Eisenhower Cabinet Has First Meet Members Silent Afterward

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower and his cabinet met for two hours today in their first formal session, but those present refused to disclose what was discussed.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon told newsmen afterward that it would be the practice after all cabinet meetings for the members to refrain from any discussion of what goes on at a meeting. He said this also would apply to the general subjects discussed.

Nixon said this stemmed from an understanding among the cabinet members and the President during a pre-inaugural meeting at Eisenhower headquarters in New York City.

All Nixon would say about today's meeting was, "It was handled just as well as the first meeting in New York."

Nixon said the first meeting between Mr. Eisenhower and Republican congressional leaders would be held some time next week. Presumably at that meeting there will be a decision on when the President will go to Capitol Hill to deliver his State of the Union message to a joint session.

This afternoon, there was a separate appointment for Labor Secretary Martin P. Durkin along with Chairman H. Alexander Smith (R-N.J.) of the Senate Labor Committee and Emmett J. Hughes, a presidential speech-writing assistant. It was indicated they would talk about the changes to be recommended in the Taft-Hartley labor law.

Hagerty said there has been no decision yet on when the new president will submit the State of the Union message outlining his legislative program.

At least one empty chair, that of the secretary of defense, marred the first cabinet meeting. Its prospective occupant, Charles E. Wilson, has not yet been confirmed.

Hagerty said he expected all the other cabinet officers to attend with the possible exception of Interior Secretary Douglas McKay, a flu victim.

The others are Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey, Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr., Postmaster General Arthur Summerfield, Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson, Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks, and Durkin.

Agriculture Dept. Shift Approved

Swift Action By New Secretary Believed To Streamline Department

WASHINGTON (UP)—Agriculture Secretary Ezra T. Benson got quick approval from congressional farm leaders today for his moves to reorganize his department, which he said had "swollen into a huge bureaucracy" under the Democrats.

Sen. George D. Aiken said he thought the administrative regrouping by Benson Thursday—only two hours after he arrived at his new desk—will "make work easier for him."

The Vermont Republican, who heads the Senate Agriculture Committee, said he saw no reason for the shifts, as such, to affect existing programs.

Rep. Clifford R. Horner (R-Kan.), chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said he thinks the separation of the agriculture conservation program from the Production and Marketing Administration "is a wise step."

Most significant in Benson's first "gradual streamlining" step is the removal of the conservation payment program from PMA and the apparent nearly complete separation of the Commodity Credit Corporation from the PMA.

Both moves will strip some of the authority the PMA had under the Democrats. But yet no jobs have been abolished.

Previously the CCC acted as a banker for PMA price support operations with the seven-member board of directors of the CCC all holding top PMA jobs. Under Benson, a spokesman indicated, CCC will make the policy decisions and PMA will "administer them."

Except for CCC President John H. Davis and Benson, who is automatically a member, the members of the CCC board are yet to be picked.

The plan also put the 20 department agencies into groups with agency heads reporting to one of Benson's "administrative" appointments. Benson asked for "strict adherence to the lines of authority" in a memo to agency chiefs.

Senate Leaders Of Both Parties Predict Approval

Wilson Confirmation Seen

By JOHN L. STEELE
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—Senate leaders of both parties predicted today that Charles E. Wilson will be confirmed as defense secretary row that he has agreed to sell his $2,700,000 stock in General Motors Corp.

But highly-placed Democrats said there will still be "sharp debate" over the nomination, and a lot of votes against it. Some Republicans privately admitted that they would have preferred to see President Eisenhower withdraw Wilson's name.

Mr. Eisenhower sent Wilson's nomination to the Senate Thursday night after announcing that the former GM president had "volunteered" to dispose of all his stock "in the company which is the Defense Department's largest contractor."

Chairman Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass.) called the Senate Armed Services Committee into session at 10 a.m. e.s.t. today to question Wilson on behind closed doors. Several members of the committee said they would insist on a "full disclosure" of Wilson's plans for disposing of the 40,907 shares of GM stock he now holds and the 1,800 shares he is due to get under GM's executive bonus program during the next few years.

In a previous appearance before the committee last week, Wilson said he did not intend to sell his GM stock since it would cost him up to $600,000 in capital gains taxes. He also told the senators that he saw no reason why he should not pass on defense contracts with GM because "What is good for the country is good for General Motors, and vice versa."

Both Democratic and Republican senators then challenged his nomination, citing the federal "conflict of interests" law which forbids an official to do business with a firm in which he has a financial stake.

Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.), first senator to cite the law against Wilson, promptly told reporters that "I shall be very glad now to vote for his nomination."

Byrd said Wilson had "done a very patriotic act" by parting with the stock and "I believe that he will make a very efficient secretary of defense."

Saltonstall agreed that the stock decision "removes the major obstacle" and predicted that Wilson would be confirmed.

Other informants said that Wilson's attitude during his first committee hearing had "antagonized" influential senators, and that some of his words doubtless would be flung back in his face during the Senate debate on his nomination.

Sen. Wayne Morse, Oregon independent who held up Mr. Eisenhower's other cabinet appointments for 24 hours, hinted that he will oppose the Wilson nomination, regardless of the stock sale.

"I do not believe that mere possession of stock was his only disqualification," Morse said. "It is not good government to place in the secretaryship of defense the ex-president of a corporation which has almost $5,000,000 worth of defense contracts."

Complete Control Won In Riot-Torn Prison Prison Cell Blocks Captured

PITTSBURGH (UP)—State police drove into western penitentiary's two riot wrecked cell blocks, firing volleys above the prisoners' heads today to regain complete control of the prison here.

The prisoners ended a 24-hour riot Monday night, but had retained control of the cell blocks because locks on the individual cells had been smashed.

State police Maj. Andrew Hudock said his troops had entered the cell blocks this morning and ordered the prisoners to return to their cells.

When they refused, Hudock said, he police fired rifles and bursts from submachine guns over the inmates' heads. When the convicts still failed to comply a second volley was fired. The prisoners then fled to their cells.

Hudock said no one was hurt in the seizure action. He said his men now were in complete control of the big prison, located on the Ohio River about a mile below Pittsburgh's "Golden Triangle" business district.

Restoration of complete control at Western penitentiary came one day after prisoners at Rockview penitentiary ended a four-day mutiny under threat of National Guard action.

It took only words, not bullets, to end the rioting at Rockview. A prison chaplain climbed a ladder set against the wall, and talked the 330 convicts in calling the whole thing off.

Father Richard J. Walsh, the prison's Roman Catholic chaplain, conferred with 11 spokesmen for the rioters only a few minutes late Thursday while armed guards waited for an order to storm the cellblocks.

The priest told the men he thought they should release the six guards they were holding as hostages and surrender their weapons to avoid bloodshed.

"I pointed out the grave danger of unnecessarily exposing their lives and the lives of the hostages," the priest said. "They thought it over and finally agreed to go along."

The convicts' exact words of unconditional surrender were: "Father, we'll give you our guns and release the guards."

The surrender was unconditional because Gov. John S. Fine sternly had warned the rioters there would be no compromise.

At the time that Father Walsh was speaking softly to the rioters' leaders, Fine was meeting with high administration and law enforcement officials at his Indian-town Gap summer residence.

The governor had called the meeting to decide whether to send the heavily armed guards and about 100 state troopers into the penitentiary to quell the riot at any cost.

Pennsylvania National Guardsmen also had been standing by for an alert that would send them to the prison to reinforce the guards and troops.

None of the six hostage guards was injured but one, Paul Gingham, was suffering from a "nervous disorder," prison authorities said.

Fate Of 11 Airmen Captured By Red China May Be At Stake

Propaganda 'Spy Trial' Feared Ahead

TOKYO (UP)—A Chinese Communist broadcast said today United States "secret agents" parachuted into North Korea in December have confessed they were given espionage and sabotage assignments.

The broadcast heightened fears that the Reds might be laying the groundwork for a propaganda "spy trial" of 11 American airmen they said were captured after a B-29 was shot down in Manchuria Jan. 12.

Pelpling said that "three whole units of American air-dropped secret agents" were caught between

Dec. 25-27 and confessed to "subversive activity."

The broadcast said the men admitted they were assigned to collect information, organize guerrillas and sabotage rail transport and supply sources. It said they carried explosives, weapons, mines and radios.

Three members of the B-29 crew were reported killed when the plane was attacked by Red fighters.

Pelpling said, Red propaganda organ, said the plane was shot down nine miles inside the Manchurian border and that the 11 officers and men who parachuted out of it were "special agents sent by the U.S. government" to "organize sabotage."

The U.S. Air Force said the plane was attacked by enemy fighters 15 miles south of the Yalu River, well within Korean territory, but could have crashed-landed in Manchuria after being crippled and downed by enemy bullets.

The Air Force said the 14 crewmen were on a psychological warfare mission, dropping leaflets over North Korean cities.

It was feared that whatever might happen to the 11 flyers might develop into a touchy diplomatic situation.

The U.S. has not recognized Red China, so there are no diplomatic relations between the two countries. China is not formally at war in Korea, contending troops there are "volunteers."

The Peiping broadcast charging the 11 Americans were spies also accused the United Nations of murdering war prisoners, delaying the armistice and engaging in bacteriological warfare.

"This series of desperate schemes of the U.S. government for expanding the war will meet with ignominious defeat," the broadcast said.

Red Jets Chased Back After Big Aerial Fight

SEOUL, Korea (UP)—American Sabrejets today drove 50 MIG-15s back behind their bamboo curtain while protecting 100 U. S. fighter bombers attacking Red installations 10 miles from Pyongyang and then, later in the day, shot down four Red jets and damaged nine.

It brought the Sabres' total Russian-built jets destroyed this year to 31. Five have been probably destroyed and 38 damage claims have been confirmed.

Capt. Dolphin Overton III of Andrews, S. C., still hot as a pistol, racked up his fourth MIG destruction in four days, the Air Force announced.

Thirty-five Sabres chased off 50 MIGs just before dawn and then later in the day caught their impressive bag. It was the first time the Reds have ventured south of "MIG Alley" since Christmas when 40 tried without success to strike at Seoul.

