Four MIGs Downed By Sabre Pilots

Two Jet Aces Get Sixth Enemy Planes In Sky Duels; Ground Fight Slows

SEOUL, Korea (UP)—American Sabre jets shot down four Communist MIG-15 jet fighters, probably destroyed one and damaged another today in 13 savage aerial dog-fights over northwestern Korea. Twenty-seven Sabres tangled 22 MIGs during the day in duels ranging from 45,000 feet to the 800-foot level. Jet aces Col. Royal N. Baker of McKinney, Tex., and Capt. Leonard Lilly of Manchester, N.H., shot down their sixth MIGs today. Baker received half-credit for downing a MIG with Capt. Jack E. Mass of Red Bank, N.J. Two other destruction claims were credited to Capt. Manuel J. Fernandez Jr., Miami, Fla., and Capt. Clyde A. Curtin of Portland, Ore., who damaged a MIG yesterday.

The probable destruction claim went to Col. James K. Johnson of Phoenix, Ariz. Fighter-bombs, unmolested by the MIGs, struck at rail lines and supplies west of Haeju and east of Pyongyang in North Korea. Other planes struck at Red positions along the battlefield.

Ground fighting slowed to monotonous probing attacks along the frozen 155-mile battlefield. Heaviest fighting was concentrated in the Sniper Ridge sector where South Koreans repulsed Red attacks.

The Sabres damaged two MIGs yesterday in six dogfights with nearly 200 Red jets. Eight other damage claims were made by Sabre jet pilots, but they awaited confirmation by gun camera film. It was the first time in five days the MIGs had ventured into North Korea from Manchuria. It was the greatest show of strength by the Red air force in weeks.

B-29 superfortresses pounded troops and supply areas near Pyongyang, capital of North Korea, and Sinanju to the north, in a continuation of round-the-clock bombing of Red troop and supply targets in North Korea.

Light B-26 bombers swarmed over roads in North Korea, shooting up 85 Red trucks moving southward with supplies for Communist troops in the front lines. South Koreans defending Sniper Ridge repulsed a Chinese company—about 160 men—attacking Pinpoint Hill as well as four hit-and-run assaults by two platoons on Pinpoint and Rocky Point.

Firemen Advise Extra Caution In Home Hazards

An oil stove in the home of Ben Corey 204 Summit Street, became overheated yesterday about 5 o'clock the local fire department reported this morning.

The fire call along with others recently received by the local department, brought forth a warning from the fire department for the public to be on guard against winter-time fire hazards.

The spokesman said that in the winter months, many calls are received due to overheated stoves, faulty stoves, and fuses.

An additional precaution was asked in the preparation of Christmas trees and lighting arrangements which have been put up and will be put up during the Christmas season.

Scrapes Up New Acquaintanceship

DETROIT (UP)—Paul Mursko, 59, scraped up a quick acquaintanceship with the Sieracki family Monday.

Mursko's automobile collided with one driven by Edward Sieracki, 25, bounded onto the sidewalk and pinned a pedestrian to the wall of a building. The pedestrian was Sieracki's uncle, Nicol.

Merchants To Elect New Board For '53

Ballots for the election of directors of the Greenville Merchants Association for 1953 will be mailed to members immediately after Christmas, it was announced at a board meeting last night. As has been the practice for years, a list of the membership is mailed to every member for their vote. Members are requested to vote for 15 directors and the 17 receiving the largest number of votes, together with the immediate past president, comprises the board of directors.

The present board is requesting that firms designate one person to represent them on the ballots which will be mailed out in order to prevent dividing the vote. The tallying committee will meet January 13 to tally the votes and the newly elected board will meet for a call on January 15 to elect the president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer. The

300 Bales Of Hay Lost In Pactolus Fire

Bloodmobile Goal Is Topped Monday

Marks Seventh Time In Twelve Visits Since January That Pitt Donors Met Goal; 155 Pints Of Blood Given Yesterday

By MURIEL SHOTWELL Reflector Staff Writer For the sixth time since last January, the Red Cross Bloodmobile has packed up and left Greenville with a full load. Yesterday marked the 12th visit of the bloodmobile to the county and the seventh to Greenville, including the college, the quota of 150 pints of blood was met and even surpassed. Under the sponsorship of the Greenville Lions Club and under the direction of Jimmy Harris and Bruce Sugg, Jr., 155 pints of blood were given yesterday at the temporary blood center set up in the educational building of the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

Approximately 177 prospective donors signed up to give blood but 22 were rejected because of physical reasons. A number of persons came in to give blood who had not signed up for a definite time. The first donor was George Warren of Greenville Mills who has contributed a pint of blood three times previously and is striving for membership in the "Gallon Club." Several other persons gave blood who had given before. The bloodmobile was set up for donors between the hours of 12 and six yesterday, and by 3 o'clock approximately half of the quota had been met. In addition to volunteer nurses, headed by Mrs. James Smith, volunteers from the Greenville Service League worked as receptionists and canteen workers. Traveling with the bloodmobile was one doctor and a crew of nurses and technicians. A Red Cross official said this morning that Greenville and Pitt County citizens were responding well to the call for blood which goes for armed services' needs and needs for local people. The official reminded that the blood is not given to the Red Cross, but through the Red Cross for members of the armed services and civilians to assure its presence when needed.

Flood Of Cards To William Oatis

TUCSON, Ariz. (UP)—William Oatis, American newspaperman imprisoned in Czechoslovakia will receive a flood of Christmas cards in his drab Prague jail if a campaign started here today is successful. Fred Finney, news editor of radio station KTNZ, asked his listeners to "send that leftover Christmas card" to Oatis as a token of "our continued concern for his health and safety." Finney recommended that the cards go airmail addressed William Oatis, American, Pankrac Prison, Prague, Czechoslovakia. Oatis, an Associated Press correspondent, was imprisoned on charges officially tabbed as "trumped up" by the U.S. State Department.

tallying committee is composed of B.D. Johnston, H.F. Steinbeck, D.J. Whitchard, Jr., L.S. Curtis, H.L. Ormond, and C.B. E. The board last night went on record to cooperate and assist the Chamber of Commerce in sponsoring a new member's party which will be held in January. T.I. Wagner was appointed to represent the Merchants' Association on the steering committee of the new member's party. Past President Cecil S. Webb presented President Charles White with a scrapbook of clippings of his activities for 1952 and on behalf of the association thanked him for his outstanding work and accomplishments during the past year as president. President White thanked B. D. Johnston and his committee for "the splendid work" done on the Santa Claus parade and street decorations.

Tells How 4,000 Fanatics Staged Riotous Uprising

Prison Camp Commander Describes Seeming Self-Hypnosis Of Reds

PONGAM ISLAND, Korea (UP)—The commander of this prison island told today how more than 4,000 fanatic Communists "hyped" themselves into staging a riot that ended only when U. N. guards fired to save their own lives. Lt. Col. George D. Miller of Columbus, O., said he ordered his 300 American and South Korean guards to fire to prevent the prisoners from breaking free and wiping out the U. N. detachment. The uprising which took place Sunday afternoon on this windswept island off South Korea, cost the lives of 84 prisoners and caused injuries to 118 others. Four guards were injured. Pongam holds a total of 9,000 Communist civilian internees, of whom more than 4,000 took part in the uprising. Miller said the Communists stood straight up and made no attempt to dodge bullets fired from light machineguns, shotguns, carbines and rifles at less than 30 yards. Some tried to fight hand-to-hand with the U. N. guards. "They were standing four ranks deep with their arms linked," Miller said. "They were singing and swaying back and forth. "After our first volley, the wounded were held upright and kept on singing. The ones that were down were pulled up by the arms." He said the prisoners were so "hyped" by their own singing that one wounded man still was trying to sing as he was carried to a hospital at Koje Island, 10 miles away. Miller said when his men tried to remove the dead and wounded after the battle, the prisoners "lay on the ground with locked arms." "Our men had to force them apart. It took two men to get one separated from another and dragged out," he said. "It is impossible to convey the frenzy they had worked themselves in to. I looked at them and could see their eyes were glazed, they were so wrought up." He said the prisoners made a "tremendous" noise singing prohibited Communist songs, cheering chanting slogans and shouting. Miller, an expert on prisoner problems, said the terrain was the reason the prisoners got such an edge over their captors that bullets became necessary. The slope where the prisoners have their compounds and barracks rose upward at a 30-degree angle. It was terraced to allow the construction of barracks and other installations. "It was a tactical situation in their favor," Miller said. "They were perched 15 feet higher than my troops, with their backs against the barracks wall. It would have been suicide to send my troops up after them on the narrow paths. If I had, I would have lost every man I had." "I think that the 30 per cent diehard Communists in there would have forced the others to die just to have us lose face." "They would have considered this a victory if just a few of them had managed to get out." Miller said he had been warned the uprising was coming. He said there had been a great deal of unrest" the week before. Moreover, he had intercepted two notes from prisoners dealing with plans for the riot. The first note was addressed to him as a warning and scheduled the riots for Dec. 7. The second note was seized from a prisoner and said the first plan had "failed" but that another would be put into action soon. Lt. Henry A. Farmer of Memphis, Tenn., commander of the enclosures, said he knew trouble was brewing when for two consecutive Saturdays prisoners asked him for work details for the following Sunday. "Normally they don't work on Sunday," Farmer said. "Some of them begged to be let out. I'm sure they wanted to be out when all hell broke loose."

NSLI Dividend

WASHINGTON (AP)—Another dividend will be paid next year to about five million veterans holding National Service Life Insurance policies, the Veterans Administration said today. The first payments will be made in February. The size of the individual dividends for most policyholders will be the same as this year's dividends, with the vast majority of men getting a flat $60. The dividend is the second regular one on NSLI policies—the first was paid this year—and will total 180 million dollars. Two special dividends also have been paid. The four total nearly four billion dollars. Payments to individual policyholders, the VA said, will be made from 30 to 40 days after the anniversary date of the policy. That's the date the policy first went into effect.

