Mobilizer Poses Defense Dilemma On Construction And Buying Plans

Incoming Administration Must Decide Political, Strategic Problem

WASHINGTON (UP)—Defense Mobilizer Henry H. Fowler today handed the new Republican administration a political as well as strategic problem—should the government build defense plants that may never be used?

On this question, according to Fowler, hangs the difference between the nation being prepared in event of all-out war and running into bottlenecks that could "critically reduce our military effectiveness."

In his final report to President Truman Fowler said the problem of whether to prepare for full mobilization will be "the most crucial policy decision facing" the new Eisenhower administration.

Fowler personally called for continuation of the present mobilization program based on "minimum security goals," but he said the government now is in a position to start aiming toward "maximum security" in event of total war.

This would mean government construction of plants and purchase of equipment that would be needed immediately in event of war but would not be used until then, he said.

In an obvious reference to Republican aims at cutting defense costs, Fowler added, "I realize that this is quite a proposition to put to the Congress at this time."

To fill in the "gaps" in the present mobilization base, he said, will involve both legislation and money for building standby plants, buying emergency equipment, and for keeping existing plants in operating condition after present defense orders decline.

But he estimated that the cost of filling these "gaps" would be "only a fraction" of the $129,000,000 already appropriated for defense procurement and construction.

Other highlights of Fowler's report: 1. The present mobilization program is in "mid-passage" and much remains to be completed. Of the funds appropriated, 27 percent have been turned into weapons and other goods with the remainder still in various stages of production.

2. Approximately 35 percent of the industrial expansion projects authorized for tax benefits as essential to the mobilization program have been completed with another 45 percent due for completion next year.

3. There should be more pressure toward "unification and integration" of the defense programs of Western European countries and the United States with more standardization of weapons and with each country specializing in the items it is best adapted to produce.

4. Weapons deliveries are now seven times the mid-1950 rate, with aircraft being delivered at the rate of 1,000 a month—four times the mid-1950 rate. About 100 air wings of the planned 143-wing air force are now equipped with the remainder due to be equipped by the end of 1954.

Franco Boasts Of Achievements

MADRID (UP)—Generalissimo Francisco Franco told the Spanish people in a new year message that his government had achieved "victories and triumphs" unknown in Spanish history since the 16th century.

Among the achievements of 1952 he listed Spain's admission to and the restoration of her authority over Tangier.

Franco made no mention of economic and military negotiations being carried on with the United States but said Spain was the first western country to realize the dangers of Communism.

First Baby Of 1953 For Pitt Memorial Hospital

Private and Mrs. Edward Allen Buck, of Winterville Route One, admire their new daughter who was the first baby to be born at Pitt Memorial Hospital in 1953. (Reflector Photo by Roy Hardee)

"Mr. and Mrs. Edward Allen Buck of Route 1, Winterville, announce the birth of a baby daughter this morning . . .

With the arrival of a new year, a brand new citizen of Pitt County made her arrival known this morning at 8:47 a. m., the first baby to be born at Pitt Memorial Hospital in 1953.

The eight-pound and one-quarter ounce baby girl, yet unnamed, began her career in life this morning posing as a model for the morning paper, a little uncooperative at times, however.

The new baby is the only one in the family of the Edward Bucks. The father, now in the army and stationed at Fort Jackson, S. C., arrived early this morning on an emergency furlough to welcome his daughter into the world. Private Buck is on leave until Sunday.

Since the arrival of the little model, more babies arrived at Pitt Memorial this morning but the Buck girl is the first birth in '53 recorded at the hospital.

Freighter Radios For Aid In Storm

NORFOLK, Va. (UP)—Rough seas prevented a U. S. Coast Guard cutter from putting a rescue line aboard a crippled freighter early today off Cape Hatteras, N. C., legendary "graveyard of the Atlantic."

The Coast Guard here reported winds of 50 to 55 miles per hour whipped the stricken Dutch freighter Hydra, believed to have 35 or 40 crewmen aboard. The ship was not considered in immediate danger, however.

The USS Conifer reached the Hydra in a rising storm (at about 1:30 a. m. e. s. t.), the Coast Guard reported, but gales prevented it from putting a line aboard the Hydra. The cutter stood by helplessly.

The Coast Guard told the Eugenia M. Moran was speeding to the scene and was expected to arrive in time to help with the hazardous rescue work.

A byplay to this rescue operation meanwhile kept two other cutters occupied with the commercial tug Mary L. McAllister, which became disabled while en route to take the Hydra in tow yesterday.

The coast guard diverted a second cutter from the Hydra operation.

No Re-Trial For U.S. Atom Spies

Court Of Appeals Turns Down Request By Rosenberg Pair

NEW YORK (AP)—The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals has turned down a plea for a new trial for Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, doomed atom spies.

Federal District Judge Sylvester J. Ryan's refusal to grant a new trial was upheld last yesterday by the appeals court.

Counsel for the New York City couple-scheduled to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing Prison during the week of Jan. 11—may make a plea to the White House for pardon or clemency as a last resort.

Federal District Judge Irving R. Kaufman, who pronounced the death sentences 20 months ago, reserved decision on a clemency plea on Tuesday. He said "plenty of time" for an appeal to the White House would be allowed, and he indicated he might delay the execution date. The U. S. Supreme Court has refused to intervene in the case.

A Federal Court jury convicted the Rosenbergs on March 29, 1951, on charges of conspiracy to transmit American atomic bomb secrets to Russia.

The appeals court yesterday also upheld the lower court ruling denying a new trial for Morton Sobell, who is serving a term of 30 years to life in Alcatraz Prison in the same case.

The appeals court said the lower court had shown "conclusively" that the three had not raised any material issue of fact that required a rehearing.

Registration For Jan. 12 Is Light

Registration for voting in the forthcoming city manager referendum has been practically non-existent up to noon today.

Books opened yesterday for that purpose, but registrars said today participation has been very light. They opined that all voters who might be interested in balloting on the issue are already registered.

At the Pitt County Courthouse John R. Barker, registrar, reported late this morning he has not registered a single new voter since the books opened. However, he has made two transfers for voters who have moved.

Barker said a few interested people came by the registrar's desk to check if their names were on the books, but for all practical purposes, it is a registration in name only.

Mrs. Rosa Brown, registrar at the city hall, bore out substantially Barker's statement when she declared she has registered only one new voter. She has transferred three voters and, as in the case of Barker, has checked several people to see if their names are on the books.

The referendum on council-manager plan of municipal government for the city of Greenville is scheduled to be held Monday, January 12. Registration books will remain open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. each day excluding Sunday through Saturday, January 10.

Another Zig Zag

HONG KONG (AP)—To Michael Patrick O'Brien the new year brought merely another zig and another zag.

O'Brien, the man without a passport who is stranded on the ferry boat Lee Hong, made his 89th consecutive round trip to Portuguese Macau.

Insisting he is an American citizen, O'Brien came out of Red China on a set of Red Cross papers in September but neither British authorities in Hong Kong or officials at Macau recognize them.

U. S. officials say he is a Hungarian. He has been on the ferry since Sept. 18, forbidden by immigration officials to go ashore.

Indict Railroad For Statements To Governments

WASHINGTON (UP)—A federal grand jury has indicted the Baltimore and Ohio railroad on charges of making false financial statements to two government agencies 10 years ago.

The 11-count indictment was handed down yesterday by a grand jury which has been investigating $80,000,000 in reconstruction finance corp. loans granted to the railroad as part of its financial reorganization. It convicted on all counts, the railroad would be liable to fines of up to $110,000.

The indictment charged that B. & O. made false monthly statements on its financial condition to the RFC and the interstate commerce commission from December, 1942 to April, 1943.

The railroad obtained $80,000,000 in government loans during the depression years and then began a financial reorganization in 1944.

Valparaiso Rocks To Explosion Of Stored Dynamite

At Least 35 Persons Killed; Hundreds Injured; Fire Set Off Blast

VALPARAISO, Chile (UP)—A fire followed by a violent explosion in a waterfront powder magazine killed at least 35 persons today and injured an estimated 350, 48 of them seriously.

Thousands were still celebrating the new year's arrival when the fire started.

The flames spread rapidly through the dry wood of the magazine, fanned by a wind. All available fire engine companies were called in from Valparaiso and nearby Vina Del Mar. Thousands of celebrants crowded to watch.

At 3 a. m. the flames reached stored dynamite. There was a blast so terrific that those out of range of the flames thought it was an earthquake. Windows throughout the area were shattered.

The blast sent flaming debris flying into packed nearby streets. The spectators fled in panic. Men, women and children were trampled. Bodies of some were mutilated, others were burned. The clothing of many was torn off.

All possible ambulances, surgeons and nurses from the hospitals of Valparaiso and Vina Del Mar were called. Some injured were treated at hastily erected first aid stations, others taken to hospital in two cities.

Most of those killed were firemen. As their comrades continued to fight the fire, the gay cries of revelers who had been celebrating the new year a few hours before gave way to the lamentations of women seeking relatives in the debris.

Italy Plans Bar U.S. Racketeers

Won't Take Back Deported, Denaturalized Americans

ROME (AP)—A Foreign Office spokesman said today that Italy will bar the entry of Italian-born racketeers who may be deported after denaturalization proceedings by the United States.

The decision may affect such persons as Frank Costello, Joe Andous and Thomas Three-Finger Brown if the U. S. takes away their American citizenship.

"We do not want another Lucky Luciano," the spokesman said. "He lived in Italy a short time and then spent most of his time in the United States. Now we have pay for him. It's not blood that makes a man delinquent; it's society."

Luciano was deported to Italy in February, 1946, after serving 10 years of a 30-year sentence for white slavery. Luciano never took out U. S. citizenship papers.

The spokesman said the government did not want to accept "a man who is born in Italy and spends a day or two here and the rest of his life in another country until he is no longer considered useful."

"They can't send them back like a postal parcel," he said. "It's too easy that way. If they send these people back to us, they won't be permitted to land."

The spokesman said the decision, which has not yet been communicated to Washington, does not affect Italians who were never naturalized.

Appointment To Post Announced

Farmville Doctor's Assignment Becomes Effective Today

FARMVILLE — Dr. Charles E. Fitzgerald, Farmville physician, has been appointed to the Pitt County Board of Health, chairman F. P. Hendrix of Greenville announced this morning.

The appointment becomes effective today and is for four years. In announcing the Pitt County Board of Commissioners' action in naming Dr. Fitzgerald to the board of health, Hendrix stated selection of the Farmville physician was by a unanimous vote of the board.

Great Pride

Remarking on the honor, Dr. Fitzgerald said, "It is with a great deal of pride that I accept this appointment. It is my firm intention to give full cooperation in seeking to better the health conditions of Pitt County."

Immediate past president of the Pitt County Medical and Dental Society, Dr. Fitzgerald has been practicing medicine in Farmville since 1939. He was born in Virginia and lived in Greenville a short time.

Senator Charges Inaction Shattering Faith Of Americans In United Nations; Continuation Of Grand Jury Probe Swirls Up New Controversy

WASHINGTON (UP)—Sen. Herbert R. O'Connor today charged President Truman and Secretary of State Dean Acheson with delaying action against American subversives in the United Nations to avoid a controversy in the recent U. N. session.

The Maryland Democrat said their decision "may have averted temporarily a serious situation within the U. N. itself," but ignored "the shattering of the confidence of the people of the United States in the United Nations."

Meanwhile, House investigators disclosed that former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes will be asked what part Alger Hiss played in a 1946 decision that the United States would not pass on the loyalty of Americans employed at the U. N.

The disclosure came as an aftermath of a House Judiciary subcommittee's hearings into charges that the State and Justice departments tried to suppress a New York grand jury's report on Communist infiltration into the U. N.

