Fight Looms On Telephone Rates

Representatives Of Eastern N. C. Towns Flocked To Rate Hearing; Opposition May Be Carried To The State Supreme Court; Speight Says 'It Looks Like A Fight To The Finish'

By JESS POINDEXTER Reflector City Editor

The fight by subscribers to prevent Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company from again increasing telephone rates may be carried to the State Supreme Court, "if necessary," incensed representatives of cities and towns in Eastern North Carolina jammed the lower house at the state capitol Tuesday to protest a proposed $1,500,000 overall rate hike presented at that time in a hearing before the State Utilities Commission.

The house of representatives on capitol square was crowded to overflowing with determined factions delegated by their individual communities to contest the measure. They presented a firm but orderly opposition bloc before the commission.

"Fight To Finish" "It looks like a fight to the finish for the first time," W. W. Speight, Greenville attorney related this morning. "Cities and towns are organized for the first time to contest the increase, and it appears they really mean business."

In his capacity as Pitt County attorney, Speight represented the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, the Greenville Chamber of Commerce and the town of Bethel. Appearing with Speight at the hearing were W. T. Kyzar, manager of the local chamber of commerce, and Robert Martin, mayor of Bethel.

Speight said officials of the telephone company put on their evidence and filed petitions with the utilities commission Tuesday. "They petitioned for increases totaling $1,500,000," he explained, "but in reality they requested a seven-and-one-half percent return on their investment, which would amount to an increase of $2,800,000."

The attorney formerly with the company paid dividends of eight-and-one-half percent to stockholders last year. "Instead of selling stock to expand, the company wants to penalize their old subscribers and have them pay for expansion of lines into new areas."

At the hearing before the commission, Assistant Attorney General I. Beverly Lake represented the attorney general's office and the people of North Carolina. Relative to the hearing, Lake said, "Cities, towns, communities and civic clubs in the area have shown the greatest organized opposition I have ever seen on a thing of this kind."

The Pitt delegation headed by Speight filed a petition to intervene in the hearing and proceedings, and the petition was granted by the commission. Thus, the local group became legal protestants to the increase.

City To Participate City Attorney R. B. Lee has forwarded a petition of intervention on behalf of the city of Greenville, and is expected to take part in hearings at a later date.

John B. Lewis, Farmville attorney, represented the Farmville Chamber of Commerce and the Farmville Rotary Club at the commission hearing Tuesday. A group of Farmville citizens were also present at proceedings.

According to Speight, Asst. Atty. Gen. Lake requested on behalf of protestants that cross examination of the company's process be postponed in order to give attorneys time to study exhibits and evidence put into the record by the company.

Ready To Screen Ships' Crewmen

The McCarran-Walter Immigration Law, which goes into effect Dec. 24, requires foreign seamen to say that they have never belonged to a political party which advocates forcible overthrow of the American government. Communists are automatically barred.

The British are reported concerned about the new rules, fearing that the screening may cause major delays in the sailing schedules of their big liners. The Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth carrying 2,000 men crews.

As a step to prevent delays, the Justice Department said, special immigration inspectors will be placed aboard some of the big passenger ships to screen crewmen during the crossings.

The British are nevertheless expected to lodge a formal protest with this government. The first immigration inspector assigned to work on the new program left New York Tuesday aboard the French liner Liberté to begin the questioning.

Chinese Reds Hurl Heavy Assaults At UN Positions

HEAVIEST ATTACKS IN TWO MONTHS OPEN WITH EARLY SUCCESS; ROKS AND ALLIED UNITS RECOVER, REGAIN GROUND IN SAVAGE FIGHTING

SEOUL, Korea (UP) — The Chinese Communists, hurling their biggest mass assaults in two months at Allied positions on the western front, captured the crest of Little Nori Hill tonight after hours of savage fighting.

The attacks began before dawn when one Red regiment estimated at 3,000 men smashed at South Koreans defending six key positions west of Yonchon. At one point, the Reds captured Little Nori, but the Allies drove them off and repulsed the other assaults.

It was the biggest concentration of Communists on the front since Oct. 6 when the Reds threw 12,000 men against White Horse Mountain and Arrowhead Ridge on the central front.

Just after dark, 500 screaming Communists swarmed from their trenches on Big Nori Hill and drove to the top of Little Nori one mile southwest. They gained the top for the second time today beneath violent artillery and mortar barrages from their own guns.

The hard-pressed South Koreans were forced to withdraw an hour after the attack began. Then the U. N. turned its artillery on the hill, firing a thunderous bombardment that shredded the crest.

The Communists immediately stepped up their fire. Front line officers reported the Reds were fanning their arc of fire over a wide area, possibly an indication they planned to expand their gains.

The first Chinese attack on Little Nori began at 1 a. m. (11 a. m. EST) Wed. as the Reds surged from Big Nori and pushed the ROKs off the south slopes. Then they drove through to Little Nori and captured that height.

At the same time, they struck at five other positions in the same area, fighting until dawn before they gave up.

Meanwhile, the U. N. called in artillery mortar, tanks and fighter-bombers on the Reds atop Little Nori, softening them up for a South Korean counter-attack that began shortly after noon (7 p. m. EST Wed.).

By 2:30 p. m., the ROKs had plunged into the trenches atop Little Nori, forcing the Chinese to retreat.

The Chinese fired more than 10,000 rounds of artillery and mortar during the 18-hour battle.

The U. N. in turn, levied 200 air attacks at the Reds, 67 of them at the Red-held positions and the rest at supply and troop areas immediately behind the front.

In city Recorder's Court yesterday a youthful offender charged with having an improper muffler on his car pleaded that his muffler "had a bird-like sound to it."

The remark drew a response from the crowded court room when Judge Charles Wheedee commented, "Well, it must have been a mighty loud bird-call for this Byrd to hear it."

The puzzled look on the youth's face vanished when the judge pointed to arresting officer Detective N.H. Byrd.

Truman Says MacArthur Should Tell Him 'Solution'

High Court Ends Its Segregation Hearing Today

Decision Not Expected For Several Weeks; Constitutional Intent Argued

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Supreme Court today concludes its momentous three-day hearing on the constitutionality of racial segregation in public schools.

Oral arguments on two cases, challenging the segregated school systems of Delaware and the District of Columbia, remain to be heard before the court retires to deliberate on the far-reaching social and political questions involved.

A decision is not expected for several weeks. During the past two days, the court heard arguments on three other cases, involving Kansas, South Carolina and Virginia. The five cases were called up at the same time because they raise a common question: does the mere fact of segregation deny Negro children the "equal protection of the laws" guaranteed by the 14th Amendment, even if the schools provided for Negroes are as good as those for white children?

A battery of attorneys representing the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People contended that legally enforced segregation of Negro students is, of itself, a brand of inequality.

Attorneys for the two southern states argued that the 14th Amendment, adopted after the Civil War, was never meant by its framers and never before interpreted by courts as a bar to segregation, provided "equal" facilities are afforded both races.

Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond of Virginia told the court that so far as his state is concerned abolition of segregation "would destroy the public school system as we know it today."

The Kremlin's rejection of a U. S. demand for compensation was understood to have been delivered to the American Embassy in Moscow a week to 10 days ago.

Diplomatic sources were unable to explain why the Soviets had not made some sort of a propaganda fuss over their stand. Moscow Radio usually beams the gist of such notes around the world soon after the notes are in American hands.

Informed sources said the Soviet reply followed the outlines of a previous argument: that the American bomber had fired on Red air force planes after it had "violated" the Soviet frontier over Yuri, near the Kurile Islands.

This government rejected the Soviet charges on Oct. 17, demanded compensation for the plane and its eight-man crew and contended that Yuri Island was not Soviet territory. The United States has never recognized Russia's claim to the Kuriles, which Soviet troops occupied after World War II.

This government also asked whether a Soviet patrol boat had picked up any survivors although there was little hope that it had. Eyewitnesses reported the plane had left a trail of smoke as it disappeared towards the sea.

The Moscow refusal to pay for the bomber, which cost around $250,000, dampened any official hopes that the Soviets would agree to pay nearly $100,000 for a U. S. Air Force C-47 cargo plane that was forced down in Hungary on Nov. 19, 1951. The four-man crew was held until Dec. 28 when the U. S. government paid $123,000 in ransom for their release.

All Curbs Gone On Rice Crops

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Agriculture Department has given farmers a go-ahead to plant as much rice as they wish next year without any fear of federal marketing or acreage controls.

It said rice supplies are below the $8,719,000 bag level which would require marketing restrictions in 1953 under the present farm law.

Dr. Wiley Cozart Sr., mayor of this little tobacco town, was shot and killed today in his office by a youth who claimed the doctor "had put a spell on him," police reported.

Cozart, a physician, was killed with one shot from a .45 caliber army automatic, police said.

A Negro youth identified as Lynwood Lewis, about 25, was arrested by town police as he fled from the scene and was charged with murder.

Things were getting pretty hot so they thought it best to get him out of here," Town Manager W.O. Council said.

Cozart, about 60, was a native of Greenville County a graduate of Trinity College and Virginia medical schools. He had served 10 years as mayor.

Recorder's court solicitor Robert Cotton said the Negro was "considered a mental incompetent" and had been in a mental institution.

"He thought that Dr. Cozart had put a spell on him," Cotton said. The shooting occurred about 9:30 a. m.

Lewis was quiet and calm when he entered jail cell at Raleigh. Sheriff Robert Pleasants gave orders that newsmen could not see Lewis immediately.

Pleasants and other officers returned here to complete the investigation.

Court Fight?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Textile manufacturers were reported today certain to launch a court fight against a government proposal that would raise the minimum wage from 87 cents to $1 for cotton, silk and synthetic textile workers employed by firms with government contracts.

Secretary of Labor Tobin announced the proposed hourly increase yesterday under the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act. He gave interested parties 16 days in which to file complaints. An order officially putting the new rate into effect is expected soon thereafter.

An amendment to the act last year allows affected industries to fight new minimums in Federal Court. Previously there was no recourse from a minimum wage order issued by the secretary of labor.

He added, however, that he could see no good purpose for a personal meeting with MacArthur or Eisenhower, indicating doubt that either of them has a workable plan.

Mr. Truman said that MacArthur has a particular duty to come forward with any proposal for a Korean solution since he, as a five-star general, has an active duty and will be for all his life.

Expressing doubts that MacArthur has anything worthwhile, however, Mr. Truman said he traveled 14,400 miles to see the former Pacific commander at Wake Island once and all he got was a lot of misinformation. The Wake Island trip was in October, 1960.

He said the information was to the effect that Chinese Communists would not enter the Korean conflict; it would be possible to send a division from Korea to Germany for occupation purposes, and that the war in Korea was practically over.

Mr. Truman was bitterly critical of the way MacArthur has conducted himself since he relieved the general of the Pacific command.

The President said MacArthur never did report to him as any decent man would have done. He said he has never seen MacArthur since his return to the United States and he doesn't want to see him.

Mr. Truman took the position that as a five star general in active service MacArthur had the duty to report to his commander-in-chief upon his return from the Pacific and at any other time he has any ideas for the good of the country.

The President was obviously nettled by MacArthur's statement he has clear and definite Korean solution which he will give to Eisenhower. The two men will meet informally, probably in New York, after the president-elect's return from the Pacific.

A reporter suggested that Mr. Truman might have kept the general from seeking a White House audience.

The President said there was no excuse for an such feeling, and added with a grin that MacArthur missed an awful good chance for a headline by not coming in.

Mr. Truman described Eisenhower's trip to Korea as the outgrowth of campaign demagoguery. The President also confirmed that it was suggested during the campaign that he, himself, announce plans for a trip to Korea and let the idea get around that the war would be ended by Christmas.

The President said he felt it would serve no good purpose and would be nothing but demagoguery, and that's what it turned out to be. Acting White House press secretary Roger Tubby leans forward and suggested to Mr. Truman that some good may come from the Eisenhower trip.

The President relayed Tubby's words to the reporters and expressed hope it was so because it would make him the happiest man in the world.

WRONG ASSUMPTION MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UP)—Trustees of the Milwaukee Public Library have ordered a billiard table removed from the Charles Allis Art Library on the grounds that somebody might mistake the place for a pool hall.

The boys, age 11 and 12, found temptation too much of a foe as they sat near a woman with a ougoing purse Monday night at the Bethel Center. Later, when they looked inside the purse, they found what appeared to be a million dollars.

The next day they skipped to school loaded. Police, recapping their adventure, said they threw handfuls of dollar bills in the air and watched their school mates scramble for the money.

One of them tipped a playmate $1.25 for a shoeshine. He also handed a lad a quarter to brush his coat.

LONDON (UP)—A gem-encrusted map covering 266 square feet is on display in the State Gallery at Leningrad to show visitors "the growing might of the Soviet state," according to the Soviet news agency Tass.

'Christmas Gift' Of Blood Urged In Bloodmobile Visit

"Have you given your pint of blood as a Christmas present to the men in Korea?" Red Cross officials in the city are asking this question to Greenville citizens as a reminder that the Red Cross Bloodmobile will be in the city Monday, December 15, at the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church educational building.

The December visit of the bloodmobile is being sponsored by the Greenville Lions Club under the direction of Jimmy Harris. Harris said today approximately 150 donor cards had been turned in by Lions Club members but more donors were needed, at least 300.

Harris explained the quota is 150 pints but twice that number of donors are needed to be signed as some will be rejected because of physical reasons and some may fail to keep their appointments.

