34TH U. S. PRESIDENT TAKES OATH

Eisenhower Began His Big Day Like Ordinary Citizen

Simple Air Of Domesticity Began To Ebb After Church Services; Gradually Rose To Climactic Pitch With Repeating Oath After Chief Justice

By MERRIMAN SMITH
United Press White House Writer
WASHINGTON (UP)—Dwight D. Eisenhower began one of the most momentous days in his life much like Mr. John Smith, American citizen.

He arose early, breakfasted with his wife, and together they looked over the morning newspapers. The domestic scene probably was repeated in millions of households throughout the nation.

But the day which began so simply for the Eisenhowers was destined to go down in history. This is the way it went.

Shortly after 7 a. m. Mr. Eisenhower arose, pulled on a maroon dressing robe and walked into the living room at his 12th floor Statler Hotel suite.

About 8 a. m. his wife, Mamie, joined him and they had a light breakfast. Mr. Eisenhower had coffee and grapefruit; Mrs. Eisenhower nibbled on one slice of toast and had a coffee-type drink with the caffeine removed.

They scanned the papers and talked over the day ahead. Then they dressed.

About 8:30 a. m. the Eisenhowers' son, John, young army major just back from Korea, and his wife Barbara walked into the suite with Mrs. John S. Doud, Mrs. Eisenhower's mother.

9:15 a. m.—General and Mrs. Eisenhower left the Statler for church services. The young Eisenhowers, Mrs. Doud and other members of the family preceded them to the National Presbyterian Church.

The sky was a leaden-gray and the temperature 41 degrees. Mr. Eisenhower wore a black suit, dark blue overcoat, dark blue tie and waved his homburg hat as he walked out of the hotel.

Mrs. Eisenhower wore a black dress and a fur cape. She had on a small white hat.

9:22 a. m.—Arrive at the church. The special prayer service—no sermon—lasted 20 minutes. Mr. Eisenhower sat much of the time with head bowed.

9:50 a. m.—Left church. 9:58 a. m.—Returned to Statler, where increasing crowds had gathered. Eisenhowers were whisked to their suite to prepare for the ceremonies.

10 a. m.—Mr. Eisenhower visited briefly in his suite with several members of his family before disappearing into his bedroom to change clothes for the inauguration.

His staff members said he was "feeling fine," and he appeared relaxed but serious. But inside the church he had appeared to feel the burden of the weight that was descending upon him.

11:20 a. m.—Mr. and Mrs. Eisenhower left the Statler for the White House. As they stepped from their private elevator, flanked by Secret Service men, the American Male Chorus of Kalamazoo, Mich., representing all branches of the services, sang "This is My Country." The Eisenhowers paused and listened. When the chorus finished, the president-elect smiled and said: "Don't you ever forget it."

No Regrets For Harry S. Truman

Committees For Pitt Legislators Are Announced

Worthington, Kilpatrick Assigned To Head New Committees

Pitt County's two members in the N. C. House of Representatives, Sam O. Worthington of Greenville and Frank M. Kilpatrick of Ayden, have received their committee assignments for the 1953 session.

The list of 1953 House committee appointments was announced in Raleigh last night by Eugene T. Bost, Jr., of Cabarrus County, speaker of the house.

Worthington was named to the chairmanship of the judiciary committee, no. 2, while Kilpatrick was designated as chairman of the committee on penal institutions and vice-chairman of the committee on mental institutions.

Other committees to which the Pitt representatives were named: Worthington—constitutional amendments; agriculture; banks and banking; conservation and development; corporations; counties, cities and towns; courts and judicial districts; employment security; finance; public utilities; roads and highway safety; senatorial districts; judiciary no. 1; and the joint committee on University trustees.

Kilpatrick—appropriations; drainage; education; health; local government; propositions and grievances; and the joint committee on enrolled bills.

Both Pitt representatives have served several terms in the House and, like Sen. Paul E. Jones of Farmville, both were re-elected without opposition in the general elections last November.

In the 1951 session of the legislature, Worthington was chairman of the committee on rules, and Kilpatrick headed the committee on wildlife resources.

Sees Revision Of N. C. Sales Tax

RALEIGH (AP)—Rep. Sam O. Worthington of Pitt predicted today the General Assembly will remove all present exemptions from the sales tax in order to carry out Gov. Umstead's Program.

Gov. Umstead said in his inaugural message that the Legislature should propose the possibility of revising the sales tax exemptions if it finds the state needs more revenue to provide essential services.

Worthington estimated a straight 3 per cent tax, without exemptions and without the present $15 maximum tax on a single article would bring in "twice as much as we are getting now" in sales tax revenue.

Worthington said that to carry out Umstead's recommendations "will take 40 or 50 million dollars" more than estimated revenue.

"Where else are we going to get that much money?" he asked.

Inaugural Message Generally Hailed As 'Magnificent'

Congressmen Term Eisenhower Speech As Dramatic Creed To Guide New Administration In Troubled Days Ahead

WASHINGTON (UP)—Republican and Democratic congressmen generally hailed President Eisenhower's inaugural message today as a magnificent creed to guide the new administration in the troubled days ahead.

Most of the GOP lawmakers couldn't find enough adjectives. They called the speech "clear and courageous," "inspiring," "dramatic," the "hallmark of eloquence."

But some, sharp critics of any policies remotely resembling those of the Truman administration, gave only qualified endorsement.

"The message deals in generalities," said Rep. H. R. Gross (R-Ia.). "I'm waiting to see him get down to specifics."

Some of the Democrats observed wryly that it was encouraging to see that the new President planned to carry out the wise policies of the previous administration.

Sen. Styles Bridges (R-N.H.), Senate president pro tempore, said: "With the simplicity which is the hallmark of eloquence, President Eisenhower set forth the creed of his administration."

Other comment: Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn.); "A dramatic and challenging statement of our declaration of faith... (that) should leave no doubt in anyone's mind as to the President's and the nation's determination to fulfill our responsibility of world leadership."

Rep. Charles Halleck (R-Ind.), majority floor leader: "It was a magnificent presentation dealing with the problems confronting the country."

Rep. James P. Richards (D-S.C.): "It is a clear and courageous exposition of what our foreign policy should be and what it has been during the past administration."

Rep. James Fulton (R-Pa.); President Eisenhower stands four square on the idea of mutual security, with the emphasis on mutual.

Rep. Clarence Brown (R-O.); "The President's speech gives encouragement to those who seek clean and sound government."

Rep. Usher L. Burdick (R-N. Dak.); "I approve... except I don't think we can bring about peace through the framework of the United Nations as now constituted."

House Speaker Joseph W. Martin Jr. (R-Mass.); "The people will receive it as a much needed tonic."

House Minority Leader Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.); "I agree with President Eisenhower that we should continue to make ourselves strong."

Rep. Overton Brooks (D-La.); "I have said all along that we have had to build up our own defenses first..."

Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.) called the address a "good speech" and said he agreed with most of Mr. Eisenhower's "philosophy."

Eisenhower Extends Guarded Peace Bid

WASHINGTON (UP)—Dwight D. Eisenhower became President of the United States today and immediately held forth a guarded invitation to Communist Russia to negotiate "honestly" for world disarmament.

But he also warned that Americans would rather fight than "try to placate an aggressor" by "trading honor for security." He said this nation will build up and maintain its strength.

"We must be ready," he said, "to dare all for our country." The soldier-hero of World War II took the oath of office before thousands of well-wishers massed in the east plaza of the Capitol and millions more who watched by television the installation of the first Republican president in 20 years.

He extended his cautious peace feeler to the Kremlin in a brief, strikingly non-partisan inaugural address delivered after he was sworn by Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson.

Declaring world peace the "supreme" goal of his administration, Mr. Eisenhower said he will "stand ready to engage with any and all others in joint effort to remove the causes of mutual fear and distrust among nations, and so to make possible drastic reduction of armaments."

He quickly added, however, that any such negotiations must be "aimed logically and honestly toward secure peace for all" and "every participating nation" must be prepared to prove its "good faith."

President Eisenhower evidently harbored no great hope that Russia would soon accept such terms. For he went on to warn his countrymen that a long, hard pull is ahead of them.

Pleading for a rebirth of the patriotism that puts duty to country above all selfish interests, he said Americans must be prepared to "accept whatever sacrifices may be required" to keep this nation strong enough to hold aggressors in check. And he urged the rest of the free world to do likewise.

Two former presidents—Herbert Hoover, the last Republican to occupy the White House, and Harry S. Truman, who achieved extraordinary status the moment Mr. Eisenhower took the oath—were included in the throng at dignitaries who filled the big Capitol plaza to overflowing.

Mr. Eisenhower had begun his big day by praying for divine guidance at a private service at the National Presbyterian Church. He was escorted to the Capitol by Mr. Truman and Republican leaders of the House and Senate.

Richard Milhous Nixon was sworn as Vice President shortly before Mr. Eisenhower took his oath to become the 34th U. S. president. A fellow Californian, Sen. William F. Knowland, administered the oath to Nixon.

Mr. Eisenhower devoted his 2,300-word inaugural address entirely to international problems. Details of his domestic program will be spelled out in the State of the Union message which he plans to deliver in person before a joint session of Congress, probably next week.

The new President set forth nine "rules of conduct" for the United States and the world and said that if these are observed, "an earth of peace may become not a vision but a fact."

No. 1 was his promise to make America strong, and quickly followed by the peace feeler to the Kremlin.

Then, in rapid-fire order, the old soldier: Scored appeasement—"A soldier's pack is not as heavy as a prisoner's chains"; Called on every free citizen everywhere to "place the cause of his country before the comfort of himself"; Promised proven friends they can count on American help but that they must help themselves, too; Pledged himself to foster policies that encourage productivity and profitable trade; Rejected "any insinuation" that one race, or people is inferior or expendable; Promised to make the United Nations an effective force for peace; "And in our quest of honorable peace," he said, "we shall neither compromise, nor tire, nor ever cease."

"This hope—this supreme aspiration—must rule the way we live."

"We must be ready to dare all for our country. For history does not long entrust the care of freedom to the weak or the timid. We must acquire proficiency in defense and display stamina in purpose."

"We must be willing, individually and as a nation, to accept whatever sacrifices may be required of us. A people that values its privileges above its principles soon loses both."

Mr. Eisenhower's nine "fixed principles" dealt mostly with global problems.

1. "The statesman's first task must be to develop strength that will deter aggression and promote peace. But, abhorring war, the United States stands ready to engage 'with any and all others' to remove world fears and distrust, and to make possible drastic reduction of armaments." Such engagements must be directed honestly and logically toward secure peace for all, and provide methods to assure good faith all the way.

2. "Realizing that common sense and common decency alike dictate the futility of appeasement, we shall never try to placate an aggressor by the false and wicked bargain of trading honor for security. For in the final choice a soldier's pack is not so heavy as a prisoner's chains."

3. Upon the strength, productivity and security of the United States depend the hopes of free men everywhere.

4. "We shall never use our strength to try to impress upon other people our own cherished political and economic institutions."

5. We shall strive to help proven friends of freedom within the limits of their needs, but shall count upon them to assume "their full and just burdens in the common defense of freedom."

6. "Indispensable to military strength and world peace, we shall strive to foster everywhere, and to practice ourselves, policies that encourage productivity and profitable trade."

7. Economic need, military security and political wisdom suggest regional groupings within the United Nations and the United States will help foster such, worldwide: (A) By joining our Western Hemisphere neighbors in the common purpose and; (B) By asking Western European leaders to strive with renewed vigor to achieve unity of their peoples.

8. "We hold all continents and peoples in equal regard and honor. We reject any insinuation that one race or another, one people or another, is in any sense inferior, or expendable."

9. "Respecting the United Nations as the living sign of all people's hope for peace, we shall strive to make it not merely an eloquent symbol, but an effective force."

Surrenders Most Powerful Office In The World Today; Seems Almost Lighthearted In His Final Hours

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Truman surrendered the most powerful office in the world today with "no regrets."

He seemed almost lighthearted, in fact, as he moved through the memory-filled White House for the last time, on last-minute errands.

Now that it was nearly over, a United Press reporter asked the President whether he ever regretted his decision not to run for a second term.

"No, indeed," he said. Up to the last minute, the retiring, 68-year-old president maintained the secret on what he would wear to the inaugural ceremony at the Capitol.

Until the instant he greeted Mr. Eisenhower at the White House, Mr. Truman's hat plans were secret. When the answer came out, it was homburg.

His successor, Dwight D. Eisenhower, started a late scramble for black homburgs by announcing he was breaking with the silk top hat tradition.

Since he didn't bother telling the White House about the decision, Mr. Truman felt free to wear any hat he pleased.