One damage claim went to Maj. John Girardo of Panama City, Fla.

Overton and his wingman Herrick, found themselves flying in a tight formation with two MIGs which darted down on them. Herrick fired a burst at one MIG, causing it to "shudder, roll over and dive into the ground, exploding like a block buster."

Overton, flying his 48th mission, said he and Herrick "knocked them right out of formation. I must have got mine in the engine. He stopped as though he had hit a brick wall and I had to go under him."

The MIG crashed into a mountainside.

Herrick said the "sky was covered with MIGs" and that "never have I seen so many MIGs up there at one time."

The latest Sabre-MIG battles followed by a few hours a Red attempt to intercept U. N. fighter-bombers striking at targets in North Korea.

A flight of Russian-built jets streaked southward early today when the enemy spotted the fighter bombers heading for Red battle-line positions.

City Newcomers' Party Planned For February

Representatives of commercial night with the public relations committee of the Chamber of Commerce and mapped tentative plans for Greenville's second Newcomer's Party.

The date of the party was tentatively set for the second week of February, the definite date of the party will be announced later.

Civic and commercial organizations in the city have appointed those to represent them in mapping plans for the party and each organization has accepted a certain assignment in carrying out the party.

The newcomers' party is being staged to entertain new white citizens of Greenville who have moved into the community since February 1, 1952, and to help them get acquainted with each other and with present citizens.

A list of newcomers to the city has been compiled and invitations will be sent out as soon as a date for the party is decided upon. The invitations will be accompanied by a return postcard indicating acceptance.

Tom Webb, chairman of the committee, said all possible has been done to get the names of the new citizens but some may have been missed. "Anyone knowing of newcomers, please call the Chamber of Commerce office and give their names and address," said Webb "so they can be checked by our list."

The party will be held at the Armory and door prizes will be given in addition to gifts contributed by Greenville merchants and businessmen.

The following organizations are taking part in the newcomers' party and appointed representatives to help in the planning: Business and Profession Women's Club, Cora Powell; Credit Women's Breakfast Club, Mrs. Edna Branch; Exchange Club, Jake Hadley; Greenville Recreation Club.

Predicts Defeat In All-Out Attack

WASHINGTON (UP)—Retired Lt. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger predicted yesterday that U. S. troops would suffer "bloody defeat" if they launched an all-out offensive against the Communists in Korea.

"Even if reinforced by all available troops in the United States," Eichelberger said, American soldiers could not crash the Red defenses.

In an article in Newsweek magazine, Douglas MacArthur, back Premier Joseph Stalin would "chortle with glee" at such an attempt.

The former commander of U. S. occupation troops in Japan said his "solution" to the Korean stalemate is to replace American troops with Korean. Stalin then might call off the war, he said.

Referring to the defeat handed Gen. Douglas MacArthur when Chinese Communists drove back United Nations troops at the Yalu River, Eichelberger said the cause was "fatal overestimation of our enemy" and "an equally fatal overestimation of our own troops."

"Let us not do that again," he said.

Ready For Use By Spring, Says Chairman Park Project Near Wind-Up

'Plan D' Changes Permitted In '53

In a little more than three months from now the Elm Street Park project is expected to be completed in its entirety.

According to Louis W. Gaylord Jr., chairman of Elm Street Park, date for completion of the project has been definitely set for May 1. "We intend to have all work done and the park ready for use by the opening of the Little League season," the chairman said.

In reviewing work already completed at the park, Gaylord disclosed the basketball courts have been paved, marked off and goals are up; all are now available for use. Tennis courts have also been paved but completion on that phase of the project is being held up because approximately 50 12-foot poles are needed on which to attach wires. They are to be completed and ready for use by Spring.

Praised Park

Miss Helen M. Dauncey of New York, field worker with the National Recreation Commission, called the park project "a remarkable example of what may be accomplished through community effort. It may well serve as a model for other cities in the State," she stated.

Miss Dauncey, currently visiting in the city, said the two things which impressed her most about the park are: 1. the excellent layout of the area to serve all age groups; and 2. the interest and hard work that have made the plan a reality.

"Any money so expended is an investment rather than an expense for recreation must always be considered in terms of human values, not budgets. It is generally accepted that provision of recreation facilities is a municipal responsibility."

Chairman Gaylord said with the aid of the $500 gift from Greenville Jaycees, work on the recreation building will get underway Monday morning. He reported the building fund now has about $3,000 with which to start work.

Save Money

"Such a building as this would cost approximately $12,000 if it should be contracted out, but we plan to complete the plant for an expenditure of $9,000," Gaylord declared. "For $7,000 more we can start work Monday and not stop until the entire project is completed."

The chairman explained that White Construction Company, after paying at the park site a $3,000 job for which the company charged the park committee only $1,800. "Many such gestures as that explain how such progress has been made at the park."

"Contributions for this worthwhile project are still needed and being received," Gaylord assured, and again projected a plea for funds with which to complete the park.

"But people may rest assured of one thing," he emphasized, "we are going to complete the project by May 1."

Asks Help For Refugees From New Red Terror

BERLIN (UP)—The head of West Berlin's Jewish community appealed to Jews throughout the world today to aid Jewish refugees from Soviet zone terror.

At the same time, the official U. S. High Commissioner's German-language newspaper said Soviet zone "people" police had confiscated prayer books in raids of Jewish homes to hunt for "Zionist spies."

More than 350 Jews have fled to West Berlin from Russian territory with thousands of other refugees in recent weeks.

Heinz Galinski, chairman of the West Berlin Jewish community, said in today's issue of the community's weekly "Weg" "We call upon all Jews in the world to aid us in giving help to those people coming to us from East Berlin and East Germany."

Bloodmobile To Visit Grifton And Bethel

The Red Cross Bloodmobile will make another visit to Pitt County this month, stopping first at Bethel and then at Grifton the following day.

Temporary blood centers will be set up in Bethel Thursday, January 29, from 12 noon to 6 p.m. and in Grifton Friday, January 30, from 11:30 to 5:30. The blood center at Bethel will be in the elementary school building and at Grifton in the basement of the Christian Church.

Heading the recruitment in Bethel is Julian Smith, Prospective blood donors can sign pledges with Smith, at the clinic, or at Grington's office, Mrs. C.B. Rowlette, Jr., is in charge of the volunteer workers. Volunteer nurses from Greenville will work with the Bethel group.

Thurman Williams is serving as recruitment chairman in Grifton and donors may sign with him or sign pledge cards at either of the drug stores. Mrs. Lynn Gower is in charge of the volunteer workers which will come from the newly-organized Service League.

Williams said yesterday that approximately 50 donors had been signed up but many more were needed to meet the quota of 150 pints.

Quotas for both of the towns have been set at 150 pints and at least 250 donors are needed to insure that the blood will be given. "Any person in the Bethel and Grifton areas who wish to donate a pint of blood will be given an appointment by the recruitment chairman after contacting them."

Blood collected in the county will go for civilian and military use in addition to being used in the fight against polio with the serum gamma globulin which is derived from blood.

New Auto Inspection Bill Being Prepared

RALEIGH (UP) Gov. William B. Umstead's plea for a "common sense measure providing effective mechanical inspection of motor vehicles" will be embodied in a bill scheduled to hit the General Assembly early next week.

Motor Vehicles Commissioner L. C. Fisher said his office is preparing such an inspection law to be modeled after Pennsylvania law which has been in effect for about 20 years. It will be one of nine traffic bills which are being introduced.

Fisher said the inspection bill will be a "major bill" which the legislature tossed out several years ago.

Instead of only a few inspection stations, he said, all garages in the state with the necessary equipment will be licensed to make the inspections. To be eligible, a garage must also have at least a 14-by-24-foot space.

Fisher estimated that about 5,000 private garages could be automatically qualified.

One of Umstead's most fervent pleas in his inaugural address was for measures to stop "the slaughter and injury of our citizens and the destruction of property on our highways."

The Motor Vehicles Department is asking for the establishment of traffic courts throughout the state. It also wants a law to permit the judge of any court of record to immediately suspend, for a period of not more than 60 days, the license of any operator or chauffeur found in the court.

This measure would hit mainly at "reckless teen-agers," Fisher explained.

Under the present law, the license of a first-offender cannot be sus-

Former Capone Attorney Indicted For Tax Evasion

CHICAGO (UP)—A former attorney for the Capone family, who told a Congressional subcommittee in 1951 that "influence peddlers" tried to shake him down for $500,000 to settle his tax troubles, has been indicted for income tax evasion charges.

A federal grand jury returned the six-count indictment against attorney Abraham Teitelbaum yesterday. It charged that he has failed to pay $18,293 in interest, taxes and penalties due on his 1946-47 income.

The federal indictment also named the Tytek Co., a firm headed by Teitelbaum, and charged that the once-wealthy lawyer prepared fraudulent returns on the income of Ester Melnick Teitelbaum, his wife.

The charges said most of the allegedly unreported income came from rentals on large loop real estate holdings. Last year the lawyer, who once served the family of the late gangster Al (Scarface) Capone, sold some of his property holdings to pay off tax liens.

He paid $334,800 on government tax liens against his property of $318,87, but some of the payments were challenged.

The pudgy attorney made headlines more than a year ago when he testified before a House subcommittee investigating Internal Revenue Bureau scandals.

He charged that Frank Nathan of Pittsburgh and Bert K. Naster of Hollywood, Fla., told him they could "take care" of his federal "influence" got him in legal trouble, problems, or see that their ble if he did not cough up.

Nathan and Naster denied the testimony.

Ex-Congressman Dies Today Of Heart Attack

WASHINGTON (UP)—Former Rep. Charles A. Eaton R-N.J. died early today after a heart attack. He was 84.

He retired from Congress this year after serving 14 consecutive terms. He did not seek re-election last November.

Eaton was chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee during the Republican-controlled 80th Congress. He was a member of the United States delegation to the United Nations conference at San Francisco in '45 and a U. S. delegate to the U. N. General Assembly at London in 1945 and at New York in 1946.

A towering 200-pounder, Eaton as chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee in 1948 guided a Democratic President's multi-billion-dollar foreign aid program through an unruly Republican House. He was credited with the bold strategy which resulted in House passage of the Marshall Plan by a large majority.