"The cards are still coming in but we need many more," Harris said. "We wish the town would rally to the call, and appointments can be made to give a pint of blood by calling B. B. Sugg Jr. at 3204, or the local Red Cross office, 4222."

"Not only do men in Korea need blood," said Red Cross officials, "but an urgent call has come for more blood in the fight against polio." The Red Cross has been asked to make an urgent expansion of its Defense Blood Program to supply gamma globulin, a new weapon in the prevention of paralysis from poliomyelitis.

The donation of blood by Pitt County and Greenville citizens will serve a three-fold purpose: blood for Korea, blood for polio victims, and blood for Pitt County citizens when needed in emergency cases through the blood bank at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Volunteer Firemen Elect New Officers

A new slate of officers were elected at a regular meeting of the Greenville Volunteer Fire Department held Tuesday night.

Incoming president Cliff Stokes, and all other officers, were selected on the first ballot with a unanimous vote.

Serving as vice president will be Leon White, who was also named active chaplain for the department. White is the commander of the Salvation Army unit in Greenville, and a member of the local fire company.

Secretary-Treasurer's duties fell to Lewis Jones, with the assistant-secretary post going to Sherwood Bullock.

Outgoing officers were Ralph Heindenrich, president; Cliff Stokes, vice president; Roy Hardee, secretary-treasurer; and assistant secretary, Lewis Jones.

It is a policy of the department for officers to hold only one office, and to rotate posts among the membership in order to give each member a share in directing department activities.

The meeting was also the occasion for "pay night".

Volunteer firemen, paid by the city for the number of calls they answer and the number of hours devoted to fighting fires, receive their pay once a year, a week or two before Christmas. The highest paid member received $77 for his year's work with the department.

Plans for the annual Christmas ladies' night party, to be held Friday night at seven-thirty, were discussed and final arrangements made. The supper will be held at the Resposse Brothers barbecue house on the Bethel Highway. A musical program has been planned and a "special treat" is in order for the firemen's wives and friends who will be in attendance.

Opera On TV

NEW YORK (AP) — "Carmen" will be televised from the Metropolitan Opera House tonight to viewers in 31 theaters in 27 cities across the nation.

Patrons will see and hear Met stars Rise Stevens, Nadine Conner, Richard Tucker and Robert Merrill performing the Bizet opera. The opera will come through on huge television screens in the theaters as it is being performed in the opera house.

The opera telecast is being distributed to the theaters for the first time by Theater Network Television, Inc. and will be carried on a closed network circuit, to be viewed only by those who buy tickets for the theaters.

Double-Barred Cross Day Set

Saturday, December 13, has been designated by Mayor Lester D. Page as Double-Barred Cross Day in honor of work being done in the city to bring tuberculosis under control.

The Junior Woman's Club, under the chairmanship of Mrs. H. E. Alder, will sponsor Double-Barred Cross Day.

Small replicas of the red Double-Barred Cross, international emblem of the campaign against tuberculosis, will be sold on the streets Saturday by Girl Scouts under the direction of Mrs. J. Knott Proctor.

Proceeds from the sale of the crosses will be added to funds from the Christmas Seal Sale which opened November 18 and will continue until Christmas.

The fund finances the tuberculosis control activities of the Pitt County Tuberculosis Association.

Evening Speaker At Church Meet

Dr. Earl P. Paulk of Charlotte will be the evening speaker for the Church of God district convention opening in Greenville tonight at 7:30.

Accompanying Dr. Paulk will be the Rev. A. S. Luke of Charlotte, state youth director of the Churches of God in North Carolina.

The Washington district is composed of the following churches and ministers: Rev. Roy Ray, Greenville; Rev. Wade Crotts, Grindel Creek; Rev. J. Leonard, Snow Branch; Rev. I. C. Morris, Washington, N. C.; Rev. Arthur Hannah, Plymouth; Rev. L. E. Hammond, Creswell; Rev. J. Grindstaff, Edenton; Rev. Ray Loftis, Allgood; Rev. Arthur Nelson, Farmville; Rev. Lathan Rollins, Kinston.

The public is invited to attend this service by the Rev. Ray, the host pastor.

Christmas Motif Carried Out In Music Club Dinner

The December meeting of the Music Club took the form of a dinner, which was served in the Women's Club to sixty-two club members. The Christmas motif was appropriately carried out in the table decorations, which were attractively arranged by the hostess committee, which consisted of Mr. and Mrs.

Charles A. White, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Clifford, and Mrs. J. D. Messick. Mr. George Perry, president, announced that due to the fact that an evening could not be found in which there would be sufficient time for the usual elaborate program put on by the Club, the Christmas program for this year necessarily had to be curtailed.

For the program of the evening, Miss Beatrice Chauncey, chairman, presented a group of singers which she directed in the singing of a number of Christmas carols. These carols were very capably sung by Mesdames James White and Moya Dail, sopranos; Misses Ruth Lambie and Patricia Waldrop and Mesdames James Rodgers and Kenneth Whiteley, altos; Messrs. James White and Ed Durham, tenors; and Dr. Dan Vornholt and Mr. J. C. Clifford, basses.

Law Confining Reluctant TB Patients Upheld

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Supreme Court yesterday upheld a law under which persons who fail to take tuberculosis treatment may be confined in the prison ward of the McCain Tuberculosis Sanatorium. In all, the tribunal handed down opinions in 10 cases. Among other actions, the court:

1. Upheld Buncombe County's commissioners and board of education in a dispute over location of a consolidated high school.
2. Decreed that the Utilities Commission has no power to regulate bus companies hauling industrial workers to and from their jobs.
3. Found no error in the conviction of a Guilford man, E. J. Moore, who was sentenced to 25-28 years for the rifle slaying of Alton Brown at Greensboro last Feb. 9.

William J. Stoner of Lenoir County petitioned the high court and contended he was being detained illegally in the prison ward at the McCain Tuberculosis Sanatorium. He was convicted of violating the health law. The court noted that the law was passed "with the wise and humane purpose of preventing the spread of tuberculosis." It added that none of Stoner's legal or constitutional rights had been violated.

In the Buncombe case, a group of citizens sought to restrain school officials from buying a 30-acre tract of land as the site for a proposed West Buncombe consolidated high school.

The citizens contended the board of education had violated a state law under which only one high school could be located in a township. They also contended the school would be at a location where the highway is crooked and a bridge narrow. Superior Court Judge William H. Bobbitt refused to issue a restraining order. The high court upheld his judgment.

The tribunal pointed out that the law limiting a township "or its equivalent" to one high school is excluded in the Buncombe case. The court held that a school district is the equivalent of a township and the proposed consolidated high school would be the only high school in the West Buncombe district.

In the bus case, Carolina Coach Co. had sought to lease the Gabriel Bus Line the right to operate over its route between Landis and Kinston to haul textile workers to their jobs. The Utilities Commission ruled that the Gabriel Co. did not have to enter a lease agreement to haul the workers since the commission has no authority to regulate that field.

School PTA Will Sponsor Scouts

BELL ARTHUR—The Nichols School Parent Teachers Association recently voted unanimously to sponsor a boy scout troop.

Appearing at the PTA meeting to help begin a scout troop organization were E. Lester Dollar, field scout executive of the East Carolina Council; Clarence Bradley, chairman of advancement for the Pitt Division; and F.M. Moore, scoutmaster of Troop 158 of Washington.

To stimulate interest in the project a short movie on boy scouting was shown.

The following persons were registered as troop officials: James Parker, scoutmaster; Milton L. Patrick, assistant scoutmaster; and James Blow, explorer advisor. A troop committee composed of H.M. Taft, chairman, George Tyson, Fred Midgett, Jonathan Dixon, Elias Beaton, J.H. Perkins, and David Dixon was appointed.

Cars Damaged In Collision; No One Was Injured

Two cars were in collision on the Pactolus Highway, about one mile from Greenville yesterday afternoon, when drivers apparently became confused over traffic signals.

Patrolman James Boykin, investigating officer, reported a truck driven by Roy C. Wiggins, 30, of Ayden Route 1, was attempting to turn into the yard of Jessie Windon when it was struck by a car attempting to pass.

The second car was operated by Leonard L. Nash, 60, FOX mechanic. Damage to both vehicles was estimated at over $500 by the officer. Neither of the drivers were injured and there were no charges brought.

Jug Of Water Started Blaze

CENTRALIA, Ill. (AP)—Ab Becker tells how his jug of cold water set a fire: While hunching with other Effingham County farmers he put his water jug down. Soon they smelled straw burning and noted smoke coming from under the jug. They stomped the fire and removed the jug to a canvas. Soon it was burning. The guest prize went to Mrs. Jug's curved shoulder caused both fires.

Health Officer Is Club Speaker

AYDEN—Sixty per cent of the medicines used today and recommended by physicians were not on the market in 1940, said Dr. Walter C. Humbert in speaking before members of the Ayden Rotary Club.

The Pitt County Health Officer told the Rotarians that the present era is the "Golden Era" for medicine and health. "In the treatment of tuberculosis in 1940, 85 per cent of the cases where one lung was removed was fatal, where today there is only two per cent," stated the health officer.

Humbert said today specialists are coming to America for special medical service whereas 25 or 30 years ago, study abroad was proclaimed.

Thurman Worthington, Ayden school student, presented the purpose of the annual Christmas Festival and solicited tickets for the event.

The Club voted to accept amendments to the constitution and by-laws of the club as stated by Rotary International.

Reece Tilly was the guest of Bob Booth at the meeting and Gwynn Merritt was the guest of Corey Stokes. Both guests are newcomers to Ayden and are associated with DuPont.

Guy Evans and James Butler were visiting Rotarians from Greenville. Warren Kinlaw led the singing with Wilbur Ormond at the piano. Ralph Hardee presided and Gilbert Davis returned thanks at dinner.

Alfalfa Grown On City Airport

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Alfalfa grown on the city airport this year produced $7,923 in revenue for the city, according to the Municipal Finance Officers Association.

In an unusual arrangement with a local dehydrating company, alfalfa is planted on available portions of the airport. The company harvests the crop and after planting costs are paid, the city and the company share equally in the income. The city spends no money or effort in the entire operation. This year 405 acres were planted.

comparisons, it is sometimes possible to draw comparisons of community spirit and pride between localities.

It may be the people of Greenville feel $14,000 is too high a goal for Community Chest activities. By comparison, even if Greenville reaches its goal, it will still be far behind neighboring cities and towns in what is being done through the Community Chest.

- It is interesting to compare Greenville's $14,000 Community Chest goal with others from around the state:
- Goldsboro $43,000
 - Farmville $6,750
 - Henderson $16,000
 - Hickory $69,537
 - High Point $130,653
 - Kinston $22,900
 - Lenoir $22,000
 - Mt. Airy $15,000
 - Moorestville $18,742
 - New Bern $16,336
 - Roanoke Rapids $16,610
 - Rocky Mount $54,000
 - Wilson $32,852

These figures represent a lot of money going into community activities throughout the state from the pockets of citizens of the communities. The figures certainly show Greenville's Community Chest goal is not excessive. If anything, it is lower than the goals of other cities of comparable size in the state.

It behooves the citizens of Greenville to get behind the lagging Community Chest drive and boost it over the top in short order.

International Whirligig

By JOHN FISHER

For a longtime diplomats will be trying to fathom the devious objectives sought by the Stalinists in the recent Czech purge trial that doomed eleven outcasts to the scaffold.

A distinguishing feature of the latest gruesome farce is its anti-Semitism, a demonstration of prejudice which some believe will be exploited to woo Arab states.

But there is more to the case than hatred for the often-persecuted Jews. The latest bloody example of bias is part of a wider movement among Communists to liquidate groups with strong ties beyond the Iron Curtain.

Jewish Communist leaders were struck down not only in punishment for probable crimes against the state but also to herald new blows against all Czech Zionists and possibly Rumanian Zionists.

The civilized world still shudders at the memory of Hitler horror camps in which untold numbers of Jews were murdered. At the same time the Nazi sadists were attempting to exterminate the Poles, whom Goebbels called "subhuman swamp beasts."

Today Stalin is copying Hitler, with Poles, Jews, Balts and other captives as victims. He is wiping out races, nationalities and groups which Russia cannot assimilate. His action is called genocide, the slow murder of a people.

In committing genocide the Communists first get rid of the intelligentsia as when their armies overran Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. At once they started to slaughter everyone with the brains and backbone for leading potential revolts—political figures, writers, teachers, former army officers, officials, clergymen, businessmen and land-owning farmers.

With these men and women of spirit out of the way, the Communists thought they could handle the more docile workers and peasants. Refugees in those earlier days of massacre reported that Red commissars tried to stupefy the masses by plying them with easily accessible liquor.

But cheap vodka could not quench the spark of resistance, whereupon the Communists resorted to deportations—uprooting families from their environment and shipping them off to become beasts of burden in Siberia.

Right now fresh small-scale deportations have flared up in East Germany to supply slave labor in the Zeitzkau coal mines and Mansfield copper mines. A high percentage of prisoners are sick and without medical attention. Much larger deportations have occurred in the Baltic states and in Hungary.

Forced migration in itself is an offense against human rights. But the Reds have increased the cruelty by separating families permanently. The war left vast numbers of orphans. In lands occupied by Communists, these waifs are brought up as atheists in state institutions.

