Congressman And Pentagon Want Staged Raid Explained

Demand Korea 'Spectacle' Inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Hoffman (R-Mich.) today asked the House to demand a full explanation from Defense Secretary Wilson for an American combat raid staged in Korea last Monday before invited guests.

The attack, known as "Operation Smack," stalled under heavy fire near the top of Spud Hill, north of Seoul. It was witnessed by Army and Air Force generals and war correspondents who were provided with advance timetables.

Hoffman has prepared a resolution asking the secretary of defense to explain "whether this raid was actually for justifiable military purposes or whether it was a show staged for some as yet unknown purpose."

The resolution probably will be referred to a House committee which may summon Wilson for an explanation.

Pentagon officials said they have requested a full report from the field. They said they had no information on "Operation Smack."

Another Republican House member, Bray of Indiana, said yesterday he had demanded an explanation from the Defense Department. Bray, an Army reserve colonel with four years' service in the Pacific, said he was "mad as hell" and "never heard anything like it."

In a statement, Hoffman said: "I am sure our people want to know whether these invited guests were witnessing a spectacle similar to that where gladiators performed for the entertainment of invited guests in the time of the Roman emperors."

Hoffman's statement also said: "It is bad enough to fight a purposeless, unending war where the men who are doing the fighting are sacrificing their lives, but it is wicked to use them as expendable cannon fodder for propaganda purposes."

The attack, planned since Jan. 19, moved along on schedule—airplanes, artillery, tanks—until the infantry ran into deadly Communist ground-fire and hand grenades within 15 yards of Spud Hill's crest.

The soldiers finally pulled back to their own lines.

The spectators watched from a forward observation bunker. They were provided with mimeographed seven-page time-tables, bound in cardboard with a three-color decoration on the cover.

Hoffman's resolution listed eight detailed questions for the secretary to answer, including the purpose of the attack and the American and other Allied casualtes resulting from it.

News stories describing the assault and editorials commenting on them, the resolution said, "cause resentment among our people and interfere with the support which should be given the Armed Services."

It asked the secretary to confirm reports that timetables were provided and, if so, to explain why. It also requested information on those attending and why they were invited.

The resolution further asked whether motion pictures were taken and, if so, why.

Bray said he wrote the Defense Department because he received mail and telephone calls from constituents demanding an explanation. "It's a wonder to me why more hell hasn't been raised about it," he said.

Receives $1,000 Check As Grifton's Prize

Mrs. Thurman Williams, director of the Grifton "Finer Carolina" contest committee, received a check for $1,000 last night from Jack Howell after the town won honors in the contest sponsored by the Carolina Power and Light Company. Mrs. Williams hinted that the money would be used for recreation in Grifton. (Reflector Photo by Roy Hardee)

Iron Curtain Cannot Hide Atomic Tests From AEC Experts

No Guessing In Atomic Blast Reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Those Russian atomic explosions reported themselves—in great detail.

No Iron Curtain could have kept them secret, no secrecy gag could have hushed them up.

The Atomic Energy Commission this week disclosed some, but not all, of the methods science uses to keep tabs on nuclear detonations.

The AEC uses these methods to track radioactive particles spewed into the air by atomic test blasts in Nevada.

U. S. atomic intelligence agents use essentially the same tricks, supplemented by others, to keep informed of nuclear events in the Soviet Union.

Information thus obtained was reported to President Truman in September, 1949, and twice again in October, 1951. He relayed it to the world.

The reason the Russians could not keep their atomic tests secret is that every nuclear explosion looses multiplied trillions of telltale radioactive fission fragments which the sensitive instruments of science can detect and analyze.

In the case of an atomic air burst, these particles may be carried around the world by "rivers of wind" in the high atmosphere.

Likely traveling companions will be dust particles hurled into the air by the blast along with volatilized particles of the "device"—whether a bomb or something else—in which the atomic charge was packed. These particles, too, can be analyzed by the methods of microchemistry.

Atomic explosions also generate shock waves in the atmosphere and the earth's crust which may be detected at great distances by sensitive instruments.

The United States presumably uses all of these methods in the constant watch it maintains on Russia's aomic activities.

In its 13th semiannual report to Congress yesterday the AEC told some of the story of how atomic particles may be trapped and made to talk "as far as several thousand miles away" from the explosion scene.

With the help of 121 weather bureau stations, the AEC maintains a nationwide radiological monitoring system. Air sampling devices sent aloft in airplanes or balloons collect "hot" particles on filters or gummed paper.

Since the "decay" characteristics of radioactive elements are well known, the trapped particles can be identified by Geiger counters and other instrumens. Even the slightest increase in normal, radioactivity anywhere in the atmosphere can be spotted quickly and certainly.

Informed sources say the Soviet world is ringed by air-sampling and shock-recording stations, and that patrol planes converted into flying laboratories constantly check the high winds streaming from Communist Europe and Asia.

And in 1949 and 1951, these sources say, U. S. experts not only learned that the Russians had set off atomic explosions but determined what nuclear explosive was used.

They also were able to figure out, by volatilized materials found in the air, whether the devices were bombs or something else, and by the amount of accompanying dust whether the explosions were surface or air bursts.

Their evidence, congressional and other atomic experts said this week, was "indisputable."

Angry Reaction Surprises Army Officer In Korea

Spokesman For Unit Involved Says Criticism Of Futile Assault Unfair

SEOUL (AP)—Some military men in Korea expressed surprise and dismay today at the angry reaction in the United States to Sunday's Allied attack on Spud Hill—an outpost on the Western Front.

Rep. Bray (R-Ind.) asked the Defense Department for an explanation of what he called a "dress rehearsal" in which people got killed.

A spokesman for the division involved said:

"To call the operation a dress rehearsal is completely wrong.

"I think his criticism is unfair. There are no theatrical trappings. Not a single one. This is deadly serious business and every one over here knows it."

The officer and the division cannot be identified for security reasons.

To criticism that a "program" or "score card" had been distributed to generals and newspapermen watching the operation from a bunker, the officer said:

"Every operation has an operation order and all we had was a complete operation order. An operation order is a time table. It says that certain things will happen in a certain sequence. The only difference between this one and any other operation order was that this one had a little fancier cover. And it was a home-made cover at that."

Another officer of the same division said the purpose of the operation was to test and demonstrate the effectiveness of close air-ground support. He said that explained the presence of Air Force generals and other military observers.

"If we were going to have a similar operation tomorrow we would do much the same thing whether there were visiting generals or newsmen there or not," he said.

Mothers Are Ready For Citywide Campaign

Polio Drive Climax Tonight

Tonight at 7 o'clock, women of Greenville will unite in the final drive to put the 1953 March of Dimes over the top.

"That hour will mark the zero hour for the start of the Mothers' March on Polio," Mrs. Clem Garner, chairman of the march said. "More than 300 volunteers will contact every home in the city to secure funds for the fight against infantile paralysis.

"During the past five years polio has taken a terrific toll of our youth. The people of Greenville will have the opportunity to demonstrate as never before, that we are ready and willing to strike back with every means at our disposal."

In street after street porch lights will gleam, lamps and candles will shine forth from windows, indicating that residents are "at home" to representatives of the Mothers' March on Polio.

Mrs. Garner said that everything is in readiness for the climaxing activity of the March of Dimes. The entire city was mapped out several weeks ago, a streamlined pattern of procedure was set up and the mothers received complete instructions for the "March."

Sirens and fire whistles will signal the zero hour, the chairman said. And the "contact mothers" who will visit each home will be "armed" with credentials, scrolls for the donors' signatures, and a mason jar or some similar collection device.

Each mother will contact people around her block. They, in turn, will hand the contributions over to their section lieutenants, on to the district captains and the to the police station where the money will be counted. The radio station will announce the results when the money comes in

"Tonight", Mrs. Garner said, "we shall witness a truly inspiring sight. During the past two weeks of the March of Dimes the people of our county have joined in a host of activities designed to make this the greatest March of Dimes ever held in our local area. The Mothers' March should prove one of the most impressive of all those activities.

"Here we have more than 300 mothers giving of their time and energy, and many homes whose occupants will give freely of their dimes and dollars so that our boys and girls may have a chance to win out over infantile paralysis."

Robbery Charge Added To Crimes

Pitt Fugitives Formally Accused Of Gastonia Mill Theft

GASTONIA, N.C. A(p) — Armed robbery charges have been filed here against two fugitive North Carolina convicts arrested in Texas in connection with a Louisiana bank robbery.

Police said that F.C. Bonner, 27, captured last Sunday near Carthage, Tex., and Defoye Inman, 22, apprehended yesterday at Paris, Tex., have been charged with the $2,000 holdup of the Gray Mills here.

Office employes at the mill identified the two men from photographs.

Both men, along with Bonner's brother, Haskell, and Guy F. Nelson, are also charged with looting the Gilliam, La., bank of $28,000 a week ago.

Inman and Bonner escaped with Peter Baxter from a Pitt County road gang on Oct. 24. Baxter, who was later declared an outlaw, was captured in Charleston, S C.

Inman was serving a total of 13 years. Sentenced from Gaston in Jan., 1951 to 3-5 years for larceny, he escaped and when recaptured received additional sentences for auto theft, breaking, entering and larceny, offenses committed during his getaway.

Bonner was serving a life sentence for accessory to murder, imposed in Columbus County in Jan., 1943.

Continued Spirit Of Civic Improvement Urged

Grifton Receives Its Award

GRIFTON—Climaxing a year's work of civic and physical improvement, the "Finer Carolina" Contest committee of Grifton was presented a check for $1,000 by Jack Howell, Kinston manager of the Carolina Power and Light Company.

The Grifton committee led the town to winning first place in the "Finer Carolina" contest in the classification of towns with a population of 1,000 or under.

The contest, sponsored by the Carolina Power and Light Company and in progress for the past year, came to a close last night at a dinner given by the company to honor Mrs. Thurman Williams, director of the "Finer Carolina" committee, the town Board of Griton and others who have worked on the contest.

In making the presentation of the $1,000 check to Mrs. Williams, Howell said the growth of Grifton during the past 15 years has demanded an increase in power and many other things.

Howell had high praise for Grifton and the many people who worked long and hard in civic improvements during the year from November 1, 1951, to November 1, 1952.

Mrs. Williams, filled with enthusiasm, expressed appreciation to the company for the incentive the contest gave the people of Grifton. "Love of home, the will to win, and cooperation, won the contest for us," she said.

Mrs. Williams acknowledged the achievement of each person present last night but stated that cooperation and work was not limited to just those present. She urged continuance of public spirit to make a "better Grifton".

Dr. W.E. Rasberry, Grifton mayor, presided over the ceremonies. He received a certificate presented to the town by the Carolina Power and Light Company.

In addition to Howell, J.M. Geddy, local sales representative of the company, was present. Rev. W.C. Chauncey offered the invocation before dinner.

City Sought Utilities Control In '49

Howell 'Right' And 'Wrong'

By JESS POINDEXTER
Reflector City Editor

Alderman R. E. Howell was correct in his statement Tuesday night that the city board has previously made an attempt to gain control of the Utilities Commission, but he referred to the wrong administration.

Extensive investigation into city records this morning disclosed that the proposal to abolish the charter of the Greenville Utilities Commission was passed March 3, 1949, while J. H. Boyd Jr. was mayor, not W. S. Stafford.

The proposition to bring the Utilities Commission under direct city control gained impetus after the board meeting held on February 3, 1949, when Alderman J. E. Waldrop made a short talk on city manager form of government and moved that the city call a vote on the matter "at the earliest possible date."

Exclude Commission

At that time Waldrop said the Utilities Commission should be excluded from the proposal until it had time to complete a current program of "major improvements." He advised the city to try out city manager form of government before the commission was brought into city operation.

Four days later the board voted a resolution calling for a vote on "Plan D" and authorized City Attorney R. B. Lee to draw a bill to that effect.

On March 3, 1949, Alderman Waldrop proposed that the city have the General Assembly to pass a bill which would repeal "all laws under which the Utilities Commission operates," and the Board of Aldermen would assume duties of operating the commission.

At that meeting, the board approved the specific proposal that the city should name a five-man commission to head the utilities

Fire Discovered In Another Liner

SOUTHAMPTON, England (UP) —Scotland Yard detectives studied a charred state room on the liner Queen Elizabeth today for evidence of sabotage in a mystery fire which threatened to engulf the 83,000-ton ship as it lay in drydock here yesterday.

The blaze, latest of an unexplained series aboard luxury liners, was confined to the single stateroom and was brought under control within an hour.

Britain's top scientific detective, Dr. L. C. Nichols, boarded the Queen Elizabeth this morning to investigate Cabin 93 where the fire broke out. Southampton police began an investigation of workers aboard the ship.

"We must regard this fire with some suspicion," Chief Constable C. G. Box said. "It might have been accidental or it might have been willful."

Fire guards aboard the Queen Elizabeth were reported to have been doubled recently after three minor blazes aboard its sister ship, the Queen Mary.

The 20,323-ton Empress of Canada was destroyed by fire last Sunday night at Liverpool. The possibility of sabotage in that fire is under investigation.

Senator Charges Vast Waste In Overseas Set-Up

WASHINGTON (UP) —Sen. Olin D. Johnston charged today that 100,000 employes and "billions" of dollars could be chopped from the nation's overseas programs by eliminating waste and inefficiency.

The South Carolina Democrat, in a report sharply critical of many phases of American foreign spending, said "the very foundation of our foreign policy is being damaged by an undertow that is steadily increasing in pressure."

"This undertow derives its strength," he said, "from streams of indecision, over-lapping authority, duplication of effort, wasteful practices over-staffing and irresponsible and un-coordinated supervision and direction."

Mutual Security Director Harold E. Stassen plans to "re-evaluate" the foreign aid program to make sure the United States is getting the most for its money.

Joint Subcommittee Assigned Task

School Bond Issue Studied

RALEIGH UP)—A joint education subcommittee began studies today to determine the amount of money needed from a proposed statewide bond issue to carry out Gov. William B. Umstead's program for state grants-in-aid for school buildings.

The size of the bond issue proposed in Umstead's inaugural address is "the primary problem before the committee," Sen Fred Royster of Vance, Senate Education Committee chairman said.

The subcommittee was named by Royster and Rep. C. Gordon Maddrey after Umstead sent word from his hospital room in Durham that he wants action started on the plan.

The subcommittee will begin its work by studying a bill introduced by Rep. T. J Collier of Pamlico County calling for $50,000,000 in state aid to localities for school building over a four-year period.

Under Collier's plan to appropriate $25,000,000 from the general fund and raise the other half by a bond issue, no referendum would be necessary

However, some legislators said the $50,000,000 amount may not be enough. State school officials have set $75,000,000 as the amount needed to carry out the school building and equalization program.

Others said a $25,000,000 drain on the general fund may prove too severe, and a referendum for a larger bond issue may have to be the answer.

The Senate Education Committee meanwhile approved a resolution by Sen. O. A. Kirman of Guilford County calling on state agencies to reconcile their statistics on the actual public school needs.

Kirman said he was confused by conflicting information on school needs offered by various agencies and groups. He told newsmen that there "is a deliberate strategy of confusion against the public schools."

Dr. Charles F. Carroll of High Point, state superintendent of public instruction, told the committee that there is now need for at least 7,400 new classrooms and several hundred vocational education shops, cafeterias auditoriums and gymnasiums.

Elsewhere the joint appropriations committee heard fresh requests for supplementary budget appropriations totaling $1,600,000.

The Department of Agriculture requested $503,600 more in operating funds; the experiment station at N. C. State College asked for $171,000 more than was recommended by the advisory budget Commission, and the state college extension service said it needs an extra $138,000 to expand its staff.

Highway Commission Chairman H. W. Jordan said he was not requesting more money for the big highway fund, but warned against increasing the recommended appropriations for agencies which draw money from the highway fund.

"There isn't any more," Jordan said. The highway obligations are increasing steadily, he said, while revenues "seem to be leveling off."

Snyder Accepts Industrial Post

TOLEDO, O. (UP) — John W. Snyder, secretary of the treasury under ex-President Truman, has accepted a job as vice-president in charge of finance of Willys-Overland Motors, it was announced today.

Snyder was treasury secretary for seven years. He was succeeded last week by George Humphrey, Cleveland industrialist, appointed by President Eisenhower.

ORDERS AUDIT

Raiders Surprise Dozing Chinese

SEOUL, Korea (UP)-- United Nations raiders in a no-man's land battle south of the truce village of Panmunjom hit surprised Reds today with "everything, but the kitchen sink."

For a half-hour the Allied raiders turned rifle and automatic weapons fire, hand grenades, flame throwers and tchel charges against a Chinese unit caught dozing.

From the rear a tank, artillery and mortar brrage hurtled over the raiders' heads and down upon the Chinese.

"We threw in the book," said a frontline officer. "That is, everything but the kitchen sink, and that didn't fit anything we could fire."

When the raiders withdrew they left 30 dead Chinese and many others wounded.

In the air about 100 fighter-bombers poured bombs, bullets and flaming jellied gasoline on a vital troop concentration at Sinchow, where the Reds hold reserves for the western front.

An estimated 55 buildings were destroyed by three wings of fighter-bombers in their strike on the Communist billeting area.

One of the pilots on the bombing said, Lt. Col. Wilfred B. Crutchfield of Madisonville, Ky., said "if those troops still are concentrated, it's someplace besides North Korea."

B-29 Superforts early today again blasted eeeeeeeeeeeeeeeen again blastd the North Korean capital of Pyongyang with 90 tons of bombs droppd on two Red supply bases.

Portion Of New Jersey Robbery Loot Recovered In Kinston Raid

KINSTON—Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation swooped down on an apartment here at dawn yesterday and recovered $5,215 of a $70,000 Trenton, N. J., bank robbery.

Contrary to popular reports currently circulating throughout the South, no arrests were made in Kinston and the bandit who left the money was taken into custody in Atlanta, Ga.

An irrefutable source of information said this morning the Kinston apartment was retained in the name of Raymond Holden of this city, who reportedly had no part in the robbery.

According to Holden, Leonard Jashenski, 30, of Chicago, came through Kinston last week-end and left the money with Holden. Officers have not disclosed Holden's relationship with the bandit, and the Kinston man has not been placed under arrest.

Jashensk. is the last one of three men to be arrested for participating in the robbery January 16. The two other men previously apprehended are John H. Revense of Ashland, N. J., and Wallace C. Riehl of Hamilton, N. J.

Federal agents instigating the search and subsequent recovery of the bank loot in Kinston were Bill Gibson and James Akers. They said they entered Holden's apartment here at approximately 6 a. m. yesterday morning.

The one remaining bandit was arrested in Atlanta, Ga., and when he was picked up he had in his possession some $2,150 contained in a suitcase, $1,750 of which bore wrappers with the name of the Hamilton Avenue Branch Bank.

Arresting officers reported that Jashenski had recently purchased a car for $1,800 cash. A young girl was with the bank robber when he was arrested. He reportedly met her in North Carolina last week. No charges were placed against her.

Dr. Richard Todd Guest Speaker

Mrs. J. T. Little was hostess to the End of The Century Club at her lovely suburban home on Tuesday afternoon. The rooms were festive with colorful arrangements of spring flowers.