'No Compromise' Over Prisoners

United States Insists On Voluntary Repatriation Measures

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (UP)—The United States stood firmly today on its demand for voluntary repatriation of war prisoners as the sole condition for resuming Korean peace talks. An American statement issued here Monday night said the United Nations Command — in effect the U. S. government — was ready to resume negotiations at Panmunjom whenever the Communists accept the proposals contained in the U. N.'s compromise peace proposal which was rejected by the Peiping government earlier Monday. The Panmunjom talks, the Americans said, could be resumed whenever the Oriental Red accepted the proposals of the resolution passed by the General Assembly on Dec. 3, or when they advanced "constructive proposals of their own which could lead to an honorable armistice."

"However," the U. S. warned, "there can be no compromise with the humanitarian principles contained in the resolution of the General Assembly of Dec. 3, 1952." That resolution, a compromise formula designed by India, provided for non-forcible repatriation of prisoners and stipulated that those not willing to return would be turned over to the U. N. for resettlement elsewhere. Peiping's formal rejection was received by General Assembly President Lester B. Pearson in a cablegram from Chinese Foreign Minister Chou En-Lai. But no step for a tougher prosecution of the Korean war was planned by the U. N., at least until President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower takes office next month.

The Americans agreed Monday to the action of the General Assembly's Steering Committee in recommending that the current session be suspended "not later than Dec. 23." The Assembly was expected to reconvene probably in February, but Pearson could call it into session on 48 hours notice if developments warranted. The U. S. statement indicated it did not anticipate any peaceful developments in the near future. "The responsibility for whether there shall be peace in Korea clearly lies with the Chinese Communists and North Korean authorities and their supporters," it said.

Lay Keel Today For New Carrier

NEW YORK (UP)—The Navy will lay the keel today for "the world's most powerful aircraft carrier," the giant 60,000-ton USS Saratoga. A sister ship of the USS Forrestal now under construction, the Saratoga will be powered by a newly designed high pressure steam engine making her the world's most powerful aircraft carrier, the Navy said. Navy Secretary Dan A. Kimball will be the guest speaker at the keel laying ceremony for the $209,700,000 flush-deck vessel.

Coming Home?

As was prepared last Christmas season, and seemingly met with popular approval, the Daily Reflector news staff is again planning a story on servicemen who will be home with their families for the Yuletide. And, as last year, the news room is turning to Reflector readers for help. Pitt families having men in the armed forces who will be home for the holidays are asked to send the paper their names and address; the name, rank, branch of service and station of the returning man in uniform. This information may be forwarded to The Reflector on a post card not later than December 20.

Sub-Freezing Temperature Pierces 'Sunshine State'

MIAMI, Fla. (UP)—The frosty fingers of a Dixie cold wave reached into Florida today, sending sub-freezing temperatures as far south as suburban Miami where ice formed in puddles around palm-encircled Tropical Park. "There undoubtedly will be some crop damage," said Warren O. Johnson, head of the federal-state frost warning service. "Truck crops will be hurt pretty bad, but damage to citrus will probably be confined to slight acreage in the unprotected groves." Early morning readings for the "Sunshine State" ranged from 20 in scattered pockets of the Gainesville district to 41 in downtown Miami, a record low for the date. It was 23 at Ocala, Fla., 36 at Tampa 22 at Cross City, 25 at Tallahassee, and Ke' West, at the tip of the Florida keys, had a comparatively warm 53. Other low temperatures in Dixie included 24 at Lynchburg, 26 at

Last American Seamen On Broken Ship Are Rescued

Helicopters Joined Rescue Of Crewmen From The Shattered Hulk Of Refrigerator Ship; Skipper Is Last To Leave, After Lowering Flag For Last Time

LEGHORN, Italy (UP)—The last of 39 American seamen huddled on the broken stern of the U. S. Navy supply ship Grommet Reeper were snatched to safety today. The last man was brought off by one of four U. S. Navy helicopters from the carriers Midway and Leyte. The carriers had raced to this northwest Italian port where the Grommet Reeper, with its cargo of Christmas turkeys for American troops, smashed on the rocks and broke in two yesterday. "All hands removed. No injuries," came the word from rescue headquarters which told of the happy, dramatic ending of the two-day rescue operation by breeches buoy, boat and helicopter. In keeping with the rigid tradition of the sea, the Grommet Reeper's master, Capt. Henry P. Saukant, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was the last man brought to shore. A helicopter landed him on the green lawn of the Leghorn football stadium, and at 4:05 (10:05 a. m. EST) came the word from rescue headquarters: "The Grommet Reeper started dragging its anchor gale in Leghorn harbor and 3:30 a. m. yesterday (9:30 p. Sunday Est) it had been hurled the rocks of the "Queen of Leghorn" reef, where it broke in two. In the final moments of the rescue operation Saukant stood alone on the battered stern of his ship. A helicopter hovered over him. He hauled down the American flag, which had been snapping from the mainmast in the wind, grabbed a line dropped by the helicopter, and was raised to the craft. An Italian flag, which had flown from the ship's mast as customary because the ship was in an Italian harbor, was left flying. The helicopters arrived at a critical moment. The stern, hammered incessantly by wind and water against the jagged rocks, was weakening. It was listing, so that the breeches buoy could no longer be used, and every man would have had to jump into the icy sea—a some did—to be picked up by two Italian launches. The flying "choppers" had arrived before some men had been hauled across 100 yards of raging water and menacing rocks, in the shaky canvas seat of the breeches buoy and others had jumped into the sea to be picked up.

The Navy announced yesterday that 40 men were aboard the ship yesterday, and it was smashed on the deadly rocks. But it was announced today that the crew total was 39. The Christmas turkeys which the Grommet Reeper had brought from the United States for American troops in Europe were lost when the ship broke. As each man came ashore, he was wrapped in blankets, given a big shot of brandy, and sped to an American Army hospital in an ambulance.

The carrier helicopters were ordered to base at nearby Pisa Airport, an to land men they picked up at the Leghorn football stadium near the reef. EXORCISES OLD HOME IPSWICH, England (UP)—Canon Tucker Harvey, vicar of St. Michael's Church, conducted exorcising prayers at the centuries-old home of merchant seaman Cecil Wilson after Wilson reported he and his family had been frightened off four days by a "ghost like a sea man of Nelson's day."

Contributes Sum To Jap Strikers

TOKYO (UP)—John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, contributed $10,000 today to Japan's striking coal miners. The money was cabled to the National Federation of Coal Mine Workers Unions by Lewis headquarters in answer to a plea from the Japanese unions. Japanese coal miners have been on strike for two months. The government is expected to issue an injunction which would order the workers to return to their jobs for a 50-day cooling off period.

Eisenhower Bides His Time Setting MacArthur Talk

NEW YORK (UP)—President-elect Eisenhower bided his time today scheduling an appointment with his old boss, Gen. Douglas MacArthur. But everything pointed to an early meeting. Eisenhower scheduled a full day of appointments at his interim headquarters in the Commodore Hotel. MacArthur was not among them. The President-elect's press secretary, James C. Hagerty, said there had been no liaison between Eisenhower's staff and MacArthur's staff regarding the meeting and that the Eisenhower office had not been in touch with MacArthur's office. However, there were signs that the two might meet at the Eisenhower headquarters some time this week to discuss MacArthur's plan for solving the Korean problem. The Eisenhower press office has conferred with cameramen about how many newsreel and television tripods, plus sound equipment, can be squeezed into one room for interviewing Eisenhower and important visitors. And when asked directly whether the two men would get together this week, Hagerty replied that when there are appointments to be announced "this office will announce them."

Whether MacArthur's "clear and definite" solution of the Korean war, which Eisenhower has said he will be glad to get, will dovetail with the President-elect's Korean policy was a matter of speculation. It was recalled that MacArthur in speeches has said the Communists understand and respect forceful action. Eisenhower, when he returned Sunday night from his Korean inspection tour, spoke out for a policy of "deeds" calculated to "induce" the Communists to want peace. Eisenhower meanwhile plunged into the work of fleshing out the skeleton of his new administration. He conferred Monday with Sinclair Weeks, secretary-designate of commerce, and received from him recommendations for filling two top deputy jobs in the Commerce Department. The appointments will be announced later. He reviewed the whole subject of European unity with John J. McCloy, former U. S. high commissioner for Germany, and John Foster Dulles, secretary-designate of state. He discussed the mutual security program with Harold E. Stassen, who will be his director for mutual security.

Three Brothers Are Called For Jury Duty

"It's the first time I ever saw that happen in Pitt Superior Court!" Clerk D. T. House, Jr., made that observation in remarks on the fact that three brothers were called and sat on the same case in the Pitt court yesterday. The three jurors were Wyatt Tucker of Greenville, and H. C. Tucker and G. H. Tucker, of Winterville. And just about the time that observation was made by the clerk, another juror was called down by Solicitor W. J. Bundy. He was Joe M. Taft of Greenville, brother of the defense attorney. Somewhat earlier in the day presiding Judge J. Paul Frizzelle of Snow Hill sentenced three Negro youths, who were not brothers, to the roads for assault and robbery. After hearing a plea of guilty on the part of Irva Scott, Will Brown, Jr. and Eddie Smith, Judge Frizzelle gave each of the defendants not less than two or more than three years on the roads. A few minutes later the judge sentenced 16-year-old Robert L. Worthington, Greenville Negro, to two years on the roads for breaking and entering—but sentence was suspended provided he remain on probation for four years. Other cases disposed of yesterday were: Willie Riles, liquor violation, pled not guilty and adjudged not guilty in jury trial. Paul Meeks, driving drunk, not pros with leave; Joe Robert Lee, larceny, not pros with leave; Robert Merritt, rape, ordered that execution of a life sentence previously imposed be put into effect; Paul Davis, carnal knowledge of a female, called and failed to appear, captus in absentia. Mark Turnage and Mamie Jones, robbery, not pros with leave. The grand jury found true bills in the following cases: Moses Moore, the foreman and 11 members of the grand jury returned a true bill of indictment against J. W. Moore, embezzlement; Zoella Storton, breaking and entering and larceny; William Tucker, manslaughter; George Dixon, arson; Louise Wilkes, murder. Court is scheduled to be in session through Friday of this week.