In Greece during the invasion by Balkan Communist fighters many children were kidnapped from farms and taken across the frontiers.

An American official who was in Poland observed a group of kidnapped Greek children from poverty-stricken homes living in barracks and being pampered and trained as Communists. Eventually they will be sent back to Greece as spies or underground "missionaries."

Moscow policy is to turn captive Europeans into loyal Stalinists or to obliterate them—using their toil for profit as they journey to early graves.

Prior to the Czech trials Communist propaganda in various satellite states had accused Jews of being "too cosmopolitan" as shown by their sentiment for Israel. In a similar vein are many of the charges hurled against Catholic Christians. They, too, are held to be disloyal to Stalin because they have links with the Vatican and with Catholics beyond the Iron Curtain.

A few weeks ago Bulgaria staged a trial of 40 Catholics, including 28 priests, who were accused of printing anti-Communist literature, espionage, terrorist activities and plotting to overthrow the government. Red newspapers warned that the defendants could not have been so dangerous had they not been supported by Catholics abroad.

"Where did this band get its courage from?" asked the Sofia Otechestven. "Hardly from its own strength. Not from the people. It was evidently encouraged by the source that gave it financial aid."

Another newspaper in commenting on the case condemned the "despicable alliance between the Vatican and Wall Street."

In a recent murder trial in Poland, Radio Warsaw charged that the defendants "drew their inspiration for the crime and for the American style of killing from the 'Voice of America.'"

These tragic episodes demonstrate the psychopathic fear which Stalinists have for any person or group with contacts abroad. They forecast more purges and more persecutions.

Selected Short

WEST PALM BEACH, FLA., POST: "The left winger would have the government do everything and finally own everything. Then there would be that total government which such great liberals as Jefferson denounced and from which ancestors of Americans of today fled to establish this nation of individual and political freedom."

CARLSBAD, N.M., CURRENT-ARGUS: "Every big labor boss in the country . . . was campaigning against the Republicans. Millions and millions of dollars were poured into the election fight by the professional labor bosses. And they lost every dime of it. The money didn't come out of their pockets, of course, but came from the union treasuries—from the dues of hardworking union members."

RUSHMORE, MINN., ENTERPRISE: "The minute an editor withholds an opinion for fear someone may think it 'irresponsible,' or that he may be 'out of step with the times,' he ceases to perform his function."

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Yesterday I was lucky enough to run into Coach Jack Boone of the East Carolina College bowl-bound Pirates on the street. "You are just the man I'm looking for," I said, "so I can get the latest dope on the bowl game." But before Jack gave me the facts I congratulated him on coaching the first East Carolina team ever to receive a bowl bid. To make this a more important record, this is Coach Boone's first year as head coach.

Many Greenville people will follow the Pirates to Salisbury Saturday, so here are the pertinent facts. The kickoff will be at two o'clock, which means that wise fans will leave here bright and early Saturday morning. Salisbury is 250 miles from Greenville and if you make it in five hours you will be driving too fast.

East Carolina has received a block of tickets in the Lions Bowl just behind the 50-yard line. Originally, there were 250 available in addition to the students' allocation. These tickets are on sale for $2.50 each at the Health and Physical Education Building of the college (in plain English, that's the new gym), and in order to give Greenville people ample opportunity to purchase tickets the building will be open tonight and tomorrow night from eight to nine.

When you arrive in Salisbury to be directed to the Catawba College Stadium, for that's the scene of the Lions Bowl game. This game must be a triumph for Line Coach Clyde Biggers of the Pirates, for he was a college star at Catawba College and has bumped heads in that stadium many a time.

Coach Boone says that the Carolina State Teachers will field a strong team against his Pirates. During the season they are undefeated and have had only 24 points scored against them.

"The spirit of the squad is up," says Boone, "and we are probably in the best physical shape we have been in all season." As you probably saw in last night's Reflector, the game will not be broadcast. But after all, it's just a nice trip up to Salisbury where you can receive a first-hand account. The East Carolina cheering section is predicting a strong turn-out of students at the game, and there is little doubt that plenty of townspeople will also be on hand. And I thank you.

ELECTIONS—Revision of the election laws is sure to have a good deal of attention in the forthcoming General Assembly. No prolonged fight is looked for, but several members have let it be known they will propose amendments. Most of the proposals heard about so far are designed for local situations, although it may be necessary to make them statewide in application.

OBJECTIVES—The desired purpose is to make the process of registration and voting easier without destroying the basic safeguards essential to fair elections. One interested legislator said the problem is in the nature of a vicious circle: If voting is made too easy, the privilege will be abused; if it is made too hard, the duty will not be performed.

REGISTRATION—The record-breaking turn-out for the recent general election emphasized the need for overhauling the registration policy. Fewer than usual incidents of "trouble" on election day developed this year, but there were numerous protests about irregularities in pre-election registration and failure to have registration lists in proper form due to lack of time. That condition was especially provocative in Guilford County. A longer registration period may be the answer to one question, but does not cover the entire field. Duplication in registration books is a major source of aggravation for voters. The trend is definitely toward one listing for all elections. Not so many years ago the law required three books—one for Democratic primary voters, one for Republicans, and another for the general election in which both party lists were combined. Now only one book is required, although registrants must declare their party affiliation in order to participate in the primaries. MULTIPLICITY—There remains the requirement for additional registration in most places for municipal voting, and for special tax or bond elections. Multiplicity might be a more accurate term than duplication. Special effort is being made in the larger population centers to use the same lists in all elections—State primary and general, municipal and special. Raleigh is pioneering in that idea by re-arranging precinct lines so that no State or County precincts will overlap corporate limits of the city. Local legislation will be asked to put the plan into effect, and the bill may be drawn to apply to all communities in similar situation. That would necessitate revamping precinct lines in nearly every county.

PRECINCTS—There is wide variance in the size of voting precincts. There are some with less than 100 registered voters, and some with more than 2,000. Establishment of precinct lines is responsibility of the county boards of elections, with statutory provision that there shall be at least one voting place in each township. The polls are open for general elections just 12 hours, or 720 minutes. At the rate of one per minute, only 720 voters can be accommodated. Although no instance has been reported of any citizen being denied the right to vote because of the time limit, it is obvious that the 19 additional precincts set up in the state this year, bringing the total to 2,036, cannot provide adequate facilities. There is suggestion for working out the idea of single registration for all elections in connection with revision of precinct lines, so as to partially solve both problems.

MACHINES—There is growing demand for use of voting machines, especially in the larger precincts. Machines have been used in Durham and High Point for several years, and this year proved their worth also in Asheville and Sanford. ADVANTAGES—The chief objection to voting machines is the capital investment required, and the problem of distributing the cost equitably among all units of government. Advocates of their general use contend that the advantages far outweigh the disadvantages. It is argued that the saving in printing ballots alone will justify joint participation of State, county and municipal units in the purchase price. Experience does not indicate that use of machines speeds up the actual process of voting to any appreciable extent. Manipulation of the mechanical levers takes about as much time as the manual marking of ballots, and there is required the same process of checking registration books and listing names on the poll books. The greatest advantage in machine voting is in counting up after the polls close. Instead of spending tedious hours pouring over thousands of ballots, some of which are marked so as to make the voter's intention a matter of doubt, the election officials punch a button to get the total for every candidate in a matter of seconds.

PROPOSALS—Almost certainly there will be proposals in the next Legislature to authorize more general use of voting machines, with State, County and municipal units sharing in the costs of purchase. There will be serious attempt to further simplify the process of registering voters. Also to limit the number of voters permitted in one precinct. There is suggestion for working out the idea of single registration for all elections in connection with revision of precinct lines, so as to partially solve both problems.

MACHINES—There is growing demand for use of voting machines, especially in the larger precincts. Machines have been used in Durham and High Point for several years, and this year proved their worth also in Asheville and Sanford.

ADVANTAGES—The chief objection to voting machines is the capital investment required, and the problem of distributing the cost equitably among all units of government. Advocates of their general use contend that the advantages far outweigh the disadvantages. It is argued that the saving in printing ballots alone will justify joint participation of State, county and municipal units in the purchase price. Experience does not indicate that use of machines speeds up the actual process of voting to any appreciable extent. Manipulation of the mechanical levers takes about as much time as the manual marking of ballots, and there is required the same process of checking registration books and listing names on the poll books. The greatest advantage in machine voting is in counting up after the polls close. Instead of spending tedious hours pouring over thousands of ballots, some of which are marked so as to make the voter's intention a matter of doubt, the election officials punch a button to get the total for every candidate in a matter of seconds.

PROPOSALS—Almost certainly there will be proposals in the next Legislature to authorize more general use of voting machines, with State, County and municipal units sharing in the costs of purchase. There will be serious attempt to further simplify the process of registering voters. Also to limit the number of voters permitted in one

Business Today

By ELMER ROESNEB
Taxes almost always are Congress' biggest problem but the problem will be a whole lot stickier for the Eighty-third.

Most of the members, surely all of those of the dominant party, have promised to reduce expenses and taxes and to balance the budget. It should be reasonably possible to cut expenses and taxes, or to cut expenses and balance the budget, but it will take a lot of doing to do all three.

Expenses for the current fiscal year, ending June 30, are estimated at $70 billion; income is estimated at $68.7 billion, so the new Congress faces a $1.3-billion-plus deficit to begin with.

Senator Taft announced during the campaign that he and General Eisenhower were agreed on reducing expenditures to $70 billion during the next fiscal year. If income is unchanged at $68.7 billion, there will still be a deficit and no margin for a tax cut.

Higher corporate and personal income may tend to increase tax revenues. But on the other hand, the excess profits tax, which brings in about $2.5 billion a year, expires June 30 and there is strong opposition to its continuance. Furthermore, in the middle of the fiscal year, on December 31, 1953, individual income taxes will drop an average of 11 per cent under present laws, reducing the government's take by about $1.5 billion in that year.

It appears that Congress would have to cut expenditures down to around $65 billion just to balance the budget under existing tax rates.

The situation is further complicated by the fact that it is customary for Congress to hit or help upper-bracket and lower-bracket people at the same time, and to do the same with corporations and individuals. Representative Daniel A. Reed (R, N.Y.), head of the House Ways and Means Committee, which writes tax legislation, has announced that he favors letting the excess profits tax expire on June 30 and cutting personal taxes 5 per cent at the same time.

Meanwhile a Federal Reserve Board staff report agrees with the contention that high taxes hurt small firms worse than large ones. The many friends of small business in Congress will probably seize upon this as an argument for easing taxes on small corporations. But any easement for small companies is usually balanced by some easement for large ones. And the movement for further concessions to wage earners — such as allowing working wives to deduct the cost of baby sitters and other help — is gaining strong support. Any action along these lines might also be expected to be balanced by some concessions to high-income families. And all of such concessions will make it that much more difficult to reduce the basic tax rates.

MACHINES RECORDING.
TESTIMONY, SALES PITCHES
Makers of voice-recording devices are constantly finding new markets. Puerto Rico has begun recording all spoken words in District Court cases. And a better business organization in Los Angeles used hidden sound recorders to check the sales pitch of salesmen suspected of sharp practices when selling in homes.

OFFERS NEW FORMULA TO GAUGE RETAILING.
One store can sell more than another in the same line and still make a poorer showing. Raymond Scott, of the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, told a meeting of the National Association of Shoe Chain Stores.

The real measurement, he said, is how much of its market a store sells. He cited three stores of the same size in three different towns. The one with the smallest sales volume was actually doing the best job of retailing, he said, because it sold 40 per cent of its market. The store with the largest volume was selling only 21 per cent and the other store was selling only 10 per cent.

Hal Boyle's Column

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—"Dear Mr. Poor Man's Philosophy:
"Can't you ever let well enough alone? Recently you wrote an article saying you felt sorry for real tall people on account of they were a nuisance to themselves and had trouble fitting into a civilization built for ordinary-sized men.

"Well, you just broke the heart of my little boy, Elbert. He had always wanted to be a giant. Now he says if it's no fun to grow up to be a giant and he'll grow back down to be a midget. He will, too. . . . Stubborn little tyke. . . . Hasn't grown an inch all week.

"This has my wife upset. She says, 'Isn't it bad enough to be married to a husband with a mind like a midget?'"

"What we both want to know is: how can we make our Elbert want to be a giant again?"
Signed — Indignant Father."

I guess the best thing to do is to give little Elbert the other side of the picture. A number of readers have written in to say there is no pleasure in life like being tall enough to reach up and chin yourself on the nearest elm tree.

It turns out most human Alps enjoy the air at their altitude, and wouldn't lose an inch if they could. The positive advantages of being tall were best expressed by John Schmiedeler of the Sallin Kas Journal, who started knee-high to a tree's hone pole and recently was estimated by a local "nometry student to have paused at six-feet-six-inches.

"When I go to a parade, I see a parade, not the back of the neck of the man in front of me," wrote Schmiedeler.

"I can change a light bulb without danger to limb from shaky ladders.

"It's true that not all clothing stores welcome the sight of me stooping through the door frame. But there are those who do cater to the long man, and they are increasing in number.

"I never had much trouble in the Army. I warned the draft board the day I was inducted that clothing me was a government project from now on. And since it was either get me some uniform and boots or let me stay in the sack all day, I was outfitted quickly. I was five-foot-eleven."

Schmiedeler said his puny five-foot-plus buddies had no edge over him in taking cover in time of danger. He recalled that during one night air raid alarm he dug "a slit trench across two hills and a valley before Bed-Check Charlie the enemy pilot got his engine warmed up."