At the same time, a new controversy swirled up in the Justice Department over whether the grand jury inquiry should be continued.

The New York grand jury laid the blame on the State Department for the presence of American subversives on the U. N. staff and strongly advised a continued investigation after it went out of existence Dec. 4.

Myles Lane, U. S. attorney for the southern district of New York, promised the House subcommittee that he would take immediate action to continue the grand jury probe next week.

Assistant Attorney General Charles E. Murray told the subcommittee, however, that he would ask Attorney General James P. McGrady to block any continuation of the investigation.

Murray told the subcommittee he is "against a proceeding of a grand jury when they know it can't result in an indictment." He said such action is an "abortive use" of government power and can lead to "government by hysteria."

O'Connor, who presided over most of the recent hearings by the Senate Internal Security subcommittee into subversives in the U. N., noted that certain foreign governments were ready to fight any U. S. demand for expulsion of questionable employees. "But he added in a statement:

"Our government officials made a mistake in temporizing with the question which called for prompt and decisive action lest these disloyal employees remain in key positions where they could jeopardize the interests of the United States as well as the objectives of the international organization."

O'Connor also attacked Acheson's statement before the House subcommittee Wednesday that the employment of disloyal Americans at the United Nations has not endangered national security since they did not have access to secret information.

"It is my definite belief that their employment. . . in the U. N. has been a constant threat to our nation's welfare," O'Connor said. "They have been in a position to shape the course of U. N. policy and they have been so situated as to acquire valuable information which could be useful to our Communist foes."

No Government For France Over Holiday

Threatened Offensive Fizzles

Instead Of Giant New Year's Attack, Enemy Hides From UN Barrage

SEOUL (UP)—A Communist propaganda threat of a giant new year's offensive fizzled to nothing today, and instead the Reds covered in their holes under a mighty barrage fired from every Allied big gun and mortar along the front exactly at midnight.

Gen. James A. Van Fleet said Allied casualties on the last day of the year were the lowest for the entire month of December.

The mighty Allied salvo on this, the third New Year's Day of the Korean war, was both a gesture of confidence and a fiery reminder to the Reds that American troops and their U. N. Allies were in Korea to stay until an honorable peace was reached.

The Air Force disclosed that during the month of December Allied saboteurs destroyed MIG-15 jets at better than a 14 to 1 ratio.

Twenty-seven Red jets were a knocked down, eight more probably destroyed, and 26 others damaged. Two Sabrejets were lost in duels during the 30 days air fighting went on, seven planes of various types were lost to ground fire, and eight others lost to various causes.

Instead of the "general offensive" of which enemy loudspeakers had boasted, the Reds attacked only minor probing attacks today.

Two Chinese platoons converged on South Korea outpost bunkers east of Sniper Ridge on the western front, but were driven northward after a two-and-a-half hour skirmish.

Twenty Communist soldiers were killed in close fighting with hand grenades and rifle-in-no-man's-land on the western front.

Three Chinese platoons were smashed back in the Kelly Hill sector northwest of Yonchon. Allied troops pulled back from one advance position but reoccupied it later after Allied artillery pounded the small Red attacking force.

Snow fell two hours before midnight on the central front, drifting to 12 inches in the frozen wastes of no-man's-land. Temperatures plummeted from 35 degrees to three above zero.

Van Fleet's announcement of Allied casualties came in a New Year's morning visit to the press. He dropped in on the morning press briefing to extend his new year's greetings.

Van Fleet probably would have welcomed an enemy offensive. He has said repeatedly that U. N. forces would welcome an all-out attack as a better chance to kill Reds.

The Air Force report for December listed among the "kills" 2,350 vehicles, 10 locomotives, 190 railcars, 240 gun positions, 1,150 enemy-occupied buildings and 225 troop bunkers. The Air Force estimated it had killed or wounded 400 enemy troops.

A family of four composed of Kay Bryan, Jimmie Taylor, Mary Sue Gaskins and Mary Jo Bryan shopped for cards with Virginia McCaffity as sales-lady. As carols appropriate to the card designated were sung by the Methodist Youth Fellowship Choir, heralded in appropriate costumes appeared before a large beautifully decorated Christmas tree forming the scene for the cards: "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear," Cleo Bryan, as an angel; "I Heard the Bells on Christmas Day," Gerald Johnson; "Jingle Bells," Sean Purcell and Edith Hoell; "Jolly Old Saint Nicholas," Kenny Buck, as Santa and Sylvia Gaskins; "Joy to the World," John Andrew Johnson; "The First Noel," Maybelle Suggs, Bill Lancaster and Kenneth Suggs as shepherds; "Away in a Manger," Mary Lou Hill as Mary and Sara Suggs as Joseph; "Upon the Husk Top," Kenny Buck as Santa Claus; "We Three Kings," with Harvey Richard McLawhorn, John Johnson and Gerald Johnson; "Hark the Herald Angels Sing," with Cleo Bryan, Lorraine Powell and Esther Buck as angels. McGee, Sunday School superintendent, distributed gifts to the members with everyone present receiving bags of fruit, candy and nuts. The pastor then dismissed the assemblage with a prayer and as "O Little Town of Bethlehem" was sung, each lighted a small candle from the angel's candle, signifying the desire to follow Christianity.

Red Oak News

The members of Circle No. 2 of Red Oak Christian Church held their annual Christmas party last Monday night at the home of Mrs. Amos Evans with Mrs. Carl Crawford as co-hostess. Guests were invited into a very warm and cheery living room that was very beautifully decorated for Christmas. Only two members were absent. We are striving to have perfect attendance at each meeting.

After the president, Mrs. Jesse Jordan, had called the meeting to order, the secretary read the minutes of the last meeting which were corrected and then approved. The roll was called and dues were collected. There were also some anniversary dues and some money from the sale of flavoring turned into the treasury.

Mrs. Travis Crawford reported that she had sent to her orphan friend in the Southern Christian Home a cowboy suit, boots and a train. She bought these presents with the money contributed by each member.

Mrs. W. L. Green made the motion that we keep this same orphan friend and send him gifts on his birthday and on other occasions. This motion was carried.

Mrs. J. T. Manning Jr. reported that plans were being made to send a layette overseas through the Lutheran World Relief Inc. and in-

Starts New Year Without A Ferry

BOSTON (UP) — Boston began the new year today without a ferry on Boston Harbor for the first time in 120 years.

The famed cent-a-ride East Boston ferry made its last run Wednesday over the some quarter-mile route its predecessors had traveled since 1932.

Mayor John G. Hynes reluctantly put the ferry out of business as an economy measure.

Big Bus Strike Posing Tie-Up Threat For N. Y.

NEW YORK (AP)—New York City was hit by the biggest bus strike in its history as the whistles and bells ushered in the New Year.

Eight thousand-odd drivers and maintenance men on 125 routes were called out last midnight in a wage-hour dispute.

Michael J. Quill, president of the CIO Transport Workers Union, said the walkout would idle all 3,500 buses of eight privately-owned companies.

These companies carry about 3 1/2 million fares on a normal business day, in Manhattan, the Bronx, Queens and the lower part of suburban Westchester County.

The strike affected only a fraction of New York's vast subway-elevated-bus trolley systems, most of them owned and operated by the city.

The stoppage began on schedule at 12:01 a.m. as a snow and sleet storm swept the city and kept many merrymakers indoors.

The city had ample warning of the strike, but many New Year's Eve celebrants had a difficult time getting home to areas serviced by the tied-up lines.

Quill, who joined one of the picket lines thrown around company garages, declared, "we'll stay out until we win." Shortly after the strike started, he said "everything is going according to schedule."

The companies did not try to run any buses. Doughty 7,000 of those called out on strike are drivers. City officials had tried almost up to the strike deadline to persuade the union to submit the dispute to arbitration or mediation.

Contracts between the TWU and eight companies expired at midnight.

Belvoir School Said Broken-In

BELVOIR — Pitt County officers reported this morning the second robbery of a county schoolhouse in the past two days. A break-in at Belvoir School was discovered yesterday.

But the reward of the burglars was slim, Deputy Sheriff Lloyd Manning said, because all they received for their efforts was approximately $5.00 in small change.

Manning stated the robbery may have occurred at anytime over the holidays, but was discovered by school officials only yesterday. The thieves apparently entered the building via an open window.

According to the officer's report, the money was taken from the office of the principal. The deputy said a glass was broken in the door and it was unlocked from the inside.

The investigation was conducted by Manning, Deputy Sheriff Jasper Lee Mills and "Cap'n" S. B. Dorsey, city and county identification officer.

Real New Year Baby Came Early

BOSTON (UP)—A Boston housewife gave birth to a nine-pound, 10-ounce boy at one second past midnight today and doctors said they believed the baby was the first born in 1953.

The mother, Mrs. Margaret Pecci, and her child were "doing well," doctors said. Mrs. Pecci, who has two other children, and her husband, Artilio Pecci, have not yet named the newcomer.

Traffic Problem Brings Outburst

VANCOUVER, B.C. (UP)—An elderly man began a retaliation drive against drunken drivers. Police said William Anderson, 70, started to weave across an intersection, took a look at traffic, staggered up to the nearest car and pounded his fist against the hood. Police said neither Anderson nor the car suffered any damage.

SERVICE COLUMBUS, O. (UP)—The windows of an auto belonging to Mason Blosser were soaped while parked on a street. Two days later the windows were cleaned while the car was parked at the same spot.

Mr. Harris died in Pitt Memorial Hospital in Greenville Wednesday morning at 9:45 o'clock after being critically ill for a week.

Auto Restored With Warning

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—John Connors' stolen car was found on an approach to the Golden Gate bridge with this note attached to the steering wheel: "Next time don't leave the keys in your car."

Executive Board Meeting Of Service League The Executive Board of the Greenville Service League will meet at the home of Mrs. E. H. Williford at 10 a.m. January 2.

FOUL TAX RISE CHESTER, Conn. (UP)—If this town's tax rate is raised, it can be blamed on an accident of last May when Wayne S. Patrick tripped over a pile of dirt on the local softball field while chasing a foul ball. He claimed his fall resulted in permanent disabling him for certain types of work and sued for $25,000. A town meeting "vote authorized spending $1,000 to settle the case out of court. The finance board chairman estimated a tax increase of two mills would be necessary to cover the appropriation.

Building A Home For Polio Victim

CHICAGO (UP)—A pretty polio victim, ordered evicted from her home by her mother-in-law, watched a dream begin to come true as the clock tolled in the new year.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Kitsmiller, 27, watched ground breaking ceremonies at midnight at the site where her neighbors in suburban Park Ridge, Ill., plan to build her a new $20,000 home.

A helpless invalid confined to an iron lung, the honey blonde said she faced 1953 "with more joy in my heart than I've ever known before."

Mayor Alfred Haake turned over a spadeful of earth to begin construction of the house financed by the "Mary Kitsmiller Fund." Volunteer workers under the direction of the Sun Construction Company will work around the clock in spare time to finish the house by Feb. 1.

Not long after that date Mrs. Kitsmiller will be forced to leave her present home. Her mother-in-law, Mrs. Marion Kitsmiller, won an eviction order last month on charges that the paralyzed young woman was unable to pay $55-a-month rent.

The new home will be especially designed to make life easier for the younger Mrs. Kitsmiller. It will have ramps instead of stairs and extra-wide doors to make movement of an iron lung simple. A hydrotherapy tank will be built in.

The construction company has agreed to build the $20,000 house for $7,000.

Mrs. Kitsmiller, who lives with her six-year-old son, James III, and her parents, said she could not pay the rent on her present house because her husband had left her.

