Aldermen, Board Of Elections In Meeting Tonight

Joint Meeting Will Set Date For City-Wide Referendum On Council-Manager Plan; Mayor To Recommend Calling Election

Greenville's Board of Aldermen will meet jointly with the Pitt County Board of Elections tonight to set the date for a city-wide referendum on the city manager issue.

Local Jaycees last Thursday night filed a petition containing the names of 1,800 city voters with the board of aldermen, and requested that a special election on that issue be held.

Mayor Lester D. Page said late yesterday several names had been found on the petition whose validity could be questioned, but added he plans to recommend that an election be called.

"That's what the majority of the people want I'll certainly not stand in the way," the mayor stated.

Appoint Mayor The so-called "Plan D" to be voted upon provides for the election of five councilmen at large from the city. Those men appoint a mayor from their own ranks, and hire a city manager to serve "at their pleasure."

If the petition is found to be in order, and obviously it has been found to be so, it is mandatory that the board of aldermen call an election within 40 days from the date the petition is filed - which was December 4.

The special referendum will have to be called for sometime before January 13. If a majority of the voters cast their ballots favoring the city manager plan, it is probable one will be employed soon after that date.

However, there is some question regarding the status of the four aldermen who were elected last Spring for two-year terms of office. It is not definitely known what will happen in those cases where aldermen still have a year to serve, but it is thought a favorable vote on a city manager plan will render the present situation void.

Precautionary Measure The joint meeting with the county board of elections is defined as a "precautionary measure" to insure the definite legality of the election. J. B. Kittrell, Jr., chairman of the Jaycee city manager committee, said at the alderman meeting last week it is his understanding the board of aldermen also constitutes the city board of election, in view of the fact they are the sole presiding body over city elections.

City Attorney R. B. Lee suggested that the referendum be called jointly by the city board and the county board of elections to eliminate any possible legal question in the future. The meeting has been set for 7:30 tonight in the aldermen's room at the city hall.

Hound Led Them To 'Private' Bootleg Still

FREE ENTERPRISE, PERSONIFIED. Pitt County deputies "Duke" Andrews (left), and Elmer Haddock are shown with a small, home-made whiskey "still" they confiscated in Bruce community Friday. The illegal outfit was found in a back room at the home of Ernest Barrett, Negro. Barrett is free on $300 bond for appearance in County Court, but the still remains in "custody." Visit In Spring

WASHINGTON (AP) - Diplomatic officials said today they believe Prime Minister Churchill will come to the United States some time in the spring for conferences with President-elect Eisenhower.

These officials said there are no present plans for Churchill to come in January or during the first three months of the year. They said they expect the top Churchill aide to come too for talks with Eisenhower's principal deputies.

The Eisenhower-Churchill conferences are expected to deal with Britain's reported desire to resume the sharing of atomic secrets, Far East foreign policy problems, and trade and financial questions.

Commendation To Sky Watcher

NEW YORK (UP) - A young aircraft spotter gets a letter of commendation from the Air Force today for putting interceptors on the trail of President Truman's plane, "The Independence."

Ronald Hutchins, Newcomb, N. Y., heard a mysterious droning in the murky skies over his mountainous spotting station on the morning of Sunday, Nov. 23.

Ronald, 14, said he could not see the plane because of the cloud layer but he knew its course was not charted.

Fearing it might be an unfriendly bomber on a sneak-attack assignment, Ronald called the civil defense "Inter center at Albany to report an uncharted plane was flying overhead.

The filter center immediately informed the Air Force and interceptors were dispatched to the area only to learn that the plane was "The Independence" carrying Secretary of State Dean Acheson to New York from Ottawa, Canada.

"About an hour and a half later the chief observer came to my house and said I had spotted the President's plane," Ronald said.

TOOTHLESS BARK

BUFFALO (UP) - Penelope, a toothless chihuahua barked and growled so ferociously at a man who attempted to lift one-year-old Linda Hillman from her carriage that the man fled in terror to escape the three-pound dog.

Hunted Meat Thief, Found A Liquor Still

Bloodhound Didn't Track Down Missing Pork Shoulders, But Led Officers To Home-Style Whiskey Still

Two Pitt deputies took a bloodhound and went "tracking" Friday for a thief who stole three pork shoulders - and ended up with a portable, home-style whiskey still and its operator.

According to officers "Duke" Andrews and Elmer Haddock, the ingenious still was found in a black-out back room at the home of Ernest Barrett, 27-year-old Negro who lives in Bruce community.

The "blockin" outfit was hand-made, deputies said, having been sheared from a pattern on a solid sheet of copper and welded together piece by piece. Some whiskey had been "run off" recently, they added, because the kettle contained a quantity of mash.

25-Gallon Kettle The copper kettle had a capacity of approximately 25 gallons of mash, which when distilled would yield about two and one-half gallons of "firewater" per charge.

A copper tube led from the kettle to a stone jug serving as a "doubler," and a copper worm led out of the jug into a cooling vat - which officers said was probably a tub or barrel full of water to condense the whiskey.

"We started out to search for some meat stolen from Jasper Cooper, Falkland Negro," Andrews stated. "Jasper had killed hogs that day and three shoulders were stolen right out of the smokehouse.

"In our investigation we searched Barrett's house and found the still in one of the back rooms. All the windows were draped with blankets.

Ex-Serviceman Is Understanding

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - A 64-year-old news vendor said he didn't want to prosecute the sailor who knocked him down and scattered his papers in the gutter.

"He didn't mean it, Judge, he was just drunk. I know how servicemen like to frolic on their day off. I'm an ex-serviceman myself."

"You're an ex-serviceman?" asked Municipal Judge John J. McMahon.

"Yes, your honor - Imperial Russian Army. A captain," replied Vassili Zakharoff.

Utilities Meet Slated Tonight

Greenville Utilities Commission will hold its regular monthly meeting tonight at 7:30 in the superintendent's office at the city hall.

Utilities Secretary Larry Brown said this morning the meeting will be "just routine," with no special business other than monthly reports to be heard by the commission.

The commission meets regularly every second Tuesday in each month.

Round-The-Clock Bombing Raids Hit Red Supplies

Ground Fighting Slackens; Ninth MIG In Three Days Shot Down By Sabres

SEOUL, Korea (UP) - Allied bombers in round-the-clock raids smashed Communist supply lines again today as ground fighting slackened apparently because of a Communist shortage of frontline supplies.

Allied Sabre jets shot down a Communist MIG-15 jetfighter - their ninth in three days - while flying fighter cover today for bombers on daylight raids.

The Sabres pounced on several MIGs which crossed South from the Manchurian bases. Flight Lt. Graham F. Hulse, England, an exchange pilot, shot down one MIG and the others fled back across the Yalu River.

The United Nations heavy, medium, and light bombers blasted a railway line, a supply center and convoys of front-bound trucks.

The slack in the ground war, Allied officers said, could mean that the day and night Allied bombings were pinching the Reds front line supplies.

B-29 superforts and B-26 invaders ranged deep into North Korea during the night to search out and blast trucks headed for the Red front lines with ammunition and other supplies. Air Force crews said they destroyed about 160 trucks.

Superfort also hurled a night assault against a re-processing plant at Tokchon, a supply center at Yongyopcham and a military staff officers' center at Yongpung.

Dive bombers took over the day shift. They ripped up a rail line between Su'chon and Sinauju on the west coast of Korea and dropped explosives into a trans-shipment and supply center at Singae. At least six supply-laden trucks were wrecked, and two secondary explosions were touched off.

On the ground, U.N. raiders briefly occupied an outpost east of Panmunjom and South Korean infantrymen repulsed Chinese probing attacks on the central front.

The Communists fired only 5,000 rounds of artillery across the entire 185-mile front during the 24 hours ending at 6 p.m. yesterday (4 a.m. EST Mon.). The most any one Allied division received was 1,000 rounds.

At Sniper Ridge on the central front, Allied officers said Red artillery was the lightest since the battle of the Kumhwa ridges began Oct. 14.

Chest Campaign Is Said Lagging

At Least $2,000 To Go, Says Chairman; Not All Reports In

Reports indicate the Greenville Community Chest is lagging in its campaign for $14,000 for operation and support of seven agencies.

Campaign Chairman W. W. Lee said this morning that although all reports had not been received from workers in various divisions, it was beginning to appear that the goal is not yet in sight.

"We have only $12,000 in returns," Lee stated.

Only divisions exceeding the quota they had set are the Women's Division which was sponsored by the Service League and headed by Mrs. J. B. Cummings, and the Branch of the National Council of Churches, he said. "All civilization has been put on the defensive and communism is on the march."

A onetime missionary to China, Judd said there is "no hope for Korea," and "the Koreans all know it." He said one of the reasons for such a situation is that we are following an old habit of "trying to make a deal" with the enemy.

Calls No Inquest In Highway Death

Coroner Griffin H. Rouse declared the death of Alfonzo Rouse, killed in a traffic mishap, as accidental and said no inquest would be held.

Rouse, a 36-year-old Negro man of Ayden, was killed Saturday morning on the Blackjacket Highway when he was thrown from the truck he was driving as it swerved off the road. The rear wheels of the truck ran over Rouse's head and killed him instantly.

Mother Wins Son's Probation

DETROIT (UP) - James R. Dyer, 17, began a year's probation today after his mother pleaded with Judge W. McKay Skillman to give her son "one more chance."

Dyer had been in jail awaiting sentence for beating his mother and stealing $250 from her.

Tight Secrecy In Eisenhower Talks

Moves To Strip Racketeer Of His U. S. Citizenship

WASHINGTON (AP) - Atty. Gen. McGranery today ordered proceedings to strip American citizenship from Albert Anastasia, described by the Justice Department as a New York waterfront racketeer.

Anastasia, a native of Italy, is currently a leading figure in the New York State Crime Commission's investigation of alleged gangsterism in the world's largest dock area.

The Justice Department said it had allegations in its files that Anastasia, 50, living at Ft. Lee, N. J., was one-time "lord high executioner of Murder, Inc."

The denaturalization proceedings, a first step looking toward deportation from the United States, will be filed in the Federal District Court at Newark, probably late today.

It will allege that Anastasia failed to disclose various aliases and a criminal record in obtaining his certificate for entry into this country.

McGranery said Anastasia denied having such a record, although he had been convicted of murder and had been sent to the death house in Sing Sing, prior to a reversal of the conviction on appeal in 1921.

His record, McGranery said, "also shows that he had been arrested three other times, and two of these arrests involved murder."

His extradition is being sought in connection with the attorney general's program for ridding the country of some 100 underworld figures described by McGranery as "undesirables."

Cabinet - Members - To-Be Ignore Balm Weather, Remain In Closed Conference; May Be Blueprinting Messages He Will Give After Inauguration

ABOARD USS HELENA (UP) - President-elect Eisenhower discussed Korean war policy with key cabinet members today in an atmosphere of secrecy rivaling that which surrounded his trip to the battle zone.

Eisenhower's press secretary, James C. Hagerty, refused to give any information about the talks to curious newsmen aboard this 17,000-ton cruiser and the men who have shunned questioners.

The conference, still in a conversational phase, began yesterday when John Foster Dulles, Eisenhower's choice for secretary of state, stepped from a helicopter to the deck of the cruiser.

He was followed by Eisenhower's chosen Treasury Secretary George Humphrey, Interior Secretary Douglas McKay and attorney General Hebert Brownell.

They deprived themselves of an opportunity to enjoy balmy weather all day yesterday by remaining with Eisenhower in the flag room and talking about ways to end the Korean stalemate without causing a major war.

Eisenhower showed great satisfaction in being able to confer with his advisers without the pressures and interruptions normally present at his headquarters in New York's Commodore Hotel.

For this reason, Eisenhower said, he hated to see the voyage end. He was the picture of relaxation yesterday as he chatted with Dulles in the admiral's suite.

Though Hagerty was uncommunicative, there were indications that Eisenhower was blueprinting some of the messages and speeches on foreign affairs he will give following his Jan. 20 inauguration.

The talks with the cabinet members were kept in a high category by Eisenhower for two important reasons.

1. Eisenhower does not want to issue any statements on policy to the public until he becomes president, at which time he will be able to back what he says with action.

