How 'Plan D' Is Designed To Work

CITY MANAGER PLAN. Above is a diagram which shows the position of various city departments and officials under "Plan D." Despite much conjecture, vagaries in the N. C. Statutes have placed a large question mark on the Greenville Utilities Commission. In view of the fact commissioners are appointed by the council, it is assumed they will be under the council and not a city manager. The chain of events depicted above are: people elect the council, who name the city clerk and members of the utilities commission. The council names a manager, under whose supervision the Greenville Utilities Commission. In a mayor is appointed from the ranks of the council.

City Council Has Powers In Plan D

Members 'Hire And Fire' Manager; Control City Affairs

"Plan D" type of city government, as provided for in the General Statutes of North Carolina, is the only plan of comparable nature that can be put to a vote of the city's citizens.

The plan consists of a mayor, city council, city manager, city clerk, and city departments. The mayor and city clerk are elected by the city's citizens. The city council is elected by the city's citizens. The city manager is appointed by the city council. The city departments are appointed by the city manager.

The city council shall be made up of five members, who are elected from the city at large for a term of two years. The council in turn will elect one of its members as mayor and another as mayor "pro tem," who will preside over the city council in the absence of the mayor. All meetings are public, and in the absence of both the mayor and mayor "pro tem," a temporary chairman is chosen from council ranks to preside over the meeting.

Quorum Necessary
Presence of three members makes a quorum, and no business can be transacted unless at least three members of the council are present. No ordinance, resolution or vote will be effective unless carried by at least three affirmative votes.

After the council has been elected, its members appoint a city manager, who is to be chosen on merit alone. The city manager holds office at the pleasure of the council, has no contract and may be discharged at the will of the council. He is also required to attend every meeting of the council, and to keep the council informed on all matters pertaining to his office and other affairs of the city.

The city manager must keep the council advised as to the city's financial condition, and he is given the authority to appoint and remove all heads of departments, superintendents, and other employees of the city. However, the manager has no authority over the judge of municipal court, solicitor of municipal court, clerk of municipal court or the city clerk.

Only Supervisory
A manager has no authority to determine how many officers and employees are necessary, his only authority is in determining which employees shall be. That is to say, the city manager cannot create a position in city government, such matters are at the discretion of the council only.

Provisions of the law safeguard any employee or officer in the city

Fire Sub-Station Cost Proves Low

Aldermen Told Project Will Be Completed Shortly At Considerably Less Money Than $12,000 That Was Originally Quoted

The new fire sub-station in West Greenville, which is now virtually complete, was described last night as being "the most attractive station in the East."

R. E. Rogers, chairman of the fire station project, made that statement at the regular monthly meeting of the Greenville Board of Aldermen held at the city hall. The meeting, incidentally, was the shortest in many months.

Alderman Rogers said the new station will be ready to move equipment into in approximately two more weeks. No expense figures were presented, but the chairman stated the project will be completed at "considerably less money" than the $12,000 originally quoted.

Jasper M. Jones, assistant fire chief, appeared before the board in the absence of Chief George Gardner and said plans are already being made to move into the new station. Gardner has not returned from Michigan where he traveled to pick up a new fire truck.

The board went on record as favoring use of city fire fighting equipment in case of fire at the proposed Artloom Carpet Company plant to be constructed just outside the city limits on the Stantonsburg road, if and when the plant is built.

That action stemmed from a letter from the company asking if such service would be available once the plant is built. The board voted to render all possible assistance to the company in case of a fire.

The proposed plant is designed to work with Greenville Mills, Inc.loom Company.

Library Boards
Two vacancies on the Sheppard Memorial Library Board and four vacancies on the board of Carver Library were filled by appointments on recommendation of T. I. Wagner, chairman of the library committee. Appointed to the board of Sheppard Memorial Library were Mrs. Milton May and Mrs. Bancroft Moseley. Carver Library board appointees are Wiley Norcutt, Matthew Lewis, Mrs. H. B. Kelly and Miss Lucille Rich.

The old graveyard on North Evans Street was discussed and the consensus of the board seemed to be the plots there should be kept in good order. The graveyard was termed "unsightly and rundown," and it was suggested that the graveyard be put under the cemetery committee for upkeep.

Plans were referred to the cemetery committee for action.

Proposed Street
The proposed street from Hooker Road into Hilldale was discussed but no definite action was taken.

The project was referred to the street committee for investigation, and the committee was given the power to take action on the plan. Ernest Eaton, Greenville Negro, was given a franchise to operate a taxi in the city. Eaton was awarded the franchise after it was brought out that Archie Corey has a franchise to operate two taxis in the city and is operating only one.

The board voted to take one taxi away from Corey and give the franchise to Eaton. Two taxi drivers' permits were approved for two white men. They are William Colville, 22, and Charles Gladson, 32.

Salary Increase
Police Chief S. G. Gibbs requested the board to vote an increase in salary amounting to $10 per month for "Cap'n" S. B. Dorsey, city and county identification officer. Gibbs said the $10 increase will bring Dorsey's salary up to par with other plainclothesmen on the force.

At its last meeting the Pitt County Board of Commissioners voted a salary increase for Dorsey amounting to $12 per month. As Dorsey works jointly with city and county officials, Pitt County pays a portion of his salary.

All members of the board of aldermen were present for the meeting last night.

Former Mayor J. H. Boyd Says 'Plan D' Faulty

System Is Undemocratic, Says Ex-Mayor; Declares Cost Will Be High

By JESS POINDEXTER
Reflector City Editor

Interest on the city manager proposal to be decided in referendum Monday is picking up, but opinions seem to be about as strong on one side as the other.

J. H. Boyd Jr., mayor of Greenville from 1945 through 1949, yesterday described the "Plan D" type of city administration as being "undemocratic." He said such a change would take control of city government out of the hands of the citizens.

"The so-called 'Plan D' council-manager form of government is not in my mind the form of democracy we have been accustomed to," Boyd stated. "It places too much responsibility in too few hands. It disenfranchises voters of the city—citizens and taxpayers—in that it prevents them from voting for mayor."

Large Cost

The former mayor went on to say the National Association of City Managers is highly organized and constantly working and urging municipalities to adopt that form of city government. "In Greenville," he declared, "a competent manager with his office set-up and personal automobile will cost taxpayers an estimated $15,000 to $25,000 per year, and it comes at a time when taxes are not going to be as easy to pay as in years past."

A city manager would become a virtual dictator, Boyd asserted, the very condition all free nations of the world are trying to prevent now. He can hire at will and fire the city's most faithful and trusted employees at his pleasure. Citizens have no redress, and all the council can do is fire the manager.

Utilities Position
Remaining on utilities, Boyd said the utilities commission is so fixed and set up by acts of the legislature and amendments thereto it would require a great deal of legislation to change that and put the commission back under city authority.

"Then, too, as the utilities commission now exists, it is composed of some of the best and most patriotic businessmen that Greenville has," ex-Mayor Boyd said. "And I doubt that a small order city manager could do half as well as those men are doing for the city."

Citizens of Greenville own the city, he declared, and they are entitled to the control of it. "I would regret very much to see them vote it (the city) out of their control into the hands of so few. I cannot see any improvement that could be gained from that move. It would only bring about general confusion and dissatisfaction."

May Vote

Boyd said when a mayor is elected by the people and serves at their pleasure, it makes for a better situation than if he is appointed from the ranks of the city council. "If a mayor is elected at large," he concluded, "he would have no one to serve but the people and, thus, could veto board actions and oppose the board without fear of removal."

Superforts Keep Bombing Enemy Supply Centers
SEOUL, Korea (UP)—Allied superforts flew through heavy clouds last night to hit an enemy supply center in their drive to keep all potential Communist staging areas off balance.

Eight B-29 superforts dropped full loads of 500-pound bombs to wreck a 35-acre Red supply center five miles south of Sariwon containing 50 barracks not previously attacked.

Another lone superfort dropped 10 tons of bombs on a 4,000-foot airstrip three miles south of Hungnam near the east coast.

Fighting along the 155-mile battle line fell off sharply after lightning punches by Allied raiders at both ends of the line killed or wounded 200 Communist troops.

On the eastern front, South Korean troops reported the total number of Communist troops killed in a raid on an enemy tunnel was 134.

Rich Panhandler Has Tax Trouble
NEWARK, N. J. (UP)—Mrs. Mildred Schaefer, 41, Newark's richest panhandler, had tax troubles today.

A mayor said Mrs. Schaefer was arrested for street begging and sentenced to 30 days in jail. At that time authorities found $300 pinned to her dress and $17,000 in bank accounts.

The Internal Revenue Bureau yesterday filed a $16,916 income tax lien against her charging she owes that amount for the four year period from 1949 through 1952.

To Washington

Cpl. C. E. Whitfield (above), State Highway Patrol officer serving in the Pitt County area, has been selected to take part in the inauguration of President-elect Dwight Eisenhower.

Corporal Whitfield received orders yesterday afternoon directing that he report to the Metropolitan Police Force in Washington, D. C. for special assignment on a detective detail for three days, beginning January 19. The local officer was one of two highway patrolmen from North Carolina chosen for the assignment. The other patrolman is from the western part of the state.