The president, Mr. Joseph Moye, presided over a brief business meeting, after which she presented Dr. Richard Todd, of the Social Department of East Carolina College, as guest speaker for the afternoon.

Dr. Todd chose as his topic "Conflicting Ideologies in the History of Man." He said that the ideas of man have made him develop or decline and that "His Story" has been a constantly changing one either in evolutionary or revolutionary fashion. He said that man's attempts to obtain economic, political and social security have caused him to form into groups. When these groups have different ideas of how to obtain these securities they come into conflict with each other and these conflicts have to be settled by capitulation, compromise or war.

He gave briefly some of the differences in the present day ideas of democracy and communism and closed his discussion with the quotation, "The Price of Liberty is Eternal Vigilance."

Following this most thought provoking talk, the books were distributed.

The hostess assisted by Mrs. R. M. Garrett and Mrs. J. H. Thomas served a delicious salad course, coffee and dessert.

The first typewriter in which the operator could see the line he was typing while he was typing it was manufactured in 1883.

Mrs. Settle Reviews Book For Literature Department

Members of the Literature Department of the Woman's Club met Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. F. P. Brooks at her home on West Fifth Street. Miss Mamie Ruth Tunstall and Mrs. Charles A. Schoneman were assisting hostesses.

The home was made very attractive throughout with a variety of spring flowers and tapers.

After the guests arrived they were served delicious refreshments of cherry tarts, nuts and coffee by the hostess committee.

The president, Mrs. R. P. Rogers, presided over the business session which included routine items.

For the program, Mrs. George Perry presented Mrs. H. H. Settle, who gave an interesting and stimulating review of Catherine Peare's book, "Mary McLeod Bethune," the biography of the great Negro educator, humanitarian and Christian leader, who was inspired at an early age, overcoming many personal hardships, to take up the crusade for the welfare of her people.

Members expressed their admiration and praise for this world famous woman before the meeting adjourned.

Cosmotologist Holds Monthly Meeting

The Eastern Carolina Cosmotologist Association held its monthly meeting at the Greenville Beauty School on Tuesday. Leo Facnca of the Southern Beauty and Barber Supply Co. was in charge of the program.

The association discussed plans for a new educational program for the coming year with "Service through co-operation" as their slogan.

The next meeting will be held in Washington. Time and place will be announced later.

Members present were:

Washington—Thelma Hadley, Mildred Cratch, Maggie Buck, Lois Toler, Mary Frances Beachman, Maude Windbourne.

Aurora—Hallie Rowe, C. D. Warren.

Joint Hostesses Entertain Class

The Wesley Philathea Class held its regular monthly meeting on Monday evening at 7:30 at the home of Mrs. W. G. Ward. Assisting hostesses were Mrs. K. W. Cobb, Mrs. J. D. Swain, Miss Sallie Cowell, Mrs. Virginia Perkins, and Mrs. Eva Richardson.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. V. P. Scoville, after which Mrs. K. T. Futrell gave a most inspirational devotional. She used the 100th Psalm and read poems pertaining to the value of cheerfulness that go to make up life and make it more beautiful. She said, "We must be careful to choose the best and the most important things in life. The sweetest songs have been sung in sorrow and the richest things in character have been reached through pain."

After roll call, collection of dues and all business was transacted, the class was entertained by one of its members, Mrs. Milton White. She gave a reading called, "Angeline in Louisville," taken from "Angeline of the Hill Country."

At the close of the meeting delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses.

Winterville News

Literary Club Meeting

With the leadership of a new president Mrs. J. O. Edwards, the Winterville Literary Club got off to an enthusiastic start at its first meeting of the year on January 26.

Mrs. Alec Evans, Jr. as program chairman announced her plans for the year. For the April meeting she plans a flower arrangement program in which each member is urged to enter an arrangement. In December she hopes to have a contest among club members and any other home makers who would be interested in decorating their front doorways for the Christmas season.

It was announced that the library is to be moved to the Community Center. It is hoped that in its new location there may be renewed interest in reading. The Bookmobile regularly brings new books from the Sheppard Memorial Library. As a result our community has access to nearly 1,000 books.

The club urged that our community remember dogwood week Feb. 2-7 by planting some dogwood trees. In addition it was suggested that we plant more crepe myrtles. Any who are interested in placing orders for crepe myrtles or dogwoods may contact Mrs. Graham Olive or Mrs. J. D. McArthur gefore February 15.

$70 Millions In Gems To Appear

LONDON (UP) — Some $70,000,000 worth of diamond jewelry will be worn to next June's coronation ceremonies in Westminster Abbey, London trade circles estimated today.

The prediction was inspired by the large number of diamonds which turned up as accessories for gowns in the current spring fashion showings in London.

Most of the top British designers showed at least half a dozen models intended to be worn with diamonds —in tiaras, necklaces, bracelets and stomachers.

Norman Hartnell, who gets most of the royal and peerage trade, showed a gown in gold-and-white with a tiara of 1,500 small diamonds.

Mattli also had a gold-and-white coronation gown, sheathed around the hips because of the lack of space in the abbey for anything elaborate. His model also wore a diamond tiara.

John Cavanaugh, youngest of the designers, achieved a striking contrast in a gown of extreme modern cut set off with antique diamond jewelry.

"British women have some of the most exquisite diamond jewelry in the world," said an expert at the showings. "A lot of this has been sold but the peerage still retains enough to make coronation day a kind of diamond jubilee."

N. C. Forestry Officials May Go To Umstead

RALEIGH (UP) —State Forestry officials may take their requests for funds for a new state seedling nursery to Gov. William B. Umstead if the request for supplemental appropriations is cut out by legislative budget makers.

State Sen. J. V. Whitfield of Pender County, vice-chairman of the committee on conservation and development, recommended that "you should go before the governor if necessary," in a statement to the forestry committee of the State Conservation and Development Board.

However, board chairman MILES J. Smith of Salisbury said the joint appropriations committee "showed much interest" in the proposed new nursery when he submitted the request last week.

Residents of the United States own 52 per cent of the investments in Canada's rapidly growing oil industry, latest available figures show.

Quick Pickup

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Detective L. L. Filson took the description of a fugitive over the telephone yesterday, looked out the window and did a double take.

"Read that description again," he told Capt. Mark Bain, who was relaying information passed along by Pensacola, Fla. authorities. "A man just walked by that looks like our man."

The repeat confirmed his suspicion and Filson stepped outside his home and arrested the man. Officers said he identified himself as Honor Robinson, 32, wanted in Pensacola on two charges of assault with intent to kill.

Twenty minutes after the pickup order was received from Florida, Robinson had waived extradition.

Sugar-Producer Cuts Its Ration

VIENN, Austria (UP) — Communist Checoslovakia, once among the world's leading sugar producers, has cut its sugar ration about two-thirds to one pound a month.

A Prague radio announcement said the sugar ration cut was because of last year's poor crop and "sabotage" among farmers.

Curtain Has Gone Down, They Can Relax

By MURIEL SHOTWELL
Reflector Staff Writer

"There's nothing else like it, this is the life!" emphasized the veteran performers commenting on show business after appearing last night in Greenville in Stanley Woolf's production of "Kiss Me, Kate."

Perhaps the one with the longest record in show business was John Myhers who portrayed Fred Graham and Petrucio. Myhers said his stage career began when he was a youngster and he has been on the stage for the past 26 years.

He has just returned from Italy after seven years where he appeared in Italian movies and sung at the Royal Opera in Rome in addition to recording albums of 'South Pacific" and "Kiss Me, Kate."

Jean Carlton, as Lilli Vanessi, the female lead made her stage debut in 1945 and commented that the stage was her "life's work." She is married to Herbert Voland, the first gangster, and they have a six-month old baby.

Miss Carlton commented on the appreciative audience last night and explained how much it meant to the actors to be responded to "We never know how an audience will respond," she said, "one audience will applaud to one song or scene whereas another audience will respond differently."

Miss Carlton said the script was not adapted to different regions but some lines, concerning the area, are always included, such as a reference by Myhers and Sanford McCrerry (Harrison Howell) to "grits".

The dancing sextette, devised by Jack Nagle, consists of three husband and wife teams in solo, as teams and in group numbers. The Valentines appeared as a team for the first time in 1948 and have been featured as specialty dancers throughout the United States, South America and the West Indies.

Al and Diane Pace had extensive training in classical ballet and have been a featured team on many occasions.

The troupe, which has as its home base, New York City, will play next in Wilmington and in Georgia and then journey on to Pensacola, Florida.

Miss Carlton said they rehearsed in New York for two weeks and then some time at Christmas before starting on the road with "Kiss Me, Kate."

According to an absurd fable of comparatively modern date, the Upas tree of Java destroys all life in a radius of 15 miles because it is so poisonous.

Packed House Saw 'Kiss Me Kate' -- But Lyrics Were Lost To Large Number

"Kiss Me Kate," staged here last night by the Civic Drama Guild of New York, drew a packed house of Eastern North Carolinians — and sent most of them home wishing they could have heard the clever lyrics Cole Porter wrote to go along with his music.

For the most part, the audience enjoyed the performance, and responded with laughter and applause which often was enthusiastic occasionally polite.

As a whole, the voices in the show were weak. The booming of the organ —which didn't do justice to Porter's music — combined with the poor acoustics of Wright auditorium, left too many lyrics hanging on the first few rows with the remainder of the audience trying in vain to guess at the words they were unable to distinguish. The audience got the idea, but not too much else.

John Myhers, playing the male lead as actor, producer and writer Fred Graham, did a good job of holding together the continuity of acting was good, but his songs less impressive.

Jean Carlton, portraying the role of Lilli Vanes ("Kate"), did a creditable job in spite of the difficulty the audience had in catching the words to her lines. Particularly in her song "I Hate Men," her banging on the table with the ale stein added more emphasis to the lyrics than did her voice.

The "boys" who literally stole the show were Herbert Voland and Irving Karesh (the gangsters) and Sanford McCrerry who appeared as Harrison Howell, sugar daddy to the show girls. "Brush Up Your Shakespear" sung by Voland and Karesh caught the fancy of the audience, but even here, some of the words were lost to the listeners.

Evelyn Torres peaked her performance with "Always Tr To You" which delighted the audience.

Apparently the performance went off without incident other than the fact the duck which one of the gangsters shot from the rafters during the second act appeared on stage several minutes too soon. It was tossed in from the wing and tossed off by one of the actors; and when the time came for the shot, it fell to the center of the stage just as scheduled.

Plan Introducing FEPC Measure

WASHINGTON, (UP) — Two Northern senators planned to introduce a compromise FEPC bill today that they hope will win support from Southern senators who have blocked anti-distrimination legislation in the past.

The measure, sponsored by Sens. Irving M. Ives R-NY) and Hubert H. Humphrey D-Minn), would exempt small employers and emphasize state and local rather than federal action in combatting job discrimination.

However, even with these modifications, the proposal was expected to encounter stiff opposition from Dixie senators. Last year, a similar measure failed even to come up for debate.

Eight Republicans, eight Democrats, and independent Sen. Wayne Morse (Ore.) joined Ives and Humphrey in sponsoring the new bill.

Anxious to avoid the "fair employment practices commission" tag, the sponsors called the bill "The Federal Equality of Opportunity in Employment Act." It provides for creation of a federal commission to hear discrimination complaints but calls for the maximum use of education and persuasion rather than enforcement to deal wit the problem.

The backers claim the measure "furnishes the most practical and effective medium by which to guarantee everyone equal opportunity to earn a living according to his ability and regardless of his parentage or religious faith."

Final Slap For GOP By Truman

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UP) — Former President Harry S. Truman gave the Republicans a final slap before vowing he wouldn't make any more comments that might throw a "monkey wrench" into President Eisenhower's administration.

Mr. Truman's admonition came in a comment on the first foreign policy speech of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

"I don't think they'll get anywhere by loud talk," the former President said. "I'm not going to say anything more that might throw a monkey wrench into anything Mr. Eisenhower's administration is trying to do."

Pressed for further comment, Mr. Truman said, "I don't think further amplification is necessary."

Dulles promised in his speech Tuesday night that Republican policy would aim at keeping America strong to "deter war but not to wage war."

"I think President Eisenhower and his team are entitled to a chance to work it out," Mr. Truman said. "I hope they [illegible] to get somewhere. I ought to know what they're up against because I've been fighting this thing for eight years."

Has Invitation To Coronation

STRAWBERRY, S. C. (UP) — James H. Rozier, a storekeeper in this little hamlet, today had an invitation to the coronation of Queen Elizabeth of England, but he didn't know who sent it or why.

The envelope containing the invitation was postmarked Chicago, but it bore no other identifying marks.

The invitation was marked RSVP, but Rozier didn't know to whom he should respond, unless he writes to the queen herself.

The invitation did not include Mrs. Rozier.

Strength for the Day

LIGHT

At one point in his career, Jesus declared himself to be the light of the world.

He made this statement during the Feast of Tabernacles when, each night, during the feast the giant candelabra of the Temple cast its light over much of the city of Jerusalem. Some scholars believe that he may have made this statement at dawn, as the lights of the temple were being extinguished. His teaching meant the dawning of a new day. The light he would cast upon the world would be far more brilliant and illuminating than anything humanity had ever known before.

Two thousand years after that statement, we look upon its fulfillment—only a partial fulfillment, of course, but in the process of taking place. Jesus Christ has cast a new light across the home, across standards of moral decency, across such agonizing problems as chattel slavery and political bondage. Whether war will ever be completely eliminated remains to be seen, but at least we know that the world now has a conscience on this matter and can never wage war again without spiritual as well as physical agony.

Time For Hard-Headed Business Thinking

Sands of time are running out on local officials who are in the process of formulating modifications for Greenville's new council-manager form of government.

Any alteration which is brought about will have to be made by legislative action. And legislative sources have strongly recommended local bills be placed before the General Assembly by early February in order to assure action in the current session.

At a joint meeting of the local aldermen and utilities commissioners Tuesday night an informal discussion of proposed modifications of Plan D was held, but no definite decisions came from the meeting. There is to be another meeting of the two groups early next week at which time specific modifications for the new form of local government should be determined.

Those modifications could be given final approval at the regular meeting of the Board of Aldermen Thursday night of next week and forwarded to the General Assembly for action.

The concensus is that people of Greenville generally want several modifications in Plan D before the new form of government becomes effective. Above all, jurisdiction over the municipally owned utilities seems to be the most important question in the minds of the people. The aldermen apparently are not quite sure what to do with the problem.

One thing is sure, however. Unless some request for legislation is made within the next two weeks, chances of any modifications of the new government in the next two years is going to be remote.

The time for beating around the bush with this matter of modification is past. It is time now for hard-headed business thinking on the matter to enable the officials to arrive at the formula which will give Greenville's government and its agencies the most effective form of operation.

As we view the situation, it is not a matter of taking power away from a utilities commission, or giving more power to a city council; but purely and simply a matter of revamping the municipal set-up in order to gain more efficiency in the overall operation.

A Watchdog Hangs Up His Collar

With the recent shake-up in Congressional committees and sub-committees by virtue of the change of control to Republicans, Congressman Herbert Bonner of the First District, has given up his position on the Committee on Governmental Operations.

The Reflector, for one, is reluctant to see Congressman Bonner relinquish his position on the committee which opened the door for his outstanding activities during the past four years as chairman of the group which became known as the "Bonner Watchdog subcommittee."

By way of explanation, Congressman Bonner said he was forced to choose between the operations committee and the committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, and chose to remain on the latter because he felt it was of greater importance to North Carolina's First Congressional District.

We are sure Congressman Bonner chose the committee on which he felt he could be of greatest service to the people who elected him to Congress. Nevertheless, his contribution to a more economical operation of the federal government during the past four years has by far been his outstanding achievement as a member of Congress.

The investigation subcommittee which Bonner headed, looked into various and sundry operations of government agencies. Particularly did it give attention to the military. For many months Bonner's group led the fight for elimination of duplicating supply systems in the armed services which cost taxpayers unnecessary millions of dollars each year. Great savings have been realized already in this one phase of operations, and efforts for further centralization of supply are continuing.

Investigations of the subcommittee have covered a variety of items from major equipment to coffee roasting by the armed forces.

It has taken much investigation, some travel and long hours of study of federal systems of operations for flaws in operations to be detected and corrected. It also has cost money to carry out the investigations, but the cost has been surprisingly little compared with the savings which have been realized.

During four years of investigating, Bonner's subcommittee spent a total of $50,000; but by their findings at least $400 million was saved through direct appropriation cuts. And the investigations over the past four years are still yielding dividends to taxpayers in the form of less waste in government spending.

In spite of the fact Congressman Bonner has chosen to give up his investigation post, his contribution to the people of his district and the citizens of the nation during the past four years has indeed been one of outstanding quality.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—Senator Homer Ferguson of Michigan still wants a comprehensive Congressional investigation of the eleven-year old Pearl Harbor disaster under Republican auspices. Despite the Senate-House inquiry into that "day of infamy," he does not believe that the true story has been told to the American people.

Senator Ferguson was a member of the Senate-House Committee which tried to learn why the Pacific Fleet, despite advance warnings, was sitting like so many crippled ducks as targets for Japanese bombers, instead of patroling the sea lanes between Hawaii and Japan.

Ferguson and other members were never satisfied with the work of former Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts or Seth W. Richardson, who served as the investigating committee's counsel.

BELIEVE F.D.R. HAMSTRUNG AUTOPSY—The Michigan Senator has always believed that F. D. R. deliberately prevented an all-out autopsy of the tragic occurrence. For one thing, the committee was not permitted to subpoena all the diplomatic and military documents and messages throwing light on surrounding circumstances.

F.D.R. ruled that the Capitol Hill investigators could have access only to papers which they identified and asked for specifically. Naturally, that prohibition placed the inquiring body at a great disadvantage.

WARNED OF ATTACK—Senator Ferguson has recently received a tip that the British Intelligence had warned Washington of the very hour and date on which the Japanese would attack Pearl Harbor. In his opinion, somebody ought to explain why our air and naval forces on Hawaii were not kept constantly on the alert, in view of this advance notice.

The unofficial explanation for apparent neglect of the British advice, according to informed members of the Armed Services Committee of the Senate, seems sound. British Intelligence had warned F.D.R. and former Secretary Cordell Hull of a sneak Japanese attack at least six times during early 1941.

When their lugubrious forecasts were not substantiated, Washington minimized their importance. It was like the fable in which the boy cried "wolf" too often.

DEMOCRATIC OPPOSITION—Ferguson faces strong opposition against revival of the Pearl Harbor affair. The Democrats will line up against it almost solidly, while certain Republicans feel that it has become an academic and closed book.

On the other hand, politically-minded Republicans see possible partisan advantage in an exhumation, as they do in Senator McCarthy's resumption of his Communist "purge." As the GOP waved the "bloody shirt" for 40 years after the Civil War, a small group would like to pillory the Democrats as the "war party." Moreover, the Ferguson proposal has the backing of many historians, who have no political affiliations. They simply want all the facts.