2. This is just a preliminary to another phase of the conference which will start when the Helena reaches Pearl Harbor at 4 a.m. EST Thursday.

Charles E. Wilson, who accompanied Eisenhower to Korea and went as far as Wake Island with him on the return trip, flew to Hawaii to prepare for the conference there.

Wilson, to become defense secretary in the Eisenhower cabinet, made the flying trip from Wake Island to Hawaii with Adm. Arthur Radford, Pacific Fleet Commander.

Hagerty said the Pearl Harbor discussions would center around military problems, indicating the conversations aboard the Helena were devoted to economic issues facing the new administration, with some time spent on consideration of Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist Chinese forces on Formosa.

Black Cat Gone, Misfortune Not

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (UP) - Here's what happened Monday after Mrs. Catherine Gebos showed a black cat from her home; her washing machine went haywire, bounced across the floor and struck the furnace and a skunk sprayed her wash after she hung it on the line.

The second vacancy, which will not come until the first of the year, will be the result of a resignation submitted Saturday by Sgt. Claude Christopher. Christopher made his resignation effective December 31, the day before he plans to join the Greenville Fire Department.

Resignation Expected The latest resignation was just a formality at this time and had been expected, members of the police force contended, because Christopher is reputed to have had an application filed with the fire department for sometime.

In fact, Christopher was hired as a fireman by the board of aldermen last week - with the understanding he would assume his new duties January 1 - before he ever resigned from the police force.

Christopher is 28 years old and was hired by the board along with three other new firemen. He joined the police department in 1948, when J. R. Tanner was chief and J. H. Boyd Jr. was mayor of the city.

Chief Gibbs revealed he has several applications on file from men who wish to join the force, and he inferred he will screen applicants and replace the two men within the next few weeks.

Police Department Again Finds Vacancies In Ranks

There is one slightly worn patrolman's uniform hanging unclaimed at the Greenville Police Department these days, and another with sergeant's stripes is slated to go up beside it on January 1.

Police Chief S. G. Gibbs announced late yesterday there is a current vacancy in local police ranks, and another forthcoming shortly, but he said both will be filled "in the near future."

The vacancy of the moment came about when a former Greenville policeman, Clifton Ray Howard, failed to report for work Saturday morning as planned. Howard, who resigned from the force four months ago, was re-hired by the city's board of aldermen last Thursday night.

Plans Other Work Chief Gibbs disclosed that after submitting an application and being re-employed by the board on his (the chief's) recommendation, Howard phoned Friday night and said he had been called to work at the DuPont plant near Grifton.

Howard said over the phone he tentatively planned to go to work there today. Gibbs stated, "He never actually joined the local force after being re-hired, and it is my understanding he plans to enter some allied work with DuPont."

High Court Gets Issue Of School Segregation

Historic Hearing On Constitutionality Of Practice Opens Today; Climaxes 30-Year Fight By Negro Groups

WASHINGTON (UP) - The Supreme Court takes up one of the most explosive issues in American life today at an historic hearing on the constitutionality of racial segregation in public schools.

Two famed attorneys, one Negro and one white, are pitted against each other in the courtroom drama which climaxes a 30-year legal fight by Negro groups.

Before the high tribunal are five separate cases, all raising the same question: does the mere fact of segregation put the stamp of inequality on Negro students, even if they are provided school facilities as good as those provided for white children?

The oral arguments beginning at 1:30 p.m. e.s.t. will run into Wednesday and perhaps Thursday. On the court's decision, which may not come for several weeks, depends the continuance of the South's time honored doctrine of "separate but equal" educational systems for the two races.

The intensity of the feeling which the court test has aroused in the South was indicated last month when South Carolina voters repealed "a" section of the state constitution requiring the maintenance of free public schools. Gov. James F. Byrnes sponsored the repeal, asserting that the state must be ready to abolish its public school system if the Supreme Court should require non-segregation.

The first of the five cases to be argued arose in Kansas. That state does not require segregation but permits it in cities of more than 15,000 population.

Other cases come from South Carolina, Virginia, the District of Columbia and Delaware.

Key Negro lawyer is Thurgood Marshall, 44, New York representative of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Reinforcements of French marines, mounted Berber Goumiers, fierce Senegalese, Foreign Legion troops and regular army battalions poured into Casablanca. All army and police leaves were cancelled.

Europeans from isolated districts were being hastily evacuated under heavy guard to the center of the city where the 250,000 European population was concentrated. Emergency housing was provided in hotels and public buildings.

The city was calm Monday night but officials feared new disturbances during funeral ceremonies for Moroccans killed in the rioting. The burials will be late today or Wednesday.

The latest official count put the number of dead at 50, including seven Europeans, and an official spokesman warned the final figure might be higher. An unofficial count showed 50 rioters shot dead and seven Europeans knifed or stoned to death.

Dense Fog Cause Of 100 Deaths

London's Soot-Laden Mist Begins To Rise After Five Days

LONDON (UP) - London's worst soot-laden fog in modern history, which in five days has caused more than 100 deaths and an estimated $28,000,000 damage, began to lift today.

Weather forecasters said warm, rain-bearing winds would blow away the fog which since Friday has paralyzed transportation and set off a minor crime wave.

The capital's long-straggled transport systems began to return to normal this morning. The big red double-decker buses were back on their regular runs.

Trains again were running, although behind schedule. The sprawling London docks resumed operations and the city's airports began to handle international air traffic. Trucks, passenger cars and taxis again moved through the London area.

Coroners estimated more than 100 elderly people died of respiratory ailments intensified by the sooty fog. The health ministry said a sharp increase in respiratory disease deaths was expected.

An unknown number of other persons was killed by traffic accidents and from falling into the fog shrouded Thames River, police said.

Officials estimated that the fog caused up to $28,000,000 damage in the dislocation of trade and transport in the world's largest city.

Police said 16-year-old Wendy Hanchett was knifed last night in the most serious crime in the fog shrouded greater London area.

She was found with a stiletto in her back at Cheshunt, 14 miles north of London. It took an ambulance two hours to take her two and a half miles to a hospital.

Local Garden Club Working On A 'Christmas Fairyland'

The spirit of Christmas will fill every nook and corner of the Woman's Club when the Garden Club's Christmas Show opens there on Friday, the 12th. When you open the beautifully decorated front door, you will step into a Christmas fairyland. The Garden Club has spared no effort to make this the best Christmas Show they have ever had.

There will be something to interest everyone: Christmas trees of breathtaking loveliness, tables for all occasions, swags and wreaths both traditional and original, special arrangements for every place in the home, favors for young and old and packages that will stir your curiosity. The seven elementary schools will have a room all their own in which to display samples of their work.

The show will open Friday, Dec. 12 at 2:00 p.m. and will be open until 6:00 p.m. It will be closed until 8:30 when it will reopen and remain open until 9:00 p.m. On Saturday, Dec. 13 the show will open at 10:00 a.m. and will remain open the entire day until 9:00 p.m. The admission is 25c for adults and 10c for children when not accompanied by their teachers.

The Christmas Show is always enjoyed by the children and we invite their teachers to bring them in groups; the white elementary schools on Friday afternoon and the negro elementary schools on Saturday morning from 10:00 to 12:00. We believe that everyone will enjoy this show and we cordially you to come and bring your friends. You will see many beautiful things and take away many ideas you can use

Lector Club Continues Old Testament Study

The Lector Club met Tuesday, December 2, with Mrs. Holly Van Dyke at her attractive home on Rock Springs Drive.

In the absence of the president and vice-president, Mrs. Herbert Hadley, secretary, called the meeting to order. The roll was called and the minutes of the last meeting read. Mrs. Hadley welcomed the guests for the afternoon, Mrs. E. D. Larkins, Mrs. George Clark and Mrs. Carl Pierce.

Mrs. Harold Forbes presented names of families from the Welfare Department to be voted on for the club's Christmas family.

There being no further business, the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Howard Waldrop who reviewed six books of the Old Testament as a continuance of the club's study for the year.

Mrs. Waldrop reviewed first the Books of 1st and 2nd Samuel, stating that they are the first record of written history constructed out of original and authentic documents. She observed that although the two books bear the name of Samuel in whose days and by whose authority the Hebrew Monarchy was established, their real hero was David. In these two books we know Samuel as the wise prophet, Saul as the first king of Israel and David who has been called the ideal king in spite of the dark side of his character.

First and Second Kings was reviewed next covering the period from the death of David to the end of the monarchy. These books include David's son Solomon, his reign, the split of Israel into two Hebrew Kingdoms and last the fall of both Kingdoms. Second Kings in particular furnishes the historical background of the Master and Minor prophets.

In conclusion Mrs. Waldrop gave a brief sketch of 1st and 2nd Chronicles. The author of these books draws especially upon the Books of Samuel and Kings for history and genealogies. The author wrote for the returned exiles; his purpose being to weld them once more into a nation, to reawaken in them an interest in their past and to kindle zeal for Jehovah's service.

After the program Mrs. Van Dyke served a delicious salad course with coffee, after which books were exchanged and the meeting was adjourned.

Vanceboro OES Chapter Holds Regular Meeting

Vanceboro Chapter No. 231, Order of the Eastern Star, held its regular meeting Wednesday night at the Masonic Hall, with Mrs. Virginia McLawhorn, Worthy Matron presiding.

Reports were given by several special committee chairmen, including the Tar Heel Star News and Octagon coupons. Members were urged to get their coupons in before December 31.

The Sick and Cheer chairman reported illnesses among members and their families, and courtesies extended to them and other ill persons in the community. The chapter voted to send flowers to Mrs. L. E. Lancaster who is at Kafer Memorial Hospital in New Bern. A number of members reported that they had given parcels of clothing to needy families, and others volunteered to do so at an early date. The chapter voted to send a gift of money to its guest at the Masonic and Eastern Star home in Greensboro for Christmas, and as is customary to send cheer and needy baskets at Christmas to families in the community.

The Worthy Matron reported on the sale of everyday and Christmas greeting cards, stating that there were cards still available and urged the members to get them soon.

Communications were read by the secretary regarding the Rainbow camp and the Goodwill and Friendship program.

Plans were made for the annual Christmas party and program to be held on the regular meeting night, Dec. 17. The Worthy Matron appointed the following committees: decorations—Mrs. J. E. Hellen, Mrs. A. R. Blow, Mrs. J. E. Laughinghouse, Mrs. N. M. Lancaster, and Mrs. Charlie Hill; refreshments—

Out Of Town Guests Honored At Coffee Hour On Saturday

On Saturday morning, December 6, Miss Annie Mae Murray and Mrs. Harold Klingenschmitt entertained at a coffee hour honoring their guests, Miss Annie Mae Atwater, Mrs. Thomas Cates, Miss Ruth Simpson and Miss Carrie McLean Taylor, of Burlington.

The hostesses received in the spacious living rooms of the Faculty apartments.

Mrs. Eldon Williamson directed guests at the front door and presented them to the hostesses and the honored guests.

Mrs. Edon Williamson directed them to the coffee table where Miss Frances Wahl poured coffee, Miss Louise Galphin, Miss Mabel Daugherty and Miss Christine Johnston assisted in serving.

The coffee table was overlaid with a green linen cloth, centered with an arrangement of red carnations in a silver bowl. Silver platters of open face sandwiches, ham biscuits, cheese-straws, pecan cookies and salted nuts completed the table appointments.

An arrangement of red berries and red candles were reflected by a large mirror above the mantel.

Other arrangements of holly and greenery were used throughout the living room.

Goodbyes were said to Miss Clyde

Stokes, of Ayden. About 75 guests called.

Marines Can Now Re-Enlist For 2-Year Periods

RALEIGH, N.C. — Marine recruiting regulations have been changed to permit enlistment of former Marines for a period of two years, Major W.E. Brandon, director of Marine recruiting in the state, announced today.

The latest change now permits ex-Marines to re-enlist for two, three, four or six year periods.

The two year enlistment—previously in effect by the Marine Corps recruiting service, was abolished in 1948. It has been reinstated to attract more veterans during the present drive by the Leathernecks for trained men.