The President was up as usual shortly after dawn to put the finishing touches on his packing, to chat with Cabinet officials who planned to drop by, and to make a final inspection to be sure everything is shipshape for the new White House tenants.

Mr. Truman's date with the Eisenhower party for the trip to the Capitol was at 11:25 a. m. e. s. t. After the ceremony, there was a farewell lunch at Secretary of State Dean Acheson's Georgetown home.

It was the final meeting of the man from Independence and his official family. Afterward, there was a nap at appointments Secretary Matthew J. Connelly's apartment and finally the long trip back to Missouri in the White House railroad car loaned by the new President.

Monday, Mr. Truman bustled about the White House cleaning up his desk, finishing some personal correspondence, and paying a visit to the bank.

He showed the exuberance of a man shedding the crushing burdens of seven years and nine months in the hottest spot on the globe.

Trial Slated For Former Kluxers

WHITEVILLE, N. C. (UP)—A swift roundup of 14 former Ku Klux Klan members by the FBI set the stage today for another mass trial in connection with a wave of hooded terrorism in the Carolinas.

The FBI charged 14 men brought in from two states yesterday and five other former klansmen already serving prison terms with kidnapping and conspiracy in the flogging of a white man on Oct. 20, 1951.

Record Year For Bank Is Reported

A report to stockholders of State Bank and Trust Company this morning disclosed that the bank's earnings for the past year, before income taxes, were the highest of any year in the institution's history.

In making his annual report before the annual meeting of stockholders held at 10 o'clock this morning, Cashier John Mitchell stated the bank's earnings for the past year totaled $40,110.70.

"Of that total amount, however, Federal and State income taxes subtracted $12,877.41, which left a balance of $27,233.29 for stockholders," Mitchell stated. Of the remainder, $12,000 was paid in dividends.

"Overall net earnings amounted to $27.28 per share, a slight increase as compared with $26.90 for the previous year," the cashier declared.

Stock Reported President B. Sugg presided over the annual meeting, which was termed "well attended" with approximately 80 per cent of the stock being present or represented by proxy.

The president called attention to the fact that despite near-disastrous conditions prevailing in this section during the past crop growing season, the bank's deposits were off only two per cent from deposits on the corresponding date last year.

Rev. Robt. Boyd Dies In Charlotte

CHARLOTTE—The Rev. Robert S. Boyd, 72, former pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Greenville, died yesterday in Charlotte.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock at the Presbyterian Church in Laurinburg.

Commission Names Bilbro Chairman, Replacing Heber Tripp

Tyson Bilbro (above) was elected chairman of the Greenville Recreation Commission last night at a meeting of the commission.

Bilbro replaces as chairman Heber B. Tripp who was last night named vice president of the commission. Recreation officers for 1953 also included Mrs. Carrie B. West who was elected teen-age chairman.

As outgoing chairman, Tripp encouraged the commission to work more closely with the Elm Street Park project committee and expressed the need of an activity building by saying it is becoming more and more essential.

The commission adopted a resolution in appreciation of Tripp's "good and faithful service for the past six years as chairman" and expressed its appreciation for his outstanding work toward the promotion and leadership of recreation in Greenville.

It was brought out at the meeting last night that the Greenville schools have turned over a building for the recreation department's use for use as a maintenance building for the recreation department's use.

In a report made by Warren Carroll, recreation director, an outline of the department's program for the year was revealed. He named the following as those which should be concentrated upon:

Athletics such as basketball, baseball, tennis, etc.

Chairman And Co-Chairman Of Red Cross Funds Drive Chosen

Dr. Leo W. Jenkins and Mrs. Blair Cox Wheelless have been appointed as chairman and co-chairman of the 1953 American Red Cross Fund campaign in the city and county.

The appointment of the two was made and announced by E. Hoover Taft, chairman of the Pitt County Chapter of the Red Cross.

Mrs. Wheelless will have charge of the campaign in the county townships and Dr. Jenkins will conduct the campaign in the city of Greenville.

Dr. Jenkins served last year as chairman of the Red Cross Fund campaign. "His experience and ability as an organizer will mean much to the success of the campaign," stated Taft. "He has high appreciation of the work of the Red Cross, especially the blood program."

In making the appointment of Mrs. Wheelless as co-chairman, Taft said the chapter was "very fortunate in having her as a part of the campaign because of her past record and achievement in every field she has undertaken."

"Mrs. Wheelless comes from a family which have always been enthusiastic as Red Cross supporters," said the chapter chairman. "Her husband has been outstanding in carrying on the blood program in Farmville and her mother, Mrs. Roy Cox, served last year as fund campaign community chairman, raising her entire quota in less than four days."

Taft expressed gratification in having Dr. Jenkins, and Mrs. Wheelless as leaders of this year's campaign, because, he said, "our quota has been increased this year to meet our blood program requirements and also to meet our part in the fight against polio through the use of blood derivatives.

"National Red Cross has been requested to undertake the securing of the important blood derivative by the Department of Defense, the National Foundation of Infantile Paralysis, and the American Medical Association," he explained, "and we are the only organization set up to do that type of work."

Superior Court Speeds Through First Day; Grand Jury Is Busy

In yesterday's opening session of the January criminal term of Pitt Superior Court, Judge Henry A. Grady ordered a Pitt native not to operate a motor vehicle for a period of five years.

At the conclusion of the State's evidence against him, John Lloyd Corey tendered a plea of guilty to driving drunk. The New Bern jurist sentenced him to six months on the roads, suspended provided he remain on probation for five years, pay a fine of $100 and costs and surrender his driver's license for five years.

Noah Mooring, Jr., 16-year-old Negro youth, was found guilty of larceny after being indicted for larceny of an automobile. He was sentenced to six months on the roads, suspended provided he remain on probation for five years, pay court costs and pay the prosecuting witness $101 for damages to the automobile. Stanley W. Stovall pled guilty to driving drunk and was ordered to pay a fine of $100 and costs and not operate a motor vehicle for a period of 12 months.

Myron Teel was charged with reckless driving and driving drunk but the driving drunk charge was not pressed and he was ordered to pay the prosecuting witness $50 for damages.

Other cases heard were: Robert Cox, public drunkenness, fined $25 and costs. Johnny Griffin, public drunkenness, fined $25 and costs. Jessie Willard Morris, speeding, fined $50 and costs. Solicitor W. J. Bundy took a nol pro in cases against the following defendants: Thomas D. McMillan, James Battle, Johnnie Harris, Alfonso Rouse, John Atkinson, Herman Langley, Stanley William Stovall and Durwood Smith. The Pitt County grand jury found true bills in the following cases: F. C. Bonner, Peter Baxter, Defoye Inman and Arcadio Rodriguez, robbery.

Rufus Gaine, Harry E. Flack, James Marvin McLamb and Velton Deese, robbery. Sammy Sneed and Profit Sneed, assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill.

Bertha R. Harper, carry a deadly weapon with intent to kill. Roy Spencer Cox and Clarence McInnis Midgett, larceny. R. M. Brown, false pretense. The current term of court was slated to be in session through Friday, but speculation this morning indicated it might end tomorrow or Thursday.

Attend New Bern Ports Discussion

City and county representatives left this morning for New Bern to attend a meeting of the North Carolina Coastal Marine Council where the development and use of inland ports will be discussed.

The Marine Council, which was organized last summer in Belhaven, will convene at the city hall in New Bern. Attending the meeting from Greenville are Mayor Lester D. Page, W. T. Kyzer, chamber of commerce manager, J. T. Dupree, vice-president of the county commissioners, and M. B. Hedges, member of the board of county commissioners.

The Water Resources Committee of the Department of Development and Conservation will meet in New Bern at the same time to receive recommendations from the council for the purpose of engineering a survey of waterways in eastern and southern North Carolina.

The council was organized to promote the development of smaller inland ports as feeders to the large ports of the state; to bring the small ports into use; and use the small ports as stopovers for persons traveling on the inland waterway.

Biggest Mines Are Neighbors

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP)—The world's two biggest coal mines lie within a 5-mile radius in Southwestern Pennsylvania.

Both are captive; that is, steel-company-owned, each produces more than four million tons of bituminous coal per year. All of it is turned into coke to feed the mighty furnaces that produce iron.

Entertainment World's Great Offered Big Show Last Evening

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—The glittering world of the entertainment world filled the night with comedy, song and dance.

It was a mammoth salute to the new President from the brightest stars of Hollywood, Broadway and Television.

For four hours, they shuffed from cavernous Uline Arena, to the Capitol Theater to entertain 9,000 merry-makers in the climax of the pre-inaugural hoopla.

There was Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Walter Pidgeon, Esther Williams, Irene Dunne, Hoagy Carmichael, Fred Waring, Jan Pierce, Dorothy Shay and too many others to mention.

But they were hard put to outshine the glittering array of Washington officialdom—decked out in diamonds, satins, minks, and board stiff shirts and striped pants.

The only Eisenhowers to make the show were the President's son, Maj. John Eisenhower and his wife, Barbara. But by mistake they were passed up when other notables were introduced.

The new vice president, Richard M. Nixon, was there with his wife, Pat, a strawberry blonde in a long satin gown under silver-threaded lace.

But Nixon had his troubles. In the confusion, his coat got lost and he had to move from Uline over to the Capitol Theater for a second show without a coat. It turned up later but not until he had spent some anxious minutes.

What with the Hollywood and Broadway talent turning in performances for free, the American Federation of Musicians' president James C. Petrillo figured he could help out, too.

The musicians played all evening for nothing but expenses. And the union will pay musician salaries for tonight's inaugural ball, too.

The gags flowed free and easy and were both corn and funny. Samples:

Bergen—"Well, I see we have the cream of society here."

McCarthy—"It looks like it curled to me."

Bergen to his dummy, Mortimer Snerd—"How can you accumulate such stupidity?"

Snerd—"I have good connections in Washington."

And so the program rocked along with Waring and others supplying the music, Dorothy Shay giving with her inimitable hillbilly songs, and the Texas Rangerettes dancing.

When it was all over, one tired, heavy-jowled bigwig cracked: "After this, I'm not sure I'm up to the inauguration."

Vice President Richard Nixon Hopeful His New Job Will Keep Him Really Busy

United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—Richard Milhous Nixon, a busy young man who likes to be active, hopes to stay that way as vice president.

His only ambition, he said, is to "do the best job I can" in the nation's second highest office.

Nixon who turned 40 on Jan. 9, becomes the second youngest vice president in history.

Few men have had such swift success in public life. His rise from an obscure young California lawyer to vice president spans only six years. He was elected to the House in 1946, to the Senate in 1950 and vice president last November.

An important figure in the Nixon success story is his attractive wife, Pat, a reddish-blond with dark brown eyes. She encouraged him to enter politics. She campaigned with him. And she was at his side that dramatic night last fall when, with his political career at stake, he went before a nationwide television and radio audience to explain his controversial expense fund.

Nixon, a six-footer who packs 180 pounds on a husky frame, looks almost boyish when he flashes his smile. And his curly black hair hasn't a touch of gray. But he is serious and earnest at work.

The new vice president said the family has no plans for moving out of the attractive, two-story house they bought in 1951 in an upper-class Washington residential area, Spring Valley—the house that became a campaign issue.

Daughter Tricia, 6 will continue to go to a public school nearby. There is another daughter, Julie, 4, and the famous Nixon cocker spaniel Checkers.

Although he rates a limousine and chauffeur, Nixon plans to keep the family car, a four-door blue 1950 Oldsmobile, and use it for all but formal occasions.

Nixon lives simply. He doesn't smoke, drinks little, and tries to keep in shape by walking vigorously, working in his yard and swimming whenever he can.

He admits the new job will call for a lot of social activity. But he and Mrs. Nixon are determined that it won't upset their family life at home with Tricia, Julie, and Checkers.

Prompt Attention To Respiratory Disease Advised By Health Director

The upper respiratory disease afflicting the nation is also prevalent in the county with a concentration in Greenville, Farmville, Ayden and many rural areas.

Dr. Walter Humbert, county health director, said today the county and state is hard-hit by the disease but at the present it is not schools or advise strongly against public meetings.

The health officer explained that the illness comes from a virus disease not unlike influenza. "It is a typical virus acting like influenza," stated the doctor.

Dr. Humbert urged people who are sick with headaches, colds, chills, fever, and tiredness call a doctor immediately. "If properly managed, the disease does not involve serious complications," he said. "Follow your doctor's instructions and don't try to go back to work too soon."

Mrs. Hadley Hostess To Lector Book Club

Mrs. Herbert Hadley was hostess to the Lector Book Club on Tuesday, Jan. 13. President Mrs. Louis Gaylord opened the meeting for the afternoon. The roll was called, the minutes read and approved. After a brief business session the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Burrey Warren Jr., who told the story of Esther as a continuation of the study of the Old Testament.