She has filed for divorce from James Kitsmiller, II, charging desertion in April. "I just can't believe it," she said. "To think that my parents and my little boy will have a home and not have to rely on charity. Well, it's just too wonderful."

Saccharin is not sugar and has no food value, but is very sweet.

When I left home to attend college, my mother gave me a Bible. On the fly-leaf she wrote this verse — ROMANS 8:28 — "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called according to His purpose."

Naturally, this verse through the years has taken on increasing sentimental significance to me. But more than that, its meaning has fixed it as something of a text for my life. It seems to say "We live in a universe that supports the good. The stars in their courses fought against Sisera" because Sisera was working against God's people and purposes. "If God be for us, who can be against us?" is the Christian's confidence. Every experience has its place in one's life. Success and failure, fortune and misfortune, joy and tragedy, all are woven together, like the many colored threads of a priceless tapestry, to make life's rich pattern.

Seeing the contrasting experiences in Jesus' life, and the blend of color in the lives of those who served so well, I find my faith accepting and appropriating the spirit of this verse — that "All things work together for good."

Strength for the Day

STICKING TO THE END

King Nebuchadnezzar in a dream saw a great image, the head of which was fine gold, the breast and arms of which were silver, the lower part of which was brass, the feet of which were part iron and part clay.

Someone has compared our undertakings and purposes to this image. Very often our plans are like the head of this image, of fine gold, but after a time—a week or so after New Year's Day—our desire begins to slacken, we have less exalted ideas of what we are supposed to do—the gold blends into silver and later into brass. Finally—by February first—we give up our ideals altogether, either because we find them difficult to attain, or because we are tired or disillusioned. That which started with a head of gold ends up with feet of clay. It is the picture of how we often start good things in a spirit of exaltation and at last renounce them in great discouragement.

Paul in writing to the Galatians said, "Let us not be weary in well-doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." It is easy indeed for us to become weary, to go from golden dreams to silver efforts, and at last to renounce even those efforts and confess ourselves exhausted and defeated. We need to remind ourselves that in due season we shall reap if we faint not. We were made for triumph, not for defeat. The only condition is that we faint not.

No Ordinary Crime By The Rosenbergs

In a little less than two weeks from today, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg are scheduled to die in the electric chair. They will be so executed unless one of their legal maneuverings or final pleas win for them a stay, a re-trial, a lighter sentence, or perhaps, ultimately, the key to Freedom.

The Rosenbergs were the first Americans to be sentenced to die for spying out secrets of the atom. Their crime was not an ordinary case of treason, or of espionage for a foreign power. Because the atom bomb was involved, their activities helped make possible the horror of atomic bombs killing thousands upon thousands of Americans, or similar hosts of other free peoples.

Because of the Rosenbergs, America's rivals were assisted in learning the secrets of the atom bomb and thus encouraged in their aggressive pressures—which have cost many lives on the battlefield, disrupted millions of lives at home and abroad... in short, these two traitorous spies were committing more than a crime against a few individuals. Entire peoples were placed in hazard by their deeds.

They cannot be adjudged by ordinary standards. Mere execution seems too mild and ineffectual for the crimes of the atom spies. The Rosenbergs, Dr. Alan Munn May, Dr. Fuchs and others were individually small cogs in the Communist wheel. But together they were able to provide their masters with information and data that eliminated probable years of preparatory study and experiments in the development of the A-bomb.

One cannot even say their spying was for money... and so arrive at a logical counter-measure or deterrent action. American justice is dealing with a fanatical idealism, foreign to us, which will not let a matter of morals or principles deter them in striving to attain an end.

Whatever lies in store for Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, their fate cannot be commensurate with the peril—which they helped foment—to countless other humans. Their lives or deaths are insignificant when compared with the potential sufferings and deaths of multitudes.

Tolerance Of Disloyalty Has Gone Too Far

It is both infuriating and baffling to learn that disloyal Americans have long been known to be employed by the United Nations; and little or nothing done about it.

And to make the blood-pressure rise still higher, the public is calmly informed that the State Department (on presidential advice) has refused to disclose the names of its employes who handled the investigative reports on U. S. citizens hired by the U. N. That information was withheld respectively from the grand jury which started this particular ball rolling, then from

Senate and House committees which followed up.

Somebody within the State Department's own ranks... whose responsibility included the passing on, or handling of the investigative reports... knew that suspicious personalities were going to United Nations jobs. They didn't seem to mind overmuch; may even have encouraged it. Promises of "drastic measures" to weed them out came from Dean Acheson only yesterday.

And at this late date we learn too that charges of some sort have been lodged against several of those State Department employes assigned to evaluate the loyalty reports. It's announced too, that the Federal Bureau of Investigation will make full-scale inquiries into the backgrounds of all Americans employed in key UN posts. This is another "first time" move, coming years after such ordinary precautions would be assumed to have been taken.

We are left to wonder if these security steps, or clean-up measures, would ever have been taken had not some responsible citizens insisted on asking questions and "investigating."

As Acheson reminded, the jobs held by these Americans suspected of disloyalty are not policy-making posts nor of immediate danger to the nation's welfare. But the fact that they did infiltrate through the State Department's loyalty "screen" and that they are in ideal listening posts for their Kremlin master... that is, or should be alarming to Americans who are concerned with national security. Too, the role of the employe in policy-making decisions should not be overlooked. Many a top-rank executive delegates a surprising amount of authority to his trusted workers.

So while there may be "no danger" to America's immediate interests through this disloyal element, the long-range security angle does not look overly safe.

Bluntly speaking, it is time for a change in the administration of State Department affairs. A most thorough sweeping out of the corners and crannies in which the roaches and rodents of subversion are hiding is a pressing need of the times.

Tolerance of these should not be tolerated; for we are engaged in a war, a different kind of war from what we are accustomed, but a war nevertheless. And one's mortal enemies are not to be trusted anywhere, anytime.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—President-elect Eisenhower's desire to relieve American divisions in Korea with Asiatic manpower assures a heavy argument between him and Winston Churchill when the British Prime Minister visits him soon.

Although definite decisions will not be made until after the two men's conference, it is understood that the Pentagon and top officers in the field have urged this plan. By training many more Korean divisions, possibly ten, and by accepting the aid of Chiang Kai-shek's troops, they believe that U.S. units may be withdrawn to reserve lines.

They do not think that such strategy would lead to an enlargement of the conflict, such as Russia's active entrance on this and other fronts.

They also note that, in Indo-China as well as Korea, the Reds are battling us directly and indirectly. Modern, Moscow-made weapons, including tanks, artillery and planes, have shown up in both places.

CHURCHILL'S DILEMMA—The use of Chiang's forces would prove especially embarrassing to the British statesman, for London has never withdrawn its recognition of Communist China.

The introduction of Formosan fighters into the Korean warfare, in Churchill's opinion, would result in a complete break in relations between his country and the Mao Tse-tung regime.

Churchill still cherishes the hope that the Chinese Communists may be persuaded to repudiate their alliance with Moscow. In talks with our diplomats their British opposites emphasize that they have closer contacts with the Peiping government than we have. They indicate that they have good evidence for anticipating a break in this situation.

London believes that Russia's recent U.N. denunciation of our treatment of North Korean prisoners supports this theory. They say that it indicates Stalin's growing concern over Tse-tung's restless attitude.

IRAN DISPUTE—Washington is also disturbed over Iranian realpolitik in the petroleum dispute in Iran, which now threatens to spread to adjacent countries. Churchill appears to be adamant against the Truman-Acheson formula for a practical but peaceful settlement of this controversy in the turbulent Middle East.

A $100,000,000 subsidy of Iran on the Truman Administration's basis, according to the Prime Minister, would be a laboriously built fabric of the world's trade and economy.

If Mossadegh can capitalize on his threats and seizures, the "Prime" argues, every country in the world would follow his example, including Latin-American nations on our doorstep.

ACHESON'S FEAR—Acheson's great fear is that the forbidding British attitude will convert Iran into a Russian satellite together with all the other Arabian peoples at the eastern end of the Mediterranean.

Our Secretary of State is also motivated by concern that anti-western prejudice became even sharper in North Africa, especially Egypt, Tunisia, Morocco, etc.

He receives regular reports from his diplomatic scouts that our continued support of the Anglo-French position against the natives has made enemies of populations once our historic friends.

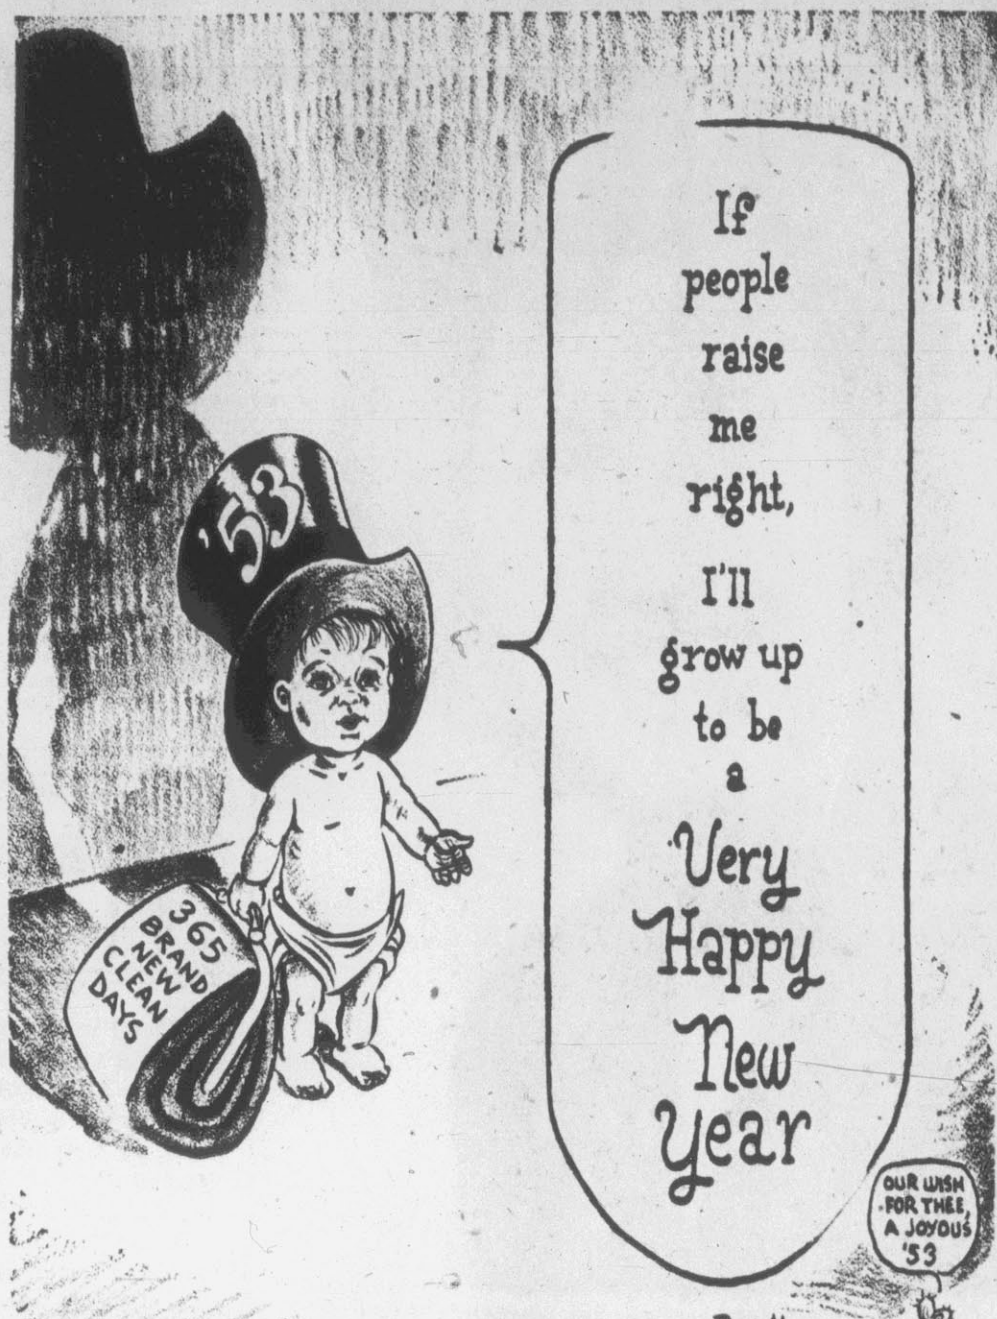

But he cannot seem to impress his ideas on Churchill. He refuses to preside over further "liquidation of the British Empire," now fairly well disintegrated.