It is doubtful if President Eisenhower will look kindly on another Pearl Harbor investigation, especially as his Army benefactor, General George C. Marshall, will be involved. He has never explained his role satisfactorily, in the opinion of numerous members of Congress.

But Eisenhower might burn his fingers if he intervened negatively. Congress has always been extremely sensitive about its right to conduct extra-curricular inquiries of this kind. They were still investigating Civil War blunders and official intrigue 20 years after Appommatox.

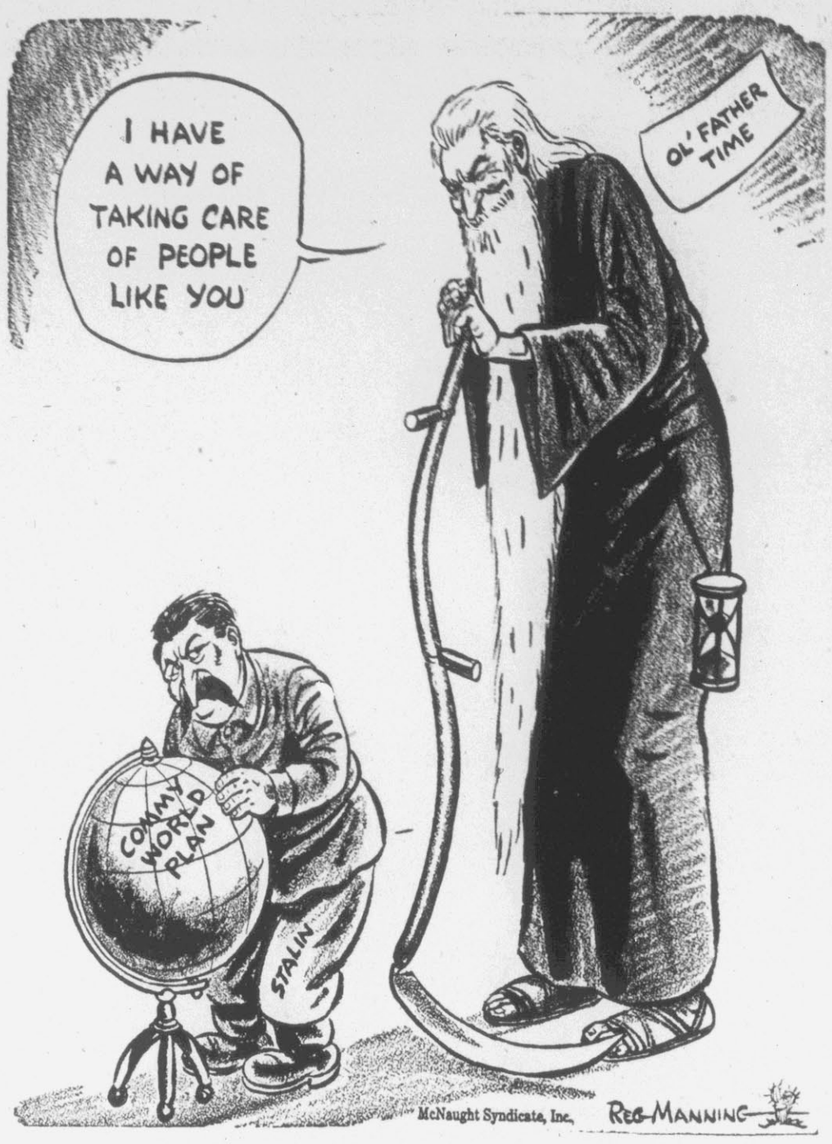
KETTERING FOUNDATION—The most important news in the Senate Committee's questioning of "Motor Charley" Wilson's ownership of General Motors stock has been overlooked in the quest for sensational headlines. It concerns his holdings in the unknown Kettering Foundation, which the Defense Secretary described as follows:

"He is about to build a small laboratory now, and make an effort through research in certain areas where he thinks that much good would come by advancing human knowledge. Particularly is the foundation interested in how energy from the sun can be fixed or stored up in some form that human beings can use without it going through the plants, the known method nature has for storing up energy from the sun.

"That is the way nature is doing it. But he hopes that there are other ways of doing it, and some day, if that can be done, we could raise the living standards of all the people of the world."

RUSSIA EXPERIMENTING—Russia has begun experiments in harnessing sunlight. If successful, it would make the discovery and use of atomic energy for military or commercial purposes look like "small potatoes." Backward lands now baked in sunshine—South America, Africa, the Middle East, India—might develop and utilize richer resources than the great powers, including the United States and Russia.

Just Like I Told Hitler—



Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

It's not often that I preach in this column, but today I have ample reason. My point in a nutshell is take care of yourself; guard your health. And the reason that feeling is so prominent in my mind is that I'm sick with the flu.

May 13th this column will be four years old, and this is the second time that I have had to lie in bed and dictate the column to Wife Rachel. When sickness hits somebody like me, who isn't used to it, it's rough.

Most healthy people have a sort of foolish attitude: "I can expose myself, go without sleep, overwork, and it'll never phase me." Even I have been foolish enough to say that. Then something will hit that makes you think that even the Iron Man isn't above getting sick.

Almost as bad are the extremists in the other direction, who jump in bed at the least sniffle. This type over-protects himself to the degree that he becomes susceptible to the least ailment.

My opinion is that all of us are hypochondriacs to a degree. We hear about a disease, read about, and before you know it you have all the symptoms. At Carolina I had a friend in Medical School who was a hypochondriac if anybody was Every disease he studied he "caught." And that's understandable. If you study symptoms it's easy to imagine that you have every one. Even some doctors who have been practicing for years get a notion that they are sick when actually they aren't.

When I think of sickness I always have to admit that women have an amazing ability to take it better than men. A normal man would be flat of his back while his wife with the same sickness would be carrying on the normal housework. No doubt God looks out for women because He knows they are the ones to take care of the little children.

Sickness in children is most alarming to any parent; yet, it's amazing how often it is of no consequence. A little child can have fever and appear to be in a horrible condition. A few hours later he can be jumping and playing around the house.

The newspapers and radio will tell you that the flu epidemic is on the downgrade. But take it easy: don't become convinced that it can't happen to you. And if you've never had flu just ask anyone who has. The answer will no doubt make you even a little more cautious.

And I thank you.

SPOKESMEN — One of the unavoidables incident to the absence of Governor William Umstead from his office by reason of illness is the assumption of many unauthorized persons to speak for the Governor. The volunteer spokesmen cannot embarrass the Governor, but there is likely prospect that they may embarrass themselves and those who rely upon their assertion of authority.

BROTHER — The fact that John Umstead, veteran member of the General Assembly, is an older brother of the Governor, gives him additional prestige, as did the fact that last session Ralph Scott, brother of the Governor at that time, had more than usual freshman prestige because of that relationship. Senator Ralph Scott two years ago and Representative John Umstead now, have not imposed upon the kinship, and it is well known to their colleagues in the Generaly Assembly that in many instances their views do not coincide with those of the man downstairs. In absence of the Governor there is natural disposition on part of many people not familiar with the facts to regard Brother John as his spokesman to somewhat greater degree than Brother Ralph was accepted two years ago—when the Governor was available for checking.

OTHERS — The folks who are buying real grief for themselves are those who officiously claim to enjoy the intimate confidence of the Governor and who pass out profound statements of policy, without actually accrediting them to Governor Umstead, but with obvious intent to leave the impression they are authoritative. Slated for a fall also are the gullible folks who believe these professions without thoroughly checking them. Rumors have been current around the capitol that certain persons have been told they could have certain positions, and in at least one instance a man came to Raleigh to take over, only to find that there was no basis for the promise which had been made him by a completely irresponsible party. In other instances newspaper stories emanating from sources known to be not friendly to the new administration have attributed actions and appointments to would-be kingmakers—who actually had no part in the decisions announced.

COMPETENT —Anyone who knows Gov. Umstead knows that he makes his own decisions and does his own talking. Weeks before his inauguration and immediately thereafter he had repeatedly said he would make no major appointments or replacement of incumbent personel, except in emergency cases, for some time after taking over the office of Governor. Enforced absence from the office may delay action somewhat longer than originally intended on some of these matters, but Governor Umstead is entirely capable of doing his own thinking and making the necessary announcements of his decisions. The volunteer assistance of "friends" who may be more interested in their own benefits than in aiding the Governor can serve only to embarrass them.

ADOPTION — Pe[illegible]s more pages of the law books and court house records, and more time of legislators and welfare wokers, is devoted to the provisions for adopting children than to any other single phase of social service activity. There y considerable discussion in Senate Judiciary 1 committee Tuesday about a bill by Senator Weeks amending the law respecting required consent for adoption in cases where one or both parents are known to be mentally incompetent. There is an obvious omission in the existing statutes on that point, but the Senate lawyers want more time to study the proposed act to see if it opened up more gaps than it closed. Two questions were whether clerks of court should have authority to find as a fact that a parent was incompetent without adjudication by a jury, and whether it should be made mandatory for the adopting parents to be told that a parent of the child was mentally sick.

EASIER — Mrs. Glennes Weeks, wife of the introducer of the bill, told the committee that her experience involved in adoption proceedings were thorough and care-

What Other Papers Are Thinking

SOME SORT OF PLAN NEEDED
(Henderson Dispatch)

Compulsory motor vehicle inspection by some legal State agency ought to be helpful and should operate toward reducing accidents. It is a nuisance, and its absence is in a sense a relief to car owners generally. But that does not make vehicles secure against accidents. Nor does inspection of itself alone, for that matter.

Whether due to inspection or otherwise, it was a fact that when the State had periodical inspection, the rate of accidents turned downward. We are among those who believe that the major portion of highway mishaps can be ascribed to human rather than mechanical failures. But if one or a dozen lives could be saved by having cars inspected and repaired, that inconvenience on the part of motorists generally would be justified.

The human element is covered, at least theoretically and as far as the statute can go, by periodical renewal of driving licenses. Similar inspection of the mechanics of a vehicle ought to serve much the same purpose from that angle.

We cannot enthuse greatly, however, over the idea of entrusting the procedure to private garages. That could develop into a first class racket on the part of unscrupulous repairmen, despite precautions and restrictions that were imposed by the State. Under the former system of State inspection, there was much complaint about long waits for service, although much of that developed by reason of drivers putting off compliance until the last minute and then facing congestion, just as many are now doing in purchase of 1953 license plates.

Our own feeling is that some sort of system operated by the State itself would be the most satisfactory plan. Several proposals are being considered in the General Assembly. One or the other of them, or possibly a combination of more desirable provisions of several or all, appears to have a fair chance of approval during the current sitting of the legislature.

It is our belief that the public will accept motor vehicle inspection if a satisfactory method can be worked out. Unless one can be, it will be better to drop the whole project. For any sort of hodge podge arrangement would quickly incur the displeasure of motorists, whose disapproval, if strong enough, would result in repeal at the next session of the General Assembly. Such repeal, too, might mean the end of any effort at all for years to come. A sound, practical, workable system should serve to great purpose, if it can be devised.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESNER

While many prophets are saying that the whole blamed world may go self-service, Joseph Kolodny, managing director of the National Association of Tobacco Distributors, declares that the small general store is staging a remarkable comeback.

Mr. Kolodny is an authority on marketing and his association is made up of firms that service 1,300,000 retailers with 5,000 items produced by 55 industries.

The small general store, he admits, has suffered successively from the expansion of mail-order houses, department stores, chains and supermarkets. But now, he says, rising labor costs, increased warehouse charges and more cars and highways are causing trouble for giant merchandising operations

The little store, manned by a family, has no pressing wage problems. It has no warehousing problems. And being convenient to its customers, it is little affected by traffic considerations. In addition, Mr. Kolodny points out, the disallowance of preferential discounts under the Robinson Patman Act puts small stores and supermarkets on a more even footing.

"Independent retailers have been holding their own by reducing mark-up. This and mass advertising by manufacturers has increased turn-over, bringing in larger net profits," Mr. Kolodny says. A few years ago, the small store turned over its cigarette stock 17 times a year; now the turnover is 40 times, according to Mr. Kolodny.

Meanwhile, a survey by Dun & Bradstreet indicates the typical combination grocery and meat market can make a profit on the patronage of only 165 families, and a drugstore can operate successfully on sales to 800 families. On the other hand, book stores require 12,800 families for profitable survival and camera and supply stores, 12,300. Even in the face of supermarket competition, building up 165 family customers should not be difficult for a well run food store, or 800 family customers an impossible task for an aggressive druggist.

DECRIES IMITATIONS OF SUPERMARKETS

Meanwhile, some of the menaces to the smaller stores have been sharply criticized. Many department stores are failing to maintain their lead as merchandisers, Harold B. Wess, former department store executive and now an associate in marketing at Columbia University, told the Metropolitan Controllers Association in New York.

Many department stores, he conceded, have continued leadership and they are profiting above the average.

"Department stores brought drama, glamour, excitement and stimulating atmosphere with their indoor shopping streets," he said. "They were innovators, researchers and explorers in the field of retailing."

But now, he said, too many are copying supermarkets, chain stores, high-pressure cash-and-carry operations and many other forms of retailing. "They will have to become better department stores, not better supermarkets," he said.

INVESTMENT IN MARKET RESEARCH INCREASING

Sixty per cent of 25 member companies surveyed by the American Management Association say they plan to spend more money on marketing research this year than last. However, even with this rise, the total spent will only be a fraction of expenditures for production and technical research, the survey disclosed.

EXCISE-TAXED INDUSTRIES CAMPAIGNING FOR RELIEF

The new Congress and the new "business" Administration is hearing a lot from business. Among the more strident voices are those demanding repeal of the 20 per cent excise tax on leather goods, handbags, toiletries, jewelry and furs.

Those industries collecting lower rates on the things they sell are almost as vigorous in their insistence on relief.

Associations in these industries have met or have called meetings in the next few weeks to organize extensive campaigns, and to call Congress's attention to the fact that removal of the ta would increase sales up to 25 per cent.

HARVESTER: A tractor-mounted machine that both picks and shells corn in the field, saving time and labor and reducing storage requirements, has been developed (by Minneapolis Moline Co., Box 1050, Minneapolis 1). It picks two rows at once and feeds shelled corn out into a wagon. By handling corn with up to 25 per cent moisture, it is said to permit harvesting one to two weeks earlier than with conventional methods.

Hal Boyle's Column

HOMETOWN, U.S.A. (AP)—After dinner Wilbur Peeble, like any other average American husband, usually disappears behind his evening newspaper.

The problem of his wife then is to find some way of getting his attention-short of setting fire to him.

This particular evening Trellis Mae decided on an experiment to see just how deep a coma her little man could get into. So, as soon as he was comfortably settled in his easy chair and had started reading the newspaper, she said gaily:

"Well, Dear, I finally slew our maid this morning. You don't really mind do you?"

Silence.

"Wilbur:" said Trellis Mae, cupping her hands so her voice would carry better. "I said I slew our maid: Are you angry with me?

"Uhuh."

"I knew you would understand. I just couldn't stand her uppity airs another day. She won't criticize my draperies any more."

"Thass nice."

"When she bent over to pick up the vacuum cleaner, that's when I let her have it," said Trellis Mae dramatically, "I smashed her over the head with a table lamp. It was awful — the sound it made."

"M-m-m-m, m-m-m-m," mumbled Wilbur.

"I had to stifle a scream when she fell," said Trellis Mae, lifting her voice again. "Wilbur, she lay there crumpled up like a. . .like a sack of potatoes."

"Potatoes?" said Wilbur, turning to the sports page. "I had some for lunch. Fried. Too greasy."

"My problem then was to get rid of the body," said Trellis Mae her vexation rising. "Just then the doorbell rang. It was the grocery boy. For $20 he agreed to take the maid's body in his car and dump it in the river. I helped him carry it downstairs. It was so heavy I had to go to bed afterward and rest. I was simply exhausted."

"Thass too bad."

"Her shoes wouldn't fit in the cart. So I kept them. She'd told me she paid $19.50 for them. Imagine that: I kept her new hat, too. She paid $18.75 for it only last week. And it's just my size."

"Thass fine."

Trellis Mae decided her experiment had gone far enough. Exasperated, she went over and snatched at the newspaper hiding her husband's face.

"Wilbur Peeble, you're absolutely impossible:" she stormed. "You haven't heard a single word I said to you."

"Whadda ya mean—I didn't hear you?" replied Wilbur, picking up his paper again. "Can I help it if the maid broke a table lamp and the grocery store tried to over-charge you?

"And how come you buy a new hat and new shoes right now with me worrying about how I'm going to pay my income tax? Sometimes I wish I couldn't hear you."

He picked up his newspaper, and turned the pages savegely.

"That isn't what I said at all," shouted Trellis Mae. "I was just testing to see if you ever really listened to me. What I said was that I slew the maid by busting a lamp over her head, and I kept her new hat and shoes because I needed them."

"Well, thass all right this time," said Wilbur, already deep in an editorial. "But don't buy any more. I need some clothes, too, but you don't see me throwing money away all the time."

A look of utter hopelessness crept into Trellis Mae's face as she stared at him—and a kind of wifely awe.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—There will be a vice president in the John Sparkman family after all.

Mrs. Sparkman, wife of the defeated running-mate of Adlai Stevenson, was elected first vice president of the Congressional Club, made up of wives of members of Congress. She will serve with a Republican president, Mrs. Lawrence Smith, wife of the congressman from Wisconsin.

Mrs. Smith succeeds Mrs. James C. Davis, wife of the Democratic congressman from Georgia, who served two years as president of the organization set up by Act of Congress in 1908. Other vice presidents elected to serve for the next two years include Mrs. John Bricker, wife of the Republican senator from Ohio, and Mrs. Edward Martin, wife of the Republican senator from Pennsylvania, and wives of Democratic Congressmen Thomas Abernethy of Mississippi and Harold Patten of Arizona.

Mrs. William Norrell, wife of the Democratic Congressman from Arkansas, is the new recording secretary, and Mrs. Ralph Harvey, wife of the Republican congressman from Indiana, is corresponding secretary. Mrs. Russell Mack, wife of the Republican congressman from Washington, was elected treasurer.

The club started off its 1953 season with a friendly open house for new members of Congress and their wives—a customary gesture to "make folks feel at home" in their Capital city. Mrs. Davis, with true Southern hospitality, sent personal invitations to each of the 81 wives, inviting them to join the club.

"I tried to make the letter chatty and real friendly," Mrs. Davis told me. "I told the wives we all understood how lonely and confused they must be and that if they wanted advice and helpful suggestions, and wanted to get acquainted, to come over to the club. I told them there was no middle aisle, like in Congress, to separate us wives by party affiliations and that the welcome mat was out for them all."

Things are already beginning to hum at the club's gracious headquarters, newly redecorated with red, white and gold decor. Bridge marathons are held every Monday. Volunteer workers for the Red Cross meet on Tuesdays. Formal luncheons are held every Thursday, and teas, with special programs, Friday afternoons. Big receptions are held on Sundays during the season.

'New Kind' Of Sweater Girl On Fashion Scene

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK (UP)—A new kind of sweater girl is coming into fashion.