Naguib Proclaims Egyptain Liberation Society Goals

CAIRO, Egypt (AP)—Premier Maj. Gen. Mohammed Naguib strongly assailed British policy in Egypt today and proclaimed a "Liberation Society" to achieve unity with the Sudan and force evacuation of all foreign forces from the Nile Valley.

A vast crowd estimated at 100,000 at Cairo's Liberation Square heard the soldier-premier declare that the end of British imperialism in the Nile lands was near.

As a 21-gun salvo boomed, the crowd repeated after him a Liberation Society oath asking Allah for mercy on "those who prefer death in their struggle for liberty rather than to live a mean life under slavery." The oath pledged the "utmost to establish our nation's future life on a new basis free of slavery and selfishness under the aegis of justice."

Naguib's speech, broadcast throughout the nation, and a military review, launched a four-day "Liberation" celebration marking the Army's coup which last July 23 overthrew King Farouk.

Most of the country was on holiday. Two million Egyptians were expected to flood the capital—coming by foot, car, auto, bus and train, joining Cairo's 2 1/2 million residents for the four days of parades, demonstrations and sports events honoring the new regime and what it calls the nation's renaissance.

N.C. Editors Are Told 'Showdown' Is Being Forced

CHAPEL HILL (UP)—A magazine editor told the North Carolina Press Institute last night the Eisenhower administration's foreign policy is "forcing" an early "showdown" with Russia.

Associate Editor Demaree Bess of the Saturday Evening Post said the new administration's "bold new foreign policy" may be "easing into an all-out war while pretending that we are keeping out."

Bess, addressing the 28th Press Institute's opening session, referred to the "liberation" policy of John Foster Dulles, the new secretary of state.

"It amounts to a declaration of all-out war, just as Franklin Roosevelt's proclaimed aim to 'destroy Hitlerism' long before Pearl Harbor was equivalent to a declaration of war," Bess said.

"I suspect that we are beginning to kid ourselves again, easing into an all-out war while pretending that we are keeping out."

The address highlighted the launching of a program lasting through next Saturday noon for newspaper executives from throughout the state.

Managing editor J. Russell Wiggins of the Washington Post led off today's program with a morning forum session, to be followed by a lunch given by the University of North Carolina.

The editors were to meet later with the University of North Carolina Journalism Foundation, and afterward attend a dinner session at Duke University, with Dr. Waldo Beach of the Duke Divinity School as speaker.

Bess was introduced by W. Randall Harris, president of the North Carolina Press Association which is sponsoring the institute. Both men are from Asheville.

Bess said Dulles' "showdown" policy became clear in a recent "open dispute on the Russian question" with Ambassador George F. Kennan, whom the Soviet government recently rejected.

"Dulles is less patient than Kennan and wants to force the issue" with a policy of immediate "liberation" of peoples enslaved by Communism while Kennan believes in "containment," Bess said.

"What disturbs Kennan about the Dulles policy is that it amounts to a declaration of all-out war," Bess said. "That also disturbs me." Bess, who has more than 35 years of experience as a foreign correspondent in the East and in Europe, turned to a professional topic — the battle of the free press with propaganda.

Bess said a "continuous battle has been raging between the reporter on the one side and what might be called anti-reporters on the other — propagandists of every variety, crusaders with causes."

"It is the reporter's function to prevent people from fooling themselves, to see that at least the facts are given to them."

The newsmen were welcomed to the session by Chancellor Robert B. House of the University of North Carolina with assurances that the press will continue to get all possible cooperation from the university. "Both have the same mission in C. L. Strength for the Day

DEFEAT
Yesterday I talked with a real estate agent who told me that in the depths of the depression there was one whole year in which he made only one sale. It was a sizable transaction, and the fee was sufficient to keep him and his family in a modest fashion. But during the whole of a twelve-month period, this man went to his office every day and not a single client came in to close a deal.

It seems to us at times as if misfortune of such magnitude has come upon us that we cannot survive. Furthermore, the future is black. But take this friend about whom I have been speaking. He has a position today which anyone would envy. He went a whole year with only one client and now he has many. Twenty years ago he must have felt he was a failure and that life had played him false. Thus do the waves of circumstances rise and subside, and we rise and subside with them.

We are never defeated until we acknowledge defeat. Something of a tragic nature has to take place within our own hearts before we are all through and ready for the discard. As long as we can discern the faintest glimmer of hope, we are unbeaten. The heart that still maintains confidence in self, in mankind, and in God is ready for the assault of any combination of circumstances.

There is only one person who can defeat you—yourself.

Taking An Oath Is Deadly Serious

A person who takes an oath is literally calling upon God to witness the truth of what they say. And if one truly believes in the omnipotence and awesome justice of the Almighty, they should dread His wrath on being called to witness a lie spoken in His name.

Judge Henry Grady, presiding in the recent term of Pitt Superior Court, had some hard words to say about witnesses who abuse their oath. After more than 30 years on the bench, and encountering perjury not once, but many times, the jurist gave vent to his feeling in no uncertain words.

"When men go on the stand and commit perjury the life of every man in the county is in danger," he stated. And even that strong view could be considered "mild" as compared with the opinion of those standards of religion, honor and conscience that condemn the perjurer.

A former Superior Court judge and most recent addition to the Supreme Court of North Carolina, Judge R. Hunt Parker of Roanoke Rapids has expressed from the bench many times his theory regarding the administration of an oath "to tell the truth so help you God."

Judge Parker projects the opinion that an oath to be taken in court is a serious matter and should not be administered or taken amid laughter or with frivolity of purpose. It must be administered and received with the utmost solemnity and conscientiousness.

Over a period of years, it seems, the frailties of human nature and state familiarity of the act have contributed markedly to a situation in which the oath is perfunctorily administered and received, with little regard for the grave consequences involved.

ed only by the tenuous course of proving... a despicable, dishonorable act which is doubly so when committed in the courts where Justice is to be dispensed. Under any code of honor, be it savage or civilized, to cloak a lie with religious sincerity is unthinkable.

There are laws which provide punishment for perjury and sometimes they are invoked. Frequently one reads of a known or suspected criminal who could be punished only by the tenuous course of proving perjury. Of late, this course of action has been taken against men suspected of traitorous activities.

Of course, the most common crime of perjury involves far less celebrated cases; it's the smaller, petty and no less sordid affairs that prompt the greater number of deliberate lies before the courts.

Judge Grady has seen this happen many times. His indignation is fully understandable, and one is left to wonder if the jurist's opinion of his fellow man has not suffered by this repeated experience.

Could Try Gremlins Against The Kremlin

In past columns on this page we have lamented the negative approach to foreign policy notable since the "cold war" became recognizable as such. Essentially it has been a protest against a policy based on counter-moves; each inspired and designed to meet fresh Kremlin thrusts on the diplomatic front. To us, as to others, America foreign policy bore a great deal of resemblance to Stalin calling the tune and our statesmen dancing to it.

There were excuses and explanations. One such, was that we were militarily too weak to risk a more aggressive view on world affairs and participation in the cold war. Much has since been done to remedy that condition; and even greater strides are planned for the immediate future.

Another excuse has been that "It's easier to tear down than to build up"... thus explaining Western difficulties in coping with the direct and aggressive Russian diplomacy.

That is no explanation.

The Free World is equally able as the Russians in attempting to undermine, divide and confound their enemies. The trouble seems to be that any efforts in this line have been half-hearted and not given sufficient attention.

The field is wide open to inspiring mutual distrust among the satellite states and their masters; to sow disunity, rivalry and suspicions.

We too, can utilize assorted harrassments and surprises to keep Communist strategists "groggy" and forever guessing what will happen next, and where it will happen.

A sort of "Gremlin Division" of the State Department could be set up to devise unholy and unexpected strategies both great and small. Gifted with a Puckish sense of humor, the deft touch of a Machiavelli, the talents of a sadistic psychologist... such a team of "Gremlins" could heap frustration upon frustration in the ranks of Russian leaders.

Of course, this is all a slight exaggeration of the real idea for a more aggressive foreign policy; but the core of the thought remains. Give the "other side" something to worry about for a change.

National Whirligig
WASHINGTON—Senator "Joe" McCarthy would probably have lost out in the rivalry to become Capitol Hill's chief Communist prosecutor, if it were not for that other "Joe" in the Kremlin. Thanks to Stalin, the Wisconsin man will continue to be the principal source of Reds in the U.S. Government, the United Nations and in the educational system.

This will be the second time that the Russian dictator has rescued and rehabilitated the Senator, whom so many politicians fear but do not dare to antagonize, including top members of the Administration. And the canny McCarthy, who can scent opportunity before his colleagues have opened the morning newspaper, is fully aware of his new status.

MCCARTHY'S ROLE—"The time has now come," he recently told his investigating staff on the Senate Government Operations Committee, "when the word McCarthyism is synonymous with anti-Semitism." In view of Moscow's current purge of the Jews in Russia, Czechoslovakia and other satellite countries, I am now the champion of Judaism."

This shrewd comment measures the sweep and daring of the man's imagination, even though his diagnosis of his heroic role may not be wholly accurate.

SENSATIONAL CHARGES CONFIRMED—Stalin gave McCarthy his first lift when the Soviet leader inspired the Red attack on South Korea in June of 1950. Before that fateful day, the Senator's critics at Washington, including Harry S. Truman and Dean Acheson, almost had him down for the count. Numerous GOP-ers seeking election or re-election that November begged him to stay away from their political door.

But the Red aggression, especially when it was reinforced by Chinese Communists, forced Congress and the public to take another look at the noisy, unorthodox Savonarola of the Senate.

McCarthy Committee and Grand Jury revelations of pro-Soviet sympathizers in the State Department and U.N. appeared to confirm many of his most sensational charges, as did the atomic spy ring disclosures.

COHN, CHIEF INVESTIGATOR—In addition to this latest Russian reinforcement McCarthy has outsmarted rival Red hunters—Senators Jenner of Indiana and Ferguson of Michigan—in more practical ways. Not even the strengthened House Committee on Un-American Activities can challenge him.

