Two-Day Pitt Drive Far Short Of Goal

173 Pints Given Bloodmobile

By MURIEL SHOTWELL
Reflector Staff Writer

The Red Cross Bloodmobile, at a two-day stand in Pitt County, collected 173 pints of blood, the majority of the donations coming from Grifton which was visited yesterday.

The Bloodmobile, stopping first at Bethel Thursday, collected 35 pints of blood out of a goal of 150 pints. Grifton came up with 140 pints and could have gone higher since additional donors were on hand, but the time element involved kept them below the 150 pint quota.

At Grifton, Negro donors made the largest representation since the bloodmobile has been coming to the county since last January, a Red Cross official reported.

Also at Grifton, a young couple came in with their three small children which the volunteer workers took care of while the father donated his 10th pint of blood and the mother her eighth. More than 50 donors from DuPont came to give their blood at the Bloodmobile's first visit to Grifton.

Heading the blood recruitment at Bethel was Julian Smith with Mrs. C. B. Rowlette Jr., as chairman of the volunteers. Thurman Williams headed the program at Grifton with Mrs. Lynn Gower, president of the Grifton Service League, as chairman of the volunteers.

Included among volunteer workers at Grifton were: Mrs. Elmer Tucker, who aided Mrs. Gower with the volunteers, Mrs. Albert Tyson, Mrs. Ed Berling, Mrs. John Grote, Mrs. Robert Forney, Mrs. Herbert Quinry, Mrs. Cecil Cobb, Mrs. Charles Kline, Mrs. W. H. Gower, Mrs. Archie Rogers, Mrs. Stanley Gamble, Mrs. J. M. Hart, Mrs. Wiley Gaskins, Mrs. R. B. Mewborn, Mrs. W. I. Blissette, Mrs. Claude Hart, Mrs. Roger Johnson, Mrs. Clay Burness, Mrs. Tom Gower, Mrs. Addie McCotter, Mrs. Steven Bartlett of Greenville, and Mrs. S. A. Rodgers.

Traveling with the Bloodmobile crew was Dr. C. L. Harrell, medical director of the Tidewater Regional Blood Center in Norfolk.

Brief Reprieve Given To Pitt Tax Listers

The day of reckoning for Pitt County tax listers is rapidly approaching, but they have been granted a short reprieve—the listing period has been extended through Monday.

County Auditor Reginald Gray explained this morning the listing period, which was scheduled to end today, has been extended one more day to compensate for a late start in listing.

“We feel that citizens should be afforded the full 30-day listing period, and because we did not begin listing until January 2, we are going to continue listing through February 2—the full, established period.”

Anyone listing after Monday of next week will be taxed with a 10 percent penalty on his total tax for late listing. That same penalty was imposed on all tardy listers in 1952, and was continued in effect this year.

In remarking on listing progress throughout the county, Gray said listers in the various communities report that more people have already listed during the period than did last year. “But there are many people on the books who have not yet listed,” he reported.

The exact number of violators is not known, Gray stated, because many people have moved from one community to another, some even out of the county, and there is no way of determining at present how many fall into that category.

Long lines marked listing places all over the county today, but the auditor reiterated emphatically that “all persons who have not listed by Monday night will be penalized.”

Tragedy At Sea

STRANRAER, Scotland (AP)—The car ferry Princess Victoria ran into a hurricane between Ireland and Scotland today and 100 persons were feared to have lost their lives when they were forced to abandon ship.

The 2,600-ton ship, belonging to the British Railways, apparently went down. She was carrying 183 passengers and crew.

Shore stations near Belfast which intercepted radio messages from the scene said dozens of bodies were seen floating in the wild water.

The 681-ton Belfast steamer Donaghadee, in a message received here, said she had picked up 20 survivors and had sighted two or three more clinging to a mast 12 miles off Portpatrick.

More Listed

Couple Cleared Of Selling Child; Strictly A Loan

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—A Long Beach couple has been freed of charges that they sold their first-born child for $250 to pay gambling debts. The complaint was dismissed yesterday after a prosecution witness testified the money was a loan.

Charles E. Haynes, 30, an auto plant worker, and his wife, Viola, 28, were charged with selling their two-year-old daughter, Frances, to Mr. and Mrs. Roy Coley of Lakewood, Mrs. Coley testified yesterday that she gave the Haynes couple the money but that it was to be repaid when Haynes got a job.

The money did not represent the sale price for the girl, Mrs. Coley said.

CAA Interested
Sightings said the Civil Aeronautics Authority is interested in the airport and can be depended upon to Thigpen, Dairymen: Norman Coward, Cotton: Irvin Morgan, J. P. Davenport, Peanuts: E. G. Dupree.

In addition to the Pitt delegates listed above, four persons will attend the special youth meeting which will be held during the session. They are: Mrs. Sue May, Mrs. H. D. Moye, and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Lee.

Among principal speakers at the Charlotte convention will be L. V. Ballentine, Commissioner of Agriculture and O. R. Long, Southern regional director of the American Farm Bureau.

Ballentine will speak at the opening session of the 17th annual convention, using as his topic, “The agricultural outlook for North Carolina.”

Long will speak during the organization conference Monday, following the convention's commodity session.

More than 2,000 farmers, from all over North Carolina, are expected to be on hand for the four day session.

Commodity committee representatives attending: Tobacco: R. D. House, B. B. Suggs, Hugh C. Winslow, Field Crops: J. B. Speight, Livestock: Charles B. Quinley, Fruits and Vegetables: F. L. Blount, Arch J. Flanagan, Poultry: W. P.

President Considers Lifting Ban Against Nationalist Attacks

May Clear Way For China Raids

WASHINGTON (UP)—Government sources revealed today that lifting the naval ban against Nationalist attacks on Red China may be President Eisenhower's first move to try to make the Communists sue for peace in Korea and Indo-China.

These informants said the President is seriously considering cancelling the two-year-old order under which the U.S. Seventh Fleet has barred the Chinese Nationalists from Formosa from invading the mainland.

Underlying this possibility was the President's scheduled meeting today at 10:30 a.m. e.s.t. with Fleet Adm. William D. Leahy, wartime chief of staff to the late President Roosevelt who is presently without assignment.

The subject of the conference was not disclosed but, coincidentally, Adm. Arthur W. Radford, Pacific fleet commander in charge of the Formosa area, is due to arrive here Sunday for more top-level talks.

Government sources suggested that the President might choose his State of the Union message to Congress Monday to reveal his plan to give the Nationalists more freedom of action.

It also was possible, they said, that he would wait until later and simply announce that the Seventh Fleet would continue protecting Formosa from attack but would not block a mainland raid or invasion by the Nationalists.

Mr. Eisenhower hinted in one of his election campaign addresses that he saw no reason to assure the Communists they were safe from Nationalist attack, regardless of whether one would be considered militarily wise.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles also said in his first foreign policy address that the President would find ways to make the Korean and Indo-China wars so unprofitable the Reds would sue for peace.

As a stroke of psychological warfare—a type of warfare Mr. Eisenhower emphasized in his presidential campaign—freeing the Nationalists would pose for the China Reds the constant threat of invasion.