Out-of-Town Visitor Honored At Shower

ROBERSONVILLE — Tuesday night from 8 to 10 Mrs. Fred Taylor, Mrs. Quentin Warren, Mrs. Frank Curd and Mrs. J. W. Taylor were hostesses to a floating miscellaneous shower honoring Mrs. Bill James of Memphis, Tenn.

The home of Mrs. Curd was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The guests who were greeted at the door by Mrs. Willie B. Everett were shown in the dining room by Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor. Punch, individual decorated cakes, salted nuts and mints were served from a table covered with a handsome lace cloth. The centerpiece was a small Christmas tree. After the refreshment were served Mrs. L. T. Harney took the visitors into the gift room where there was a large variety of lovely presents of linen, crystal and china.

About fifty people called to wish the August bride happiness.

Mrs. James is the former Miss Jacqueline Harney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard T. Harney of Robersonville.

Funeral Held Today For Mrs. H. C. Smith

AYDEN—Mrs. Mary C. Smith 63, wife of the late Herman C. Smith died at her home here early Monday morning. She was the daughter of the late Joe C. and Harriet Gaskins of Pitt County, and had been in declining health for several months.

Funeral services were conducted from the home Tuesday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock by the Rev. Jack Proffman, Methodist minister, assisted by the Reverend Charles Craddock, Free Will Baptist minister. Burial will follow in the Ayden Cemetery.

She is survived by a son, Wilbur Smith of the home, a foster-daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Howie, of Greenville; a sister, Mrs. C. J. Stear, of Ayden.

Mrs. C. W. Johnson Given Surprise Supper

ROBERSONVILLE — A pleasant surprise birthday supper was given Mrs. Clinton White Johnson at her home Friday night, December 5.

Neighbors helped Mr. Johnson fix everything before Mrs. Johnson returned from an out-of-town shopping trip. These friends decorated the house with fall flowers and the table was arranged attractively centered by a two-tiered pink and white frosted cake. The barbecue, stew, Brunswick stew, potatoes and cold drinks were served buffet style.

Mrs. Johnson received many nice presents.

The guests were, Mr. and Mrs. Leighton Croom, Mr. and Mrs. Hassell Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Powell, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Roberson Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Gorman Parrish, Mr. and Mrs. N. I. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Forbes, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. M. Langley, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Taylor Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Johnson, Mr. J. H. Ross, Mr. Jarvis Perkins.

Miss Betty Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Purvis, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Vanderford, all of Robersonville.

Bar Association Elects Officers For Coming Year

The Pitt County Bar Association met last week and elected officers to head the organization for the coming year.

Meeting in Greenville last Tuesday night, members of the association elected C. W. Everett of Bethel president, Everett replaces T. K. Fountain of Fountain.

Also elected were Louis W. Gaylord, Jr. of Greenville, vice-president; and James C. Lanier, Jr. also of Greenville, secretary-treasurer.

The meeting was called specifically for the purpose of electing officers, and no other business was taken up, retiring secretary Kenneth Hite said this morning.

College Music Students Give Recital Of Christmas Selections On Pipe Organ

Organ selection reflecting the reverence and the joy of the Christmas season made up a program given Sunday afternoon, December 14, by students of music at east Carolina College. The Tellers pipe organ in the Austin auditorium was used for the event.

The recital, first program to be presented by a group of students of the organ at the college, was sponsored by the department of music as one of a series of music events preceding the Christmas holidays. An audience of approximately 300 people from the campus, Greenville, and elsewhere in eastern North Carolina was present. Selections chosen for the afternoon included numbers from Bach's Christmas Oratorio, and works by Daquin, Pietro Yon, Guilman, and other composers.

Those who appeared as organists on the program, all students of George E. Perry of the college faculty, were Ellen Frinkie, Asheville; Janet Watson, Greenville; Carolyn Bruns, South Mills; Little M. F. ...; David Victor Van Hook, Nashville; Carolyn Clapp, Greenville; and Cecelia Willoughby, Craswell. Percy Wilkins of Benson read the Christmas story as told in passages from St. Matthew and St. Luke.

V.F.W. Post And Auxiliary To Sponsor Party For Children

Plans were laid for an annual Christmas party for underprivileged children at the VFW clubhouse Friday night, December 19, by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Greenville VFW last Thursday night.

The ladies of the Auxiliary, holding their regular monthly meeting, appointed committees to carry out the plans and announced today that the program calls for the appearance of Santa Claus, a Christmas tree, Christmas movies and refreshments for the children. Gifts and candy, fruit and nuts will be presented to youngsters.

Cha-lea Gray Morgan Post No. 7031 members will assist the auxiliary in the party. All members of the Post and the Auxiliary were urged to attend a tree-trimming party at the Post home Thursday night, December 18, to complete plans.

The regular business session, presided over by the president, Mrs. C. B. West, Jr., saw three new members accepted for admission to the auxiliary. They are Mrs. Thelma Braswell, Mrs. Margaret Rausch and Mrs. Joe Joyner.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Bob Fleming, and approved by the group. Reports were given by the standing committees. The hospital committee reported that gifts have been sent to the Veterans Hospital in Fayetteville, along with magazines. Flowers have been sent to sick members of the Auxiliary, the report said. The Rehabilitation committee reported that a needy veteran's family had received help.

Mrs. Mildred Hardy, acting chaplain, delivered the opening prayer. After the business session, the meeting was turned over to the hostesses, Mrs. Julius Whitchard, Mrs. Sally Broughton, Mrs. Bob Fleming, Mrs. Myrtle Meeks, Mrs. Royce Pierce and Mrs. Lee Meritt.

They served salad, cookies, candy nuts and coffee.

Rotarians Observe Ladies' Night

Robersonville—Ladies night was observed Friday at 7 o'clock when the Rotarians entertained their wives and the teachers of the Robersonville schools.

Mr. Lee Braxton, a well known speaker, had as his topic "The Fear of Prosperity." Mr. Braxton, the son of a blacksmith, was reared in Whiteville, North Carolina. As a child, he had none of the luxuries and he soon felt that the good things of life are for all of us.

Mr. Sherwood Roberson is given credit for bringing this forceful speaker to the Rotary Club.

The members and the guests enjoyed the delicious turkey dinner served by Mrs. Annie Grimes in the lunch room of the Elementary School. Scorpion venom has no effect on other scorpions of the same species.

Lions Club Entertained By Kindergarten Class

Students of Mrs. C. D. Smith's kindergarten class presented a musical program for the members of the Greenville Lions Club last night.

A report was heard from Jimmie Harris, stating that the local Lions Club, sponsored Bloodmobile visit to Greenville yesterday was a success with five pints over the quota of blood being given.

Harris thanked all members of the Lions Club and the citizens of Greenville for the response which the bloodmobile received yesterday.

It was announced at the meeting that the local club, in conjunction with the Pitt County Association for the Blind, will distribute 24 baskets to needy blind persons over the county at Christmas time.

Preparations for the distribution of the baskets are now under way, it was reported.

Ben Rouse submitted a report on the Blind work carried on by the Lions Club and the Pitt County Association last month.

In an overtime session the club voted to dispense with the Monday night meeting, December 22 and meet again on December 29.

President Bruce Sugg, presided over the meeting.

Children taking part in the program from the kindergarten were: Charles Rogers, Pat Percy, Barbara Keck, Carolyn Armistead, Larry Taylor, Bobby Robertson, Roger Riddick, Clara Mathis, L. B. Combs, Sue Rogers, Hal Parkinson, Barr Coleman, Didi Young, Linda Anne Rogers, Wayne Little, Bobby Roberts, Helen Rae Elks, Laurie Hardy, Beverly Carawan, Greg Hardy, Angela Allen, and Myra Kerr.

Students of the music department of East Carolina College who took part in the program were Irving Ennis, Paty Pappindick, Betty Sue Whitfield, Jean Fritchard, and Davis Jolder.

Chicod Ruritan Installs Officers

CHICOD—The Chicod Ruritan Club installed new officers at a banquet at the school cafeteria last week.

Eugene James is the new president; Otis Stokes, vice-president; Keith Brunson, secretary; Uran Cox, treasurer; Fodie Hodges, reporter and Ernest Hardee, sergeant-at-arms. L.D. Stanley, S.T. Porter, Jr. and Alton Gardner are directors.

The Chicod High School football players were guests of the club. L.D. Stanley, retiring president, welcomed the players and Charles McGowan responded.

Coach Ott Alford spoke briefly on "Benefits Derived From Playing Football." Kenneth Rose was presented the most valuable player award. All players were given gold footballs. J.T. Mills was spokesman in presenting gift from the team to Coach Alford.

Sybil Jones and Lois James had charge of the entertainment program. The Future Homemakers of America served dinner under supervision of Mrs. Eunice Casey. The banquet table was decorated with the football team's colors.

Eugene James and Jimmy Edwards, who attended the recent Ruritan district meeting, made their report. The Chicod Ruritan Club will send delegates to the Ruritan National Convention in Richmond, Va., in January, it was announced.

Robert Shaw Chorale And Ensemble Is Cheered By Large Local Audience

Robert Shaw, his Chorale and String Ensemble, appearing last night in the Wright building at East Carolina College, closed their program while the audience clapped and cheered for further encores. Approximately 2,000 people from the campus, Greenville, and other towns in eastern North Carolina were present.

The Robert Shaw Chorale and String Ensemble was presented at East Carolina as the fifth number on the Entertainment Series offered for 1952-53.

The program for the evening included a wide variety of selections. Beginning with two motets by Heinrich Schütz, father of German music, it included Schubert's "Mass in G Major," "Sacred Service" by the modern composer Ernest Bloch and groups of Spanish carols and songs by Brahms and Debussy. It closed with a setting for chorus from Johann Strauss, "Die Fledermaus" and a group of rhythmic encores which "brought the house down."

Comments from those present indicated the audience considered the performance outstanding for its musical values and entirely satisfactory as entertainment.