AUTHORITY IN RELIGION Some time ago I heard a preacher make the statement, "I believe in the authority of truth." But who is to interpret that truth? No doubt the man would have replied, "Why, I will be the final authority myself." In other words, in the great outstanding verities of life, you, my friend, set yourself up as the sole and final authority. Doesn't that sound a bit silly?

It is true, of course, that the final decision upon which a man's salvation depends rests with the individual. No one can make that supreme decision but the individual himself. Furthermore, individual interpretation of truth is very real in the case of every Christian, no matter to what branch of the Church he belongs. But it is also true in deciding on the great spiritual verities of life, we are part of a large community, and in addition to our own reaction to truth, there is an authority outside ourselves.

When there's big trouble, the National Guard is always on tap to cope with the situation. That seems to hold true whether it's a prison riot, mob violence, a flood, earthquake, tornado or similar emergency.

Yesterday, it was a contingent of New Mexico's National Guardsmen who were called out to help deal with some hard characters who tried to take over the state prison. They must have done a pretty good job; because shortly thereafter, the convicts decided to "listen to reason."

And it isn't only in instances of localized emergency that the Guard is called upon to lend a hand. There are a lot of families in Pitt County who will remember that their own unit of the National Guard was called up to meet with another kind of emergency just about two years ago.

People are pretty well agreed that the National Guard is just as necessary in our scheme of things as a standing army, navy or air force. It represents the modern equivalent of the "Minute Men" of early Revolutionary days; only the Guard is better trained and better equipped than those part-time soldiers of 1775-76.

It was announced last week that a National Guard unit would be re-organized in Greenville. And while we don't think it will be called upon to meet with any local emergencies, the plan to re-build "Battery C" seems a most worthwhile and promising project.

There are personal advantages for the men who take part in Guard training, and there are community advantages, too. And one must add the very real need for National Guard organizations in the interests of national defense. The reality of a trained part-time soldier far outweighs the value of a "potential" soldier.

We hope the new "Battery C" which is organizing here will find a lot of support and encouragement among Greenville's people. It's starting "from scratch", and will need a lot of genuine interest to make the organization a going concern.

Our Natural Ties Are Made Stronger Sometimes one reads or hears harsh words of criticism from individuals on both sides of the ocean; but when all is said and done, Great Britain and the United States are about as closely tied to a common cause as any two nations can become.

names are not strange to American lips. Too, the grim courage of British people under the fires of adversity has stirred Yankee imagination time and again. Englishmen also follow American contemporary events; and may be even more familiar with some aspects of life in the United States, than are we with some aspects over there.

The natural ties of our English-speaking peoples seem destined to become stronger with the passing of time; and the American Memorial Chapel in St. Paul's cathedral represents another one of those links between Britishers and Americans.

There, the names of 28,000 American men and women who died in war while operating from British bases, are honored in a national shrine. It is a purely British-inspired honor to Americans who died for England and a free world, as well as in defense of their homes in the United States.

And Pitt Counties have been informed that an illustrated volume describing this shrine is available to the serviceman's next-of-kin who ask for it. For many, this book will be a substitution for an actual visit to the chapel where the names of American dead are inscribed.

Objectively speaking, this represents no small undertaking and no small tribute to the British people. They are not particularly noted for exhibitionism or over-emotionalism; and by now, the whole world knows they haven't a lot of money to devote to non-essential endeavours.

Britain has a great debt to the United States. Unquestionably the United States also has a great debt to Britain. We have so much in common, so reliant upon the qualities that go into the national identity of each other that these debts are generally regarded as secondary to the great principal of seeking a common ground in our joint struggles for a better world.

WASHINGTON—The controversial Congressional hunt for Communists and fellow-travelers within the Government will continue under the Eisenhower Administration as a result of post-election revelations, despite his pledge to rout the Reds from Washington.

Disclosures by a New York grand jury and the McCarran Committee, which far surpass Senator McCarthy's most sensational charges, have given a new twist and direction to the search, however.

With undeniable proof, they have shown that, partially through State Department connivance, many subversives have been infiltrated into key, policy-making spots inside the United Nations and its overseas auxiliaries.

As a result, the McCarran-McCarthy spotlight will now be directed toward the vast establishment which the State Department, the Mutual Security Administration, the Commerce Department, Treasury and the Point Four Agency have built up around the globe. It will turn on the foreign personnel who hold sensitive posts in the "cold war."

DANGEROUS SITUATION ABROAD—It is estimated that more than 300,000 people are employed in this far-flung, foreign aid array. They handle or advise on the expenditure of many billions annually, all of which is designed to strengthen the free world against the Russian menace.

They occupy outposts in the international conflict. They are well paid, enjoy unusual privileges and are almost immune from control or supervision.

Both their policies and their behavior have brought many complaints from foreign sources, public and private. Visiting businessmen and members of Congress have questioned both their methods and objectives. Many have had to be recalled, transferred or fired. There have been numerous charges that they are making enemies rather than friends for the United States.

As he did with respect to the U.N. staff members accused by the grand jury and Senator McCarran of disloyalty, Acheson has shown utter indifference to this dangerous situation abroad.

STATE DEPARTMENT APPOINTEES—Thousands of members of this overseas army were appointed on the advice and recommendation of the State Department, which has always sought to keep a firm grip on rival agencies in the foreign field.

Many were transferred after World War II from the Office of Strategic Services and the Office of War Information which were frequently accused of utilizing Communists. There was hardly any "screening."

In those days, of course, when Russia was our ally against Hitler, Red propagandists, resistance leaders and provocateurs made excellent agents for us inside enemy countries. But the current belief—and fear—is that they managed to smuggle themselves into these new, postwar agencies, as they did into the U.N.

REORGANIZATION RECOMMENDED—The task of cleaning them out in European capitals, as well as in remote, backward and underdeveloped countries—from London to Karachi—will undoubtedly require more resources and funds than the McCarran or McCarthy Committees possess.

So, the present proposal contemplates creation of a Congressional or Presidential Commission to re-examine and reorganize the vast overseas organization thrown together by Messrs. Acheson, Harriman, Hoffman et al. The job must be executed diplomatically as well as effectively, for it will require close cooperation with foreign governments and their secret police forces.

U.N. APPROPRIATIONS JEOPARDIZE—Only a thorough housecleaning of this kind will prevent a collapse of the international structure of world peace and collective security, which could exist without American participation and financial underwriting.

These revelations have shocked Congress to such a degree that it may be extremely difficult to obtain sufficient appropriations at the next session for the U.N. and its suspect agencies.

Luckily, both President-elect Eisenhower and John Foster Dulles, Secretary of State-designate, are fully aware of the potential dynamite in this situation, unlike their respective predecessors.

DURKIN'S APPOINTMENT—Senator Taft's blast at the Durkin appointment has made political pariahs of Truman, Stevenson and other Democratic campaigners, whose principal charge against President-elect Eisenhower was that he had become the "captive" of the Ohio Senator and Party conservatives. It has also led prominent labor leaders to rally behind the man they opposed for election.

These strange and indirect consequences may tend to offset the threat of an Eisenhower-Taft split on Capitol Hill. The loud silence on the part of GOP legislators suggests that they deplore the Senator's outspoken criticism of the selection of Durkin as Secretary of Labor. For once, it is possible that "Mister Republican" may have outsmarted himself.

It is well recognized that Cabinet appointments are a personal, not a political or Party matter. Democratic leaders made no squawks when F.D.R. tapped Ickes, Wallace, Stimson and Knox. Moreover, many GOP-ers from urban districts will be only too happy if an Eisenhower rapprochement with Ickes will soften the unions' opposition to them at election time.

Now, When Y'Get In There—

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Wednesday night Arthur Godfrey's television program had as its theme the development of safety equipment by the armed forces. Arthur is an officer in the Naval Reserve and frequently plugs the Navy.

During the program Arthur said something like this: "So many people complain about being in service, but you seldom hear about those of us who enjoyed it. Personally, I enjoyed every minute of my tour of duty and there are plenty of others like me."

Since I am in the Army Reserve and keep abreast of developments in the service I paid particular attention to what Arthur had to say. This business of enjoying "every minute of it" is something I can't agree with. If Arthur could have been with me one freezing night in the field when our unit had to change positions about every three hours I doubt if he would have enjoyed that. And any serviceman could name quite a few more examples. But Arthur deserves credit for sticking up for the services. Frankly, I prefer to be a civilian by about 100 to one. But I do think that the services receive an undue amount of criticism. Somebody should stick up for them once in a while.

It all depends upon the opportunities you have in civilian life. If they are limited, and opportunities in the service are better, it's very attractive. The most inviting advantage of service duty is the retirement plan. Plenty of servicemen who went on duty at 18 will have the opportunity to retire at 38. And don't believe that bunk about the service ruining your ability to make your way in civilian life. On the contrary, the service offers its men schools that will better prepare them to face civilian life. And the men have the opportunity to take time to attend the schools.

Unless the program has changed, a serviceman has 30 days of leave year. Some civilian jobs, but not too many, offer two weeks a year with pay. More offer only one week.

The married serviceman with quarters on a military base has it called. His quarters man to fill it up. The idea of getting a bill at the end of the month is absurd. If his fense falls down he calls someone else to put it back up. If his wife has a baby he pays a few dollars for some fee that is minute compared to civilian life.

Most people know all of the disadvantages of service life. In my opinion, the greatest one is never knowing from one day to the next where you will be. And after all, you may be called upon to give up your life for your country. Of course civilians stand that same chance.

Let me repeat that I prefer civilian life 100 to one. But the services deserve an occasional boost. And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

DEATHS — So much emphasis has been placed in recent years upon the increasing casualty rate on public highways, it is refreshing to find that the overall death rate has declined in North Carolina tremendously within the past 35 years. There was an actual numerical drop in number of deaths reported in 1916 and in 1951, and almost phenomenal decline in percentage ratio. The public health statistics section in the State Board of Health has compiled figures to show that 31,389 people died in North Carolina in 1916, compared with 31,140 in 1951. Meantime the population of the State had grown from about two and a quarter million to more than four million. These dates are used for comparison because 1916 was the first year that North Carolina was admitted to the death registration area and 1951 is the last year for which reports have been made. It is not pleasant to be told that during that 35 year period more than a million North Carolinians have died—1,167,362 to be exact.

REASONS — Reasons assigned by Public Health officials for the accelerating decline in death rate include: The discovery and growing use of immunizing agents for combating the spread of preventable disease, which resulted in greatly reducing the annual deaths among children, and which all but eliminated such diseases as typhoid and smallpox; the reduction of many diseases by sanitation, drainage and other modern devices; the discovery of so-called "wonder drugs" which now reduce many forms of infection, which formerly took a heavy toll of life almost overnight; and generally improved living standards among the people. These scientific advancements have contributed to reduction in infant mortality and to the increase of human longevity. Decrease in number of deaths from specific causes is dramatically reflected in the vital statistics.

SPECIFIC — Comparative records of 1916 and 1951 show almost unbelievable decrease in deaths due to a dozen specific causes. Deaths from typhoid fever dropped from 702 to just three; whooping cough from 402 to 53; diphtheria from 410 to 18; tetanus from 69 to 18; tuberculosis from 3,129 to 584; dysentery from 457 to 20; malaria from 337 to three; pellagra from 484 to 14; pneumonia from 2,157 to 1,020; infant mortality from 7,112 to 3,620; and maternal deaths from 593 to 118.

INCREASES — On the other hand, and darker side of the picture is the tremendous increase in deaths resulting from the so-called "degenerative diseases" which are more prevalent in middle and old age. Victims of cancer went up from 1,083 to 3,283; of heart diseases from 2,372 to 10,342; of apoplexy from 1,882 to 4,039. The faster tempo of modern society is reflected in the increase of automobile traffic deaths from 84 in 1916 to 1,143 in 1951. During the same period suicides went up from 84 to 288. Actually on basis of automobile miles the death rate from that cause is perhaps a greater now than it was 35 years ago.

NATURAL — Nor is there anything alarming about the tremendous increase in deaths from diseases of greater incidence in later years of human life. It is a matter of simple mathematics. The greatly reduced death rate among children and young people, as reflected in the statistics for infant mortality, diphtheria and whooping cough to mention only three of the dozen—means that a much larger percentage of the population, which itself had nearly doubled, lived to reach the age where apoplexy, cancer and heart ailment be expected to attack. Further emphasis is given to the fact that people are living longer by records showing that in 1850 the "average age" of North Carolinians was 38, while in 1950 more than one-fourth of all the people in this state were over 40, and there were 128,000 over 70 and 9,000 over 85. The "average age" was tentatively fixed at the middle fifties.