Military authorities were said to believe such a move would force Communist China to deploy large forces along the coast, diminishing by that much her potential for both the Korean war and for contributions to insurgents in Indo-China. That, it was reasoned, would fit in with whatever plans exist for military moves in Korea.

Authorities disclosed that Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, in recent secret testimony before the House Armed Services Committee discussed possible new strategy moves in the Far East.

Secretary Of State Arrives In Rome

Calls Anew For Joint Army

ROME (UP)—U. S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles arrived here today on his first official mission abroad and made a strong new call to European nations to form a united Western European army.

Dulles made his new appeal to Western Europe to join forces only seven minutes after he arrived at Rome's airport from the United States on a nine-day fact-finding tour of European capitals.

The new American secretary of state was accompanied by Mutual Security Administrator Harold E. Stassen. They arrived at 9:25 a.m. (3:25 a.m. e.s.t.). Rome was the first stop on a visit to seven Western European capitals during which Dulles will preach the gospel of European unity and mutual defense.

Among the pertinent facts Dulles will learn on his tour here are: 1. Italy needs continued aid from U. S. funds to cope with communism at home and the new armament burdens assigned her as a NATO partner.

2. Italy subscribes wholeheartedly to Dulles' own theories of the urgent necessity for European unity and is just as anxious as the United States to get the bogged-down European army program going.

Dulles and Mutual Security Administrator Harold E. Stassen will get their briefings on Italy's attitudes toward the new Republican foreign policy of the United States in a series of conferences with Italian Premier Alcide De Gasperi, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and other top-ranking Italian and American officials.

At Dulles' request, De Gasperi and his top ministers prepared briefs setting forth Italy's major problems of domestic and foreign policy, covering among others the following subjects:

American aid: Italy's budget for the coming fiscal year already allows for a 60 per cent cut in American aid. To offset this, Italy needs more rearmament orders placed with her factories under the U. S. off-shore procurement program.

Unemployment: This is a dominant factor in both Italy's domestic and foreign policies. The government through costly subsidies is keeping payrolls intact in many plants by prohibiting dismissals. The United States can help by accepting more Italian emigrants. The figure has remained constant at about 2,000,000 unemployed despite all government efforts.

Foreign trade: Italy's unfavorable balance of trade is growing. In the first eight months of 1952 the excess of imports over exports was about $920,000,000 compared with $439,000,000 for the corresponding period a year earlier. The U. S. can help by lowering tariffs on Italian goods.

Trieste: Italy will negotiate with Yugoslavia for a solution of this problem whenever Marshal Tito is ready to consider what Italy regards as a “just solution.” Italy is ready to consider boundary readjustments whereby the predominantly Slav sections of the disputed zones would go to Yugoslavia.

Saied To Seek Jaycee Office

FARMVILLE—It was made public here last night that Dan Saied of Greenville will be a candidate this Spring for the 8th Jaycee district vice-presidency.

The announcement was made at the 8th Jaycee district meeting held in Farmville. Elections will be held at the State Jaycee convention to be held this year in Asheville.

Saied said this morning he knows of no one else in the 8th district who has announced for the post to date. “I have been thinking about the proposition for several months,” the Greenville Jaycee declared, “but I definitely decided to announce only recently.”

If Saied wages a successful campaign he will replace R.D. Rouse of Farmville, who was elected vice-president of the 8th district at the annual State Jaycee convention last year.

Past President
Saied is immediate past president of the 8th Jaycee district.

Grand Jury To Act On Highway Deaths

A 19-year-old Negro youth will face the grand jury at the next term of Pitt County Superior Court on two counts of manslaughter, a coroner's jury ruled last night.

A six-man coroner's jury last night debated only a short time before ordering that Cornelius Williams, 19, Winterville logging truck operator be retained for grand jury action in the death of two men near Winterville January 6.

The jury ruled that Albert J. Richardson, 20, of Raleigh, and Jack Dowdy, 48, Greenville, came to their deaths as the result of a collision between a car driven by Richardson and a truck by Williams.

Williams has been confined in county jail without bond since the accident, pending the inquest. Coroner Griffin H. Rouse this morning stated that no bond will be allowed him.

Only two persons took the stand last night to describe the early morning accident which snuffed out the lives of the two DuPont construction workers and seriously injured two others.

Jasper Dail, Washington Street, Greenville, first was called by the coroner to give an account of the accident. Dail told the jury that he was traveling behind the death car, between 50-55 miles per hour when he saw the car swerve to the right and the log truck hit the car driven by Richardson.

Richardson, brother of the dead driver, still remains in a critical condition in Pitt Memorial Hospital while a fourth occupant of the car, Charles Trulove, received only moderate injuries.

Mum was the word today from the Greenville Police Department on their investigation into the safe robbery of a Negro cafe here sometime yesterday.

No progress was reported in the safe robbery nor was there any indication that any trace had been turned up of the Negro man who entered the home of Mrs. J. Bryan Brown yesterday morning.

Chief of Police S. G. Gibbs this morning reported that “investigation is still under way and nothing to report.”

The same line was true with the progress being made into the mid-morning entering of Mrs. Brown's home yesterday by a Negro man who discovered crouched in her bedroom closet.

The man ran from the room when Mrs. Brown opened the closet door, with Mrs. Brown falling against an open window and falling to the ground outside.

Pitt Farm Bureau To Have 'Loudest Voice' At Annual Convention Opening Sunday; 21 Delegates Attending

By ROY HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County's delegation to the State Farm Bureau convention, opening in Charlotte Sunday, will carry with it the most voting power of any county in the state.

Strength of Pitt's power will be vested in its 21 delegates who will be seated for the annual session tomorrow. Only two other counties,

Johnston and Nash, approach the voting strength of Pitt, each with 17 ballots.

Its voting power more than likely will come in handy, on issues such as allowing the bureau to enter into the insurance business, a move which the local bureau strongly opposes.

Vanceboro O.E.S. Has Regular Meeting

VANCEBORO—Vanceboro Chapter Order of the Eastern Star met in regular session Wednesday night at the Masonic Hall, with Mrs. Virginia T. McLawhorn, worthy Matron, presiding, and giving a warm welcome to those in attendance.

Mrs. W. B. Butler gave the report of the sick and cheer committee which included a report of those ill at home or in the hospitals. The worthy Matron suggested that the chapter establish a sick and cheer fund to be supported by voluntary contributions. The suggestion was favorably received and members contributed to the fund. Mrs. McLawhorn reported donations of clothing to several needy families.

The chapter voted to entertain the Masonic members on February 11 and to observe "Friendship Night" during February.

Invitations to attend their respective Friendship meetings were read from Morehead City, Service Star, Bayboro, Beaufort, and Arapahoe. Plans were made to attend the Friendship meeting in Morehead City January 29.

An official communication was read from Mrs. Helen B. Rimer, worthy Grand Matron and Mr. Hugh Prince, worthy Grand Patron.

Mrs. Ella Wetherington told of attending a recent meeting at Wilson chapter at which time she, with other past Matrons were honored.