He also pointed out that an Army pack seemed lighter to a tall man because he had more back to carry it on, and he could set a walking pace hard for the little guy to keep up.

"Imagine how much better off I am in a snow storm," Schmiedeler continued. "I wade the drifts easily that the small man must avoid for fear of suffocation.

"It's true that I bump my head on a door jamb occasionally, but I never get elbowed in the mush on a crowded bus.

"There have been some tall men who, inferiority complex or not, did mighty deeds. Remember Abe Lincoln? He wasn't a small man. You wouldn't call Gustav V of Sweden a shrimp and he was a king.

"On the distaff side there is Eleanor Roosevelt. Then there is the bevy of tall New York show girls. Their talents are obvious, and if they have any complexes at all I'll lay odds they are not of inferiority."

As to my observation that tall men did get one bonus in the fact that an awful lot of girls like to lean on their shoulders, Schmiedeler said:

"I find the sweet young things rarely able to reach a shoulder. But, Brother, do I get cried on just above the belt buckle?"

There you are, Indignant Father. Tell little Elbert that if he really finds a way to grow up to be a giant to let me know. I have changed my mind and think I'd like to try to be one, too.

Washington Letter

By ANNETTE DAVIS
For Jane Eads

WASHINGTON—Have you seen the statue of Jefferson in the Jefferson Memorial?

You may have looked at it, says sculptor Rudolph Evans, the statue's creator, but you haven't seen it — you can't with the present lighting.

"Sculpture should be lighted from above to bring out its highlights and shadows," Evans told me. "If it isn't, all you see is a mass with no distinguishing features."

The 74-year-old Washington native has returned after many years in New York and Paris to keep an affectionate eye on his life's greatest work. He hopes someday to get through the maze of politics involved in an act of Congress, necessary to make a change in the memorial.

Three things can be done according to the sculptor: install proper artificial lighting, cut windows in the base of the dome or open the top of the dome.

"Even though an effort has been made to light the statue artificially," he says, "it is still a miserable failure. The lights are only turned on after dark and act like a spotlight on Jefferson's face." The best solution, Evans feels, would be to open the top of the dome. This would allow natural light to diffuse over the statue.

John Russell Pope, architect of the memorial, patterned it after the Pantheon in Rome, which Jefferson himself greatly admired and used as the model for Monticello, his home. "The Pantheon has an open dome," Evans points out, "and Jefferson, one of our first architects, allowed for skylighting in the dome of Monticello and in the rotunda at the University of Virginia."

Evans was selected to execute the 16-foot-high bronze statue in a nationwide competition which over 100 sculptors entered. His statue of Robert E. Lee stands in the capitol building at Richmond, and four of his busts are in the Hall of Fame in New York.

"Jefferson believed in the ultimate perfectibility of man," he told me wistfully. "The statue should ennoble the spectators. How can it when the only time a person can get good look at Jefferson is on a sunny winter day at 11 o'clock in the morning?"

What Other Papers Are Thinking

CONSOLATION

(Williamston Enterprise)
Those thoughtful people in Martin County who worked for and contributed to the recent CROP (Christian Rural Overseas Relief) drive, can find reward and consolation in the reports coming in from Korea. The carload of corn contributed in this county has not reached its destination, but other foods and clothing have been distributed and the helpless are expressing endless thanks.

Today there are approximately four million homeless refugees behind American lines in that war-torn country.

his entire district was denuded of its population because there was no money, no clothing and no grain. Thirty thousand of the normal population of 60,000 sought relief in the same province in which Seoul is located. The other 30,000 were either lost or were forced to evacuate to the neighboring districts, Ko-yang and Pa-ju, which even in better days had not enough food and clothing for their own people.

In his letter, the governor thanked CWS for 4,900 pieces of "used" clothing which you have bestowed favors on our people. We adequately and impartially distributed to our poor people with endless thanks. As a delegate of our refugees I express my gratitude."

Korean government officials and U. N. representatives have given much credit to food, cash and clothing collections among American troops and to American voluntary organizations for preventing an even wider spread of need among the Koreans. There are at least 10,000 civilian amputees in Korea today. For children among these, soldiers of the U. S. Army have collected $70,000 so far. Their goal is $100,000. In addition, there are a large number of amputees among Korean veterans.

Those who had a part in loading the car of corn surely must find peace of mind in the knowledge that they, at least, did something to help relieve those helpless people in their present pitiful plight.

Strength for the Day

EVERYTHING AND EVERYWHERE

"In everything by prayer and thanksgiving let your supplication be made known unto God."
"In everything"—not just in a few things or in moments of great crisis or when the earth starts to quake or the torrential floods start rolling down the gulch. These are times that will drive any man to his knees. It is no sign of piety that a man begins to pray when circumstances have pressed a gun against his temple. True dedication to God is characterized by continual prayer. We must pray at all times and about all things.

There is something very striking about that statement: "In all things." It means in the midst of all things. Prayer in the sanctuary is very acceptable to God and so is prayer uttered behind the closed door of daily devotion. But the prayer that we utter as we go about our daily work be it ever so humble is a prayer which will surely bring results. Prayer is communion, prayer also is petition. We ask in order that we may get something.

We are to pray in the midst of everything and for everything—firm in our belief and never doubting. "In everything by prayer and thanksgiving let your supplication be made known unto God."

We Appreciate Your Cooperation

Mechanical difficulties in the press room of The Daily Reflector caused a great deal of inconvenience to our many subscribers and other customers during the past several days.

Needless to say it also put a terrific strain on the facilities of the newspaper plant.

We take this opportunity to express our appreciation to our subscribers and advertisers who have borne with us during these recent difficult days, and certainly hope that the difficulties which caused the editions to be late have been remedied.

When serious trouble develops in a piece of precision equipment which weighs several tons, it is no easy matter to get to the seat of the trouble and remedy it within a few hours. In the case of the press of The Reflector, it became necessary Monday and Tuesday to make major repairs to that piece of equipment. Reflector personnel along with members of press room crews from other papers in this section of the state worked to repair the equipment Monday night and most of the day Tuesday. They worked continuously from 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon until mid-day Wednesday before the press could be put back in running condition.

Because of the mechanical breakdown, a portion of the Reflector subscribers did not receive their Tuesday's edition until yesterday. As much as we hated to be caught in such circumstances, it just could not be helped.

Tuesday was the first time in the Reflector's 59-year history as a daily newspaper that the printing of an edition was not completed on the day it was supposed to be. We surely hope it will be the last time such a thing happens.

The press now has been restored to running condition, and we anticipate no further major difficulties although it will be approximately two weeks before the repair job which has been necessary will be completed.

Again we would like to express to our customers our appreciation for their cooperation and understanding during the difficulties. Likewise we assure our customers that every precaution is being and will be taken to make sure such a thing will not happen again.

New Church Will Open On Sunday

Rev. Richard L. West, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Fountain, invited members of other denominations and non-church members in his service Sunday morning to attend the first service to be held in the new church Sunday morning, December 21.

The service in the new church will be held at 11 o'clock. A spokesman of the church said the new building is a credit to the town of Fountain and every member has taken part in helping make it possible to erect such a beautiful church.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Fountain First Baptist Church are sponsoring a turkey supper to be held in the Fountain School lunchroom Friday, December 12, from six to eight o'clock.

Plates will be sold at the dinner for $1.25 each. The proceeds will be used for the new organ for the church.

Computator Is Pocket-Sized

NEW YORK (AP) — A new non-sliding slide-rule does your mathematics quickly for you. It can multiply, divide, find square roots, measure the area of circles and rectangles, and the volume of cylinders and cubes.

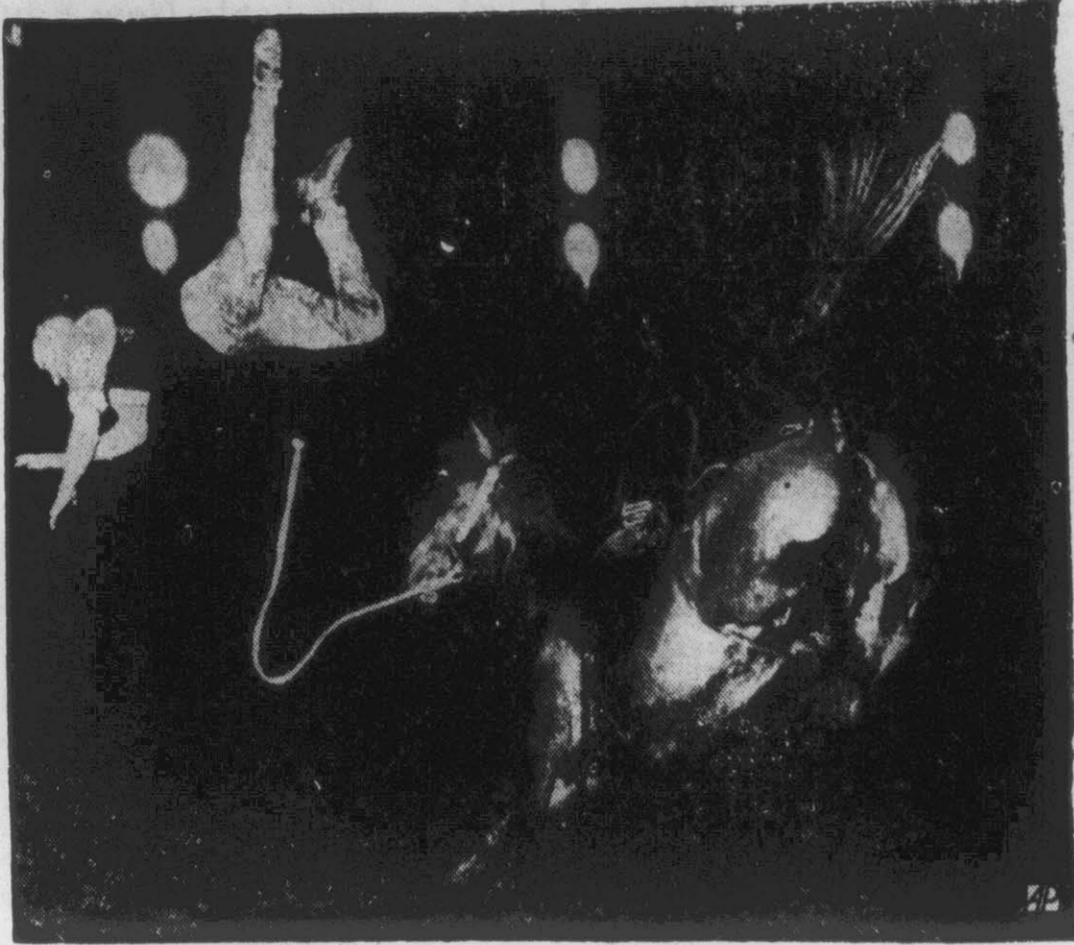

It has no moving parts. It's simply a square of transparent plastic, 5 by 5 inches, marked with a family of numbered parabolic curves, two diagonal lines, and a numbered horizontal and vertical grid system. This arithmetical wizard was developed by John D. Kreutner of New-Era Products, New York, who calls it the Space-Scale.

To find the area of a rectangle, as for example a scale drawing of a room on an architectural plan, you place the Space-Scale over the drawing, with the upper left corner of the device on the upper left corner of the drawing. The number on the curve cutting the lower right corner of the room gives you the area.

Two Million Dwarf Spruce Trees Are Being Prepared For Christmas Season

By JOE F. KANE

DULUTH, Minn.—Dwarf spruce trees whose growth has been stunted for as long as a century in ancient lakebeds will bring Christmas cheer to about two million living rooms.

The little trees that have struggled for survival through decades of frigid winters in the remote swamplands of Minnesota's north woods will be decked out in shiny coats of paint for the holidays. Some will be silver, some white, some bright green.

The warm holiday atmosphere in which the trees will be in direct contrast to their northwoods environment.

For years the trees were unable to get enough nourishment from the water-soaked lakebeds for proper growth. Thousands upon thousands of them clustered in small areas. icy winds whistled through their yellow-gray branches for as many as 100 winters.

The spruce lose their "healthy" rich green coloring because of poor condition of the mucky soil and take on the yellow-gray shading.

While most people were getting ready for Easter, woodsmen began cutting the trees for the holidays. By the time the peak of the cutting season was reached, Halvorson Trees, Inc., had about 85 cutters on the job.

The Halvorson firm claims to be the biggest operator in the field. Their production this year will be between one-and-a-half and two million trees. At full production, 10,000 trees are processed in one day. Many of the trees come from the firm's own 15,000-acre tract. Others come from areas owned by federal, state or county governments.

The only trees cut are those that have been stunted in the swamplands to the extent they will never be good for pulpwood. Less than 10 per cent of the standing growth in any area is cut in any single year. The trees cut must be perfectly formed on a miniature scale and must be between 36 and 42 inches high.

Most areas in which the trees are cut are miles from good roads. Woodsmen cut tractor paths through woodlands fabled in Paul Bunyan lore, spreading small trees across the path to support tractors with extra wide treads.

The small black spruce are cut with Swedish bushmen's saws that resemble small bucksaws with steel bows. Tractors pull big loads of trees over the mucky swampland and through the wood lands to main roads, where trucks pick them up.

Only a few hours after the trees are cut, they are processed at the Halvorson plant in the port city of Duluth on the north shore of Lake Superior.