As the chief investigator for his forthcoming inquiry, he has named Roy L. Cohn of New York City. It was Cohn who, as an Assistant United States District Attorney, defied both the U.N.'s Trygve Lie and former Secretary Acheson by revealing that numerous American fellow-travelers had crept onto the international organization's pay roll. Discharges and resignations galore followed this exposure.

Cohn is regarded as a legal prodigy. He was graduated from law school so young—18—that he had to wait three years before he could be admitted to the bar. He is now only 26. His father is a prominent New York State judge, and young Cohn is one of the proteges of Bernard M. Baruch. The veteran financier is understood to be sympathetic to McCarthy's past and prospective performances.

DISAGREES WITH EISENHOWER, TAFT—McCarthy's consciousness of his new allies poses a problem for President Eisenhower. The latter is understood to believe that future checks on the loyalty of U.S. and U.N. officials should be made by the appropriate government departments—State, Justice, the Civil Service Commission.

As a loyal Administration man, the Wisconsin Senator might be expected to abide by this decision. But his selection of Cohn and other agents for his staff indicates that he plans even more sensational maneuvers. Moreover, he disagrees with the Eisenhower-Taft viewpoint that the colleges themselves can be entrusted with the task of policing the campuses and classrooms against Communist infiltration. Finally, he craves headlines.

If he is correct in his analysis of the American reaction to Stalin's latest purge, he will not listen to Ike or to "Mister Republican."

Selected Short
NORWALK, CONN., HOUR.—A quarter of the country's gross output of goods and services is the result of government expenditure. If once more Americans assume individual responsibility for their share of domestic tranquility and welfare, their government can concentrate on what alone it can provide, the common defense. It is cheaper by billions to support ourselves than to support a huge government in order that it may support us."

Thees Guy Bothers Me

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

This is a continuation of the Dave Garroway experience in New York. It should be called an experience rather than an interview because I was in studio 8-F NBC from 1:55 until 2:50. During this time Dave "rehearsed" his coast-to-coast radio program, put it on the air, was interviewed by me, and conducted a very interesting bull session with his staff.

That "rehearsed" was put in quotes because the so-called rehearsal was a joke. It consisted of timing two records and one commercial. All of Garroway's chatter was skipped. A mimeographed script was issued for the show, but Garroway didn't follow it at times. During his commercial it was impossible to follow what he was saying by reading the script.

Dave planned to announce the holiday highway death toll and the staff began a discussion of highway accidents. Dave had had two, both brushes with pedestrians.

Both sued him, and one of the two won the case.

The director of the show commented, "Perry Como wouldn't drive a car at all from 1933 to 1942 because the car he was driving hit and killed a child." Talking to this same director later, I discovered that he used to be a saxophonist and once played a dance in Greenville in one of the tobacco warehouses. "I was amazed," he said, "when the crowd started dancing and all of the dust began to rise from the floor."

NBC performers have a little sandwich shop hidden from tourists who come through the building on conducted tours. Ed Pressley, the announcer for the Dial Soap show, was elected to bring in coffee and pie. Jokingly, Garroway said, "Bring me a ham and cheese with turkey dressing and a long piece of pie. After January 1st I'm going on a diet of artificial salad dressing and no bread."

But not before. Dave is six feet tall and weighs 200 pounds. After the interview with Dave, which I'll print tomorrow, I asked, "Do I have to get out now?" Natural—I wanted to stay for the broadcast.

"Certainly not," Dave said. "Relax." When the two recordings were in progress during the show Dave got up, walked around the table, and commented each time, "I talked too much."

Naturally the big network shows are timed to the second. Dave was over-time all during the show, but his ability to gauge himself resulted in a smooth, on-time ending.

Dave no doubt has several writers, but I saw only one. This was the type of person you would expect to be a writer. Thick, horn-rimmed glasses and a build like a potato sack. Yet he came up with an ingenious plan for enjoying New Year's Eve, which I printed the day after New Year's. And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

By LYNN NISBET
CUSHION—There is building up some opposition for the budget proposal to earmark about $18 million of the general fund balance as a revolving cushion fund. The idea found quick approval by the more conservative members of the General Assembly, as a sound business policy. There are others, perhaps a larger number than administration leaders realize, who favor appropriating all the money available and trusting to the future to take care of itself.

ILE—Echoes of the Scott blast at idle money and deficiency in services are heard with increasing frequency as the picture of needs in State agencies, departments and institutions unfolds. The discussions go somewhat like this: It is sound business practice for any going concern to have a working capital reserve of at least 5 per cent of its annual expenditures, and in many instances the reserve ought to be 10 per cent or more. From the cold-blooded business point of view the "cushion fund" or the State can be justified; but—

OTHER SIDE—The service-minded members nearly always end their statements of general with the word and dash, "but..." They go on to explain that while there must be business in government, government cannot be operated like a private business enterprise. The primary function of government is to render service to the people. And they further contend that it doesn't make sense from the service viewpoint to keep $18 million in the bank while children, crippled in either body or mind, mentally sick adults and helpless old people are suffering for lack of adequate care.

CHANCE—These advocates of putting every dollar to work now admit they are taking a services later but they are willing to take the chance. They support their position by reminding all and sundry that not within many years has State revenue failed to exceed budget forecasts. It seems fairly certain that the reserve fund will be established, but it will not be done without vigorous protest from a substantial minority of the General Assembly membership.

PERSONNEL—It will be several months before the full impact of changing "distractions" in Washington and Raleigh will be felt by the rank and file of employed personnel. Absence of Governor Umstead from his office may delay anticipated shuffling among State workers, and it will take time for the Federal changes to work down to lot levels. Meanwhile there is tangible evidence of the change that is in the making at both government levels. It is of common knowledge that Governor Scott, as did his predecessors in office and no doubt his successors will commend the practice, exercised personal and official influence to place employees in numerous department jobs.

CIVIL SERVICE—Blanketed civil service among Federal and personnel department classification among State workers largely determined the rate of pay. It is already of record that some State folks have within the past few weeks been reclassified, and some civil service workers are expecting to be transferred chiefly because of personal attitudes of the new head men in the agencies.

A favorite device of political manipulators in getting rid of civil service employees is to authorize their transfer. It is explained that civil service status protects a person in the kind of job and the same approximate pay, but does not guarantee the exact place at which the work is to be performed.

FACETIOUS—Ralph Fisher of Transylvania, Republican leader of the General Assembly, has been kidding his Democratic friends a lot about their Federal related jobs. "We wouldn't think of disturbing their civil service status," he said. "We may even raise the classification and the salary a little bit—but we'll just transfer them to Venezuela or North Africa. Of course, if they don't want to go, we'll try to find some good Republican to take over the assignment under the same civil service rating."

RUMORS—Report from Governor Umstead, "Resident" in Watts Hospital at Durham as result of a mild heart attack on January 11, continue good. A flurry of temperature two or three days ago incident to a cold set off a wave of new rumors about his condition being much worse than published reports. The very first day his physician, Dr. Ralph Fleming, predicted he would have to remain in the hospital for at least two weeks. In spite of that, there were some who insisted that he would be worse than the doctors admitted, since he has been in the hospital over a week now.

BETTER—Mrs. Umstead and others of the family and his office staff who have seen the Governor every day, report that the formal

What Other Papers Are Thinking

BACK TO THE INDIANS
(Wilson Times)
We had some strange notions when we set up the District of Columbia. It had, or so we thought, to be autonomous. Now, however, some people are taking a different view. Our own Senator, Willis Smith, after studying the problem saw as a solution the giving back of the district to Maryland. At that way the people who now live in the District of Columbia would get their full rights as citizens. As it is now, they're in the same category as ex-convicts; they can't vote unless they move out of the district.

If Maryland doesn't want the district, then it should be given statehood, Smith said. That would be a solution in part only, for it would add two Senators and eight or nine Congressmen. But, as Smith said, the population is larger than Alaska and it's therefore entitled to statehood if Alaska is. Indeed, its population is greater than 13 other states, all of which have autonomous rights. Why, then, should the people of Washington be denied those rights when people living in smaller states get them?

Washington, because it's run by Congress, has one of the worst civil governments in the nation. In the circumstances, it could hardly be otherwise. For what does the man coming from Kansas care what goes on in Washington? Can you expect someone living in Wisconsin to work for the betterment of the schools? If Senator Smith has his way and if the state of Maryland won't take Washington back, it should, as he suggests, be made into a state. Then the city would get the kind of civil government that other cities of the same size get in America.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
There are reasons to believe that the new Administration in Washington will take steps to speed up the reporting of various government statistical services. Some of the new appointees are known to think that much of the value of various figures compiled by the Government is atrophied by the lag in getting them to the people who need them.

Federal Reserve Board reports are reasonably prompt; some of the Labor, Agriculture and Commerce reports are made while they still have considerable significance. But a large share of the compiled data, which might have indicated coming trends, is published long after the trend is well under way.

As random examples Last week Commerce reported on retail sales in November. This would have been of high value to manufacturers and distributors as well as all retailers, if the facts had been available early in December. Again, in October, 1952, the Housing and Home Finance Agency, in its publication "Housing Research," led with the results of a study on "Why People Buy the Houses They Do." The survey covered a smattering that purchased homes between January 1, 1949, and July 1, 1950, and the fact-gathering took place in November and December, 1950.

Assuming the sample was valid, the facts gathered were of great value. Builders, knowing what moved people to buy, what classes of families bought most often, and what people wanted most in houses, might have altered their plans for 1951 and 1952 and thereby satisfied more buyers and accelerated profits. But the period of gestation was elephantine.

The interviewers, statisticians and economists compiling these and other governmental data are civil service appointees, for by far the most part. They are also conscientious to an extreme. There is always a danger that they will be ragged, fired or demand if their conclusions are not accurate—witness the denunciation Agriculture surveys have suffered when their crop reports have been off a few percentage points.

Being slow is a lesser crime than being wrong if a bureau is slow, Congress is generally blamed for not furnishing enough money or man power, if a bureau is wrong, the meat axe may swing.