The worthy Matron appointed the following committee to serve when the Masons are entertained: Refreshments—Mrs. E. P. Blair; Mrs. C. L. Gault and Mrs. L. P. Taylor; Entertainment—Mrs. E. A. Laughinghouse, Mrs. D. M. Robinson and Miss J. B. McGee; Decorations—Mrs. J. E. Sells and Mrs. W. W. Butler.

Arrangements of paper white narcissus and carnations were used in the chapter room.

DIDN'T LIKE HIS LOOKS
LEWISBURG, Pa. (UP)—During the buck deer season, a young hunter came suddenly on a doe lying sprawled on a lower slope of Shade Mountain. He thought she was dead until he lifted her head by an ear.

The doe's eyes popped open, she took a quick look at the hunter and leaped up and away between two other startled sportsmen.

Vanceboro P.T.A. Plans Study Course

Vanceboro—The Vanceboro Parent Teachers Association held its January meeting Monday night at the elementary school, with the president Mrs. Ralph Hill in charge.

The opening song was "Old North State" followed by the devotion by the Rev. Hubert Morris. The president announced a study course on leadership to be held at the school on January 29 conducted by Miss Blanche Haley, field representative of the State Parent Teachers Association.

Mrs. C. L. Lancaster, chairman of the committee to secure back drops for the stage reported the material had been received and parents volunteered to meet in the home economics department to make the drops on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. B. L. Witherington reported the committee to select a P. T. A. Memorial gift had suggested the association send ten dollars to the National Congress of Parent Teachers Associations in Washington, D. C. which permits the name of an outstanding member to be placed in the honor book.

Mrs. T. A. Forrest, long active in school, church and civic organizations activities was voted to be so honored. The attendance awards were won by Mrs. Oscar Taylor, second grade and Mrs. T. A. Forrest, fifth and sixth grades.

Following the business session Thomas Dubose of the high school showed color slides of points of interest in North Carolina.

Mrs. Reid Perkins Is Hostess To Atheneum Club

Mrs. Reid Perkins was hostess to the Atheneum Book Club on Tuesday afternoon at one o'clock.

The house was festive with spring flowers of many colors. The honor guests, the five Holiday sisters, formerly of Gallant's Ferry, S. C., who were college friends of Mrs. Perkins while at Woman's College, added much to this meeting.

A delicious buffet luncheon was served by Mrs. Lee Hannah and Mrs. Thomas Galbreath of Kinston, sisters of the hostess. Lovely heart-shaped red satin, sachet bags marked the place of each guest.

During the business period the club voted unanimously to write a letter to the board of aldermen protesting the use of the attractive grounds around Sheppard Memorial Library as a parking lot.

The guests from out-of-town were Mrs. James McLeod and Mrs. Edward Allen of Florence, S. C.; Mrs. David Gaston, Chester, S. C.; Mrs. Harold Collins, Southern Pines, N. C.; Mrs. John Delfell, Greenville; Mrs. Arnold Edgerton Jr. and Mrs. Robert Bryan, Goldsboro; and Mrs. Thomas Galbreath of Kinston.

ART NOTES

By Mrs. Donald M. Murray

When you walk through the art gallery at the Sheppard Memorial Library and look at the portraits of Mrs. Georgia Hearne, or the prints by the college students of Mr. Francis Neel does it ever occur to you to wonder what the particular problems of these artists were? What does the portrait painter try to do? What does an artist have in mind as he conceives of a design for a fabric? Perhaps the figure studies appeal to you the most; for they are immediately recognizable as human beings you know, or would like to know, while the prints hung as they are by themselves, as pure designs, seem rather incomprehensible and difficult to place in human context.

An abstract, or semi-abstract decoration, however, may be enjoyed by anyone if he tries to understand what it is trying to do, and its scope. There are many artists who believe that all paintings, even if not designed for a particular functional purpose, such as a design for a fabric, should be limited to certain two-dimensional and compositional standards. But what we are concerned with in this particular collection of college prints is a group of designs deliberately planned to be executed on fabric.

When we look at some really handsome decorated material hanging in our living room as a pair of drapes, for example, or a slip cover for a chair, what do we think of first? Realistic objects may be portrayed in the print, such as flowers or birds, or the design may be partly or completely abstract; but isn't the first thing we look for the success with which the design carries in color and pattern and harmony? This means that we should be able to appreciate the fabric from across the room—that its color and pattern are as pleasant to us from any point in the surroundings as they would be if examined closely—and that each element is so integrated into the entire design that the fabric gives an all-over effect of harmony, rather than a collection of individually interesting, perhaps, but warring elements. Even those of us who are fond of pattern and harmony or conventional prints, these prints which we call exactly represent objects, want the design to be pleasantly and harmoniously composed. Suppose we call this kind of design a realistic one.

The artist working with it has two problems: one to completely and harmoniously composed. Suppose we call this kind of design a realistic one.

semi-abstract concentrates solely on design, which would seem to be, in the case of fabric decoration, the primary aim.

Now, the portraits of Mrs. Hearne are excellent examples of a chiefly representational rather than a chiefly decorative type of art. We wish them to be such, and we employ a different standard in judging whether or not we like them. A portrait should render its subject faithfully, in the sense that it gives to us the individuality of the subject; otherwise, we would want to look at it as a figure study rather than a portrait of some particular person. However, an individual could commission a photographer to take his portrait and have a completely faithful representation, so it is obvious that something is required of an oil portrait in addition to faithfulness to the subject. A good portrait should portray by means of the artist's gifted penetration certain psychological qualities of the person painted, his inner personality, with a more acute insight than that of a merely physically accurate representation. It is true, of course, that a good camera portrait can often result in what we may call a psychologically successful study—although I think most of us would agree that this sort of insight is found often and more for example, the portrait of Mr. G. S. Forbes. It would seem to us, even without knowing the subject, that the painting could surely be only of a particular person, and that this man's character is piercingly and thoughtfully revealed to us, by his gesture, his eyes, his expression.

Finally, then, an oil portrait should be a painting, and a good one. It should present an interesting and agreeable pattern within the confines of its canvas, which is perhaps another way of saying it should be well composed. Notice what a charming decorative pattern Mrs. Hearne employs in her portrait of Mrs. Scales—how the sweep of the shawl and its repetition in the bodice and brushwork of the background form a graceful, almost elegant composition. This pattern, however, in a portrait, should not detract from the primary purpose of portraiture: note how Mrs. Hearne generalizes the shapes of her hands and figures and makes her backgrounds subservient to her subjects.

We should also like to enjoy the intrinsic aesthetic qualities of the medium in a good portrait painting—all the richness and variety of the color and texture of oil paint. Mrs. Hearne has done some lovely painting in her portrait of Mrs. Scales, for example. The texture of the lace shawl is delicately and sensitively rendered; not in the least minutely accurately drawn, and the color is as subtle and varied as oil paint can be. In her portrait of John Castor, with its tastefully felt though brilliant color, we can see oils being used in a more virile, though equally skillful manner. It is in this very richness of medium that an oil portrait again offers us a greater reward than that of a camera study.