UNBALANCED — A seemingly obvious conclusion from these figures is that medical science, in the fields of both preventative and curative medicine, had advanced much more rapidly than social science in the area of providing for an increasingly aged population. Not only are people living longer now, but their physical and mental condition is better now at 70 than it was a few years ago at 50.

RETIREMENT — The idea of retirement pension plans for industrial and government workers did not gain general acceptance or application until within the past quarter century. The North Carolina Teachers and State Employees' Retirement System was in-

What Other Papers Are Thinking

ON FUTURE CAMPAIGNS (Wilson Times)

Amazingly, politicians still want to edit newspapers. Give them that power, however, and we would have a duplicate of Russia where the newspapers are state owned. In a hearing in Washington the other day, one Congressman proposed that a limit be set on the space a newspaper can give. Is that within Congress' province? And is it in keeping with the first amendment to the Constitution? What newspapers give and what candidates' for office spend are two different things. Some newspapers have been known to give a great deal of space and get nothing in the way of paid advertising. The Congressman who offered that proposal happens to live in Michigan. In Detroit, that state's newspapers are part of chains. And the Congressman particularly resented the way one chain plugged for Eisenhower. It might, he evidently fears, in some subsequent election plug for his opponent. But where newspapers are competitive, as they are in Detroit, the people, if they don't like what they're getting, can switch. They're under no particular obligation to take one newspaper all their life. The Congressman whose editing didn't consider that phase, He simply wanted to limit the space a newspaper could give. Obviously, as history has proved, newspapers don't swing elections. They help, we'll all admit. In that regard they're like unions. They speak for the membership, but they don't deliver. The newspapers, however, don't promise to and they expect no rewards. The union leaders, on the other hand do expect handsome rewards. All of that the Congressman should consider before he offers such controversial recommendations. America may not be satisfied with her newspapers, but Americans don't want them jinked with. And, last of all, they don't want politicians doing their editing as they do in the totalitarian nations.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER With the influx of larger numbers of businessmen into Washington as the new Administration takes over, there may be some hope that something will be done about the statistical jungle in the capital.

Almost every government agency has a section to compile statistics. Most of the figures are useful and some are highly valuable to business management. But there are several faults with governmental reporting:

First, many overlap. Second, large areas are not covered. Third—and this is the worst fault—they are compiled independently by so many different agencies that it takes an expert to find out what is available on almost any subject.

Both the Bureau of the Census and the Department of Labor keep tabs on employment; each uses a different approach and results have only a hand-waving relation to each other. Two agencies recently engaged in a public battle when one of them announced that families had overspent $100 in 1950 while another was saying they had increased their savings by billions that year.

Statistics on business are compiled by Commerce, Federal Reserve, SEC, Labor, Agriculture and some 50 other departments or agencies. The reports are so scattered, so overlapping and so conflicting that it takes a bit of doing to find out what's what—and often the figures most wanted aren't compiled after all. One large manufacturing company used to pay a woman a fair salary just to send in certain figures that gave the company insight into what its competitors were doing. The company could have obtained the information direct simply by asking to be put on a mailing list. It didn't know that and the woman wasn't telling it.

Existing confusion is not the fault of the outgoing Administration; in fact it has taken some steps to improve and correlate statistical information. Congress is mostly to blame since, in setting up new agencies, it has a weakness for providing for new statistical sections.

Economist Veigl D. Reed (vice president of J. Walter Thompson Co.) points out that anyone wanting marketing information has to call or visit about 60 agencies to find out what they have. It may turn out that only 16 have data on the specific subject.

Dr. Reed suggests the setting up of a central index of marketing information in the Department of Commerce where all information on marketing would be available. He says it can be done without any increase in personnel.

It might be a good idea to set up such an index for all government information. It might also be a good idea for Congress to re-examine all information-compiling work, correlating present efforts, eliminating duplication and providing for coverage of now neglected areas.

SPORT SHIRT STANDARDS.... NOW IN EFFECT..... Standardization of sizes of men's sports shirts are now in effect. After a large number of meetings and conferences among retailers and manufacturers, agreement was reached on four sizes: S (14-14½), M (15-15½), L (16-16½) and XL (17-17½). The standards were approved by the Department of Commerce and December 7 set as the effective date.

Standardization is expected to permit retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers to operate on lower inventories.

IN NEW WATERPROOFING... POROSITY NOT LOST... A "miracle" leather tanning process has been announced by the Leather Industries of America. The process prevents moisture from entering shoes from the outside and at the same time permits moisture to be evaporated from the inside. It will give shoes the advantage of waterproofing without the usual sweatiness. Tanning is still being done in experimental batches. Leather so tanned can also be used in gloves and garments where both porosity and waterproofing is desired.

SAVINGS IN SPEEDING... SPENDING POINTED OUT... For the balance of this year, a corporation in the excess-profits bracket can spend $1,000 at a net cost of $180, which is the same outlay for most $330 next year. The new 350-page report on the EPT by Jacquim Bierman, William J. Casey and J.K. Lasser. The report is entitled "Excess Profits Tax — Planning, Relief, Refunds" (as is published by Business Reports, Inc., Roslyn, N.Y., at $24).

COFFEE EVERYWHERE... UNDER FRANCHISE PLAN... Hot coffee vending machines will become as common as gum machines if an ambitious program is worked out by a manufacturer (Rudd-Melikian, Inc., 1949 N. Howard St., Philadelphia). The company plans to franchise 200 distributors in key trading areas, with each investing $25,000. The company expects the distributors to place 10,000 vending machines in small plants, offices, barber shops, gas stations, grocery stores, laundromats the next year.

NEW PRODUCTS TRIMS: Three-dimensional package ornaments, made of paper, fabric, yarn and foam rubber in more than 12 different designs, are being introduced (by Hallmar, 25th and Grand Ave., Kansas City 10, Mo.). They each combine a "to and from" card and may be attached to package with gold foil seals or dangled from a ribbon.

FREES: Traction treads of flexible steel mesh, to help free cars stuck in snow, mud, sand or ice, are being marketed in pairs (by Hayes Products, 800 N. Clark St., Chicago 10). Treads in front of each rear wheel allow car to move forward; placed behind wheels, car can move backward.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK (AP)—Are you going to have an office Christmas party this year?

Well, the chances are it won't be as wild and woolly as the season before. The office Christmas party is on the way to becoming as safe and sane as the Fourth of July.

The wives are seeing to that. They're turning it from Roman holiday into a family affair. The office Christmas party has a long tradition in American folklore. In the old days the boss used to call in the clerks ten minutes before quitting time. He broke open a bottle, poured a round of drinks, and toasted them to a "Merry Christmas." He then grimly locked up the bottle, and everybody went home from work three minutes early, feeling a bit misty-eyed about the old man's generosity.

With the entrance of women into the business world the system subtly changed. Over the years the boss was finally educated to the idea it would be a fine thing if he went home early. The employees then broke out their own bottles, had some sandwiches sent up, and the spirit of revelry took over.

Some connoisseurs regard this as the true hey-day of the office Christmas party, and it is still celebrated that way by some firms. "I remember the year the bookkeeper was chasing a stenographer from the top of one desk to another, and he fell off and broke a leg," one oldtimer recalled fondly. "We use to gather around the water cooler and sing, and then have a fist fight or two. For days they'd be sweeping up broken glass and pulling lost employees out of the filing cabinets."

The wreckage and pagan abandon of these celebrations led many employers to put out a flat order: "Nor more Christmas parties in the office. Hire a hall." This is exactly what the employees did. But the hilarity was still unrestrained. Many a divorce case started because a husband returned from the office Christmas party hearing lipstick souvenirs from his office wife. Many a celebrant didn't even get home until Christmas dawn—and found his kids already had opened their presents.

Washington Letter

By DILLON GRAHAM For Anne Eads

WASHINGTON—Biggest man on Capitol Hill? You'd think Democrats and Republicans would give you an argument on that, but they all agree. He's Ed Brown.

Some say Brown must be the biggest policeman in the world. He stands 6 feet 9½, and weighs 300. Everyone around the Capitol building knows Ed, and thousands of sightseeing visitors will remember him. He's stationed near the ground floor door on the northeast Senate corner.

Brown is a quiet, polite, easy-going fellow who likes to tell stories in his soft Virginia drawl. A 56-year-old bachelor, he has been a Washington policeman for 27 years. For six years in the 1930s he was doorman at Vice President John Garner's office.

Brown comes from near Culpeper, Va. in the Shenandoah Valley some 60 miles south. "I went to work in the fields as soon as I could pull up ragweeds without falling backwards," he'll tell you. His middle name is Ficklin and he says that explains his great size. He claims his great-great-grandfather and his seven brothers in Scotland were all over 7 feet tall.

Brown believes in taking life easy. He explains that "Father's people thought work was coarse, and I'm beginning to believe they were right. He wants to write a book, "From Where I Sat," but doubts he'll ever do it. Brown stands watch by the door. That means visitors ask him for information. Here are frequent questions: How long does it take to get to a particular place in town—without saying whether by foot, bus, streetcar or auto. Where is the President's office? (He doesn't have one in the Capitol.) Where does the "Senate Committee" meet? —without saying what committee. Where does one get out of the building—with the door straight ahead. After years of this, Brown sighs: "How the world has gotten as far along as it has just annoys me."

N.C. Evangelist Greeted In Tokyo

TOKYO (AP)—Evangelist Billy Graham arrived today en route to Korea, to conduct revival meetings.

Seventy-five American men, women and children met Graham and sang a hymn in the airport terminal building after he arrived from the U.S.

Graham told newsmen he planned to ask President-elect Dwight Eisenhower to "call a day of prayer for Korea."

He said he did not believe there was any easy solution to the Korean War, "but by prayer and trust and faith in God a way can be found."

Graham, leader of the Youth for Christ movement, said he would leave for Korea Sunday. He plans five-day revival meetings in Pusan and Seoul. He was invited by Korean churches.

He said he also wants to "see as many troops as I can. I hope to spend Christmas at the front. I understand Cardinal Spellman will be there, too."

Graham will be guest of honor Thursday night in Tokyo at a dinner for missionaries and chaplains. He said he has appointments Friday with Gen. Mark Clark, U.S. Ambassador Robert Murphy and Prince and Princess Midsa, the emperor's brother and sister-in-law.

Pres. Truman Returning To His Washington Desk

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (UP)—President Truman is expected to spend at least part of the day at work, either at the "Little White House" here or at his penthouse suite in the Muehlebach Hotel in nearby Kansas City.

Mr. Truman leaves for Washington this evening.

He is expected to spend at least part of the day at work, either at the "Little White House" here or at his penthouse suite in the Muehlebach Hotel in nearby Kansas City.

Both the funeral and graveside rites were private and only a few persons were admitted to the "Little White House" for the services.

Pottery is made by some quite primitive peoples while others who have advanced considerably in civilization never have acquired the art.

Eighteen Die In Falling Houses

BARLETTA, Italy (UP)—Eighteen persons were killed and 14 were injured, an official report said today, when two apartment houses collapsed after 48 hours of steady rain.

Troops were called out to aid police and firemen in rescuing persons trapped in the wreckage, while the rain still streamed down. The causes their foundations weakened by the downpour, collapsed with a roar shortly before 1 a. m.

Plans 4,700-Mile Trip By Rowboat

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UP)—Eufrasio Carnot, 50, made plans today to start out soon on a 4,743-mile rowboat trip alone to New York.

In 1950, Carnot and a companion rowed 1,142 miles from here to Rio de Janeiro, but abandoned their plans to continue on to New York when they ran out of money.

The money to build Balmoral Castle in Scotland was willed to Queen Victoria by a wealthy subject, says the National Geographic Society.

China Said To Be Relying More And More On Soviet

By PHIL NEWSOM
United Press, Foreign News Editor
A so-called Chinese "third force" claims that Red China is so exhausted by the war that she is becoming more and more dependent on Russia and that Russian "advisers" are taking over both government offices and industry.