OLD STORY TO CHURCHILL—Churchill's reaction to these, Acheson "alarms" is a strange combination of fatalism and cynicism. As an empire builder for more than 50 years now, he and his government have been constantly embroiled with peoples on the perimeter of the British Empire, the Chinese, the Hindus, the Afghans, Egyptians, the Chinese, the Boers, etc. His only real troublemaker was Russia under the Czars.

He thinks the United States "slightly immature" in its approach to the problem of "colonialism," and that we get upset needlessly. So he and his 10 Downing Street spokesmen, say in discussing our periodical protests, representations and interference in British affairs.

Now Washington awaits the Eisenhower-Dulles reaction to this diplomatic line!

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Yesterday's column was the beginning of a letter I had from Charlie Justice, two-time All-America football player at the University of North Carolina who is now a member of the Washington Redskins professional club. In this letter I asked Charlie questions about the team and his performances that would be of interest to those of us who have followed him throughout the year.

Question: Do you like pro ball better than coaching? (Justice played for the Redskins in 1950, went back to Carolina in 1951 and served in the backfield coaching staff, then returned to the Redskins this year.)

Justice's answer: Yes.

Question: What do you think happened to Carl Snavely?

Answer: Nothing. He just didn't have the material. He is still one of the best coaches in the business in my opinion.

Question: We down here in North Carolina complain because you don't play more. Do you think you will be in the lineup more next year, or do you think the coach is using you now to best advantage, this is on run-backs and kicking? (At this point there were two games to go. In the final two games Justice played more. In the first game of the season he was sensational, but broke his wrist.)

Answer: The two months I was out with a broken wrist really hurt my timing. Gilmer was having a good year and they couldn't afford to take him out.

Question: In your opinion, who are the best three players on the Redskins team?

Justice answered this with four names: Eddie LeBaron, Hugh Taylor, Johnny Williams and Dick Albans.

Who was the best player during your time at Carolina? (Notice I asked for one player.)

Justice's answer: Bob Mitten, Ted Hazelwood, Chan Highsmith, Art Weiner, Hosea Rodgers, and Sid Varney were all great!

It is interesting to note that of these players named by Justice, only one, Hosea Rodgers, was a backfield man. All others played in the line. Even those who think Justice is over-rated will have to admit that he has always been modest, and has always given the linemen credit for clearing the way for the backs. He definitely helped lead Carolina in a few bowl games, too.

And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

By LYNN NISBET

JOBS — Not since depression days have so many people sought jobs with the General Assembly as are applying now. There are more than three times as many applicants as there are places to be filled. Another noticeable fact, according to Secretary of State Thad Eure, is the large number of married women seeking clerical work with the Legislature.

CONTRAST — This situation is in striking contrast to that which prevailed during the war. It is recalled that in 1945 Lieutenant Governor "Stag" Balleff and Speaker Oscar Richardson experienced real difficulty in getting enough clerks and pages to handle the essential business of the General Assembly. So many men were in the armed forces or working on defense jobs and so many women were in government offices, the legislative pay scale did not appeal.

POTENT — The scramble for jobs now reflects the rising cost of living and the need for extra money. It may also mean that private business firms are not adding new employes as rapidly as they have been doing in recent years. And, quite obviously, the changing administration at Washington with probability that thousands of Democratic government workers will be bumped off had considerable influence upon the North Carolina government "labor market."

CAGEY — Besides the headaches involved in cases where legislative employers have to say

"No" to a great many friends and constituents, there is the cagey problem of making sure that those who are put on the payroll are real Democrats. There is one known instance of the job seeking man—only to have it discovered that the man sought had been an ardent Eisenhower supporter. With more than enough all-out Democrats for every job the legislators are not disposed to reward those who depressed part of the way. So applications are being screened not only as to character and ability, but also as to party regularity of the applicants.

PARTISAN — Minority members of the Legislature have exactly the same right to speak and vote as do majority party members, but they are permitted very little voice in organizing the respective houses or in legislative patronage. It is very unlikely that any Republican will be named chairman of a committee or be allowed to nominate a clerk, stenographer or page. That makes rather humorous the question asked by a freshman Republican as to how many pages he would be entitled to name.

ORGANIZATION — For all practical purposes the organization of the two branches will be completed at the party caucuses Tuesday night. Except for the posts of sergeant at arms and reading clerk in the Senate the top personnel can be fairly accurately predicted now. Lieutenant Governor Luther Hodges is constitutional President of the Senate. It is not expected that there will be opposition to Edwin Paton of Scotland as President Prole or Ray Byrley of Sanford as principal clerk. On the House side it seems certain that E.T. Bost Jr., of Cabarrus will be unopposed for Speaker; Mrs. Annie Cooper is sure to be re-elected principal clerk; Ralph Kenner Jr., as reading clerk, and C.W. Cousin Wayland Sprull as sergeant at arms.

CONTESTS — There may be two or three other candidates for the House sergeant at arms post, but Sprull has the full support of the top leadership. The pace is vacant by reason of the death of Fred Pass since the last session. Robert Ransberry, who has been reading clerk in the Senate for several times, is not coming back. Presently that position seems likely to go to Major J.M. White Jr., of Raleigh. There are at least three active candidates for Senate sergeant at arms—Dr. T.C. Johnson, former parole commissioner; Tony Tolson, former commander of the highway patrol, and B.H. Kelly. Paie, who has been an assistant for several sessions and apparently has the inside track now.

DIVERSITY — When Scroop Enloe was sworn in as a member of the Board of Conservation and Development this week one of North Carolina's principal industries got representation on that board for the first time in several years. The statutes provide that members of the board shall be chosen with an eye to the divers-

What Other Papers Are Thinking

WE HAVE HAD TOO MUCH DEVALUATION (Charlotte Observer)

We don't know how much Dr. Meichner Palyi, the Chicago economist, knows about what is in the mind of Winston Churchill. Maybe he does not know anything about what Churchill is thinking.

But, if he does, and if, as Palyi predicts, Churchill suggests to President-elect Eisenhower that the American dollar ought to be devalued for the benefit of England, he should refuse to listen to any such talk. If there is one thing of which we have had more than plenty, it is devaluation of the American dollar. It has been devalued until now it buys only slightly more than half of what it would buy just before Pearl Harbor.

It has been devalued until the person who paid $75 for savings bond in 1942 finds that the $100 he gets for it today will buy much less than the $75 he paid for it. Trying to save this dollar that continually loses value is like saving a snowball in warm weather—the longer you save it, the more it melts, and the less you've got.

If the dollar is devalued any more, every person who is looking forward to his retirement pay or his old-age pension will be cheated. The money he is paying into the retirement fund now will be worth less when he gets it by just the amount the dollar is devalued. Every person who has life insurance will be done out of part of it, because the dollars the beneficiary collects will be worth less than the dollars that the insured paid into it. Everybody who has a savings account will see it melt away at the same rate the dollar is devalued.

These are the people who are cheated by inflation—the investors, the savers, the holders of life insurance, the contributors to retirement pension plans, the buyers of government bonds—the little people who try to lay aside something out of their earnings after taxes. When the money is devalued, the government makes a profit, but the citizen takes a loss.

That has been going on now for 20 years, until the American people have almost forgotten how to save and invest. Naturally Britain would like to us to devalue the dollar again, because Britain would make a profit on what she sells in the United States; but every American citizen would take a loss.

We've taken enough such losses. Since George M. Humphrey, as Secretary of the Treasury, will try to restore the value of our money, he should be helped, instead of hindered.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

The calendar will be pretty good for businessmen in 1953. Only two holidays in addition to Thanksgiving Day split the business week and they are not widely observed as business holidays. They are Lincoln's Birthday, which falls on a Thursday, and Armistice Day, on a Wednesday.

Washington's birthday will be on a Sunday, July 4 on a Saturday, Memorial Day on a Saturday and Christmas on a Friday.

Easter will be a week and a day earlier than this year. Lent begins on February 18 and Easter falls on April 5. The dates this year were February 27 and April 13.

To check volume-calendar ratios, fashion merchants can dig out 1947 figures. Then Easter was on April 6, or 1948 figures, when it was on April 9.

The Fourth of July-Labor Day span—the traditional summer vacation season—is 66 days long in 1953, six days more than this year. That ought to sweeten the profits of hotels, resorts, service stations, oil companies and other beneficiaries of vacation trade. Labor Day falls on September 7. It was on September 1 this year.

With Thanksgiving on November 26 (it was on the 27th this year), the Thanksgiving-to-Christmas shopping season is two days long. Merchants who do not meet year-ago marks in 1953 can't blame the calendar—they'll have to blame the weather.

While next year will have one less than 1952—it is leap year, remember—the fact that so few holidays split weeks ought to more than make up for it in opportunities.

Passover, which was from April 10 to 17 this year, will be from March 31 to April 6 next year, and Yom Kippur, which was on September 29, will be on September 19.

MODEL NUMBER SWITCH STUMPS NO-SALE LOOKER

In many cities large television and appliance stores are bothered by shoppers who come in for demonstrations, take the model number of the item they want, and then go buy it from discount houses or from cut-rate enterprisers whose offices are in their hats.

One store got so tired of serving as a show window for dealers who dodged "fair trade" laws that it covered all serial numbers with code numbers of its own. This has discouraged and confused the no-sale lookers. It hasn't happened yet, but there is the possibility that if a shopper is not aware of the twist he may order a washing machine from a discount house under the impression he is buying a TV set. FTC TAKES SOFTENING CONDITION PROBLEM—The Federal Trade Commission will call a meeting in New York in an effort to untangle the soil-conditioner confusion. The whole idea of soil conditioners is new and no official standards of efficiency—or even ways of measuring effectiveness—have been developed. As a consequence, many quick-buck impresarios have brought out soil conditioners of doubtful efficacy.

Reputable firms are enthusiastic about the FTC meeting and hope it will lead to a set of standards that will winnow out the phonies. The meeting will also take up price rebates and other dealer practices.

SHORT SIGNIFICANT NOTES ON BUSINESS

Electric utilities will increase sales and advertising expenditures 10 to 20 per cent in 1953, the Edison Electric Institute says. Shipments of three major types of gas-operated house heating equipment during the first eleven months of 1952 topped the totals for 1951, the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association reports.

World production of wine this year is estimated at 4,852,000,000 gallons, compared with 5,328,000,000 gallons last year and a pre-war average of 5,151,000,000 gallons. San Franciscans pay higher per capita city taxes of any of the 41 largest cities—$75 a year—Commerce Clearing House calculates. Total magazine advertising revenue this year is estimated at 500,000,000 by the Magazine Advertising Bureau.

HATCHES: A fan-like pulsator, said to take some of the guesswork out of hatching chicks, has been developed by Pterisime & Son, Gettysburg, Ohio. It has four blades, two turning in, two out, which create three types of air movement—centrifugal, push and pull—said to insure a diffused flow of air, giving uniform evaporation on all sides of every egg.