The sweater look goes right down to the hemline, thanks to miracle fibers knitted into spring and summer dresses never possible until now. Permanent pleats, tiered skirts, tweedy two - piece outfits and jewel-trimmed cocktail dresses—all have been created in knitted dresses and all can be dumped in the suds.

Some of the sweater-look dresses are all orlon, some are nylon and rayon combinations. The newest is a mixture of orlon and nylon used by designer Bonnie Cashin for what she calls a "straw hat collection of knitwear."

A few attempts at knitting dresses and two-piece outfits from nylon have been tried before. But orlon is being widely used for the first time for warm weather knits. One all-orlon sleeveless sheath dress in ribbed white knit will be sold in stores for around $30.

A three piece outfit of orlon with a permanently pleated knit skirt, a sleeveless top and a boxy cardigan jacket will sell for around $40.

White or pastel shades are the most satisfactory colors in orlon yarns, which is another reason they're getting their biggest build-up for summer.

Miss Cashin managed new colors and tweed-like knits with the nylon - orlon mixture she used. One dress has a white bodice and a navy blue gathered skirt. Both the colors and the gathers are something new for synthetic fiber knit dresses. The dress has a deep V neckline that plunges in back—another new high fashion touch.

Most of the knitted dresses are two piece. Camisole tops convert the skirt into a suitable cocktail dress.

A combination of half rayon and half nylon is used for all but a few dresses in the spring and summer designs of one company, Lass O'Scotland. Flared, tiered skirts do away with the straight, clinging look that used to be considered a necessary part of a knit dress. Pearls and crystal beads used to trim some of the scoop necklines are as washable as the dresses.

Designers forecast that this is just the beginning of the fashion possibilities of the synthetic fiber yarns. The sweater look seems here to stay, even though the clinging look has been replaced.

BLAST SCENE:—Map locates Aiken, S. C., where an explosion from leaking gas blasted one store to bits, set fires raging through four more and spread death and destruction in the center of the atomic boom town. Mayor C. M. Jones estimated that 10 persons perished and the damage totaled two million dollars. Several persons were injured. (AP Wirephoto)

Dog Blamed For His Drunkenness

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (UP)—Clarence Rankin 35, brought into court on a drunk driving charge, told the judge his pet dog, Skippy, got him drunk.

"I took Skippy to a tavern and he started doing tricks," Rankin said. "Every time Skippy would do a trick, someone would buy me a drink.

"The blasted dog just wouldn't stop doing tricks!"

The judge fined Rankin $100. Skippy went free.

Overlapping Tax Solution Is Goal

ALBANY, N. Y. (UP) — Gov Thomas E. Dewey indicated today the Eisenhower administration is considering ways of relieving taxpayers of over-lapping federal and state taxes.

Dewey told the New York Legislature in his annual message that in anticipation of new national fiscal policies, New York state should set up a special commission to study the state tax structure.

"Under its new leadership," the governor said, "the federal government may soon be re-examining its fiscal relationships with the states. This re-examination may result in a reversal of some of the centralizing trends in federal government of the past two decades.

"It may be that the federal government will want to relinquish some of its present tax resources in favor of the states, so that the states will become less dependent on federal aid.'

Dewey believes it is possible to work out a plan to give the federal government exclusive right to levy personal income taxes. The states, in return, would be sole collectors of gasoline and other taxes.

If such a plan came about, it would mean that New York state would be handing over about $300,000,000 annually in personal income tax collections. The federal share of gasoline and other taxes presumably would counterbalance the loss to the state of the income tax revenue—its largest single source of money.

India has about 10 million Christians, one of many minority religious groups and Christmas has been chosen as a national holiday in deference to the Christians just as other holidays are observed on a national basis in deference to other religious groups.

Old world camels and new world llamas are closely related and are believed to be the only living members of their family of animals.

EXPLOSION WRECKAGE PROBED:—Firemen and rescue workers probe the ruins of a downtown building in Aiken, S. C., after a tremendous gas explosion brought death and destruction to the atomic boom town. Five charred bodies have been removed from the wreckage and police believe the bodies of at least six more persons, listed as missing, were still entombed in the steaming mounds of rubble. Damage estimates ran as high as two million dollars. (AP Wirephoto)

Ten Candidates For Chancellor

RALEIGH (UP) —A final choice on a new chancellor for North Carolina State College may be made next month, it was disclosed today.

Maj. L. P. McLendon of Greensboro, chairman of a joint committee assisting University President Gordon Gray, said a list of names under consideration has been cut "to approximately 10."

Assailant Found It Was Mistake

SAN FRANCISCO (UP) — Lawrence Bridge told police he was on his way home the other night when a stranger stabbed him in the neck and knocked him to the sidewalk.

Then the assailant leaned over, looked Bridge in the face and said: "Pardon me, I thought you were Jerry."

Lift Controls On Toys, Games

WASHINGTON (UP)—The government suspended price controls on all toys and games today because they are selling below ceilings.

The action, covering manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, applies to toys and games ranging from toy soldiers to children's tricycles and scooters. It does not apply to bicycles.

BUM RAP

WORCESTER, Mass. (UP) — The draft board here asked a woman to help it find her husband. The woman, name undisclosed, replied: "The bum disappeared. But don't quit looking for the bum. The bum is a great fighter, so good he won his last bout with his 90-pound wife. The bum will be terrific against the Koreans. I hope you catch up with the bum."

FASHION NOTE?

TOLEDO, O. (UP)—Robert G. Hood was charged with illegal possession of marijuana when police found 50 of the narcotic cigarets in his hair.

Many authorities believe there is no reason for thinking that the Vandals resorted to objectless destruction in their great raid on Rome in 455, which modern use of the term "vandal" implies.

'AWOL' Corporal Plans Another Trip, To Altar

SOUTH GATE, Calif. (UP)—Annow," Army corporal who went AWOL and "hitchhiked" 16,000 miles to fight in Korea, planned another trip today—but this time it was to Palm Springs, Calif., with his 17-year-old bride.

Cpl. Robert Von Kuznick, 25, who returned Monday from his unusual tour of duty at the Korean front lines, married pretty Shirley Taylor Wednesday night, just a few hours after the Army granted him a furlough.

The marriage climaxed a hectic day for the young couple. They were kept busy from early morning obtaining pre-marriage blood tests and their license and making arrangements for the wedding.

The young bride wore a long white wedding gown during the ceremony in nearby Huntington Park's First Christian Church. The groom wore his uniform, complete with service ribbons and battle stars.

Von Kuznick got sick of his job of telling recruits at Ft. Knox, Ky., "why we fight in Korea" and took off 15 months ago to practice what he preached. He stowed away on an Army transport ship headed for the war zone and participated in several battles before his true identity was discovered.

Miss Taylor, when reached by telephone Wednesday night, confirmed she and the handsome soldier were married at about 7:30 p.m. When asked for details of the ceremony, however, she replied simply, "Nope, not right now."

Her mother, Mrs. Dorothy Taylor, supplied the details, however, and said the couple were accompanied to the church by friends of the bride. The girl's sister, Mrs. Joan Lane was her bridesmaid and her cousin Jack Meyers, was best man.

Mrs. Taylor said her daughter originally wanted to postpone the marriage until her 18th birthday on Friday, but changed her mind after Von Kuznick's arrival from the Ft. Ord, Calif., separation center early Wednesday.

She said the couple will leave for a "three or four day" honeymoon in Palm Springs, Calif., a desert resort city, and celebrate the girl's birthday there.

Temporary ABC Head Is Named

RALEIGH (UP) —Frank T. Erwin, president and treasurer of a Durham oil company, will be sworn in tomorrow as temporary chairman of the State Alcoholic Control Board succeeding Robert W. Winston who has resigned.

Erwin accepted appointment by Gov. William B. Umstead on a temporary basis until a permanent appointment can be made.

Colored News

Tragedy Struck At Vacation End

A car driven by Joseph Frank Taillon of Guilford College, N. C., skidded behind a lumber truck and crashed into a load of protruding logs yesterday.

Mrs. Lydia Frances Taillon was killed and her young daughters, Sally Elise, 3, and Joe Ann Carol, 11 months, were seriously injured. The husband and father escaped with minor face and hand cuts.

Record Factory Wage Earnings

WASHINGTON (UP) —Average weekly earnings of the nation's 13,500,000 factory workers hit a record high of $72.36 in December.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that a $1.58 weekly rise in factory wages during the month ended Dec. 15 was due mainly to an extension of the average work week to 41.8 hours—a postwar high.

Average hourly manufacturing $1.73, or 12 per cent above the same period two years ago. Living costs during the two-year period rose about 7 per cent.

The fact that the festival of St. Valentine has been linked with lovers is believed to be accidental, resulting from the fact the festival is observed in early spring.

WE'LL KEEP WAITING':—Mrs. Edwin L. Heller and her two children, Linda Rae, 3 1-2 and Edwin Lewis, Jr., 4 1-2, are shown in their Philadelphia home after the Peiping radio broadcast that Lt. Col. Edwin L. Heller, World War II ace, had been shot down over the Kwantien area of Liaotung Province and had been captured by Chinese Reds. Colonel Heller, who had been promoted from major the same day he shot down two Red jets, has been listed as missing by the Fifth Air Force in Korea. "The news is wonderful," Mrs. Heller said, "and we'll keep waiting." The boy is holding a scale model of the plane his father flew in Korea. (AP Wirephoto)

USING the minimum equipment to produce darkroom magic.

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Some of photograpghy's greatest thrills come in the process of developing and printing your own negatives. An elaborate darkroom is not a necessity; a permanent darkroom is a convenience but a workable darkroom can be improvised to yield satisfactory results in any home or apartment. Cellars, kitchens and bathrooms get first preference because they have the decided advantage of running water. But all the work has been successfully accomplished in a large closet.

There are some phases of loading panchromatic film for development that demand absolute darkness. This is where a closet can be used or a cellar corner. If much work is contemplated then it might be worth while to resurrect the old wartime blackout curtains for kitchen or bathroom. Once the pan films are enclosed in the light-proof tank, the actual developing process can be done in normal light, by "time and temperature," as the expression goes. It means merely following an accurate schedule of so many minutes developing time for a specific solution at a specific temperature. The recommended temperature is usually 68 degrees, and each developer or formula has its own set of instructions.

There are some fans—I'm not among them—who prefer to develop roll film in trays, see-sawing the film through the solution by hand for the entire time. Its advantage for beginners is that when you use Verichrome or Plenachrome film, you can see what you are doing under a red safelight. Panchromatic film, however, must still be handled in complete darkness even in tray development.

Whether you use tank or tray, it would be a good investment for a first-time to practice on a roll of film in light. Perhaps your camera store has an out-dated roll you can have, otherwise use a new roll without shooting. You'll get the feel of the spiralling film as it unwinds and see where the paper is attached for backing and the difference between the emulsion and the glossy side. Then you can thread it into the tank reel until you can do it with your eyes shut. Or attach clips to both ends and learn to loop it in the middle with the emulsion side inside for tray development.

Without this prior practice, a beginner is likely to spoil his first roll with fingerprints, scratches or sheer aggravation. It is surprising how easy it is to manage subsequent film once you have conquered the first stubborn roll or two. You can also work alongside a darkroom veteran to overcome the first difficulties.

The major manufacturers have assembled the minimum needs for darkroom work in packaged kits with all essential instructions, that can be put right to work. These include three trays (at least 5 x 7 inches but better if larger), a thermometer, safelight, graduate, clips, stirring rod, printing frame and chemicals for mixing developer and hypo.

Depending on the amount made and used, solutions can be stored is brown quart bottles to be used again. If a small quantity is made from the inexpensive packets, it should be discarded after one evening's work. Using exhausted solutions is a poor way to economize. To have negatives and prints that will not deteriorate or discolor with age, it is essential to fix them adequately and wash them thoroughly. Normally, ten minutes in fresh hypo and thirty minutes in running water are recommended.

All the work, time and trouble involved are more than repaid with the thrills that come, first when the negative image is first seen and secondly when the positive print emerges. Here in the darkroom, intangible rays of light and shadows have been transformed by magic into something you can see, hold and convey to others. It's a thrill that never leaves a real camera fan no matter how many years he has been shooting or how many pictures he has shot.

Eisenhower Is Changing White House Routine

By MERRIMAN SMITH
United Press White House Writer

WASHINGTON (UP) — An ancient White House retainer who has seen several administrations come and go leaned against a pillar in the lobby outside President Eisenhower's office today and murmured "Man, things have really changed."

There could be no more succinct commentary on the vast difference in the White House atmosphere under ex-President Truman and President Eisenhower.

The present staff, new and still feeling its way in awesome surroundings, is tense in its continual striving to do the proper thing. Women on the staff have been forbidden to smoke on duty. Staff members guard against disclosing even the most inconsequential scrap of information, leaving all talking for publication to the press office of James C. Hagerty.

The Truman staff, in office nearly eight years, was naturally more relaxed and easy-going. The staff said and acted pretty much as it pleased, referred to the President casually and affectionately as "the boss" and took two-hour lunches when the occasion was sufficiently inviting.

This is not true today, however. Staff members refer to Mr. Eisenhower either as "the President" or sometimes out of pre-inaugural habit, "the general." There seems to be a total absence of light banter about him.

Mr. Truman got up much earlier than Mr. Eisenhower, but the new President starts work with his staff considerably in advance of the hour the ex-President began working with his colleagues.

Mr. Truman got up normally about 5:30 a.m., worked alone on mail, read the newspapers and went for a two-mile walk before settling down in his office. His staff rarely arrived before 9 a.m.

Mr. Eisenhower usually is up around 7 or 7:30, has breakfast alone and is ready for work by 8 or shortly thereafter. He expects his staff on hand and ready to go when he arrives.

The 62-year-old Mr. Eisenhower does not take the long midday break that his 68-year-old predecessor did. The new President has lunch between 12:30 and 1 and is back in his office around 2. Mr. Truman went to lunch shortly after 1, then had a long nap, returned to his desk at 3.

The Eisenhower staff members, judging from their first week in office, go in for early, short lunch hours. The upper echelon for the most part has been eating in the small staff dining room in the basement of the executive office wing while Mr. Eisenhower goes to the main house for lunch.

Mr. Truman rarely did business at lunch, but during his first week in office, the new President held frequent luncheon conferences as the late President Roosevelt did.

It would be difficult to determine from Mr. Eisenhower's first week in office when his normal work day will end once his routine is set. He has been quitting between 5 and 7 p. m. Mr. Truman rarely remained after 5 unless there was business of urgent nature before him.

Wilson Papers Going Into United Nations Collection

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y.—Twenty-eight years after the death of Woodrow Wilson, the United Nations is building up an expanding memorial in print to the U.S. President.

In its crowded five-story library building on a corner of the U.N. enclave on New York's East River, a sizable portion of space is given over to the 19,000 volumes of League of Nations documents contained in the Woodrow Wilson Memorial Library.

That makes the collection the only one of its size in the Western Hemisphere, surpassed only by the League of Nations collection at Geneva. The collection here is continually expanding as the Geneva office furnishes documents and publications to be bound into the collection here.

The librarian is Miss Marie Carroll, who for some years was the librarian of Boston's World Peace Foundation, established in 1910 to promote intern tional understanding.

When she wrote her "Key to League of Nations Documents" she provided the first quick, ready guide to the thousands of subjects that made up the League during its life from 1920 on, its withering in the 1930s and its passing into history in 1946 to make way for the new U.N.

She came to the U.N. in October 1946 to work in the library and when the Woodrow Wilson Memorial Foundation turned over its collection of 16,500 volumes of League documents she integrated them into the huge, specialized international library which is a unique U.N. institution.

League of Nations papers often furnish the information for precedents that guide delegates in their U.N. work, and that makes it a living organism, not just a collection of historic l papers.

The Wilson Foundation turned over 12,000 League volumes and 4,500 volumes on related questions. Another 2,500 volumes have come from Geneva.

Edouard Reitman, the French acting director of the library, concurs in the statement that the Wilson collection provides valuable reference for prec dent here.

His general reference library contains 10,000 dictionaries, atlases, and similar reference volumes alone. Technical dictionaries in many languages provide an especially valuable collection.

Reitman hopes oon to have a complete collection of all the constitutions of all countries, in both the original languages and in official translations, important to the kind of work U.N. diplomats do.

You can ask for a book in the library in any of 19 languages—and find someone on the staff who can talk to you about it.

Reitman points out that the U.N. policy is to restrict the library in its service, that it was never intended to be a general public library. Even if the policy was to have a library open to the public, there just isn't the physical setup—staff or building to allow it.

First duty is to delegates and the secretariat, and to the press and radio people covering the U.N

Lake Defies All Efforts To Turn It To Farmland

NEW HOLLAND, N.C. (U.P.—Americans have overcome many stubborn natural obstacles in raising their cities and building roads and bridges, but 30,000-acre Lake Mattamuskeet here has defied all efforts.

Off and on since 1909, men have spent more than $17,000,000 in attempts to rain off its waters and convert the area to rich farmland.

The net result of these efforts has been only that the lake now has a more abundant population than ever of Canada geese, ducks, whistling swans, white perch, black bass, crappie and carp. Around its shores are plentiful numbers of deer, foxes, raccoons, opossums, mink and bears. No farmers.

One Brief Success

Lake Mattamuskeet is a sluggish body of water more than 15 miles long and five or six miles across with an average depth of only two to three feet. Cypress trees grow along the northern border, but its eastern and southern shores fade into low swamplands.

Its rich, black soil has tempted farmers for 100 years to try to drain the lake.

The most successful attempt was made in 1915 when a huge pumping station was set up on the south shore of the lake and a canal dug to Pamlico Sound, eight miles away.

It worked for a while. Farmers reaped bumper crops of corn, rice, soybeans and vegetables. But an assortment of troubles plagued the venture. The pump failed repeatedly and an insect invasion ruined the crops.

In 1933 the project was abandoned, and the various forms of wildlife which had been driven away during the farming operations quickly returned in vast numbers to claim the ground.

The annual 60-inch rainfall soon refilled the lake and the federal government made it the heart of a 50,000-acre wildlife refuge in 1934.

The bird life of Mattamuskeet includes about 200 species. The most spectacular visitors are the whistling swans with their wingspread of six to seven feet.

Park officials say Canada geese come in the largest numbers. There are usually between 40,000 and 60,000 of them staying at the refuge from October to March. All manner of ducks are common.

The old pumping station has become an observation tower and the only invaders are the anglers trying their luck in the waters.

At the preeent rate of consumption, the United States would use about 50 billion tons of coal in the next 100 years.

PROMISE OF DELIGHT

Chapter 37

In the morning Anthea went in to Mario with his coffee, Joe's letter, and a plea for Bianca. Mario was furious, he did not want to relent and at first refused to see her. But living alone among the white fur and gold walls, and eating Mrs. Grainger's cooking was beginning to pall. He secretly wanted Bianca back. She had looked after him for twenty years, and he was unhappy as a cat when his habitual background was disturbed. He relented, but very sternly, and Bianca with many tears, and exclamations of gratitude, and promises of eternal servitude, was admitted into his presence. She could come back, said Mario, but any more nonsense, and it would be the end. And whatever happened to Gina, she was not living there any more.