This "third force" has its expression in a mimeographed sheet called "Freedom Front" and has its headquarters in Kowloon, Hong Kong, which is on the Chinese mainland just outside the barbed wire barriers to Red China.

It is a force which has opposed both the Chinese Communists and the Nationalist regime of Chiang Kai-shek.

Its sources of information are considered good, and therefore its observations are interesting.

It reports there is no such thing as Chinese "Titoism" at the moment, which might split the Chinese Reds from their Russian teachers. The Chinese are too dependent on Russia for that and are becoming more so.

The publication says that as a result of Premier and Foreign Minister Chen En-lai's September visit to Moscow, the Russians agreed to supply more jet fighters, Stalin tanks, howitzers and other weapons to enable new Red drives against the United Nations forces in Korea.

These drives, however, will not be intended as a push against Seoul or any attempt to push straight down the war-ravaged peninsula to Pusan.

Rather, "Freedom Front" contends, they will be intended to inflict more casualties on the U.N. forces and thus shake morale at home, particularly in the United States.

The Reds, it is said, will attempt to avoid anything which would invite American bombing of industrial areas in Manchuria or elsewhere in China proper.

The publication said that because of heavy American bombing attacks against North Korea since last June, the Chinese have moved their North Korean headquarters to Mukden in Manchuria, with a field command post at Antung, across the Yalu River from North Korea.

The Reds, it is claimed, have suffered about 600,000 casualties in North Korea and as a result now are split among themselves as to future policy. One wing, regards the Korean war as a white elephant, wants to get out and to concentrate on reducing Chiang Kai-shek's forces in Formosa.

Another faction, entirely under the influence of Russia, wants to continue the Korean conflict.

The Reds, however, it is said, still fear an attack by Chiang's forces on the mainland. Orders have been issued for large scale burnings of buildings and supplies in coastal areas in the event of such an attack.

Meany, Reuther Plan To Confer

WASHINGTON (UP)—The newly-elected presidents of the CIO and AFL will get together early in January to discuss merger of the nation's two big labor organizations.

Plans for the meeting were disclosed by George Meany, AFL president, who said he made the arrangements in a telephone conversation Friday with CIO president Walter Reuther.

Meany said he and Reuther both favor "unity" between the AFL and CIO, and that they will try to work out the details at their meeting soon after Jan. 5.

Meany also said that President-elect Eisenhower's selection of Martin P. Durkin as secretary of labor would not change the AFL's policies "one iota."

Meany said it was a "very pleasant surprise for me" that Eisenhower "crossed party lines" to name Durkin to his cabinet. Durkin, a Democrat, was president of the AFL plumbers union.

106-Year-Old Veteran Recalls Civil War As One That Govn't Buying Of Slaves Could Have Averted

By AL KUETTNER
United Press Staff Correspondent
ATLANTA (UP)—W. D. Townsend, who doesn't know what historians have written about the Civil War because he can't read, called on his memories of three years as a combat infantryman in the conflict today and said the whole thing might have been averted.

"I'll tell you how this war came about," the 106-year-old Olla, La., veteran said. "Ole Abe Lincoln, he run for president in the North. Old Jeff Davis, he run for president in the South. And both won.

"Well, wouldn't 'nair one give down to the other. That's why they had that fight."

Townsend, one of five Confederate veterans still alive, feels that if President Lincoln had paid Southerners for their slaves, the owners might have been willing to free them, thus easing the tensions that exploded into war.

"My father owned 44 slaves," Townsend said. "Now, slavery was bad. But when you had an investment, just wasn't a man could turn it up. And my father was against it, too. A slave was worth from $1,000 to $2,000, depending on if he was well or sick. Ole Abe should have paid for them. The North had the money."

Townsend was roughly accurate on his history, although he can't read or write and says "I wouldn't recognize my name if I was to see it."

The Confederacy was organized at Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 4-9, 1862 and Jefferson Davis was elected president. Lincoln was inaugurated March 7. Fort Sumter at Charleston, S. C., was fired upon April 12, 1861, and the war was on.

The oldest Confederate vet, according to his own statistics, is Walter W. Williams of Franklin, Tex., who says he is 110. State records show him to be a mere 107. And he's not from Texas but from Shawam County, Miss., where he claims he was born Nov. 14, 1842. The other living vets are John Salling, 106, Slant, Va.; Thomas Evans Riddle, 106, Austin, Tex., and William A. Lundy, 104, Crestview, Fla.

All the old-timers still talk a lot but they spend most of their time sitting and rocking - and talking about the war. Williams once liked fox hunting but gave up the sport at age 107.

Franklin still maintains the South quit fighting Yankee too soon.

"We quit just five minutes too early," he said. "They was gettin' ready to stack arms and we beat 'em to it by just five minutes. And we didn't get beat. We was starved out. Got down to nothin' but parched a sorns to eat. I've et many a parched acorn."

After all the years and experiences since his birth May 15, 1846, Salling lives just 400 yards from the place where he was born. He still farms a 37-acre tract and occasionally walks the mile into town.

Lundy provides this formula for life which he says he has followed: "Drink plenty of homemade moonshine and stay away from doctors. Them damn thing, will kill you."

Colorado Finds Work For Its Mental Patients

PUEBLO, Colo. (U.P.)—Colorado State Hospital here is one of the few institutions of its kind in the nation where a full-time job is made of securing work for its discharged mental patients.

The observation was made by Dr. R.H. Williams, social service research analyst of the National Institute of Mental Health, which is affiliated with the U.S. Bureau of Public Health.

After watching the work of Thomas Dillingham, who conducts this annual vocational rehabilitation program, Dr. Williams said he planned to make a report on the work being done and distribute it for possible use by institutions elsewhere.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

AP Newsfeatures
THE PLAN'S the thing, architects say. It can make a house easy to live in. Here a center hall provides access to all parts of the house without requiring passage through any other room. This is Plan B-2191 by Alvin Cassens, Jr., architect, 145 So. Franklin Ave., Valley Stream, N. Y. With three bedrooms and two baths, the house covers 1,333 square feet without garage and terrace and contains 28,000 cubic feet with basement. It is 52 feet 8 inches wide with garage.

Girl Collects From Fiance

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—A 19-year-old girl plans to marry soon a man from whom she won $1,600 damages for a road accident.

She was a passenger in his car when it overturned. Her injuries were a fractured skull and a scalp wound which caused the loss of part of her left ear, leaving her with a permanent scar. She admitted under cross-examination that she became engaged after the accident.

48 Cases Annually
The program carried out by Dillingham and the Colorado State Hospital is unique, Dr. Williams said, adding that is rare to find a rehabilitation worker dealing with such a large variety of cases.

Dillingham handles about 48 hospital rehabilitation cases a year, in addition to keeping in close touch with those already placed in jobs for several years.

His job is a difficult one, for he must study the qualifications of each patient carefully, find understanding employers, and then continue to act as a friend and adviser during the transition period between hospital and the outside world.

However, Dillingham does not take all the credit for the marked success of his highly successful rehabilitation program.

Cooperation Needed
Rehabilitation of mental patients, he said, requires the understanding cooperation of the entire community, the welfare department, family service organizations, the employment service, doctors and the hospital staff, and many other persons and groups who necessarily are involved in the rehabilitation program.

Dr. Williams said he was impressed with the good relations that exist between Dillingham and the hospital, as well as the optimism and high morale of the hospital staff.

Women Grads Show Increase

BRUSSELS (AP)—The number of women university graduates rose by 179 per cent from 1937 to 1947 in Belgium, according to the Belgian National Institute of Statistics.

The 1937 total of 1,596 women graduates jumped to 4,458 in 1947. Men graduates only took a 25 per cent step upwards from 41,620 in 1937 to 51,243 in 1947. The total number of graduates increased in these 10 years by 12,485, rising from 43,216 to 55,701. Only 525 of the 1947 graduates said that they were unemployed.

Steel Industry Has Good Future

MANILA (AP)—A U.S. industrialist predicts a bright future for the steel industry in the Philippines.

Jacques Lourie, managing director of Hydropress Inc., New York, said the Philippines has abundant resources for the growing steel industry. He made his statement after visiting government steel projects under construction by the National Shipyards and the Steel Mills Corp.

Tobacco Use Is Up In Australia

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Australia's increased tobacco consumption is caused mainly by women taking up smoking, according to Mr. Latham Withall, director of the Associated Chambers of Manufacturers.

Australia now consumes about 42 million pounds of tobacco a year — five pounds for every man, woman, and child, he said. Consumption before the war was only 3½ pounds per person.

American Quilt Australia-Bound

CENTRALIA, Ill. (U.P.)—A Perry County farm wife, Mrs. Sam Shaw, made a Holland tulip quilt that got around unexpectedly. She made it for a Milan, Mich., daughter-in-law Mrs. Harry Shaw, who put it in a church bazaar. It was sold for $25 to a visitor from Scotland. The Scot sent it to a New Zealand relative who had asked for an American-made quilt.

Bible Words to Live by

PSALMS 119:11 — "Thy word have I hid in my heart that I might not sin against Thee."

In 20 years as a university professor and a clergyman I have seen thousands of people who knew how to live creative and effective lives but who do not possess the power to translate their knowledge into human behavior.

There is only one way—that is for God to possess our lives in such a way that His Word is expressed in us. This great passage of Scripture has changed the lives of multitudes. When the Word of God is in the heart, the will of man has power to overcome temptation and to live triumphantly.

Power-Steering Introduced To Beat Tractor Fatigue

COLUMBUS, Neb. (U.P.)—Walter Behlen, a manufacturer, thinks he has found a way for farmers to avoid the fatigue that results from a day of piloting a tractor through rough fields.

Behlen has perfected a power-steering mechanism for tractors that he says should put the country's five million tractors in the luxury class.

In a recent test on a farm near Columbus, Cap Mueller drove tractors with and without power steering. To make the test as scientific as possible, Behlen wore a respiratory meter which checks the number and length of breaths taken. In driving over a given course with a cornpicker Mueller took 168 deep breaths without power steering and 142 shallow breaths with the

CHUTNEY INSTILLS EVERYONE WITH THE PICK-EM-UP-AND-PUT-EM-AWAY SYSTEM AROUND THE OFFICE.

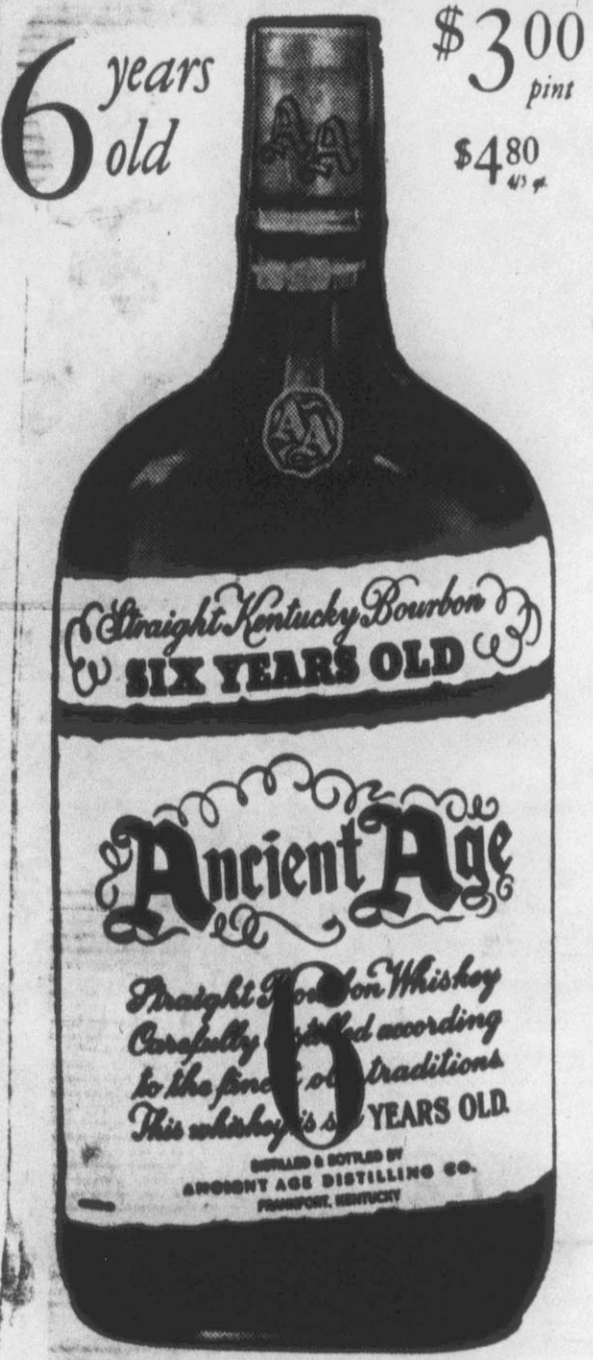

AND HE USES THE SAME SYSTEM AROUND THE HOUSE... ASK MRS. CHUTNEY!