COATS: A liquid coating for hammer handles, said to make grip firmer and prevent instrument from slipping, is being offered by Custanite Corp., Larchmont, N.Y. It's baked and hardened to provide a tough friction surface and is sweat and grease proof.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK (AP)—It is time for our annual fuzzy forecast of what lies ahead in the coming year. Yes, what's to be in '53? It isn't an easy question to answer. The old crystal ball is more clouded than usual this season. However, you can bet right now that:

The Korean police action will change from the present stalemate in which the robbers are arresting the cops.

A new cure for the common cold will be trumpeted in February—and abandoned by April. Most people will decide the best way to get well is to go to bed.

Two new mysterious viruses—"Y" and "Z"—will be discovered for patients who decide virus "X" is no longer either mysterious or fashionable.

As most women will become a year older, the number of blondes will increase remarkably.

Somewhere in Florida a motorist, annoyed by a buzzing in the engine, will lift up the hood of his car—and find an angry rattlesnake coiled to strike. For some reason this has happened somewhere in Florida every year since the invention of the motor car, except in 1927, when it happened somewhere in North Carolina.

In late spring Coach Frank Leahy will announce the football situation at Notre Dame is hopeless. His team will end the 1953 season undefeated, untied, hailed as one of the greatest in history.

A new kind of cheap frozen food, palatable to both man and dog, will be developed. This will enable more wives to take the kids on summer vacations, secure in the knowledge that back home their husband and the family pet will be able to fix an easy meal they can enjoy together.

The cost of living will rise slightly, and so will skirts. So will men's interest.

Interest in economy will pick up markedly in both government and private life. One sign will be a new article of feminine apparel marketed by a budget-minded designer—a lady's hat that can also be used as a handbag.

The literary world will be flooded by the published memoirs of 1,312 ex-Democratic officeholders, all giving the "Only True Inside Story" of what has been going on in Washington.

Some 1,312 new Republican officeholders will begin keeping secret diaries as an investment against the day of their own unemployment.

The calls for a cut in taxes will become louder, but remain as academic as ever. Five cities will adopt a municipal income tax, but reject attempts to force the licensing of cats.

The five-cent hot dog will remain a memory; the 10-cent hot dog will grow no larger.

A slowly falling birth rate plus an increase in the number of teenagers and even more elderly people will result in a sharp price war among baby sitters. It's the old problem of supply outrunning demand.

As more women take jobs now held by men, the "movement" for equal rights will be launched. The organization will hire a lady public relations expert.

And the average human being in 1953 will go right on holding his job, living in faith with those he loves—and desperately hoping that no one will blow apart the little world that, for all its faults and failures, is the best world he knows.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—The welcome mat is out for the half-million visitors expected to attend the inauguration of President-elect Eisenhower Jan. 20. Committees working day and night are preparing to take care of everything from lost children, broken bones, housing, feeding and protection from rackets to showing the folks an all-round good time.

Hospitality and housing committees have been set up to provide information and find lodging for the visitors. Residents of the city are offering rooms in their homes and apartments for those who haven't hotel reservations. It is expected some 30,000 beds outside hotels will be needed.

A "rocket squad" is working to protect the public against schemes to use the inaugural KYP the unwary. A medical aid committee is readying to provide first aid stations, roving ambulances and services to care for any emergency.

In the entertainment line something is planned almost every hour for the inauguration. The average American and his family, for the young and old. Some things will cost money. A lot of things are free. You have to have an invite to get into some parties. Some are open to anyone.

Highlight of the official entertaining for Sunday, Jan. 18, will be the reception at a hotel for governors of states and distinguished guests between 3:30 and 5 p.m. There will be music by the U.S. Marine Band orchestra and non-alcoholic beverages with cookies and sandwiches will be served. This is by invitation only.

Anyone with $5 can take the tour of the embassies of Brazil, Great Britain, Norway, Korea and the Apostolic Delegation. Proceeds go to the National Symphony Orchestra which will give a gala concert at Constitution Hall, an inaugural feature of some years standing.

Washington's cultural and historical aspects will be highlighted Monday, Jan. 19, in a daytime program, with special tours to historic sites, museums, art galleries and government buildings, including the Capitol. Rivaling the spectacular inaugural ball, which closes the festivities Jan. 20, will be Monday night's big festival, with stars of the Metropolitan Opera, stage, screen, radio and TV. Tickets for this range from $2.50 to $10, plus tax, and boxes seating six will be sold for $120 including tax.

The parade after the inaugural ceremonies is free except for those who want to sit down and pay from $2 up. The Inaugural Ball, to be held that night at the National Guard Armory, is by invitation only.

Sunday School Supper Schedule Friday Night

GRIFTON—Officers and interested members of Free Will Baptist Sunday Schools of Pitt county will hold a regular fellowship supper here Friday night. The meeting will be held in the Grifton High School Cafeteria. It is sponsored by the Elm Grove Women's Auxiliary, Rev. Rashie Kennedy, pastor of the Greenville Free Will Baptist Church, announced today. William Humbles is superintendent of Elm Grove Sunday School.

The program includes a forum discussion, "How We Can Increase Our Attendance at Sunday School," Dr. F. B. Cherry, editor of the Free Will Baptist Press, of Ayden, will lead the discussion. Rev. Raymond Sasser, president of the State Sunday School Convention, will use as his subject, "Your Sunday School and You." The program also includes group singing.

Kennedy said the "fellowship supper" plan new in Pitt county, and it has been of value to Sunday School groups in other counties of Eastern Carolina. The meeting at Grifton was planned last September by Rev. Mr. Kennedy, Raymond T. Sasser, S.P. Kennedy, Dr. Cherry, Stephen Walters, superintendent of the Greenville Sunday School, and James Mills.

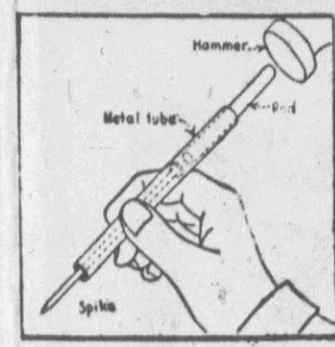

Sunday schools expected to be represented at the meeting here are: Greenville, Elm Grove, Ayden, Black Jack, Gum Swamp, King's Cross Roads, Marlboro, Parker's Chapel, Pleasant Hill, Sweet Gum Grove, Winterville, Reedy Branch, Bethany, Piney Grove, Arthur, Iida's Grove and Hickory Grove.

Sunday School workers who plan to attend the fellowship supper should notify Mrs. E. B. Murphy at Grifton or Rev. Rashie Kennedy in Greenville.

fied resources of the State, but it has been a long time since the non-metallic mineral industry has been represented—although it constitutes one of the major natural resources of North Carolina. Mica, feldspar and ceramic clays produced in Western North Carolina contribute greatly to the world supplies of these essential items. Besides affording representation for this important segment of State enterprise, the appointment of Enloe to replace Dr. Locke Robinson, who has been virtually inactive since coming on the board in 1949, means practically the filling of a long time vacancy.

IMPORTANT — In many ways the Department of Conservation and Development is, or should be, the most important agency of the State. It has been handicapped ever since it was first set up in 1925 by the several governors using it as a political football. Governors McLean, Gardner, Ehringhaus and Hoey advocated overlapping staggered terms for board members. Governor Broughton asked to have all appointments terminated at one time. Governor Cherry went back to staggered schedule which Governor Scott continued. Previous executives gave more careful thought to distributing membership on basis of diversified interests than did Governor Scott. The record will show that appointment by all previous Governors were better in the last half of their administrations, when the zest of rewarding "friends" and punishing "enemies" had cooled. So it is that near the end of his tenure Governor Scott is getting around to recognizing and obeying the statutory mandate for diversified membership with regard to interests other than how the appointees might have voted in the primary and election.

Notes Interest In Better Roads

W.S. Stafford, General Motors Community Relations Chairman in the area, reported this morning that much interest was being shown in the General Motors Better Highways Awards contest.

"We have had hundreds of inquiries about the contest since it was first announced November 11," he said, "and it looks like the people in Greenville are really interested in seeing that something is done to improve our highway and traffic situation not only in Greenville but in Pitt County, the state and nation as well."

Stafford said some persons who had shown interest in entering an essay expressed concern they were not enough of an expert on highways to submit an entry that would have a chance of winning one of the many cash awards which total $194,000 nationally.

"It isn't at all necessary to be a highway authority to write a good essay," Stafford said, "General Motors is interested in getting fresh ideas from everybody on what they think should be done to get us out of our present highway muddle. They are looking for sound and original ideas on not only how this job should be done but how it should be financed. Essays will definitely not be judged on literary merit."

The contest, which closes March 1, is open to any resident of the United States except contest judges and their immediate family. The essay subject is "How to Plan and Pay for the Safe and Adequate Roads We Need".

Complete details on the contest and entry blanks can be obtained at the following: Stafford Oldsmobile Company; Folger Buick Company; White Chevrolet Company; and Brown-Wood Company.

Wanderlust Is Abetted By Travel Bureau Clerks

By ADELAIDE KERR
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK — Nearly every traveler has a story to tell. And 15 million have told theirs to the Travelers Aid of New York.

In the teeming railway stations, but terminals and piers of America's largest city, they have poured out their stories to Travelers Aid workers, who give a neighborly help to strangers who are in transit and in trouble.

There was the feverish 10-year-old who had taken one look at his report card departed from home in haste in his Hopalong Cassidy boots. There was the terrified French war flance left waiting at the dock by her boy friend who had married another girl the day before and asked Travelers Aid to explain things. There was the little Italian immigrant who sat five days and nights in a station, hugging a valise containing his lifetime savings of $23,000 in cash and waiting for "a good boat" to Naples.

Every year brings a new crop of troubled travelers — trembling old ladies who have lost their bags, shuttling soldiers and their wives, frightened D.P.s, runaway youngsters and eager beavers who leave home without enough cash. Travelers Aid workers give them counsel and help regardless of color, citizenship or creed.

108 Agencies Now Working
The Travelers Aid Society of New York is the largest of the 108 city agencies now linked in the national Travelers Aid Association. All are self-governed by local boards and all supported by private contribution.

Travelers Aid started in St. Louis in 1851, when Mayor Brian Mulvaney left his fortune to help Gold Rush migrants. The work is now carried on in 40 states. The New York agency was started 47 years ago and grew to its present staff of 100 as it met a long series of travel crises caused by wars, the depression and the influx of D.P.s.

"Now we are busy with the biggest peace-time travel we can remember," says David Haynes, director of the New York agency. "And it seems to be growing. Last year we gave our services to 121,101 people — the largest number in any peacetime year."

Help for Service Men
Travelers Aid has helped thousands of soldiers, sailors and their brides. One was a teen-age sailor who went AWOL from a naval training camp because he was told he would have to swim and was scared of water. He showed up in civilian clothes at the TA booth in Pennsylvania station and told a fancy tale of having lost his money, while looking for a job. TA workers soon found out the facts and persuaded him to go back to camp—and learn to swim.

Last year the New York agency helped 384 runaway youngsters. There was a spunky eight-year-old girl, who made up her mind to run away, but made the mistake of bringing her two-year-old brother along. By the time they reached New York brother decided he wanted no more of the adventure. His loud howls brought his determined chaperone to the Travelers Aid desk with the request that they care for junior until he stopped crying. Then, "Send him to me in Mexico." TA sent them both home.