It is a difficult problem for the new Administration, especially since it has promised to cut expenses. Nevertheless, many of the incoming executives have indicated that they want to see the value of governmental reports enhanced by prompt publication. It may mean that some of the minor series will be dropped, but that others will be made public while the news they contain is still news.

CONTAINER BACKLOG
BODIES WELL FOR BUSINESS
The backlog of orders for industrial containers continues high according to a National Production Authority schedule. Demand, it estimates, will continue heavy through the first quarter of this year.

This is significant, because demand for industrial containers rises and falls with the general level of industrial activity.

The agency noted a continued improvement in the supply of metal for containers, except for tin. However, it added that container manufacturers, seeking to keep up with expanding demand, must rely heavily on the development of new products and markets and increase quality.

SMALLER FURNITURE DEALERS HOPEFUL
High attendance and brisk buying at the annual winter Furniture Market in New York this week indicate that smaller retailers have reduced inventories and expect good sales during the rest of the year.

While the larger retail outlets are represented with buyers at the Chicago and Grand Rapids shows—which also indicated that merchants expect a high level sales—the New York show attracts many small eastern dealers who will not spare the time to journey to the Midwest.

MORAL IN EXPERIENCE OF BOMBED COMPANY
While the danger of atom bombing has not diminished, the fears and precautions originally stirred by that possibility have waned.

But there is still a lesson in the experience of a London firm during World War II. When the war became imminent in 1939, the company had films made of all vital records and put them in a safe place outside of the city. Then as war progressed, current records were kept in duplicate and given to employees who lived outside of the city.

On September 26, 1940, a land mine blasted the offices. Within a short time, the company was functioning again in borrowed quarters, with almost all records available to carry on.

Hal Boyle's Column

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Many a giant industrial deal has been closed by telephone.

Today that is done only in romantic movies. In real life it is now all but impossible. The phone network in the average office is geared for business—but it's monkey business.

Suppose, for example, you want to place an emergency million-dollar order with Smith & Sons, nutmeg grater manufacturers. You dial the number, thinking how grateful old "Grater" Smith will be.

"I'm sorr—ee," comes the answer. "The line is busy—ee." Old Smith is making a golf dr— with one of his buddies.

"Well, gimme his son then?"

"Which one?"

"Oh, the older one, I guess."

"I'm sorr—ee. He's in Yur—rup."

"Gimme his younger son—I don't care."

"He's in kindergarten. He won't be in the firm until next year."

"Well, give me Smith's executive assistant—Smithers. Smothers, Smathers—What's his name?"

"I'm sorr—ee. Mr. Smathers is on the other phone." Smathers is calling up a pal about lunch.

"Well, for Pete's sake, give me the head salesman."

"I'm sorr—ee. His line is busy, too."

The head salesman's wife has just phoned to say their baby has just his first word—"Gibb."

"How about Mr. Smith's private secretary?"

"I'm sorr—eeeee. Busy. The secretary is phoning home to be sure her mother will press her evening dress."

"Look, I'll take anybody. How about the treasurer?"

"I'm sorr—eeeee. I believe he's talking to the bank now." Actually he's laying down a $5 bet on the fourth race.

"Well, Smith must be free now. Gimme him."

"I'm sorr—eeeee. He just got another call. Old Smith is listening to his son, phoning from 'yur-rup,' explain why he needs more entertainment money. He says he's hot on the trail of a big foreign order."

You hang on for two hours, still grimly trying to break through the phone barrier. Finally, you say limply:

"Honey, all I want to do is to give your firm a one-million-dollar order. Can't you take it yourself? Please."

"I'm sorr—eeeee. I have another call coming in. Do you care to wait?" And as you hang up screaming, she flips a switch and says to her boy friend:

"Scuse me, Joe. Some old goat has been trying up my line for hours. The nerve some people've got!"

Just then your own secretary hands you a telegram that says: "Please cancel our emergency order for one million dollars worth of nutmeg graters. As you were unable to confirm it by noon, we placed it with another distributor. What's the matter with your phone anyway? We tried for two hours to reach you to see if you needed a little more time."

So you grab your telephone, tear it out by the roots, and crash it to the floor. But all that gets you is a repair bill.

Many firms, aware of the backlog of personal traffic on their

PROMISE OF DELIGHT

By Mary Howard

AP Newsfeatures

Chapter 32
"Once this picture is finished, in the can, then Joe will say, 'Anthea, marry me at once,'" Mario said.

Anthea put her glass down on the tin table, and standing up, kissed Mario on the cheek. "I hope you're right."

"Of course I'm right," said Mario, smiling. "Now, you fill up my glass, and then off upstairs to make yourself pretty. Wear the red dress. The white she is nice, but the red is beautiful, and you are beautiful in it. And I will put on my tuxedo, and we will all go and dance, and have a lot of fun, and you will see that Mario is always right in the end."

The movie dress was laid on the bed when Anthea went to her room. She made up carefully. The little pangs of jealousy were dead. She did not even think of Gina.

...until, crossing the balcony to go down to the terrace again, she found the two bedroom windows still open, the rooms inside silent and deserted. She paused. For the first time a sense of disquiet came to her, and in the manner of love, a thousand fighting possibilities leaped to her mind.

Anthea went on down the spiral stairs in a rustle of silk, and across the terrace to where Mario was sitting waiting for her and the rest of his guests.

He rose eagerly and came across to Anthea, and said quickly, "No, no do not speak. I have something. Come with me." He led her quickly into the salon. Bianca was there setting out dishes of sautéed nuts and petites saucisses, and giving a final touch to the flowers. She looked at Mario leading Anthea by the hand, and her dark face was suddenly contorted with fury. She whisked out of the room, as though she could not bear to look at them. Mario did not take the slightest notice. He took Anthea over to the mirror on the wall, and said, "Now, shut your eyes."

Obediently Anthea shut her eyes, and felt his fingers lightly about her throat, and the cool feeling of metal, and opened them again quickly, before he could draw back. Round her neck was a fine gold chain, and at the base of her slender throat a magnificent antique cross of rubies and diamonds set in gold filigree. She gave a little gasp of pleasure at its beauty.

Mario was delighted. "There," he said, "my Katherine's cross, I have been keeping it always for Joe's wife. Now it is yours."

"Ah, Mario, I love it," she said, "but don't you think we ought to wait a bit? Suppose, after all, you are wrong? Suppose Joe marries quite a different girl, or does not marry at all? I think perhaps if he saw me wearing it, he might think you and I were trying to make up his mind for him. If I know Joe, that wouldn't do at all."

Mario sulked a little, then put the cross reluctantly back into the box. He wagged his head. "Just like my Katherine," he said.

"Proud, Dio mio. Proud like Lucifer. But maybe you are right about Joe. He is proud too, and stubborn. But," he brightened, "the minute, the very minute he says, 'Will you?' and you say, 'yes,' you have it? Yes?"

Eisenhower Will Have To Learn Lessons Of Press Conferences

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — The announcement that President Eisenhower will hold regular news conferences, as Presidents Roosevelt and Truman did, settles the rumor that he'd hold few or none at all.

Like Truman, Eisenhower in the beginning may pull boners trying to answer too much too fast. In his early White House days Truman tried to answer everything yes or no. He had to learn to be careful.

One memorable mistake, was when he told a news conference he had approved a speech by Henry Wallace, then his secretary of Commerce. This caused international confusion when the speech turned out to be one criticizing Truman's foreign policy.

Later Truman explained he merely meant to say he had approved Wallace's right to make a speech, not the speech itself. Sometimes Truman got his facts mixed up, then had to issue corrections.

There was a time, right after he got into the Wallace jam, when it was thought here Truman might call off the news conferences. But as he became more cautious and sure of himself he seemed to employ them.

If Eisenhower should put his foot in his mouth, or if he thinks the reporters' questions are a little too rough on him, he may get an inclination to drop the conference idea.

He's shown small enthusiasm for news conferences. He held few during the presidential campaign and none since the election except for one in Korea where he wouldn't permit questions.

But no president, particularly a new one, can be expected to know all the answers to all the questions. He can say frankly he does not know, when he doesn't. Or, when he thinks it better not to answer, he can say "No comment."

Overdone. "No comment" could make news conferences useless. It must be assumed any president who holds conferences at all will answer what he can within limits of reason and security.

A president isn't doing newsmen a favor by holding conferences. Without them, he could become isolated from, and insulated against, public thinking in a hurry.

News conferences let him pump his ideas out to the public regularly, and give him the benefit of public reaction. At the same time, through the newsmen, the public can quiz him on his decisions and intentions.

News conferences are one way to keep the president and the people from getting too far apart and out of step.

His press secretary, James Hagerty, said yesterday Eisenhower may bring into the conferences some members of his Cabinet, the department heads, who can help answer to all the questions flung at him.

Eisenhower seems to realize, before holding even his first White House conference, that he can't be expected to know in detail the answer to all the questions flung at him.

Bible Words to Live by

DEUTERONOMY 33:27 — "The Eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms."

This verse from the Old Testament, provides a sense of security for whatever may come to us. It is an eternal God upon whom we are dependent to sustain us. We put our arms around our children to express our love and to assure them of their security; and for us, there is nothing that life can do to us that can remove us from the care and the affection that the everlasting arms of God imply. Time after time I have said to someone lying on a hospital bed of pain, "Say to yourself, 'underneath are the everlasting arms.' These arms would sustain you, just as surely as does the bed on which you lie. In this hour of need, let yourself fall back into His arms; stop trying to bear yourself up." And I have seen the distraught person, thinking about the way in which the bed sustains them, relax and trust themselves to the everlasting arms which are for all of us, the greatest source of security and undergirding that we have throughout the days of our lives.

NCAA Put Across Fast One

The recent abolition of free substitution in college football which was lobbied through an NCAA rules convention has caused quite a stir among players and coaches of the game.

According to reports the abolishment of the two-platoon system was accomplished by a 43 to 23 ballot staged suspiciously after most of the delegates had left.

There are 315 NCAA schools playing football and it hardly seems fair that only 66 schools should participate in such an important issue which will affect all.

The larger college leaders and a vast majority of the fans have been lamenting for a return to the "old old iron man football." Athletic directors and college presidents have been blasting big time football for some years.