After the program Mrs. Hadley served a delightful salad course with coffee. The books were exchanged and the meeting adjourned.

Eisenhower Guarded By 5,000 Skilled Marksmen

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Secret Service, the military, and Washington's finest combined forces to assure Dwight D. Eisenhower maximum protection on his inaugural ride between Capitol Hill and the White House.

All told, some 5,000 men—each an expert marksman—were assigned to guard the crowd-packed two-mile route.

The Secret Service, whose responsibility it is to protect the President, brought in agents from throughout the country to handle this, its biggest assignment. For security reasons, officials refused to disclose plans for guarding the incoming and outgoing presidents, vice presidents, and their families or to reveal the number of agents assigned to "Operation Inauguration."

But it was known that a near-record number of men were tapped for the big job—augmented by Air Force troops from nearby installations; upwards of 1,000 Washington policemen; 230 armed services policemen; 100 plain clothesmen; 200 firemen and an undisclosed number of FBI agents—possibly running into the hundreds.

Another 1,300 policemen were assigned to patrol nearby streets.

A select detail of plainclothesmen gathered from all parts of the country also were brought in for a special assignment—to be on the lookout for pickpockets and confidence men.

Long since, Secret Service agents began checking reservations for hotel rooms looking down upon the parade route. They "cased" buildings strung along the route—from roof to basement. Workers in government buildings on Pennsylvania Avenue were required to have special passes.

A squad of agents was assigned to flank the presidential automobile carrying Eisenhower and Mr. Truman up to Capitol Hill and Mr. Eisenhower on the ride back to the White House. Others were ordered to mingle in the crowds or stand watch from roof tops—all poised to guard the President from over-enthusiastic well-wishers or assassins.

DETROIT (UP)—Clifford Miller was hailed before Recorder's Judge Gerald Groat on a charge of panhandling.

Miller, 49, handed a card to the judge which said "I am deaf and dumb. Any donation would be gladly appreciated."

"Sixty days," said Groat. "Ouch!" said Miller.

At Dairy Meet

John B. Webb, Jr., of Carolina Dairy Products, Greenville, N. C., and President of the North Carolina Dairy Products Association, will preside at the Association's 19th Annual Convention to be held in Pinehurst, January 21-23-25. Some 550 Association members, key agricultural leaders and guests are expected to attend the three-day meet.

Spiritual Basis Of Peace Said Up To Individual

By WYATT BROWN
 The spiritual basis of a real world peace was presented last night to the Greenville Rotary Club by Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Washington, D. C. Leaders of the United States might evolve the perfect peace, but if the individuals of the United States were not spiritually and morally prepared for it, peace would not be realized.

Here's the way Truman figured out his own and Eisenhower's pay:

Annual salary	$100,000
Tax free expense allowance	50,000
Total	$150,000
Tax on salary alone	56,000
Take-home pay	94,000

Eisenhower:

Annual salary	$100,000
Taxable allowance	50,000
Total	$150,000
Tax on full amount	95,000
Take-home pay	55,000

Presidential Pay

WASHINGTON (AP)—As president, Dwight D. Eisenhower will receive about $39,000 less in take home pay than his predecessor Harry S. Truman.

The latter wanted Congress to remove this difference by retaining for Eisenhower the same tax exemption on a $50,000 expense allowance that Truman enjoyed. Eisenhower himself made no comment and Congress, which had to act by Jan. 20 for the new President to benefit, did nothing about it after a House committee rejected the bill.

Adult Education Courses Open At College Tonight

Adult education courses at East Carolina College, discussed at preliminary meetings last week, are getting under way this week. Opportunity to enroll in courses in business education and in industrial arts is still open to those who wish to enroll.

Beginning Shorthand, offered by the department of business education, will hold an organizational meeting tonight at 7:30 in the Flanagan building, Room 10B.

It is essential, says Dr. Elmer R. Browning, director of the department of business education, that those who are interested in taking the course in beginning shorthand should be present tonight. Final arrangements as to days and hours of meeting will be made at this time.

Met Monday night in the Industrial Arts shops in the Flanagan building, and instruction in the class began. Donald Amelon of the college faculty is teaching the course, in which at present twelve people are enrolled.

Mr. Amelon announces that any other student who is interested in taking this course should communicate with him immediately. The class meets each Monday from 7 to 9:30 p.m.

Brush-Burning Laws In State Require Permit

Pitt County Forest Ranger N. S. "Kid" Tyson today called special attention to North Carolina laws regulating brush burning during the period beginning February 1 and ending June 1, 1953.

Tyson explained that the law requires residents of Pitt County to obtain permits before burning brush or other trash near State protected woodlands.

"Farmers planning to do any burning are urged to set fires in grass along plowed strips to burn into the wind," the ranger stated. "They should burn brushpiles from the leeward side, and start on the uphill side of the field first."

One pile should be burned to test the wind, Tyson instructed, then burn only as many piles as can be handled safely at one time. When possible burn about 4 p.m. when moisture in the air is increasing.

"Keep at least one man on the job until every spark is out, and be sure to notify adjoining landowners that plans are being made for burning."

Burning permits may be obtained from the following agents: N. C. Forest Fire Tower, N. S. Tyson; Pitt County jail, W. G. Leggett; Stokes, J. H. Whitehurst; Greenville, Route 5, W. A. Lee; Falcous, Cecil Satterthwaite; Grimesland, W. H. Sutton; Stokes town, Jimmy Edwards; Greenville, Route 2, Blanco Ross; Winterville, G. W. Dall.

Ayden, B. B. Barden; Ayden, Route 1, Wilbur Garris; Greenville, Route 3, Mrs. Linwood Haddock; Ballards Crossroads, Mrs. Thurman Crawford; Farmville, J. H. Bundy; Fountain, A. J. Moore; Belvoir, Poliards Store; Grifton, Merphoy Brothers; Bethel, Major James; Black Jack, Curtis Spencer; Grimesland, Robert Little; Faldand, E. W. Wooten; and Stokes, Cecil Crandall.

Monday's Cases In Police Court

Louise White, Negro woman, was found guilty in City Recorder's Court yesterday on a charge of discharging firearms in the city and was given a 30-day suspended sentence.

Judge Charles Whedbee ordered that the woman pay $10 and be of good behavior for a term of 12 months and was placed on probation for a similar period. Further condition of the sentence was that she is not to have in her possession at any time firearms of any description.

Cleveland Fleming was found not guilty of non-support after a lengthy hearing.

Speeding: Butler Roy Avery paid $20, less cost of court and was ordered not to operate a motor vehicle for one week.

Drunk: Green Lyons Jr., Levi Green, Curtis Landen, $10, each.

A fine of $5 was levied against Neal Nobles, 73-year-old Negro man who was charged with possession of a quantity of non-tax paid whiskey. James B. Caprell, charged with being drunk, was fined $10; while a second case charging indecent exposure was not pressed.

Wallace Jones, assault on a female (his wife), was given a 30-day suspended sentence and is not to harm or molest his wife, Dora Jones. He was further ordered to pay $17.50 into the Pitt County Welfare office for support of his children each week, beginning January 24.

Theodore B. Lupton was found guilty of passing at an intersection and prayer for judgment was ordered continued in the case upon payment of $15. He was originally charged with careless and reckless driving.

Seminary Closed On Red Orders

HONG KONG (AP)—The Catholic seminary in Suancheng, Anhwei province, has been closed down by the Chinese Reds, Catholic headquarters here have announced.

Rector of the seminary, Rev. Fr. Juan B. Lopez of Berritz, Spain, and two of his assistants arrived here having been turned out of the seminary in December, 1951. The three priests continued their work until their funds were exhausted. Then they were expelled by the Reds as "indigent foreigners."

Atlantic Christian College President Dr. D. Ray Lindley, of Wilson, N. C., will address the 19th Annual Convention of the North Carolina Dairy Products Association at 8:00 p. m. in Pinehurst January 21. Dr. Lindley is a native of Texas and is listed in Who's Who in America.

Co-Op System Is Urged In Islands

MANILA (AP)—Introduction of a co-operative system similar to those in Denmark and Nova Scotia has been urged as a solution to the Philippines' land tenure problem.

Sen. Gil Puyat, chairman of the Senate committee on public works and national enterprises, warns that "as long as there is cut-throat competition among people in their greed for possessions, the land tenure problem never will be solved."

Pedestrian Has Limit On Rights

TAMPA, Fla. (UP)—When a woman motorist halted her automobile in the pedestrian lane, pedestrian Charles W. Jones climbed upon the hood of the car and jumped up and down.

Jones' brief campaign for pedestrian rights cost him $32 in Municipal Court.

On Their Knees, But Not Praying

NEW YORK (UP)—Police paid a visit to the maintenance yard of the Independent Subway System yesterday and found 22 maintenance workers on their hands and knees in car 553.

But instead of "repairing the rolling stock, the men were rolling the galloping dominoes. They were arrested on gambling charges.

Purse-Snatcher On Grand Scale

NEW YORK (UP)—Police were looking today for a thief who goes in for purse snatching on a grand scale.

While truck driver Mark Calascibetti was delivering a purse to a customer yesterday a thief stole his truck containing $11,000 worth of women's purses.

From this point on Dr. Pruden made clear his concept of the role of Christianity in the bringing of peace. He proceeded by logical steps. First he cited marital problems as being primarily the outgrowth of a personal problem best adjusted by spiritual values. Next the racial problem instead of being a social problem to be settled by law was really again a matter of the heart being right from which heart would flow Christian brotherly love.

"Man does not have but one problem and that is the one within himself. Settle that one with God and all the others are resolved," he declared.

At this point he told of his experience with a Christian Japanese Ambassador prior to World War II. The ambassador was a true, sincere Christian and had to be recalled to Japan and replaced by Nomura to carry out the chicanery of the last days prior to Pearl Harbor for the Japanese. The Christian Ambassador disappeared during the war. After World War II he was heard from again, now teaching in a school of diplomats a course to inculcate Christian principles in ambassadorial conduct.

Next he related the conference between Jesus and Nicodemus. Christ told Nicodemus a change in the heart of man must occur before the coming of the Kingdom of God on earth.

In conclusion Dr. Pruden said since all other methods of getting peace had been tried maybe we would get around to Christ's way sometime. "I am trying to help God create men and women on whom the base of peace may rest," he declared in closing.

J. Howard Mays was a guest of the club and also B. L. Jessup of Statesville. Visiting Rotarians were Carl Short of New Bern and Jack Quinerly and Dr. Grady Dixon of Ayden. The program was presented by James Fleming, chairman of the "Rotarian" Committee, and he also introduced the guest speaker, J. Knott Proctor, club president, presided.

Peel Diaries To Be Held Century

LONDON (U.P.)—Widowed Lady Peel browses every night through 68 diaries that hold the secrets of her late husband's diplomatic career ranging from Washington to St. Petersburg in the last century.

She will be the last person living today who will read them. She has only nine months left to peep behind the scenes at the diplomatic scandals and secret triumphs of the closing years of the 19th century.

In nine months they must be sealed in a black box and deposited in a bank according to the will of her late husband, Sir Arthur Peel, who died last October, aged 91.

When the Foreign Office forbade him to publish them 31 years ago, his lawyers devised the formula contained in his will.

"Among The Greatest"

It said they may be published when the 13th in line for the British throne, the Earl of Harewood, 29, and his brother, the Honorable Gerald Lascelles, 28, have been dead 21 years, or until 100 years passed, whichever is shorter.

Sir Arthur named the two sons of the Princess Royal, the Countess of Harewood, when he was advised to connect the period for which publication should be delayed to the lifetime of the issue of some prominent person.

"If and when the diaries are published they will rank among the greatest," according to Lady Peel.

Sir Arthur made detailed notes of life at the first British embassy at Washington in 1801, and of diplomatic secrets in Rio de Janeiro, Bangkok, and St. Petersburg under the Czar.

MONEY TO BURN

NORTHWOOD, N. H. (UP)—The oil burner in Norman Purington's store blew out recently. Bob Burkland volunteered to clean the burner and found the cause of a vent obstruction—the $10 and $5 bills.

Parking Ticket Leads To Altar

NEW YORK (AP)—Just a year ago Miss Evelyn Tienken, 19, stenographer, stood in line more than two hours to pay a parking fine for her boss at Manhattan Traffic Court.

Behind the window, Lloyd Johnson, 25, a court officer, took the ticket and a $5 bill, returned a dollar in change and talked with the pretty Brooklyn girl until other people in line began to protest.

That ended Miss Tienken's traffic difficulties at not her relations with the court. Recently she was married to Johnson at the Congregational Church in Brooklyn on the exact anniversary of their meeting.