Report card time always brings a rush of runaways. Two young Staten Island residents about nine years old, decided to hit the open road last mid-term and streamed into Pennsylvania station in full regalia. But they mistook the TA booth for the ticket window, pushed an odd assortment of change across the counter and growled: "Hey, lady, give us two tickets to Oklahoma." They wound up at home too.

Radio Give-Away Lure Many
Lots of teen-agers come to New York with barely enough cash to get here, hoping to strike it rich on a give-away radio program. TA ships home one of these about every week. Lucy was one. She said she was 17, but she was really only 12. Her father had given her $60 in Detroit and sent her on her way with words, "Well, Lucy, it's going to be tough, but good luck!" Since her father had not expected her to come back, TA found a suitable foster home for her.

Then there are the thousands who leave home and leave behind the address of their destination. One old woman arrived with the address of her sister scribbled on a crumpled paper, but no one could read it. TA workers combed Brooklyn for days in an effort to find it. Finally the old lady said the right address was at home in her bag under the mattress in a certain room in a certain Florida town. TA had a cooperating agency find it and eventually landed the lost lady in the right spot.

Eskimo Scouts Guard Asia Approach In Never-Ending Vigil Against Danger

(Written for AP Newsfeatures) TENT CITY, Fort Richardson, Alaska — At villages along the Alaska coast and on islands in the Bering Sea a race of hardy men are guarding the vital approaches to our northern defenses.

The story of their devotion to a nation most of them have never seen was revealed at the annual 15-day trafficking encampment of the Alaska National Guard.

The men are the Eskimo Scouts. Their job — security of a vast territory ringed by ice-laden seas on the threshold to Asia.

These scouts report ship movements and aircraft seen in the vicinity of their villages, investigate the presence of strangers in their Arctic land and assist in rescues. For much of their work they are unpaid and unknown except to those military offices who rely on them for information and security.

so we decided to hike 60 miles of the arctic at North East Cape. We planned for two weeks and then started out. We always chip in when something has to be done for the benefit of our village and our participation in the encampment was something all villagers considered important."

He told how 13 civilians volunteered to accompany the dog teams on the two-night trek through mountains. It snowed as they set out in sleds loaded with duffel and equipment, then began to rain. Long after midnight they found themselves pushing the sleds over rocks and sand, long unnamed peaks. During the second night crack shot Pfc. Leslie Immungun spotted and killed a seal with one shot from his .25-35 rifle. (Scouts are equipped with Model 1903 Army rifles but prefer their own weapons for hunting.)

ESKIMOS of the First Scout Battalion, Alaska National Guard, take to Army chow.

Hunters On the Watch

As the Eskimo guardsmen hunt and fish they criss-cross the tundra and the coastal waters. The fisherman seeking halibut and sculpin, or seals, is on constant alert. Hunting parties in quest of caribou, polar bear and walrus serve as irregular patrols against uninvited intruders. Nothing escapes the notice of the Eskimo hunter.

Each passing plane is reported by "mukluk telegraph" until it reaches the proper authority. Rifle shots heard by Selawik guardsmen, near Nome, launched a search on an ice-laden river to find and rescue a severely ill woman and her two daughters. The same unit received commendation for saving their village last autumn by volunteering to fight a forest fire.

Dogs Will Meet Plane

"When we get back to Nome on the Air Force C-119 I will send a message to Savoonga and the villagers will get the dogs and go to meet us wherever we land in the C-47 shuttle plane," Lt. Gologergen said.

Then he told how the villagers lock over guard duty while the scouts went "y" camp. Guards are on duty around the clock at posts ranging up to eight miles from the village. They demonstrate again the Eskimo's eagerness to work, their ability to survive and fight, in the Arctic.

other town without incident. All guard members of Napaskiak were rounded up and "executed" with blank ammunition to demonstrate the success of the raid.

Scouts Disprove Skeptics

Within a relatively short time the scouts have proven themselves against critics who had declared the Eskimo would not eat Army food and accept discipline.

"The Alaska National Guard is the best thing in the world for native Alaskans," says Capt. (Chaplain) Percy Lipalook of Kotzebue. "The discipline acquired by guardsmen during training is wonderful. They are as good soldiers as any commanding officer would want."

Professional Soldiers at Fort Richardson have high praise for the scouts. Companies of the First Scout Battalion present at the camp represented men from Barrow, Nome, St. Lawrence Island, and other widely scattered Alaska towns. For some it was their first visit to a city or a large military post.

How to Shoot Seals

"I wait by the seal hole where he comes up to breathe. Sometimes it is a long wait before you hear the first cautious breath. The vent in the ice is very tiny and the seal cannot be seen when he breathes I move. He cannot hear me because he is breathing, so my timing must be exact. A seal breathes eight or nine times before he dives again so I have to move fast. I point my rifle at the thin ice and fire down when he breathes again, then plunge my barbed seal hook into him and pull him up."

Scouts Disprove Skeptics

Within a relatively short time the scouts have proven themselves against critics who had declared the Eskimo would not eat Army food and accept discipline.

But Some Have Traveled

Others, from tiny isolated villages, amazed local military personnel by revealing that they were accomplished travelers. One of these is Second Lt. Timothy Gologergen, commanding officer of the First Scout Battalion units located at St. Lawrence Island, in World War II Lt. Gologergen traveled around the world as an enlisted man in the Army, returning to his island home to become one of three school teachers in the town of Savoonga (population: 200 families).

How well hunting stealth fits in with Army training is told by Maj. Raymond E. Johnson, Army instructor, Second Scout Battalion, with headquarters at Bethel. (diphtheria epidemic in the Kuskokwim River area prevented the Second Scout Battalion from attending the encampment.)

Bulgarian Army Officer Skips

ATHENS (AP)—A Bulgarian army officer has surrendered himself to a Greek frontier post, telling the guards that "Communist terrorism" forced him to flee his homeland.

The officer also confirmed reports of growing Bulgarian military strength along the Greek and Turkish frontiers, characterizing the Bulgarian forces as under domination of Soviet officers.

Last Rites Held For T. M. Grant

ROCKY MOUNT, N. C. (AP)—Methodist leaders from all over North Carolina attended funeral services here today for Dr. T. M. Grant, for nearly 45 years a minister and official of the North Carolina Conference.

Dr. Grant, 66, died of a heart attack at his home Tuesday night. At the time of his death he was pastor of the First Methodist Church, a post he had held since 1947.

The funeral was held at First Church, with Bishop Paul N. Gardner of Richmond in charge. Assisting was the Rev. James F. Herbst, superintendent of the Rocky Mount Methodist district. Burial followed in Pineview Cemetery.

Dr. Grant had held a number of pastorates and high posts in the Eastern conference. He had been secretary of the conference since 1925. He also was a trustee of Duke University, Louisiana College and East Carolina College.

'Man Of The Year' Figures Future Too Good To Miss

By JAMES MARLOW WASHINGTON (AP)—That man of the year, the Little Man, any guy trying to sit out New Year's Eve quietly, finished reading his paper and leaned back. He could hear his wife in the kitchen with the dishes.

"The least I could do is help her dry them," he thought. It was a nice thought. He had the same thought practically every night. He never did anything about it. But he felt better for having had it.

He reached over to turn on the TV and then didn't. Later, this was going to be a noisy night. He'd turn it on around midnight so he could look at the mobs in the night clubs, blowing horns.

He always liked to sit back and watch other people perform. He had done plenty of performing himself on other New Year's Eves. That seemed a long time ago. Not so long. Just a few years. Well, why not this year?

Maybe it was because he was a little older. He got up and looked in the mirror. Not much older. At least not that much older. He could still parade around if he wanted to. But this time he was glad he was home.

"Why don't you turn on the machine?" his wife said. "I'll be in a minute." He said, "All right," and turned on the TV switch. Some people guessing about a man in a mask. He didn't feel like guessing. He turned the dial.

Cowboys. He liked one thing about cowboys. All you had to do was figure out who was good and who was bad and you knew which side would win. It made him feel like an author. He wished everything else was that easy.

Being a cowboy might have been rough, he said to the cowboys, but I bet it wasn't as rough as just living through the past 20 years. The cowboys ignored him. He toned them down a bit.

Suddenly all the cowboys on one side began dropping as the marksmanship on the other side improved. He felt pretty healthy himself, he thought. He was glad he had some time left.

"I wouldn't want to miss these next few years," he said to himself.

He had lived through the depression, through the New Deal, the "Fair Deal," the big war, and now once again everybody was armed, alert for a shot that would start another war, hoping it wouldn't come.

He felt grateful to Franklin Roosevelt for all he had done, and to Harry Truman for all he had done or tried to do, and as for Gen. Eisenhower he wished him well. "I sure do wish him well," he thought. "My life's wrapped up in his."

As for himself in the next four years he knew he wasn't going to set the world afire. It wasn't because he didn't think he had any matches left, or that he never had any to begin with.

He just wanted to live a quiet, peaceful life. Somebody else could try for the championship. All I can do is the best I can, and hope for the best, he told the cowboy who was just saying goodbye to the girl.

He could hear his wife turn off the kitchen light-switch. She'd be in a second. Here come the arguments over which station, he thought. He had a whole new year of arguments coming up.

Can Still Obtain Flipper Dough

PROVINCETOWN, MASS. (AP)—For 15 cents you can buy a pound of flipper dough in Provincetown—at the tip of Cape Cod.

If you go into the old bakeshop which advertises, "we have flipper dough today," and ask what it is, you'll be told "It's dough to fry; you fry it in a pan; regular bread dough." It turns out to be the "fried dough" of New England tradition — served in cruller-shaped bits — piping hot with maybe a sprinkling of sugar.

But why do they call it "flipper dough?" Maybe because it's flipped over like a pancake in frying, but nobody is quite sure.

Michigan State has been represented by at least one member on every U. S. Olympic team since 1928.

A LITTLE KNOWLEDGE

DES MOINES, Ia. (UP)—Fort Madison Penitentiary Warden Percy Lalinson said recently that a convict must "think right" to benefit from rehabilitation programs. "A lot of men learn welding in prison and get good jobs when they're released," he explained. "But one man who wasn't thinking right took his knowledge of welding up to Minnesota and cut a hole in a safe."

Early Draft For Few 19-Year-Olds

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina Selective Service director says very few if any Tar Heel 19-year-olds will be drafted for service in the near future.

Col. Thomas Upton said yesterday that most county selective service boards have enough men in older categories to handle quotas for some time. He added that because of this boards will not have to draft men under 20 "in the foreseeable future."

National Selective Service headquarters last week gave the green light for the drafting of 19-year-olds to fill upcoming calls.

At Charlotte, a spokesman for the Mecklenburg Selective Service Board said if draft calls continue at their present rate, 21-year-old men will be called in January and February, with the 20-year-old group to be tapped probably in March.

The Army has issued a call for 83,000 new draftees in February.

Church Robber Has An Answer

ATHENS (AP)—A smart thief has so far eluded the police after looting the parish boxes of 15 churches throughout the city.

After St. John's Church, became victim No. 15 the priest removed all the money and put it in his office. He substituted in the box a note which asked: "Don't you fear God?" Inspecting the box next morning, the priest found that the thief had made a return visit. He also found his answer: "God has enough to eat. I don't."

State Drubs Brigham Young 75-59 In Classic Finals

N. C. State Gains Prestige Tourney Favorites Advance

By JOHN GRIFFIN
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (UP)—The Oklahoma Aggies and North Carolina State boosted their already high basketball prestige today as they took home championships from the All-College holiday tournament and the Dixie Classic tourney.

Both clubs, favored from the start, captured their titles last night, the Aggies squeaking to a 51-49 victory over surprising Idaho in the All-College finals at Oklahoma City and N. C. State rallying to blast Brigham Young, 75-59, at Raleigh, N. C.