A conveyor belt pulls the trees into a big vat, where they are covered with a fire-resistant waxy undercoating. A whirling process dries the trees before the top coating is applied.

Green Is Most Popular Seventy-five per cent of the Halvorson trees are painted bright green, 15 per cent silver and 10 per cent white. Short strands of rayon fiber are sprayed on the white trees, giving them a frosty finish.

Whirling blades shave the tree trunks at the base and whittle them down to a half-inch dowel. A steel stand, six inches high and filled with preserving fluid, is then clamped on the trunk.

The trees are moved from the processing line into cold storage warehouses. During the shipping season, which started this year on Nov. 10, the trees are moved directly into freight cars.

As many as 18 freight cars, each holding 7,500 trees, leave the plant daily during the peak of the shipping season.

The court gave Welcher two years on the roads, sentence suspended on condition that he not enter within five miles of the city of Greenville for two years and that he remain of good behavior and not violate any law for two years.

Andrew R. Cognill was fined $25 and costs for driving without an operator's license.

Ernest L. Anderson, failure to give hand signal while driving a motor vehicle, was given 30 days in jail, suspended on payment of $10, and he is to make restitution for property damage.

Walter R. Byrd paid $15 for speeding.

Rudolph Edwards paid $5 for having a defective muffler.

Robert Hudson paid $25, costs deducted, for not having an operator's license.

Nathaniel Taft, Negro, careless and reckless driving, 30 days in jail, suspended on payment of $25, costs deducted. Taft is not to operate a motor vehicle for two weeks.

PARIS (AP) — Communist deputies are introducing a bill into the National Assembly which would give each discharged French soldier a Sunday suit and two sets of working clothes, and a pair of "best" shoes and some working boots.

French conscripts are paid about 5 American cents a day during their term of service. The Communists point out this does not permit them to save to buy clothes on their return to civilian life.

Student Club Stages Original Play Honoring Pioneer Home Economist

As a token of honor to Ellen H. Richards, first president and pioneer of the American Home Economics Association, members of the East Carolina College home economics club celebrated the 110th anniversary of her birth by staging Tuesday night of this week an original play based on her life.

The short dramatic work "Ellen H. Richards' Challenge" was written by Gwendolyn Williams of Oakboro, vice president and program chairman of the campus home economics club. Based on a biography of Mrs. Richards by Carolina Hunt, the play included narration and scenes from the life of the home economist.

Miss Williams, acting as narrator in Tuesday's performance, gave an account of the early interest shown by Mrs. Richards in homemaking, of her training for her work, and of her pioneer activities as a home economist.

Scenes of the play presented Sally Crotte of Seranton in the role of "the mother of home economics." Mrs. Richards' mother was played by Clara Mason of Swan Quarter; and a teacher at Vassar who influenced Mrs. Richards, by Mary Sue Cook of Hertford. Others in the cast were Emily Knox of Leland, Ann Carawan of Swan Quarter, Peggy Cox of Richlands, and Jo Bryson of Apex.

College Choir To Sing Oratorio At Eppes School

The East Carolina College Choir will present Handel's oratorio "The Messiah" in a special performance at Eppes High School at eight o'clock this evening. A large audience is expected to be present for the program which will be given as a prelude to the Christmas season.

This performance of "The Messiah" will be the second offered this week by the College Choir, a group of eighty men and women students at East Carolina. The oratorio was offered Tuesday evening before a large and appreciative audience in the Wright building on the campus.

Dr. Karl V. Gilbert is director of the Choir. Talented men and women students of music will be soloists at tonight's performance.

But Still In The Red

HAMMOND, Ind. (UP)—Jerry Anchor, 11, had bad luck and good luck only a few minutes apart. His bike was stolen from in front of his school. As he walked to the police station to report the theft, he found a wallet containing $16.

When William Penn founded Pennsylvania, the death penalty was provided in the laws of the colony only for willful murder, compared with 200 offenses punished by death in England at that time.

Postman Fixing Rural Mailboxes

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—It has cost R. Martin Williams almost $500 but the mailboxes on his rural route are losing their hodge-podge look. Boxes that once were staggered along the highway now stand with military precision in neat, even rows to expedite delivery and pickups. Many wear a new coat of paint; others have a new signal flag.

The 62-year-old postman has eight more years to go with the department and he believes in making things easy for himself so he started the remodeling job himself. Before Williams took over in November, the carrier frequently had to leave his car and deliver mail on foot.

"There are many ups and downs for me," said Williams, so he went to work with lumber, nails and paint. He's already spent $295 and expects to spend about $200 more before his project is completed.

When it is, he will be able to reach all 434 boxes without leaving the driver's seat since all small boxes will be 44 inches from the ground and all large ones 40 inches as per regulations.

Discoverer Of Possum Came With Columbus

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—The discoverer of the American opossum was a ship captain of Columbus, Vicente Yanez Pinzon, says Dr. Carl G. Hartman in his recently published book "Possums."

The discovery was made Feb. 8, 1500, and the opossum was later presented at the court of Ferdinand and Isabella, says the author who is now associate director of the Ortho Research Foundation, Haritan, N. J.

The opossum young is born an embryo and incubates in the abdominal pouch, a process which Dr. Hartman has observed and recorded pictorially in his book.

Newly born rattlesnakes have no rattle.

Tale Of Double-Double Cross In Czech Purges

By PHIL NEWSOM
United Press Foreign News Editor
From Vienna comes an amazing story.
It purports to be the inside of the recent Czechoslovak purge trials in Prague, and it may or may not be true.
At any rate it is the story of a double-cross on a grand scale, climaxed when the conspirator is hanged from the same gallows as one of the men he conspired against.
It sees the possibility of the rise of a new Tito in Middle Europe.

It is a story of almost unbelievable ruthlessness, of a high-stakes game with loaded dice.
The name of the man who tells it is kept secret. But he is said recently to have come from Czechoslovakia where he was in a position to observe at the highest political and economic levels.
Here it is:
Czechoslovak President Klement Gottwald and former Communist Chief Rudolf Slansky had warred for power for four years.
It came into the open when the Communists seized power in 1948 and reached a climax in 1950.

Up until 1950, Slansky had been on the rise.
It was at his direction that former Foreign Minister Vladimir Clementis and more than a dozen other leaders were arrested, including his own deputy, Marie Svermova, widow of a Communist hero.
And it was at his direction that Villiam Siroky, Clementis' rival as leader of the Slovaks, took over as foreign minister, a post he still holds.
In the fall of 1950, Slansky was ready for his boldest stroke.
He went to Moscow where he told the Kremlin that Czechoslovakia's failure to fulfill her five-year plans and to provide the heavy goods Moscow demanded was the fault of Czechoslovak "nationalists"—a charge which eventually would have led to Gottwald himself. He asked permission to conduct a purge.

What Slansky didn't realize was that in this game of cat and mouse, it was he who was the intended victim.
On the altar of his own plans, Gottwald simply had allowed Clementis to be sacrificed. Gottwald, too, went to Moscow. He, too, demanded a cleanup on his own terms. Moscow withheld a decision.

It wasn't until February, 1951, that Moscow acted. Then it sent L. P. Beria, head of Russian secret police and slave labor camps, to investigate. Beria was too late. Gottwald, the nationalist, had won out over Slansky, the Russia-lover, including control of all the arms-bearing forces in Czechoslovakia. Beria surrendered to what seemed the inevitable.

Early this month Slansky was hanged, along with his victim, Clementis.
Now Russia wonders if, in Gottwald, it has another Tito on its hands.

GESUNDHEIT!
NASHUA, N. H. (UP)—John J. Aukonis of Hudson was charged with negligent driving when his automobile crashed into a pole while rounding a curve. Municipal Judge Bolles Degasis dismissed the case when Aukonis explained that he lost control of the car during a fit of sneezing.

Yugoslavs Double Military Strength

BELGRADE (U.P.)—The latest unofficial estimate of Yugoslavia's military strength shows that the country now keeps approximately 450,000 men under arms, more than double the strength in the early post-war years.

The armed forces consist of permanent cadres, two conscript classes which serve two years, and navy and air force engineers and other specialists who serve three years.

The only public official estimate ever given here was a statement made during the recent party congress by Col. Gen. Koca Popovic, chief of staff.

"Since 1948 nearly 1,000,000 conscripts have passed through the army, including the contingent now serving," he said.

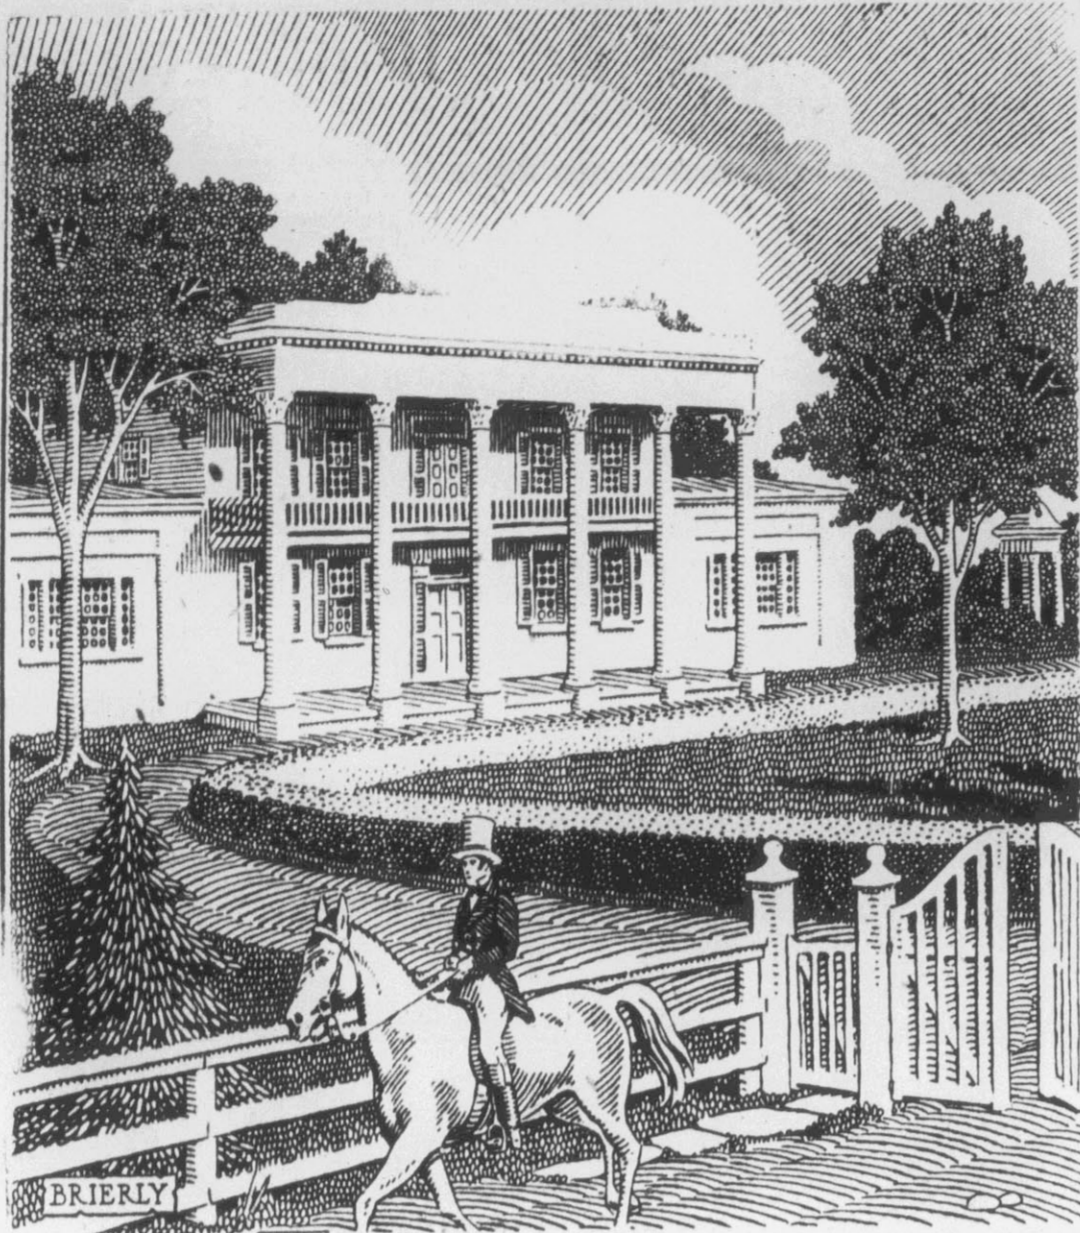

U.S. Planes Received

The army is estimated to have 26 divisions, 8,000 to 12,000 strong, cavalry and artillery units, but does not include separate tank units and the small but growing air force and navy about which exact figures are not available.

The Yugoslav navy concentrates on small coastal defense ships not larger than destroyers. It recently launched a major building program after a long period of relative neglect.

The air force was, until recently, equipped with the most varied outmoded wartime Russian, German and western models with an additional handful of home-produced fighters and training machines.

Since Jan. 31, Yugoslavia has been receiving American 47 Thunderbolt conventional fighters. The number of the Thunderbolts is undisclosed, but believed to be more than 100. At present, the air force is preparing to receive American jet fighters, the first of which are 1819. The HERMITAGE, near Nashville, Tennessee.