Strength for the Day

A PRAYER

God of the nations, in whose hand the children of the earth abide, we commit to Thy care this nation of ours about to begin again a new administration of its affairs. We thank Thee for the free institutions under which we are privileged to live, for the unimpeded choice by which we select our public servants, for the hope of a continued humanity and freedom by which we are continuously inspired.

Bless, we beseech Thee, the President of these United States as he assumes the duties of his high office: keep him in health and safety; make clear his vision, resolute his purpose, unselfish his aspirations. May we all, in every station in life, bow ourselves before Thee, the mighty Ruler of the universe, acknowledging Thy laws, seeking to know Thy guidance, walking humbly in Thy appointed pathways. Give health to our bodies, resourcefulness to our minds; give us an abiding faith in Thee, and that cleanness of conscience which springs from a continual attempt to do Thy bidding.

Remove from us—and from all the earth—the grim shadow of war. Lead us in the ways of peace, prepare us that our nation may be preserved and that at the end we may be gathered with other faithful servants to dwell with Thee eternally. In Jesus' name. Amen.

Another Inroad Into The Right To Know

A change in North Carolina's paroles system proposed in the first part of a bill presented by Rep. Rodman of Beaufort County, North Carolina needs.

Putting North Carolina's parole files in the darkness of government secrecy, as proposed in the last portion of Rodman's bill, North Carolina certainly does not need.

Rodman's bill calling for a three member commission appointed by the governor to serve at his will, follows the recommendations of Governor William B. Umstead. With that portion of the proposed legislation, The Reflector is in agreement.

The Reflector is, however, opposed to the provision which would shut the files of the commission away from public view; and provide that only by special permission could an individual gain access to the files. It would be placing a cloak of secrecy over another department of the government. It would be keeping from public scrutiny information which should be available at any time without having to go through a long line of red tape.

Far too many inroads upon the freedom of public information already have been made by agencies and departments of government on various levels. The paroles business — just like any other business of the state of North Carolina — is the business of the people of the state. Actions taken by those in charge of paroles have great bearing upon the lives and safety of residents of North Carolina, and the citizens of the state should have access to the records upon which the commission bases its decisions.

We can find no good reason for the secrecy provision Rodman has attached to his otherwise acceptable bill for the reorganization of North Carolina's paroles system.

Members of the General Assembly would be doing the people of North Carolina a grave injustice if they lock the files of the paroles office away from public scrutiny. Enough harm already has been done under the current paroles system by questionable decisions of the paroles office even with the files open for all to view. The situation could become even worse with the files under lock and key.

North Carolina's paroles files are public records. They should be left open to the purifying light of public scrutiny just as the other public records of the state are open.

Hail To The Chief, The New And The Old

Swearing in a new president turned out to be quite an extravaganza this year. More so, than was originally envisaged by the people who headed up the program, and by the American public at large.

However, there need be no lifting of the dubious eyebrow at this stage of the game. This country hasn't had a really big cause for formal celebration in a long time. Presidential inaugurations of the recent past have been relatively played down due to surrounding circumstances. There was the war; then a period of mourning put a damper on the succession-by-death; and more recently there was no change-over in administration when Harry Truman won in '48.

And while the inaugural ceremony is being played up this year, there are contributive circumstances which make it possible to give this momentous occasion something of the holiday air it deserves. Installation of a new president is a truly momentous and historical occasion and deserving of all the adornments implied in a national holiday.

While the eyes of a nation are focused on the incoming chief executive and a new administration, it would be fitting now to pay tribute to the man who is stepping out today.

At times such as this, it is customary to say only "nice things" about the late office-holder. We will not deviate from this practice; feeling as we do, that Mr. Truman has had enough hard knocks over the past seven years.

The most sincere epigraph anyone could pin on the presidency of Harry S. Truman is that he acts and talks like a man whose conscience tells him he's done the best he could... and his "best" was nothing to be ashamed of.

Any man who can pass that kind of judgment on his own work is deserving of admiration, no matter how grudging it might be, from his fellows.

To be remembered, too, is that the years of Harry Truman in the White House were most difficult years; a normally hard job became an almost impossible one. It took some remarkable traits for the Missourian to ride out those years on an even keel.

His place in history is left to the judgment of the future. No one can today place President Truman in any specific category of quality in statesmanship and wisdom, and expect him to stay in that category more than overnight.

If, as he says, he did his level best; then that's all we can ever expect of anyone.

May his remaining years bring him more peace of mind than an even greater personal stature than he has known in the past.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—Senate Democrats celebrated today's departure of Harry S. Truman and welcomed the arrival of President Eisenhower in a manner that should insure maximum cooperation between the White House and the "loyal opposition." Indeed, the minority in the upper chamber has achieved greater harmony among themselves than it did during the Truman Administration.

It has placed on the Foreign Relations Committee two men more in accord with Eisenhower's views on international problems than certain of the Republican members. They are Senators Humphrey of Minnesota, and Mansfield of Montana. Both have been active advocates of collective security as expressed in the United Nations and overseas aid to nations within the anti-Russian alliance.

As a matter of fact, the new Chief Executive may have to rely on them to offset the more critical viewpoint of such GOP newcomers as Senator Taft, of Ohio, Ferguson of Michigan, and Langer of North Dakota. The Mansfield recognition is especially significant because he is regarded as Capitol Hill's outstanding expert on Far Eastern affairs.

TWO REASONS FOR APPOINTMENTS—In organizing the Committee on Government Operations, which Senator "Joe" McCarthy hopes to transform into a Communist inquisition body, the Democrats had their minds on party interests as well as on Eisenhower's relations with the troublesome Senator from Wisconsin.

To this committee they named three able freshmen, whose abilities and personalities will enable them to stand up to McCarthy. If he gets out of bounds they are Kennedy of Massachusetts, Symington of Missouri, and Jackson of Washington.

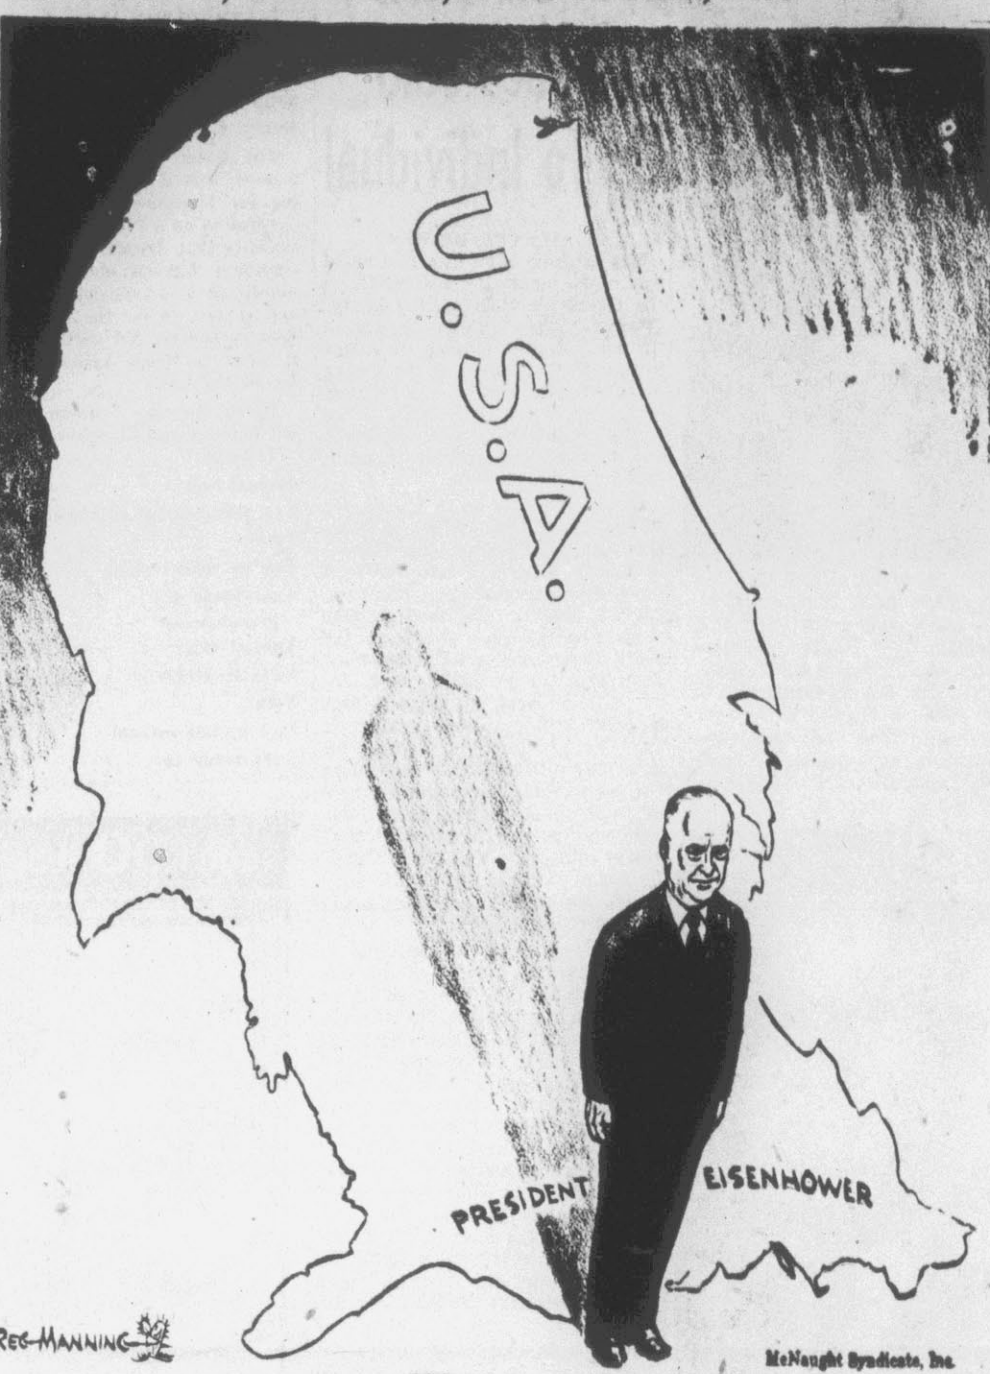

Since the three Democratic holdovers—Hoy of North Carolina, McClellan of Arkansas and Humphrey of Minnesota—are not "witch hunters," McCarthy will not be able to dominate them.

By contrast, the Republicans selected new members who, with one exception, generally sympathize with and support McCarthy's methods and program.

IKE HAS INTEREST IN CURBING MCCARTHY Both the Democrats and President Eisenhower have a definite interest in imposing some restraint on the exuberant member from Wisconsin.

The minority recognizes that McCarthy's attacks on the Truman Administration's alleged tolerance toward Communists and fellow-travelers within the Government won many votes for the GOP last November. What they now fear is that he may try to pin the Red label on the party as a whole, not merely on the Truman-Acheson faction, and damage its chances in future elections.

Before Him, The World; Back Of Him, The Nation.

Directing the school is Lynden E. Anderson who married the former Jean Clark of Greenville. In addition to having charge of the school in Greenville, Lynden covers from Greenville, north to the Virginia line and from Ayden to the coast. At present he has between 15 and 20 students lined up for driver training.

Anderson uses for training a 1950 Ford with dual controls. The car has a double set of clutch and brake pedals. The second set of controls is located half-way between the student driver and the instructor. The instructor is able to grab the wheel with his left hand, plus the fact that he can control the accelerator with his left foot.

The length of the course naturally depends on the progress of the driver. Some schools that have been in operation for a long period of time say that five and one-half lessons would be average. Eight would probably be a maximum.

The fee per lesson is $3, with all equipment furnished. According to figures released by driver training officials, the fee will average less than the vehicle wear and tear and damage done by the individual in learning to drive without the course.

"The hardest thing to teach," Lynden says, "is the overhand method of steering." By this he means holding the hands at the top of the wheel and turning corners by crossing one hand over the other. "The tendency is," he says, "to shuffle the wheel around instead of crossing the hands over each other."

Lynden teaches the standard shift of gears and for a very good reason. In some states driver's licenses are stamped "Incapable of driving a standard shift car" when the driver passes a test in a car with automatic shift. If this should happen here in North Carolina, Lynden's students would be protected. Drivers who pass in standard shift cars would naturally be qualified for automatic shift driving.

Headquarters for the Greenville Driver Training School is in Alexandria, Va., and similar schools in this system are located over the entire East Coast.

Lynden's telephone number is 2950 and his address is 916 Evans Street.

And I thank you.