Republicans Hit Truman Budget

Say $10 Billions Can And Should Be Cut By New Congress

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Truman's proposed spending budget, submitted to Congress today, was described as "fantastic" by Republicans who said it can be cut by $10,000,000.

They also brushed aside Mr. Truman's proposal that taxes be increased. Even the Democrats refused to take this suggestion seriously. Congressmen of both parties said their goal now is to cut taxes, and the only question is how soon it can be done.

Rep. John Taber (R-NY), who will head the money-handling House Appropriations Committee in the new Republican controlled Congress, said the size of the budget alone constitutes "an invitation to tax."

He told newsmen that "a $10,000,000 cut is not too much to expect."

Sen. Styles Bridges (R-NH), who will be chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said Mr. Truman's budget "reveals in shocking detail" the tremendous fiscal burden which his administration bequeathes on the new Republican administration.

"The job which lies ahead is staggering," Bridges said. Rep. Daniel A. Reed (R-NY), who will be chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee in the new Congress, said he agreed with Taber that the budget can be cut heavily.

Reed, sponsor of a plan to cut individual income taxes about 5 1/2 per cent in this calendar year, said that "there's going to be a tax cut and we're going to balance the budget too."

There is no doubt at all that this budget can be cut," he said. "This is fantastic."

Democrats who are experts in the spending field weren't so sure the Republicans are going to find it easy to cut the President's budget.

Saved Some Of Ship's Crewmen

TOKYO (UP)—Twenty-one crewmen were rescued today from the Swedish tanker Avanti which broke in pieces during a storm in the North Philippine Sea, but the fate of 20 other crewmen was unknown.

There were these conflicting reports of the missing crewmen: 1. The Japanese Coast Guard said tonight all 20 of them were "missing."

2. The British freighter Eastern radioed from the scene that 11 and possibly 12 men were aboard the tanker's stern section which was still afloat.

3. Unconfirmed radio messages from other rescue vessels said eight men transferred to a raft just before the bow section sank, but had not been seen since.

4. Globe Wireless in San Francisco received a message from the American vessel Coolidge Hills which said the Avanti's captain, all her bridge officers and the chief engineer were killed—a total of eight.

Bills Introduced To Carry Out Umstead's Plans

Legislation On Aid For Schools And Higher Retirement Pay Offered

RALEIGH (UP)—Bills to carry out Gov. William P. Umstead's proposals for state aid for local school construction and higher retirement pay for state employees and teachers were introduced today in a 50-minute session of the General Assembly.

Both major bills, one to provide for $50,000,000 in state school construction grants over the next four years and one to increase retirement benefits, were introduced in the House.

The House also elected magazine editor Carl Goerch of Raleigh as reading clerk for the 1953 session, succeeding Ralph Monger of Sanford who declined to serve again after 12 years.

Gov. Luther B. Hodges assumed the gavel in the Senate during a brief session of the upper chamber. The Senate took no legislative action and no bills were introduced there.

Umstead outlined his proposals for state aid to counties for school construction and repair and increasing pensions for state employees and public school teachers in his inaugural address only yesterday. The legislators acted swiftly.

Rep. T. J. Collier of Pamlico introduced the big school construction spending bill. The measure calls for $25,000,000 appropriated from the general fund, half during the current biennium and half in the next two fiscal years. The other half would be financed by a bond issue, actually two bond issues in amounts of $12,500,000 each during each of the next two bienniums.

The bill provides that one-fourth be distributed to the counties on the basis of average daily school attendance, one-fourth in flat $125,000 amounts to each of the 100 counties and $25,000,000 according to individual county needs as determined by the State Board of Education.

Nathan Yelton, executive secretary of the state teachers and employees retirement system, estimated that the retirement benefits bill would cost $500,000 during the first year of the next biennium and $450,000 during the second year. He said it would affect some 1,500 retired state employees and public school teachers with more than 20 years of service.

It would provide a minimum monthly payment of $50 for those with 20 years service and up to $60 a month for those with 30 or more years of service.

The governor said "this will not remove all the hardships and inequities, but this ... much should be done."

The Senate was in session for 30 minutes, the House for 50. Officers of the two bodies were working to complete committee assignments by early next week.

Some committees were expected to be rounded out by Monday and Capitol sources believed at least one chairmanship is definitely settled.

Mrs. Keyserling Is Cleared In Loyalty Probe

WASHINGTON (UP)—Mrs. Leon Keyserling, wife of President Truman's top economic adviser, has been cleared by the Commerce Department of disloyalty charges, it was learned today.

The ruling was handed down following a four-month investigation by the department's loyalty-security board.

Mrs. Keyserling, a reliable source reported, has been reinstated in her $10,000-a-year job as director of the department's international economic analysis division.

A slate of 16 names were drawn up last night by the nominating committee of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce from which eight will be elected as members of the chamber's board of directors.

In accordance with the by-laws governing the operation of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce, the nominating committee prepared the official ticket of 16 active members.

The official ballots will go into the mail January 13 to chamber members and are returnable by 6 p.m. January 26. The eight elected as members of the board of directors will serve a three-year term beginning February 1.

The names contained on the ticket drawn up last night are, S. E. Eton R. Barrett, A. W. Bryan, S. Reynolds May, R. W. Shiplett, N. O. Van Nortwick Jr., E. S. Webb, A. Tyson Bilbro, Guy C. Evans, Charles P. Gaskins, W. S. Boat, and J. W. Overton.

Annual Meeting
A committee of three was appointed last night by the nominating committee to take care of the arrangements for the chamber's annual meeting sometime in February or March. Serving on the committee are W. W. Speight, chairman, A. Hartwell Campbell, and N. O. Van Nortwick Jr.

The committee will secure a prominent speaker and carry out plans for the annual meeting of which the entire membership of the chamber is invited to attend.

Pres. Truman Says GOP Should Retain Present Tax Rates

Message To Congress Refers To Sum As Being Essential For Safety And Well-Being Of Nation; Opposes Any Reduction

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Truman sent Congress today a proposed spending budget of $78,600,000,000 for fiscal 1954 and said the Republicans ought to continue present high taxes—or even raise them.

He said the whole total is "essential for the safety and well-being of the nation" in this time of armaments against the Soviet threat. Three-fourths of it he assigned to atomic weapons, aid to Europe, and related programs.

If the Republican Congress adopt the whole budget—an unlikely "if"—federal spending in fiscal 1954, beginning July 1 this year, would be the biggest except during World War II.

President-elect Eisenhower and such GOP leaders as Sen. Robert A. Taft have set a general goal of cutting it to $70,000,000,000. The Eisenhower version of the budget will be submitted piecemeal later, beginning in April.

Mr. Truman said the government would go in the red by $9,000,000,000 under his budget if Congress lets expenses. They generally are aiming at tax reductions in the following year. However, some propose individual tax cuts this year.

Mr. Truman recommended new appropriations, or obligational authority, totaling $72,900,000,000. This is lower than the proposed spending total because billions are left over from previous appropriations.

Mr. Truman said Eisenhower had no responsibility for this budget and "will be entirely free, of course to propose changes." Eisenhower has pledged government economies, even in defense spending, through elimination of waste and inefficiency.

The President countered that this budget represents "my judgment as to the amount of funds needed to carry forward our programs for the security and welfare of our people and for world peace."

The budget broke down by major items as follows:

MILITARY
Total expenditures — $46,300,000,000. Army $15,300,000, Navy $12,000,000, Air Force $17,500,000,000 with remainder for overall defense functions, stockpiling of strategic materials, and related activities.

A total of $9,700,000,000 was earmarked to buy planes and $1,000,000,000 to build ships, including a third super aircraft carrier to cost $215,000,000.

Mr. Truman said the military program is expensive, "but our national security depends upon it."

FOREIGN AID
The budget did not break down the estimated expenditure of $7,550,000,000 for foreign aid as to military and economic. New authorization legislation, as well as a new appropriation of $7,600,000,000 would be required to extend foreign aid for another year on such a scale.

ATOMIC ENERGY
Mr. Truman recommended that atomic energy spending be stepped up to $2,700,000,000, an increase of $700,000,000 over this year, to "provide for increases in our reserve of atomic weapons and for the development and testing of improved weapons." He also recommended an increase in funds for development of atomic power for naval ships and production of electrical power on land.

VETERANS
The $4,600,000,000 estimated for veterans programs was about the same as this year. Mr. Truman said the trend will be upward in subsequent years. He pointed to the "rapid" increase in the number of veterans and to the extension and liberalization of veterans' benefits by Congress.

SOCIAL SECURITY, ETC.
Estimated expenditures of $2,000,000,000 in this field showed a drop of $15,000,000 for this year, mainly because of an expected decline in hospital construction. More than half of federal social security, welfare and health expenditures would be in grants to states for public assistance to needy aged people.

NATURAL RESOURCES
Saying that the "major part of the task of developing our river basins is still ahead of us," Mr. Truman recommended eight new projects and five additions to existing ones to cost $225,000,000. He said the nation "should no longer defer" some of the flood control, irrigation and hydroelectric projects postponed since the outbreak of World War II.