The next number on the college entertainment series will present Eugene Conley, young American tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and is scheduled for January.

James Butler Dinner Speaker In Winterville

Mr. James Butler, Alumni Secretary of East Carolina College, was speaker for the dinner meeting of the Literary Club which was held Wednesday night at the Community Center in Winterville. He was introduced by Mrs. McCoy Tripp, a former classmate at East Carolina.

The speaker gave a lively and interesting talk centered around the subject of books, including the pocketbook. He kept his listeners in laughter most of the time over his jokes and anecdotes.

At the end of the speech Mr. Butler told the Christmas Story from the greatest of all books and urged that its spirit be put into practice.

Guests were husbands and friends of club members. Howard Ellis played the piano during the dinner hour. Marjorie Boyd gave two tap dance numbers which featured popular Christmas tunes. Mrs. R. E. Boyd was accompanist.

The Community Center was decorated with the Christmas motif. A delicious turkey dinner was served by the women of the Christian Church. Mrs. M. A. Woodard is president of the Literary Club and Mrs. Alex Evans program chairman.

Represent ECC In Chicago Meet

East Carolina College will be represented by five student members of the Beta Kappa Chapter of Pi Omega Pi, national honorary business education fraternity, at the national delegate convention of the organization in Chicago December 26-29. Sessions will be held at the Congress Hotel and will be attended by students from chapters throughout the country.

As part of the business of the convention, choice of a student representative on the national council of Pi Omega Pi will be made this year for the first time. Five students selected from chapters in college and universities of the nation will be nominated for the position by the nominating committee of Pi Omega Pi. G. Carolyn Burnette of Hopewell, Va., member of the East Carolina Beta Kappa Chapter, is included among the five students to be nominated.

East Carolina delegates to the Chicago convention will be Ann Bardsen, Ernul; Maggie A. Gathin, Ernul; Betty Sue Branch, Greenville; Paul Weeks, Whitakers; and Kenneth Kennedy, Greenville.

In addition to business meetings, events of the convention will include social affairs, sight-seeing tours of Chicago, and visits to business firms of the city.

Small Bootleg Still Destroyed; No One Arrested

BELVOIR. . . Anonymous local entrepreneurs in illicit whiskey manufacture were dealt another telling blow by the Pitt ABC force over the weekend, as a "drum" still was cut down.

J.M. Ward, member of the local force, reported this morning a 50-gallon, "drum type" outfit was destroyed in Belvoir Township but no whiskey was found at the site.

According to the raiding officer, there were also two 50-gallon-barrel fermenter. One was empty and one was full of mash that had not quite worked off.

"No sugar or anything else of importance was found at the still," Ward said, "and the operators had even carted away the copper worm — possibly for future use."

Those participating in the raid were Ward, Dick King and "Chief" J.L. Taylor.

Arrest 2 Youths With Fireworks

FACTOLUS. . . Officers of the Pitt Sheriff's Department swooped down on two firecracker-firing Negro youths here over the weekend and took both into custody.

Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson reported this morning the two boys, Sammie Crandall and Linwood Earl Price, both 16, were caught at the Factolus Inn Saturday night exploding firecrackers on the premises.

"We have had a lot of reports on such activity all over the county," Tyson stated today, "and with Christmas coming on it may get worse. It is against the law and those in violation will be arrested."

The two boys were charged with exploding firecrackers and having fireworks in their possession. They are to be tried in County Court Tuesday, December 30.

Deputy Sheriff Lloyd Manning made the arrests.

Two Fires Near Robersonville

Robersonville—The Robersonville fire department responded to calls for assistance at two fires on farms near the city last week.

The first alarm came last Monday night from George James' farm when a storage house, formerly used as a service station, caught fire. The building was nearly destroyed when the firement arrived.

The second alarm came in last Friday night when a barn on Mrs. Clifton Keel's farm caught fire. Prompt arrival of the firemen prevented the fire from doing much damage, a fireman stated.

A SUGGESTED READING COURSE
Once in a while I have taken it upon myself to suggest a reading course and method of pursuing it which I think, if consistently adhered to, will have an elevating effect on life and moral character.
In your reading, begin by reading one book in some field in which you are interested. Follow that with a classic. Do not be afraid to go back and read the Iliad, Beowulf, Shakespeare's plays, the 18th century poets and novelists. Especially read the great Russian novelists, Tolstoy and Dostoevski. There is something about the classics which puts power into the soul and gives the mind a new cleanness.

Then follow the classic with a modern book. You may well skip the smut artists, although it's hard to find a novel today that doesn't have in it some material which offends refined taste. But don't forget that the non-fiction today sells almost as well as does fiction. Much of the non-fiction today is as good as anything the classical past has produced.
You can certainly read twelve good books a year—perhaps twice that many. You may be able to read one a week. It's not how many you read that counts, but what you read and how you read it.

Read in the field of your greatest interest. Then read a classic. Then read the best that contemporary minds are producing. You will no doubt find them a balanced intellectual, emotional, and moral diet.

Language Communism Can Understand

Some citizens of the United States may be a little disappointed in President-elect Eisenhower's statement upon his return from Korea.

Mr. Eisenhower in his initial statement on the Far Eastern situation did not lay down a blue print for ending the war in Korea, nor did he stipulate steps to prevent other "Koreas" at international hot spots around the globe.

Nevertheless, The Reflector likes the concise statement made by the incoming president. We are in accord with the idea of a foreign policy of deeds instead of words in dealing with communism.

Deeds, as a fundamental philosophy of foreign policy should give the United States a much more positive policy in international affairs than it has had in the past five decades. That is not to infer that deeds have not been basic in the foreign policy of President Truman, but the policy has been a defensive policy against communism rather than a positive foreign policy.

Some people may be disappointed that Eisenhower will not end the Korean War in a matter of weeks. It must be remembered, however, that the United States did not get into its present predicament overnight, and no man can be expected to pull us out of it overnight. It is going to be a long tedious process.

In past negotiations the United States has seen that words mean little to the leaders of the communist movement. They themselves rely on deeds rather than words to carry their points wherever possible, and where we have countered with deeds rather than words—such as in Korea—we have stopped the movement of communism. Berlin may be taken as another example in which matching deed for deed rather than word for deed has stopped the expansion of communism.

The United States has seen, as Eisenhower said, it can not make the communists want peace by using words. His idea now, apparently is to rely more heavily upon deeds in bringing the communists into a position in which they will be inclined to listen to reasonable words.

A new policy is going to take patience and it is going to take foresight, and understanding; but perhaps it will bring the peace which the United States and her allies have sought for the world.

It Seems Nobody Knows NATO Outlook

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization's defense program has been described as a reasonable success, and as a feeble show of strength. The layman apparently is to remain just as unsure, just as confused as ever in this realm of security.

While the foreign ministers of member nations are being told of how far they must yet go to even approach establishing a modern defense force for western Europe; hopeful notes are sounded over the available 25 divisions now standing on arms and the 25 additional divisions on a reserve basis.

All this is a skeleton force, to all practical purposes; but one which is expected to "pack a punch" out of all proportion to its actual size. The planned weapons-of-the-future are said to be the factor which will make this defense force more powerful than any comparable army of the past.

But, the layman is again reminded that while pilot models of these new arms have been made, they still do not exist in sufficient numbers to make the big difference in combat. And, only yesterday the NATO conference was told that Russia is mass-producing "modern" arms for their armies.

Again, just how do the combined Western forces of NATO actually stand? We are told that time is "on our side"; but this can be true only if the allied nations work to take advantage of the time at hand. One thing is sure, the Communists have been and will continue to stress all aspects of a military build-up to maintain and increase their relative strength as compared with the West. They won't let anything stand in the way of their determined efforts in this direction.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—Western friends of Governor Earl Warren will place his name before President-elect Eisenhower as their choice for the next vacancy on the Supreme Court in the belief that this booming section of the country deserves greater representation and recognition on the high tribunal. It is expected that there will be an opening on this bench before he finishes his term at Sacramento.

Warren deserves well at the hands of the next Chief Executive. Although the Californian has won a reputation as a political "lone wolf," rarely giving active support to local or national candidates on the GOP ticket, he extended himself in the recent campaign. Moreover, he was not too happy over Ike's selection of Senator Nixon for second place, about which he was not consulted.

TWO HISTORIC CASES—Although Justice Frankfurter is now eligible to quit with full retirement privileges, it is doubtful if there will be a court shakeup during the present session. The nine members are sitting in at the preliminary hearings of two historic cases, and their participation amounts to a moral commitment to complete these assignments.

These contests involve the constitutionality of segregation in elementary schools, and the dispute over whether the United Nations Charter and decisions take precedence over state laws. Ironically, the latter controversy has been precipitated by California's enactment of legislation barring Japanese from owning property in that state.

Frankfurter, as a former professor of law at Harvard, is keenly interested in these problems, for it is recognized that they are two of the most momentous and vexing ones to reach the court in recent years. But his friends will not be surprised if he steps down at their conclusion.

IKK'S WESTERN OUTLOOK—Although lawyers and jurists deprecate the selection of Supreme Court members on the basis of political geography, western interests insist that they should enjoy greater voice and influence on this body. And they believe that their best chance to achieve their end is under the Texas-born and Kansas-raised Eisenhower. He is supposed to possess a "western outlook."

For instance, he chose a Californian as his running-mate. He named Governor Douglas McKay of Oregon as Secretary of the Interior. He picked Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby of Texas for Federal Security Administrator, a post that may be elevated to Cabinet rank.

In several Cabinet selections, notably Wilson, Durkin and Humphrey, he has shifted the center of governmental gravity from Roosevelt's New York and Truman's Kansas City. Ike has kept his campaign pledge to frame a "national" Cabinet.

GREATER CONSIDERATION FOR WEST—In presenting their judicial claims, western spokesmen point out that their area's development, during and since World War II, entitle them to greater consideration than ever before, especially in bench selections. They submit evidence that the West has not always had a sympathetic hearing with respect to such problems as tide lands, mineral matters, railroad rates, oil expansion, timber, water power, grazing lands, etc.