No. 2 MAN—Until eight years ago North Carolina did not pay its lieutenant governors any salary or expense money, except the utterly inadequate compensation as presiding officer of the Senate. Recognizing that increasing demands were made upon the holders of the State's No. 2 office, the General Assembly of 1943 submitted an amendment, which was ratified by the people in 1944, providing for additional compensation as fixed by the legislature. On the opening day of the 1945 session the salary was fixed at $2,100 and incoming Lieutenant Governor L. Y. Ballentine was the first to draw the salary. On the opening day of the current session the Legislature added $1,000 a year expense allowance to the compensation.

ACTIVE — All through the years lieutenant governors have been called upon frequently to represent the State in official capacity, and the additional expense allowance probably will still leave the incumbent in the hole on spending for public service. Although there has always been the chance that the lieutenant governor might have to step into the No. 1 office for temporary or permanent activity, very little thought has been given to the selection or training of the man for those larger duties. The fact that more than 60 years have passed since it became necessary for a lieutenant governor to take over the top office has occasioned apathy and indifference toward the possibility.

TIMELY — The illness of Governor Umstead occurring just two days after his inauguration focused attention upon the importance of the Lieutenant Governor in the scheme of things. Fortunately, the Governor's illness appears slight, and except for some extracurricular and social functions he has been able to carry on without having to call upon the Lieutenant Governor. At the same time, demands are increasing upon the time and ability of the Lieutenant Governor in his own right.

COUNCIL — That makes particularly timely the editorial suggestion of the Wilmington Daily News that the Lieutenant Governor be invited and urged to sit in on Council of State meetings, participate in discussions, but not be permitted to vote. The idea might well be extended to other board and commission sessions usually attended by the Governor and at which basic state policies are formulated. The Wilmington paper points out that it is the custom for the Vice President to attend cabinet meetings. No legislation would be required to put the idea into practice, only an invitation extended by the Governor and the Council members. Certainly the information gathered under such circumstances would come in good in the unexpected and undesired, but ever possible event, of the No. 2 man having to step up to top place.

PAROLES — Legislators have been slow to voice either full approval or opposition to the measure introduced last Thursday designed to substitute a three-person commission for the single commissioner of paroles. Two features in the bill occasioned questions. One is that it would give the three-man commission little more power than the one man now has, leaving full responsibility for action in the Governor. Another and more objectionable feature is the provision for closing the records in parole cases to public inspection, which might well be construed to prevent the press from access to and publication of information showing what attorneys figured out in parole cases and who put pressure on the commission or the Governor to obtain favorable action. The bill authorizes dismissal of board members and employees for political activity, while the secrecy provisions enable them to indulge in political favoritism without chance of such action being brought to public attention.

PRIVILEGED—Newspaper editors have taken the position, which several legislators have expressed agreement, that there is some justification for closing SBI investigation files, because of the inclusion of many innocent people among those interviewed or investigated, but that there can be no excuse for secrecy with respect to the distribution of prisoners.

DIFFERENCE — There is an important difference between paroles on the one hand and reprieves, commutations and pardons on the other. The constitution places full responsibility for reprieves, commutations and pardons upon the Governor. No mention is made of paroles. The distinction is that action with respect to the distribution of prisoners.

If the public is asked or permitted to vote upon a $200,000,000 bond issue or any other bond issue, they should know exactly where the money is coming from, what further taxes they are voting upon themselves, what present or truly needed services are being undercut or jeopardized and where a necessity dissolves into a handout. Such a fellow is even less likely to pick quarrels with a wife, for as Dr. Knaff-Lenz says: "These physical effects facilitate the course of negotiations, as we know from the pipe of peace and the good cigar."

There are no ladies—the real he-man of your dreams. After he's gone you can get the smoke smell out of the draperies by spraying them with chlorophyll.

Quit dreaming, girls. Go find that man, and know your happiness. Editor's note: It is only fair to warn our lady readers that Boyle himself is getting bald, drinks tea, and smokes eight cigars a day right down to the stub. This is not to say, of course, that he is in any way prejudiced.

WASHINGTON—If parents of one country would agree with parents of another country to exchange visits of their children they could help set up a unique foundation for friendships and peace.

This is the opinion of Eiv Nordness, who has come from Oslo, Norway, with her two children to live in the United States. The pretty, blue-eyed wife of Ned Nordness, director of information of the Mutual Security Agency, believes children, having no preconceived notions of reservation about people, make friends more easily and honestly than adults and are quicker to learn the language and customs of others.

"My daughter, Tove, 11, and my son, Knut, 9, picked up English in a flash and are already correcting my mistakes," Mrs. Nordness told me. "They have adapted themselves wonderfully in their new school and community life."

Mrs. Nordness thinks that if committees could be set up in every country to arrange for the exchange of children between the ages of 12 and 20 in each other's homes for a year, a great stride could be made toward international understanding. "It would not cost much, for each set of parents would be caring for a set of children anyway and need not spend more on the other family's youngsters than on their own," she said.

Mrs. Nordness' first husband, the father of Tove and Knut, a young Oslo business man, who worked with the Norwegian underground during the war, was killed by the Gestapo in Oslo a few days before the liberation in 1945. "The Gestapo officers told me he had committed suicide," she said, "but Ned, who had associated Press bureau, investigated and found he had been murdered."

After her husband's death Eiv, who had studied chemistry and had worked from 1936 to 1938 in a chemical plant in Munich, Germany, took over his chemical agency in Oslo. Nordness, who served as AP bureau chief in Oslo until August, 1946, later became chief of information for the Marshall Plan, finally becoming deputy chief of the mission. He married Eiv in 1949.

Eiv is a popular figure in Washington, where she appears on formal occasions in her festive native holiday dress, a pearl-gray wool blouse, a light-blue wool skirt, gaily embroidered with a field of flowers.

Little Tove also wears a native costume to parties, but her mother says she's rapidly outgrowing it and anyway Tove prefers dresses like her playmates wear.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

Just how many new homes the building industry will put up this year is still a matter of conjecture. The total depends on many factors, among them the rate of formation of new families, the maintenance of high personal income levels and the size and nature of Federal assistance. Some authorities expect around 850,000 new units this year; more optimistic observers think it possible to equal last year's million plus.

But there is one building field that is certain to expand this year and that is the repair, modernization and expansion of existing homes.

Jobs will be created by these factors: Family growth. The record number of families formed in the years after World War II are expanding. Many of them are getting more children than they expected when they bought homes. Many boys and girls are reaching the age when they require separate bedrooms. All this will mean finishing off attics, erecting partitions and adding rooms.

Improved status. Incomes of many families are boosting them into higher social brackets, creating demand for better homes. And almost every time a house changes hands, either before or after the sale, there is an improvement job to be done.

Deterioration. Many of the post-war homes are nearing the time when repairs or remodeling are necessary. In some of the jerry-built houses put up immediately after the war, with shoddy materials and inferior workmanship, these repairs will be quite extensive.

On top of that, the home-building industry is learning some of the facts of merchandising and is putting greater stress on fashion. Owners of many prewar homes are thinking about having their kitchens modernized, their bathrooms Hollywoodized, their exteriors face-lifted. A few will backyards patioized and their changed to ranch-type homes; others, favoring split levels, will want bedrooms jacked up and garages built under them.

There will be plenty of work for those contractors who go after it. STATE'S WARNING AIDS FOOD RESERVE IDEA From time to time grocers in so-called target areas have tried to persuade families to lay in stocks of food for use in event of disaster. There have been few notable successes. Now the California Disaster Council has announced that in event of enemy attack it may have to close all groceries and seize stocks for emergency distribution. In a single action it did more to sell the public the idea of emergency supplies than the grocers themselves have been able to do in two years.

SALESPERSONS BRIEFED ON MIRACLE FABRICS The importance of giving salespersons adequate selling information on all the new miracle fibers has been stressed in this column.

Now one garment maker (Forest City Mfg. Co., St. Louis, Mo.) has published an eight-page leaflet describing the features and the washability of all of the important synthetic fibers and fabrics, and is distributing it to salespersons in stores handling its line. The initial response has been enthusiastic. Alfred H. Baum, advertising manager, reports.

ABOUT GOLD, KITCHENS, COMPETITION AN SUPERS

Doubloons of U.S. gold coin quality are being offered at $40 an ounce by a Philadelphia firm (David M. Bulwala, 77 S. 18th St.). What is said to be the first "ore to store" operation will be a reality soon when a steel company (Republic) starts marketing steel kitchenware made of metal from its own mines. Intense competition this spring among the new soil conditioners is indicated by the announcement of price cuts up to 33 per cent on one of the leading brands. Life Insurance finds that a favored location for supermarkets is on the right side of traffic arteries leading to residential sections.

New vinyl plastic floor tile, said to require no waxing and to improve with age, is being introduced (by B.F. Godrich, Watertown, Mass.). It is made in eight colors in 80 gauge size and tests have shown it to be fire- and moisture-proof and unaffected by alkali.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK (AP)—Ladies, if you want a real dream man, marry a guy who is bald-headed, drinks tea and smokes cigars. He may not look exactly like the man of your dreams, but he is. With the help of science I have figured this out as an unselfish public service to American womanhood.

The trouble with women has been that they don't recognize the man they really want when they see him. They are confused. They need some guide posts. I have them.

Editor's note: Oh, No, Boyle. Not again. Why don't you take up bird-watching?

Let's start at the beginning. Do all women truly pine for a gent who is "tall, dark and handsome"? No. They don't buy cold cream because of the shape or tint of the container. It is the same when they shop for a husband. The inner man is more important than his packaging.

What kind of a man do women really feel will make them happy? They all agree, pretty much on the essential. They want a man who is romantic, a money-maker, brainy, sure of himself, and sociable.

That means, first of all, the ideal beau is probably bald-headed. For it has been known for a long that baldies are more virile lovers than men whose heads look like an unclipped buffalo robe. If you don't believe this, ask any bald-headed man. He'll tell you romance is always in his heart.

Baldies also are more likely to have high incomes and to be steadier workers. They have to earn more money to afford all the lotions they buy in an attempt to grow their hair back. A girl who told me she liked him bald could then have all that money to spend on herself.

Now as to the tea-drinking, cigar-smoking male. Dr. Erich von Knaff-Lenz of the University of Austria has supplied the tip that a man with these habits is a fine matrimonial bet.

Dr. Knaff-Lenz's name may sound like an Austrian dessert served on a piece of optical glass, but he is a world authority on what different stimulants do to human beings.

He has found that tea is the most "imulating beverage for the intellectual man, coffee for the athletic man, it stirs up his ignorant muscles."

And he gives this picture of a man puffing on a cigar: "Boredom does not arise, mental work is more readily accomplished, disturbing anxiety is relieved, fatigue is banished and preoccupation with the ego is lessened with a resultant increase in sociability."

Such a fellow is even less likely to pick quarrels with a wife, for as Dr. Knaff-Lenz says: "These physical effects facilitate the course of negotiations, as we know from the pipe of peace and the good cigar."

What Other Papers Are Thinking

Bonus Bill's Reception First efforts to get the so-called bonus bill introduced in the 1953 session of the North Carolina General Assembly got the sort of reception to which they were entitled.

We are not thinking so much of the exchange between Chief Bonus Agitator Andy Del Vecovo and Speaker Eugene Bost, which was essentially personal in nature, as of the attitude of legislators who were sought to toss the bill which would call the bonus referendum into the hopper. One after another declined for sound and justifiable reason.

The Legislature, as well as the Governor, is responsible for the overall operations of the state, for a balanced budget, for the state's credit and fiscal soundness and for the financing of whatever obligation the state assumes. Legislators properly want to know where the $200,000,000 which is estimated would be required to pay the bonus is coming from. Any bond issue would have to be repaid and would, ergo, involve the whole credit and fiscal structure of the state. Interest on retirement would have to come either out of new taxes or funds which would otherwise go into badly needed state services and programs, affecting all of the people, among whom, incidentally, veterans and their families predominate, such as schools, medical care, mental institutions, roads, et cetera. Both legislative and executive have a transcending responsibility, based on their oath of office and first-hand information not before the citizenry in general, to determine what would happen if another $200,000,000 bond issue were voted upon North Carolina and how disruptive would be its effects upon all of the state's commitments and obligations. There is no place for demagoguery, emotionalism, commercialism or particularism in the process by which this decision should be made.

Every Child Has His Own 'Big' Problems

By DAVID TAYLOR MARKE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Many parents have the notion that the normal child is without problems. This, of course, is not true. Every child has problems.

Irma Simms, Black of the Bank Street College of Education, interviewed on the subject, says: "If parents comprehended that ALL children have some problems, they would be more relaxed and happier with their own children. And relaxation and happiness invariably help the child through life with a minimum of injury."

Discussing the everyday problems of the preschool child, this specialist on the education of young children broke them down into several problem areas.

The first weeks at nursery school, she says, are often a time of stress for both child and parent. The majority of youngsters are so delighted by the presence of other children and by the wide variety of play materials that they make the transition easily. But others cling to their parents in doubt and fear.