By FAGALY and SHORTEN

Behlen began work on his power-steering device after he figured out that a farmer expends enough energy in one day of fighting a tractor wheel to pitch 80 tons of hay onto a wagon or shovel 3,000 bushels of shelled corn into a bin to push various buttons to make things work. An elderly woman recently tried every gadget—and finally punched a button that sounded a false fire alarm.

device. Behlen's device is a simple hydraulically-operated unit that he produces in his eastern Nebraska manufacturing plant. He said only hydraulic units are being used now although he is testing electrical and mechanical types for possible production.

A Behlen unit can be installed in about an hour on several types of tractors and other equipment. About three feet of the conventional central steering shaft is removed and a new shaft, with the unit attached is installed. A small specially-built hydraulic pump is sandwiched between the timing gear case and the magneto or distributor assembly.

The unit itself consists of a fluid pump driven off the engine with a hydraulic gear motor, converting the fluid pressure into a mechanical torque. A control valve operates automatically with the turning of the steering wheel. The mechanical torque begins with only one pound of turning effort and ends at approximately 75 pounds at the steering wheel rim. That one pound of pressure, which the farmer has to exert in order to turn his machine in the soft, bumpy earth, is equal to the pressure applied on the trigger to fire a shotgun.

Safety Factor
Behlen visualizes the aid of his device in contour farming which forces the farmer continually to fight the wheel to prevent his vehicle from sliding down or climbing up the incline. He foresees a safety factor, too, since the backslip of a tractor as it strikes clods or crosses furrows often has thrown farmers to death or injury. And, Behlen adds, the National Safety Council says the tired farmer is a careless farmer who is likely to allow a disabling accident.

Behlen, who during World War II designed a device to throw explosive missiles from merchant vessels, now manufactures as his main product a revolutionary frameless metal building he designed. The buildings get their strength from corrugated sides.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UP)—Elliott R. LaHommedieu's name was one of two St. Joseph county petit juries meeting at the same time. Circuit Judge Dan Pyle excused him so he could serve in superior court. Pyle said he'd never seen such a coincidence in 22 years on the bench. Names are drawn from boxes containing all persons listed on property tax rolls.

Five Accidents Investigated By City Policemen

Greenville police investigated five motor vehicle collisions in the city during the week-end.
Cars driven by Carlton G. Joyner, 1816 East Third street and Wallace R. Conway, 2301 East Fourth Street, collided yesterday afternoon on North Green street, near Morgan street. Katherine Fay Joyner, three years old, was painfully injured. She was treated at a hospital and released. Police said the collision was the result of confusion over signals. Damage to Joyner's car was estimated to be $500; Conway's, $35.

Nathaniel Taft, Negro, 1416 West Sixth street, and Robert H. Hart, 312 West Second street, were involved in a collision on North Green Taft on the charge of careless and reckless driving. Damage to Taft's car was estimated to be $40; Hart's, $100.
Police investigated several other collisions in which property damage was nominal and made no arrests.

Grower Aided By Pet Horned Owl

BELTON, Tex. (AP)—Pop-Pop's a horned owl, makes it easy for Neison I. Hander, a pecan grower to kill crows by the hundreds. Hander ties 3-foot twine to one of Pop-Pop's legs. He ties the other end to a crow, dead or alive. Hander des nearby. Other crows think Pop-Pop is attacking one of their buddies, and they're right. Pop-Pop loves owl meat. The aroused crows swoop down on Pop-Pop. Hander kills the crow with his shotgun. As far as a pecan farmer is concerned there just isn't any bird more destructive than a crow. Hander says. He has tried many ways of controlling crows and the owl method is the best.

Radar May Help Catch Smugglers

SINGAPORE (AP)—Small craft engaged in smuggling goods and illegal immigrants into Singapore may in the future have to pierce a radar screen ringing the island, establishing a radar station atop the government is considering a hill overlooking Singapore harbor. The newspaper Sunday Standard reported recently. The station would be in contact with police patrol craft by radio.

The Sport Reflector

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Sports Writer

Little Cecil Heath hit double figures in basketball scoring for the first time last Saturday night when he hit for 14 points against Guilford. And the occasion could not have come at a better time.

With less than two minutes of playing time remaining, Heath had but seven points for the entire game and was almost resigned to letting someone else be the scoring hero.

The game score was very close, however, and the Guilford players began going to extremes to gain possession of the ball. Heath bested Guilford on the East Carolina team, was charged with retaining possession of the ball and the only way Guilford could force him to surrender it was by fouling. That's exactly what they did.

Heath was fouled four times in the last minute and a half of action—meaning that he got eight chances to score from the free throw line. Cecil hit seven straight before he missed one but he got some consolation from the miss when Sonny Russell tipped in the rebound for two more points.

Cecil played four years of basketball for New Hanover High School in Wilmington and was a member of the 1950 State AAA Championship team. He played varsity ball last year but was a sub for Toddy Pennell.

In all those games he played in high school, Cecil says he never hit 10 or more points. And he figures it's a good feeling to finally do it. Needless to say, he's looking forward to doing it again. He'll get his chance Saturday night when the Pirates play host to Lenoir Rhyne in a North State Conference game.

There have been plenty of inquiries about the absence of Bobby Hodges from East Carolina's line-up Saturday night when the Pirates took on Guilford. The absence was quite beyond Hodges' control.

Hodges' wife was released from the hospital only Friday after being ill for several days. On top of that, there was death in his wife's family Friday and, naturally, he had to attend the funeral. He was looking for a way which would permit his participation in the game, but circumstances made it impossible for him to play.

The big boy will be in the line-up Saturday night when Lenoir Rhyne comes to town for a North State Conference game in the new gym.

Listening to the Florida-Kentucky game Saturday afternoon while getting the eggbeater washed by Carr Allen's automobile swipes, I boldly announced that either Florida's Fullback Rick Casares should make All-American or Bill Stern was schmalzing up the game for the listeners' benefit. Stern can make a five yard loss sound more exciting than some announcers describing a 50-yard touchdown run.

A young marine who was also listening in on the game calmly assured me that Casares was every bit as good as Stern said he was. The marine was from Casares' team and he played high school football against Casares and later opposed him when playing with South Carolina's freshman team.

"We had a pretty good freshman team at South Carolina in 1950 and at the halftime were leading Florida's freshmen 6-0.

"Just after the second half started Florida sent in a big, awkward looking kid that stumbled and almost fell when he ran on the field. I didn't recognize him and joined in with the rest of the team in cheering the Florida's and asking them where they found this big fellow from Gator.

"On the first play from scrimmage the big substitute ran straight over our tackle and linebacker and trampled 40 yards before he could be stopped. The rest of the afternoon he ripped our line to shreds. I recognized him on the second play when I was hitting him with a jarring tackle that jarred me enough to leave the game but barely slowed his stride.

"That day Rick Casares impressed every member of the South Carolina freshman team of his All-American calibre, and I honestly won't be surprised at any honors he might attain before he finishes college."

After Florida's 27-0 drubbing I wonder if Kentucky has any doubts about Casares' capabilities.

Maryland Stars In Senior Bowl

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)—Maryland's passing combination of All-American Jack Scarbath and Lloyd Colterlyann will perform with South forces in the Senior Bowl game here Jan. 3.

Announcement was made today that Colterlyann, 6 feet 2 inch offensive end, had accepted a bid to the all-star game. Scarbath had been announced previously.

Phantoms Seek First Cage Win At Goldsboro Tonight

Play Wilson In First Home Game Friday Night

The Greenville Phantoms hit the road again tonight and travel to Goldsboro for their third basketball contest of the season.

The Phantoms have been reversed in their first two outings but are showing improvement all the while. Last Friday's showing against Rocky Mount was a considerable improvement over the first game and Coach Bo Farley's boys are gunning for an upset over the Triple-A Goldsboro outfit.

Leading the team will be sharpshooter Smith Worthington who has dumped in 33 points for the Phantoms thus far. Worthington, All-Northeastern conference choice and outstanding candidate for All-State honors, will team with Walter Perkins at the forwards. Bobby Conway, a tall varsity newcomer, is set at the pivot and George Sideris and veteran Jimmy Cheatham round out the team at guards.

Doug Morgan and Preston Fields, two members of last year's varsity, stand ready for immediate substitution. Guy Smith, a fast newcomer to the cage sport, has shown his speed to great advantage in floor play and is slated for considerable action. Bobby Starkey, Leon Hardee and Dixie Hobgood also will be used as reserves.

Friday night the Phantoms play Wilson in their first home game. Wilson drubbed the Phantoms in their first encounter but the lads of Greenville High have a more polished attack now and plan to give the Bulldogs a warm reception.

No Broadcast For Lions Bowl Game

There have been numerous requests as to whether or not the Lions' Bowl game in Salisbury Saturday between East Carolina College and Clarion State Teacher's College would be broadcast.

Coach Jack Boone announced today that present plans DO NOT include broadcasting the game.

Ticket sales are available at the athletic office in the new gym and during the remainder of the week tickets will be on sale from 7 to 8 p. m. for the benefit of those not able to make an afternoon purchase.

Hodges Return To Boost Buc Cagers

Pirates Begin To Round Into Shape

The traditional Monday afternoon dummy scrimmage was the order-of-the-day yesterday for members of the East Carolina College football squad as they entered their final week of preparation for their appearance Saturday in the Lions Bowl at Salisbury.

The Pirates were given a chance to thoroughly rehearse their old plays yesterday. Every member of the squad worked out in his own individual position and much of the lack of coordination caused by the two weeks layoff after the final regular season game is rapidly disappearing.

Coach Jack Boone also had members of the defensive backfield go through a session of pass defense. Their Lions Bowl opponent, Clarion State Teachers College, is reputed to be one of the better passing ball clubs the Pirates have met all season.

Emphasis on polishing the offense is expected to continue throughout the week. The need for a strong offense is evident whenever Clarion's record for the past season is mentioned. The Pennsylvanians were undefeated in eight games and had only 24 points scored against them in the eight games.

Thus far, the only suggestion of a line-up change has been at left end where J. D. Bradford will replace Bobby Hodges. Bradford is a freshman from Fayetteville who was an All-State high school player in 1951. He saw considerable action with the Pirates during the regular season but most of his time was spent on defense. Hodges won't play in the game because of basketball.

The remainder of the offensive and defensive line-ups are expected to remain the same. Sandy Siler and Dick Cherry will alternate at quarterback with Siler scheduled to start the game. Also in the backfield will be half Paul Gay, halfback Hilar Yarborough, and fullback Claude King.

Wake Forest Eyes Upset Over State

WAKE FOREST (UP)—The Wake Forest Demon Deacons, who upset Duke University Saturday night, will be trying to top that feat here tonight with an upset over the conference defending champions of North Carolina State College.

Center Dickie Hemric and forward Jack Williams are the principal point makers for the Deacons so far and will lead the attack. Hemric scored 28 points against Duke Saturday and Williams scored 25 as the Deacons took the game 91 to 86.

Coach Everett Case has greater reserve strength on his state team but has commended after three victories that "we haven't been sharp at all this season."

Duke goes to Lynchburg, Va. tonight for a conference tilt with Washington and Lee and both will be seeking their first win. The Generals were easily defeated by N. C. State and the University of North Carolina and lost another to West Virginia 89-83 after a tight battle Saturday night.

Furman invades Davidson. Both teams have lost to State but Davidson holds a win over Erskine in early play.