An analysis of Supreme Court personnel since 1870, when expansion beyond the Mississippi and the Rockies exceeded earlier expectations, supports this contention. The present court, for instance, has three men from the Northeast, four from the South and two from the Middle-West.

It is true that Justice Douglas originally hailed from Minnesota and has spent considerable time in Washington, while Justice Clark comes from Texas. But Douglas was named from Connecticut, and his adult and legal roots stem from New York and Washington soil. Moreover, the interests of Clark's Texas do not always accord with those of the Pacific and transmountain territory.

DISCRIMINATION PERSISTENT—The westerners' pro-Warren brief reveals that his discrimination in top judicial appointments has been an ancient and persistent thing at Washington. It did not begin with F.D.R. and Truman because of their strange partiality toward professors, former Capitol Hill cronies and "lame ducks," to mention a few of the categories who now wear black robes every Monday during sessions.

Since 1870, 24 of the 51 appointees to the Supreme Court were named from six states, as follows: New York (7), Massachusetts (5), Connecticut (2), New Jersey (2), Pennsylvania (3), Ohio (5). Regionally, there have been 19 from the Northeast, 13 from the South, 9 from the Middle West and 10 from the West.

In this analysis, the West is regarded as territory beyond the Mississippi. From what is known as the Far West, there have been only three members. They were Field of California, named by Lincoln; McKinley's appointment of McKenna of California, and Harding's selection of Sutherland of Utah. Thus there have been periods when the West was not represented on the court for many long years, and then by only one individual.

No Chief Justice has had a western background. The seven who served since 1870 were from New York (2), Ohio (2), Illinois (1), Louisiana (1) and Vinson of Kentucky.

Eisenhower may find it difficult to avoid judicial appointment of the clamorous West on this question.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J., TIMES: "A sure sign that inflation is over will be when auto makers start mentioning the price of their cars in their advertising."

PARIS, TEXAS, LAMAR COUNTY ECHO: "The people want better medical service, but they are convinced that the way to get it is through steady orderly progress under free enterprise and voluntary insurance plans—not through turning the problem over to power-hungry bureaucrats, along with more billions of our tax money to pay the bill."

MOUNT AIRY, MARYLAND COMMUNITY REPORTER: "Here in the United States, our bullets are balloons and the only heads that roll are those which figuratively topple as the people demand a change peacefully—and get it. It is a good system. Here's hoping we can continue to keep it. Revolutions like these are good ones. They keep a country strong, healthy and sound."

To Disrupt Commy Morale

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Blood Bank quota: 150 pints. Blood donated yesterday: 155 pints.

It was a close call, but Greenville made the quota again! And if Greenville would happen to go under that quota a few times we would lose our blood bank. The fact that we made it was largely due to the efforts of the Greenville Lions Club. And the Service League deserves a lot of credit for working on the project.

Next time, we'll have to make it again. The Blood Bank is a priceless asset to Greenville and it must be kept up. Yesterday Somebody Told Me: "You gave to the Blood Bank today; what was it like? I might have given but I didn't know enough about it."

"Well," I said, "it's a simple procedure. First, you are invited to sit down and give a few facts about yourself—such as your name, address, telephone number and age. Then a nurse sticks a thermometer in your mouth and takes your pulse at the same time. The next step is to check your weight. A nurse will check your blood pressure and take your hemoglobin. In addition to asking you about fifty questions about various diseases you might have had."

Your next step is to secure a bottle and lie down on a comfortable table. If you have never given blood before you get the idea that you might be on your death bed. After it's all over you laugh at such a foolish idea.

The nurse has the ability to relax you. She tells you exactly what she's doing and assures you of the harmlessness of it. In order to eliminate any pain, your arm is injected with a small bit of novocaine. Then the needle is injected and the process is underway. Unless you have a terrific imagination, you don't even realize you are donating blood. After it's all over, you may indulge in a generous helping of refreshments furnished by the Service League. Believe me, any fear you might have of donating should be eliminated by this statement: If I can give, anybody can. If you are unqualified to give and do not realize it, the process will reveal that valuable information to you and consequently you can take corrective measures. Yesterday, 177 reported but only 155 gave.

If you want to take a selfish point of view, look at it this way: If something serious should happen to you and you should need blood to keep alive, wouldn't you want it to be available? The pint you donate now and then might not be enough to save your life. Somebody else must give, too. And you might be that somebody else instead of the one in need. No matter which category fits you, please realize that we must keep that bank by donating blood. And I thank you.

COURTS—The ancient problem of realignment of judicial districts will be with us again. Several plans have been drawn and advance effort has been made to get support for them. Action on re-districting will affect the set-up of special judges. A new system of uniform traffic courts will be proposed. Should it fail of enactment, almost certainly there will be revision of justice of peace jurisdiction in traffic cases.

LICENSING BOARDS—The hodge-podge system of licensing boards for numerous professions, crafts and trades have been time-killers during several legislatures. They will be with us again with diverse efforts to reduce the number and to establish new ones; to enlarge the scope of practice in certain professions (such as optometry, osteopathy, chiropractic and others); or to restrict that scope. A commission authorized by the last General Assembly is expected to recommend steps to bring unity into the practice of trade regulatory boards. Every affected group will demand the right to be heard by the appropriate committee before action is taken.

MUNICIPALITIES—The League of Municipalities has agreed two bills of minor importance. There will be, however, the usual number of local bills relating to extension of corporate limits, zoning regulations, co-operative ventures with State and County governments, and similar projects. Inter-related with elections and finance may be requests for special plebiscites on alcohol and improvement bond issues. Some of these matters will require consideration by several committees under long existing rules. Overlapping and duplicating functions take a lot of time, but there seems no way to avoid it without denying to the people the right of petition guaranteed them in the constitution.

ELECTIONS—Besides the prospective numerous local election bills there will almost certainly be effort to streamline the process of registration and voting at State level. Election machinery designed to handle half a million votes is not adequate for a million and a quarter. Use of voting machines, revision of absentee voting statutes, and clarification of authority vested in the State Board of Elections are other matters likely to claim attention.

TAXATION—No basic changes are contemplated in the tax laws, but there may be a usual number of bills providing for adjustments in some brackets. If a state referendum is authorized on the sale of liquor or a soldier bonus, many legislators will inquire.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

ENEMY WITHIN U. N. (Greensboro Daily News)

The Senate committee investigating subversion in the United Nations has evidence before it that security risks by our State Department are still on the job. Senator O'Connor calls this "very shocking." Secretary General Trygve Lie withholds comment but has called for proof of disloyalty. Senator Alexander Wiley has warned the U. N. that Congress will cut off its funds to the U. N. if it allows itself to remain "a base of espionage." A federal grand jury has found as a fact that the State Department's screening process for Americans in the U. N. "failed miserably."

Department was lax. Mr. Lie need not wait for proof of disloyalty to discharge persons who for good reason have been found to be bad security risks. It is not a question of being guilty of a crime but of being fit for a position of honor and trust.

Commenting on the significance of the whole matter, Joseph C. Harsch notes in the Christian Science Monitor that it is natural that each country should demand uncompromising loyalty from its nationals in the U. N. Says Harsch: "This was inevitable from the moment the cold war began. It is a tragedy for the U. N. It is primarily a piece of evidence that a power struggle exists, and that mankind is not ready yet for the kind of world organization in which men of all political beliefs can work usefully together in the cause of a peaceful world."

The question remains: Will they get ready before they and their civilization are demolished by atomic weapons in recurrent world wars? The Soviet Union, which destroyed hope of control of such weapons and which has broken such world peace as existed after the late war, is busily engaged in sabotaging the United Nations. The evidence mounts that the Soviet Union should be ejected from the organization if it is attempting to destroy from within and a fresh start made on a new organization to maintain world peace by those nations which are genuinely interested in keeping it.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

One of the hotter potatoes of the new Administration and the Interstate Commerce Commission in January for authority to increase parcel post rates. This will surely heat up demands by both business and the public that Congress and the Administration tackle the entire question.

Things are a bit messy because both Congress and the Administration share the management of the Post Office and because it has never been settled whether the Post Office is a business or a governmental service like defense of the country or assistance to the farmers. It has been further complicated by Congress' action in making the ICC a sort of referee over parcel post rates.

Beyond the question of whether the Post Office is a service or a business or a bit of both, is that of just what the public wants. So far, most policy has been compromise among pressures of the more active and most vocal of various groups and associations and their lobbyists.

It is probable that more people are dissatisfied with the present service than with current rates. Delays are costly to business and annoying to others; it is humiliating to many to realize that the post office service of rich America is inferior to that of many European nations. Many persons would be willing to pay more if they could get the most efficient service in the world.

Adjustments in rates, however, should be fair. One of the questions never definitively answered is whether any person's or business' use of the mails should be financed by other users, or by taxpayers. And of course, any upward tilt will be bitterly protested. When special delivery charges on letters was raised from 13 to 20 cents just a year ago, there were anguished howls. Yet even at 20 cents, it is a glorious bargain. In many cities, 20 cents won't pay a messenger's carfare, much less his wages, for approximately the service Uncle Sam gives for two dimes. POST OFFICE MIGHT LEARN FROM BUSINESS.

Arthur Summerfield, the incoming Postmaster General, cheerfully confesses that he knows nothing of the Post Office or its problems. This may, surprisingly, turn out to be an advantage. Mr. Summerfield has a record of successful business management, and he may apply tested business techniques with a fresh vigor.

If he can use some of the methods that have worked in business, he may be able to increase the service mightily with little or no rise in rates. A few of the things that have worked in business are:

Increased mechanization—The Post Office has, of course, gone in for mechanization but it does appear to have approached what many plants have done. Mechanization requires an initial investment but, properly planned, it can pay off the investment and return a profit.

Short and significant notes on business. A national food-dealers' association is campaigning to get grocers and the public to refer to food delicacies as "specialty foods" instead of "fancy foods."