The reasons they resist school and are unhappy there are numerous, she believes. A few common ones are jealousy of a new baby at home, the suspicion that they are being pushed out because they are not wanted, a prevailing anxiety in any new situation.

Feeding problems are common, she says. Too many children sit before their balanced meals, resistant or just uninterested. The ironic fact is that many mothers who know just what to feed their children cannot get them to eat it.

But adults should remember, she says, "a 3-year-old cannot read diet lists but he can feel hunger.

It is his own biologic need that makes him eat—not any grown-up propaganda that spinach is good for him and that mother wants him to eat it."

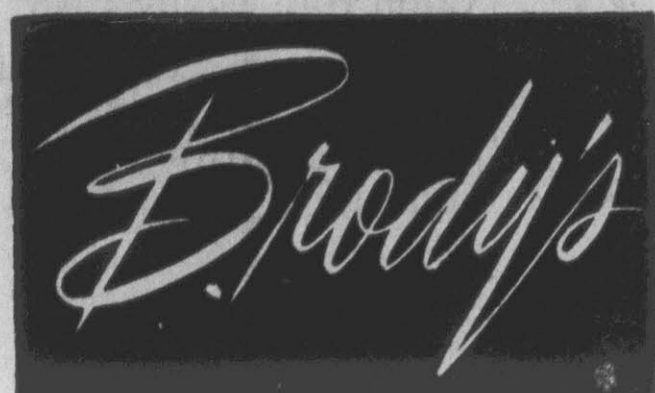

Another fact to keep in mind, she says, is that the pre-school child is likely to enjoy a few favorite foods and resist any departure from them. He should be allowed the simple pleasure of enjoying his favorite foods until he shows a spontaneous interest in others.

A way to encourage junior to eat, she advises, is to give him a chance to help with his eating. The thrill of getting a bite or two into his mouth unassisted will go a long way toward interesting him in food and toward building food habits.

Timidity or shyness is a "phase of growth" problem, she says. Fear of strangers toward the end of the year is normal. Also normal is the tendency to withdraw upon meeting other children in groups for the first time. Many pre-school children need a warming-up period after which they learn to stick up for their own rights.

A persistent and unchanging timidity however is symptomatic of tensions in junior's life. Dad, ashamed of his boy for being a "coward," may make a big issue of his not fighting back, thus pushing him into greater timidity. Or Mom may encourage him to run to her every time he gets into difficulties and fight his battles, thus encouraging greater timidity and dependence.

Other problems expanded by Mrs. Black into a 25 cents pamphlet in the 69 Bank Street series, include aggressiveness, masturbation, jealousy, tantrums, fears, resistance and "bad language."

Acquired Beauty 'Best' Says National Authority

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK (UP)—It is better to become beautiful than to be born beautiful, according to an authority who has been helping women improve their looks for 50 years.

Natural beauties get too accustomed to having everything come their way easily. Girls who have to work to develop their looks aren't in-half as much danger of developing unhappy complexes when beauty begins to fade in middle age.

Ann Delafield, a slim, attractive beauty authority who looks to be in her 40's, made the comments on the peril of being beautiful. "Then she smilingly agreed to let her age be revealed officially for the first time.

"I was 72 last June the fifth," she said. "And I've never had my face lifted." A combination of good care, good health and good luck kept her astonishing youthfulness, she admitted. Her hair, a natural looking dark brown shade done severely on top of her head in a coronet braid, "has been touched up for the last 30 years." She was one of the lucky ones.

in her opinion, because she was told as a young girl that "you'll have to be good, because you'll never be beautiful."

"When women develop naturally into great beauties, there's danger ahead," she said with conviction. "They may have been sweet and modest in their twenties, they may not have let it go to their heads but they still felt they had something others didn't have. And when they start losing their beauty, it's a terrific adjustment."

Her idea of a lucky woman is the one with "vibrant beauty—the kind that comes from good health and from learning to give of yourself to others. The so-called great beauties are not givers, they're getters."

Her list of today's most vibrantly beautiful women includes Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Sonja Henie, and Jeanne Crain.

"People ask me if I consider Marilyn Monroe typical of the lackadaisical beauties who expect things handed to them," Miss Delafield continued. "No, because Marilyn Monroe is not a natural beauty. She's had to work hard to become what she is. She's learned not to expect things the easy way."

Bucs Surrender NS Lead In High Scoring Contest

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Sports Writer

CULLOWHEE—Western Carolina Teachers College took over top place in the North State Conference standings by outlasting East Carolina 102-97 here last night. The victory was the fifth in six starts for the Cats. The Pirates have a conference record of six wins and two losses.

Pacing the all-important victory was the Cats' Little All-America guard Ronald Rogers. Rogers was at his incomparable best on offense and wound up with a total of 36 points. Despite his amazing show he had to take a back seat to the Pirates' Little All-America candidate, Sonny Russell.

Russell scored 35 points so far as offense was concerned but he more than tripled his value to the team with a brilliant defensive performance.

Behind Russell and Rogers in the scoring column were two players from each team. The Cats' Cecil McCormick and Ned Straehla scored 18 and 17 points respectively. For the Pirates Bobby Hodges had 22 and Charlie Huffman garnered 17.

The racehorse ball game was close only at the opening and closing minutes. In the opening minutes of the ball game it was Straehla, a dead-eye set shot, who kept the Cats just ahead of the Pirates. In the closing minutes Rogers was the man who came through.

The Pirates made their most serious bid early in the last quarter. They cut the Cats' margin to four points with eight minutes of playing time remaining but Rogers went to work to keep the Pirates from catching up.

The taller Cat team dominated rebound play. Jim Jordan, a 6'4" freshman from Welcome, N.C., was the individual leader in the rebound department.

The loss was the second straight for the Pirates who had won six in a row before embarking on their present western swing. They will conclude the three game road trip Wednesday night when they meet Catawba in Salisbury.

Little Ben Hogan Returns To Links

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UP)—Taking it from the nation's crack touring professionals, Ben Hogan, practice or no practice, still is a tough man to beat on the links.

Veteran E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, who hasn't missed a tournament in years, fired a seven-under-par 65 yesterday in the first round of the $10,000 Palm Springs Invitational Tournament—and all it got him was a tie for the leadership with Beniam Ben.

The second round today starts off with the brilliant shooting of the two leaders putting them only one stroke in front of PGA Champion Jim Turnesa, who had a 66. Also breathing on the backs of the leaders were Dick Mayer, Al Mengert, Ted Kroll and Pete Fleming each with 67. Twenty-two men broke 70 on the sun-kissed course.

The final 18 holes of the 5-hole tournament will be played Wednesday.

Baseball Team Named After Ike

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—Among the other honors that came to President Dwight D. Eisenhower today was that of having a baseball club as a namesake.

Directors of the Augusta club in the Class A Sally League voted yesterday to rename the team the Augusta Ikes—replacing the old moniker of Augusta Tigers.

A fan contest was held after last year's season in Augusta after last November's election and the new name was selected from a list of 193 entries.

NEW YORK: Chico Vejar, 152; Stamford, Conn., stopped Italo Scorticini, 155; Italy (4).

Joe Louis Appears In Ring Movies

By OSCAR FRALEY
NEW YORK (UP)—A plump Joe Louis prepared today for a ring comeback—but only for the movies.

A well-padded 225 pounds, the erstwhile Brown Bomber is getting ready to pare off 20 pounds so he can perform the tight sequences in "The Life of Joe Louis" and be in shape for an exhibition and refereeing tour of eight Australian cities come spring.

"It looks like an awful lot of work," sighed the former heavyweight champion of the world. "It's gonna take a lot of time from my golf, too."

Joe is disgusted, he says, because he "can't break 70," but he'd still rather stalk the fairways than climb through the ropes—even though golf has, for him, been a fabulously expensive hobby.

Joe's financial situation still is a mystery. He has his big fingers in a lot of pies, such as his own personal brand of firewater; director of boxing for the International Boxing Club at a reported $15,000 annually and ventures such as exhibitions and movies.

"I haven't heard from the income tax people yet, either," admitted Louis, who was said to have offered Uncle Sam a $100,000 settlement on an estimated $250,000 income tax deficit.

Meanwhile, Joe is keeping a watchful eye on the hassle which has developed as the boxing fathers attempt to corner Joe Walcott into his scheduled April 10 return bout against Rocky Marciano.

"I hope it goes through, because I believe that Walcott can beat Marciano," Louis insisted. Louis is convinced that Walcott became "careless" that night last September in Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium when Marciano flattened him in the 13th round.

"I kept yelling to him, 'Don't get careless, and then he did.' Joe snorted. 'But Joe was winning the fight up until then and I thought he'd take it.'

"I'm sure Walcott can win it back, because he is a better boxer."

Louis should know, because Walcott gave him fits the first time they met, back in 1947. That will be part of "The Joe Louis Story," as will Louis' fights with Billy Conn. Plans even call for the Pittsburgh Irishman to appear in the sequences.

Browns Need Strength In Defensive Tactics

This is the 13th in a series of interviews with major league managers.

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UP)—Marty Marion, manager of the St. Louis Browns and one-time "Mr. Shortstop," hopes his second year as an American League boss will find him in the first division.

Marty, slender and soft-spoken fielding wizard who made his fame with the rival St. Louis Cardinals, was enthusiastic over the 1953 club that has resulted from owner Bill Veeck's open pocketbook and willingness to trade.

"We will have punch and improved fielding along with a strengthened pitching staff," he said. "We won't have to take a back seat to anybody this year."

Marion was particularly high on his team because it will be strong "through the middle," with Clint Courtney behind the bat, heralded Bill Hunter at shortstop and Johnny Groth in center field.

"We lost a lot of games last year, at least 20, maybe 30, because our defense fell down at short or center," he said. "We'll win those games this year and we may pick up other victories on better hitting and pitching."

He conceded that first base was the trouble spot. Sievers, hampered by a shoulder separation for two years, was considered completely recovered and the burly former outfielder has worked hard learning the complexities of a new position.

"I can't say we're set at first base because Sievers has not yet won the job," he said. "But he will be our first baseman until somebody takes the place away from him, and we can sure use that bat of his."

Sievers was chosen rookie of the year in 1949 when he batted .306 and hit for distance consistently.

Seton Hall Leads Nation's Cagers; State Ranks 8th

NEW YORK (AP)—Seton Hall, the nation's only unbeaten major college basketball team, stands as the No. 1 team in the country today—thanks to its latest winning streak.

Basketball fans with long memories will recall that the South Orange, N. J., school leaped into national prominence back in 1941 with a 43-game streak, snapped by Long Island University in the National Invitation Tournament. The latest Seton Hall streak reached 13 with four victories last week.

Forty-six of the 92 sportswriters and broadcasters who voted picked Seton Hall as the top team. This gave the Pirates 775 points, on a basis of 10 for first, 9 for second, etc.

Seton Hall, moving up gradually from fourth place in the first poll after the Midwesterners had held sway for three weeks. Kansas State had ousted La Salle, which ruled the roost for the first two weeks.

LaSalle, incidentally, was the last team to beat Seton Hall. The Explorers edged the Hall, 80-76, in the first round of last year's National Invitation Tournament.

Kansas State fell to fourth place and LaSalle also dropped, sliding to fifth place, as Indiana and Washington moved in behind Seton Hall. Indiana jumped from sixth to second on the strength of its 74-70 double overtime victory over Illinois Saturday night. As might be expected, Illinois also tumbled, going from fourth place to sixth as a result of the defeat.

Kansas, which caused Kansas State's downfall with an 80-66 trouncing, moved into the first 10 at the No. 9 place.

Oklahoma A&M moved up two places to seventh, while North Carolina State held firm in eighth place and Fordham dropped down three to 10th.

The leaders (first-place votes in parentheses):

1. Seton Hall (46)	775
2. Indiana (18)	655
3. Washington (1)	504
4. Kansas State (2)	499
5. LaSalle	381
6. Illinois (1)	378
7. Oklahoma A&M (3)	345
8. North Carolina State (4)	283
9. Kansas	230
10. Fordham	206

Helen Copeland has an unorthodox style of shooting that is steadily racking up enough points to keep Stokes' girls basketball team very much in contention in the Pitt County Conference race.

"She shoots every shot with two hands," says her coach, Jack Edwards Jr. "Even crisp shots she shoots with two hands. Her shots look unorthodox but she makes them so I haven't tried to change her style."

Last week against county rivals Bethel and Chicod, Copeland looped in 29 and 19 points for high scoring honors as Stokes chalked up a pair of conference wins. For these outstanding performances the pert little forward has been chosen to receive Pitt County player-of-the-week honors.

Copeland is the team's only senior, 17 years old and has been playing basketball four years. Her favorite sport other than basketball is attending baseball games.