Their logic is simple. Under the two-team system of football, player expenses are almost doubled and the expense cuts into profits from the games. Not enough to make football a losing venture in most cases but the profits are not as large as would be possible under a much smaller squad.

The biggest gripe fans have is they can't keep up with the game because of difficulty in identifying so many players racing in and out of the game.

A lot of sports writers have jumped on the "iron man football bandwagon" heralding the return to good old days as a tremendous step forward for better sports.

As a matter of fact practically everybody seems to favor the new rule except the players and coaches and there is where the rub is going to come in.

Regardless of what the school leaders want... the game still belongs to the ones directly involved and they want free substitution and more fellows playing. Iron man football will probably last about a year, probably until next year's NCAA convention.

About the only plausible point the rule of limited substitution can boast is that it will be slightly less expensive and will make the game easier to follow from a spectator point of view.

Then up pops the question who and what is the game for in the first place? What is its primary purpose? Is it to make a bundle of money? Who is supposed to benefit from the game—the players or spectators?

If athletic participation is good for the physical and mental well being of 11 football players then it is just as good for 22. The new rule will eliminate a great number of boys who have been and would like to participate in sports. This seems to me to be defeating the purpose of sports in college.

Seems like the idea would be to have as many as would join in a free substitution rule many of the obscure third and fourth stringers get a chance to participate in a varsity game. Those days are gone under the new rule.

Few fellows who can pass a football with real finesse but aren't very good runners will sit out games on the bench. A lineman who is bulky and can perform well on defense but is too slow for offense will sit on the bench.

Coaches who once taught the game to as many as 50 and 60 aspirants will now teach half that number, and these fellows must have coaching in every department. It will make a better rounded football player of one man but players who would have been sent in to run blocking plays or punt, pass or catch passes will have to sit on the sidelines and watch him do a job they could do better.

Walter Dukes, Bevo Francis Lead Colleges In Scoring

NEW YORK (UP)—Walter Dukes and Clarence (Bevo) Francis, the two most talked-about giants in college basketball, each put another high-scoring performance in the books today to move their unbeaten teams ahead another stride.

The six-foot, 11-inch Dukes, leading major-college scorers in the nation with a 27.6 points-per-game average, racked up 25 markers to lead Seton Hall, the nation's No. 1 team, to its 19th straight triumph by a 103-85 score over Memphis State.

The amazing, six-foot, nine-inch Francis, leading small-college scorer with a 49.5 average, was "held" to 42 points as little Rio Grande College of Ohio gained its 24th straight win of the season, 79-54, over the Cincinnati Bible Seminary.

Dukes' 25 points gave him a new Seton Hall single-season scoring record. He now has 526 points in 19 games, compared to the record of 524 he set in 26 games last season.

Francis was again the target of a zone defense that managed to hold Rio Grande to a 19-19 first period tie. But big Bevo ran wild with 20 points in the second period for a 42-27 halftime lead that clinched the game. Bevo took 37 shots and sank 20 as he ran his point total to 1,188 in 24 games.

Western Kentucky, a leading candidate for a post-season tournament bid, scored an impressive 96-56 victory over Miami of Florida at Coral Gables, Fla., to run its record to 13-3. The Hittoppers, rated 18th nationally, never were in danger as Art Spoelstra led the way with 26 points.

In other leading games Thursday night: Niagara ran its record to 13-2 by beating Canisius, 66-63; Marshall trounced Marietta, 102-63; and Indiana State beat St. Joseph's (Ind.), 83-59.

Washington, the nation's third-ranking team, defends its perfect record in the northern division of the Pacific Coast Conference in a leading game on tonight's schedule.

In a Chicago Stadium game, the Oklahoma Aggies, ranked seventh nationally, renew an old rivalry against DePaul, ranked 20th. Earlier this year the Aggies downed DePaul, 62-51, in Oklahoma.

The Skyline Conference has two important games on tap. Wyoming, league-leader with a 6-0 mark, meets Brigham Young, tied for second place with 3-1. And Colorado A and M, the other Colorado squad, meets Utah.

Marvin Bass Is Signed For Line Coaching Duties

CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (AP)—The University of North Carolina today announced that a three-year contract has been given to George Barclay to succeed Carl Snavely as head football coach. Terms were not announced but unofficial estimates placed Barclay's annual salary at about $10,000.

C. P. Erickson, director of athletics, and Chancellor R. B. House also announced that Marvin Bass had been given a three-year contract as line coach, upon recommendation of Barclay.

Bass, a former assistant here, recently resigned from the staff of the Washington Redskins. The long-remembered Barclay appointment was made official when Gordon Gray, university president, polled members of the trustees' Executive Committee last night and they approved the Barclay selection.

Barclay said he will name a backfield coach, an end coach and a freshman coach, subject to approval by school authorities.

A former star North Carolina lineman under Snavely, Barclay came here a year ago to help his former coach install the split-T system. He had a year remaining on a two-year assistant's contract. Snavely resigned under pressure on Dec. 2.

Barclay was an All-America guard at North Carolina under Snavely in 1934. In 1935 he was with the Brooklyn professional team, but broke his leg and turned to coaching, working at VMI in 1936.

He assisted with the North Carolina freshmen the next three years, then moved to Oberlin College for a year. He followed that with two years on the Dartmouth staff.

While in the Navy he coached at Georgia Pre-Flight under Rex Enright, Don Faurot and Jim Tatum. He learned the workings of the split-T from Faurot. After his discharge he returned to Dartmouth for a year, then moved to Maryland for two years under Tatum.

He spent the next three seasons as Washington and Lee head coach. His 1950 team won the Southern Conference championship and played Wyoming in the Gator Bowl.

Barclay is a 41-year-old native of Natrona, Pa. He is married and the father of two daughters.

Bass was Snavely's line coach here four years ago, then moved to a similar post at William and Mary. He was head coach there in 1951, and last season was line coach for the Washington Redskins.

Led by James Daniels and Lonnie Harper the Robinson boys came from behind in the third quarter to tie up the score at 15-15. However, in the fourth quarter the Grimesland squad, paced by Mills, Gatling and Evans, hit for 15 points to win going away.

Phants At R. Rapids, Play Here Saturday

The Greenville High Phantoms get their toughest basketball test of 1953 tonight when they take on the Yellow Jackets of Roanoke Rapids in a Northeastern Conference game.

The Phants are currently riding a four game win streak in 1953 competition and have marched over conference foes New Bern, Washington and Elizabeth City in the process.

Saturday night a full evening of basketball has been planned. The Greenville Jayvees meet E. K. Powe High's Junior Varsity state champs in the evening opener beginning at 6:30 in the Wright Building.

The Phantoms will open a series with Lynchburg High of Lynchburg, Va. in the second game of the evening.

Next week the Greenville quint will travel to Edenton Tuesday and return home Friday night to finish the first conference round against Kingston.

Coach Bo Farley has been drilling diligently with the squad all week in preparation for a rugged weekend session.

Highlights of practice sessions have been the increasing development of varsity newcomers Leon Hardee and Guy Smith. They have been hitting the hoop consistently in practice and an added scoring punch will be directly needed against the strong Roanoke Rapids club.

This game and the one with Kingston are the ones we have been dreading all along," says Coach Farley. "We'll have to be razor sharp to beat them."

Olympic Champs Hold Convention At Philadelphia

Olympic champions will join a host of more than 400 athletes from five nations on the boards of Convention Hall tonight in the ninth annual Philadelphia Inquirer track meet.

Major interest will be focused on the performances of such Helsinki, Finland, winners a Lindy Renkimo, Andy Stanfield, Mal Whitfield, Horace Ashenfelter, Bob Richards and Harrison Dillard.

Ashenfelter may get more attention than the others because he is participating in the clash for prominence between the millers and two-milers, which may steal the entire show.

Ordinarily the one-milers bask in the spotlight at all indoor meets, but the amazing time of 8:55.3 turned in by Charley Capozzoli of Georgetown University over the two-mile route at Boston last Saturday is revamping status quo.

Capozzoli's performance, best ever by an undergraduate, dazzles when compared with Fred Wilt's winning but slow time of 10:5 in the one-mile run at the same Knights of Columbus meet.

Ashenfelter, surprise winner of the 4 Olympic steeplechase and holder of the Sullivan Award as the nation's best amateur athlete for 1952, will have a chance to

Pirates To Rest Over Week-End

First team basketball players at East Carolina College got the day off yesterday and second stringers had only a light workout as the Pirates began a week of preparation for their next North State Conference contest. The game will be played next Wednesday in High Point against the High Point College Panthers.

The Pirates, recently returned from a three game tour of the Western part of the state, were given the day off so they could rest from the grind they encountered on the trip and also to give minor injuries a chance to heal.

About the most serious injury to any member of the squad are the shin splints currently being suffered by forward Charlie Huffman. Huffman had his shins taped tightly for each of the three games the Pirates played while gone but he still had a little trouble with pain and soreness. The rest yesterday and light drills until next Wednesday are expected to put him back in top shape.

In the second team workouts yesterday, Coach Howard Porter gave all the reserves a chance to work in an attempt to build up the reserve strength of the team. The Pirates have been hampered somewhat by a lack of bench strength this year but they have been improving all along.

On the swing through the West, for instance, a pair of guards who had not seen a great deal of action previously were used considerably. Paul Jones, a veteran from Thomasville, was put in at the guard position held by J. C. Thomas and Bob Moye, a transfer student who hails from Snow Hill, took over for Cecil Heath. Both played well in all three games.

The losses to Lenoir Rhyne and Western Carolina dropped the Pirates into second place in league standings. The win over Catawba, however, put them in a good position to move right back into the top spot should Western Carolina falter at any time in the near future. The Pirates now have a 7-2 conference record. Western Carolina's mark is 5-1.

gain revenge on the Pirates Capozzoli tonight.

The 50-yard dash features Stanfield and Remigino's Manhattan College teammate, Jack O'Connell. Whitfield, Olympic 800-meter titlist who represents the Grand Street Boys Club of New York, will head the 600 field.

Richards, the vaulting vicar, will battle Don Laz, the Olympic runner p in the pole vault.