IN 1804, ANDREW JACKSON built the first "Hermitage," a sturdy house of logs, in the midst of a four hundred and twenty acre plantation. He brought his loving wife here and, with her spent fifteen happy years. There were three adjoining log cabins, for the accommodation of their many guests, among whom were President Monroe and Aaron Burr. Following Jackson's military successes at the Battle of New Orleans and the Indian campaign in Florida, he had some financial success in cotton and decided, in 1819, to build a mansion to replace his log house. From this "Hermitage," he had the good fortune to issue forth as President of the United States, but great sorrow in the death of his wife. due to arrive in the spring of 1953. About 200 Yugoslav pilots, mechanics and other specialists are now—or soon will be—training in Germany and the United States. Several military airports have already strengthened and lengthened their runways and are capable of handling jets. Other airfields are in construction.

Arms Factories

It is understood that Yugoslavia is planning to have a relatively small jet force, sufficient for immediate defense, with the idea that it could be quickly reinforced from the surrounding NATO countries in case of need.

Yugoslavia, which was completely dependent on military supplies from abroad, has now officially admitted that she has 37 military factories producing enough small arms to satisfy her needs almost entirely. Among the arms manufactured in Yugoslavia are rifles, machine-guns, mortars, grenade-throwers and munitions for them, also uniforms and other similar equipment.

The equipment of the Yugoslav army on foreign sources for most of her transport and all heavy equipment. The latter, including tanks, is now being received in increasing quantities under United States military aid program which began shipments 10 months ago.

The members of the United States Military Mission here and the numerous high-ranking American military visitors have said they are highly impressed by the Yugoslav capacity to handle complicated equipment and the care taken to ensure sufficient trained personnel.

Those who have inspected Yugoslav military factories praised their modern and efficient operation.

Morale Good

Observers generally agree that Yugoslav soldiers are physically fit and also praise the high morale and excellent calibre of their officers, although some feel that the training of officers is still somewhat U-fashioned.

But Yugoslavia is still dependent on the west for much of her military equipment. One point on which experts fully agree is that "the Yugoslav army is capable of giving a very good account of itself if attacked."

Indians in New Mexico give Christmas plays and festivals over a month-long period ending Jan. 6, which is "Old Christmas."

is just what the boys need... a great morale booster... a threat to the Communist theory that Americans are soft... a look-see at first hand that will help the entire picture.

Ko ea is uppermost in the minds of most servicemen today, particularly the younger boys who do not expect to make a career of the armed services.

A question put to these boys... "What is the most important question in the serviceman's mind today" brought these answers:

"Getting the Korean deal over with... George Acosta, 24, 7 years with the air force and stationed at a Mitchell Air Force Base

Let's all try to make this a Merry Christmas for servicemen. If there is a base near your home, why not get your family to ask one boy to share Christmas dinner with you? People need to be reminded that these boys are in a fighting war and they're not wearing their uniforms because they look pretty. Some of these young men will be on their way to Korea perhaps shortly after Christmas. If you can cheer them up for the holidays, your time will be well spent and well remembered.

If you want to get yourself in the spirit of the thing, think of how frightened you get when a car narrowly misses hitting you; think of how miserable you feel when you must trudge through mud on a rainy day when you are unprepared for the elements; think how hungry and dizzy you get when you can't get home in time for your dinner, and think how cold you feel when your coat doesn't seem quite warm enough on a bad winter day. When you've thought about these things, multiply them by a 1000 and perhaps you'll have a small idea of what it feels like to be at the front on a cold Christmas day.

American servicemen stationed over the world might have good vittles for Christmas dinner — succulent turkey, gravy and plum pudding — and all the glamor that the U.S.O. can bring to them in the way of entertainment. But their thoughts are nearer to their hearts than their stomachs, and the universal thought is to get back to Mom's kitchen and their own gang.

This was the idea conveyed by a group of seven boys who were guests of the U.S.O. at a luncheon at which Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower made her first public appearance since the General became President-Elect.

The service men loved Mamie when she added in praising the U.S.O. that "...and you all know where my John is." And the boys admit they are keeping their fingers crossed that President-Elect Eisenhower's trip will be a success. In any case even if it doesn't bring the Korean war to an immediate end, and they don't expect it will they are all in agreement that "it

For The 'Short-Stemmed American Beauty'

LITTLE WOMEN . . . This set-in band of pink, soft drape, for diminutives.

KEEP IT SIMPLE . . . Alan Phillips, designer of fashions for women 5 feet 4 and under, tries out a new style on a model. He favors for simple lines, unobtrusive trimmings and correctly proportioned cut.

FOR AVERAGE FIGURES . . . Red barathra cocktail dress and jacket, proportioned for the average.

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Fashion Editor
If you have difficulty visualizing yourself in the styles habitually worn by models six feet tall and one foot wide, don't despair. There's a growing awareness in the garment industry that the majority of American women do not conform to the measurements of the "long-stemmed American beauty" as set forth by leading fashion models. Most of them, in fact, are strictly short-stemmed and considerably wider across the beam than the conventional string-bean mannikin. All this is realized by designer Alan Phillips, who plans his collections especially for the average woman of 5 feet 4 or under—the so-called "diminutive."

Having observed the frustration of small women trying to find clothes that fit in an average department store Mr. Phillips was moved by compassion, and also by a canny business sense, to produce fashions correctly proportioned for his majority. What is the sense, he asked himself, in manufacturing clothes for the majority, when the majority have to spend prohibitively alteration costs plus disappointing shopping hours in order to wear them? His diminutive fashions, available throughout the country today, are especially designed for the small woman, youthful in styling, right in proportions. He avoids excessive trimming, frill-frill ornaments and lines which tend to cut height. Suits never have generated pelplums or extra-full skirts. Collars and lapels are small and discretely cut. Bodices are carefully fitted and simple in line, prints when used are small.

Propaganda In Oldest Language

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—One of the world's oldest languages is being used to spread Communist propaganda in Lebanon. The ancient Syriac language—spoken over the entire Middle East until the 8th century A. D., is used in a mimeographed periodical called the "Eastern Times," circulated among the Assyrian minority here. The paper must be mimeographed because there are no printing facilities for the Syriac language in this area.

PARIS (AP)—The French Parliament is being asked to approve certain foreign military decorations as being of equivalent value to the French Croix de Guerre, so that French soldiers holding them after service under non-French command may be allowed automatically to hold the Croix de Guerre. The Croix de Guerre may influence the promotion or advancement of those holding it, whereas foreign decorations, even when rated equally high, do not.

Despite Rift Girl Says Indian Princes 'Tops'

By JAY BREEN
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK (UP)—Blonde and shapely Nancy Valentine said today that an American girl couldn't expect to find a more devoted husband than a prince of India, even though she'll soon go to court to get an annulment from the one she married. "They're fabulous," she reminisced, "they know how to make a girl feel like she's the laziest cream-puff in the bakery. I only wish the one I got could still be mine."

Miss Valentine married the maharajah of Cooh Behar about eight years ago. She said domestic life started out romantic. Then the civil war which created Pakistan brought hard times upon her husband. Shortly after the Moslem uprisings began, she said she received polite hints that she was no longer welcome. "I won't say they threatened me openly," she said, "but I got several very courteous warnings that my health would be a lot better if I returned to California." Nancy did just that and recently entered the publicity business in Hollywood. "I try to take an interest in American men, but it's just no use, so far," she said, "with the maharajah it was 'Some Enchanted Evening' every day in the week."

The maharajah and maharajee correspond regularly and Mrs. Cooh Behar said she scouted the possibilities of taking her tangled romance to the United Nations as a sort of international Romeo and Juliet case for that tribunal to settle. "They impounded all his money," she said, "he wrote me the other day he had to get permission to buy a couple of new convertibles—just imagine that." Nancy said she wrote the maharajah suggesting that he come to Hollywood and become a press agent, too, but that he had balked at the idea of having to sing the praises of people he didn't know.

ED TIPTON formerly a top contender in professional boxing circles and well known in the sporting world has recently moved to Greenville to enter business. The ex-fighter has met many ring greats during his career including Ezzard Charles, Joe Louis, and Billy Conn.

Former Pro Boxer In Business Here

There are few men indeed who can record among his memories the feat of whipping a heavyweight boxing champion or fighting six rounds with Joe Louis and still be standing at the finish.

Back in pre-World War II days when Joe Louis was king of the ring, a young man from North Carolina, who was destined to meet Louis face to face inside the squared circle, was busily establishing a record that any champion would be proud of.

Though never a champion in the professional boxing ranks, Lawrence Ed Tipton, now a resident of Greenville, has fought 13 champions and ex-champions and held nine Golden Gloves titles plus a string of army crowns including the North Africa Allied heavyweight championship.

During his ring career Tipton fought 108 professional fights losing only 16, drew two and won 47 by knockouts. Before turning pro Tipton fought 108 amateur bouts of which he lost 27, and won 27 by knockouts.

Since retiring from the ring Ed or "Tip" as he is known to top sports personalities and friends all over the United States, has been as successful in the role of businessman as when a ring warrior.

After giving up the ring Tipton returned to North Carolina in 1945 as representative for Wilson Sporting Goods. Tipton found that his numerous acquaintances as a boxing headliner stood him in good with sports establishments.

Tipton and wife Rosamond ("Tippie") and their two children Lawrence Ed Tipton II, age 5, and Mark, 3, have recently moved to Greenville and now reside at 110 Harding Street.

He will go into business here with C. H. Edwards Jr. in the Appliance Sales and Sporting Goods, Inc.

Started Boxing Career In N. C. Tipton started his successful boxing career right here in North Carolina while a youngster of 17. He was in Battle Creek, Mich. home of the south to live with his sister, who married a North Carolinian, while here entered Wingate Junior College.

That's where he began his amateur ring career. He got his first real test in the 1934 Carolinas Golden Gloves tournament in Charlotte. That year he lost a three round decision to Jack Dunn of the Charlotte YMCA.

After a year with the Wingate boxing team he entered the Carolina AAU boxing tourney and won the welterweight title.

He then made the first of three unsuccessful trips to the National Golden Gloves events. In the 1935 Nationals in Honolulu he lost out in the semi-finals but won the popularity cup, which was an outstanding prize in the tournament. Tipton's style of fighting was al-

Phantoms Meet Wilson In Opening Home Tilt Friday

Phants Seek To Gain Revenge For Earlier Defeat

By HERMAN HICKMAN
Reflector Sports Editor

After three unsuccessful road games the Phantoms play Wilson in their first home basketball game Friday night.

Next Tuesday night the Phants will meet Rocky Mount here for the final game before Christmas holidays.

This will be the second meeting between the two clubs. In the first encounter Wilson played the inexperienced Phantoms off their feet while administering them a 57-29 shellacking.

The Phantoms dropped contests to Rocky Mount and Goldsboro but have been steadily improving and Tuesday night threatened to snatch victory from the Goldsboro quint.

"We've got a better team than these early scores seem to indicate," says Coach Bo Farley, continuing. "The teams we played have most of their players back from last year and practically all of our team is playing first year varsity ball."

"Smith Worthington and Jimmy Cheatham are the only varsity returners from last year's squad. George Sideris, Walter Perkins, Bobby Conway, Dixie Hobgood, Leon Hardee, and Guy Smith are all potentially very promising but they still lack proper experience against the kind of competition we have been facing."

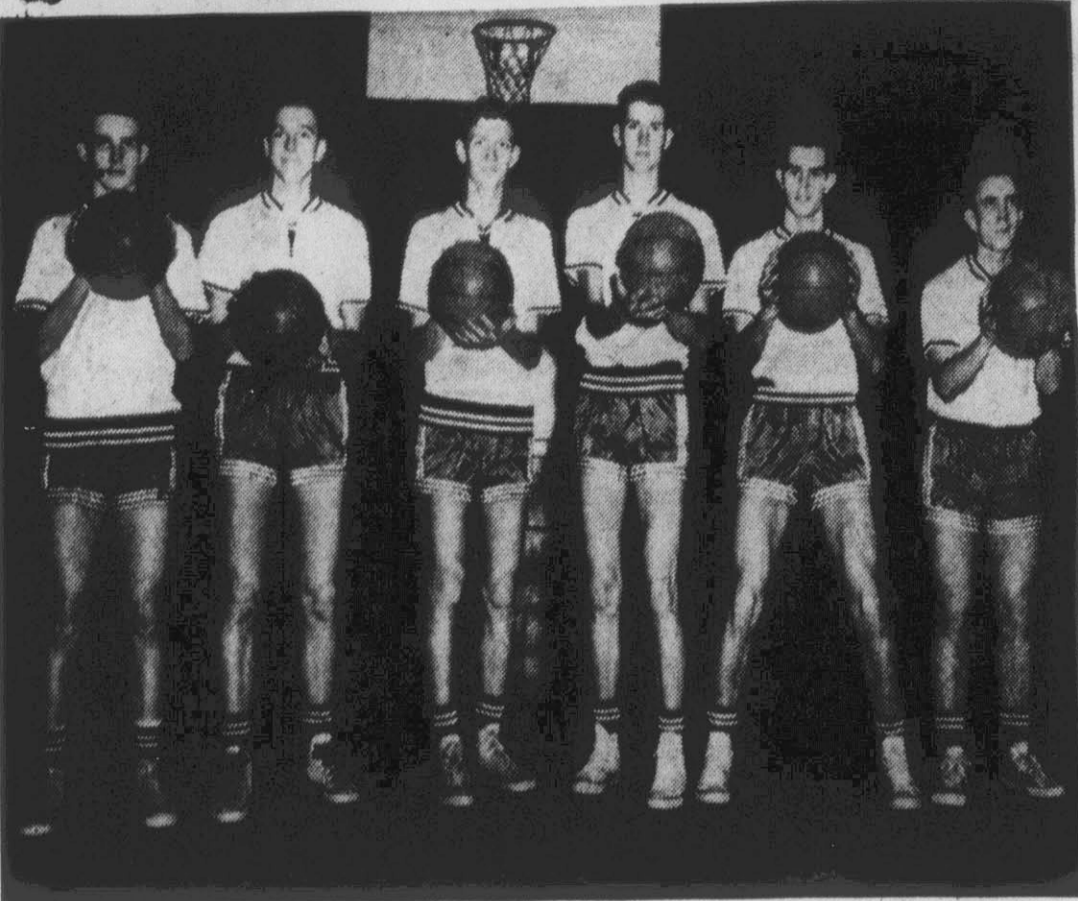

Coach Farley explained that in the Goldsboro game the Phants connected on a meager 21 per cent of their shots from the floor. Even so the Phantoms held a 20-19 lead at halftime and in the final three minutes pulled with three points of the Triple-A club.