Bianca crept into the kitchen, and when Anthea got the car out to drive Mario down to the studio, she was busy about the house again, and the house was beginning to smell and look like the Carlottis' home. She dusted and polished, and filled the vases with flowers, and set out the table of drinks, and put some tomato sauce on to simmer. The smell of garlic gently permeated into the hall, and with it Bianca's spirits began to rise.

At the studio Mario found he had forgotten his portfolio.

"That woman" he said. "Why has a man to have women about him?"

"Do you think. ." Anthea began, her heart in her eyes, and Mario roared in interruption.

"Of course he will come back. Stupid carrissima don't be so in love, Anthea, it spoils your work When you were so unhappy you would not have forgotten my portfolio. Go back and get it, and hurry, there's a sweet one."

"Okay," said Anthea. She turned the car back homewards, her thoughts miles away, automatically following the way home, stopping at traffic lights, changing gear, giving signals. The bright sunny day was becoming overcast with a threatening hint of rain.

Why did not Joe come?

Over the common, past the station down the Avenue. With a catch of her breath, and a feeling that her heart would explode, she recognized a long, loose-limbed, flying figure, head down against the rain, streaking for cover. She accelerated and passed, drew into the curb, and as he drew level pushed the door of the Buck open.

"Want a lift, neighbor?"

Joe skidded to a standstill, unceremoniously pushed her out of the driver's seat, scrambled in, all wet from the rain, took her in his arms and kissed her until she went limp.

"What have you been thinking about me?" he said, raising his head.

"Everything you can imagine and more," she murmured. "But Bianca came back and told me everything. In the end Mario meant more to her than Gina."

"Darling Anthea, darling Anthea. . .will you please marry me, please, before anything else happens?"

"I would like that in writing," said Anthea, and then he was kissing her again.

"Right away, as soon as we can get a license?"

"Yes, yes," she said protestingly, and for a moment they sat, looking at each other, and then she said helplessly, happily, "I suppose I'll have to get used to these upsets if I marry a Carlotti. They seem to be quite irresistible to women."

"So long as you don't resist, that's all that matters. I was only waiting until I had Mario settled," explained Joe, "But I can't take another risk like that. Say. ." he began to search about him. "Where is that newspaper I had over my head? Here. .." He found the damp paper on the floor, and spread it on the steering wheel before her. "Take a look at this."

"Young Film Star Weds in Paris. Carlotti's Sprig of Spring Finds Romance with Industrialist's Son." There was a picture of Gina, looking quite lovely in one of the dresses that Anthea had chosen, her arms full of flowers, gazing with apparent adoration into the face of the good-looking young Pierre Dulac.

"Well, well," said Joe commiseratingly, "the poor guy"

"But the picture," said Anthea frantically, "Joe. .do you think she'll be back by Monday next?"

"Oh, sure. It says something about it here. ." His finger ran down the newsprint. "Miss Scarpi's honeymoon will be spent filming. She is due in England on Monday to resume work on the Carlotti picture 'Pierette'. She's married a Frenchman; they're bright about money. He'll bring her back on Monday." He paused. "Where were you going."

"Back to your place to get Mario's portfolio."

"Okay, we'll go and get it, and take it to him, and then we'll go and have lunch, and then go find out about a license. Know where your birth certificate is?"

"Yes."

He drove along to her home, and Marian, flapping a duster out of the window, waved them a delightful and astonished greeting.

"We'll go in and get that certificate, and tell her," said Joe.

"Joe, supposing Gina doesn't come on Monday?".

Joe put his arm tightly round her, and kissed her again. "In that case, my very own darling, Mario will have to go and get her himself. You and I, my love, have other things to do."

Service Fraternity Chapter Is Installed

Ceremonies for installation of the East Carolina College chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, were held Tuesday night at the Woman's Club in Greenville. William S. Roth of Chapel Hill acted as installing officer, and members of the Rho chapter of the University of North Carolina assisted.

The East Carolina Chapter, officially designated as the Kappa Upsilon chapter of APO, the 269th unit in the nation, was organized during the 1952 summer term.

Charter presentation made by Roth was followed by acceptance for the college by President John D. Messick and Dean of Men Clinton R. Prewett; for the East Carolina Boy Scout Council, by Erskine Duff of Greenville, chairman of the Council Organization and Extension Committee; and for the chapter, by Alumni Secretary James W. Butler, chairman of the advisory committee, and John L. Helms of Monroe, chapter president.

During this program Col. R. G. Fuller of the East Carolina Air Force ROTC unit and Dean Leo W. Jenkins of the college emphasized the essential requirements for leadership and citizenship responsibility.

Preceding the installation ceremonies, the chapter members and guests at the dinner were welcomed by President Helms. The ritual was led by Roth, Allyn Norton, James Davis, James Brackett, John Bradley, and Howard Barden.

In addition to Helms, chapter officers are John Tomlinson Cox, Mount Olive, vice president; John D. Johnson, Rocky Mount, corresponding secretary; Milton Foley, Greenville, recording secretary; Robert Sears, Norfolk, Va., treasurer; and Charles Wentz, Asheboro, sergeant-at-arms.

Representing the administration of the college on the advisory committee are Dr. Messick, Dean Prewett, Dean Jenkins, Dr. N. M. Jorgenson, Business Manager F. D. Duncan, and Alumni Secretary Butler.

Scouting advisors include Ercell S. Webb, chairman of the Pitt District; E. Lester Dollar, field executive; Sherman Parks, Wyatt Brown, and Duff, all of Greenville.

The chapter made up of 32 charter members, is the first non-professional fraternity at East Carolina. Membership is open to men duly enrolled and in good standing at the college who are or have been previously affiliated with the Boy Scouts of America.

ful in checking both child and prospective parents. In an aside comment to a reporter, Mrs. Week said it is harder to get a child by adoption than through natural processes. To which a by-standing wag quipped: "Certainly for the father."

DOUBLE — This is as good time as any to point out that Edgecombe County has the full benefit of two senators. Cameron Weeks is totally blind and his wife Glennes is his constant companion, doing the necessary reading and keeping her husband up-to-date on who is in the senate chamber or the hotel lobby, and giving him the full benefit of her own brilliant mind on matters pending. She played the same efficient role when Cammy was in the House of Representatives in 1941 and in his private law practice and public office duties in Edgecombe.

COMMITTEES — The adoption incident in the Senate committee has been repeated many times in other committees during this and previous sessions. The same day a House Judiciary committee caught an ambiguous clause in an important bill respecting the amendment of charters of regulated corporations and approved a substitute bill that clarified the meaning. Rep. W.P. Rodman, one of the most astute lawyers in the Assembly, who usually catches such things in other bills, had inadvertently let it get by in his own. A few minutes later Chairman Copeland of the Senate committee on Counties, Cities and Towns, announced to his committe that all bills coming over from the House would be checked with the Senator from the district involved before action is taken.

WORKING — It is this kind of work in committees that many casual observers of legislative procedure do not understand. On Tuesday, for instance, both branches of the General Assembly had completed formal sessions and adjourned in less than 30 minutes. But—majority of the members had been working hard in committees for two hours before and three hours after the formal sessions. The fact is that if all the bills considered in committee rooms was handled on the floor of the Senate and House the legislature would be in session 600 days of the two year period, instead of about 90, and resulting legislation would be much worse confused than it is —and that is bad enough.

Britain Probing Slavery Reports

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) —Britain is looking into charges that her African protectorates are shipping at least 5,000 Negroes each month for sale in the slave markets of Saudi Arabia and Yemen.

The British don't think the charges are true, but their government has begun an investigation anyway. The inquiry is complicated by the fact that slave markets are legal in Saudi Arabia and Yemen and neither country so far has revealed its sources of supply.

Both countries, the U.N.'s anti-slavery section said today, have ignored questionnaires sent them on slavery and forced labor.

Britain's U.N. delegation also revealed, in answer to a query from the U.N., that slavery still is legal in the oil-rich sheikdom of Kuwait, on the Northwest Coast of the Persian Gulf, but that actual buying and selling of slaves now is prohibited there. Kuwait is under Britain's protection and the British handle foreign relations for the Sheik.

Saudi Arabia, Yemen and Kuwait all are Moslem countries and Moslem law permits slavery and slave trading.

Chlorophyll Used By Dry-Cleaners

NEW YORK (AP)—Chlorophyll has now become a "secret agent" of dry cleaners to give suits an anti-odor finish, reports the British Information Service here.

A special form of chlorophyll is used to treat the clothing at the steaming and pressing stage. A British firm is already shipping 500 pounds of the special chlorophyll by air every week to the United States, says the report.

Name Korean Hill After Lighter

NEWARK, N.J. (AP)—A manufacturing firm here has been notified by the Marine Corps that a hill on the Korean battlefront has been named after the cigarette lighter it makes.

The name (Ronson hill) was put on maps after a leatherneck went on several lone patrols to retrieve the lost lighter his girl gave him before he left the states.

THE POWER OF A WOMAN

YONKERS, N. Y. (AP)—A recently completed 180-car parking lot here has one section prominently marked "Reserved for Ladies." It is close to the gate and has extra-wide aisles.

PERMANENT POSSESSION

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UP) — Joe Wilson, the tenant, was bequeathed the home he had rented for 29 years in the will of the late Kate A. Flynn.

DELAYED ACTION

HARTFORD, Conn. UP)—Several years after requiring that all motor vehicles be equipped with windshield wipers, the state legislature got around today to considering whether they also should be equipped with windshields.

Some Couples May Not Be Wed

RALEIGH, N. C. UP)—Couples who said their vows during the past 12 months before an elderly and absentminded justice of peace in North Carolina may not be legally wed.

With apologies to a Hollywood film based on a make-believe similar situation, Rep. Carl Venters told the State House of Representatives that it really happened.

The state legislature is taking hasty measures to remedy the effects of a lapse of memory on the part of E. L. Arthur, who acted as a peace justice in Jacksonville, N. C., located on the edge of Camp Lejeune.

Venters said Arthur had been so busy marrying couples and performing other official acts as JP in the bustling little town that he overlooked the expiration of his commission on Jan. 15, 1952.

"He is getting along in years," Venters said. "He just forgot to requalify when his commission expired."

Venters has introduced a bill to validate all of Arthur's official acts between Jan. 15,1952 and Jan. 6, 1953.

A lot of the couples Arthur married last year probably will never know the difference, Venters said.

Many Obstacles To U.N. Accepting Chinese Or Other Troops In Korea

By EARNEST HOBERECHT
United Press Staff Correspondent

TOKYO (U.P.)—There has been varied reaction in policy-making quarters of Asia to the U.S armed services subcommittee report urging the use of Chinese Nationalist and other Oriental troops in Korea.

Three words—"Yes, maybe, but" —about sum it up.

"It's not that our Asian friends don't want to do their share," an American diplomat here said privately. "It's just that they have their own ideas about when and where they can best help and how much help they can offer."

Already participating in the Korean war are units from the Philippines and Thailand. India has supplied a field ambulance unit.

Reasons Cited

There are many indications that the Chinese Nationalists, once ready and anxious to send troops to Korea, have cooled on the idea. Several reasons are advanced for their change of mind, including:

1. A realization that the Korean War is not "the big war" which might result in the overthrow of the Chinese Communist regime and the restoration of the Nationalists to power.

2. A desire to play it safe. Withdrawal of the Nationalist troops from Formosa to Korea might pave the way for a successful Communist attack on the last territory in the possession of the Nationalists. The odds favoring an immediate total victory are not sufficient to merit the risk.

3. Reluctance to use up the meager military supplies and equipment now available to the Taipeh government.

4. A belief that "hit-and-run" attacks and landings on the south China coast might have more profitable effects.

A number of United Nations military experts, especially some of those who qualify as "old Asia hands," believe it would be unwise to bring Chinese Nationalist troops into Korea. Such a move, they argue, would only transplant the Chinese civil war and complicate truce procedures.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower, during his pre-inaugural inspection trip to Korea, is understood to have discussed the Chinese Nationalist troops question with the U.N. commander-in-chief, Gen. Mark W. Clark. Clark is reported to have said that he would like to have the Nationalist troops provided equipping and supplying them would not mean slowing down the Republic of Korea army expansion program.

The same qualifying factor undoubtedly would apply to the armies of almost any other potential Asian ally. Even if all other obstacles were removed, the United States still would have to furnish most of the equipment and the tremendous amount of supplies used daily in fighting a war.

In view of this, very reliable sources say, Clark would rather concentrate on building up, training and equipping the South Korean army which eventually may be able to take over the defense on the country.

Neither the South Koreans nor the Japanese thought there was much merit in the suggestion that Japanese troops should be sent to Korea.

Japanese public opinion strongly opposes rearmament and the government issues statements almost every day, calming the fears of the people, saying the new security forces really aren't an army and troops never will be sent overseas.

President Syngman Rhee of South Korea, although he would like to have more U.N. troops, is violently anti Japanese and has vowed that his troops will cease fighting the Communists and turn to repel the Japanese if Japanese troops try to land in Korea. This hard feeling is a hang-over from the 40-year Japanese occupation of Korea.

When asked to comment on a Hong Kong newspaper editorial suggesting the formation of a 5,000,000-man-Asian army most Far East officials shrug their heads and say, "It's a good idea, but..."

Knowledge Of World Affairs Is Underscored

Dr. Sylvester Green, executive vice president of the Medical Foundation of North Carolina, told student members of the East Carolina College International Relations Club Tuesday evening of this week that knowledge of world affairs has become essential to young people.

"Tomorrow," Dr. Green stated, "the uninformed person will be left out; he will be futile in a world which overlooks him."

Former editor of the Durham Herald and at one time president of Coker College, Dr. Green was guest speaker at the regular January meeting of the IRC. He chose as his topic "A Student's Stake in World Affairs." Bettie J. Dougherty of Fayetteville, vice president and program chairman of the club, introduced him.

Stressing the essentiality to the serious student of broad and accurate knowledge of international events, Dr. Green stated that "public information enjoys today the best media that the world has ever known." News and the interpretation of news, he continued, are at present more adequate and more quickly and widely disseminated than ever before.

Books, the press, radio, television, and improved means of travel, he stated, leave "no excuse for ignorance or lack of knowledge today."

Discussing the idea of the inescapability of one's being a part of international developments, he emphasized the increasing demand for intelligent leadership in this country. Only those with a broad knowledge of world events and capability to interpret them wisely he pointed out, are qualified as leaders. He indicated the opportunities open to young people as career diplomats.

Areas in which the young man or woman can put into operation his knowledge of world affairs, he said, are the movement toward world peace, the effort to secure international economic stability, and the endeavor to achieve cultural progress. He recommended to his student audience teaching writing, and public life as satisfying and rewarding fields of service.

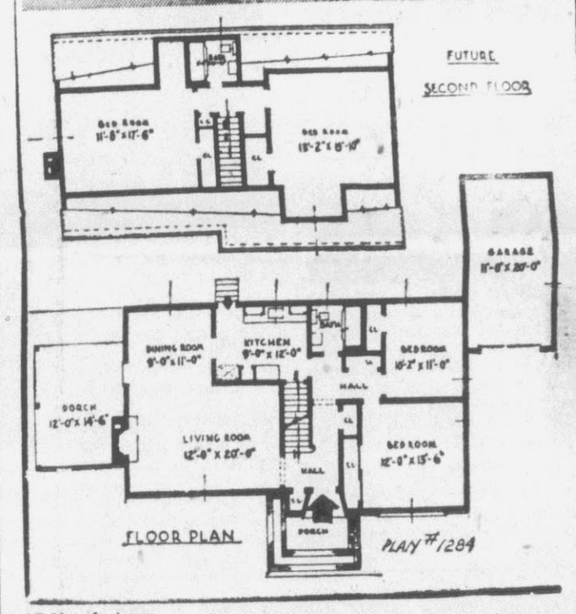
HOMES FOR AMERICANS



AP Newsfeatures

WIDESPREAD PREFERENCE for one-story houses is reflected in the latest surveys of the government's Housing and Home Finance Agency. But the added cost of foundations and roof areas have tended to keep one-story houses small. Therefore, the story-and-a-half house, with an expansion attic for extra bedrooms, becomes expedient. This plan 1284 by William G. Chrigotis, architect, 968 Stuyvesant Ave., Union, N. J., fills the need for an expansible house. It covers only 1,050 square feet, without garage and porch, and with basement it contains 22,150 cubic feet-figures which are handy for estimates.

THE FARM HANDY MAN finds a good investment in a sturdy feed bunk for fattening steers. Lined in fiber hardboard of the tempered pressed wood type, it is moisture-resistant and kind to the muzzles of cattle — being permanently smooth and splinter-proof. Height of the bunk may be regulated to keep calves from using it. As shown in this design by the Masonite Corp., the bunk may be 8 to 12 feet long, 46 inches wide and 32 to 36 inches high, depending on the size of the cattle. The six legs are 4x4 posts, tied together with 2x6 lumber. Sides are 2x8s nailed to a floor of 1-5/8-inch planks covered with a solid sheet of hardboard.

Plans New Attempt To Cut Number Strictly Local Bills

By LYNN NISBET

RALEIGH, — Rep. B. Regan of Robeson county is planning another try at cutting down on the number of purely local bills which every session clutter the legislative calendars. Regan suggested that the Committee on Local Government, of which he is chairman, sponsor a statewide bill patterned after one that has been in effect in Robeson since 1947.

The 1947 local act simply provides that the county commissioners of Robeson county shall fix and control all salaries paid by the county to elective or appointive officials and employees; and also shall determine and control the number of persons to be employed at county expense. Regan says it has worked well in Robeson, even though it has the admitted weakness of letting the commissioners fix their own compensation.

The need for the type of statewide legislation proposed was emphasized this year when Speaker Bost decided there should be a new committee on local government, which Regan heads as chairman. For many years the committee on counties, Cities and Towns has been one of the most overworked groups, and a large part of the bills handled by the committee on Courts and Judicial Districts are purely local.

The problem is not new. More than 40 years ago members of the General Assembly interested in state progress became concerned about the clutter of local bills. The Legislature of 1914 submitted and the people in 1916 ratified a constitutional amendment designed to eliminate such bills. With the same nonchalant indifference to constitutional requirements as several Legislatures have shown toward the matter of reapportioning representation, succeeding assemblies have faced increased clutterment of bills fixing salaries for minor employees, fixing the pay of jurors in certain counties (one of the things specifically barred by the 1916 amendment) and setting out the number of deputies and the office hours of stenographers in the several counties whose representatives desired to boss the works back home.

Members of the committee received Chairman Regan's suggestion with courtesy but noticeable lack of enthusiasm. During informal discussion later with half a dozen reporters, the Robeson man was reminded that his bill wouldn't have a chance because so many of the legislators were nominated and elected on purely local issues and therefore were under obligation to supporters back home to put on take off some deputy sheriffs or board of education members or to keep open for longer hours the offices in the court house or city hall, et cetera ad infinitum.

Because of this the member of the General Assembly is the "biggest" man in a number of counties, and it is contrary to human nature to expect him to legislate himself out of that prminent position.