If questions should occur to any readers while reading ART NOTES, please send them in to the office of THE DAILY REFLECTOR, and someone would be glad to try to answer them in a future column.

There will be an exhibition of the paintings of Mr. John Gordon and Mr. Francis Lee Neel, both art teachers at East Carolina College, beginning February third, at the gallery at the Sheppard Memorial Library. Plan to see this show and send your comments into ART NOTES. We will discuss them in our column.

Better Music For Everybody Is Involved

Music Department At ECC Is Influencing Eastern Part Of State; Band Clinic Scheduled

By MARY H. GREENE

Better music at East Carolina College means better music for a large part of North Carolina. When Joe Smith toots away on his clarinet or Jane Brown vocalizes the scales, it means that boys and girls in many state public schools are soon going to learn through East Carolina-trained instructors to march proudly in bands, to play hymns in Sunday schools, to sing in choirs, to entertain their friends in civic organizations, and to live a fuller, happier life through music in the home.

Next Friday and Saturday February 6-7, more than 125 student musicians from 36 North Carolina high schools will be on the campus to play in the Concert Band of the Eastern Division of the All-State Band Clinic. At this annual event at the college the visiting boys and girls will receive training as instrumentalists and will have the thrill of participating in a concert under the direction of Norval Church, noted music educator of Teachers College, Columbia University. The occasion points up the fact that East Carolina has become a music center among North Carolina schools.

East Carolina is training teachers. Music students at the college include also a number who are being prepared for other work than teaching. Some of them will use their talents and their training as church choir directors, organists, or singers; as radio performers, accompanists, arrangers; composers, conductors, members of orchestras, or perhaps performers on the concert stage. Some will make music an avocation rather than a vocation.

During the past few years East Carolina's department of music has grown rapidly and has expanded greatly in types of work, equipment, number of students and faculty members, and variety of opportunities offered the student.

The department is an associate member of the National Association of Schools of Music, an affiliation indicative of high standards and excellent achievement.

Eighty students among men and women at the college are majoring or minoring in music this year and are candidates for the professional degree for teachers or for the liberal arts degree. More than three hundred students, both music majors and others, are members of music organizations on the campus. All students attending East Carolina take a course in music appreciation as part of the general education requirements for a degree, and all primary and grammar grade majors receive training in the teaching of music in the public schools.

Thirteen full-time and two part-time instructors make up the music faculty. The department is headed by young, dynamic Dr. Kenneth N. Cuthbert, whose high standards and enthusiasm for better school music are influencing music education in North Carolina.

Equipment includes more than fifty pianos, a three-manual Tellers pipe organ, a Wuritzer electric organ, and many band and orchestra instruments. A recording machine, portable phonographs, a record library, a collection of scores, and a "listening room" containing a large Magnavox are in constant use.

The Joyner Library houses a sizeable collection of books on music. A recent acquisition there is the complete works of Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms, an asset not found in many much larger libraries. Three auditoriums on the campus are available for programs.

Through its music organizations, which are open to all students at the college, East Carolina's achievements in music are perhaps best known to the public. The East Carolina Orchestra, a campus-community group, is made up of students, faculty members, and musicians from Pitt County. It is a member of the American Symphony Orchestra League. In it students learn while they have fun playing together. Last fall when the orchestra gave its first concert for the school year, many who came to hear the program failed to find even standing room available.

Membership in a Training Band, a Training Choir, and a Training Orchestra is required of music majors. In these groups students learn through doing. Many get cold feet when they take their turns as conductors.

East Carolina's marching and concert band is in demand for campus and off-campus performances. Spirited playing and original maneuvers are an attraction at ball games; and the purple and gold uniforms worn by members make a bright splash of color on the campus athletic field. The band participates annually in the Wilmington Azalea Festival, plays frequently at student assemblies, gives a Christmas program and a spring concert on the campus, and takes part in a number of parades in Greenville and other eastern North Carolina towns.

William F. Williams senior music major from Swan Quarter, conducts the Training Orchestra at East Carolina College. Dr. Kenneth N. Cuthbert, head of the department of music, stands by as observer.

Vocal organizations include the College Choir of mixed voices, the Varsity Men's Glee Club, the Women's Chorus, and the College Singers. These groups, as well as the instrumental organizations, have appeared on radio programs over a number of stations of this section of the state.

Thursday afternoon at East Carolina in recital time. It finds many a student quaking in his boots. All students in the department participate, and each week a varied program by singers, pianists, flutists, violinists, organists, clarinetists, or other performers in presented and evaluated. Formal "Honors" recitals are given by advanced students whose work is recommended by the music faculty.

Several programs by faculty members are presented each year and are occasions affording pleasure to concert-goers and contributing richly to the artistic and cultural life of the community and surrounding areas. Faculty members are frequently guest artists before audiences in various parts of the state.

Staging operas and musicals is fun for students and provides much valuable experience. Productions of recent years include Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" and the musical comedy "Good News." Currently a production of "Roberta" is being rehearsed for High School Day, April 10.

The training of teachers of public school music is a major aim of the department. Senior music majors do student teaching in the public schools. Their work includes observation and instruction of pupils in both the elementary grades and the high school. Fifteen seniors are scheduled for work as teachers in the college Training School and the Greenville public schools during the 1952-1953 term.

This training is paying off so far as North Carolina's public schools are concerned. East Carolina graduates have been or are now teachers of public school music in such places as Aurelian Springs, Jamesville, Lillington, Sanford, Raleigh, Williamston, Robersonville, Smithfield, Grifton, Fuquay Springs, Roxboro, and Jacksonville.

This year the department, by participating in the college extension program, has offered for the first time in-service training for more and more becoming an influence in making North Carolina a Courses in music methods and better state musically.

materials and in aesthetics are available. A group of teachers in Elizabethtown was the first to profit by this type of instruction.

Classrooms and studios of the department in the Wright and Austin buildings sometime sound like Bedlam. A soprano's high C, a rumble of bass from the organ, the trilling of a flute, the whine of a violin, the plunking of a piano—combined, they are excruciatingly painful to the passer-by. But the finished product is something else.

Last week the choruses presented for Religious Emphasis Week on the campus a moving and beautiful program of church music as background to the morality play "Everyman." At an assembly the Varsity Glee Club, in their white sweaters with purple and gold monograms, inspired the audience as they sang "Onward Christian Soldiers," with accompaniment by the East Carolina orchestra.

Such programs show results. "Good spirit," recently said President John D. Messick of East Carolina, who likes to sing and does it well, "can be engendered through participation in music."

"It's the Spirit That Counts" is the title of a recent article by Dr. Cuthbert on school music. The fine spirit of East Carolina music majors, their high standards of scholarship and performance, are first time in-service training for more and more becoming an influence in making North Carolina a Courses in music methods and better state musically.

Another Polio-Stricken Child's Parents Appreciate Fund's Value

By MURIEL SHOTWELL
Reflector Staff Writer

Cecilia Ann Bailey, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garlan Bailey of Grimesland, recently returned to her home after spending almost five months in the Central Carolina Convalescent Hospital at Greensboro.