AGRICULTURE
In spite of mounting farm surpluses, Mr. Truman said the new Republican administration should be able to cut farm program spending by $116,000,000.

His new farm budget totaled $1,827,000,000 as compared with the $1,943,000,000 estimated outlay for the current fiscal year. It "assumed" there would be no further drop in farm prices in the next 18 months.

NOON ALARM
Firemen were called to the home of R. E. Rogers, on Johnston Street, around noon today when a furnace flared up.

SAFE COMMUNITY
BEAUFORT, S. C. (UP)—Beaufort has a claim on the title "safest town in South Carolina." With the end of 1952, Beaufort marked its sixth consecutive year without a fatal accident.

Present Members
Board members whose terms expire February 1 are, Larry Averette, C. E. Blair, B. B. Drum, F. F. Hendrix, F. Badger Johnson, George Wilkerson, A. Hartwell Campbell, and Tom Webb. Those who will still serve unexpired terms on the board are Van C. Fleming Jr., H. L. Hodges Jr., Dr. E. B. Aycock, John G. Proctor, W. W. Speight, Al-

Unidentified Warplanes, Possibly U.S., Bomb And Strafe American Gun Position

SEOUL, Korea (UP)—Unidentified warplanes—presumably American—today mistakenly slammed 15 bombs into a U. S. artillery battery far behind the Korean front lines, killing and wounding an undisclosed number of American soldiers.

The heaviest casualties resulted from one direct bomb hit on a wooden administration building.

The 8th Army immediately clamped tight censorship on the incident and officers and men of the unit involved said they had been forbidden to talk to newsmen or even to write details to their families at home.

The planes—said to have numbered, two or more—returned after the bombing and raked the area with machinegun fire in a strafing attack.

Seven or eight tents were destroyed in the attack and a number of others bore gaping holes from bomb and shell fragments.

At least three U. S. trucks also were destroyed.

One officer suggested that the attack might have been made by enemy aircraft, but this was generally discounted.

Men of the attacked unit said they were taken by surprise and did not attempt to note markings on the planes until the attack was over. They were too busy scrambling for cover, they said.

The casualties were said to have resulted largely from the fact that the attack was totally unexpected and caught men in the administration building and in exposed areas.

The artillery unit, a service organization, was stationed nine miles behind the lines.

A colonel from 8th Army headquarters and several Air Force officers were investigating the incident on the scene this morning.

"We are getting a lot of conflicting testimony," the colonel said.

"No one saw whether there were any markings on the planes. One man said they had swept wings, another swore they didn't. They said the same thing about whether they had wing tanks."

Both Russian built MIG-15s and American Sabre Jet fighters have swept wings.

Confessing and Following Christ

The Pharisees and Sadducees came to Christ, asking for a sign from heaven. Jesus rebuked them, saying that they could discern signs of the weather from the skies, but could not see the signs of the times.

Jesus asked His disciples whom men said He was. Some said one of the prophets. Then Christ asked, "Whom do ye say?" and Peter answered, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

"Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona," Jesus answered, "for flesh and blood hath not revealed it to thee, but My Father which is in heaven. And I say also unto thee that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My church."

From that time forth Jesus began to show His disciples how He must go to Jerusalem, suffer, die and be raised again. Peter, rebuked Him, but Jesus silenced him.

Confessing and Following Christ

SHOWING HOW FALSE IDEAS OF TRUTH AND DUTY MAY MISLEAD

Scripture—Matthew 16.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

IN OUR efforts to confess and follow our Lord, our lesson today shows how false ideas of truth and duty may be misleading and may persuade to the very opposite of what we strive to achieve. This is as true today—even more so—than it was in Jesus' day when He pointed out this danger to His disciples.

The conservative Pharisees and the modernistic Sadducees came to Jesus on a mountain in northern Palestine, and tempting Him, asked for a sign from heaven. Christ's answer was marvelous and crushing to these hypocritical men who always asked, not for information, but with the sole purpose of tripping Jesus and giving them an excuse to injure Him.

"When it is evening," said Christ, "ye say, it will be fair weather; for the sky is red."

MEMORY VERSE

"Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."—Matthew 16:16.

"And in the morning, it will be foul weather today, for the sky is red and lowering. O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky, but can ye not discern the signs of the times?"

Further the Lord said, "A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign, and there shall no sign be given unto it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas." And He left them and departed.

When Jesus and the disciples arrived on the other side, they found they had forgotten to bring food, and Jesus said to them, "Take heed and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and the Sadducees."

This puzzled the disciples and they reasoned that Christ's words alluded to the fact that they had no bread. But Jesus, reading their minds, reproved them and reminded them of the 5,000 He had fed with five loaves and a few fishes and the 4,000 who had been plentifully fed from seven loaves, as we have read in previous lessons. Then they realized that Jesus meant that they should beware of the doctrines of the Pharisees and Sadducees, which might act as a leaven to nullify their faith.

When they had come into the land of Caesarea, Jesus asked His associates what men said of Him: "Whom do men say that I the Son of man am?"

Some say that Thou art John the Baptist, some Elias and others Jeremiah, or one of the prophets.

"But whom say ye that I am?" And Simon Peter answered and said, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

Jesus said, "Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father which is in heaven."

Then Jesus said something that has been a disputed passage ever since. "And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

"And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven."

One authority, whom we prefer to quote and accept says, that the rendering of the verse should be: "Thou, Simon Barjona, art Peter, a man of rock, worthy of thy name Peter, because thou hast made that bold, good confession; and on the truth thou hast now confessed, as on a rock, will I build My church."

Jesus warned His disciples that they should tell no man that He was the Christ, the time was not ripe.

From then on Jesus began to show His disciples that He must go to Jerusalem, must there suffer, die and be raised again. Peter could not believe that could happen, remembering how people loved and worshiped Him and brought their troubles to have Him make them whole.

When Peter chided Christ for His warnings, Jesus said, "Get thee behind Me, Satan, thou art an offense unto Me; for thou savorest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men."

Christ told His followers that if they would come after Him they must bear His cross, even if it cost them their lives.

"For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"

HORMONE LOTION

the finest hormone lotion to help your body look young!

Most women let skin care stop with their face, forgetting that the body is an important part of beauty. Skin everywhere on the body can be kept just as young-looking and young-feeling. All that's needed is proper skin care all over the body.

For just that purpose COTY has developed an entirely new lotion, called "Body Beautiful" Hormone Lotion. Scientifically blended from hormones and other beneficial ingredients, this new lotion lets every single inch of your body benefit from hormones.

Natural Hormones, Estradiol and Other Beneficial Ingredients Help Retain Skin Moisture

Thanks to estrogenic hormones and estradiol, your skin can be helped to keep the moisture, and suppleness it would naturally have. It's only when dryness creeps in that you begin to notice criss-cross wrinkles on your hands—runs in your stockings caused by roughness and flaky skin on legs and ankles—"sand-paper" elbows that mar otherwise pretty forearms. That's exactly when "Body Beautiful" Hormone Lotion can help you retain the proper degree of moisture in skin and under-tissues . . . regain the thrill of looking young . . . feeling young from the tips of your fingers to the tops of your toes.

Junior Woman's Club Reports On Years Work And Plans

The Junior Woman's Club held its first business meeting of 1953 in the club house on Wednesday night, January 7th at 8 o'clock. The meeting was called to order by the club president, Mrs. Howard Grady. The members joined in the reading of the collect and the minutes of the previous business meeting were read and approved.

The president brought before the group a request from Mrs. J. H. B. Moore that the Junior Woman's Club sponsor the High School Talent Show as part of the Art Festival which is to be held here in April. After much discussion it was decided that the decision be tabled until the January 21st meeting, at which time a definite answer will be given.

Mrs. M. W. Aldridge volunteered to contact Mrs. Donna Tabar in the meantime for information as to how last year's show was conducted.

A letter was read from Gloria Blanton, Chairman of the Polio Drive for Greenville, asking for six volunteers to help contact the local merchants. All members were in favor of accepting this responsibility, and the list of merchants to be solicited will be submitted to the club members by the polio committee at a later date.

The president appointed Mrs. Dan Saeed as new chairman of the Welfare Committee. She also brought before the group the four bills before the State Legislature regarding Social Welfare. The club voted to go on record as favoring the support of these bills, and the corresponding secretary was authorized to write the local representatives to the state legislature telling of their interest in and support of these bills.

The club made tentative plans to sponsor a bridge tournament during the month of January, the definite plans and date to be announced later.

The secretary read a letter from Caswell Training School thanking the club for the tags and play equipment furnished them for Christmas. Members were assured that these were much needed and gratefully received by the children of the school.

Mrs. Harold Alder, chairman of the Watson Memorial Project, gave a report of accomplishments thus far for the year. Since September 1st, $225.00 has been spent to provide needed medical care and hospitalization to six different children or babies. Of this number, one had a congenital heart disease, one pneumonia, and a third needed to have X-Ray and oxygen as treatment for a breathing ailment with which it was born. In addition, the Watson Memorial Fund has furnished milk to two different children upon recommendation of Dr. Malone and Dr. F. B. Haar.