Worthington, who is breezing along with a 18.3 game average, has been the only member of the Phantoms to score consistently. Leon Hardee dumped in eight points Tuesday night and may start at the forward post with Worthington.

In the pivot spot Bobby Conway and Bobby Starkey are two rangy prospects who are steady performers under the backboards. Both boys excel in going up for rebounds. With a little more experience and practice this pair should begin to find the range to the basket.

Jimmy Cheatham and Dixie Hobgood are a pair of fine defensive guards and good playmakers. Hobgood is a husky newcomer to the varsity who fares well in the rough play under the basket. George Sideris and Guy Smith are a pair of speedy guards who move the ball well and pop away at the basket enough to represent scoring threats. Edgar Moore and Walter Perkins are two tall forwards who have shown up well in practice but have been off the mark during games.

The boys have been off in their shooting against every team we've played this year. However, they are showing more poise and confidence

Basketball Clinic For Women Set At New Gym On Saturday

A clinic on basketball for women will be held at East Carolina College Saturday morning of this week under the direction of Neil Stallings of the department of health and physical education at the college. The meeting will be held in the new gymnasium on the campus and will begin at 11 o'clock.

The program will focus attention on a discussion of rules for women's basketball. Miss Stallings states. Coaches and teams from high schools and others who are interested are invited to attend.

Bucs Taper Drills And Polish Attack

Only polishing touches remained to be done in bowl game preparations of the East Carolina College football Pirates who will meet Clarion State Teachers College in Salisbury's Lions Bowl Saturday.

The Pirates were chased indoors yesterday by the rain but they lost very little by moving since Coach Jack Boone had planned to have a light workout anyway. They had a short session of calisthenics and other limbering up exercises.

Two heavy drills this week have definitely shown that the squad is in good physical shape. Guard George Rice has a weak ankle but he's expected to be able to play Saturday. Other members of the squad who have been bothered by injuries are apparently recuperated and ready to go.

Halfback Jack Benzie, bothered with an injured toe since the Eton game, and fullback Claude King, slowed by a knee injury in the Guilford contest, have both been running very hard in the two rough sessions this week. Benzie might be a starter Saturday afternoon but the number one job at left halfback is expected to be the left of Illard Yarborough, a senior from High Point who took over when Benzie got hurt.

End J. D. Bradford, a freshman from Fayetteville, appears to have gotten over the knee injury which slowed him during the last few days of the regular season. Bradford is slated to start at left end in the bowl game in place of Bobby Hodges, the number one left end during the regular season and now a member of the basketball team.

Boone has been expecting a wide-open game Saturday and has been giving special attention to both the offensive and defensive phases of passes. East Carolina passers Sandy Siler and Dick Cherry have been working overtime in the practice sessions and are being counted on to carry the bulk of the Pirate offense in the bowl contest.

On the defensive side of the picture, the defensive backfield of halfbacks Topsy Hayes and Ted Barnes and safetymen Cherry and Erno Boado have been getting a lot of work in an effort to improve their own timing. The attention has been given to the defensive unit because of Clarion's reputation as a club which has a high-regarded passing attack.

The team will hold a light workout here in Greenville today and then leave for Salisbury early tomorrow morning. They'll work out in the Salisbury stadium tomorrow afternoon.

A large group of East Carolina students and fans, headed by the college cheerleaders, are expected to follow the team to Salisbury.

E. Carolina Cage Team Shows Well

Lenoir Rhyne's defending conference champions will move into town Saturday night to take on East Carolina's highly-regarded Pirates in a pre-Christmas North State Conference game. The contest will be played in East Carolina's new gymnasium.

Yesterday's workout was cut short because of an appointment with the team photographer but before the photographer got to work the Pirates sneaked in a 20-minute scrimmage session. No individual scoring totals were kept.

Changes in the line-up which were made after the Guilford game were still being used yesterday. Charlie Huffman, center on last week's team, was still working out at guard. J. C. Thomas, a guard last week, has been moved to forward to take the place of Jack Carr who has been moved down to the second team. Huffman's place at center has been taken by Bobby Hodges, the team's scoring leader in 1931-32 who was forced to miss last week's opening game.

Huffman, Thomas and Hodges are expected to team with All-Conference ace Sonny Russell and sophomore Cecil Heath to form the starting unit against Lenoir Rhyne. Russell led the scoring in last Saturday's win over Guilford while Heath stood out as the team's playmaker and quarterback.

Tickets for the game are still available in the college athletic office. Game time Saturday will be eight o'clock.

RUSHING HALFBACKS
TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP)—Left halfback Roy Thompson and Fullback Stan Dobosz are the rushing workhorses of the Florida State University grid team. In the Seminoles' first four games, this pair carried the ball on 84 occasions between them. That's exactly half the entire team-rushing total.

tomorrow morning. They'll work out in the Salisbury stadium tomorrow afternoon.

A large group of East Carolina students and fans, headed by the college cheerleaders, are expected to follow the team to Salisbury.

Winterville And Bethel Top Cage Slate In County

The top game in tomorrow's round of Pitt County Conference games will be played at Winterville where Bethel's high-flying Indians will tangle with the strong Winterville team. Number two game in the circuit will be at Farmville with Ayden and Farmville tangling.

Both Bethel and Winterville have made serious early-season bids for the conference championship. The Indians took the title last year and are riding in the driver's seat this season so far as early predictions are concerned.

In other games scheduled for tomorrow, Grifton will be at Chocod and Belvoir will be at Stokes. All games will be doubleheaders.

and brought the huge crowd to its feet when he nailed the great champion with a punch that caused him to retreat a couple of steps.

About the fight Tipton says, "He was in charge all the way but I managed to land a couple of good punches. Louis wasn't too hard to hit but it was his counterpunches after you once made a lead that killed you."

In a later exhibition match the North Carolina fighter met Billy Conn in a bout at Florence, Italy. After leaving the army Tipton turned down promising Madison Square Garden bouts to enter the business world.

Meets Joe Louis
Tipton fought his most important fight on Salerno Day in September 1944. He met Joe Louis at Rosarno, Italy before 127,000 soldiers in a six round exhibition that was heralded by the Stars and Stripes as a rugged, two fisted battle. Louis, who was then in his peak, floored Tipton three times during the six rounds but the game battler fought back

Southern Conference Meet May Produce Two Leagues

Maryland's Fate To Be Decided At Two-Day Meet

By TOM PRICE
United Press Sports Writer
CLEMSON, S. C. (UP)—Southern Conference officials checked here today for two days of winter meetings beginning officially at 10 a. m. tomorrow with a full agenda plus undercurrents of a possible breakup of the oversized circuit.

But the man generally believed to be the chief proponent of a plan to split the conference into two leagues denies that he or his institution will take the initiative, step, but he indicates he would at least support formation of a more compact conference.

H. C. (Curly) Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, told the United Press Maryland has no feelings one way or another about the conference which will undoubtedly be discussed at the meeting and he would be foolish to take any stand in advance.

A move was suggested more than a year ago whereby about eight of the larger schools in the sprawling, 17-member circuit would withdraw and form a compact group with the University of Virginia, currently an independent, invited to join.

The schools most often identified with the proposal included Maryland, West Virginia, Duke, North Carolina, North Carolina State, Wake Forest, South Carolina State, Wake Forest, South Carolina and Clemson. William and Mary and Virginia Tech have also been mentioned as possible members.

The proposal was lost in the shuffle last year when Maryland and Clemson flouted a conference ban on bowl game participation and went to the Sugar and Gator bowls respectively. As punishment, the conference slapped a year's suspension from league football on the two offenders.

The year is now up and the two institutions return to good standing at the meeting tomorrow, oddly enough, with one of the offenders serving as host schools. The sessions will be held in the Clemson House, luxury hotel operated by the college.

Most of the college presidents, athletic directors, and others attending will have arrived early, and any progress that may be made toward the proposed realignment of the circuit will probably be accomplished in smoke-filled rooms tonight.

When the official agenda gets underway problems such as the 40-man rule for conference games, a proposed grant-in-aid system similar to that prescribed by the Southeastern Conference, and similar problems will be discussed.

Bowl Broadcast

It was previously thought that the Lions Bowl contest between East Carolina and Clarion State Teachers College of Pa. would not be broadcast but John Clark of radio station WGYC announced today that arrangements have been made to broadcast the game.

Clark said that due to the increasing interest of local people in the game the station has made a special effort to broadcast the game in this area. It will not be broadcast elsewhere.

Illinois Lives Up To Rating As Top Cage Team

NEW YORK (UP)—The first features are in, and it looks like it's true what they said about Illinois.

The Illini, with a six-foot, nine-inch center named John (Red) Kerr who is expected to be one of the nation's best players, were hailed as the country's No. 1 team before they appeared in a single game. They finally made their debut Wednesday night and made good on their "rave notices" by thrashing Loyola of Chicago, 71-57.

Loyola, a green but capable crew that had won three straight games, found itself trailing from the opening moments and simply overpowered in scoring and rebounding.

The gigantic Kerr finished the night with 34 points on 14 field goals and six free throws, while Irv Bemoras led his assistants with 17 points. Bob Collins was tops for Loyola with 18.

Ernie Beck of Pennsylvania scored 33 points to lead his mates to an 85-73 victory over Muhlenberg.

La Salle, the nation's No. 2 ranked team, gained its third win of the year, walloping Albright, 101-53. The Oklahoma Aggies racked up their fourth straight win, 68-57, over Creighton.

Tar Heels Have Unbeaten Record

By The Associated Press
North Carolina's Tar Heels possessed a pretty fair early-season grip today on first place in the Southern Conference basketball standings.

The Tar Heels won their fourth league game last night when they whipped Clemson's Tigers without much difficulty, 82-56. Guard Vince Grimaldi dropped in 26 points to lead all scorers. Jerry Vayda, North Carolina's freshman star, sank 17 points.

Clemson's top point-producer was John McGraw, 6-foot, 6-inch center, who made 14. The game was Clemson's first in conference play. The only other circuit club to see action was Virginia Tech. Tech lost its fourth tilt in as many tries, bowing to Eastern Kentucky, 83-42. Tom Matthews, with 12 points, was the only Tech player able to hit a notable figure in the scoring column.

Chuck Davey Scores Early Knockout Win

CLEVELAND, O. (UP)—Chuck Davey, a skinny southpaw professor from Michigan State, boned up on a February title date with welterweight king Kid Gavilan today after polishing off Filtzie Pruden Wednesday night in less time than it took him to finish his final college exam.

Davey, holder of a masters degree, said he hoped to meet Gavilan for the welterweight crown at Chicago Stadium in a bout tentatively set for Feb. 11.

The undefeated left hander from Lansing, Mich., who punished Pruden for two rounds and then stopped him in the third, said he wished it had been Gavilan in the ring with him instead of Pruden. "This was one time I felt ready for Gavilan," he said after the bout which had been scheduled for 10 rounds. "Too bad that wasn't him in the ring."

Davey weighed 150 pounds, Pruden, of Paterson, N. J. 148. The crowd of 11,921 at the 27th annual Cleveland News charity fight show booed at the sudden ending of the feature bout.

Frankie Albert Joins Pro Stars In Retiring Act

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—Frankie Albert of the San Francisco Forty-Niners will say goodbye to professional football when the final gun sounds in Kezar Stadium next Sunday afternoon. Albert announced Wednesday he will step out of the game after the Green Bay Packer clash which winds up the season for the San Francisco team.

In announcing his retirement, Albert follows the lead of two other passing quarterbacks—Bob Waterfield of the Los Angeles Rams and Sammy Baugh of the Washington Redskins.

Two other members of the original Forty-Niner football team of 1946, Johnny Strzykalski and Norman Standlee, previously announced they were quitting at the end of the present season.

Quarterbacks Top Ground Gainers

NEW YORK (UP)—The T-never before has there been anything like this year's sweep of the top 10 places by the under-center boys. In fact, the only single-wing tailbacks among the top 20 were Harvard's Dick Clasy in 11th and Minnesota's Paul Giel in 20th. Up until 1948, there never had been more than two men among the top 10 who were almost exclusively passers; since then, never more than five, until now.