The 29-year-old Dillard, who established an Olympic 110-meter high hurdle mark last year, will seek his sixth victory in seven appearances in the 50-yard high hurdles.

Washington Gets Scarbath As Top Choice In Draft

PHILADELPHIA (UP)—The National Football League, its distribution of 360 college players settled in an opening day 14-hours session, moved today to the serious business of cutting player limits, a wide open discussion on conference memberships and the schedule for next season.

The pro loop was geared for battle on Commissioner Bert Bell's recommendation that teams be limited to 30 players, and the toughie problem of what conference newcomers Baltimore will finally settle in as a league member.

The 30-player limit is a move on the part of Bell as an economy measure for the teams, particularly those whose balances were written in red ink at the end of last season. The commissioner reasons that dropping three players would save each team roughly $15,000 a year.

Baltimore is taking over the Dallas spot in the National or Western Conference. Fans in Baltimore prefer the Eastern Conference, with two cracks at the Washington Redskins, particularly in that the Redskins grabbed All-American players Jack Scarbath and Dick Modzelewski, both from Maryland, in Thursday's draft.

Washington has indicated a preference for the Eastern Conference, with Baltimore as an opponent, but there would be a reluctance by the Chicago Cardinals to move back to the West where their opponents would be the same as the Chicago Bears, their intra-city rivals.

The one hope for a happy solution was offered by Art Rooney, owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers, who indicated he would be willing to go into the Western division if necessary.

The conferences, now known as the American and National, probably will be changed to the Eastern and Western, respectively.

All-America players had their earnings in Thursday's draft, with Baltimore enriching itself with Billy Vessels of Oklahoma and end Bernie Flowers of Purdue.

Tommy Bolt Leads Field In Phoenix

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 23 (UP)—The "old pros" of the tournament circuit faced the challenge of a confident Tommy Bolt today as a field of 136 opened play in the $10,000 Phoenix Open.

It's been almost traditional that one of the veteran big-timers would walk off with the top money at Phoenix. Last year it was Lloyd Mangrum, Niles, Ill. golfing great, who triumphed over the 6,578-yard Phoenix Country Club course with a score of 274 for 72 holes.

Bolt, now playing out of Maplewood, N. J., succeeded in checking his explosive temper in the San Diego victory. He left no doubt Thursday that he intended to follow it up with a triumph here.

Bolt, Mangrum, winner of the Los Angeles Open and Bing Crosby, pro-amateur, and Demaret, Palm Springs Invitational winner, held the favorites' roles on opening day. Mangrum and Demaret are well established veterans,

Detroit Team Is Open For Players

This is the 15th in a series of interviews with major league managers.

By LLOYD NORTARD
United Press Sports Writer
DETROIT (UP)—Manager Fred Hutchinson knew one thing and only one today about his 1953 Detroit Tigers—Walt Dropp will be at first base when the season opens.

"All the other positions are wide open," said Hutchinson whose job it will be to lift the Tigers out of the basement, where they finished last season.

"We've got a lot of young players and we're going to look them over carefully," said the 33-year-old Detroit boss. "When you finish last you have to make some changes. We'll make them during spring training."

Hutchinson said if he had to name his starting pitchers today he would go along with Art Houtteman, Ted Gray, Hal Newhouse and Ned Garver. "But that could be changed before the season starts," he said.

Bill Wight and Billy Hoelt, a pair of southpaws, were starters last year and might get the call again.

Hutchinson's biggest problem is his infield. Aside from Dropp, shortstop Harvey Kuenn is conceded the best chance of grabbing a starting berth.

Gerry Priddy is a question mark at second base. He broke his leg July 6 against St. Louis and missed the last half of the season. Al Federoff replaced him and batted only 242. Third base man Fred Hatfield hit only .237.

"We can't carry two weak hitters in the infield," Hutchinson said. "Maybe we'll move Priddy to third if he's slowed down too much to play second. We've got two other second basemen."

He referred to Owen Friend, obtained from the St. Louis Browns in a fall trade, and Ed Kazak, former St. Louis Cardinal who was at Buffalo last season. If either displays much hitting power he would get the job.

There are 10 outfield candidates—Frank Carswell, Rufus Crawford, Jim Delsing, Carl Linhart, Don Lund, Pat Mullin, Bob Nieman, Steve Souchock, Russ Sullivan and Bill Tuttle.

Nieman, Delsing and Sullivan are the most likely starters, although Hutchinson is high on Crawford and Tuttle.

Matt Batts and Joe Ginsberg are Detroit's veteran catchers. But young J. W. Porter could become the No. 1 receiver.

while Bolt, although no youngster, has been around the tournament trail for some time.

Bolt teamed with Gil Dye of Phoenix, Thursday to tie for first place in the pro-amateur event.

Jesus Teaches Humility, Forgiveness

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Suescher

Scripture—Matthew 6:14; 18.

Who is greatest in the kingdom of heaven? Jesus said: "Whoever humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven."

If a man had 100 sheep and lost one, would he not seek until he found it? and would he not rejoice greatly over the lost one?

"If thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone; if he hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother."

"How oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times? Until seventy times seven."

Jesus Teaches Humility, Forgiveness

WE NEED TO BECOME AS LITTLE CHILDREN, SAID CHRIST

Scripture—Matthew 6:14; 18.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

THIS LESSON on the need for humility and a forgiving spirit is indeed a timely one. In the last 30 years we have seen men rise from obscurity to great power. It is possible that they were humble men in the beginning, but with great ambitions.

When they gained power they exercised it as if they were omnipotent—even as God. They presumed to exercise the power of life and death over their fellow creatures, persecuting and slaughtering innocent millions. They brought on a great war in which millions more were killed—civilians as well as soldiers, and many more were injured or made homeless.

What a difference it would have made if they had followed Jesus' teaching, and used the power they gained for good instead of evil.

Even the disciples, those closest to our Lord, craved to be greater than their fellows, and asked Jesus, "Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?"

Christ's rebuke was to set a little child in their midst, saying, "Whoever shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven."

Watch children at play, they quarrel, strike each other; but a short time later, they are again playing happily together, their squabbles forgiven and forgotten. It is often the parents taking their own children's part, who continue the warfare and sometimes force their children to do the same.

Jesus taught, "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you." How can we expect forgiveness if we do not acknowledge that we too have sinned, and forgive others, humbly asking our heavenly Father to forgive us?

Further Jesus said, that "Whoever shall offend one of these little ones which believe in Me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea." Children were beloved by our Master.

Jesus further illustrated His lesson by telling a parable of a man who had 100 sheep, but one went astray and was lost. Would not the man leave the 99 sheep and diligently seek the strayed one until he found him? Then would he not rejoice more over that one that might have been lost forever, than over the 99 who had not strayed?

So much for the "humble and contrite heart." Now about forgiving: It is sad but true that some of our bitterest quarrels and least forgiving spirits often are those in church groups. We all profess to follow the same Lord and acknowledge the same God, our Father. Let us all reread Christ's teaching on forgiveness. He said that if your brother trespassed against you, you should go to him and talk the matter over. If you could make the other see where his fault lay, you have "gained thy brother."

If the offender could not be brought to see his fault, then witnesses should be called to hear the dispute. If that did no good, the matter should be brought to the church. Christ only mentioned His church twice during His ministry. If the trespasser refused to listen to the church, the case was hopeless.

Peter asked Jesus how many times should he forgive his brother.

DETROIT (UP)—City officials have ordered removal of 24 of the remaining 40 watering troughs in this world automotive center.

Truman Did It

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Who ordered Maj. John Eisenhower home from Korea to see his father-in-law as president? The Eisenhowers said they didn't know.

Today, the Chronicle's Washington correspondent reported: Dwight D. Eisenhower learned the answer just before Tuesday's inauguration by asking President Truman:

"Sir, may I ask you a question: Who ordered my boy home from Korea? He's been giving me hell about it."

"I did," Truman said. "Just tell him that contrary old man in the White House did it."

The major was given 15 days home leave.

Kremlin Leaders Showing Fear In Recent Actions

By PHIL NEWSOM
United Press Foreign News Editor

The Kremlin leaders are afraid—afraid for their own personal safety, afraid of the United States and even afraid of their own shackled population.

A psychology of fear would seem to be the only explanation behind many otherwise hard-to-understand Moscow moves.

However, it doesn't make them any the less dangerous.

Nor does it make it easier for their oppressed people.

And finally, it doesn't mean that we should be any the less wary of new, aggressive moves by the Russians.

Nonetheless, at least four major recent moves by the Soviets may be ascribed to fear. They may be listed as:

1. The anti-Semitic anti-Zionist and the anti-Catholic campaign.
2. The hate campaign against the United States.
3. The continuing "peace" campaign designed to dull the suspicions of Western Europe and to split the U. S. from its allies.
4. New oppressive measures at home.

Communist attacks against Jews and Catholics serve possibly three purposes.

The godless Communist state can tolerate no loyalties other than to the Kremlin and Communism. The Catholics always have been under suspicion because of their religious ties to the Vatican. As for the Jews, anti-Semitism is an old, old story in Russia, but today apparently headed toward new fury because of the Jews' suspected loyalty to the new Israeli state.

Persecution of both Catholics and Jews serves a second purpose in that, like the old Roman "ciculus," it takes the mind of the populace off its own hardships and provides an easy scapegoat to cover the Reds' own failures.

Finally, there is the attempt of the Reds to win to their side the oil-rich Arab states by unceasing propaganda attacks against Israel.

Through the whole Kremlin campaign of fear, both for itself and the one it attempts to impose on the outside world runs its hatred for the United States.

Wrote a Moscow-directed Communist newspaper in Paris:

"Eisenhower entered the White House yesterday, where he plans to put his program of fascism and war into action.

So, too, Russian citizens who fall under arrest are accused of ties with U. S. espionage. Completing the link in the hate campaign is the fact that most of them are Jews.

But along with the Kremlin's fear of the outside world is their fear within.

Accompanying it is the obvious fact that after more than 30 years, Stalin and his lieutenants still have not "sold" the Communist state to all the Russian people.

In this category have been attacks in the Communist youth newspaper against "political carelessness and looting complacency and self-satisfaction."