Following a full evening of business the hostesses—Mrs. Ben L. Rouse, Mrs. Henry Swayne, and Mrs. Paul A. Scott, Jr. served the group sandwiches, potato chips, cookies and coffee.

Antique Show-Sale To Be Held By St. James WSCS

An antique show and sale will be held in Greenville during the first week in February at the Wright Auditorium on the campus of East Carolina College.

The show and sale is being sponsored by the Woman's Society of Christian Service of St. James Methodist Church. The McSwain Antique House of Albemarle is placing the show here, and many of the outstanding dealers from all over this section of the country will have pieces on display. Some of the dealers have been represented in shows in Madison Square Garden, as well as in shows throughout the north and south.

The show will be held for three days beginning Monday, February 2. The hours are from 11:00 a. m. to 10:00 p. m. each day and night through Wednesday, February 4. Tickets are now on sale and may be purchased from any member of the Society.

There will be a different show and arrangement of articles each day, with new things being added daily. The Society will operate a concession stand during the show, offering hot coffee, sandwiches, pies, cakes and candy for sale. Sometime during the show there will be a drawing for a grand door prize, for which each attendant registers.

The WSCS of St. James Methodist Church, sponsoring agent for the affair, has been very active ever since its organization in September in promoting projects designed to raise money for the erection of a church building. The coming antique show promises something new and different for the citizens of Greenville.

Although tickets may be purchased at the door, the church will derive its funds from the advance sale of such. For this reason they are urging all interested persons to contact one of the members before the opening date.

Mrs. J. Lloyd Horton is overall chairman of the show. Mrs. Frank Strawn is chairman in charge of ticket sales, and Mrs. Howard Hodges Jr. and Mrs. George Tyndall are in charge of the refreshment stand. Mrs. V. C. Fleming Jr. is president of the sponsoring Society.

Strength for the Day

DOWN TO REALITY

When Henry M. Stanley set out on his great African exploration, he had with him a rather good-sized library. After a few forced marches, however, he began throwing some of the books away. They were excess baggage. Little by little as his native servants deserted him, he gave up this piece of baggage and that, and always among the rejected material were a number of books. At last he got down to two volumes—Shakespeare and the Bible.

There has never been a time in world history when people read so many books as now. To be sure, the Bible is still the best seller, but compared with its ancient prestige, it occupies in the reading of today a place of minor importance in most peoples' thought. Whereas Stanley disposed of books until he got down to Shakespeare and the Bible, we today pay little attention to Shakespeare, little attention to the Bible, and fill our book shelves with all sorts of volumes—some good, some trash, some mediocre.

Stanley's intuition was sound. He kept Shakespeare that he might look understandingly into the human heart; he kept the Bible that he might raise his eyes above the steaming jungle and think about life in terms of the purposes of God.

The modern world pitches and jerks today largely because it has lost its sense of direction. Calling Shakespeare and the Bible!

Take Steps—One At A Time

When a municipality begins to take steps toward a more progressive, more efficient government, it must be remembered that the steps must be taken one at a time.

There may be one big jump to start with; but following that there must be shorter steps taken in working out the details of progress as time goes on.

Such is the case with the council-manager form of government Greenville has under consideration at the present time.

In its stage of transition between a large town and a city, Greenville has come to a cross roads. Now is the time for the people to choose between a form of government which has been used for years and years, and a new form which in our opinion would provide more modern governmental machinery with which local officials could work in giving the citizens of Greenville better government.

In seeking a more efficient form of government, local citizens have petitioned for a vote on Plan D which is the only plan of council-manager government for which a referendum can be held in North Carolina.

Plan D provides for five councilmen elected at large who set the policies of the city government, direct the affairs of the city and hire a city manager — a trained expert in administering the business of running a municipality — who manages the city's business in accordance with the policies set by the council.

In Plan D there may be some qualities which local citizens would like to have changed. For instance it may be that Greenville needs more than five members of the council. Local citizens may want to vote directly for a mayor rather than having the council appoint a mayor from their own members. Greenville may want its councilmen elected from wards in the manner aldermen are now elected.

All those alterations — and others which are desirable or which will give Greenville a better working form of government may be made through legislative amendments to the local charter by the General Assembly.

The most important thing right now is the people's decision on the form of municipal government they want. If they want a council-manager form rather than the aldermanic form we now have, then Plan D must be adopted at the polls Monday. The detail changes in the plan to make it most suitable to Greenville's needs can be made after Plan D is adopted.

If Greenville citizens want council-manager government — which can be modified where necessary to meet particular needs of Greenville — then Plan D should be adopted at the polls Monday.

If the citizens prefer to continue with the aldermanic form of government — which leaves much to be desired in the operation of a business the size of Greenville — then Plan D should be voted against at the polls Monday.

'Cousin' Winston Is In An Almighty Rush

It really isn't true that the word was passed to put an extra padlock on Fort Knox. And no ear-muffs were issued to government officials who found themselves within range of Winston's charm. But the visit of our "cousin" from Merrie Old England had all the reactions of a family affair.

And, as in any family gathering, there were a few disgruntled characters around. Almost laughably, it was talked that because Winston Churchill expressed a potentially divergent foreign policy view than one American angle (we have a number of them), he wouldn't be invited to address a joint session of Congress.

We say it was bordering on the ridiculous, because no matter how one may regard him, the Churchillian view is not one to be shrunken in grandeur or import by the dissension of those about him. If that rotund figure of a man with cherubic face had a message for American people he would not, could not, lack for an audience.

For reasons of his own, and of Empire, England's greatest living statesman chose to hasten to America before the general rush got under way. His greatest concern was to see the president-elect at a date even earlier than he had originally contemplated. He was very much in a hurry.

He must have had something important to say to Dwight Eisenhower; something that wouldn't wait. The last we read Churchill plans to return to America some time in the spring.

Whatever the Prime Minister of Great Britain has to say to the President (or president-elect) of the United States, their meetings have their greatest importance in the mere fact that they are possible.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—Although President-elect Eisenhower and his politico-journalist advisers have not yet made a final determination on the agenda of their relationship with the Washington press corps, it is now definite that the White House will not be a newsy or headlinemaking spot in the next four years.

The reasons behind this transformation from the gossip Truman days and the stirring, rollicking Roosevelt era, as well as the results of the change, are of far greater concern to the American people—the readers, that is—than they are to the "writing gals and fellows" at Washington, as Calvin Coolidge used to describe us.

The weekly or biweekly press conferences with a President provide the principal contact between the public and the man in the White House. They cannot get a clear or vivid image of him from his official statements and communiques. It is through the give-and-take at these duels that they come to appreciate and understand him as a human being.

Frequently, too, they learn more of his domestic and foreign policies from the various correspondents' reports and interpretations than they do from cold, factual pronouncements. Quite often, a Presidential utterance assumes an altogether different meaning when the tone of voice and the facial expression of the man are described at the time of delivery.

In so far as Eisenhower shuts himself off from the American public in this way, it will be a loss to him and to his nationwide constituency. He risks the danger of winning a reputation as a heroic statue rather than the warm and vibrant personality that he happens to be.

THE PRESS ARRANGEMENTS—The Eisenhower press arrangements, however, do not signify a shut-down or blackout on news, according to his spokesmen on this subject. They mean that the White House will become only a directing headquarters for Administration policies and activities rather than the spotlighted center of local decisions. Here is why:

Most of the prospective, major shifts from the Truman program will not require legislation. They can be achieved by administrative action in the various departments and Federal agencies. They can be effected with less jarring of the nation's economic system, if put into effect in a quiet and routine manner.

LESS DRUMBEATING—The significance of these readjustments can be discovered and explained by wideawake, expert and veteran reporters. This method of breaking the news gently may rob the reforms of the melodramatic quality with which a Presidential announcement would clothe them. But it may be an improvement on the 20-year pageant of drum-beating and ballyhooing at the White House under Truman and Roosevelt. It may mean less drama but more results.

Ike, of course, will make the ultimate decisions. But he will permit the announcements to come from Humphrey at Treasury, Dulles at State, Wilson at Defense, etc.

If the new relationship between President and press threatens to choke off the reporting of news to which the American people are entitled, that, too, will be reported, for Washington correspondents are a sensitive and aggressive bunch. And Ike has enough smart newspapermen and publishers in his official and unofficial entourage to make amends and amendments in the system.

BLUNDERS AT TRUMAN'S PRESS TALKS—Eisenhower also has practical, political and statesmanlike reasons for cutting down on spontaneous, unconsidered and explosive remarks at these give-and-take White House press conferences. They are based on the experiences of his immediate predecessors, Roosevelt and Truman.

Their fibes frequently generated or sharpened dissensions between the White House and Congress. It did not make for labor-industry peace when F. D. R. denounced John L. Lewis during the sit-down strikes in Detroit. Truman destroyed any chance of good relations with Congress when he said that "there are too many B-y-r-ds in the Senate."

These are only two examples of Presidential ineptitude in these press conferences. There are many others, since Harding installed the system of weekly meetings.