Other big games last night saw Marquette upset Minnesota, the nation's sixth-ranked team, 70-59; Wake Forest upset 10th-ranked Holy Cross, 91-69; and 13th-ranked Notre Dame cruise to a 62-57 win over Northwestern.

The Oklahoma Aggies just barely made it for their 10th triumph in the All-College carnival. Idaho, a surprise club all the way in the 17th renewal of the classic, just missed tying when Bruce McInosh's final-gun shot missed fire. Idaho led at the half, 30-26, but the Aggies caught up and went two ahead at the end of the third period.

Bob Mattick of the Aggies, who are ranked seventh nationally, was high scorer in the game with 19 points while Hartly Kruger had 13 for Idaho.

Brigham Young, ranked 18th nationally, appeared on the way to an upset over ninth-ranked North Carolina State early in the third period of their final round game. The Cougars jumped to a seven-point lead at that point but then made the mistake of trying to out run the Wolfpack, a racehorse club. N. C. State caught up to lead, 48-44, at the end of the third period and then breezed home. Big Bob Speight led State with 25 points while Hal Christensen had 14 for BYU.

Wake Forest's surprise conquest of Holy Cross came in the third-place game in the Dixie Classic. Jack Williams tossed in 25 points to lead the Deacons while the Crusaders, obviously weary from their twopoint loss to N. C. State the previous night, showed only Togo Palazzi, who tallied 26.

Minnesota, which had beaten Michigan State impressively 24 hours earlier, just couldn't stop Marquette's Bob Van Vooren and Russ Wittberger, who tallied 29 and 24 points respectively. Mar-

Speight, Tyler Lead Wolfpack To Victory

Wake Forest Pulls Upset Of Tourney By Defeating Holy Cross 91-69

RALEIGH, (UP)—The North Carolina State Wolfpack was still "unbeatable" and still champion today of the Dixie Basketball Classic.

Tougher than nails to chew at tournament time on its home hardwood, the Wolfpack won its fourth consecutive Classic crown last night—every one since the Classic started new rests in the N. C. State trophy case. The team mauled a fine Brigham Young squad 75-59.

The three-game Dixie Classic sweep ran State Coach Everett N. Case's record to 32 victories in 33 tournament games in North Carolina.

State swept past Princeton 87 to 63, then dumped previously unbeaten Wake Forest 6 to 74 in the Classic's closest thriller.

In the finals, the Wolfpack used its fast-break and running game to roar from behind in the second half to overwhelm Brigham Young.

For a while it looked like the Cougars from Provo, Utah, would be the first team ever to defeat State in the Classic the brain-child of gray-haired Case.

A shifting defense coupled with tight control of the backboards by tall Nick Mateljan and Boyd Jarman had the Pack confused on attack. As the buzzer sounded at halftime Brigham Young was in front 34-30.

Brigham Young went ahead by eight points to start the third period. Then Case pulled cat-quick Dickie Tyler off the bench and Tyler's poise and ball-handling gave the Pack the start it needed.

Lanky forward Bobby Speight, Guard Dave Gotkin and center Mel Thompson knocked down the Cougar lead on feeds and rebounds by

Eight Bowl Games Today Football Is Jan. 1 Feature

By UNITED PRESS
College football ushers in the New Year today with a selection of eight bowl games topped by "the daddy of 'em all," the Rose Bowl, in which a crowd estimated at 103,000 will see Southern California, champion of the Pacific Conference, oppose Wisconsin champion of the Big 10.

With the weatherman expected to cooperate everywhere except in New Orleans, where Georgia Tech and Mississippi meet in the Sugar Bowl, approximately 400,000 fans were expected to be on hand for the eight games.

In addition, the Rose, Sugar, Cotton and Orange Bowl games will be nationally televised, the Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla., will be broadcast nationally and carried on regional television and the Sun, Salad and Tangerine bowls will be broadcast regionally. No game is completely blacked out.

The main interest, nationally, centers on Pasadena, Calif., where defense-minded, once-beaten Southern California attempts to end the Big 10's six-year domination of the Pacific Conference with a victory over Wisconsin. Southern Cal, upset by Notre Dame in its final game of the regular season, will rule a seven-point favorite when the teams take the field at 5 p. m. (e. s. t.) under clear skies.

Wisconsin, beaten twice and tied once, has designed its strategy to score early in the hope of applying pressure on Southern Cal's relatively weaker offense.

The Gator Bowl's attraction pitted Tulsa, most potent offensive team in the land statistically, against a strong Florida eleven which was favored by seven points. A crowd of about 30,000 was expected to view the game in cool, cloudy weather.

College of Pacific and Mississippi Southern were rated "even" in their Sun Bowl game at El Paso, Tex., before an estimated 15,000; San Diego Naval opposed 101st Airborne Division in the Salad Bowl at Phoenix, Ariz., and East Texas State faced Tennessee Tech in the Tangerine Bowl at Orlando, Fla.

Down the Stretch! Pitt County '53 Basketball Slate Opens Friday Night

HERMAN HICKMAN
Reflector Sports Editor

Pitt County bucketeers begin the second chapter of the 1952-53 basketball season almost before the new year can pin on its diaper.

Friday night, Jan. 2, all nine of Pitt's county school teams swing into action on the hardwood courts. This second drive will extend until February 13 and the Pitt County Tournament will be held in the Wright building at East Carolina College Feb. 16-21.

Winterville, rated the conference "dark horse" at the beginning of the season, invades Chocoid for a pair of games that should provide some excellent cage entertainment. The Winterville lassies are currently riding a string of 10 consecutive victories without a defeat. Six of these in conference play.

The Ayden Tornadoes, presently undefeated, play host to Walstonburg. The Tornadoes set themselves up as first ball leaders of the county by downing top challengers Winterville and Bethel in close contests.

Grimesland's short, fast breaking team pits its speed and agility against a slower but much rangier Farmville quint in a pair of contests at the Farmville gym.

Belvoir engages last year's Pitt County champions, the Bethel Indians, in Bethel.

For the first time in several years Bethel is second seeded in the county conference. Many county coaches are expecting Walter Latham's Indians to stage an all-out comeback try in the second stanza of the season.

Stokes will play host to Robersonville in a basketball double bill. The Stokes lassies has one of the finest teams in the county and have lost

Sugar Bowl Will Be Full Of Mud

NEW ORLEANS—(UP)—Mississippi, a team that likes to play the role of a giant killer, sent its powerful offensive-minded Rebels against unbeaten and untied Georgia Tech in the 19th annual Sugar Bowl football classic today before a capacity crowd of 81,000.

The weather bureau forecast sunny skies and moderate winds for the 1 p. m. (c. s. t.) kickoff and sent Rebel supporters' hopes soaring for an upset victory over Tech's Rambling Wreck.

It was doubtful, however, that the turf in Sugar Bowl Stadium would be as dry as the prancing Rebels, who are playing their first Sugar Bowl engagement, would prefer it. A heavy rain that deluged New Orleans this week flooded the field and left it deep in mud.

The Rebels, who scored 24 points per game and picked up nearly 400 yards per contest, need dry footing for the tricky split-T operation of quarterback Jimmy Lear and the flashy traveling of scatback Wilson Dillard and Dick Westerman, and the punching of fullback Harold Lotton.

Too, Coach Johnny Vaught, a student of Southwestern Conference football where it's played wide open, was expected to mix a lot of single wing, and spreads with his split-T operation.

A muddy field would up Tech's role of favorite more than the seven and one-half points given it on the strength of its terrific defensive record—rated the second best in the nation.

"The Engineers from Atlanta, who haven't been beaten in 25 games, will have to rely primarily on their great defensive team, which held opponents to a total of 52 points in 11 games the past season, to keep their record intact.

Coach Bobby Dodd's Yellow Jackets, making their second appearance here, aren't lacking in offensive might, but it has been blunted to a degree by injuries to key men, suffered in late season encounters.

Bob Sherman, the big tackle who blocked two punts in Tech's biggest victory of the season over Duke, will not be able to play at all. The others will start, but they may not be as effective as Dodd would want.

They are Leon Hardeman, Billy Teas and Larry Ruffin, key backfield aces, who have missed the

The Umpire Was Right After All

NEW YORK (UP)—Maybe Umpire Art Passarella was right after all in his disputed call at first base in that thrilling fifth game of the World Series.

The official Series films, previewed Tuesday at least were inconclusive. They showed Dodger first baseman Gil Hodges reaching for the ball and Yankee base runner Johnny Sain streaking into the bag. There was no shot of the ball at all and the assumption was that it might have been in Hodges' mitt, which would vindicate Passarella, who called Sain out and touched off an explosion of an argument.

Newspaper pictures, shot at an angle, had indicated Passarella made a bad call since Sain appeared to be in well ahead of the ball.

Law Fonseca, a former Chicago White Sox infielder, again supervised the filming of the classic in which 24,000 feet of film were taken and edited into 3,000 feet. More than 15,000,000 fans are expected to see the pictures with the two major leagues sponsoring the development of 700 separate reels for troops overseas, clubs, boys' groups, and charitable institutions.

The films depict such dramatic highlights as the Yogi Berra passed ball incident in the third game, the spectacular catches by Dodger outfielders and the catch by Yankee second baseman Billy Martin of Jackie Robinson's wind-blown pop fly in the final game.

Because of a Reversed Decision Prize Fighter Files Suit Against Ring Commissioner

By JACK CUDDY
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (UP)—One of the first attention-commanders of 1953 will be the suit freshly on file today against crusader Bob Christenberry, who was sent in by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to "clean up or close up boxing in New York state."

Middleweight Joey Giardello of Philadelphia filed the suit late Wednesday in the supreme court of New York County against Chairman Christenberry and his fellow boxing Commissioners Dr. Cillian B. Powell and Leon Swears.

Also named in the action was welterweight Billy Graham of New York, who fought Giardello at Madison Square Garden on Dec. 19. Voting of the referee and two judges gave Giardello victory on a split decision. But 29 minutes later the commission changed the card of Judge Joe Agnello and reversed the decision to give victory to Graham.

Giardello charges in his suit that the commission exceeded its authority when it reversed the decision of its legally appointed ring officials, and he petitions the court to annul the commission's verdict and reinstate Giardello as winner.

The official Series films, previewed Tuesday at least were inconclusive. They showed Dodger first baseman Gil Hodges reaching for the ball and Yankee base runner Johnny Sain streaking into the bag. There was no shot of the ball at all and the assumption was that it might have been in Hodges' mitt, which would vindicate Passarella, who called Sain out and touched off an explosion of an argument.

Newspaper pictures, shot at an angle, had indicated Passarella made a bad call since Sain appeared to be in well ahead of the ball.

The brief emphasizes that the Supreme Court decided on June 2, in the famous Youngstown case, that the President's order for seizure must be nullified.

Executives must be governed by law, the paper emphasizes, and law must be made by parliamentary deliberations. It stresses that the commission can make administrative rules, but it cannot violate or change the laws themselves. The commission must be governed by law until the legislature changes it.

No damages are mentioned in the suit.

Christenberry and his cohorts have until Jan. 12 to answer.

Horse Racing Has Biggest Betting Season Ever

NEW YORK (UP)—The staggering sum of $1,921,561,655 was bet on the horses in 23 racing states during 1952 to make the year the biggest in the history of thoroughbred racing, a United Press survey revealed today.

The betting boom, which started at the winter tracks in Florida, Louisiana and California, lasted throughout the entire year as almost every section of the country reported increases over 1951 parimutuel totals and helped carry the grand total well beyond the previous record of $1,794,386,668 wagered in 1946.

And while other sports reported declines in attendance during the year, racing reached near-record heights in popularity. The 26,816,571 fans who attended 2,753 racing programs topped the 23,990,881 of a year ago but fell slightly behind the 26,834,218 persons who visited a race track in 1946.