At the time of Cecilia Ann's attack, her father was in Arabia. He has recently come to Grimesland as principal of the school there.

"It is impossible to describe the anxiety that parents go through when they find out that their child has the disease, so little is actually known about it," he said. "It is sort of a helpless feeling, as if the world has suddenly dropped out from under you."

Bailey said as soon as it was decided his daughter had polio, the wheels really began to turn. "The hospital was only interested in getting the case as soon as possible and doing as much as possible for her," he explained.

"Money was no problem because they were not interested in finding out if I could pay the fee; in fact I have never been approached about money except when the head of the county polio foundation told my wife that the foundation would take care of the hospital fees."

"The total cost of the five months in the hospital was over $2,000. I was requested to pay a little over $3.00 for a pair of shoes for her. My sister had a child in the hospital some three years ago and the story was about the same."

"I cannot speak too highly of the Foundation for Infantile Paralysis nor can anyone give too much. You will be the receiver instead of just can't tell if the time will come the giver."

After spending five months in the hospital at Greensboro with infantile paralysis, little Cecilia Ann Bailey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garlan Bailey of Grimesland, is speedily recovering at her home.

DOCTRINE OF ATONEMENT
"Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures." What does this mean? Some have held that God ransomed mankind from the bondage of Satan through the death of His Son on the cross. Others, viewing the matter legally, find the cross meeting the full requirements of divine justice, appeasing God's anger over man's sin.

To most people—including this present writer—such theories appear fantastic, almost repulsive. Christ's atoning sacrifice arises out of God's love for mankind, not out of his wrath. The Bible appears to teach that by his perfect obedience, Jesus Christ established a pathway along which all who have faith in Christ may walk. If we walk that pathway—even though we limp and stumble—we show our willingness to submit to God's will and are therefore in the way of being forgiven—at-one-ment with God; hence, atonement.

Furthermore, by his acceptance of the shame and pain of the cross, Jesus accomplished a repentance for human sin which pieces out and fulfills our imperfect repentance, and so makes divine forgiveness possible. Last of all, by the shedding of his blood, Jesus Christ sealed God's promise of forgiveness to his erring children. "Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures."

Never Underestimate The Women's Power

Never underestimate the power of a woman.
By no means underestimate the power of a group of women who set their hearts to do a job.

In communities throughout Pitt County this week, mothers tapped on front doors, asked for donations for polio-stricken children, and collected dollars, dimes and quarters which will run into thousands.

The women of Pitt County who participated in the Mothers' March on Polio deserve the congratulations of the county for a job well done. They have the personal satisfaction of knowing they have contributed a great deal to the children of Pitt who have been stricken by the crippling disease. They know they have contributed their time and efforts to the long and intricate battle to bring the disease under control.

In Greenville alone the house to house canvass made by the women brought in more than $31,600 Thursday night. In Ayden, and Winterville, similar success was achieved by the women who knocked on front doors in behalf of the polio campaign.

There were few houses in any of the towns which missed the knock of a civic minded woman who had joined in the march. There was hardly a house in any town from which a donation did not come to help Pitt County meet its 1953 March of Dimes goal.

Time was, not many years ago, when the women of a community took a back seat in civic campaigns of this sort. It was a sort of unwritten law that the men of the community shouldered the responsibility. But no more. This year the women of Pitt County took the March of Dimes campaign in tow; and they did a commendable job.

"Little Savings Are" The Ones That Count

The adage pennies make dollars still applies.

Magnified billions of times — to approach the magnitude which government officials can understand — millions make billions.

The average man operating a business, or an average housewife trying to make ends meet in the family budget, finds where a few dollars can be saved here, and a few dollars there. Each little savings brought about by an economy measure may not mean much in itself. But if a number of the little savings are made, by the end of the year they mount to a considerable figure.

So it is with the government's hundreds of thousands, millions and billions. One million dollar reduction in spending in itself may not make much difference to the federal budget. But put many million dollar savings together, and the effect can be felt.

A prime example of what could be done along this line by the federal government was cited in a speech on the floor of the House January 14 by Representative Curtis of Missouri.

He was talking about activities of the subcommittee of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Department, and cited a release issued by the Department of Defense eight days earlier. The release said in part:

"On the basis of current military coffee consumption in the United States, the Board (munitions) reckons a reduction of $50,000,000 in green bean inventories together with parallel savings in storage space and personnel costs."

The Congressman reckoned the total savings by this one order totaled $100,000,000 and went on to point out that the military is operating coffee-roasting plants similar to hundreds operated by private industry; that there are "hundreds of other civilian type activities that the military had moved into which were similar to coffee-roasting."

If the Congress would completely study such military activities, the Congressman continued, "I suggest we would find that the savings to the taxpayer would be in the billions of dollars. Just 10 operations like coffee roasting, cut down, as the directive of the Department of Defense has provided, would save one billion dollars. One hundred would save 10 billion dollars."

In his line of reasoning, we believe Congressman Curtis has pointed the way to government economy, a lower budget, and a more sound financial and economic position for the country.

The relatively small (in governmental terms) thousands and millions we can save here and there are going to amount to billions upon billions in the course of a few years.

National Whirligig

Every Saturday this veteran Washington correspondent devotes his column to answering readers' questions of general interest on national and international policies and personalities. Questions may be sent direct to Ray Tucker at 6308 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON—Senator Morse has been generally criticized for his crankiness and obstructionism. F. H. of San Antonio, "but isn't it possible that he may have the last laugh on his detractors? His constituents may appreciate his rebellion against bossism and party discipline, as western Republicans and Democrats supported the great Progressives of the Coolidge-Hoover era."

Answer: I would not hazard a guess on the voters of Oregon will do to Morse when he runs for re-election in 1956, but I do protest against any comparison of him or his record with the achievements of such statesmen as Norris of Nebraska, Borah of Idaho, Johnson of California, Walsh of Montana, and McNary of Oregon.

When those men bucked the bosses, they did so on behalf of a great cause or principle never on petty or personal grounds. For strategic reasons they reserved their fire and fight for major battles. Nor did they ever resort to such vaudeville tactics as did Morse when he dragged a chair into the Senate because the GOP caucus, as it had a right to do, denied him a seat.

I am not referring here to Morse's objections to confirmation of the Wilson nomination. His worst offense was to postpone confirmation of other Cabinet appointees even after they had been reported favorably by the appropriate investigating committees.

He was thereby repudiating the integrity and intelligence of his colleagues. And no governmental body could operate without reliance on its committees. There is another contrast between the Oregonian and the "sons of the wild jackass." They usually had the support and admiration of the press gallery, the majority of the Democrats and many Republicans. Morse is a disliked and ostracized man.

WILSON'S G. M. STOCK—"Is it possible," inquired a S. of Dallas, Tex., "that the Democrats' publicized qualms over Charles E. Wilson's General Motors stock was the opening of a flank attack on the Eisenhower Administration? Hasn't the opposition used this incident to depict the Republicans as a 'millionaire party'?"