Presidential blunders in the field of foreign affairs, have been even more serious. Truman's remarks have frequently exasperated our European allies and given Moscow material for its propaganda that the United States is an "imperialist and aggressor nation."

Who's Next Into The Bear Pit?

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

The most recent newcomer to Greenville I know is Jurgen Beitel, who has only been in this country since December 11th. Jurgen is from Lubek, Germany, and is living with his cousin, Martha Pingel of the East Carolina College faculty.

It always amazes me to hear foreigners use the English language with such fluency. Even though he has been in this country less than a month, Jurgen can understand any expression and make himself clearly understood.

"I studied English for six years," he says, "in what you would call here Junior and Senior high school." At 22, he is a high school graduate and has completed an apprenticeship as a merchant in a German shipbuilding factory.

His training included purchasing, accounting and bookkeeping, plus experience in the wage and sales departments of the firm. Jurgen plans to make Greenville his home and is looking for work.

In comparing Germany and the United States he says, "There is more opportunity to develop oneself over here. In Germany conditions are crowded and there is not enough work to go around. Pay over there is low. Even though Jurgen had served an apprenticeship with his company and had a perfect record during his three years there, his wage at the time of his departure was only 220 marks a month, which amounts to about $50.

His letter of recommendation bears out his ability: "He was always ambitious and anxious to learn as much as possible about his work. His manner and conduct were entirely satisfactory."

Jurgen says that in Germany it is impossible to change from one trade to another, as we do here in America. He says, "Once you are trained to be a mechanic, for example, your opportunities are limited to that field." He also points out that there is much less difference in employee and employer in America.

"People here in America," he says, "seem to like more candy and sweet things than Germans do. The food is different. Our bread is harder and we eat more of things like pea soup.

"There is a big American influence in Germany. The clothing you see on the streets here is very similar to what you would see in Germany. The prices are not too different, either. On some items you are higher here; on others, lower."

Photography, working on cars and motorcycles are Jurgen's hobbies. Although he owned complete photographic equipment in Germany he had to sell parts of it because it was too large to transport to America.

And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

By LYNN NISBET

ORGANIZED — A few minutes after noon on Wednesday the General Assembly of 1953 adopted a joint resolution notifying the Governor that the assembly was "organized and ready for business."

That meant that preceding officers and clerical aides had been chosen and sworn in. The word could be taken with double meaning, because early incidents proved that small inner circles had close control over activities. The record will show that none of the elected officials had opposition, all being chosen by unanimous vote of the respective bodies.

MANIPULATIONS — This happy state of harmony was not achieved without considerable backstage maneuvering between Monday morning and Tuesday night when the nominating caucuses were held, with particular reference to the positions of reading clerk and sergeant at arms in the State. All day Tuesday a small group of senators took over the headquarters office of the State Democratic committee in the Sir Walter and worked out the "problems." A few days before that J. M. White Jr. had started out as a candidate for sergeant at arms and switched to reading clerk. That left Dr. T. C. Johnson and B. H. Pate as principal candidates for the sergeant at arms post, with C. R. (Tony) Tolar in receptive mood. On Tuesday W. A. Taylor of Harnett started a campaign for reading clerk. During the afternoon that was switched to sergeant at arms. After numerous conferences and telephone conversations it was worked out so that at showdown time only White was nominated for reading clerk and only Taylor for sergeant at arms. On the House side there was no occasion for switching, but it easily discovered that a small group in that body held the control strings.

INFLUENCE — The leaders prefer to have their activities referred to as influence rather than control, but the results are the same. That was given added proof with introduction of the executive officers' salary bill in the Senate Wednesday morning.

SOLID — The emergency executive salary increase bill had 49 signatures and 50 favorable votes in the Senate. That made it unanimous. When it got to the House there was some opposition the vote being 105 to 7. Effort of Roger Kiser of Scotland to prevent passage by objecting to the third reading was overwhelmingly voted down.

PROVISIONS — The bill increases the expense allowance of the Governor from $600 to $5,000 a year; gives the Lieutenant Governor for the first time some expense money, $1,000 a year; raises the Attorney General to $12,000 and members of the Council of State to $10,000. In order to be effective the bill had to be ratified Wednesday before beginning of the new terms on Thursday. For the past four years the Attorney General has received $8,400, which would have gone up to $10,500 for the new term, and Council of State members have received $7,500, which would have been upped under a 1949 act to $9,000. The increases voted Wednesday means 33 1-3 per cent over current pay for the Secretary of State, Auditor, Treasurer, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Commissioner of Agriculture, Commissioner of Labor and Commissioner of Insurance, and nearly 43 per cent for the Attorney General.

VALUE — Another way of stating the case is that for the upcoming four year term the Council of State members will receive a total of $4,000 by reason of the hurried action this week, which after taxes will leave them around $2,500 net. The real value of the raise is doubtful because there are many citizens who will remember the incident when another election comes around.

SORTLY — Legislators for most part took the position that these high elective offices, which had received much smaller percentage raises during recent years than the rank and file of state employees, were entitled to the money. School teachers and other workers are already planning to remind the assemblymen that a 33 raise for high salaried folks does not harmonize with the proposed 10 per cent for the rank and file.

SMOOTH — Although there was no contest in either body and they had the same number of officers to elect, the Senate caucus completed its work and adjourned in less than 30 minutes, while the House prolonged deliberations for an hour and a half. The Seators were not in the mood for listening to or making speeches, but some of the Representatives had words on their chests which had to be gotten off. Next day Senator Hamilton Hobgood, as secretary of the Democratic caucus, reported its action and

What Other Papers Are Thinking

McCARTHY—HERO, BUM

Say what you please, but Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin is a controversial figure. Some people like him well enough to stand up and fight; others think he should be kicked out of the Senate. One of the latter is a newspaper columnist who's as good as assassinating as McCarthy. That columnist is accusing the Senator of speculating in the markets. Is that in itself sinful, or does McCarthy speculate because he, as a Senator, has inside data. We would say that the columnist should be sure of his facts before he rants too heavily. For he may find himself on the wrong side of a libel suit.

We didn't approve of McCarthy before the last election. We felt that he was hiding behind his Senate immunity. But the people of Wisconsin have since had a chance to pass on his qualifications, and they voted for him in overwhelming numbers both in the primary and in the election. Why, then, should he be denied his seat? For all that can be said against him now was said against him when he was a candidate for re-election. Either the people of Wisconsin didn't believe what was said or they didn't care. Many, we suspect, thought McCarthy was close to pay dirt when he attacked the State Department. That there were far more Communist connected with the government than most people knew we have since learned from the indictments. That they did considerable in the way of damage, too, can hardly be denied. That, apparently, was the people of Wisconsin were concerned about. They felt that there should be a thorough cleaning out of the State Department, that the people who worked in it should be above suspicion. For America was stunned when the Communists overran China. They were stunned again when they learned of people like Hiss. Controversial though he may be, it's not likely that his enemies will succeed in driving McCarthy from the Senate.

Business Today

Some startling new features will be incorporated in electric appliances as the year rolls along. That refrigerator that grinds out ice cubes and that one with the changeable fabric panel are only samples of the innovations that will blossom in the appliance field. The startling new designs in kitchen clocks and fancy-up radio clocks are still more samples. Even more amazing departures are coming in vacuum cleaners, irons, toasters, washers and other electric devices.

The basic reason is that many of the appliances are near saturation. Saturation is generally measured by the percentage of wired homes with a given appliance, for example, almost all of the 45,000,000 homes with electricity also have electric receivers and the saturation percentage is calculated at more than 90 per cent.

Saturation of electric washers, toasters, irons and clocks is all more than 70 per cent; only electric blankets, blenders, broilers, dishwashers, dryers, waste less than 10 per cent; electric ironers and freezers are just about at that point.

With high saturation in so many lines, manufacturers' largest hope of sales this year lies in replacement and the surest way to create replacement sales is to add exciting new features to new models.

Nobody is saying anything. Big manufacturers of appliances muffle plans for improvements in blankets of secrecy — they can't afford to let competitors get an inkling of what is coming. But the saturation situation, plus a few rumors that leak out now and then, indicate that startling new improvements are being engineered.

Almost the same amount of secrecy shrouds advertising plans but it is a safe guess that intensive campaigns will be launched for devices still in low saturation brackets as well as for the newer things to come.

It is also a sure bet that intensive efforts are being made to improve color television and to gain permission for commercial telecasts. The addition of new telecasting stations will give TV set manufacturers constantly new markets during 1953 and into 1954. But saturation is high in areas that have had television for two years or more and if manufacturers are to keep their dealer organizations profitable and intact they will have to give them something with which to make replacement sales. AND COLOR TV is the surest way of laying it on the line.

HOW TO MAKE SALES

ABROAD DESTINED Neither the Mutual Security Agency nor the Technical Cooperation Administration do any purchasing of goods, but they do finance Federal, foreign governmental and foreign private firms in buying.

How this buying is done is summarized in a new two-page bulletin available to businessmen who write to the Office of Small Business, M.S.A., 806 Connecticut Ave., Washington 25, D. C., and ask for MSA-SBM No. 50.