In the same category was a piece in Red Fleet, newspaper of the Soviet navy, which spoke of "Ukrainian nationalists and remnants of unstable, disloyal, crushed elements of the Soviet populations still infected with bourgeois-nationalist views."

Police Helped To Evict Twosome

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—Bar owner Bill Murray appealed for help from the police Thursday night to remove two unseemly characters from his place.

Police coarried and found customers giving wide berth to the pair, a man and his 225-pound dog. Patrolman William Bailey convinced them to leave, and then reported:

"It was the man who caused the trouble. The dog didn't growl or bark or anything. He just sat there and panted like a lion."

HE'S A FOURTEEN BARREL MAN—Terry Browne, 33-year-old Detroit, Mich., fireman, is at the halfway mark as he sails over fourteen barrels with the greatest of ease in the world barrel-jumping championships at Grossinger, N. Y. Browne retained his world title as he won the 1953 event with a leap of 27 feet, nine inches.

Disgusted

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Burglars battered open a safe in a Knoxville factory office, found it empty, blew their tops.

"Why didn't you leave some money in this thing?" asked a note they left behind yesterday.

Still angry, they apparently set fire to some sawdust in the boiler room.

Firemen found the note atop the safe.

Trying Again For White Crosses

WASHINGTON (UP)—Chairman Edith Nourse Rogers of the House Veterans Committee said today she plans to introduce legislation in a second attempt to force the armed services to restore white crosses on the graves of 13,000 war dead in Honolulu's National Memorial Cemetery.

The crosses on the "Hill of Sacrifice" overlooking Honolulu were torn down in September, 1951, and replaced with stone markers.

The Army's action set off a wave of protests. One veterans group said removal of the crosses made the cemetery look like a "cow pasture."

But the Army defended the action as an economy move and said it was standard policy to have stone markers rather than white crosses in national cemeteries.

Mrs. Rogers, a Massachusetts Republican, said she was shocked by the Army decision and pleaded for restoration of the crosses.

But her bill to make the Army replace the markers was killed in House interior subcommittee last March.

Mrs. Rogers, 71-year-old champion of veterans' causes, said today she is considering carefully exactly what legislation would have the best chance of approval in the new Republican Congress.

She also disclosed that she plans to sound out Republican officials taking over the Pentagon on chances of restoring the crosses by administrative action.

OUT OF ORDER

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (UP)—A woman witness who appeared in Superior Court wearing bright plaid slacks was advised by Judge James E. Murphy that "this is not a seaside resort." She swapped clothes with a friend before testifying.

MEDAL-ING

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UP)—A thief who broke into an automobile passed up other items and stole four Army medals.

Secrecy Deleted In Paroles Bill approved bill calling for reorganization of the Paroles Commission was expected to be brought to the floor of the House for action today.

The measure was given a favorable report yesterday by the House Judiciary 1 Committee after a section had been deleted which would have closed parole records to the public. Rep. W. B. Riddman of Beaufort, introducer of the bill, went before the committee and asked that the secrecy clause be removed.

The bill calls for the Paroles into a three-member board instead of the present single commissioner. This is in line with recommendations of Gov. Scott and the Advisory Paroles Council.

If enacted, the measure would become effective July 1. Under the bill, the governor would appoint the three board members who presumably would hold fulltime jobs. He also would set their salaries with the approval of the Advisory Budget Commission.

16-Year-Old Vet Advises Other Kids, 'Stay Home'

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Back home after a second hitch in the Army which took him to Korea, 16-year-old Ralph Renfro, Jr., advises other youngsters to "stay at home."

Ralph's mother recently ended his Korean sojourn when she sent his commanding officer a copy of his birth certificate.

The young world traveler and soldier of fortune, who looks like he might be 21, says he wouldn't go through his experiences again "for a million dollars," but "I wouldn't take a million dollars for having had them."

But he adds quickly, "I should have listened to my dad." If he had it all to do over, he says, "I'd stay home."

At the age of 13, Ralph was roughnecking hard labor in an oil field. "Telling a slight fib," he said yesterday, he joined the 49th Armored Division of the National Guard in 1950.

Several months later he decided to join the Army, an idea his mother er took as a joke because he was just 14. But he enlisted in September, 1950, and was discharged in 1951 because he had asthma.

A trip west - through Arizona, New Mexico, Nebraska, Colorado and Montana - was followed by shipping out as a crewman on a yacht. When the ship docked in New Orleans last year, he enlisted in the Army again.

At Camp Chaffee, Ark., he volunteered for Korean duty. By this time his mother decided to let him stay in service until he had had enough.

A few months ago, Mrs. Renfro decided the boy was getting homesick and started some action to get him home. He was separated from the service at Ft. Sam Houston, San Antonio, Tuesday. He was glad to see "mom" and "dad," the latter a carpenter here.

"If they get me back," he said yesterday, "they'll have to draft me."

Jaycees Turn Down Idea Of Sponsoring Ball Club

A proposition that Greenville Jaycees sponsor a professional baseball team in the city this Summer received the "freeze" treatment at the club's regular meeting last night.

The proposal provided that in order to get a team to come here, local Jaycees would have to: 1. clear up an old indebtedness of approximately $3,200; 2. secure the use of Guy Smith stadium; 3. sell season tickets; and 4. lend moral and financial support to the team.

After short discussions on the matter, none of which was at all favorable, the club voted by an overwhelming majority not to sponsor a professional baseball team in Greenville this year.

Members of the club gave J. B. Kittrell, Jr., a rising vote of thanks for his efforts in bringing the city manager referendum to a "satisfactory" conclusion. Kittrell reported expenditures of approximately $300 on the project.

Radio Show
Results of the Christmas radio talent show were reported by Chairman W. H. Watson. He stated 21 needy families were provided with food, clothing and toys during the Yuletide season. The radio program netted pledges of $200 in cash, $200 worth of clothing, $50 worth of food, $100 worth of toys and $50 worth of candy.

"Scotchlite" Chairman Frank Dail said a total of $500 worth of luminous tape had been sold at a profit of more than $200. He said some money and tape have not been turned in, and he urged all Jaycees retaining either to contact him as soon as possible.

Greenville Jaycees had as their guests last night six visiting Jaycees from the Farmville club. They were: Joe Joyner, Jonah Taylor, Harold Rouse, Dan Morgan, Dewey Fuquay and Bob Rouse, district vice-pres-

SALT LAKE CITY (UP)—Police threatened today to end one of the few joys remaining for downtown motorists.

The installed a sample device called a "meter eraser." When cars back out of parking stalls, a gadget automatically clicks the parking meter back to zero. Result:

No more parking on somebody else's nickel.

It is estimated there will be 15,708,000 people over 65 in the United States in 1960.

statements about his condition could well be much brighter than they have been. The Governor has his radio and new ers, and has handled all the really essential business of the office. He is being kept quiet and visitors are restricted, solely because he must have rest at this period and for protection of his health later, not because he does not presently feel well enough to talk.

UNCERTAIN —While there has been a lot of interest in the make-up of legislative committees which probably will pass upon liquor referendum bills if any are introduced, the fact is there is much less activity about a referendum than most observers had expected by this time. One man who has always been in favor of a state-wide vote as a matter of principle, although himself favoring legal liquor, said there was not as much certainty now as there was two years ago that the state would vote against ABC stores if an election were held. He attributes the lack of activity in large part to this changed popular attitude since more populous communities have had experience with the ABC system.

Stocks And Market Reports

NEW YORK (UP)—Prices on the stock exchange moved aimlessly early today in dull dealings. Changes throughout the list were very narrow. Trading was at a snail's pace with sales in the first hour totaling only 260,000 shares, compared with 290,000 in the same period yesterday.

WASHINGTON (UP)—Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. found this note on his desk when he reported to work at the Justice Department.

Janelle Whitley Chosen Host Queen For Bethel Yam Festival

BETHEL—The honor of being the host queen of Bethel's 1953 Yam Festival went today to Miss Janelle Whitley of Bethel High School.

As the result of rules set up by the steering committee of the Yam Festival, Miss Whitley was named "Host Queen" to preside over preliminary festivities until the 1953 queen is chosen.

A spokesman said since the 1952 Yam Festival did not include a beauty contest, there is not a reigning queen to preside over preliminary activities for the 1953 program.

Miss Whitley was chosen queen by the Junior class of Bethel High School. As host queen she will not participate in the contest for the 1953 "Miss Yam Festival," nor for the cash prizes that will be awarded to winners in the beauty contest.

The host queen will have many duties in presiding over the presentation ceremonies that will be staged in Bethel March 13, when contestants from high schools in Edgecombe, Martin and Pitt counties will be presented to her court and to the judges.

The first stage of the judging will take place at that time, but no announcement as to the winner will be made until judges have made their final decision at a public program at the festival in October.

Miss Whitley has chosen as maids of honor for her court Miss Becky Keel and Miss Janie Edmondson.

Squirrel Hunter Given $30 Fine

Hunting squirrels out of season became quite an expensive item for a local youth yesterday, in fact to the tune of $10 per animal killed.

James Phillips Hemby, 17, of 303 Perkins Avenue, City, was arrested yesterday by city police and Game Warden J. O. Teel in the Rock Spring section of town, and charged with taking game out of season, to wit, three squirrels. In addition to the out of season hunting charge the youth was also charged with discharging fire arms in the city.

When taken into custody, the youth was found to have three freshly slain animals in his possession.

In city recorder's court this morning, the boy was fined $25 for hunting out of season and $5 for discharging the fire arms in the city.

Hemby told Judge Whedbee that he did not know the hunting season had expired nor did he know at the time that he was hunting on city property.

His Little Joke Cost Him $1,000

NEW YORK (UP)—Fight manager Steve Ellis felt good about the way his boxer, Chico Vejar, had just settled up with the law for 13 long-unanswered traffic tickets by paying $650 in fines.

"By the way, your honor," Ellis chuckled as he started from the courtroom, "I might have a couple of tickets outstanding against me."

Magistrate John M. Murtagh raised his eyebrows and ordered an aide to make a quick check. The records show no less than 22 unanswered parking tickets in Ellis' name.

Murtagh fined the manager $1,000.