Young as the current session is, there are already eight or ten prospective public hearings on bills directly affecting no more than a few hundred people. Making the situation more absurd is the fact that every session of the General Assembly has prolonged consideration of efforts to repeal acts affecting only a small community, which some previous session had devoted hours or days to enacting.

For example, take just a few bills introduced Monday night. Senator Bailey of Wake had one dealing with paving assessments in Raleigh, and the full House delegation (Reps. Pou, Whitley and Womble) had one about salaries of recorder and prosecuting attorney of the Apex recorder's court. Rep. Bill Atkins of Yancey had a bill fixing fees for the sheriff of his county and another about pool rooms in Burnsville. Decision on these questions depends upon the vote of members from Mcklenburg and Guilford, Cherokee and Dare, and maybe the deciding vote could be cast by the Lady from Stokes.

One Convicted In Handbill Case

SMITHFIELD (UP) —A former campaign worker for Gov. William B. Umstead was convicted of circulating defamatory handbills in last spring's Democratic primary campaign but charges against three other men fizzled out here yesterday.

Judgment was deferred against former State Burial Commissioner John I. Barnes of Clayton after Barnes paid a $50 fine and costs in recorder's court. His attorney said he would not appeal the judgment.

Judge William I. Godwin found Barnes guilty of circulating the handbills but acquitted him on a conspiracy charge.

Similar charges against Percy and Jimmy Flowers of Clayton were taken off the docket but left subject to being called up again at some later date.

Attorneys indicated however that it was unlikely that the charges would be brought to trial again.

A fourth defendant, former State Rep. Ronald Hocutt of Johnston County, was acquitted. Jimmy Flowers was also acquitted on a separate conspiracy charge.

Public relations conselor Robert Redwine of Raleigh, a worker for unsuccessful candidate Hubert E. Olive, testified that Barnes told him after the May primary that he had arranged "printing and distribution" of the handbills on which the charges were brought.

The handbills alleged that Oliver, if elected, would appoint Negroes to high state offices. Oliver took the stand yesterday to deny categorically that he made any of the statements or authorized anyone to mak the statements attributed to him.

Aiken Explosion Cost Ten Lives; Inquiry Is Voted

AIKEN, S. C. (AP)—Officials here were convinced today that all bodies had been recovered from the wreckage left in the wake of Tuesday's two million dollar gas explosion which claimed 10 lives.

Meanwhile, in Columbia, the House voted in the General Assembly to conduct an investigation into the sale and use of commercial gas. Rep. Poliakoff of Spartanburg introduced the resolution calling for the state probe as the result of the Aiken explosion, which was caused by the ignition of leaking gas at the Jones Electrical Store.

The House set up a five-member committee to conduct the investigation.

More than 30 hours after the tremendous explosion rocked this boom town community, several miles from the Savannah River H-Bomb project, weary disaster crews brought out the 10th body from the rubble of the Jones store. Mrs. Ruth Maddrey, the 10th victim, was a Jones employe as were eight more of the dead. The other victim, the first to be recovered, was 64-year-old Miss May Weeks, a clerk in the McCreary Departmbent Store which was one of four other buildings either destroyed or damaged by the blast.

Earlier reports yesterday had indicated that at least two other persons might have perished in the blast, but searchers found no traces of them and they never had been identified by name. Police said the unconfirmed reports probably referred to customers in the Jones Store who got out before the explosion.

All of the victims were residents of Aiken, a former resort community of 7,000 which skyrocketed to 25,000 with the coming of the Atomic Energy Commission plant.

Late last night a greatly reduced crew of workers, which at one time numbered more than 200, still probed and sifted through the ruins just on the off chance that another body might still be entombed.

Relief Work Is Based In Atlanta

ATLANTA (UP)—The regional office of the Federal Defense Administration will co-ordinate all federal relief in natural disasters in six southern states, it was announced today.

The new control program covers such disasters as forest fires, other fires, hurricanes, floods or tornadoes in Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, South Carolina and Tennessee, it was announced.

Formerly such relief was handled by the American Red Cross but there was no centralized control by any federal agency. Drought aid will be handled by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, as in the past.

Two Came Back; Forty Others Died In Attack

By STAN CARTER

WITH U. S. FIRST MARINE DIVISION, Korea (AP)—Only two marines came back. The other 40 died in the savage onslaught of 250 Chinese Reds.

It happened last October. But, because the number of marine casualties could not be disclosed at the time, the story wasn't told.

Pfc. Curtis (Chick) Bowlan, 19, was wounded and hospitalized but recovered to fight again with the Leathernecks. Now he is about to return to his Huntington, W.Va., home on rotation.

The only other survivor, Pfc. Charles D. Rogers, Arkadelphia, Ark., was evacuated to the U. S. with serious wounds.

Bowlan today told how the Reds swarmed out of the night in a vicious attack on a marine outpost on a hill near Panmunjom on the Western Front.

The marines couldn't hold them. The Communists swarmed through the position with bayonets and grenades.

Bowlan and five others fell back to a high point. On the way up Bowlan fired his machine gun from the hip. From the top, the six men held off the Communist attackers for six hours. Then they ran out of ammunition.

Communist artillery fire killed one of the six.

"We knocked out a lot of them, but there were just too many for us," Bowlan said. "All of us were wounded bad and hardly had a chance to bandage each other up. All I had left was a .45."

Three groups of Reds assaulted the little knoll where the small group of marines held out. The Leathernecks knocked them back.

The section leader was a big husky sergeant. His arm was almost blown off. Bowlan made a tourniquet with the sergeant's belt and a bayonet. Bowlan was hit in the back with a grenade, and was bleeding.

The men tried to get back to their base. They didn't know the Comunists had overrun that particular part of the main line.

Bowlan, a slightly built 140-pounder, tried to help the sergeant along. They became separated from the other four.

"I never saw them again," Bowlan said.

Bowlan carried the 190-pound sergeant 200 or 300 yards. Then he dragged him by the feet through a trench toward their line.

"The sergeant told me to leave him. I finally had to. I couldn't carry him any more," Bowlan recalled.

Bowlan walked almost to the main line—only to find the Communists barring his way. He hid under some bushes until daylight.

Then he found Rogers, staggering around in no-man's land with two bullet wounds in the neck.

Together they tried to get back to their outfit. Once they thought they saw other marines on a ridgeline. They hurried toward them, and were fired on by Chinese. They doubled back, dodging Red mortar fire.

Finally they made it—two lone survivors of a bitter battle for a small knob in Western Korea.

$10 Million Firm Given To Church

PENDLETON, Ore. (AP)—A 10-million-dollar lumber manufacturing business was turned over to the Seventh Day Adventist church yesterday by a man and his wife, who said they "did right by the Lord and He did right by us."

The business includes the Harris Pine Mills here, one of the nation's largest unfinished furniture producers, and furniture assembly plants at Chicago Heights, Ill.; Alexandria, Va.; and Cleburne, Tex.

Clyde H. Harris, 62, explained the gift this way:

"We have tried to be faithful in our dealings with the Lord and He has given us far more than we deserve. Now we are giving our entire business to Him."

Returns from the business will help support churches, hospitals and schools of the denomination in this country and abroad, President W. H. Branson of the Seventh Day Adventist church, who flew here from Washington, D. C., to complete the transaction, said.

The firm has a payroll of 600 here, more than half of them members of the Seventh Day Adventist church, which regards Saturday as the Sabbath.

Benson Assures Support Policy

WASHINGTON (AP)—Farmers had the assurance of Secretary of Agriculture Benson today that the government will carry out price support programs to prevent a sharp break in prices of their products.

The new GOP farm chief issued a formal statement late yesterday in which he made this promise, but also expressed more optimism about the agricultural outlook than have some farm leaders in Congress.

A 12 per cent decline in farm prices last year, together with the fact that they still are going down, has led some lawmakers to call upon Benson and his aides for quick action to establish prices.

"Opinions differ as to the future course of prices to be received by farmers," Benson said. "Our analysis in the Department of Agriculture leads us to expect no major changes during the next several months, particularly in view of the continuing high level of consumer income."

Chairman Aiken (R-VT.) of the Senate Agriculture Committee and Sen. Young (R-ND.) have said at recent committee hearings that the current situation resembles that which preceded the severe farm depression of the 1930's.

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway crowds paid no attention to the man working in the window of the jewelry store.

What the crowds didn't know was that the window stripper was a robber, with a pal inside Murray Bricks' store.

Native Deflates Stories Of Africa

AP Newsfeatures

NEW HAVEN—A Negro religious student is helping pay his way through Yale Divinity School by dispelling some ideas Tarzan has created in the minds of American millions about his native Africa.

Amugbe Shodekeh admits in talks before church and social groups tha his country's name, Sierra Leone, means "Mountain of Lons." But, he is quick to add, he saw his first lion in Scotland, safe behind the bars of a zoo. Actually, the little British Colony "looks something like your West Virginia, he says.

Sierra Leone, however, isn't as developed as West Virginia. That's why Amugbe, or Dave as he prefers to call himself, is taking his Ph. D. in religious education.

As a former Evangelical Church minister, he felt the need for further education of his people to aid their country's growth. He also plans to work for the unification of Christian churches in a country where only half of the people have been Christianized.

The large number of denominations, he feels, has tended to disrupt important tribal bonds and thus retard his country's growth.

Dave is a member of the Mendes Tribe. It has nearly a million members, more than a third of Sierra Leone's population. With two other large tribes, it accounts for the majority of the population.

He believes America can learn something from these tribes about how to live in peace. They have been living that way for about 35 years. That was the last time the country had an intra-tribal skirmish. From its conclusion, Dave got his own name which means, "Let There Be Peace."

His tribe is defined by Dave as a giant family with hundreds of years of experience in living together. It sounds confusing but in his native village he can call most of the 6,000 or 7,000 inhabitants uncle, aunt or cousin.

The tribes do have ceremonies featured by dancing, music and feasting. But they hardly ever reach the stages of wild exuberance encountered by Tarzan. They are good hunters too. Their equipment consists largely of "bush" sense, clothing dyed to eliminate human scent, and in Daves case, a rifle. Spears are rare.

The Mendes are unhampered by western restrictions on clothing. They dress comfortably to suit the climate which is hot but not unbearable. Trade winds cool this little country on the west coast of Africa just above where the continent curves eastward to create the Gulf of Guninea.

The Mendes don't place the value on money which Western civilizations do. Until a hundred years ago, in fact, they had no currency.

Mining and agriculture are the basis of his country's economy. Diamonds, gold, iron and chromium are its principal mineral resources. Rice, giner, palm nuts and palm oil are its main agricultural resources.

The cattle industry is growing with the elimination of the tsetse fly, carrier of sleeping sickness.

Dave had another shock for Tarzan devotees. The biggest jungle in his country "is about the size of some of yo large forests."

To fully realize the vast potential of the "Dark Continent," education is essential. Dave is one of 1,500 African students in this country preparing themselves for this task.

Africa needs America's help, Dave feels. But it can't be in the old way of imperialism by which much of Africa was colonized by other countries.

Dave said that when an African dreams of the devil, it's always a white devil. Thus, when at the age of 12 he saw his first white man, it fitted Dave's picture of the devil.

At first, Dave said, he thought the man was covered with chalk. He even scratched him to see if the color would come off. Instead, Dave drew blood.

The man, a missionary, introduce Dave to school.

And that is what ultimately brought Dave to Yale.

NANCY CARTER Tested RECIPES

Dixie Brunswick Stew

1 medium onion
1 green pepper
1 cup finely chopped celery
¼ cup Triangle butter
1 No. 303 can mixed vegetables for soup (with okra)
1 No. 303 can Redgate cream style corn
1 6-oz. can tomato paste
2 cups chopped cooked chicken, beef, pork
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon Tabasco
1½ teaspoons salt
Black pepper
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs, optional

Chop onion and green pepper. Mix with celery and saute in the butter until just tender. Add remaining ingredients, except crumbs, cover and cook over very low heat about 45 minutes. If stew is not thick enough stir in crumbs just before serving. Makes about 6 generous servings.

East Carolina Trims High Point 79-68

Sonny Russell Chalk s Up Total Of 38 Points

Pirates Run Up Tremendous Early Lead Over Vaunted Panther Team

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Sports Writer

HIGH POINT—The East Carolina College Pirates strengthened their hold on first place in the North State Conference and All-State forward Sonny Russell strengthened his claim to the title of "Mr. Basketball" as they walloped High Point College 79-68 last night.

The final margin of points is no true indication at all as to the thoroughness of the Pirate victory. With Russell doing most of the work, the Pirates led by a huge margin throughout the ball game and the host Panthers never really had a chance.

So far as an individual performance is concerned, Russell, as usual, was in a class strictly by himself. He scored 38 points, a total which included 18 field goals, something which is thought to be a new conference record for a single game. Besides his outstanding offensive show, he put on a defensive performance which included not only taking care of his own assignment to Bobby Davidson but helping every one else on the team.

Russell had his assistants, notably Bobby Hodges, Charlie Huffman, and Cecil Heath. Hodges, the team's leading scorer so far as percentage and game average is concerned, was held to only 10 points but his work as a decoy for Russell and Huffman was magnificent. Time and time again Hodges passed up his own shots to clear the way for Russell and Huffman.

Huffman, running as Russell's mate at forward, wound up with 20 points and one of the better defensive records of the night. Playing an inspired ball game, the big junior from Thomasville took up the slack when defensive players shifted off on Russell and when the same defensive players moved in on Huffman, his passes to Russell were accurate and with split-second timing. In addition, he held high-scoring Harold Sykes to 14 points.

Heath, the sophomore "quarterback" from Wilmington scored four points from the floor but his main value last night was a defensive job on Kent Moseley which limited the Panther flash to only 12 points. Moseley is one of the league's leading scorers and had been the Panthers' top man on all-around offense until Heath got hold of him last night. Moseley hit only three field goals with Heath watching him.

The one man who did the most damage to East Carolina in the scoring column was big Howard Alexander, a 6-7 freshman from Cambridge City, Indiana. Alexander scored 23 points but he got most of them in the last quarter when the Pirates began loosening up in their defensive work because of their big lead.

The most significant factor besides Russell's work—even to casual observers—was the manner in which the Pirates dominated the rebound play. Alexander and Harold Sykes, High Point's most effective rebound men, were practically lost under the boards as the Russell-Hodges-Huffman combination took chage. All in all, the Pirates snared about 75 per cent of the rebounds and had trouble only in the early minutes of the third quarter when the Panthers made a short, but determined, bid to catch up.

East Carolina started fast and ran up a 25-14 score at the end of the first quarter. That margin had been extended to a huge 48-24 margin at half-time and East Carolina Coach Howard Porter began feeding reserves into the game as fast as it was practical to do so. Most of the High Point scoring was done in the last half when Pirate reserves and starters played about an equal amount of time.

Russell's performance—something which can't be talked about too much—came despite the fact that he spent some of the game time on the bench. He first went out of the game with about half of the fourth quarter remaining but got back in after a couple of minutes of rest. He evidently didn't need the rest, however, because he was going as strong when he was taken out as he did when the game started.

The victory moved the Pirates a full game ahead of their competition in the North State Conference. The Bucs now have a season's record of eight wins and only two losses. Western Carolina, Elon, and High Point, the three teams immediately below the Pirates in the standings have three losses apiece besides having won only six, six and four games, respectively.

The Pirates will get another chance to strengthen their hold on first place even more when they play host in a pair of games this weekend. On Friday night, they'll meet Atlantic Christian in Memorial Gymnasium while on Saturday night, they'll get a return match with Western Carolina, one of two teams to beat them thus far this year.

Racial Barriers Lowered In Dixie Baseball Leagues

ATLANTA (AP)—In professional baseball as in other things; race-conscious Dixie is beginning to lower the barriers which have kept Negroes on the outside looking in.

Clubs fielding mixed teams of Negro and white players won't be the general practice in the South this year; neither will they be glaring exceptions to the general rule.

It didn't take a law suit or a Supreme Court order to start the transition in baseball as it did in the fields of higher education and public transportation in the South. Negro players are being used or given tryouts because club owners want them.

Generally, a survey by The Associated Press showed, Negroes are hired either because of a belief that Negro stars in the lineup will boost attendance, or some particular Negro is a better ballplayer than the best available white man.

It also is a general rule that a Negro playing on a team in the South must be outstanding, not merely an ordinary performer.

Teams scattered from the Carolinas to Texas plan to use Negroes in the 1953 season, and some have been using them for several years. There are areas, however, which still are closed to mixed baseball teams.

Birmingham, Ala., for example, has a city ordinance which bans nonsegregated performances. And in other localities deep-rooted prejudices have become unwritten laws which effectively bar mixed sports events.

Such areas of discontent and legal barriers probably will keep the Class AA Southern Association an all-white circuit for the immediate future, at least.

The survey showed that Negro players will be used or given tryouts this season in the Texas League and the other six organized loops in the Lone Star State in the South Atlantic League, the Tri State, Gulf Coast, Florida International and possibly other leagues.

In some loops, like the Class B Florida International, it's an old story; in others, like the Class A South Atlantic, it's something new.

New Leo Durocher Still Sounding Off

NEW YORK (UP) — His suits are darker and his neckties are a bit more conservative, but the "new" Leo Durocher just goes to prove the saying that a leopard can't change his spots.

The muffled "Lip" can still scream.

He did a bit of it when, flying into New York for a pre-season conference anent the hopes of his New York Giants, he discovered that a southpaw pitcher named John Walsh wasn't on the Giant roster.

"Well, you can't do this to me," Durocher began like a siren winding up to a full blast. "Whitey Ford of the Yankees pitched with this guy in service and tells me Walsh is a better pitcher than he is. I want a look at him."

"But, Leo," protested one of the office staff, "he's on the Minneapolis roster and . . ."

That was as far as he got.

"Oh no you don't," Durocher rapped back. "Listen and I'll tell you guys something. Branch Rickey pulled something like this on me in 1948. There was a pitcher in the minor leagues named Carl Erskine. I think you'll remember the name.

"Well, I wanted a look but they kept saying 'he's not ready.' So what happened? We played at Fort Worth in the spring and this Erskine doesn't let us hit a ball out of the infield. Later that season I came to the Giants and what is the first thing loveable old Burt Shotton' does? That's right. He gets Erskine, and the guys win six in a row."

Leo probably will get his look at Walsh, a 24-year-old who had an 8-6 record with Sioux City in 1950.

Meanwhile, Durocher disclosed that he is hoping Willie Mays gets a dependency discharge from the service so that he can shift Alvin Dark to second base and put Bobby Thomson at third, with rookie Daryl Spencer at shortstop.

Naming the Phillies as "definitely the team to beat for the National League pennant this season," Durocher bounced from topic to topic with all his old abandon.

"We've just finished making movies for our 13 television shows" he said. "Some of them are pretty good, too, but one of them, with tennis player Gussie Moran, is a pip.

"I asked her why she was turning back to be an amateur tennis player and she cracks: 'For money.' When I asked her 'how's that?' she says: "Because they give it you under the table.' I couldn't talk her out of letting that remark stand either."