CONFIDENCE IN TIN

In a survey of the tin situation for the National Association of Purchasing Agents, George Stuart Brady, industrial materials consultant, came to this conclusion: "We are not getting ample tin for our requirements at a controlled rate of consumption, but 40 per cent of the production is from Malaya, where we will have to be prepared to use force if necessary to assure a continued production. Another 20 per cent of the production, in Bolivia, is centered in a state of political unrest; but the Bolivians need our aid and the money from the sale of tin as much as we need the tin and the situation may not be difficult for a new Administration desirous of correcting past conditions. There is only one obvious course to follow regarding tin: to continue to pay no heed to the propaganda that there is plenty of tin, and to continue to conserve our supplies and build our stocks until the dangerous supply situations are definitely settled."

NEW PRODUCTS

MASSAGER: A new two-unit home electric massage set is being manufactured (by Distributing Corp., Adamsville, Pa.). It consists of a pillow unit, which massages the back or feet, and a hand unit for massaging face, neck or arms. COVER: A ceramic cover for spark plugs has been brought out to prevent short-circuiting; it protects plugs from dew, fog and splashing water and absorbs any moisture that may condense around the plug. (It is by Lucas Products Co., North Canton, Ohio.)

Hal Boyle's Column

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—This is the era of the "he-gossip."

It is said that modern women now are acting more like men, and men are acting more and more like women.

Rising to the defense of the bleaker sex, I would say this is true in at least one respect—women are talking less, men are talking more.

Women used to have to talk about things they didn't know, because their restricted lives limited their knowledge of the world outside their homes. The ladies no longer have to talk about things they don't know, because now they are in a position to know everything.

As a result they are more likely to keep their pretty little mouths shut in important matters. I would rather trust a secret lady to many women than some men. In business affairs particularly they often button their lips better, for they feel less need to brag about "being in the real know."

Who spreads the wild profile and conjectures in office and factory today? Sadly, I bow to the fact: it is as likely to be a man as a woman.

The "he-gossip" is among us in full flower. Do you know one of these busy little poison mouths, these abortive breakers of a sex that used to be known as strong and silent?

His habitat is the office water cooler. It is there he distills the idle malice of an idle mind, whispering his own rumors as into the ear of every fellow worker who comes up for a drink. If you wear a clean shirt to work, he passes the word you got a raise. Forget to get your shoes shined, and out goes the bulletin: "Lost his whole week's salary on the races."

The he-gossip operates by inquiry as well as imagination. Suppose you are coming to work one bus, and the fellow next to you bumps you in the eye with a lighted cigar. You pause at a drug store to put on a bandage, and as you step into the office little poison puss gallops up to express sympathy—and to find out what happened. You explain.

"But it's against the law to smoke on a bus," he objects. "I know it. But this guy was smoking anyway."

"No kidding? You weren't in a fight with your wife, were you?" "You don't think I've been fighting with somebody else's wife, do you?" you grumble testily.

"No, of course not," he says, and immediately grabs the door of the next man through the loop and whispers:

"Look at Joe. Got a black eye. In a fight with some guy's wife, I hear."

"Search me. You don't suppose it could be the bookkeeper's wife, do you? He was dancing with her a lot at the office Christmas party."

Well, in half an hour the office is buzzing with the news that Joe got a lump under his lamp trying to play footsy-footsy with the bookkeeper's hausfrau after dark. The only people who don't believe it are Joe and the bookkeeper. And if the bookkeeper hears the report he will suspect that Joe at least secretly would like to make a pass at his wife. How can a man deal with a he-gossip? The same way women have always done with gal goseps: start a counter-campaign. For example, tell an office buddy: "As I was going home last night I saw little big-ears. Alvin bend over and pick up something from the sidewalk."

"What was it?" "Search me. But the guy ahead of him had just thrown away a cigarette, and a little farther on I noticed Alvin was smoking a mighty small one."

Before long the whole office will believe the he-gossip is so cheap he picks up cigarette butts from the street. And a few may then reach the conclusion that he gets most of his inside information the same way.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON — Unwary visitors to the nation's Capital stand less chance of getting gypped than they would in almost any other city in the country.

This is the opinion of Sally Muchmore, newly appointed director of Washington's Better Business Bureau (BBB) and chairman of the Inaugural Committee for Unauthorized Practices.

"Washington has a reputation for good buying and investment protection," Mrs. Muchmore, one of the few women to head up a BBB office, says. "We have a strong BBB, and in addition we have the co-operation of the Greater National Capital Committee, which is financed by the business life of the community, as we are."

However, there are still some suckers wherever you go Mrs. Muchmore says. Although the BBB recognizes that by far the greater number of the nation's merchants are honest, more than a million complaints and inquiries are handled by bureaus throughout the country each year. Washington's bureau received about 4,000 inquiries and more than 10,000 inquiries last year.

Well over 50 per cent of these need never have been made, she says, if the public had received better education in economic facts while in school — or had been subjected to a larger volume of consumer educational material. Mrs. Muchmore, who has been with the Washington BBB since 1924, has been carrying on such an educational campaign via weekly television shows and hopes to give many more talks this year, beginning with junior high school students.

She thinks hopelessly are the real suckers for phony deals. Women should take their interest in helping to set up better business ethics, she says, and when some sales offer or investment looks wrong they should do some investigating before they do business — not after.

Attractive Mrs. Muchmore was born in Brockton, Mass. She attended business college in Boston and later studied law at nights at National University here while working for the Better Business Bureau as a secretary. She is the mother of Mary Marlene, 6½.

During the war she received a citation for distinguished service to the U. S. Treasury Department for her retail promotion of war bonds and stamps. She set up standards for retailing throughout the country to promote war stamps and bonds. They should, as investments, not as something to give away, with a washing machine or other purchase.

PROMISE OF DELIGHT

By Mary Howard

AP Newsfeatures

Chapter 29
It was raining a little when they arrived at the airport. Gino went in front of them all with Mario. He held her arm, and paid her an ostentatious amount of attention, and it seemed as natural for her to adopt the star attitude, and preen and pose before the news photographers and reporters, as it is for a butterfly to spread its wings in the sun.

Joe, Anthea and Gino followed, a quiet, utilitarian group in the background. It was interesting to see Bianca, without any instructions, drop discreetly behind, taking over the part of the director's devoted servant, and laying no claim at all to being the star's mother.

Only one of the three masculine stars was traveling with them. Ivar Street, and he was already there, waiting to be photographed with Mario and Gino when they arrived. The other two, middle-aged and very famous actors, disliked flying, and had gone on a head by boat and train.

A reporter or two came toward them. Joe, hurriedly dropping Anthea's arm, headed them off neatly before Gino could open her mouth, and Mario led her toward the plane. She tossed her head angrily, and went up the steps before him with a clatter of angry heels. It was quite obvious that Gino did not want to be an actress. Neither did she want to work. She wanted money to spend, and people, preferably men, to admire and love her, and if she could get these without any effort on her part, she was happy. But to talk properly, to wear the right clothes correctly, to remember that in public many eyes were on her and she was not to speak or behave unguardedly, or to say anything to a stranger without Mario's permission, was beginning to get on her nerves.

Once they were seated, Mario forgot about her completely. His delightful attentions had been to impress the reporters. He dumped Gino in the seat next to Joe dragged Ivar Street into one immediately behind himself, and began to talk volubly about his plans. Ivar, unwillingly at first, his eyes on Gino's lovely sulky face, was soon listening. If Mario talked one had to listen. With eloquent gestures in his unsteady yet brilliantly descriptive English, he began to tell the young man about the part he was going to play. By the time they were in the air, they had both completely forgotten Gino.

They flew over Europe into the sunshine. Anthea was grateful for Joe's traveling experience and fluent French when they reached the airport at Nice. When they finally arrived at the little two-story villa Mario had taken at Les Baux, Anthea had to admit that although Mario was the most unmethodical man in the ordinary sense of the word, where main issues were concerned he always did the right thing. The little harbor village he had found was a miniature paradise, a perfect setting for the beginning and ending of the simple yet poignant tale he had to tell.

Anthea was happy. She was working hard, for she did the continuity work for Mario, as well as her secretarial work, and Joe too was working with them, doing all sorts of odd jobs for his father, acting as a general prop and wardrobe man, as well as doing his own work. Occasionally they escaped together usually in the late, early afternoon when Mario had his siesta, swam for half an hour in the blue water beneath the burning golden sun, and then settled down in a sheltered corner of the garden to work on Joe's play. Gradually it took shape and became coherent. The one act written with such a flash of insight and confidence remained untouched, like a sturdy master-beam in a house, while with feeling and artistry, Joe built the rest of his structure round it. Anthea worked with him, and played with him, and the only shadow on the sunny landscape was Gino's sullen jealousy.