Cognac production now running through French stills is the largest in fifty years and a third larger than in 1951. Beer from Israel will appear on the U.S. market next summer. Motorists will spend $2,000,000,000 on auto parts next year. Donald H. Teator, chairman, said at the Automotive Service Industries Show in Atlantic City.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK (AP)—How can the Chinese Reds be made to want peace?

The answer holds the key to what will happen next in the Korean War.

President-elect Dwight Eisenhower stated in a postscript clearly in an off-the-cuff summary of his trip to the sub-battled peninsula: "I just because one side wants peace doesn't make peace. We must go ahead and do things that induce the others to want peace also."

This echoes a belief General Eisenhower expressed this way in a more formal statement: "... we face an enemy whom we cannot hope to impress by words, however eloquent, but only by deeds—executed under circumstances of our own choosing."

These two significant sentences herald a real effort to change the stalemate in the Korean situation—a period which the present group yearns for peace will be replaced by some kind of action to win it.

What form will that action take? Naturally Eisenhower must remain silent of this point at this time. But there are two ways to get a do key to move forward: (a) do some hay out in front of him, or (b) kick and beat him until he decides it is wiser to obey your will.

And there would seem to be only two general methods of action to make the Chinese Reds want peace:

1. Through diplomatic channels offer some kind of reward that would make them wish to reach a cease-fire in Korea, and move out of the orbit of Red Russia toward the orbit of Western powers. Assuming this could be done, such a program would possibly entail the jettisoning of Chiang Kai-shek, who is powerfully supported in the American Congress.

2. Increase military pressure on Red China to such an extent that crippling losses would lead her to sue for a real peace, even against the wishes of Red Russia, who now supplies her with most of her heavy armaments.

The danger here, of course, is that such a program would fan the long-smoldering misery of Korea into a flaming third World War.

American professional military opinion is sharply divided on this question. Some career soldiers say we cannot risk taking steps that might extend the conflict and commit us to full-scale warfare in the Far East. Others say we cannot afford not to take those steps.

A general officer who holds this view expressed it to me as follows: "Time is fighting on the other side, not on ours. The other fellow is building up faster than we are. We have to stop this business in Korea now."

"We are fighting the war the way the Chinese want it—on a fixed line. We don't have the manpower to win that way. Our cardinal principle in war fare is mobility, and we have to get back to the 'four F's' of the American Army—find 'em, fix 'em, fight 'em, and finish 'em."

"We need to use everything we have now and finish the Korean War as quickly as possible—by land attack, aaval blockades, and bombing of (1) sea ports and Manchurian supply of armament centers—yes, by atom-bombing if necessary."

This officer, however, was against emptying Chiang Kai-shek's Formosa garrison troops in Korea, rather than do so, but because he has no faith in the Nationalist soldiers. "I'm afraid that two months after they were put in the line they'd be bought by the Communies, and go over to the other side, carrying their arms with them," he said.

How widespread such views are in the professional army I have no way of knowing, but there is a growing impatience to do something positive to wind up a conflict that has caused 128,000 American casualties in 30 months.

Perhaps the most meaningful phrase in General Eisenhower's statement was his reference to "executed under circumstances of our own choosing."

It is hard to interpret that in any way except as a clear warning to the Chinese Reds that counter-initiative steps are planned, and they no longer will call all the tunes in Korea.

Washington Letter

(By VERN HAUGLAND)

(For Jane Eads)

WASHINGTON—Ride with the Military Air Transport Service (MATS) and you'll ride backward.

The U.S. Department of Defense air transportation unit, like Britain's Royal Air Force (RAF), has become convinced that airplane seats facing the rear are definitely safer than—and just as comfortable as—seats facing forward.

MATS gave rearward-facing seats their first test in 1946 by installing them in a four-engine transport. This was done on the basis of several studies of air crashes in which it was determined that more passengers might have survived had the fatal impact been cushioned by the padded backs of their seats. Eventually 60 MATS planes, the major part of the air fleet—will be changed over.

Civilian airlines have used a limited number of rear-facing seats for many years. The Stratocruiser has had the forward set of seats facing aft. In general, however, the airlines are reluctant to go along with the military arm. "It's definitely safer," says Hal Hibbard, vice president and chief engineer of Lockheed Aircraft Corp., "but it's not easy to sell to the public."

Other countries are interested in the new seating arrangement but are slow to act. England, noting the RAF switch-over, is looking into the civilian airplane possibilities. Australia's Air Ministry announced a year ago that seats facing the rear would be required on all new civilian airlines.

MATS, luckily, has not yet had occasion to test the safety qualities of air-facing seats in an accident. The RAF says two of its new-type seating planes have been involved in crash landings, however, with definite demonstrations that injuries were less severe.

Studies by Cornell University medical college and others indicate that when a passenger sits facing forward at the time of a plane crash the upper part of his body acts as a 3-foot-long weighted arm to drive his head forward—against the back of the seat ahead or against a bulkhead—with force much greater than that actually working on the aircraft structure.

MATS has questioned more than 1,000 passengers about their rides-to-the-rear. Ninety per cent say MATS has more comfort, visibility and more freedom. One comment was "I approve as long as the pilot isn't facing backward."

Governor's Race Had Most Votes

DETROIT (U.P.)—The hotly contested governor's race in Michigan drew more votes than the presidential contest, according to final figures from the State Board of Canvassers.

Dwight D. Eisenhower and Adlai E. Stevenson polled 2,782,186 votes between them in the race for president, while the gubernatorial contest showed a total of 2,855,168 votes.

However, while Eisenhower got a 310,872-vote majority, Gov. G.

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW!

Mennen Williams passed his Republican opponent, Fred M. Alger, by only 8,618 votes to win a third term.

One explanation for the greater vote in the gubernatorial race is Michigan's system of separating the presidential from the state ballot. This system was inaugurated to prevent Democrats from riding into state offices on the popularity of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The system was criticized by Republicans this year. They believe Alger lost because of separation from Eisenhower's name, allowing Williams to benefit from the large number of split tickets.

It was found also that thousands of voters overlooked the small presidential ballot.

State Sen. Don Vanderwerp, Republican who sponsored the 1944 ballot change, has announced he now will seek to return the ballot to its original form.

Farmers Advised Help Wild Life

COLDWATER, O. (U.P.)—Wild life will benefit to the eventual benefit of farmers, if the latter are not too thorough in reaping their harvests.

This suggestion was set forth in a message recently sent its customers by the farm equipment division of the Avco Manufacturing Corp.

"Modern machines and modern corn picker, which scarcely misses an ear or kernel, leaves slim picking for birds and animals.

"Farmers who wish to protect wild life and provide good hunting for themselves and friends can save animals by 'outting corners.'"

"The idea is to cut diagonally across the back corner of each field you harvest to leave a natural shelter and a little store of feed for your own wild life."

"The bushel or the forkful that you waste is more than paid for by the warm feeling that you and your machine are giving a break to game already hard-pressed from every side."

Producing 'Toys With A Purpose'

AP Newsfeatures
 CINCINNATI, O.—Chances are that toy road grader or fire truck you buy your child for Christmas was made at the Doepke brothers' plant here.

Today they count the toys they produce in the hundreds of thousands and they have a world-wide distribution system. But in 1945 their plant was just an idea. But the idea was so good it has been booming their business ever since.

Children ought to have toys with a purpose—something to give them constructive activity. That was the idea. It started with a Christmas shopping trip. The brother found lots of toy soldiers, guns and tanks. They found some old toys which they had used as children in the attic. Rehabilitated, these made a hit with modern children.

Charles and Frederick Doepke had been running a small machine shop which had made war goods and they were looking for something they could produce. Why not modern replicas of modern machinery?

Their first product was a model earth mover. They added other items. In recent years, they have limited themselves to five at any one time. They drop the less popular toys and add others.

Now they have an assembly line a quarter mile long. From it come pint-size machines at the rate of one every half minute.

Personal taxes in the United States took 3.4 cents of each consumer dollar in 1938-41 and 11.6 cents in 1952.

Agree Democrats Erred In Count

WASHINGTON (UP)—Republicans want no more of that "erroneous" Democratic counting. Dwight D. Eisenhower will be inaugurated as the 34th President of the United States.

President Truman started the confusion four years ago when the official program for his inaugural listed him as the 32nd President. Chairman Joseph C. McGarraghay of the Eisenhower-Nixon Inaugural Committee says all "leading authorities on the subject of presidential succession" agree that the Democrats made an "erroneous count."

Mr. Truman actually was the 33rd President, and Eisenhower will be the 34th, according to McGarraghay, who cites experts in the Library of Congress and the State Department's chief of protocol as authorities for his count.

The confusion stems from the fact that Grover Cleveland served two non-consecutive terms as President. The only "proper" and accurate method, McGarraghay contends, is to count Cleveland twice—and not once the way the Democrats have been doing.

History Says Christmas Tree Was All A Mistake

By HERB ALTSCHULL WASHINGTON (AP)—The Christmas tree is all a mistake. History says so.

But American kids will say it's the most glorious mistake in the world. So will the Christmas tree industry, which this year will sell about 32 million trees for around 50 million dollars.

The National Geographic Society reported the figures today, pointing out that the 50 millions did not include lights and tree ornaments, which run into extra millions.

Historically, the Christmas tree has nothing to do with the religious observance of the day. Quite the contrary: it began as a pagan practice.

Back in the Sixth Century, Pope Gregory I, later to be elevated to sainthood, instructed his missionaries not to destroy innocent pagan customs which were not inconsistent with church doctrine and which could be woven into the fabric of Christian ceremony.

The missionary Boniface, who went into England to preach the doctrine of Christianity, found the Teutons worshipping the sacred oak of Odin.

Instead of trying to destroy that practice, Boniface persuaded the Christian converts to substitute an evergreen tree for the oak and to decorate it in honor of the Christ Child. The practice stuck, particularly in the English-speaking world.

But the mass use of Christmas trees did not come into being until the new world was colonized. Here evergreens were found in abundance—fir and spruce and pine.

And so the industry grew. It now is a year-around affair.