West Virginia will be seeking its third win over George Washington at home tonight.

Virgils each plays Marshall.

ers on Sunday. The Lions and Rams currently are tied for the division leadership.

A flip of a coin last week decided that a playoff game will be played here Dec. 21 at Briggs Stadium. Kerbawy said playoff tickets will go on sale next Monday, with no mail orders accepted because of the Christmas rush. He said telegram orders would be accepted.

Illinois Is 'Automatically' Rated First In Basketball

Basketball Players 'Handy' When Tall

NEW YORK (UP)—Despite frequent admonitions that you don't have to be a skyscraper to be a top flight basketball player, it appeared today that the five top college court stars this winter all would be handy lads to have around when washing the chandeliers.

There is rather general agreement that this quintet should be composed of Walt Dukes of Seton Hall, Don Schlundt of Indiana, Bob Pettit of Louisiana State, John Kerr of Illinois and Bob Houbregs of Washington.

Dukes is the tallest at six feet, 11 inches. Schlundt and Pettit each are a mere six nine; Kerr is six eight, while Houbregs is the midge of the bunch at only six feet, seven inches.

These men all are centers, where basketball height is concentrated. And their contemporary challengers are such as six foot, 10 inch Bob Mattick of Oklahoma A and M; six-six Tom Gola of La Salle and Ed Kalafat of Minnesota, and Penn's Ernie Beck and Navy's Don Lange, both six feet, four.

These are the big guns, and it poses a rather intriguing problem for the fellows who are going to pick the All-America teams. All of them are centers, leading scorers for their outfits and devastating under the boards.

There have been worried growls by the football selectors over the necessity for picking offensive and defensive "All" teams. What happens now in basketball, where the power is concentrated at center, and only one berth is open of the five to be filled? Simple, Jack, you pick five centers and let the guards and forwards fall where they may.

The term "guard" or "forward" is misleading under the current system of firehouse basketball. For instance, very little guarding actually is done—without drawing fouls which quickly deposit the guard on the bench for the rest of the evening.

Proof that this one-time basketball art is a lost link comes from the coaches themselves. Here and there you will find a coach proclaiming that only his players can play defensive game; that no other coach teaches his players how to guard.

The answer is that defense is ignored and all concentration is on offense. You win by outscoring the opposition, not holding him down.

Under this system, the star player is the guy who contributes the most points. That fellow usually is the center, picked for his height and shooting ability.

Too Much Tom Collins For Salas

BOSTON (UP)—Tommy Collins is a "good fighter" but Lauro Salas would like to fight him again and show the cocky Boston featherweight that Monday night's decision was a fluke.

Collins won the unanimous nod of the two judges and Referee Eddie Curley. Ringsiders credited Collins with eight consecutive rounds after the former lightweight champion from Monterrey, Mex., floored him twice in the opening three minutes.

"He's a good fighter," Salas said afterward as his trainers worked on his puffed and bleeding face. "But Jimmy Carter's too sharp a puncher for him. He'd beat him."

Illinois-Loyola Play Wednesday

NEW YORK (UP)—Strictly on the strength of their potential, Illinois' defending Big Ten champions were ranked tops in college basketball today in the first weekly ratings of the United Press Board of Coaches. La Salle was second and Kansas State third.

Although the Illini do not open their 1952-53 season until they play Loyola of Chicago Wednesday night, the 35 leading coaches who make up the U. P. rating board figured Coach Harry Combes' men were best in the country.

Twenty-four of the 35 coaches cast their first-place ballots for the Illini, giving them a total of 331 points. The coaches last week picked Illinois as the best bet to win the mythical national championship.

La Salle of Philadelphia, which beat Millersville (Pa.) and Niagara in its first two games, was ranked second with four first-place votes and 225 points. Kansas State, conqueror of Drake in its season debut, was third with one first-place ballot and 217 points. In last week's pre-season listings, the positions of La Salle and Kansas State were reversed.

Rounding out the first week's top 10 teams in order came Washington, Oklahoma A and M, North Carolina State, UCLA, Seton Hall, Minnesota and Holy Cross. Among these first 10 teams, only Illinois and Holy Cross are as yet untested in competition.

Washington, Oklahoma A and M, Minnesota and Ohio State, which ranked 12th, were the only other teams that attracted first-place votes. Washington and the Aggies each had two, while Minnesota and Ohio State had one each.

Washington ranked fourth with 198 points, with Oklahoma A and M fifth with 128, just two points more than North Carolina State. In seventh place came UCLA with 112 points, followed by Seton Hall with 107, Minnesota with 86 and Holy Cross with 55.

Points are awarded on the basis of 10 for a first-place vote, nine for a second and so on down to one for a 10th-place ballot.

Sammy Baugh To Retire And Take Coaching Offer

WASHINGTON (UP)—Blingin' Sammy Baugh, who made a career of tossing trolley-wire passes, officially comes to the end of the line this Sunday.

The 38-year-old Washington Redskins ace announced his retirement Monday, effective after Sunday's game against the Philadelphia Eagles, and hinted that he would take a coaching job at Hardin-Simmons.

Baugh thus concludes a 16-year career in the National Football League during which he fired more than 3,000 passes and established 16 separate records, more than any other player in NFL history.

Expected to make at least a token appearance in the game with the Eagles, Baugh then will immediately head for his Texas home where he plans to confer with Hardin-Simmons officials.

"We feel that Sammy definitely will be on our staff next season," declared E. W. Ledbetter, Hardin-Simmons athletic director, at Abilene, Tex. "Sam's ranch is only 80 miles away and we think the job here as assistant offers him just what he wants."

Baugh, the lean, sun-bronzed native of Sweetwater, Tex., who made the forward pass his own personal trademark during three years with Texas Christian and 16 with the Redskins, helped Washington to five division titles and two world championships.

"There will never be another player like him," said Redskins owner George Marshall, who took no pains to hide his disappointment over Baugh's retirement.

To honor his exploits, Marshall said the number "33" jersey that Baugh wore throughout his Redskins career would be retired and never again would be worn by any Washington player.

Fordham End Sets Record

NEW YORK (UP)—It was undoubtedly gaudy but there was nothing cheap about the way Fordham end Ed Brown shattered collegiate pass receiving records this season.

Ed caught 15 in his last game against NYU for a season total of 75, five above the old major college record and 10 more than anyone else collared this year, but final statistics released today by the NCAA Service Bureau show that he was already moving at a clip no one else had ever achieved before the NYU game came along.

The senior from Jersey City, a six-footer, played only eight games this season while most of his opponents played nine and some 10. The men whose records he broke also played 10, and at the end of his first seven games Brown had 42 catches to his credit. The best anyone had ever done before that in seven games was 41 by North Carolina's Art Welner in 1949.

It was Welner's record of 52, shared with Mississippi's Barney Poole, who first set it in 1947, that Brown broke. The Fordham player's 233 yards gained in the final game was also a new mark, wiping out one of 216 set by another Ram, Al Pfeiffer, against West Virginia in 1950. And his total of 91 caught in two years erased Welner's two-year sum of 83.

In addition, Brown led the country this season with 774 yards gained, fifth highest on record, and his two-year total of 1,249 yards was fourth best ever. He averaged 96.8 yards per game this fall, the highest such figure ever attained.

As the first easterner ever to win the receiving championship,

Brown spear-headed an unprecedented assault on the top positions by eastern and Big Ten players. The runner-up was Joe McClaran of Drake, who caught 47, but the next five places went to Big Ten or eastern representatives. John Carroll of Holy Cross, caught 46, Rex Smith and Rocky Ryan of Illinois 45 each, and Al Ward of Columbia and Bernie Flowers of Purdue 43 each.

The Far West, producer of leaders in recent years, could get no better than seventh in the person of Washington's George Black, who caught 42. The best the East had ever done before was third with Penn State's Len Krouse in 1941, and the Big Ten had never gone higher than fourth (Indiana's Pete Pihos in 1943, Northwestern's Don Stonesifer in 1950) and seldom made the top ten.

PCC Ignore Plea To Begin Grid De-emphasis

PASADENA, Calif. (UP)—Pacific Coast Conference moguls today were poised to lift some of their tightest curbs against recruiting activities, delivering a smashing blow to advocates of de-emphasis in collegiate football.

Conference faculty representatives are expected to act favorably on a committee report which gives the PCC a "realistic" approach to recruiting.

H. P. (Dick) Everest, University of Washington faculty representative and official spokesman for the PCC winter meeting here, admitted the action would mean "relaxing" present regulations.

The report, he said, contained "30 or 40 definite" recommendations, and he indicated they would be adopted either today or sometime before the meeting adjourns Thursday.

An example of the recommendations involved concerns the current ban against coaches visiting high school or junior college campuses to watch prospects perform. That is due to go under the "relaxed" but "realistic" PCC approach.

In all, Monday's opening meeting of the conference was a bad day for those who seek to de-emphasize the collegiate grid game. It started out with an announcement that the PCC's Rose Bowl Committee would start work here on whipping up a new contract with the Big Ten for the Rose Bowl game, when the current one expires after the 1954 contest.

Irv Holdash On All-Service Team

NEW YORK (AP)—A former University of North Carolina All-America and four servicemen from Carolina bases have been selected for the Service All-Star football team by the Armed Forces Press Service.

The 22 offensive and defensive players were picked in a poll of Armed Force Sports editors and football coaches. Army landed 11 players on the squad, the Marines were next with six, followed by the Navy with four and the Air Force one.

Irv Holdash, former UNC All-America now playing for the Army at Ft. Belts, Va., gained the center spot on the defensive eleven.

The others included:

Offensive team:

Center: George Radsoevich, Marines, Parris Island, S. C., Pittsburgh U.

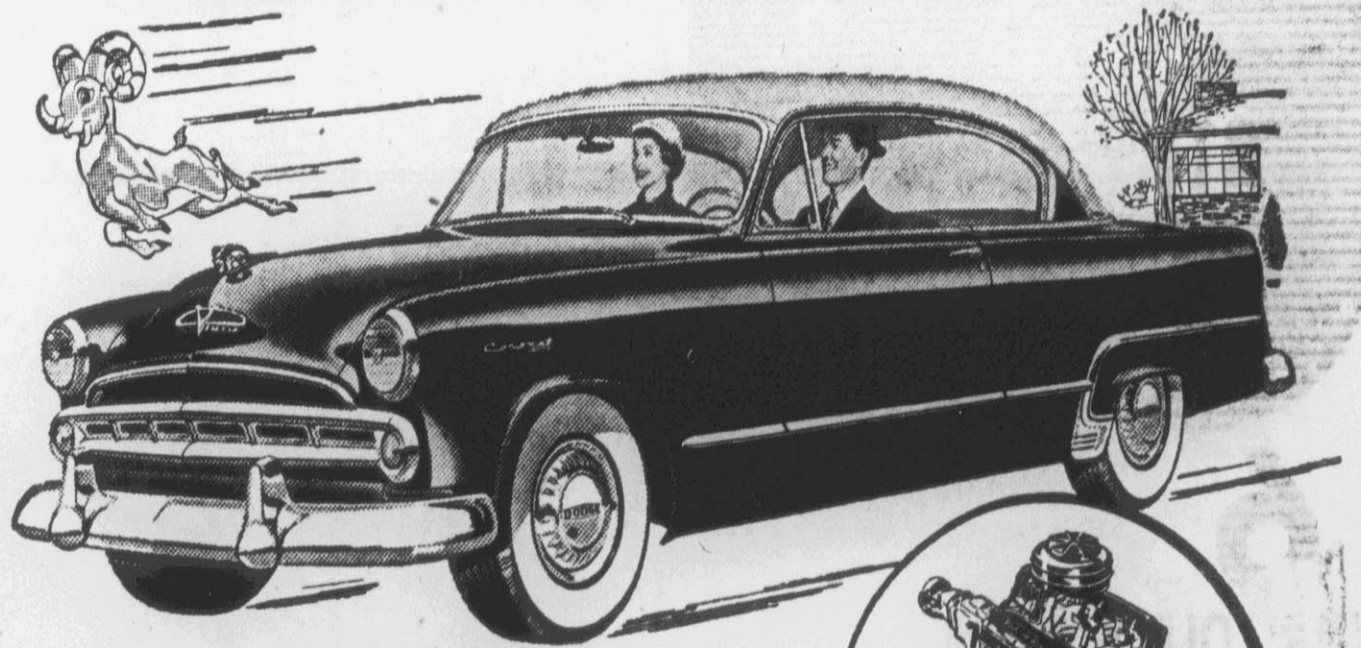

Backs: Bill Hayes, Marines, Parris Island, UNC.