Answer: Yes and no. In the first instance, the objection was originally raised by Senator Byrd of Virginia, who is sympathetic to Eisenhower and to economical and businesslike operation of the Government. A contrary conduct of public affairs was behind his opposition, writes Harry S. Truman.

Since the 1933 law, which made more severe in 1948 because of World War II experiences, barred Wilson's confirmation, Senators would have violated their oaths of office, if they had not protested and forced Wilson to dispose of his holdings. Those facts are plain.

However, there are Democrats who will not object, if the episode contributes to the popular belief that, as Senator Morse charges, the GOP has "sold out to big business." The humorous remark that the Cabinet consists of "eight millionaires and one steamfitter (not a plumber)" may become a campaign slogan.

WESTERN POWERS AND SOVIET SATELLITES "Could the democracies," asks J. M. of Lawrence, Mass., "have halted Russia's penetration and subjugation of her satellites? Or was the penetration so subtle that the democracies could not counteract it?"

Answer: Barring war, the Western powers could not have prevented Moscow's conquest of the strictly satellite states. Russian forces pursued German troops into those areas toward the close of the conflict. The underground resistance in those countries consisted largely of Communists.

It was an easy matter for Stalin's agents to arouse popular enmity toward existing governments, grab control of the police and military forces and facilities, and install their puppet regimes.

In fact, Churchill himself said that Russia, the victim of so many invasions, had every right to establish strong and sympathetic buffer states on her borders. The "grand old man" has since changed his mind.

I apologize to many complaining readers for referring to the late and great William Knudsen as Swedish. He was a Dane.

YORKTOWN, TEXAS, DEWITT COUNTY VIEW—"How long can this continue? The government has gone $3,386,000,000 (billions) into the red in the past six months and is expected to wind up its fiscal year, June 30, with the biggest 'peace-time' deficit in history. During the past six months spending was logged at $35,041,000,000 and income at only $28,655,000,000."

HUMBOLT, IOWA, REPUBLICAN: "Individuals buy stock in a corporation as an investment and expect to receive earnings in the form of dividends from the stock they purchase. Such dividends become a part of the stockowner's income and he pays an income tax on them. But . . . and here is the injustice of the present tax laws . . . the corporation has already paid a tax on those earnings."

MOOREHEAD, MINN., STAR-GAZETTE: "Good business means good jobs, good pay, and an abundance of products we can buy at reasonable prices. Federal economy will mean a balanced budget, a sound dollar, and a stable economy for the whole nation."

He Who Laughs Last

Somebody Told Me

By L. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

The other day I heard a few Greenville businessmen discussing the Greenville one-way streets, considering whether or not the issue is dead or demands further consideration.

Opinions were varied. One said, "There's one thing for sure: The one-way streets haven't brought five cents worth of business to Greenville and they have certainly run plenty away."

Another businessman was just as staunch in the other direction: "What we wanted was to speed up traffic; that's what we've done. Our real problem is parking. When we can get some off-the-street parking we'll have the whole problem licked."

An advertiser from Farmville has a radio commercial coming over the Greenville station every day that says, "Come to Farmville to shop, where there are no one-way streets or parking meters."

In order to test the response to the one-way system, in so far as the turn-right-on-red feature is concerned, all you have to do is drive in the right lane on a corner like East Fourth and Cotanche, for example. If you drive up behind a car in the right lane, who is supposed to turn right on red but just sits there, try blowing your horn.

The person in the car ahead will turn around and look at you as if you have gone completely out of your mind. "What do you expect me to do," he'll say, "break through this red light?"

For some people, the one-way streets are fascinating. I heard one man say, "Everybody likes a puzzle, and attempts to figure out the best way to master it." To any driver coming into Greenville, you have to agree that he meets with a puzzle.

A salesman who works out of Seneca Falls, N. Y., told me recently, "I nominate Greenville, N. C. as the town in America with most one-way streets for its size."

The new system, which isn't too popular with some now, would gain tremendously in popularity if it were accompanied by a plan for off-the-street parking. There are plans in the fire now which will be brought up for the consideration of the board in the near future.

And I thank you.

NO LOSS—Despite the showing of face of the record that the current Legislature is somewhat behind recent sessions in number of bills handled, there are many old timers who think there has been no time lost. To date there has been no real controversy in committees or on the floor. There has been enough sparring for the members to test the tempers and mettle of each other without getting mad. It may well develop later that this get-acquainted period has saved more time in enacting good legislation than it has apparently wasted by failure to speed action on important measures.

INTRODUCTORY—Money and judiciary committees have been at work for several days, but other major committees held their first meetings this week. The time was devoted mainly to getting acquainted with each other and with the State departmental personnel with whom the committees will have to work. That procedure was followed in the education and agriculture committees. In both instances the Senate and House groups met separately but heard the same officials from the affected departments present the overall picture of their respective agencies.

AGRICULTURE—The Senate Agriculture committee met at 10 o'clock and the House at 10:30 Thursday morning to hear the top men in the three main tax supported agricultural agencies discuss in general terms their problems. L. Y. Ballentine, commissioner, speaking for the State Department of Agriculture, also introduced the heads of the several divisions in the department. Ralph W. Cummings, director of the experiment station and research program at State College, spoke for that part of the work. David S. Weaver, director of extension, explained how his agency had a sort of middle-man activity, working closely with others to translate the results of research and regulation into practical application on the farms.

CO-OPERATION—Weaver's presentation emphasized co-operation among the several groups and with the Federal government on one end and County governments on the other. It should be recalled here that time was, and not so far in the past, when co-operation was a word in the agenda but not an element in practice. The various groups discovered 10 or 12 years ago that agricultural progress was retarded by petty rivalries and now they get together and present a solid front. It is pretty well established now and most people understand that the county farm and home agents represent the point of contact with scientific research at the experiment stations and enforcement of regulatory provisions by the State department.

WEAVER—For that reason only there may be more popular interest in what Director Weaver had to say. North Carolina has more people than any other State classified as farmers. Every one of the 100 counties has a farm agent and a home agent, and many of them have one or more assistants, giving this State an agricultural extension setup second in size only to Texas—which has 25 counties. There is an average of 2,885 farms to the county. The 133,000 aggregate enrollment in 4-H clubs puts North Carolina at the top of the list in that field.

PERSONNEL—All of the speakers emphasized the need for more equipment, more adequate physical facilities for serving this primary sector of State economy; but they all placed greater emphasis upon the need for competent personnel, which can be obtained only if money is made available to compete with salaries offered in private enterprise. Transition from mule power to machines and impact of new diseases in animals and plants occasion problems which require expert handling. Dr. Cummings stressed the same point as he pointed out that the new frontier in agriculture is to increase per acre and per man yield, instead of moving westward to open up new tracts of land.