Another indication of how thoroughly throwing has replaced versatility in this department is this: the 10 leaders in total offense had an aggregate gain of only 358 yards rushing, less than one-tenth of the top 10, three of whom won the previous low for the 10 leaders—3,608 in 1949. Last year's total was 4,715. Marchibroda made 176 up with minutes. Since they gain 16,247 altogether, passing accounts for 97.8 per cent of it.

Chapter 20
As Clay climbed the steps to the gallery at the front of the house, Mort came hurrying out through the doorway, his eyes darting right and left and then narrowing in satisfaction as he saw Clay.

"Lookin' for you," he said tersely. "Morgan's comin' out in about ten minutes an' he wants to see you when he gets here."

It was drawing on toward sunset and the breeze coming in off the Gulf had begun to lose its warmth and carry a suggestion of a chill. Clay pulled a leather-bottomed chair forward into a patch of sunlight and dropped into it, facing the bay and the open lawn that Morgan's men had tramped a path through to a barren camp-ground.

A brisk fire was blazing on the ground about twenty-five feet in front of the gallery, and as Clay watched, he saw one of the men who was tending it prod at the coals and caught a brief glimpse of a foot-long bar of metal, half buried in the coals themselves and already heated to a cherry red. A steel tripod had been erected above the fire and a black iron kettle swung above it, throwing off twisting vapors of steam as it contents boiled and bubbled.

"Now, what—" Clay said, half to himself.

He heard the sounds of movement behind him and looked over his shoulder to see two men dragging a massive oak chair through the doorway and out onto the gallery. They pulled it forward until it was almost beside his own and then stepped back, puffing with their exertions, and shooting anxious glances toward the doorway as if they were uncertain as to the reception of their efforts.

The doors banged open and Morgan emerged, groggy, heavily-bodied, short-legged; a walking Gargantua of a man. He came forward slowly, hardly looking up until he had reached the chair and settled himself in it.

The heavy head swung around and Clay could feel the force of Morgan's eyes strike him like a physical blow.

"I see that you received my message, Mr. Logan. I am pleased that you found it convenient to accede to my request." The deep voice rumbled like far-off thunder and the pin-pointed eyes betrayed no hint of Morgan's inner feeling.

Clay nodded "I was already here," he admitted. "There was no reason I shouldn't stay." He gestured carelessly toward the burning fire and swinging kettle.

"I take it you've got something a little unusual under way."

Morgan inclined his head in the faintest suggestion of agreement. "Unusual" perhaps for you, Mr. Logan, and ye not entirely new to us here at Oak Island. We are preparin' to try the guard who allowed you to break into my study this morning."

"Try him? With a kettle of hot water and a red-hot iron king-pin?"

Morgan's lips tightened in a grimace that might have been a shadow of amusement. "That is correct, Mr. Logan. It is known as trial by ordeal, and was quite common in ancient Britain during the reign of the early Saxon kings. But perhaps you are not a student of medieval history, Mr. Logan?"

Clay shook his head slowly. "I'm not—at least, not to that extent." His eyes sharpened and stabbed Morgan's unmoving face like searching rapiers points. "Suppose you tell me about it."

Morgan lifted his hand in a beckoning gesture and one of the guards that hovered over him moved quickly forward.

"Bring the man out," Morgan rumbled. "Bring him out here in front of me."

The guard whirled on his heel and disappeared around the corner of the house in a dead run.

In less than a minute he was back, with three other men hurrying along at his heels. The man in the middle was pulling back, his face twisted with fear and a steady stream of frantic curses dripping from his colorless lips.

"I will tell you about the— ordeal—now Mr. Logan," he promised. "Or, at least, you will listen while I tell this prisoner the facts about the justice that awaits him."

The little eyes measured the gasping wreck of a man before him, and the deep tones of the voice were like a sledge crashing against an anvil.

"Williams," there was something of implacability in the rumbling voice now, "this morning you failed in your duty. The punishment appointed for that—is death."

The prisoner rolled his head back and forth in protest, soundlessly, wordlessly, his lungs still gasping for the air that would let him speak.

"But we have a custom here, Williams, by which a man may sometimes escape this punishment. It is an old custom—a custom your remote ancestors described as trial by ordeal. If you can meet the test, you will not die. If you fail, you will be shot immediately."

There was absolute silence on the gallery, in the packed rows of men that rimmed the scene, even from the poor devil who hung, half supported, on the arm of his guards.

"There is a bar of red-hot metal in the coals of the fire," Morgan continued, "a kettle of boiling water above it. The iron will be dropped into the water, elbow deep. If you can plunge your arm into that boiling water, hold the red hot iron in your hand, and bring it here to me, your life will be spared. If you fail—or if you do not try—we will put an end to you at once!"

Williams threw his head back so that he looked straight into the heavy beastliness of Morgan's face. His voice was cracked and broken, but now, incredibly, there was a stronger timbre in it, a hint of strength born of sheer and final desperation.

Slowly, painfully, he pulled himself free of his guards so that he stood erect again, his white face streaked with blood, his mouth a twisted scar of bitter defiance.

He turned slowly so that he faced the scarlet inferno of fire, and as he watched, one of the men beside the fire brushed the coals aside, lifted the smoking metal in a long-armed pair of tongs and then dropped it, shimmering and brilliant, into the boiling water of the kettle. There was a sharp hiss as the metal disappeared in the water and a great cloud of steam rolled up and billowed, gray and alive and malignant, in the empty air.

He Spends His Pay 'Carefully'

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UP)—Police who arrested Anton Lagozny, 65, on a drunk charge and found $1,496 cash and $2,500 in negotiable bonds in his pocket asked him why he didn't keep his money in a bank.

"I do," Lagozny said, producing a bank book showing a balance of more than $17,000.

Lagozny, who was picked up sleeping in a doorway, said he earned only $80 a week but lived carefully, spending money "only for food, beer and whisky."

N. C. Republicans Debate Value Of Demos For Ike

GREENSBORO (AP)—How do some of the dyed-in-the-wool Republicans in North Carolina feel about these newfangled "Eisenhower Democrats"?

Well, A. A. McDonald of Durham, member of the Piedmont Republican club, which held a post-election meeting here last night to discuss party patronage, told his GOP mates "not to be fooled by these Citizens for Eisenhower."

Exploded McDonald: "Don't say that these Eisenhower Democrats did our party any good. They dang near ruined us, and I'm not going to back a Democrat for any office."

At that point, several speakers leaped in to go to bat for the same group of Independents, saying "Thank God for the Eisenhower Democrats."

Edwin M. Stanley of Greensboro declared, "We don't want the press to go out of here tonight and report we didn't want their Citizens for Eisenhower support, or that we repented it."

To this, McDonald replied that the "main purpose" of the now disbanded group was to save the Democratic party. He said they appealed to the voters to go all-out for Eisenhower, but to support all state and local Democratic candidates.

Finally, Herbert F. Seawell Jr. of Carthage, defeated GOP gubernatorial candidate and club president, pointed out that McDonald's comments were McDonald's and not to be construed as the opinion of the club's entire membership.

Trying to change the course of the discussion, peacekeeper Seawell commented that "this meeting is getting kind of warm."

But the group listened to his comment politely, then continued the discussion of whether to invite further support from the "Independent Democrats."

The majority of speakers seemed to like the idea.

New Body Armor Piece Approved In Battle Test

WITH 1ST MARINE DIVISION, Korea (UP)—The Marines put a tentative stamp of approval today on a new armored "diaper" which already has saved at least one life.

The "diaper" supplements the armored vest which Marines and soldiers in Korea have been wearing for several months with astounding results. The Army announced in Washington Wednesday that it soon will fit on below the vest and will protect the lower portions of the torso.

The Marine version is lighter by one pound, weighing three pounds, and any comparison with the proposed Army protector is met, as was the vest debate, with a quick "the big difference is, we've got them."

It already has worked for one Marine who stepped on a mine the other day. He lost one foot, but although the "diaper" was shredded by fragments, he suffered no other wounds.

COLUMBIA, S. C. (UP)—Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.) and Robert A. Taft (R-O) left behind much political speculation today following three days of quail hunting with Bernard Baruch, topped off by dinner last night with Gov. James F. Byrnes.

The Virginia Democrat who refused to support his party's nominee in the recent presidential election and the Ohio Republican who lost his party's nomination to president-elect Eisenhower touched off speculation concerning a possible new Senate coalition between Southern Democrats and Republicans by their appearance together in South Carolina.

But both described their trip as "a purely social visit."

Byrd and Taft arrived at Little Hobson plantation near Kingstree Sunday as guests of elder statesman Baruch.

Taft admitted "we talked finances of all kinds" with Baruch. But he declined to comment on the possibility of a tax reduction under a Republican administration.

In the first seven months of 1952, 27,000 Britons migrated to Canada.

Record Smashing Fighter In Flight

This is the Republic XP-91 interceptor which made the first supersonic, rocket-powered flight ever to be flown by a U. S. combat-type experimental fighter in tests at the Air Force Test Center, Muroc Lake, Calif. The XP-91 uses two engines. One is a 5,200-pound thrust rocket turbojet used to approach the sound barrier. The other is a 6,000-pound thrust rocket engine used to ram the plane through the barrier. Torpedo-like objects under wings are spare fuel tanks with fins. Although performance figures are restricted, a supersonic flight is one in excess of 750 miles per hour, the speed of sound at sea level. (AP Wirephoto)

Map Polio Campaign In Meeting At Eppes

An organizational meeting for mapping plans for the March of Dimes campaign in Negro schools of the county and city was held Tuesday night at the C. M. Eppes High School.

Approximately 19 persons, including teachers and principals from Negro county and city schools met with county March of Dimes officials for organization. D. H. Conley, superintendent of the county schools, and J. H. Rose, superintendent of the city schools, met with the group for the dinner meeting.

After a discussion on how the plans for the campaign could be carried out in the Negro schools, a filmstrip, "The March of Mothers on Polio," was shown. The filmstrip showed what part mothers in a community could take in the fight against infantile paralysis.

J. K. Long, chairman of the March of Dimes campaign, said the drive in the county would get underway January 2 with a portion of the drive conducted in the white and Negro schools of the city and county.

Long also announced at the meeting that supplies for conducting the drive in the schools had arrived and could be secured at the office of Rose in the old hospital building in the city. The supplies were ordered at a meeting held last month.

Long urged all teachers to get the supplies as soon as possible so they would be on hand when the campaign in the schools began.

Lengthy County Court Concluded On Wednesday

In Pitt County Recorder's Court Tuesday afternoon, the last case tried was that of Mrs. B. E. Garris, farm woman of the Grifton community.

She was charged with fraud in connection with stopping payment of a check she gave to the Pitt county sheriff in payment of a $25 fine and costs for one of her tenants.

Testimony was that of the sheriff. She admitted that when she learned the tenant was not going to comply with the court's judgment, she had payment on the check stopped. The witness also suggested that the "sheriff should go out and get the man and release her from her obligation on the check."

Solicitor Horton Rountree pointed out to the court that when Mrs. Garris gave the check in payment for the fine and costs that she had signed a contract with the sheriff. Judge Dink James found Mrs. Garris guilty of fraud and ordered her to pay the costs and check.

Cases tried Wednesday morning followed:

Jasper Mills, Negro of Vanceboro, driving carelessly and recklessly and without a driver's license, was fined $25 and costs, and his driver's license is to be suspended for one month.

Ransome Grimes, Negro, driving drunk, was found guilty and fined $100 and costs, and his license is to be revoked for a year.

Hound Confirms 'Right' Arrest

After Greenville police had arrested John Henry Holland, local Negro, on suspicion of attempted robbery late Tuesday night, a bloodhound verified the officers' hunch.

When police responded to a telephone call from Sarah Moore, Negro, 1405 Clark street, they picked up Holland at his home nearby for questioning. The woman said a man had raised a window in her bedroom and tried to enter. When she gave an alarm he fled. In the meantime, police sent to the State Prison Camp for a bloodhound. Harvey Fillingame took the bloodhound to the house. The dog picked up the scent and headed straight for Holland's house, then went back to the house and ended the hunt at Holland's feet.

Chief S. G. Gibbs, Lt. M. E. Garrett, Lt. Roy Harris and "Cap'n" S. Bowen Dorsey worked on the case.

Holland is in jail charged with attempting to break and enter the home in which a person was sleeping.

ABOARD USS HELENA (UP) — Atty. Gen.-designate Herbert Brownell plans to conduct a wholesale housecleaning of policy-making officials in the Justice Department as soon as he takes office. It was learned today.

Brownell is willing to consider keeping career men with good records, but any department official who was in any way involved in scandals or who has been closely aligned with the Democratic administration can start looking for a new job now.

The New York Republican leader, who accompanied President elect Eisenhower to Korea, has spent long hours traveling across the Pacific on this cruiser studying department structure and analyzing major cases pending in which the department is involved.

When the unidentified blips, or spots on radar screens, were picked up last summer by airport radar sets the popular belief was that only solid objects on which radar was directly focused would show up.

The CAA announcement yesterday is in accord with an Air Force report last July that a temperature inversion could deflect radar waves and cause false images on the set.

without much prospect of success. Probability of material change in absentee voting is remote, although there are those who want provisions liberalized to include municipal and special elections which finally determine issues, while still leaving out nominating primaries as being only preliminary steps toward final determination. In any event, it seems certain that the legislative committees on election laws will have some grist for their mill.