The 1952 betting total was $317,864,297 greater than the $1,603,697,358 of last year, an increase of 19.8 per cent, while the 2,855,696 additional fans represented an increase of 11.9 per cent over 1951.

Additional racing and larger crowds only partially explained the record high in betting. Each bettor at a race track in 1952 wagered an average $71.60 daily while the per capita daily bet in 1951 was only $66.90.

New York once again led the list with $382,131,856 in betting and 4,545,331 persons in attendance. California was second with $312,385,816 and 4,407,910; New Jersey third in betting with $228,553,665 but fourth in attendance with 2,447,319; Illinois fourth in betting with $186,676,068 and third in attendance with 2,800,125; and Florida fifth in each with $140,133,517 and 1,551,669 persons.

Jake Lamotta Is Floored For First Time In Career

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (UP)—A jubilant Danny Nardico, the first fighter ever to floor rough, tough Jake LaMotta, said today he believes he's now in line for a shot at new light-heavyweight champion Archie Moore.

Nardico, an ex-Marine with a wallop like a bazooka, decked LaMotta in the seventh round of their nationally televised bout Wednesday night with one of his patented overhand right smashes.

"That's something such a great slugger as Ray Robinson, Irish Bob Murphy, Marcel Cerdan, and Fritz Zivic were unable to do. Robinson gave Bronx Jake one of the bloodiest batterings in ring history back on Feb. 11, 1951 when he took away Jake's middleweight crown, but LaMotta never was off his feet.

Nardico, taller and thinner than the Bronx Bull, was comfortably in front when he suddenly nailed Jake with a left-hand bomb on the cheekbone midway in the seventh round. LaMotta stopped dead in his tracks and swayed. A right smash to the jaw bent Jake over and another dropped him on all fours as the crowd of 3,318 howled.

Jake got up at eight to save himself from the first counted-out kayo of his career. And for more than a minute of incredible pounding by dynamite Danny, LaMotta stood up pinned and helpless in a corner, holding himself up by the top rope strand. He was still on his feet when the bell rang, but he just couldn't come out for the eighth and it was all over.

"I understood that the winner of this fight would get a shot at Archie Moore, and I would like that one very much," said Nardico in his dressing room.

LaMotta, his battered face crimson on the surface and black and blue underneath, sat glumly in his dressing room and ignored most questions.

Someone asked him how it feels to get floored for the first time in 104 professional fights.

"What do you think?" snapped back Jake.

Nardico certainly seemed much improved over recent performances for this, the first Florida fight ever to be nationally televised. The Tampa, Fla., slugger, ranked fifth in the world in the light-heavy division, weighed 177 pounds to LaMotta's 173.

Chapter 13

He showed her where the stationery was kept, and she sat down at her desk. He stood looking down at her for a moment, loving her sweet, fresh simplicity; then suddenly he leaned on the desk and took her hand, ignoring her smiling protest that she had work to do.

"Have you told anyone about us?" he said.

"I told my mother. Well, not really told; — was provoked into telling her."

"That's all right," he said quickly. "She has a right to know. Anthea, don't let Bianca know."

Her glance was puzzled, a little troubled. She would not have discussed her feelings with Bianca in any case.

"I know it sounds odd," he said, "and I suppose it is. We're an odd household. Bianca has been with us so long, and she has always been very good to me. I'm very fond of her. But she's a menace where her own sex is concerned. I often wonder if one of my father's marriages might have been permanent if Bianca hadn't interfered. She made their lives unbearable, undermining them and interfering with them in a hundred petty ways."

"I can understand that," she said. "I mean I can understand him putting up with it. . . . She's part of his youth. But she has nothing to do with you. . . . me."

"I know. And I wouldn't put up with me, sweetheart. She's a queer with it. But she doesn't work for creature, she'd give her life for us, but she is unconsciously jealous. If she thought we were in love and or going to be married, she'd see about making your life miserable."

Anthea's heart gave a queer little lurch.

"Are we?" she said.

He glanced at her quickly, the blue eyes watchful and guarded though his arm was still round her shoulders, and his lips very near to hers. "Did you hear me?" he said lightly, and straightened up, saying wryly, "I thought a proposal was something you worked up to. I didn't think it would creep up and catch me unawares like that."

Anthea put a carbon and copy sheet behind a piece of paper and screwed it into her machine. She knew that Joe was standing watching her, with that half-smile on his face, and her cheeks were crimson and her eyes full of tears. She said furiously, "I'll forget what you said. In fact, you didn't say it."

He said coolly, "And what do you mean by that? That you don't love me, and you don't want to marry me?"

She stared at the shorthand notes on the back of the first letter, but the words swam lazily together, and her fingers on the keys seemed to be covered with thick woolen gloves, fumbling and slipping idiotically. She stopped, and looked up at him, her brown eyes bright and defiant, her lips trembling.

"I didn't say that, and I didn't mean that," she said. She thrust her hands under the desk to hide their trembling. The whole afternoon, which had begun so successfully, seemed intense, charged with emotion. She stumbled on, hating him and hating herself. Downstairs they heard Mario's deep voice shouting for Joe to come and drive him into town.

"You made it sound as if I were angling for marriage," she choked, "and I utterly despise that sort of thing. I think it's better for a woman never to marry rather than to take the second best. If love is only one side then it's better that marriage should never be spoken of between lovers. Possession of someone you love is not worth having at any price, but only when there's no question of price. . . . when it's equal, and spontaneous, and. . . ." She began to stammer, her sudden angry eloquence falling her. She finished lamely, as Mario again roared impatiently from downstairs, "And free."

Joe stood still, looking down at her, his face curiously sombre. "That true, I wonder if you know how true. I wonder if you know how true." He turned, calling to his father that he was coming, and said imperatively, "I shall see you this evening? I'll call for you about eight. I must go." He bent, touching her hair with his lips. "Don't be sad."

Sad? She was not sad, but she was nervous and shaken. She was in love with Joe.

She set to work on the letters, deliberately trusting all other thoughts out of her mind. She wrote out formal, grammatical letters framing Mario's brief instructions, and when they were finished ished went through the unpaid bills which Mario had given her together with his check book. She wrote out checks, and typed the envelopes, leaving them ready with the letters for his signature when he returned.

She gave a quick look around the room, then went downstairs into the dining room. The desk was still open, with the papers spilling out on the floor, just as Joe had left it. She set to work sorting out the papers, sitting cross-legged on the floor with the wastepaper basket beside her, ready for anything that was useless or out of date.

Air Force Plans Interview 2,600 N. C. Reservists

RALEIGH (UP) — The Air Force will interview some 2,600 reservists in 56 counties of central and eastern North Carolina starting Jan. 1 to bring their records up to date for future manpower planning.

Maj. Gen. Charles E. Thomas Jr., commanding general of the 14th Air Force at Robins AFB, Ga., announced plans for the North Carolina survey as part of a nationwide inventory.

The Air Force wants information from each reservist concerning his job status new skills acquired since release from active duty, physical condition and dependency status "which have an important bearing on future manpower planning," General Thomas said.

He stressed that the survey is not related to recall of reservists to active duty since the policy of recalling reservists involuntarily was discontinued about 10 months ago.

No. For Ruins Turns Up Important Discovery

By ERIC GOTTGREU AP Newfeatures TEL AVIV - One of the most important recent discoveries of ancient ruins in Israel might not have been made if a 23-year-old farm worker had not kept his eyes open. It happened that David Aloni is not only interested in chickens and cauliflower, but in archaeology, as well. Whenever he can take a day off at the Kibbutz Jewish collective settlement at Mishmar Hanegev, David roams the countryside looking for traces of the past.

SEPTUAGENARIAN - Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt, former German commander on Western front, shown during his 77th birthday celebration in Hannover, Germany.

One day in the Negev Desert, he came across some pottery fragments that gave him a hunch there might be something more underground. Because he told Jean Perrot, French archaeologist in Jerusalem, about his find, two 5,500-year-old villages have been excavated. Perrot visited the suspected areas near Beersheba in Southern Israel, made a preliminary survey and found he had been led by the young man to the site of two villages from the chalcolithic age (4500-3000 B.C.) - villages inhabited probably a thousand years before Abraham pitched his tent in the vicinity.

The French National Center of Scientific Research in Paris granted Perrot the financial support for further diggings. Sent to Israel in 1945, Perrot took part in excavating a 7,000-year-old neolithic town near Abou Gosh, and then assisted the late French Consul General, Rene Neuville, in his stone age discoveries in various parts of the Judean hills. Earlier there were other excavations dating back to the chalcolithic age here but no chalcolithic dwelling ever excavated in Israel or Mandatory Palestine was built in the fortress-like lower form unearthed at Bir Abou Mater. Neither were there any round houses in the chalcolithic town excavated between 1928 and 1938 at Tell-el-Ghassul in the Jordan Valley southeast of Jericho in what is now Hashemite Jordan territory. The architecture of the ancient Bir Abou Mater houses is, however, similar to that of those chalcolithic buildings constructed in Cyprus and Mesopotamia. The inhabitants of pre-Bir Abou Mater were apparently herdsmen, tillers of the land and artisans. This may be concluded from the various stone tools found besides the lavishly painted pottery and vases. What, however, appears to be sensational within the framework of Near East archeological history is the fact that also copper-covered bricks as well as tools with copper parts have been found in Bir Abou Mater, although there are no copper strata in this region. The copper mines exploited by King Solomon much later are far south of Beersheba, near the Red Sea coast.

The copper as found in Bir Abou Mater is identical with that unearthed in Quadi Fenan (Fennan Valley) on the Hashemite Jordan side of the Dead Sea canyon. So no doubt it was brought from there. It couldn't happen to-day after 3500 years of progress. There is between the two countries a well-guarded armistice barrier never crossed for trade except by smugglers. Perrot, aided by a Hebrew University graduate and 15 local workers, found the much more interesting of the two chalcolithic settlements spotted, the one at a place very close to Beersheba of today; the old Arab name of the site is Bir Abou Mater. It was here that he excavated the remains of seven houses and discovered the traces of many more buried under the ground. The supports of the houses consist of thick round walls. There were small square holes for windows. Under the ground floor were silos or stores for grain. The superstructure on the walls was made of bricks held together with a mixture of clay and straw.

Oasis Of Wells Is Putting Indian Town 'On Map'

ISRAELI LEADER - Itzhak Ben-Zvi, 68, Labor Party leader, was elected by the Israeli Knesset as second president of Israel. He succeeds the late Dr. Chaim Weizmann.

GANDHIDHAM, India (AP) - Wells reaching deep into this arid land plus the energetic work of 15,000 Hindu refugees from Pakistan are fast putting this brand new West Indian town on the map. Gandhidham enthusiasts - the name means Gandhi's Town - claim this is the only Asian community with electricity and running water in every house. The abundant water has been made possible by 16 new wells yielding 1,500,000 gallons daily. Planned by Hindu refugees from the Sind area surrounding Moslem Pakistan's capital city of Karachi, Gandhidham has enjoyed the backing of the Indian government Refugee Rehabilitation Ministry. In two years, the population has jumped from zero to 15,000 Italian and American town planners, who have had a hand in the project, predict the figure will reach 100,000 within three years.

SEALED - The children and some of the nearby residents loved the friendly seal who had been slipping around in Lake Sammamish for about a year. But irate fishermen wanted the seal eliminated because they felt it was downing too many lake trout. When the Fisheries Department decided to shoot the seal, it was discovered the lake was closed to shooting. The impasse was recently resolved when the Fisheries Department arranged to have the seal placed in the Woodland Park Zoo. There it will discover a playmate, a two-year-old seal.