She began playing basketball as a freshman and almost immediately entered varsity competition because of a shortage of candidates for the team. It was while a freshman that Copeland began her two handed shooting technique that she has never had reason to change.

Greatest Thrill

The dynamic little scoring star lists the Chicod game last week as one of her greatest thrills in sports. "The whole team was worried because we knew that Chicod had a real good team. After we beat Chicod it was sort of like getting over the big hump. All that stands in our way now is Winterville."

Stokes' girls team has an 8-1 county conference record and have only been defeated by the girls champion Winterville outfit. "If we could just beat Winterville, that would top everything," crowed the 230 pretty miss.

After graduation she would like to take a business course in preparation for a secretarial career.

Grifton's J. R. Hooten, whose glittering performances enabled the Bulldogs to sweep a pair of victories last week, received runnerup honors.

Court Stars

Frankie Meeks, Copeland won Pitt last week for her role in Stokes' now has an 8-1 conference record. (Reflector Staff Photo)

Hooten consistently hits for more than 20 points a game and is a terrific playmaker passing off as often he he shoots.

Mary Jo Wynne also was outstanding in competition last week. She sparked a last half drive against Farmville that enabled the Bethel girls team to gain a 48-48 tie when defeat seemed certain.

More than anything else including basketball, she is interested in drama. She has appeared in the leading role in both junior and senior school plays. Proving to be very versatile on the stage she played the part of an 11-year-old girl in the production "Adorable Imp," and the part of an elderly aunt in "Aunt Samantha Rules the Roost."

Grifton's J. R. Hooten, whose glittering performances enabled the Bulldogs to sweep a pair of victories last week, received runnerup honors.

PRESENTING THE NEW CLASSIC
FOR 1953

Ladies and gentlemen, here is Oldsmobile's candidate for the best-looking, best-driving car of all for 1953. It's the glamorous new Ninety-Eight—the last word in "Rocket" engineering and Classic styling. That distinctive, long rear deck is balanced by a new, longer "power" hood. The front-end is new, more dramatic. The chrome trim is new, more distinctive. The whole silhouette is new, more exciting. The interiors have been enhanced and "entranced" by new upholstery and Custom-Lounge Cushions. Even the "Rocket" Engine is NEW—with higher power (165 hp.), higher compression (8 to 1), higher voltage (12-volt ignition). And to match this super performance, there's a new Power-Ride Chassis, new Pedal-Ease Power Brakes, Power Steering, and even Frigidaire Car Conditioning! We invite you to inspect the new Classic Ninety-Eight—in our dealership now.

Women In The Church

By MARY FOLWER
Mrs. W. Murdock MacLeod, general director of United Church women, national organization of women in the United States, announced that the Council's Biennial assembly will be held October 8, 1953, in Atlantic City, N. J. The last such gathering was held in 1950, and will hereafter be held on odd numbered years.

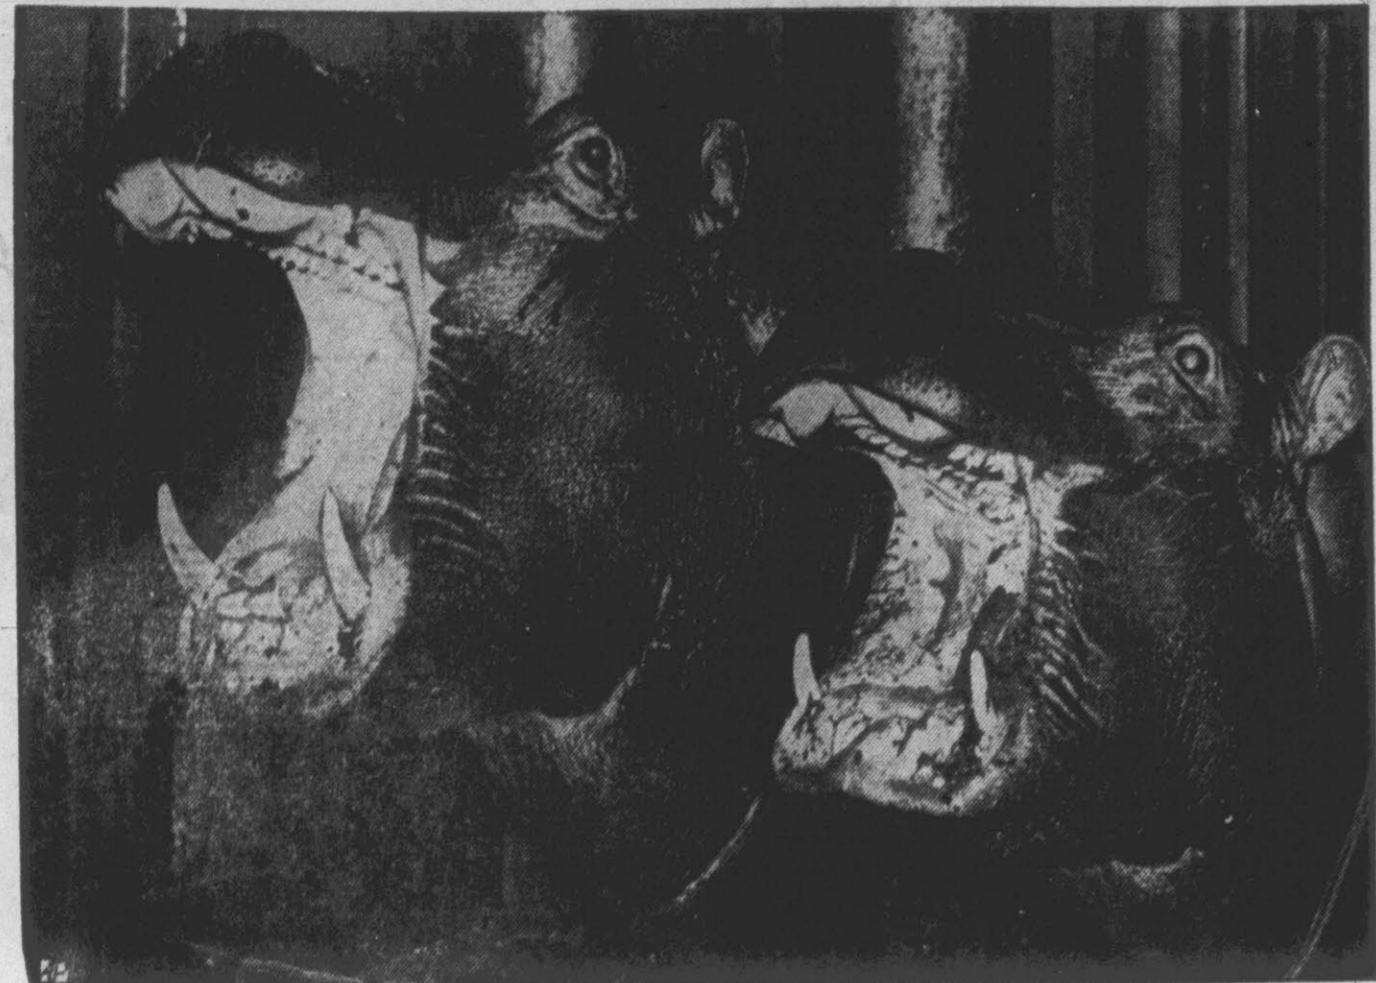

A Methodist home missionary realized a twenty-year-old ambition to serve a mission school in Africa, when Miss Julia Titus, principal of the Allen High School, Asheville, N.C., arrived recently at the Hartsell Training School in Umtata, Rhodesia. Miss Titus is the daughter of the Rev. Homer Titus, a retired Methodist minister of the Troy (N.Y.) Annual conference. For a number of years Miss Titus has corresponded with missionaries in Rhodesia always hoping she might serve there. Now, on sabbatical leave from Allen High School, a Methodist institution for young Negro women, Miss Titus will teach for a year at Hartsell.

Miss Edith Galt, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Elmer W. Galt, former missionaries of the Congregational Christian Churches in China, has been named a member of the staff of a missionary maternity hospital at Pusan, Korea — a hospital supported by Church World Service at war-torn land. Miss Galt was born in Pootung, North China, and was educated at Grinnell College and the Western Reserve School of Nursing. From the latter she holds degrees of Registered Nurse and Master of Nursing. From 1945 to 1950 she did public health work and hospital nursing in China. She is co-author of a manual on midwifery developed during service in China under NICEF of the United Nations. "No Place to Play," a motion picture of life and need in the Savannah River area is under production by the South Carolina Council of Church Women. Mrs. James Dabbs, state president, reports. Actual dwellers in trailers in this section will have part in a picture; and with it the women hope to enlist the cooperation of churches in providing recreational, educational and religious ministries for the people.

PLAN DROUGHT FIGHT
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Chinese Communists are starting a five or six-year program to eliminate drought in Hupel province by construction of some 2,500 small reservoirs, Peiping radio says.

Do CRAMPS give you that monthly look?
Do your periods show an aching, worn-out, nervous face during your "bad days"? Why let men see that you are suffering from monthly cramps? Try a little Cardui each day as thousands of women do. Let it help build strength and resistance so you have less and less misery each month. Some go through periods without feeling any discomfort at all. Also helps relax jittery nerves—sleep better. Look, feel, act younger, more normal all month. Ask for Cardui. (Say: "card-goo-ee")

Korea War Vets More Apt To Be Good Students

BOULDER, Colo. (U.P.)—Young men entering college after serving in Korea show promise of becoming better students than the soldiers who came out of World War II, according to C. Toepelman, director of veterans' affairs at the University of Colorado.

Toepelman, who keeps in close contact with the 249 Korean veterans enrolled at the university, bases his belief on several factors. Generally, today's veterans are much younger — between 20 and 22 years old — than the original GI bill students. This enables them to conform to college life more quickly and easily than could the World War II vets, Toepelman said.

Service Changes Help
Toepelman also pointed out that many of the first GI students had been out of school for as long as 10 years whereas many of the present students had a lapse of only two years in their education because they served a much less time in the armed services. "Changes in the armed forces themselves constitute another factor which improves the chances of the present-day students," he added. More time now is spent in services taking specialized training, and better opportunities are offered the serviceman to further his education through study. On the other hand, the wartime program of the armed services stressed rigorous physical training to prepare men for all-out combat duties and placed less emphasis on special studies or training.

"Another factor which cannot be overlooked or its importance denied is that a larger percentage of World War II veteran-students had participated in actual combat than have Korean veterans, and had readjust to civilian life to a greater extent.

More Bachelors
"Many of the first GI students were married and had children, which imposed an additional responsibility upon them. More of the Korean veterans are single. Only 25 per cent of the students enrolled at the University of Colorado are married.

"Also Korean veterans receive checks from the government with which they pay for books and tuition, while the World War II veterans' tuition fees and book costs were paid directly by the government. This makes the Korean veteran slightly better off financially. "After he pays for books and tuition, the average single student has $30 left out of his $110 monthly check. A single World War II veteran received only $75 a month for living expenses," Toepelman said.

Turkeys from South America were taken to Europe by the Spaniards soon after the discovery of America and the domesticated ocean to North America by English colonists.

PROMISE OF DELIGHT

By Mary Howard

Chapter 29

"I wasn't well, you remember, before you left, so I decided to take a little holiday. I wandered about the Continent, and then decided, before I went home, to come here to see you. I'm staying at Cannes."

"At Cannes? Why can't you come over here? How long are you staying?"

"I've decided to start back tomorrow. Your father's been living at his club quite long enough. When will you be back? When will you have finished here?"

Anthea turned to Mario, who said, "Very soon, at the end of this week, I think and then we will come back to England to make the interiors. I thought we should be away longer, but mio Dio, his hands flew up, 'what has got into the evil-child! I cannot think. She is trying to be an angel. She will have to be beatified. The Blessed Gina of Les Fleurs, complete with halo. If this goes on we shall soon have finished."

Anthea flushed. "It's Joe's good influence on her," she said dryly. "She eats out of his hand. Are you going now, Mother?"

"Yes, I have a car waiting down by the harbor. I want to pack and also see if I can get a plane reservation tomorrow. I think I will fly back." It seemed to Marian very important that she should get back quickly.

Marian and Anthea turned down the steep, stony road that led downwards, curving between crumbling stone walls, between small houses, the garden of villas and the fields of olives and apricots. They reached the end of the long slope, where the buildings of the town began, and she said, "Come, let's sit down and have a drink, or something, Anthea. It may be a week or two before I see you again," he put out a white-gloved hand, and took Anthea's chin, turning her face. "ark shadows. Overwork? Lack of sleep? Burning the candle at both ends?"

"A little of all, perhaps," said Anthea.

"Worry? How about Joe? Are you still in love with him, Anthea?"

"Yes."