EXTENSION—The natural tendency to extend and expand activities on part of governmental agencies has been reflected in several bills introduced in the current session of the Legislature. Inspired in several instances by local pride, the measures have general application. Reps. Floyd and Regan of Robeson county are seeking to open Pembroke State College to enrollment of students other than Indians—to which the student body has been restricted since establishment of the institution. Sen. Terry Sanford of Cumberland would extend from 1953 to 1960 the time limit on acceptance of daughters of Confederate soldiers in the Confederate Women's Home at Fayetteville. Other bills would increase the

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

While the new Congress is yet to show the sharp outline of its ideas on price regulation, the possibility that controls may end suddenly has many businessmen concerned.

Some are calling in their market consultants and others are exchanging ideas with their trade associations.

The present law authorizing controls expires on June 30. But Congress may end them sooner, either by legislative action or by persuading the executive branch to suspend them. The possibility that few if any controls will continue until July is strong enough to suggest that every business should have a plan of action ready in event the ceilings open up. The plan should take into consideration what competitors may do.

The sudden ending of controls is not likely to be followed by a sharp upsurge of prices. For one reason, many prices are now well below control points. For another, it will be bad public relations, company-wise and industry-wise, to rush for extra profits with unseemly speed. For a third, businessmen know that sharp increases may meet buying resistance. And for a fourth, it is always a good idea to see what competitors will do.

Nevertheless, the end of controls will see eventual increases in prices of some goods. Goods being now sold at less than normal margins of profit will be inched up. And since it is likely that wage controls will be lifted simultaneously with price controls, higher wages will force other prices up.

In fields where price rises are not expected, there will be a rush of advertisements and public statements. Few companies not planning to raise prices will miss the opportunity to point out that they are holding the price line.

On the other hand, even the end of Office of Price Stabilization controls will not end all governmental price fixing. Government non-recourse parity loans will tend to keep most farm prices around present levels and government purchases of newly-mined silver and certain metals and commodities for stockpiling will tend to control downward trends in those areas.

TEST VOICE RECORDERS

Some stores have attempted to avert bad check losses by fingerprinting those who offer checks. While some customers don't object, others, perfectly honest, resent having their fingerprints taken. Fingerprinting is associated with arrest.

A grocery is now experimenting with voice recorders at check-cashing desks in a few of its Detroit stores. Crooks, it is believed, will fear having their voices recorded as much as having their prints taken, and honest customers will not object. In fact, the first tests indicate some of them like it.

FEAR ECONOMY WAVE

MAY CUT TRADE CENSUS
Advertising and marketing research men, while favoring government economy as much as the next fellow, are asking Congressional friends not to slash the proposal to spend $21,000,000 for a census of business firms and manufacturers this year. The last manufacturing census was made in 1947 and the last business census in 1948.

Years ago Congress authorized regular manufacturing and business censuses, but unless the new Congress appropriates the money, the count can't be made.

NEW PRODUCTS

ASPIRIN: A new tasteless aspirin is being made up in a water soluble crystalline powder (by Armour Laboratories, 520 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago) especially for children. It is packed in individual containers of foil and plastic of one grain each to eliminate overdoses.

SHAVERS: A portable electric shaver, powered by ordinary flashlight batteries, is being marketed (by North American Phillips Co., 100 East 2nd St., New York 17) for sportsmen. A steel case attached to shaver holds three batteries, said to supply power for many weeks of shaving.

RACK: A rack of white perforated hardboard with 24 interchangeable holes and a spring clip is being introduced for home use (by B. B. Butler Mfg. Co., 3153 Randolph St., Bellwood, Ill.). It measures 20 x 23 inches and can be used in kitchens, closets, sewing rooms and workshops.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK (AP) — Man's best friend isn't the dog — or the installment plan either. His truest buddy is a mysterious old codger named Mr. R. E. Morse.

Once he enters your life he never leaves it. You can always hear the echo of his following footsteps.

Nobody gives out with more free advice. For this he expects no gratitude. But if you don't do what he says, he climbs right up on your back and stays there until you do. And he's a right heavy old fellow to tote. He'll wear down the strongest man.

Do you remember when you first met him? I do. I was very young. I had taken a quarter from some change my mother had left on top of the bureau.

The quarter quickly went in a whirlwind buying spree. Five ice cream cones later, gorged and happy, I lolled in a torpor on our front steps.

"A shadow came between me and the hot summer sun. I looked up and saw an antique figure in a shabby suit of black frowning down at me.

"Son, I'm old Mr. R. E. Morse," he said. "And I expect you'll be seeing a big lb. Go tell your mother now—judging from the way you're starting out. Why did you steal that two-bits from your mother?"

"I didn't steal it—I borrowed it," I told him. "I'll pay her back when I grow up."

"Sometimes little boys like you don't get to grow up," he said. "You don't want to die owing your mother money, do you? Anyways, you know you're just telling me a big lb. Go tell your mother right now you took that quarter."

Terrified, I ran into the house. Then I thought, "Oh, well, I'll tell her later." But she discovered the quarter was missing, and when my father came home he took off his belt and applied it where he thought it would do me the most good.

As I lay in bed, sniffling in self-pity, I heard old Mr. R. E. Morse whispering through the dark:

"If you'd of tole the truth when I tole you to, you'd have been forgiven."

Well, as I grew up old Mr. R. E. Morse came to visit me quite often—every time I played hooky or disobeyed my father, or got a bad mark in school, or failed a friend.

"You know I hate you," I said once. "You hate me with your mouth," he replied. "But if people really don't want me in their heart, why, they never see me."

Another time I told him: "The trouble with you is you never show up until after I'm in a pickle of some kind. Why don't you hand out a little of that free advice before a fellow gets himself in a jam?"

"Well, if that's the way you want it, I'll oblige," he answered. "Sure enough, he did. In the middle of 'the night before' old Mr. R. E. Morse started showing up and warning about the penalty of 'the morning after.' He started reminding me to remember important anniversaries in advance. If I even thought of shirking on the job, there he was going. "Tsk, tsk—you'll be sorry."

Lately I haven't been seeing so much of old Mr. R. E. Morse. The other day my wife suddenly put her arms around me and said: "Rover, you've been behaving pretty well lately, all things considered. Have you reformed after all these years?"

I looked over her shoulders, and there was old Mr. R. E. Morse, laughing fit to kill himself.

"Reformed nothing," he chuckled. "You're just getting too old and tired to be tempted. I guess I better go find myself somebody younger to advise."

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—Everyone agrees the life of the new British ambassador, Sir Roger Makins, will be one of the Capital's most popular and successful hostesses.

The tall, slender, beautiful young American-born Lady Makins made a hit first off when she invited Capital newsmen to tea at the embassy. Standing before a huge fireplace in the drawing room, she answered their questions, pertinent and some impertinent, with charm and good natured frankness. This was her first press conference, she confided. "And I'm having a delightful time. Can I offer someone a cigarette, or are you too awfully busy with those awful pens and pencils?"

This, however, will not be Lady Makins' first experience as a Capital hostess. As the former Miss Alice Davis, she often assumed that role for her father, the late Dwight Davis, who was secretary of war in the Coolidge administration and who later served as governor general of the Philippines. She was a diplomatic hostess too when her husband was third secretary at the embassy in 1931 and when he returned as economic minister in 1945.

