-point educational survey was reviewed by its supervisor, Dr. Allan S. Hurlburt, University of North Carolina, before teachers in the Pitt County Schools. The former Pitt County College professor spoke last week in Falkland at a meeting of the Pitt County unit of the North Carolina Education Association.

Dr. Hurlburt said the survey first dealt with the shortage of elementary teachers, secondly with the rating of teachers, and finally study of the school curriculum in three North Carolina counties. He told the assembled teachers a study is being made from the survey and will soon be published.

During a short business session of the Pitt NCEA, Fodie Hodges, Chocod school principal, was selected by the group to be a candidate for the vice-president of the state NCEA.

Wins Eagle Badge At Court Of Honor

son and John Sparkman. For the next two weeks, however, the Presidential Electors will get more official publicity than any other elective officers. It is long established practice for newspapers to publish the names and total vote of persons elected Governor and to all other State offices. The law doesn't require that to be done. It does require formal publications of the names of Electors.

Arrest Man For Weekend Theft; $1000 Bond Set

The man who allegedly stole the clothes and a chicken last weekend has been apprehended.

Pitt Sheriff Rufel W. Tyson reported this morning that officers have arrested James Earl Weldon, 25-year-old Negro, and charged him with looting the home of James L. Hardy last Saturday night.

Weldon was arrested yesterday afternoon by deputies "Duke" Andrews and Elmer Haddock and placed in Pitt County jail on a charge of breaking and entering and larceny.

The Negro's bond has been set at $1,000.

He was arrested at the home of his mother, which is located in the Eastern Pines community near Greenville. The prisoner reportedly broke into Hardy's house over the weekend and stole a quantity of bed clothing, personal clothing and a chicken from a deepfreeze unit.

The Church of God and Christ, 1630 Clark St., will have Bible discussion Thanksgiving Day, beginning at 12 o'clock. Everyone is invited to these services. "If ever there were a time when we need to know God it is now!"

The Clemmons Boys of Portsmouth, Va., will render a musical program at Holy Trinity Church on Thanksgiving Day at 2 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

At a Pitt District Boy Scouts Court of Honor in the City Hall last night Hugh Duncan received the Eagle Scout Award, the highest honor in Boy Scouting.

Dr. Howard McGinnis, retired East Carolina College professor, presented the Eagle Scout insignia to Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Duncan of Greenville, the winner's parents. Mrs. Duncan pinned it on her son's blouse.

Dr. McGinnis said, "Being a Boy Scout, after all, is just living a useful and normal life, and it leads to worthy and useful manhood and a happy life." He praised the work of scouting and reminded "the appearance of so many parents at the Court of Honor is an evidence of what makes these boys tick."

Frank Steinbeck, chairman of the Court of Honor, presided.

Sea Scout Dail Moore officiated at the opening ceremony.

William E. Moore, Troop 205, received the second class award. Angus Duff, Troop 30, a previous winner of the Eagle Scout Award, received the bronze palm for special work.

Ernie Duff, a district commissioner, spoke briefly. He lauded the group on the good work in scouting. Also, he said a large delegation will go from Greenville to Ayden in the New Year when the next Court of Honor is to be held there.