Phantoms Play Kinston For NE Conference Lead Friday

By HERMAN HICKMAN
Reflector Sports Editor

The Greenville High Phantoms and Grainger's Red Devils of Kinston toe the line here Friday night and the Northeastern Conference lead will be the plum both teams are reaching for.

The flu-weary Phantoms, fresh from a 44-37 triumph over Edenton, took the day off yesterday to battle a flu epidemic that has struck the squad.

First string players Smith Worthington, Guy Smith and George Sideris missed the game at Edenton Tuesday night and Worthington is on the doubtful list for Friday's engagement.

Sideris and Smith are being counted on to return to action but new cases, Leon Hardee and Dixie Hobgood, will probably miss the game.

Tuesday night a new Phantom scoring star, Edgar Moore, began to show the form that he has previously demonstrated only in practice sessions. Playing the entire ball game after being in bed with flu and only one day of practice, the sophomore forward hit 15 points and played an outstanding defensive game.

Bobby Starkey and Bobby Conway practically dominated backboard play against Edenton and this particular feature will be in popular demand against the rugged Kinston group.

Kinston currently has a 5-0 conference record and Greenville a 4-1 mark. The Red Devils defeated New Bern 65-52, Elizabeth City 69-39, Roanoke Rapids 57-39, Edenton 66-39, and Washington 33-28. The Phantoms' record lists victories over New Bern 65-53, Elizabeth City 59-48, Edenton 44-37, Washington 55-47 and a 51-53 defeat by Roanoke Rapids.

All-State candidate Doug Gregg is Kinston's "golden boy" and he has left impressions on opposing coaches and players that gold couldn't buy his kind of talent.

The hustling Kinston outfit has a speedy outfit that combines Gregg's constant scoring threat with a hare-speed fast break that has broken the defensive patterns of all Northeastern foes to date.

Besides Gregg, Kinston starters will be Bert Saville and George Whitfield at guards, Cecil Gooding at center and Buddy Potter, forward.

Greenville's starting five is uncertain and depends on recovery of first stringers from the nemesis flu attacks. Coach Bo Farley's favorite starting five has Smith Worthington and Leon Hardee at forwards, Bobby Starkey at center, and George Sideris and Guy Smith, guards.

Ready to fill in are Walter Perkins and Edgar Moore, forwards, Bobby Conway, center, and Dixie Hobgood and Jimmy Cheatham, guards.

These two teams rank one-two in conference standings and Friday's game will be a fitting climax for both teams as they finish the first round of conference competition.

Coach Bo Farley says, "This is the big one. We knew at the first of the season that Roanoke Rapids and Kinston would be the teams to beat in order to make a conference showing."

The evening's program will get underway at 6:30 with a junior varsity contest between the two schools. The Baby Phantoms racked up a 52-27 victory over Edenton Tuesday for their 12th consecutive victory of the season.

Little Tommie Saleed amazed the crowd with a dead-eye set shot exhibition of eight goals in 12 tries from deep forecourt positions.

Mangrum Is Hard To Beat In '53

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Lloyd Mangrum, king of the golf world—at least for the present—defends his throne against a field of hungry challengers today in the opening round of the $10,000 Tucson Open golf tournament.

The Niles, Ill., veteran predicted flatly that he would add top money in the Tucson tourney to his growing list of triumphs, but some of his foes were equally determined.

Mangrum already has first-place money from the Phoenix Open, the Los Angeles Open and the Bing Crosby tourney at Pebble Beach, Calif., in his bank account, plus earnings for showing in San Diego and Palm Springs, Calif., tournaments.

And not only did Mangrum have to cope with such swingers as Tommy Bolt, Maplewood, N. J., winner of the San Diego Open, Jack Burke Jr. and genial Jimmy Demaret, he also faced several sharp but less well known pros.

One of those was Henry Williams, winner of last year's Tucson Open and a master of the El Rio Country Club course. Williams served notice that he would be close to the pace by firing a four-under-par 66 in a pro-amateur warmup round Wednesday.

Al Besselink and Chandler Harper, two veterans of the tournament circuit, matched Williams' performance over the 6,577 yard course, indicating that par may take a brutal beating during the 72-hole tourney.

Olympic Boxing Champion Shows Well In Pro Fights

CHICAGO (UP)—Flashy Floyd Patterson might be able to win the world middleweight title, but the 19-year-old New York Olympic champion, who has won all five of his pro fights impressively, wanted today only to wear the heavyweight crown.

Patterson, 163 1-2, posted his fifth triumph Wednesday night in the Chicago Stadium with a technical knockout over rugged Chester Mieszala, 160, Chicago, at 1:25 of the fifth round.

It was merciful that referee Bill Doty stopped the bout then. Patterson floored Mieszala with a short right to the head for a four count in the first round and put him down in the third for a three count with a left to the nose.

Patterson displayed punching ability with both hands and he struck with lightning speed while evading most of Mieszala's rushes easily.

Fighting for only three years, he said he had put on 10 pounds in the last year and figured he would advance to the light heavyweight class in a rush and eventually would grow into a full-fledged heavyweight.

The feature 10-round battle, not on television, went to Cuba's Orlando Zulueta, sixth ranked lightweight, in the fifth round by a technical knockout over Luther Rawlings, Chicago.

Rawlings was unable to answer the bell for the fifth round due to a cut left eye.

Giants Remember Slugger's Homer

The grateful New York Giants were still paying off Bobby Thomson today for the pennant-winning homer he hit in 1951.

Thomson, whose batting average dropped from .294 in 1951 to .270 in 1952, signed his 1953 contract Wednesday for approximately $30,000, the same salary he received last year.

"I'm exceedingly satisfied," beamed the lanky Giant outfielder after coming to terms in the presence of club Vice President Chub Fenney and Manager Leo Durocher.

Durocher said Thomson would play center field for the Giants this year unless Willie Mays returned from the Army, in which case the Flying Scot would be moved back to third base.

Thomson said he didn't care what position he was assigned "as long as I can hit the ball." He hit 24 homers last year and drove in 108 runs.

Shortstop Don Zimmer and three pitchers—Ed Lehman, Ray Moore and Eddie Roebuck—agreed to terms with Brooklyn, making a total of 29 Dodger players signed for 1953. The Dodgers also signed sandlot pitcher James Castellano Jr. and assigned him to their Asheville, N. C., farm club of the Class B Tri-State League.

Outfielder Hank Edwards and pitchers Dick Littlefield and Vern (Pete) Taylor signed with the St. Louis Browns, bringing the club's total of satisfied players to 29.

Jury Decides Today On Pro Football TV

PHILADELPHIA (UP) — Testimony of broadcasting officials who claimed the National Football League restricted television program harmed their stations was before Federal Judge Allan K. Grim today in the government's anti-trust suit against the league.

The trial without jury, now entering its fourth day, was expected to last from three to six weeks.

The government, maintaining the league's policy of blacking out areas within 75 miles of cities where its games are being played caused restraint of competition, put the two officials on the stand Wednesday.

Herbert Stewart, former manager of WICU-TV at Erie, Pa., and now executive vice president of the Orange Broadcasting Co., Tampa, Fla., told the court he was rebuffed by league Commissioner Bert Bell when he asked to televise games in 1950.

Stewart said the reason given for his being denied the TV rights to a Cleveland-Philadelphia game in 1950, and the Cleveland-Los Angeles title game later the same year, was the 75-mile territory rights limit. Stewart claimed Erie is 90 miles from Cleveland.

Stewart said Bell told him a special train was leaving Erie for Cleveland and that it would be late for the game. The commissioner pointed out that it would be unfair to have the paying customers late, while the stay-at-homes would see the entire game.

Stewart said he investigated and learned that only 25 fans were on the football special.

He also testified he offered $2,500 to put the title game on the air, but that Bell declined the amount because it was too small. The money would have gone into the players' pool.

Elmer Gibson, station manager of KDON, Annapolis, Calif., testified he was denied the right to broadcast the San Francisco-Los Angeles game at San Francisco in 1951. Gibson said his station is 50 miles from San Francisco and does not carry to that city.

The court previously had ruled that the number of persons deprived of television and radio reception by the restriction was "a fundamental problem" in the suit.

Dependable Dave . . . . . by Pap'

New York City basketball fans were greatly disappointed when Dave Gotkin passed up the local colleges to take his court wizardry to North Carolina State College where Coach Everett Case is the tutor. The Gotkin clan had made quite an imprint on metropolitan basketball, and St. John's University in particular. Dave's older brother, Hy, had captained the 1944-45 St. John's team. About ten years earlier, there was Java Gotkin, a cousin, another all time great at St. John's. But Dave chose to blaze his own trail.

Dave is taller than his brother but he has the same finesse in dribbling and ball-handling. Like Hy, Dave has a fine scoring touch from the outside. In time he may develop his brother's great play-making ability. It will be recalled that Hy quarterbacked the St. John's eleven which had 6-foot-9 Harry Boykoff at center. Hy was a genius at getting the ball to Boykoff in the post. Over a foot shorter than Boykoff, they made an odd but effective pair.

As a freshman last season, Dave fractured his wrist in preseason practice and did not get into the varsity lineup until February, playing in only seven games but he showed enough to stamp him as a star of the future. Dave won All-New York City honors at Thomas Jefferson High in Brooklyn and was voted the school's outstanding athlete in his senior year. He is a speedy 6-1, 175 pounder with born basketball talents.

Furman Ace Out With Bad Ankle

Furman's double-barreled basketball attack may be limited to a single shot tonight when the Purple Hurricane faces South Carolina in a Southern Conference basketball encounter at Columbia.

The Furman five, seeking to consolidate its almost-certain tournament berth, suffered the loss of sharpshooter Frank Selvy. Selvy sprained his ankle in practice yesterday. Coach Lyles Alley said doctors had advised that Selvy may play if his ankle is taped tightly, but Alley was not sure whether he would take the risk. Selvy and Neild Gordon give the Hurricanes a fearsome scoring punch.

The game is the only league battle tonight.

North Carolina State, having a broken precedent work against them last Saturday night against North Carolina, found it hasn't shaken off the Philadelphia "jinx" and limped home today after losing to Villanova, 89-81.

State blew a slim 41-38 halftime lead early in the third period and trailed the rest of the way. State outshot the Wildcats from the floor, with four hitting in the double figure brackets but the Wildcats won their fourth straight game against state in Philadelphia from the foul line.

Duke defeated McCrary 87-76.

Baseball Leaders Ponder Finances

NEW YORK (UP)—The minor leagues, who are asking financial assistance from the majors, may learn today whether they will get any help to offset the attendance they claim they have lost because of excessive radio and television broadcasts.

A special six-man committee headed by Frank Shaughnessy, president of the International League, met here to discuss the problem.

"Well, we're outnumbered 4 to 2 right to begin with but at least they didn't give us a complete brushoff," said Shaughnessy.

Football Cardinals Look For New Coach

CHICAGO (UP) — The search for a new head coach for the Chicago Cardinals already has narrowed down to "several persons," Managing Director Walter Wolfner said today.

He said he expected to announce the successor to Joe Kuharich, fired Wednesday and paid off for the last season of his two year contract, within the next ten days.

Wolfner was reluctant to discuss any individual for the job, but said he had talked to "several people."

It was understood that George Wilson, a former player with the Chicago Bears and now an assistant coach with the Detroit Lions, and Dr. Eddie Anderson, a former Cardinal player who was head coach at Iowa and now is the head coach at Holy Cross, were top prospects.

Wolfner refused to reveal whether he had talked to Wilson or Anderson to succeed Kuharich, a former Pittsburgh Steelers assistant coach.

It was understood the Cardinals' decision to discharge Kuharich was made more than a week ago and that preliminary discussions leading to another coach began last week at the annual National Football League meeting at Philadelphia.

Wolfner, in a prepared statement which he said he did not wish to amplify "at this time," said the decision to release Kuharich was "dictated by the realization that our first duty is to give the Chicago football fans the best team within our power to put on the field."

"Last season the fine squad we had brought together faltered so badly we could win only four of our twelve league games," he said. "We felt it necessary to terminate Kuharich's contract for the best interests of our club in order to keep intact the player personnel of our organization, which has been built up at great expense."

Kuharich said it was "for the best interests of both parties that a settlement has been reached."

"Because of a distinct difference of opinion relative to player personnel and coaching staff assignments, cooperation between the Cardinal organization and myself became difficult," his prepared statement read.

Judge Postpones Boxing Decision

NEW YORK (UP) — Supreme Court Justice Bernard Botein postponed indefinitely Wednesday, his decision on middleweight Joey Giardello's motion to be declared winner of a disputed 10-round bout with Billy Graham at Madison Square Garden last Dec. 20.

Assistant Attorney General Samuel A. Hirshowitz told Justice Botein an investigation is underway to determine whether any corruption or fraud was involved.

J. Norman Lewis, Giardello's attorney, told the court only a judge and the referee scored Giardello the winner after the fight. Later, Robert K. Christenberry, chairman of the New York Athletic Commission changed the card of Judge Joseph Agnello and awarded the fight to Graham.

St. Louis Cardinals Are Stranded

Club Owners Meet In New York Conference

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UP) — The future of the St. Louis Cardinals hung in the balance today as owner Fred Saigh, already shaken by a 15 months' prison sentence for federal tax evasion, awaited another verdict from top leaders of the game.

It was clear that Saigh himself felt U. S. District Judge Harper's sentence of 15 months and a $15,000 fine precluded any chance for him to remain as the club's owner.

"This means," he said Wednesday after the sentencing, "that I will have to dispose of the Cardinals. There is no way I can stay in baseball."

But baseball rulers Commissioner Ford Frick and National League President Warren Giles still gave no indication as to how they would decide on a precedent-shattering situation.

Both deferred action pending conferences with attorneys.

Major league owners are meeting in New York this weekend, where the Saigh case may be discussed. However, Giles denied that it would.

Saigh himself was not available for comment, but Jim Toomey, public relations man for the Cardinals, maintained that Frick has no power to force Saigh to sell his stock, although he can suspend him.

The penalty was imposed by Judge Harper after Saigh, in a surprise move, pleaded no contest to two counts of an indictment charging income tax invasion.

The two counts on which he threw himself upon the mercy of the court charged he evaded a total of $19,125. One was for evading $14,351 in 1947 and the other for evading $4,475 in a joint return with his wife in 1949.

The U. S. attorney's office dismissed three other counts of the indictment, returned last April.

The sentence caught Saigh by surprise. Obviously disappointed, he walked to the bench and told Harper he thought the penalty was unduly severe.

"I've seen sentences of less amount of time," he said.

"I don't like these cases," Harper replied. "Especially involving members of the legal profession."

Saigh, a 47-year-old attorney, said:

"I think that when the facts are known, the legal profession will be proud of me. This is a terrible thing, the way this case has been handled. You know deep down in your heart that's so."

Harper bristled.

"You are guilty," he said in a loud voice. "You know the law. When you came into this court and pleaded nolo contendere you knew you were guilty.

"Now you stand before me and question the sentence."

The red-faced judge then abruptly adjourned court.

Saigh was released on $2,000 bond and ordered to surrender to the U. S. marshal's office here on May 4 to begin serving his sentence.

The small, chain-smoking club president, who before 1946 was an obscure lawyer, was catapulted into local prominence when he figured in real estate transactions involving more than $15,000,000.

In 1947 he joined the late Robert E. Hannegan in buying the Cardinals from Sam Breadon, also deceased, for a reported $4,060,000. But Saigh has contended his only cash outlay was $60,800.

Almost immediately the baseball magnate became a thorn in Cardinal public relations. He feuded with sports writers who were critical of the club and he frequently called newspapers and press associations to register protests against his treatment or the club's.

Saigh was credited with being a major force in the move to unseat former Baseball Commissioner A. B. "Happy" Chandler.

Quick tempered and unpredictable, Saigh has had three managers in his brief tenure as a club owner. He fired Eddie Dyer and Marty Marion, both popular with the fans.

Basketball Rules Favor Offensive Style Of Play

NEW YORK (UP) — College basketball's new rules, designed to cut down fouling, haven't done it so far and at the same time have produced the greatest scoring splurge in the history of the high-scoring sport.

Figures released today by the NCAA Statistics Bureau show that at the mid-point of the 1952-53 season, with 2,066 major college games taken into account, personal fouls have been reduced by half a foul per team per game, and scoring is almost 10 points a game higher.

Major college teams so far have averaged 136.1 points a game for both sides. Last year's full season average was 126.6. The increase has been uniform in all sections of the country, with the South and Midwest scoring the most, 142.6 and 142.3. Even the Southwest, the lowest-scoring area this year as last, is up to 125, almost the equivalent of last year's average. Fifteen teams are averaging over 80 points a game, a level reached by only two at mid-season last year.

Meanwhile, fouls committed by both teams in one game have dropped from 43.9 to 42.9.

The higher scoring isn't due to improved shooting accuracy, either, since the change has been insignificant 37.1 per cent now, 34.0 per cent last year. And contrary to many expressed opinions, foul shooting has not become more careless, with the present average of 63.2 per cent slightly higher than last year's 62.4 per cent.

And no college team in the country, major or minor, has held the opposition to less than an average of 50 points a game. The major leader, Oklahoma A & M, has allowed 51.9, a mark that would have meant tenth place a year ago at this time.

Offense leader by a healthy margin is George Washington with 89.4 followed by Navy with 91.5 and Furman with 84.2. Southerners, on a terrific spree the last two weeks, have scored 96, 96, 114 and 107 in their last four games.

Women's Amateur Golf Champion Turns Pro

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP) — Jackie "Little Porkchop" Pung, the U. S. women's amateur golf champion, came to town today and admitted:

1. There aren't many fires in Honolulu.

2. Playing golf won't reduce your avoirdupois.

3. Professional golf is a dog-eat-dog business.

Jackie knows first hand about the first two. But the big little lady—five feet, two and 210 pounds—rapidly is discovering the truth of the third.

Anent the arson rate in the islands, Jackie knows there can't be too much work for the Hawaiian smoke eaters because her husband, Barney, is one. And the things that man finds time to do prove that he can't work too hard on the hook and ladder.

Barney, a Chinese Hawaiian, probably is the unsung hero of sports. "Head of the house" is no idle phrase to that man.

So that Jackie can devote plenty of time to golf, Barney doubles in brass as breadwinner and bread baker and cares for their two children.

Barney's cooperation gave Jackie plenty of time to sharpen her shots for the U. S. amateur, which she won at Portland last summer. You might say it clinched the job for him. Because now that Jackie has turned pro, she won't get home again until October.

"Winning the amateur was a big break for me," exclaimed the brown-eyed lady who looks like a female Porky Oliver, "but it didn't help my weight any. As a matter of fact, I gained four pounds the week I won the amateur."

Jackie, whose Memphis - born mother is of French-Irish-German extraction and whose father is Hawaiian, will make her professional golf debut when the Weathervane Cross-Country tournament starts at Florida's Boca Raton course Feb. 14.

"And I'm finding out that this is going to be a lot different than playing amateur golf," she said with an engaging grin. "Tommy Armour has been straightening out my game and teaching me other things—like what to say and what not to say."

"You know how you get in the habit of saying, 'nice shot,'" she said. "Well, Armour thinks some of the gals might take that as a 'needle,' or that, anyhow, why should I build up the opposition."