"And he?"

"Yes. . . I don't know. . ."

Anthea suddenly put her elbows on the little round table, and buried her face in her hands.

"Tell me."

"There's Gina, Mummy Joe. . . indeed everyone has to look after Gina, until the film is made. And because she is in love with him, she sees to it that it is Joe who is with her."

"She's in love with him?"

"Yes." Anthea suddenly faced her mother honestly. "And love to Gina, between a man and a woman, has only one meaning."

Marian's brows went up. "It says what you mean," she said.

"She wants Joe, and that's the way she wants him," said Anthea ruthlessly, as though she were telling herself as well as her mother.

"It makes no difference if he really loves you."

"But how do I know? What can

I do, mummy, being my sort of person, with my sort of background, against someone like that?"

"There's nothing you can do but be yourself."

"Isn't there?" Anthea's face was so drawn and sharp that Marian's heart ached for her. Marian shook her head.

"You see, I know the Carlotis."

And she told Anthea the whole story of herself and Mario.

"Be true to yourself, Anthea," she said when she had finished. "That's all you can do. Don't be filled with self-pity, or take yourself too seriously, but don't hate Joe for being what he is. That's why you love him." He paused and gave a little rueful smile. "Many women love these Carlotis, but they can only love one."

She crossed the quayside, and got into her car, and drove away, and Anthea began to walk back to the villa.

Gregory had received the telegram at his club. It said, "Coming home," and gave the date and time of the plane's arrival. It added surprisingly, "Please meet me, dear." Gregory did not quite know whether to be elated or not. Marian had never in her life put an endearment in a telegram to him.

On an impulse, he stopped at a florist's near Covent Garden, bought a great armful of red roses, and put them down on the seat beside him. He was at the airport in good time, and fidgeted about the reception hall, feeling, for some reason he could not understand, curiously young.

When the plane came he watched it circle and then dip like a swallow to the ground. He saw Marian, in her neat grey suit and white hat, pause at the top of the steps and look around anxiously. He came down, her eyes still searching the faces about her, and then as she saw him, a rush of relief and thankfulness came into her face, and she came straight across to him, and bent forward for their usual formal kiss, was surprised when her arms went round his neck, was at once astonished and delightedly happy, finding for the first time since their marriage, a living woman in his arms, instead of a coldly compliant automaton. He kissed her, saying surprised, "Why Marian."

AP Newfeatures

Few people can get along with out friends — one reason why some of us become "joiners," members of social clubs, professional societies and church organizations. Most young people when they sign their name to a membership card hope that their new affiliation will help make new pals.

Some young people are puzzled about friendships. Either their best gal doesn't live up to their expectations insofar as expecting loyalty from a true friend is concerned or they find it impossible to make really good friends, no matter how they try.

Dr. William C. Menninger, writing in the Life Adjustment Booklet, "Making and Keeping Friends," stresses that it is a good idea to take occasional inventories of your friendships to examine what your friendships mean to you, and whether you can improve your relations with others.

He suggests this friendship checklist, offering a number of questions to start you on your quest for friends. Answer each "yes" or "no."

1. Is your main feeling toward your friends one of affection rather than superiority or envy?
 2. Do you enjoy the successes and achievements of your friends?
 3. Do you stick up for your friends and defend them from the unkind words or acts of others?
 4. Do you go all out for your friends in times of difficulty and offer sympathy and understanding when needed?
 5. Do you always keep confidences?
 6. Do you stand by your own convictions and opinions, and respect those of your friends?
 7. If you promise to do something?
 8. Do you try to prevent outbursts of anger and thoughtless remarks, and follow them with a sincere apology if they do occur?
 9. Do you think of considerate things to do for your friends — praising a new dress or an A in algebra, showing appreciation for a favor, remembering birthdays?
 10. Are you as courteous to your friends as you are to your acquaintances?
- If you answer "yes" to most of these questions, says Menninger, you probably don't have much to worry about in the friendship line. If you've found some "no's" you can improve your score. It's easy to make friends once you learn the things that are important in friendships, he says.
- Even after you make a friend, you are likely to have your ups and downs, Dr. Menninger says. Sometimes you expect too much from a friend and become impatient or disappointed in her when she doesn't come through. Another time you may discover that you don't care for your friend any more.
- But more often, he says, "the explanation is simply that moods and interests change from one day to the next. You may feel right now that you couldn't get along without Celia, but there were probably times when you didn't care if you ever saw her again. . ."
- Such ups and downs shouldn't alarm you if they happen once in a while. Everyone experiences them, he reminds us. But if the friendship is worth while we should try to keep the "downs" to a minimum.
- Reasons why you can't make friends might be: an selfish "what is in it for me" attitude, a desire

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW!

By FAGALY and SHORTE

THE BITER BIT

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UP)—The local dog-catcher took along his newest weapon—a gas gun—when he answered a call saying a "ferocious" dog was terrorizing a residential district. He pulled the trigger of the gun as he approached the animal, but at that moment a gust of wind blew the gas back into the dog-catcher's face. He was put out of action and the dog trotted away.

to have endless compliments, praise and applause from friends, a fear of making friends, an "inferiority complex" (a feeling that you're not as good as other people, a repulsive aggressiveness due to an insecure and inadequate feeling, too many acquaintanceships. Then there are home handicaps such as that faded slip-cover or worn rug that you are ashamed of. Or perhaps your family is well to do but doesn't enjoy the company of young people.

These things suggested by Dr. Menninger are worth thinking about. It is only by knowing where the trouble is that the "no-friend" sickness can be treated. When you've found the key to the door of friendship, it is easy to make friends.

Stocks And Market Reports

NEW YORK (UP)—Stocks rose fractions to more than a point early today on increased volume. Steels, automobiles and oils paced the advance. Trading picked up considerably on the upsurge. Sales in the first hour totaled $10,000 shares, compared with $70,000 in the same period yesterday.

Chrysler was the bellwether in the strong automotive section. It jumped 1 1/2 points to 93 1/2. General Motors met demand and moved up to 67 1/2. Packard, recent market leader in volume, again was active with a number of large blocks changing hands.

In the steel group, gains were limited mostly to the fractional zone. Bethlehem Steel was up 1/4 to 56 1/4 and U. S. Steel tacked on small gain.

Chemicals, which were soft yesterday, rebounded moderately today. Monsanto Chemical improved a point to 95 1/4. Allied Chemical and duPont firmed.

Southern Railway paced its section with a gain of 1 1/2 points to 78 1/2.

School Buses In Collision; Forty Children Injured

MANNING, S. C. (UP)—Two school buses collided on a foggy highway six miles from here today, killing one person and injuring about 40 pupils enroute to their morning classes.

L. B. McCord, superintendent of education for Clarendon County, said Willie Lemon, student driver of an empty bus used for Negro children, was killed.

McCord said approximately 40 white students were in the other bus and that all were injured to some extent.

The accident happened on state Highway 260 about 8:30 a.m. The weather was described as very foggy.

Ambulances and doctors from Manning and surrounding towns rushed to the scene and cared for the injured. They were taken to hospitals as far away as 30 miles because of inadequate facilities at Manning, a town about 40 miles from the coast.

Nearly 9 1/2 million trucks are owned and operated in the United States.

Navy Keeping Details Of Plane Losses Secret

KAOSIUNG, Formosa (UP)—Ten survivors of two U. S. Navy planes—one of which was crippled and forced down by Communist Chinese shore batteries—arrived here today aboard Admiral T. F. Williamson's flagship Suisun.

Williamson announced that search for 11 other crew members of the two planes had been abandoned and they were presumed dead.

Williamson refused permission for any of the survivors to be interviewed or photographed. However, it was reported all 10 were in good condition although wearing a variety of bandages and dabbed with antiseptic on their hands and faces.

Williamson gave only bare details on the shooting down of the Navy Neptune patrol bomber Sunday off the China coast.

He said the plane was forced down in flames. A Coast Guard PBM crashed when it tried to take off in rough seas after saving 11 of the Neptune's 13 man crew, he said.

After the second crash, the U. S. destroyer Halsey Powell rushed to the scene and rescued 10 men—three Coast Guardsmen and seven of the Neptune crew.

The Navy withheld the names of the five missing Coast Guardsmen and the six Navy crewmen of the Neptune patrol plane until next of kin have been notified.

Williamson's command said the Coast Guard rescue plane crashed when it lost an engine in the heavy seas. The Halsey Powell also was fired on by the Red shore batteries when the destroyer went to the rescue of the fliers.

New Merchant's Board And Officers In Meet

The newly elected officers and board of directors of the Greenville Merchants' Association held its first meeting last night with President Wesley Harvey, Jr., presiding.

Yearly reports were heard from the committees of the association and Treasurer L. S. Garris reported the association was operating "in the black."

E. D. Johnston, chairman of the Trade Promotion Committee, reported on his committee's activities for the year in addition to the Christmas activities. Ernell Webb, Membership Committee chairman, reported a gain of 16 members for the year.

D. J. Whitchard, Jr., chairman of the Parking Project committee, reported on the progress of his committee and said they are still working in hopes of bringing the project to a successful conclusion in the very near future.

A request from the Greenville Council of Church Women was read which asked that business firms in the city observe the World Day of Prayer. It was voted to recommend to all business firms to conform to their request. World Day of Prayer will be observed February 20 with a city observation from 10:20 until 11:30 a.m.

It was announced that J. H. Blount, director representing Greenville on the North Carolina Merchants' Association Board, will attend a meeting in Raleigh Thursday, January 22.

Dr. C. Linton To Speak Tonight

Dr. Clarence Linton of Teachers College, Columbia University, will speak tonight at a meeting of the East Carolina faculty, discussed the topic of "Religion and Education."

His talk dealt with religion and its place in general education in the public schools. He will continue his remarks at a faculty meeting this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Austin auditorium.

Dr. Linton's talks before the East Carolina faculty are based on a recent survey which he has conducted for the Committee on Religion and Education of the American Council on Education. This study included travel and collection of data over a wide area in this country.

Dr. Linton was educated at Nebraska State Teachers College and at Columbia University, from which he holds the doctor's degree. He began his career as teacher and school administrator in Iowa and Nebraska and served as supervising principal of schools in Lawrence township, New Jersey. During 1942-1945 he was a lieutenant colonel in the United States Army. He has served as secretary of Teachers College, Columbia University, and is professor of education there.

2 Hunters Fined By Local Justice

Two Pitt County Negroes were fined this morning for shooting squirrels out of season, Greenville Justice of the Peace F. E. Brooks reported today.

Brooks said he fined Jack Kitts Jr. and Willie Nobles $25 each for shooting squirrels. The two men, both in their early 20's, were also taxed with the costs.

It was reported that the two were caught in a wood west of the city.

Believe 'Pauper' Has Bank Box With $9,400

RALEIGH (AP)—A bank box has been found here containing more than $9,400 belonging to an aged man who died near Raleigh and was believed by neighbors to have been virtually a pauper.

Coroner Marshall Bennett said the man was William Brown, about 75. When Brown's body was found in a trailer at Caraleigh Saturday, police believed that all the money he had was $400 which was found in the trailer. This was to be used to pay his burial expenses.

After the funeral, a search revealed several keys in the trailer. One was for a Raleigh bank box. The money was found in the box wrapped in brown paper and tissue paper. Police said they have been unable to locate any relatives.

Eisenhower . . .

11:29 a.m.—Mr. Truman took Mrs. Eisenhower's place beside the president-elect in the black open car—a White House Lincoln—and it started for the Capitol.

11:42 a.m.—Mr. Eisenhower and Mr. Truman arrived at the Capitol and were taken to the office of Senate President Styles Bridges.

12:15 p.m.—Mr. Eisenhower was escorted to the inaugural platform. As the Marine Band played "The Stars and Stripes Forever," Mr. Eisenhower stood at the front of the platform, exceptionally solemn and unsmiling. He stood with head bared and chin on chest in deep meditation for the benediction. When Dorothy Maynor, noted Negro soprano, finished singing the national anthem, he shook hands with her.

12:31 p.m.—Firmly and in a strong vibrant voice, he took the oath from Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson as the 34th President of the United States. Then as the assembled thousands roared, he shook hands with Vinson and his predecessor—now plain Mr. Truman. He moved across the platform and kissed his wife, Mamie, on the cheek and shook hands with Vice President Richard M. Nixon who had taken the oath eight minutes before.

12:33 p.m.—Began to deliver his inaugural address. Before going into his prepared text, he asked if I present to bow their heads in prayer that God would give him and his administration the strength to "discern right from wrong and allow all our actions to be governed thereby."

12:52 p.m.—Finished his inaugural address, which was interrupted five times for applause. After the benediction Mr. Eisenhower brought the nation's new first lady to the front of the platform and she waved to the crowd.