Then on a Friday evening, Marian arrived in Cannes. Until she actually alighted from the train, and followed the porter carrying her suitcase, she had not really known whether she would go to the Riviera or not. She had left home a few days after Anthea. When she had announced she wanted to go away Gregory had given her plenty of money. He had been worried and anxious about her, willing to do anything to make her happy, or to bring her peace. She had gone to Bournemouth, and sent him a card from there saying she was not a big enough change, so she thought of going to Scotland. But all the time her passport had been in her bag, renewed and up to date. She went up to London, telling herself that Scotland would be change enough, and that she would go there. But she bought travelers' checks with her money, and left on the Golden Arrow for Paris. She would see some shows, and buy a few clothes. That would be change.

But at Paris, like one hypnotized, she had merely changed trains, getting a Pullman seat on the Riviera Express, and traveling down to Cannes, as though she were being drawn by a thread, by a fly reel, hooked inescapably, being drawn against her will to the place where Mario Carloti was. Mario and Marian. That had been a joke between them once. That had been engraved on the little rose quartz heart. Mario and Marian. Firenze. 1926. Fide et Amore. (To be continued)

Sunday Schools' Rally January 13

The Roanoke Baptist Association Sunday School Rally will be held at the Greenville Memorial Baptist Church Tuesday night, January 13, at 7:30.

The announcement of the location of the rally was made by Rev. E. E. Ulrich, Association Sunday School superintendent.

Dr. Charles A. Maddy, pastor of the Temple Baptist Church, Durham, will be the speaker of the evening. Reports on the progress of the Sunday schools will be made, and plans for 1983 presented.

Special emphasis will be given to the program of the Southern Baptist Convention in an effort to enroll in their Sunday schools 'A Million More in '84.'

Rev. Ulrich said that there are within the Roanoke Baptist Association now 87 churches with Sunday schools and three mission Sunday schools. He emphasized that the rally is for all members of the Sunday schools and urged that each of the schools have a good representation at the meeting.

Anthea was happy. She was working hard, for she did the continuity work for Mario, as well as her secretarial work, and Joe too was working with them, doing all sorts of odd jobs for his father, acting as a general prop and wardrobe man, as well as doing his own work. Occasionally they escaped together usually in the late, early afternoon when Mario had his siesta, swam for half an hour in the blue water beneath the burning golden sun, and then settled down in a sheltered corner of the garden to work on Joe's play. Gradually it took shape and became coherent. The one act written with such a flash of insight and confidence remained untouched, like a sturdy master-beam in a house, while with feeling and artistry, Joe built the rest of his structure round it. Anthea worked with him, and played with him, and the only shadow on the sunny landscape was Gino's sullen jealousy.

Then on a Friday evening, Marian arrived in Cannes. Until she actually alighted from the train, and followed the porter carrying her suitcase, she had not really known whether she would go to

Owner Of Island Would 'Secede'

By JAMES MADDOCK

(AP Newsfeatures)

ROSSLAKE HARBOR, Ireland—A four-ton coronation chair, hewn from solid rock, recently was floated on a special raft from a village near here to a 500-acre Great Saltee Island.

The chair was for the island's owner, Prince Michael Neale—he added Prince to his baptismal names—who plans to set up an independent principality on the isle.

Great Saltee lies a bit more than three miles off the southeast corner of Ireland. The whole affair is a dream-come-true for 41-year-old Neale. Born on the mainland, as a boy he used to dream that one day the islands would be his, and he would be a prince.

Started From Scratch
He went to London, sold newspapers, washed dishes, worked his way up to sales manager at a chemical factory. Then he began manufacturing chemicals on his own.

Neale's "subjects" number about 30 humans—mostly laborers and ornithologists—and perhaps three million sea birds. Great Saltee is one of Europe's leading bird sanctuaries.

Bungalow's His Palace
There is no palace for the self-styled prince—just a trim little white-painted bungalow.

Neale's "subjects" number about 30 humans—mostly laborers and ornithologists—and perhaps three million sea birds. Great Saltee is one of Europe's leading bird sanctuaries.

The women of Boyd's Memorial Church met Tuesday night at 7:30 with Mrs. Edna Rose Stokes. They had a wonderful attendance for the first meeting in 1953 having seventeen present four of them being visitors. Visitors are always welcome and they were particularly proud this session to have three of the visitors join their circle.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Elizabeth Allen. Mrs. T. E. Dickerson led in prayer. Mrs. Hattie Manning gave the devotional. The business part of the meeting was then held.

After adjournment Mrs. Stokes served cake, nuts and punch which was very delicious.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Ed Dixon on February 3rd and all members are urged to be present and bring a guest.

Hodges Scores 34 In Buc Victory

Bucs Beat Apps 70-63 For Fourth Conference Win

By JIMMY ELLIS

Reflector Sports Writer

All-Conference center Bobby Hodges poured in 34 points last night to lead East Carolina College to a 70-63 North State Conference win over Appalachian. The victory was the fourth straight in conference play for East Carolina.

Hodges did most of his scoring in the last half of the ragedly played contest. He had 12 points when the team went down for their half-time rest but he got hot just as soon as the second half got underway. At one point in the third quarter, a period in which the Pirates scored 24 points, Hodges scored 13 consecutive points. The performance was easily the best scoring job he has done since a 36-point show against Elon last year.

The Pirates, obviously suffering from a let-down after their all-out show against Carolina Tuesday night, were guilty of some ragged play but the Mountaineers were even more guilty. The Appalachian team has been on the road since Tuesday and were playing their second game of the trip. The other was Wednesday night when they defeated Atlantic Christian 67-60.

Hodges couldn't have picked a more timely night for his outstanding performance if he had tried. Other members of the team, particularly All-Conference forward Sonny Russell, were as cold as a fish and not a single Pirates besides the big Hodges hit the double figures in scoring.

The big center scored 11 field goals—nine of them in the last half—and 12 free throws—four of them in last 20 minutes of play. He didn't come close to playing the entire ball game and sat out as much of the last quarter as he actually played.

The visiting Mountaineers put most of their scoring responsibilities on the shoulders of little Arville Stanley and big Bob Campbell. Stanley, a driver despite his lack of physical bulk, wound up leading the Mountaineers with 18 points while Campbell, a big rebounder and a rough man under the boards, was right behind with 17.

The win was the fourth in as many tries for Coach Howard Porter's Pirates. Appalachian has also gone to the line four times but they've been able to win only twice. They've lost to Elon besides the loss last night.

Even though the game was slow and a dull one to watch, the Bucs started fast enough to own a 17-9 lead at the end of the first quarter. In the second period, Coach Porter began feeding in substitutes but the Pirates still managed to extend their margin to 34-21.

In the third quarter, Hodges got hot and the Bucs moved their lead up to 58-33. Almost as soon as the last quarter got underway, Porter began using the subs again and the Appalachian team began cutting down the lead again. They cut the margin to 62-51 with four minutes left to play and Porter called on the first five again. They finished up the job.

Giants Worry Over Ailing Ace Hurler

This is the fourth in a series of interviews with major league managers.

By ALEX KAHN

United Press Sports Writer

SANTA MONICA, Calif. UP—Larry Jansen can return to his 1951 form in 1953, "it will all be sunshine" for his New York Giants. Manager Leo Durocher predicted today.

Jansen, a 23-game winner in 1951, won only 11 games and dropped the same number last year, rarely making an appearance at all during the last two months of the campaign.

Durocher was exceptionally high on several newcomers who are slated to report to the Giants but was quite concerned over Jansen's back condition. He said he had not heard whether the veteran right-hander had recovered from the painful condition.

"But Sal Maglie got over the same kind of back trouble and I have hopes Larry will," he said. "If Jansen doesn't, then I'll need another starter."

Of the youngsters, Al Corwin seems to Durocher to be on the verge of having an outstanding season although he may look bad in spring training, the Giant manager admitted.

Durocher said the rest of his mound staff would be composed of Jim Hearn, whom he called a "dependable guy." Dave Koslo, Hoyt Wilhelm, George Spencer and Maglie with several youngsters as possible additions among his regulars.

Reports that Bobby Thomson might be shifted back to third base were branded as "prema-ture" by Lippy Leo. He said that Thomson could play third if he was needed there but he looked like he might not have to take it over.

"I've got some good boys coming up who could fill that spot," he said. "This lad Rance Pless, who led the Southern League in hitting, is supposed to be great. He might do. And then there's Daryl Spencer."

"From all the reports I get, he's one of the best prospects to come along in many a year. He's tall and he's fast and he can hit. It looks like I'll have to play him somewhere. I'm not sure where yet, but I understand he can play either third or short."

Durocher was especially pleased with his material behind the plate. He said the return of Sam Calderone from the Army would give the Giants another topnotch catcher. But he added that he still considered Wes Westrum his No. 1 backstop "unless somebody shows me he's better."

"But it's great to have a choice of catchers for a change," he said. "Besides those two, we've got Ray Noble, Ray Katt and Sal Yvars. That fixes me up better with catchers than I've been in Western Kentucky 84 Cincinnati 76 years."

Phants Play New Bern In Conference Opener

Hole-In-One

A hole-in-one, golf's rarest achievement, was recorded yesterday by Farmville Country Club pro Bill Kennedy.

Kennedy and guest George Green, professional baseball player, were touring the Farmville course the second round when the million to one shot occurred on the three par 150 yard sixth hole.