Christmas tree producers, located mainly in Canada and the northern tier of the United States, start work on next year's crop as soon as Christmas Day has passed.

Some trees are cut, treated with special preservative and coloring materials and stored in chilled warehouses for the next season. This supply is augmented by tree-cut in the fall.

INSURANCE TAXES UP
CHICAGO (UP)—Life insurance companies will pay a total of $138,000,000 in federal income taxes on their business in 1952, an increase of $13,000,000 over 1951, according to Alfred Guertin, actuary of the American Life Convention.

"GREENVILLE'S PHOTOGRAPHIC HEADQUARTERS"

Conquest

By Homer Hatten

Chapter 33
He was alert now, forgetful, of the pain of his bruised and shattered body, intent on upon the man outside the door. He tried it gently, but the door held firm, braced by a bar, perhaps, that lay along the outside wall. He stepped backward softly, lifted a booted foot, and drove it suddenly, resoundingly against the door.

He could hear the sudden scuffle of movement as the guard, scrambled to his feet. There was a moment of silence and then a startled voice rasped harshly through the door.

"What's goin' on in there?" Clay grinned, shifting his position a little so that he was beside the door instead of directly before it.

"Let me out," he shouted wildly. "Let me out now and I'll tell Morgan anything he wants to know! I can't stand it in here! Let me out and take me to Morgan now!"

"Let you out, huh?" There was relief in the guard's voice now. "I figured you wasn't as tough as you let on to be. You reckon you're ready to spill your guts to Morgan, if I should happen to take you to him?"

Clay let the panic of abject fear quaver in his voice. "Oh, God, yes! I'll tell him anything—anything! Just get me out of here and get me out now!"

"All right," he growled, "come awalkin' out slow, an' keep your hands just as high as you—"

The words died in a startled gasp as Clay lunged forward out of the darkness, his arm sweeping up in a swift blur of movement, the spur in his hand catching the starlight as it flashed forward.

Clinging to the door-frame for support, he saw the guard's body lose its erectness and collapse like a sack of meal, saw the blood pour out of the gaping wound that had almost torn the head loose from the shoulders, heard the thud of the body as it struck the earth and lay sodden and lifeless in the starlight.

Every step was agony, and once, when his foot struck an unseen obstacle and he almost fell, cold sweat sprang out on him and left him weak and trembling. He was almost at the big house now, and he lowered himself painfully to the ground, creeping forward by inches with his body pressed against the earth to present the smallest possible target. Once he thought he heard the muffled foot steps of the guard and froze, but the sound died away and he crept forward again.

Slowly, like an animal preparing to spring, he gathered his legs beneath him. Hands outstretched and his body tense with the expectation of sudden violence, he moved up the steps. With a relief so sharp that it was almost a physical pain, he felt the wooden door beneath his hands, unguarded.

He pushed gently against it, allowing the merest crack of light to shine out from the hallway. He paused listening, but there was no sound.

Moving as soundlessly as a stalking panther, Clay slipped forward and his fingers as delicately probing as a surgeon's, he slipped the sleeping guard's revolver from its holster, shoved it down into his belt, and crossed the hall to the door that opened into Morgan's office.

The embers of the fire were almost dead, but he fed them with slim splinters of oily pine until it blazed bravely again, throwing its flickering light into the black-shrouded corners of the room.

Moving feverishly now, he swept Morgan's desk clear of the papers that covered it and heaped them high against an empty stretch of wall, tore open the drawers, and added their contents to the growing pile. Then the heap of soft pine kindling that lay ready for use beside the fireplace, a half-dozen logs, piled like a tepee above it all.

Almost running now, he drove the hearth shovel deep into the heart of the leaping fire, filling it with coals and blazing strips of wood. He hurried its contents like a red avalanche into the under-dry heart of the pyre he had erected, watched the flames flicker and widen and spread.

He jerked open one of the outside windows and levered himself through it to the ground. The movement wrapped his broken body in a red mist of agony, but his mind was like a scourge, driving the body forward, intent only upon the goal of the powder magazine.

The gray shrouds of mist were still there, but now they were welcome, shielding him from alien eyes, providing a veil of invisibility to screen his movements. It was not far to the powder magazine, but to his fevered mind it seemed that the few yards stretched out to eternity, each one the precursor of a shouted challenge and a bullet crashing into his spine.

He gained it, finally, his breath rasping in his throat, the strain of the past half hour's exertion betraying him with a dragging exhaustion as he tumbled at the padlock on the door. With arms like lead, he pulled the revolver from his pocket and thrust the long barrel of the gun into the space between the hasp and the wood of the door.

He could hear movement behind him now, and where there had been nothing but gray mist and darkness, there was a crimson glow that grew stronger every second. The fire had broken its bonds, and in response to its imperious command, men were running toward the house and shouting, their voices dull and muffled in the fog.

Quickly he laid a trail of powder from the keg to the door, pausing there an instant to survey the scene.

There was a mad turbulence in the grounds just outside the house, a whirling, fermenting tumult of shouting men that reached new furies of delirium, as fresh groups threw themselves into the maelstrom. Watching them, seeing the number of the mob increase, he judged that at least three fourths of Morgan's entire force were gathered around the flaming heart of what had been Oak Island.

He slipped outside the door, the powder spilling from his hand making a dark trail on the earth behind him. Almost running now, he gained the shelter of a nearby wagon shed and collapsed upon the ground. He held the muzzle close against the powder trail, fired, and saw a red streak of flame burst from the muzzle and run like a crimson snake of death down the trail that led to the open door of the powder magazine. For an instant that seemed an eternity, there was nothing—and then the earth erupted in a sheet of flame and the very sky above him seemed to shake with thunder. There was a rush of wind, hot, tainted with the odor and the breath of hell.

Solons Want Balanced Budget Before Tax Cut

By CHARLES F. BARRETT
WASHINGTON (AP)—The new Congress, although wistfully eyeing a tax cut, for the time being, seems to be more anxious to chop federal spending and balance the budget first.

The result could be only modest tax reductions, if any, before 1954. That the prospect reflected in an Associated-Press survey of incoming congressmen throughout the country.

The survey showed one thing for sure: On the touchy subject of taxes, congressmen's views are scattered in all directions.

Scores of lawmakers indicated they feel keenly a voters' protest against high taxes—a protest fanned by President-elect Eisenhower during the campaign. BUT Eisenhower hasn't taken his stand on any specific tax cuts yet. And the absence of cues from the new White House contributor to a lack of any overwhelming trend toward any single program among the 268 senators and representatives participating in the poll.

In the House, where tax bills must start, 83 lawmakers lined up more or less positively for tax cuts now.

But 27 House members said tax reductions now are unlikely, or unlikely, and 68 said the budget should be balanced before Congress starts chipping away at federal income.

That adds up to 95 representatives—about 54 per cent of those taking a stand—who want to go slow or not go at all, on revenue cuts.

The Senate was even more cautious. Only 10 senators took an outright stand for early tax cuts, while 1 stood up in opposition. And 18 senators—including several of the most influential—said let's balance the budget first and then see what can be done about cutting taxes.

Opinion was divided closely on what taxes should be reduced whenever Congress gets around to it. Among lawmakers mentioning specific types of reductions 42 said they wanted to cut individual income taxes; 40 asked for cuts in excise sales taxes, and 39 wanted to reduce either income or excess profits taxes on corporations.

Many replies, 50 altogether, were expressed in generalities which failed to indicate a leaning in any one direction. And 263 congressmen either could not be reached, or declined to respond. The survey makes no attempt to forecast specific congressional action—it simply reflects the opinions of congressmen willing to state their positions.

$42,825 In Bond Sales For County

Sales of Series E, H, J, and K United States Defense Bonds in Pitt County for the month of October totaled $42,825.

Of the total amount, $17,325 was in Series E and H bonds and $25,500 in Series K bonds. This sales announcement was made today by County Defense Bonds Chairman H. H. Waldrop, based on the monthly sales report from Allison James, state director of the U. S. Savings Bonds Division in Greensboro.

The total figures for North Carolina's 100 counties were as follows: Series E and H, $2,894,008; Series J, $523,987; and Series K, $269,000. Total sale in the state was $3,215,406.

Chairman Waldrop stated that during the month of October industrial firms throughout the state were conducting person-to-person canvasses to give more of their employees an opportunity to enroll in the Payroll Savings Plans for the purchase of Defense Bonds. The chairman said that attractive Christmas gift holders are now available at all banks for their present with a future—Series J bonds. These holders may be obtained free of charge by individuals wishing to give a bond as a gift this Christmas.

Duke, Davidson Play Tonight; Wake Wins

Dickie Hemric Sets Pace For Demon Deacons

The Duke Blue Devils and Davidson Wildcats, tied for seventh place in the Southern conference basketball race, battle it out tonight to break that tie.

Each has a 1-1 record in conference play, but the high-scoring Blue Devils have averaged a straight 90 points per game in four contests while the Wildcats have hit for only a 69 average. In the loop's only other game, Clemson will journey to Presbyterian.

The South Carolina Gamecocks played their first conference game last night and probably wished they had postponed it until after Christmas. Richmond's Spiders whipped them 84 to 78 with the help of four last-minute free throws.

The Spiders came from behind to do it on a 15-point last period scoring spree by Capt. Jim Gahagan, the only senior on the freshmen-laden Richmond squad. Gahagan tallied 22 points in all but surrendered scoring honors to teammate Edmund Harrison with 23.

Capt. Johnny Peterson, South Carolina's only senior, matched his rival captain with 22 points.

The Wake Forest Deacons, who've been burning up the loop with wins over Duke and North Carolina State, tasted a little sweet revenge by the 72-70 licking handed them by the McCrary semi-pro Eagles last Saturday.

With Dickie Hemric breaking loose for 23 points, the Deacons whipped McCrary 74 to 65.

Hemric had frightened the Eagles Saturday by racking up 40 points and they tried desperately to keep him hemmed in last night. Former college stars Ab Williams and Ted Moran dogged him all night but the hulking 215 pound, six-foot, six-inch sophomore from Jonesboro shrugged them off and dropped in eight field goals and seven free throws.