JACKIE PUNG

The Silver Scot also has been polishing up Jackie's short game and trap shots. But as for distance, Jackie needs no tutelage. She belts the little white ball in the rather exclusive neighborhood of 225 yards and indications are that she'll win her share of the ladies' fairway loot.

Maybe, Barney, she'll even win enough for a new dishwasher.

Villanova Upsets Wolfpack Play Seton Hall Saturday

NEW YORK (UP)—The return of larrupin' Larry Hennessey to the Villanova lineup spelled a surprise defeat today for highly-ranked North Carolina State and a grim warning for Seton Hall, the only major unbeaten basketball team.

Hot-shot Hennessey popped 21 points through the hoop in Philadelphia Wednesday night to lead Villanova to an 89-81 upset of N. C. State, a mighty squad ranked eighth nationally.

Hennessey, who averaged 26 points per game as a sophomore and 21 points per game last season as a junior, was ineligible until this week because he played in an unauthorized "outside" game for charity. This was only his second game of the season and he now has a total of 47 points.

Villanova meets Seton Hall Saturday night in Philadelphia in a big game already a sellout. Here's another grim omen for Seton Hall: It was Villanova that stopped Duquesne last year when the Iron Dukes were the only remaining unbeaten team.

Seton Hall, meanwhile, was extending its win streak to 20 games against weak opposition from Albright College. The Pirates won, 82-52, although six-foot, 11-inch Walt Dukes sank "only" 20 points, well below his nation-leading average of 27.7.

The Oklahoma Aggies, ranked seventh nationally, strengthened their hold on first place in the Missouri Valley Conference with a 73-59 victory over Wichita. In the same league, the Houston Cougars pulled their second straight surprise, beating St. Louis, 71-70, at St. Louis.

In other leading games Wednesday night: Don Lange came within a basket of tying his own Academy record as he scored 37 points to lead Navy to a 107-72 conquest of Muhlenberg; Army equalled its home court scoring record as it trounced St. Michael's of Vermont, 95-58; St. Francis of Brooklyn beat Fairfield, 74-63; Temple converted 25 out of 31 free throws to beat Drexel Tech, 61-56; Siena whipped Georgetown D. C.), 72-57; Mississippi State trounced Howard College, 81-56; Duke beat the McCrary Eagles, 87-76; and little Fairleigh-Dickinson N. J), one of the five remaining "minor" unbeaten teams, recorded win No. 11, 81-57, over Pace Institute.

Millrose Games Open In New York

NEW YORK (UP)—Track and field champions will be out in force for tonight's Millrose games at Madison Square Garden but the most interesting entrant is Fred Dwyer, a 140-pound Villanova senior who did not make America's 1952 Olympic squad.

Dwyer's biggest claim to athletic fame before the current indoor season began was three straight intercollegiate mile championships But he is favored to win the coveted Wanamaker mile tonight because of three triumphs, including two meet record miles, (4:19.4 and 4:09.7), in as many starts this year.

The rest of the Wanamaker field emphasizes the 21-year-old Dwyer's rapid rise because he is favored over Don Gehrmann and Fred Wilt, who rank the nation's top indoor distance men during the past few seasons.

Gehrmann, unable to win in two previous tries this year, goes after his fifth straight Wanamaker victory.

Survey Supports Sitters' Rules

CHICAGO U.P.) — Establishing minimum standards for all baby-sitters is favored by a majority of the leading child psychologists in the United States, according to a survey.

More than 52 per cent of the 390 experts questioned by the Parents' Consultation Service of the Book House for Children approved the idea of such standards being formulated at city and state levels as a public health and welfare measure.

But some felt it was "no practical" because of the many difficulties to be encountered to make the plan operative. Some expressed concern over the possibilities in the plan "for further regimentation and red tape, in a way of life that is already far too complicated for comfort."

Several felt the answer could be found in more and better training courses for baby-sitters and in parent education programs, at a community level, in cooperation with thepress, radio, women's club's, schools and civic organizations.

Farmville Jaycees Host For District Meeting

FARMVILLE. . .Local Jaycees are planning to lay out the welcome mat, so to speak, here tomorrow night, when they play host to fellow members from 14 clubs at the Eighth Jaycee District meeting.

R.D. Rouse of Farmville, local attorney and also district Jaycee vice-president, said today the Farmville club is expecting between 150 and 175 Jaycees and their guests at the meeting.

Heading the program for the evening is a scheduled address by Mike Harper Sanford, national Jaycee director. To add a touch of culture to proceedings will be Miss Barbara Anne Harris of Salisbury, chosen last year as Miss North Carolina.

Sam Bundy, principal of Farmville High School, will deliver the speech of welcome to visiting Jaycees, and Dan Saleed of Greenville is slated to deliver a report on the Jaycee prisoner rehabilitation program.

The program will begin at 6 o'clock tomorrow evening with a social hour at the Farmville Country Club. At 7 o'clock, supper will be served at the Farmville High School cafeteria.

Officers of the Farmville club, which is the host club for tomorrow's festivities, are: president, Emerson Smith; vice-president, Ed Davenport; and secretary-treasurer Bruce Pope. Davenport is chairman of the arrangements committee for the meeting.

Clubs to be represented at tomorrow night's meeting are Greenville, Washington, Vanceboro, New Bern, Havelock, Morehead city, Beaufort, Jacksonville, Kinston, Goldsboro, Burgaw, Warsaw, Mt. Olive and Farmville.

Possible Cradle Of Old Culture

VANCOUVER, Canada (AP) — British Columbia may have had Aztec and Mayan civilization before Mexico.

Anthropologists investigating discoveries of stone carvings say there is a possibility that the civilizations that have astounded antiquarians since the Spanish conquest of Mexico might have had their start here.

It appears certain, they say, that a race of considerable artistic skill inhabited this country before the ancestors of the present-day Indians. Discoveries of the type Aztec and Mayan carvings, have been made in the Fraser River valley and on Vancouver Island.

Pirates Looted Freight Junks

HONG KONG AP)—Four more freight junks have been looted by pirates operating in international waters between here and Macau in one week recently, Macau Chinese have reported.

The pirates reportedly carried off galvanized iron sheets, iron cuttings and other goods worth $20,000 from two of the junks.

Anthropologist Plans To Trace Negrito Origin

ROME (AP)—One of Italy's most famed anthropologists has left for India to try to trace the origin of the tribes of backward negritos on the Andaman and Nicobar archipelagos off Southern Burma.

He is Prof. Lidio Cipriani, director of the Institute of Anthropology and Ethnology of the University of Florence and a veteran of studies among the pigmies of Africa and the headhunters of Asia. He says he has been asked by the Indian government to try to find the origin of the negritos and to make recommendations on ways to improve their retarded social and economic life.

The archipelago negritos are a black-skinned people of small size and semetic characteristics, unlike the native populations in India or nearby Burma, Professor Cipriani says.

TV Theaters In Gradual Growth

NEW YORK (AP)—It is estimated that about 100 theaters in all parts of the country have installed projection equipment for theater television. Linked together by network just like tele-broadcast stations, the theaters present sports and other spectacles to a paying audience.

Two processes are used, one direct from a special picture tube and the other through a filmed process that takes a picture off the tube, develops it at high speed and then puts it through a movie-type projector.

More Meat On New Model Pigs

CHICAGO (U.P.) — Leaner pork chops may be in the cards for meat consumers. New hog grades adopted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture for pigs are designed to lop off the fat.

The National Live Stock Producer says the new emphasis in hog production and marketing will be on lean, lardless pigs. The development of "meat-type" hogs and higher quality pork products is a result of a shift in consumer preference, the magazine said.

The basic problem facing the farmer, according to the magazine, is to raise a 200 to 230-pound barrow that will yield 51 per cent of its dressed weight in the four lean cuts.

The magazines said some packers are paying premiums for top quality hogs, and the hog industry agrees that hogs are being "firmed up" in a manner that makes for a more attractive product.

Visitors Scared From Returning

BANGKOK, Thailand AP)—Chinese Communist authorities treated Thailand Chinese visiting their mother country so badly that no more Chinese want to go home. Two steamship lines running between Bangkok and Swatow have suspended operations owing to a lack of travelers, resulting from this bad treatment.

As soon as their ships, loaded with Thailand Chinese, arrived at Swatow, the officials said, passengers were herded into a "guest camp." They were kept there for several days during which time Communist investigators questioned them about Thailand and their families. Sometimes Red officials woke them up from sleep to continue interrogation.

Farming Ideas Being Sought

REGINA, Canada (AP)—A new technique in investigation is being used by the royal commission which is inquiring into all phases of Saskatchewan's agriculture and rural life.

The commission has been holding public meetings to find out what farm people are thinking. At the meetings, the audience is split into five or six discussion groups. W.B. Baker, commission chairman, emphasized at these meetings that the main purpose of the discussions is to get assistance in selecting the key rural problems to be investigated.

Finds Home For Discarded Pets

GOSHEN, N.Y. AP)—The small animals and birds of the Niantic, Conn., area have gained a good friend in Miss Ella H. Pope, school librarian here for 21 years, who recently retired and moved there.

Miss Pope when she lived here was the unofficial community protector of homeless, lost and discarded animals and birds, and her library workshop was a sort of pet exchange. Miss Pope said she has found homes for 73 dogs and cats and other animals.

1953 Chevrolet Advance-Design Trucks deliver more value!

4 powerful reasons why you get more of what you want...

more engine power! 108-h.p. Loadmaster engine—standard on 5000 and 6000 Series heavy-duty and forward-control models, optional on 4000 Series heavy-duty trucks.

more staying power! Heavier, stronger, more durable frames increase rigidity, add to ruggedness and stamina of 1953 Chevrolet trucks.

more braking power! Trucks up to 4000 Series heavy-duty models have "Torque-Action" brakes. Series 4000 and above use "Torque-Action" brakes in front, "Twin-Action" in rear.

more economy! New stamina plus extra gasoline economy in heavy-duty models with Loadmaster engine, reduces hauling costs per ton-mile.

Opposes Tax Cut As First Chore

WASHINGTON (UP)—Rep. John Taber (R-N.Y.), one of the GOP's foremost advocates of government economy, warned his colleagues today against putting a tax cut ahead of reductions in federal spending.

"I don't doubt that we will be able to cut government spending enough to permit a tax reduction this year and still keep a balanced budget," Taber told a reporter.

"But I don't think we sought to put tax reduction first. It should be the other way around."

Taber, who heads the House Appropriations Committee, commented after Rep. Daniel A. Reed R-N.Y.) set the wheels in motion to reduce federal income taxes June 30.

Reed, chairman of the tax-framing House Ways and Means Committee, wants to reduce taxes about 11 percent for the last half of 1953, which would be equivalent to a five and one-half percent cut for the full calendar year. Present law calls for taxpayers to get an 11 percent reduction effective next Jan. 1. Reed proposes to advance this tax relief by six months.

Taber is confident that federal spending for the next fiscal year can be cut some $10,000,000,000 below the $78,600,000,000 estimate of the former Truman administration.

Taber, like other Republican leaders, did not disagree with the idea of a tax cut this year. But he said Congress' determination to reduce federal spending and balance the budget should be demonstrated first.

Taber's views apparently reflected those of top officials of the Eisenhower administration, as well as those of House Republican leaders. President Eisenhower is expected to give some indication of his thinking on the budget-taxes situation when he delivers his State of the Union message before a joint session of Congress Monday.

Druggists Hold Meeting Here

The Northeastern Carolina Drug Club gathered in Greenville last night for one of their meetings which are held once every two months. Attending the meeting were approximately 30 pharmacists representing 16 counties in the state. (Reflector Photo by C. L. Perkins, Jr.)

Eclipse Of Moon Visible Tonight

NEW YORK (UP)—Don't be discouraged by the penumbra, wait for the umbra. That is the advice of astronomers for viewing today's geometric theatrics of the cosmos—a total eclipse of the moon.

The spectacle will be visible in most of the western half of the world, including the United States.

Its net effect is that the sun throws the earth's shadow across the moon. The shadow has two parts. The outer part is the penumbra which only partially obscures the sun's light. Looking at the moon during the penumbra phase, the casual observer might not know anything was happening.

But when the moon enters the core of the earth's shadow—the umbra—it is blocked out, or completely eclipsed. Even with a Brownie handled with reasonable skill, it can be photographed.

The middle of the country—from the Alleghanies westward to the Rockies—will see all the show. The East Coast will miss a little of the beginning and the West Coast will miss part of the end—due to the curtaining of the horizon.

For the East Coast, the show will begin around 5 p.m., with the moon coming up over the eastern horizon already shaded—as seen by expert eyes—by the penumbra. This shading will increase in intensity until around 6:05 p. m. when the moon will be totally eclipsed. The moon then will be a dark copper color. Some of the sun's light is reaching it despite the earth being in the way because the atmosphere "bends" some of the ultra violet light around the curved earth edges.

Howell . . .

which would be advisory only to the board in matters pertaining to the utilities of the city.

Proposal Approved

The proposal was passed by a vote of five to three.

On April 7, 1949, Waldrop again took up the matter of the city manager form of government, and emphasized that some of the board members had changed their minds since the last meeting.

Waldrop asked for a "showdown" vote on the proposal to include the Greenville Utilities Commission in city operation. The proposition was defeated by a vote of five to four, and the motion was "declared lost."

This morning an unsigned letter was unearthed at the city hall which was addressed to Representatives Sam O. Worthington and F. M. Kilpatrick, and Senator Paul E. Jones. The letter was dated March 21, 1949, and it is not known whether the letter was mailed or not.

Changed Minds

It reads, in effect, that after due consideration of the fact the Utilities Commission is in the midst of an expansion program, it would be ill-advisable to change the present form of city government.

With the above facts in mind, the letter continued, "We believe that no bill should be passed changing the form of government we now have.

Therefore, since the board voted at a meeting five to three favoring a bill, and we being the ones in the majority, are willing to agree with the minority and ask that all of those bills be withdrawn or killed in committee."

Pharmacists Meet, Hear Discussion Of Narcotics

"High brass" of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics addressed last night's meeting of the Northeastern Carolina Drug Club here.

The topic of the discussion presented by B. M. Martin, district supervisor of district 5, Bureau of Narcotics, Baltimore, Md., was the proper use of narcotics, not the abuse.

The speaker covered the various phases of the Harrison Narcotic Act, and reiterated highlights regarding retail pharmacists. He showed a film dealing with the apprehension of narcotic peddlers.

Martin discussed the procedures used in importing crude opium into the country and how it is controlled by the Federal government. He outlined the procedure for processing crude opium into the finished product.

"Unlike a crime such as bank robbery," the speaker stated, "narcotics works backwards; an officer has to see the crime committed to make an arrest."

The program was well received by the approximately 30 visiting pharmacists from Elizabeth City, Edenton, Windsor, Williamston, Belhaven, Washington, New Bern and Kinston.

The Northeastern Carolina Drug Club embraces 16 counties in this area. Officers are: president, W. D. Welch of Washington; vice-president, A. L. Hogan of Kinston; secretary, John Stevenson of Elizabeth City; and treasurer, C. W. Bynum of New Bern.

Churchill Voices 'Constant Hope'

SOUTHAMPTON, England (UP) British Prime Minister Winston Churchill, home from a visit to America, said today "nothing but good" could follow President Eisenhower's recent visit to the Korean front.

Churchill, at a press conference in Southampton just before he left for London, was asked if any useful and positive results were likely from Mr. Eisenhower's Korean visit.

"They're asking that question in America," Churchill said. "I am sure nothing but good could follow because he saw things for himself on the spot."

He said his American talks with President Eisenhower, before he was inaugurated, and other American leaders were "informal, private and confidential."

The 78-year-old prime minister arrived in Southampton last night on the Queen Mary. He spent the night aboard the ship and then held a press conference before leaving for London.

Asked if anything could be hoped for from his American talks, Churchill said "hope springs eternal in the human breast."

"I was very glad to pay my respects to President Truman and also make my respects to a government I have worked with on and off for a good many years," Churchill said.

Asked if he would return to the U. S. soon, Churchill said, "I do not know."

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Chancellor of the Exchequer R. A. Butler are expected to visit Washington in the spring.

General Taylor Arrives In Tokyo

TOKYO (UP)—Lt. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, President Eisenhower's choice to run the United Nations' ground war in Korea, arrived in Tokyo today and paused for top secret conferences before taking over command of the Eighth Army.

Taylor, the 52-year-old "paracute general," was consulted with Gen. Mark W. Clark, top U.N. commander, and visiting Army Chief of Staff Gen. J. Lawton Collins.

Clark will fly with Taylor to Seoul this weekend where Taylor will succeed retiring Gen. James A. Van Fleet as U.N. ground forces commander.

Taylor was met at Haneda Airport here by Clark and other top Army, Navy and Air Force leaders. He did not speak to reporters or pose for photographers. He stepped into Clark's black sedan and went directly to the U.N. commander's Pershing Heights headquarters.

Collins arrived from a two-day Korean inspection tour an hour later and joined Taylor and Clark.

Cost Of Thirty Words Is Around $360 Billion

NEW YORK (UP) Thirty words written into the Constitution of the United States on Feb. 25, 1913, have cost American taxpayers $360,000,000,000. That's about $12,000,000,000 a word.

"The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States, and without regard to any census or enumeration."

Maj. Gen. George H. Olmsted, retiring director of military assistance in the Defense Department, arrived in Tokyo with Taylor. His presence indicated the top level discussions were concerned with continued strengthening of the South Korean army.

Only the Communists believed the change in the Eighth Army command meant the U.N. was preparing a new offensive. Radio Peiping continued to insist Taylor's arrival "obviously" foreshadowed a general Allied offensive with amphibious landings in the Communist rear.

The Reds have latched onto the phrase, "amphibious landings," although Taylor was a paratroop general in Europe in World War II.

Despite what the Reds say, all evidence here pointed to a steady rebuilding of the ROK army until it can man the whole battleline. It already holds two-thirds of the front line.

Collins said on arrival here from Korea, however, that there were no "future plans for the number of ROK divisions."

As the 40th anniversary of the income tax approaches, the Bureau of Internal Revenue is receiving 1952 tax returns for the biggest tax take in the nation's history.

When the returns are tabulated after the tax deadline, midnight of March 16th—the 15th is Sunday—the total is expected to exceed by a substantial amount the 1951 tax because the 1952 rates are higher, based on a tax change which became effective on Nov. 1, 1951.

The Tax Foundation compiled for the United Press the total of income taxes paid since the 16th Amendment was approved. It's a difficult calculation because in the early days the government records lumped individual and profits taxes.

In the years 1913 to 1952 total income and profits tax collections before refunds amounted to $281,000,000,000. Refunds estimated at $20,000,000,000 reduce the net paid to $361,000,000.

The amendment made possible taxation of income of corporations as well as individuals. There was a corporation "excise" tax under which collections were $83,000,000 from 1910 to 1912, but no corporation income tax.

Hence the Tax Foundation experts agree that the cost to American taxpayers over the 40 years was $360,000,000,000 or $1,000 a word for each of the words contained in the Amendment to the Constitution.