"I couldn't believe it," said Kennedy happily. "I hit a good five iron that looked to be dead on the pin but I had no idea the ball would drop in."

The youthful pro is an ex-baseball player and has only been playing golf since he became pro at Farmville three months ago. Hitting from the portside Kennedy's 18 hole total was 81.

Pirates Engage Elon In NSC Tilt Saturday Night

With two games this week already under their belt, East Carolina College's Pirates today made preparations for another tomorrow night. They'll travel to Burlington tomorrow night for a North State Conference battle with Elon's perennially-powerful Christians.

The Pirates are ruling the roost in the North State Conference with four straight wins and will be favored over the Elon team tomorrow. Thus far in the conference, the Elon team has won two ball games, one from Atlantic Christian and one from Appalachian. The Christians have a small team but one of the smallest of the group, Ben Kendall, is their biggest gun.

Kendall, the Kokomo Kid to Elon fans, was an All-Conference and All-State forward last year as a sophomore.

Members of the 1952 East Carolina College football team will be honored at a banquet Monday night, Coach Jack Boone announced yesterday afternoon.

The annual banquet will have as its main feature the awarding of the blocking trophy. The award is perhaps the most coveted of all given to East Carolina players. It was won last year by Dwight Shice and in 1950 by Doc Smith.

Members of the squad were given news of the banquet at a meeting yesterday at which spring football plans were discussed. Coach Boone announced that the off-season practice would begin Monday afternoon and continue for approximately 30 days. More than 70 players are expected to report to Monday's first session.

Harold O'Kelley, a two-time All-Stater in high school and a member of East Carolina College's football and basketball teams, has left school according to reports from the college. The High Point freshman left Wednesday morning.

O'Kelley had been an outstanding player in both sports at High Point High School. This past fall, he was a reserve halfback on Coach Jack Boone's football team and scored three touchdowns. His most outstanding performance was against Western Carolina when he scored twice on passes from fellow-freshman Dick Cherry.

In basketball, O'Kelley, a 5-10 guard, has been used mainly as a reserve and "spot" player. He had scored three points in four games when he left the squad. He had been rated an excellent prospect.

O'Kelley left no indication that he would return to the squad.

Carl Snavelly Criticizes Football Pressure Groups

WASHINGTON (AP)—Don't envy the college football coach—it's a life of hard knocks and few rewards, says Carl Snavelly, outgoing president of the American Football Coaches Association.

You're on top of the world today and a bum tomorrow. There's always the danger of envious associates. You have to win half your games or else. Chances are you're through before you've hit your prime.

Snavelly, himself now out of a job after brilliant successes at Cornell and North Carolina, painted this depressing picture last night in an address to the nation's coaches at the annual Coach of the Year dinner.

Congratulating Michigan State's Clarence (Biggie) Munn, the 1952 Coach of the Year, the white-haired former Tar Heel mentor said:

"Some of our great coaches win their share and he's on top of the world. Then a new hidden danger besets him, envy and jealousy on the part of important individuals, and one such enemy high in the university family, one displeased man on his staff, can bring disaster to the best of coaches."

Snavelly issued this cautionary word as if drawing upon his own experiences. He was let out of North Carolina after winning two games and losing six last fall. He has a faculty status at reduced salary if he wants it. But, at 54, he's looking for another coaching job.

Snavelly told the dinner group, "No other field of human endeavor is so precarious or exacting."

He said the coach is made the scapegoat of the game's abuses. "Too often he has been designated as the cause when actually he has been the victim."

Snavelly chided college leaders for attempting to set up ambitious programs, often over coaches' heads, and demanding that the coach produce victories—and profits from the subsequent boost in ticket sales.

"A college budget which demands revenue from an amateur activity which presumably is part of the educational program is an obvious absurdity," he declared. There was loud applause.

He said common mathematics dictates that the coach's fair share of victories is 50 per cent. But "50 per cent is not enough" to satisfy his critics, Snavelly said.

Munn, who coached Michigan State to an unbeaten season and the national championship, received the Coach of the Year award from Vice President-elect Richard M. Nixon.

Munn was named in a poll conducted by the New York World-Telegram and Sun and Scripps Howard newspapers.

Earlier, football coaches took cognizance of other problems by writing a new code of ethics. The code comes up for adoption at the association's regular business meeting today.

Under the code, the coach is urged not to criticize his fellow coaches, players or officials in public, nor to put on a demonstration from the bench. He also is urged not to make a practice of predicting the outcome of games.

If a coach is found to be unethical under the code, he faces suspension or expulsion from the association or a reprimand from his college.

Tar Heels Unbeaten In SIC Play

By UNITED PRESS

The University of North Carolina looked a sure bet today to round out another week securely on top of the Southern Conference basketball race.

The Tar Heels stretched their undefeated streak within the league to six straight games last night by sinking the underdog VMI Keydets 79 to 62 with guard Vince Grimaldi playing the star role. Grimaldi scored 21 points and was a demon on defense.

The Tar Heels were pressed only once. In the second period VMI rallied to come to within three points of Carolina but couldn't make it stick. Guard Dick Sencel led VMI with 18 points.

North Carolina is idle tonight and should have little trouble with William and Mary Saturday night. The Tar Heels are being pressed hard by Maryland and North Carolina State but won't meet real competition until they tangle with Maryland again Jan. 17.

The Richmond Spiders, who're doing right well for themselves this year, tried a dirty trick on Maryland last night and it almost worked.

Maryland is known as a team which plays strictly a defensive brand of ball, freezing the action to a crawl. The Spiders met Maryland with its own game and forced the contest into overtime before losing 60 to 63.

In the only other league action last night, powerful George Washington went outside the loop to whip Georgetown 79 to 65 in another overtime contest.

Tonight's slate:

Inside the conference, Furman will be at Clemson. VMI will try its luck with Virginia and Wofford will be at the Citadel for inter-loop games.

More than 300 interested Pitt County tobacco growers last night heard Howard R. Garris, State College extension plant disease specialist, discuss nematodes and its control.

Speaking before the group of County farmers at the court house last night, Garris cited the fact that per acre yield of Pitt County tobacco dropped 18 per cent in 1952 as compared with 1951 yields.

This drop in the acre yield was described as the direct result of nematode infestation in the county's fields. While in 1951, the yield was rated as over 1400 pounds per acre, the crop last year made only around 1200 to each acre.

Fumigation of soil is a "God-send" to a lot of farmers, Garris told the group, "but some questions have been raised about the use of too much of the chemicals and the effects which it will have on the soil in, not next year, but five or ten years."

Several suggested crop rotation patterns were outlined and group discussion on the matter brought forth many questions.

Plant Beds

"You must start nematode control with the plant beds," the agriculture specialist told the assembled farmers. "For if you start the growing season with a high percentage of nematodes, due to diseased beds, then you just don't have much of a chance."

Careful preparation of plant beds was urged as being one of the top factors in control of the killer.

"Your old tobacco stalks contain eggs from the last nematode crop, and unless properly handled these will furnish millions of new nematodes to lay waste to the next crop of tobacco," Harris said.

After the harvest, the stalks should be cut up and the roots turned to the sun, and left there for four to five days. A low percentage of local farmers and farmers all over the tobacco producing belt follow this easy and simple method of starting nematode control.

The average female nematode lays between 400-800 eggs and the 20-day cycle required for hatching them at the end of the season can mean that millions of the killers are loose in a field waiting for the next crop.

Chemical treatment in the plant beds is one factor not to be overlooked, Harris stated.

One way in which to determine whether or not nematodes are present at the end of the harvest season, farmers should watch and see if the stalks die right away or whether they remain green and new suckers grow back.

If the plants die soon after harvest then there is a good chance that a large number of nematodes are present, the plant specialist pointed out.

Crop Rotation

Crop rotation came in the second slot of importance after careful preparation of the plant beds.

Tobacco rotated with crops which show a large resistance to the nematodes should be practiced on every farm in the county said Harris.

Rotation will not eliminate nematodes but will reduce the percentage if carried out properly.

Fumigation of soil is a "God-send" to a lot of farmers, Garris told the group, "but some questions have been raised about the use of too much of the chemicals and the effects which it will have on the soil in, not next year, but five or ten years."

Several suggested crop rotation patterns were outlined and group discussion on the matter brought forth many questions.

City Council . . .

From arbitrary control by the city manager, as regulations under which his department operates are regulations of the city council itself.

The city manager himself is an employee of the city, and his office is in charge of preparing the city budget and appointing expenditures of the city in such a manner as to receive the greatest benefit of every dollar spent, many citizens have stated.

Bring Cooperation

Through his office he can bring about full cooperation among all departments of the city. He can also establish a central purchasing agency through which all city purchases can be channeled.

After "Plan D" goes into effect, local modifications of the law can be arranged by having the legislature, which is now in session, pass laws that will modify the plan in the city.

To illustrate, it may be felt that five members on the council is insufficient to meet the needs of the city. The council may be expanded by legislation to seven or nine members—or even larger. Changes could be brought about to have councilmen elected from wards instead of at large.

The referendum on the city manager issue will be held in Greenville Monday. Registration books are now open and only a simple majority is necessary to carry.