The University of Virginia, finally managed to squeeze past VMI 69 to 62 in a see-saw game at Lexington. The keydets would take a one-point lead and lose it by a similar margin to the Cavaliers.

It was deadlocked 47-47 at the end of the third period, but in the final minutes Cavalier center Walter Gamble dropped in two hook shots which proved the difference.

Gamble was high for Virginia with 16 points, but Keydet center Karl Kinar took the honors with 26.

BILLY LYLES, G-Wake Forest
Scored 15 points against Duke by set shots.

Ezzard Charles Is Boomed While Winning Fight

BOSTON (UP) — Ezzard Charles will have to look a lot better than he did Monday night to back up a promoter's bid for a heavyweight title fight here in June.

The ex-champ from Cincinnati scored a seventh-round knockout at Boston Garden over ponderous Frank Buford of Oakland, Calif., as 5,095 fans boomed at the sluggish performance.

"I'm better than I looked tonight," Charles said afterward. He weighed 187 pounds to Buford's 202.

"Buford was hard to fight because he was trying for one wild punch. It took a couple of right hands on the head to open him up."

Matchmaker Sam Silverman of the Callahan Athletic Club here has offered the winner of the return bout between heavyweight king Rocky Marciano and defeated champion Jersey Joe Walcott a $400,000 guarantee to fight Charles at Braves Field in June.

The fans shouted at Charles Monday night, "Wait'll Marciano gets you."

Charles' co-manager, Tom Tannas, said Charles has been promised a shot at the title after the Marciano-Walcott bout, probably in June. But no one has taken Silverman up on his offer except Tannas and that's a good deal less than half the bargain.

Fraley Picks Jan. 1 Bowls

NEW YORK (UP) — Working on the theory that the early worm won't get such a big bird, Fearless Fraley jumps the gun today with the "winners" of the Jan. 1 bowl games.

In a nutty capsule, they figure like this:

Rose Bowl: Southern California over Wisconsin.

Sugar Bowl: Georgia Tech over Mississippi.

Cotton Bowl: Texas over Tennessee.

Orange Bowl: Alabama over Syracuse.

Sun Bowl: College of Pacific over Mississippi Southern.

That's it, but don't turn to the comics yet. Because if you are a roofer for one of the Fraley underdogs, maybe you'll find my reasons even more laughable.

Now, how, you may ask, can a man pick USC when the West Coast hasn't won the Rose Bowl squabble since Edison invented electricity.

I'd say they've seen the light, if it didn't sound like a bad pun. Anyhow, the answer is that the PCC has to start sometime and this looks like midnight for the corn-country Cinderellas. First of all, Southern Cal's record of nine wins against one loss shades Wisconsin's 6-2-1 mark even more than it appears. The Badgers lost to Ohio State and UCLA, the latter a 20-7 winner which Southern Cal shaded by two points.

You can detract from Notre Dame's win over Southern Cal. The Trojans were at the end of a long, hard road, had the Rose Bowl in the bag and suffered a natural let-down.

Down in the Sugar Bowl Georgia Tech figures no matter whether you compare common opponents or sheer horsepower. Using the comparison system, Tech walloped Auburn, 33-0; Tulane, 14-0, and Vanderbilt, 30-0. Ole Miss downed Auburn, 20-7; Tulane, 20-14, and managed only a tie with Vanderbilt, 21-21.

In the Cotton Bowl, despite that soft-sounding title, it looks here like a rough landing for Tennessee against Texas.

The Longhorns were really rolling at season's end and no less an authority than Notre Dame praised Texas as the club with the finest manpower they battled all season. The Irish also met a team called Michigan State.

Alabama also was riding tall broad and extremely handsome at season's end, frightening Georgia Tech and then mauling Maryland and Auburn. So the Crimson Tide figures to inundate Syracuse in the Orange Bowl.

Another late stretch runner was Florida, and it's a parlay with the Gators playing in the Gator Bowl Georgia Tech barely managed to squeeze past this club, which on its regained form should down Tulsa.

And in the Sun Bowl, the choice is College of Pacific to defeat Mississippi Southern despite the latter's better record.

Nab 9 Violators Of Game Laws

By CHESTER WALSH

District Game Warden J. O. Teel and Deputies E. C. Tavares and Henry Flake arrested nine violators of state game laws and obtained convictions of all defendants in magistrates' courts during last week.

They arrested G. E. Willis of near Greenville on the charge of trapping without a license. Magistrate H. L. Jenkins suspended judgment on condition that Willis buy a license and pay $8.30 court costs.

The game wardens arrested five men for hunting without licenses and secured convictions against all of them. Magistrate H. L. Jenkins tried the cases.

Willie Horne and Tom Horne, Negroes, of near Walstonburg, Greene county, were found guilty and each was fined $10, sentences suspended if they buy licenses and pay $8.30 court costs.

Donald Umstead and Sherman Earles of Greenville were each fined $10, sentences suspended if they buy licenses and pay $8.30 court costs.

In Magistrate Frank E. Brook's court, Milton Wasberry, Negro, was found guilty of hunting without a license. He was fined $10, sentence suspended if he buys a license and pay $7.95 court costs.

The game wardens arrested three Greenville men in a boat in Tar River, between Yankee Hall and Grimesland, for hunting on Sunday. The officers also charged the trio with hunting migratory wild fowl without licenses.

Magistrate Frank E. Brooks found Dan Bunting, William Anderson and Richard Buck guilty of hunting on Sunday and fined each defendant $50 and $8.30 costs.

The magistrate also found the trio guilty of hunting migratory wild fowl without duck licenses. Testimony was that they were in a boat in the river and had shot a duck with a .22-caliber rifle. Incidentally, the magistrate reminded that it is unlawful to hunt migratory wildfowl with a rifle or from a power-driven boat. He taxed each defendant with $8.30 court costs. They had one duck when arrested.

The game warden said the three men were liable to prosecution by federal authorities on the charge of hunting migratory wildfowl and using a rifle.

Seven Trapped In Flaming Home Burned To Death

WINAMAC, Ind. (UP)—Seven persons trapped in a bedroom of a blazing home burned to death early today despite a mother's frantic efforts to shepherd five children to safety.

They were overcome by fumes and smoke and died as the mid-night fire caught them at a second-floor window and in their beds.

The victims included two mothers and five children. They were Mrs. Margaret Crissinger, 29, her children, Danny, 4, and Jackie, 2; her sister-in-law, Mrs. Jane Hansen, 21, and daughter, Patricia, 2, and a brother and sister of Mrs. Crissinger's husband, Dorothy, 10, and Larry, 9.

The only survivor was Mrs. Crissinger's husband, Albert, 22, who hung by his hands from an upstairs bedroom window until neighbors pulled him away from the blazing home. He was burned seriously.

The bodies of Mrs. Hansen and four of the children, all in night clothes, were sprawled on a bedroom floor near a window. Mrs. Crissinger's body was in her bed nearby, and the body of Larry was huddled in an upper bunk.

Fire Chief Henry Kruger said Mrs. Hansen apparently roused the sleeping children and herded them toward safety. He said fire which apparently started from an oil burner in the front room cut off flight down the stairway, and Mrs. Han-

Ten Dead Lions Inspire Inquiry

BOMEAY (AP)—Indian Wildlife experts wonder what happened to the 10 dead lions recently found in the nearby Fir Forest sanctuary, last haven of the Asiatic lion.

Villagers discovered the dead beasts scattered through the jungles with no marks of wounds. Officials plan an investigation to determine whether some disease was responsible.

As part of an official policy aimed at safeguarding the lions, numbering about 200, from extinction, the government took emergency measures to provide water for the lions when the forest area suffered a drought four months ago.

Child Injured In Fall From Fast Moving Auto

VANCEBORO—A three-year-old child was seriously injured about five miles from here Sunday morning when she fell out of an open door, with the car traveling at a speed of 50 miles per hour.

Highway Patrolman James W. Boykin of Greenville, investigating officer, reported that three-year-old Catherine Marine Hill, of Merrimon, was seriously injured when she reportedly opened the rear door of her father's car and fell out.

Boykin stated that the little girl received five gashes in her head. She was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital where she was treated.

The accident occurred around eight o'clock Sunday morning on the New Bern Highway.

The car was operated by the girl's father, Gaston H. Hill of Merrimon.

Barn Lost To Rapid Fire

FACTOLUS—Fire, shortly after noon yesterday razed several farm dwellings near here owned by George Cherry.

Discovered around 12:30 Monday afternoon, a large two-story barn serving as a pack house, and shelters housing more than 300 bales of hay, were engulfed in flames in a matter of minutes.

Fanned by a breeze from the West, the flames quickly consumed the wooden frame building and reached out toward the large dwelling located some distance away. The heat became so intense at the house that window panes in the upper story cracked from the heat, and sap was drawn from timbers on the lower floor. A shift in the wind was credited with saving the structure.

With the shift in the wind, flames then claimed an unused pack house and a storage house packed with recently harvested corn. Arrival of a fire truck from Greenville was considered a great factor in preventing the loss of other fine buildings. While firemen fought the blaze, farmers of the vicinity formed a bucket brigade which kept water flowing to the pump of the fire engine.

No estimate of the loss was immediately made.

The buildings were being used by Willie Arnold, tenant on the Cherry farm. Neither Arnold nor members of his family were able to say how the fire started. Arnold was working in the field, and did not know of the blaze until summoned to the house. His family, preparing the noon meal, stated they first knew of the fire after the building was fully ablaze.

Firemen remained on the scene nearly two hours to prevent spread of flames to any of the other buildings.

More money — It is known that there will be requests for much larger appropriations for public welfare, health, mental hospitals and other social services performed by the State. None of these items is expected to occasion serious or prolonged controversy, unless the excess appropriations make it necessary to reopen the revenue bill. Any proposal to levy new taxes or materially increase the rate of levy under existing income and sales tax laws will meet bitter and stubborn resistance.

Big job — The multiplicity and diversity of relatively small items rather than the impact of two