Defensive team:

Ends: Bob Schnelker, Marines, Parris Island, Bowling Green, and Harrison Frasier, Marines, Camp Lejeune, N. C., Navy.

Backs: Glim Gilson, Army, Ft. Jackson, S. C., Tulane.

Chapter 27

Morgan's eyes narrowed into tiny pin points as he considered the situation. His mouth twisted a little as the tip of his tongue ran greedily across the blurred line of his thick lips. But when he spoke, his voice was as flat and uninterested as it had been before.

"You make the General's desires abundantly clear, Mr. Logan, but I am unable to understand why you should intrude them upon my privacy. Certainly, these matters are no affair of mine."

Clay's eyes blazed with sudden enthusiasm as he leaned farther across the desk.

"They can be made your affair," he said softly. "Santa Ana cannot offer such a proposition to Washington himself. It would be doomed to fail from the start, and it is not a matter that can be discussed publicly. But you can do it! You have more power today than any man in Texas! You have power that reaches straight to the White House itself! You can conduct these negotiations—and you can have wealth you never dreamed of, if they succeed!"

"Money... There was rank incredulity in Morgan's voice. 'The General has never distinguished himself by reckless liberality in the past. Do you have reason to believe he would be more generous in this case, Mr. Logan?'"

Clay leaped to his feet. Fingertips touching the top of the cluttered desk, he leaned forward so that his eyes bored straight into Morgan's.

"Generous! Why, by God, Morgan, the offer I'm authorized to make is more than generous—He glimpsed the quick flash of acquiescence in Morgan's eyes. The pudgy fingers were still now. Morgan was listening. The fish was rising toward the bait."

Clay could feel the staccato pulse of excitement throbbing in his temples. The success of his entire plan depended upon Morgan's reaction within the next few minutes. If the asquerade were successful, it would open an almost endless panorama of opportunity. I, it failed.

"You will, perhaps, allow me to be the judge of that."

There was no change in the flat disinterest in Morgan's voice, but there was an almost imperceptible tightening of the lips, a new light in the half-hidden eyes that betrayed his mounting interest.

"Why, yes, so judge this: Complete this assignment and His Excellency will name you governor of the state of Coahuila!"

"Only a governor?"

"But what a governor! You will be under no restraint whatever from the capital. You will collect and keep the taxes! The customs duties! You will control the army within the state! The banks will be your servants! The public treasury at your disposal! My God, man! Think of it! You will be the absolute ruler of one of the richest areas in North America!"

His eyes were like fresh-famed coals, never shifting from Morgan's face. Now the cards were down.

Morgan nodded slowly. "I am surprised, Mr. Logan. But you know I already have some small measure of power here in Texas. Would you suggest that I give that up to assume this new appointment, shall we say?"

Clay's brusque gesture brushed Morgan's argument contemptuously aside.

"You have power here now. That's why I came to you. But how much power will you have three months from now, when Texas becomes just another state in the Union? How much power will you have when the decisions are made at Washington instead of in Austin? How much power will you have when the politicians start sending their appointees down here with all the strength of the federal government behind them? When that happens, you'll be through, Morgan. But if you accept Santa Ana's offer, you can leave Texas behind and move on to something that I make this look like a street cleaner's job in comparison!"

Morgan leaned back in his chair and his eyes grew opaque and dead as his mind turned inward upon the ideas Clay had thrust upon him. The silence grew until it was an almost tangible thing, and Clay felt as if the hammering of his heart must be as audible as a beating drum. The sweat began to gather on his forehead and his eyes sought the heavy revolver desk. Grimly, he decided within his own mind that, if Morgan rejected the proposal, he would at least be sure that Morgan was himself erased, no matter what the future and immediate consequences might entail.

He tensed into new alertness as Morgan's eyes focused upon him in a probing, evaluating appraisal. For an eternity of time, he held his own face rigid and expressionless beneath that searching look and then felt the tightly held breath leave his lungs in a long sigh of relief, as Morgan's lips twisted into a grotesque mockery of a smile and the heavy head nodded in acceptance.

"Mr. Logan," there was the faintest trace of warmth in Morgan's rumbling voice, "you have presented me with a very unusual proposition. In fact, it is not without some interest to me."

He paused, studying Clay's face again, as if to recheck the factors he was weighing and balancing in his mind.

"I will consider it. I will consider it very seriously—for a day and a night, or perhaps for several days. In the meantime, Mr. Logan, you will, of course, remain with us as my guest. I assume you will have no objection to such an arrangement?"

Clay laughed, knowing that he had won, knowing he must conceal his almost savage satisfaction beneath the veneer of superficial conventionality.

"Why, thank you. I'll be more than happy to take advantage of your hospitality. I have two requests, though—but I don't think you'll find either of them unreasonable."

You Know Something About This Man!

You've never seen him before. And yet, as you watch him approach his motor car—you feel instinctively that you know something about this man.

You feel you know something of his background and his standing among his fellow men. You sense his consideration for the safety and comfort of his family and his friends. And you have a clear indication of the mark he has made in his chosen field of endeavor.

For that's one of the extraordinary things about the great Cadillac car: It speaks so clearly and so eloquently of the man who owns and drives it.

It does so from its long association with the world's distinguished motorists... and out of its constant participation in the lives of the nation's leading people.

In every community across the land, Cadillac is the predictable choice of those whose choice is unrestricted. And how well they choose—and how wisely!

For the Cadillac car—as any owner can tell you—is surprisingly satisfying from every standpoint.

Smooth, powerful and responsive—it makes each and every journey a pleasure to anticipate and a joy to experience.

Beautiful, luxurious and inspiring—it adds to the pleasure and satisfaction of the whole day's activities.

And dependable, long-lived and economical in operation—it complements its owner's practical wisdom through every marvelous mile he drives.

Wouldn't it be wonderful to enjoy all these things in your motor car? Well then... come in and see us. We'd be delighted to see you at any time.

Stocks And Market Reports

NEW YORK (UP)—Prices on the stock exchange early today rose to further new high ground in more than 21 years. Trading was moderately active.

All departments joined in the upswing which was an extension of yesterday's advance. The rise moved industrial prices to their best levels since April 26, 1930. The rails now reach back to Feb. 28, 1931 and utilities are currently at their best levels since Sept. 11, 1931.

Rails, automobiles and aircraft showed the best gains. They had improvements ranging from more than a point.

In the carriers, Northern Pacific, a well-oiled railroad stock, rose 1 1/4 points to 76. Major fractional improvements were noted in Union Pacific, Santa Fe and Rock Island.

Bell Aircraft sparked its section. It rose to a new high of 23. It backed down later and was up 1 1/2 points to 22 1/2. United Aircraft also reached a new peak with a gain of 1 1/4 points to 77 1/2.

Chrysler rose a point to 87 1/2. General Motors tacked on a small gain.

N.C. Cotton Crop Estimate Hiked By 10,000 Bales

RALEIGH (AP)—Based on reports as of Dec. 1, North Carolina's estimated cotton crop for 1953 showed an increase of 10,000 bales over the forecast of Nov. 1.

The Federal-State Crop Reporting Service said yesterday the Tar Heel cotton crop is forecast at 500,000 bales, an increase of 18,000 bales over the 1951 crop of 542,000 bales.

Yield per acre is predicted at 380 pounds, compared with 376 pounds in 1951. Growers will harvest 705,000 acres, an increase of 15,000 over 1951. Approximately 95 per cent of the crop has been picked.

M. G. Mann, general manager of the North Carolina Cotton Growers Association, disagreed yesterday with the U. S. Department of Agriculture's final estimate of 15,038,000 bales for the nation. The forecast on Sept. 8 had indicated a crop of 13,889,000 bales.

"With such a wide variation in the estimate over a comparatively short period of time," Mann asserted, "it is not surprising that the market has been in a turmoil since the first of September."

He added, "It is my candid opinion that when all ginning reports are in for the year, we will not have produced more than 14,250 bales and that when this fact is fully realized by the cotton trade, prices will again rise to the 40-cent level."

Growers who still have cotton to sell were advised by Mann not to place it on the market until next spring.

WEALTHY BEGGAR
NEWARK, N. J. (UP)—Mildred Shafer, 41, was sentenced to 30 days in jail Monday for begging. Police said she had $300 on her when she was arrested and $18,436 in a local bank.

Appear In Production At College

"Charley's Aunt," farce which has delighted hundreds of audiences since it was first produced in the 1890's, will be presented Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week by the Teachers Playhouse of East Carolina College in performances given at 8 p.m. in the College Theatre.

A carefully chosen cast of student actors and actresses who will appear in the gay and fast-moving play includes the college students shown above.

Carolyn Clapp of Greenville, top row left, has assisted Dr. Lucile Charles of the college faculty in directing the play and will also take the part of Charley's aunt from South America. Lloyd Whitfield (top row, center), president of the Teachers Playhouse, will play the role of the Oxford undergraduate who impersonates the aunt and who thus helps create the humorous situations with which the farce deals. Ann McCrary of Durham as Kitty Verduni has the part of a young lady who contributes to the romantic atmosphere of the play.

ALFONZA ROUSE FUNERAL
AYDEN—Alfonza Rouse, 36, of Ayden, who was killed last Saturday morning in a motor vehicle accident on the Black Jack Highway, will be buried Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Funeral services will be held at Zion Chapel Negro Free Will Baptist Church in Ayden. Rev. W. L. Jones will officiate. Burial will be in Oak View Cemetery, near Grifton. The body will be taken from the home, 110 Barwick street, to the church one hour prior to the funeral.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lucile Rouse, one daughter, Mrs. Earline Jackson of Ayden; two sons, James H. and Linwood Earl Rouse of Ayden; four sisters, Mrs. Hattie Barrett and Olivia Rouse of Brooklyn, N. Y., and one sister living in Greenville, and Elizabeth Churchfull of Cheriton, Va.; one brother Henry Rouse of Ayden.

Firemen Called 3 Times Monday
 Greenville firemen responded to three fire alarms in the city over the past 24 hours, a spokesman for the department reported today.

A flash fire, started at the Riggins Service station on Dickinson Avenue around five o'clock when fumes from gasoline being put in a car caught fire and blazed up.

By the time firemen arrived, however, the fire was out. The fire could have been a serious one, for a small

Picture Slides Of Japan Shown At Rotary Meet

Pictures of Japan from slides projected onto a screen were presented for the Rotarians last night by Col. R. G. Fuller of the Air Force ROTC at East Carolina College. While presenting the pictures, Col. Fuller made running comments. The pictures covered a variety of interests—culture, scenery, folk-ways, topography, and costumes.

Guests of the club were S. G. Gibbs and Bobbie Perry. Rotary President Knott Proctor appointed J. W. Overton, chairman, J. B. Kirtrell Sr., and Jack Boone as the committee from the Rotary Club to cooperate with the other civic clubs in the entertainment and welcoming of newcomers to Greenville. The program was presented by James W. Butler, chairman of the Program Committee. Club president Proctor presided.

Capitol Square

 Initiated in 1941—less than a dozen years ago. As recently as that 60 was regarded as probable retirement age and 65 was made almost mandatory. Hundreds of State employees have reached or are closely approaching that age, and are recognized as in the prime of their usefulness to the State.

SERIOUS—The really serious problem arises in connection with the large number of men and women who are really old and not able to produce much for their own sustenance, but who are still alive and reasonably healthy in mind and body, and whose productive years were spent before the day of retirement pension systems. They do not want and they should not be subjected to reluctant charity, and yet the society which they helped to build owes them something in return. That is one of the big issues facing the upcoming legislative bodies in Washington and in 47 State capitals, including Raleigh. It is also one of the major points of contention in management-labor negotiations over the so-called "fringe benefits" in union contracts. The problem is easily stated: It is simply that medical science has far outstripped social science. The solution is not so readily found.