Born in St. Louis, she was educated in Washington and Paris and made her debut in the Capital, as did her younger sister, Cynthia, now the wife of William McChesney Martin, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. "It's been great fun living in two countries," she said. "You ought to try it sometime."

Two of the Makins' six children were introduced after tea was served in the ballroom. They were Patricia, 7, and Dwight, nearly 2. Twin daughters Mollie and Cynthia, 17½, are in a secretarial school in London and expect to join the family here this summer. Virginia, 16, attends school in Sussex, Christopher, going on 11, is at prep school in Kent. Raising a family has kept her pretty busy, Lady Makins told newsmen, and she's had little time for needlepoint, painting or even tennis, which she plays fairly well. In England, however, Lady Makins was active with the Girl Guides and was president of the group in Hampshire, where she also helped with Britain's food production of the family's 500-acre farm.

Lady Makins says she is looking forward to traveling about this country with her husband, who is already being pried with speaking engagements. She says she herself will speak if called on to do so. "If I have anything worthwhile to say,"

LOGICAL COURSE

(Greensboro Daily News)
The State Board of Conservation and Development acted logically in deferring its organization for the next year until Governor Umstead has time in which to make decisions affecting its personnel, policies and leadership.

After all the board is accountable to the new chief executive, and it is his prerogative and responsibility to name one third of its members by next July.

Even if the Governor were on the job now, we do not see how he could find time, with the accumulation of other and more pressing duties, to give the thought that he should give to these appointments and formulation of policy behind them.

Governor Umstead is known to be especially interested in certain phases of activity coming under the conservation and development board. There is every reason to believe he will make the state's industrial development a key objective of his administration. It is quite possible that the added emphasis which he has indicated will call for reorganization of the department which this board directs; and certainly it will necessitate the appointment of thoroughly capable and qualified members to carry out any new or expanded program. They should be the best citizens who are thoroughly in sympathy with what is contemplated.

For the old board to go ahead with its own ideas, personnel and leadership, without consultation with or an opportunity for initiation of action by the new Governor or himself, would be unfair to the administration and, quite possibly, to the state itself. The task ahead calls for all the understanding, co-operation, co-ordination and leadership of which we are capable.

The board to be sure might have amended its own by-laws so that its failure to reorganize would have been in conformity thereto. But after all it made the by-laws and if it wishes to overlook them, especially on the way out, that must be relatively incidental.

Chapter Two

When finally he came to the hills, Rimbaud halted and scanned the plain behind him. The cavalry was a long way off now, strung-out dots below a greasy ray of dust. "Adios," he called, and was mildly surprised at the croaking tone of his voice. It sounded, he thought, like the creaking of rusty hinges on a corral gate. Riding up the first brush-tangled slant of the hills, he took his bearings and chose a pass that should lead to Smuggler's Hill, and hoped it would.

It did.

Near sundown Rimbaud lay full length in hoof-packed mud and drank cheek to cheek with his horse. American mud and American water. I reminded him of an opinion Durango had expressed this morning while he sucked the seepage out of cow tracks in a dry river bed: "The goodness of water is in thirst, amigo."

A queer curst, Durango. The son of a wealthy landowner, he had risen to a position of power second only to Diaz. Yet he had been so filled with pity for the down-trodden peons that he turned his back on the well-fed aristocracy. A true Robin Hood, he had raided the rich to feed the poor and won the highest acclaim a man could achieve: bandito terror! All the poor ones had rallied to his call.

Presently he investigated the saddlebags and found seven double eagles remaining: a hundred and forty dollars. There had been upwards of two thousand dollars' worth of them at noon which was the approximate price he had paid for the privilege of living.

"Cheap," Rimbaud said. Pocketing the seven gold pieces, he added, "Enough for a celebration in Junction town," and wondered if Eve Odegarde still ran her little restaurant next door to Bagger's Livery. Remembering how womanly and appealing an, self-sufficient she had been, Rimbaud grinned. There, by God, was a woman.

Every bachelor in Junction had made a try at courting her, without success. She had seemed surprised because he didn't, and had mentioned it once it roundabout fashion. But he had understood that she would accept nothing less than marriage, and a wife was the last thing he'd wanted. Thinking back to the night he left Junction, Rimbaud recalled that Eve Odegarde had wished him luck and said soberly, "A drifter finds only trouble, no matter how far he rides."

Well, her prediction had been correct. He'd found trouble aplenty these past two years, and little else.

Jim Rimbaud didn't see the loop that darted down from above him. He heard it tap past his ears, then felt the rope bite both arms.

as it yanked him headlong from the saddle. He was trying to get a hand up for protection when the ground exploded against his face. For a brief, blank interval Rimbaud remotely aware of voices, of being lifted, and of being dropped. Afterward he understood that he was lying face down in the road. Blood and dirt made a gritty mixture in his mouth, and there was a throbbing ache along his left temple. Turning over he supported himself on an elbow and peered about him. The roan stood cropping grass a dozen yards south of the highway, that methodical crunching the only sound. It occurred to Rimbaud that he wasn't in the defile; glancing at the dust, he saw boot tracks where two men had carried him out here.

Still dazed by the impact of his headlong fall, Rimbaud got slowly to his feet. Noticing that his holster was empty, he muttered, "So are my pockets—and my belly." He wondered if the bandits had left him enough to buy supper, and was astonished to find the seven gold pieces along with some silver coins in his pocket.

That baffled Jim Rimbaud. Why had they waylaid him?

And after yanking him from the saddle, why had they carried him out here?

He thought about that as he walked over to his roan, and could find no logical explanation. It did not make sense. Two men had ambushed him with a rope, had carried him for a few feet, and then dropped him like a sack of grain. Rimbaud fingered the bloody bruise on his head and swore morosely as he rode into the dark

Phantoms Lose 70-38; Bucs Take Easy Win Over ACC

Greenville Stars Miss Game Due To Influenza

By HERMAN HICKMAN
Reflector Sports Editor

The Graining High Red Devils of Kinston put on a red hot offensive basketball show here last night that sent Greenville's flu-ridden Phantoms tumbling to a 70-38 defeat.

For a few fleeting minutes in the early stages of the game the Phantoms managed to stall an inevitable Red Devil attack which burst loose in the second quarter and flooded the goal thereafter.

Kinston's magnificent Douglas Gregg fanned the Red Devil offense spark into a leaping blaze by stoking 22 points as fuel. Gregg connected for nine field goals and hit four for four at the free throw line.

An idea of Kinston's shooting efficiency is garnered from statistical data which shows the Red Devils connected on 12 of 13 free throw attempts.

The Phantoms sorely missed the services of regulars Smith Worthington, Leon Hardee, George Sideris, Guy Smith, Walter Perkins, Dixie Hogwood, and Jimmy Cheatham. These are the boys who have paced the Phantoms' action this season and all were forced to the sidelines by the flu bug last night. Only six members of the Greenville squad were dressed to play. Jayvee members Bobby Howell, Tommie Saled, and Clark Nobles were ready for reserve duty.

Bobby Perry, Preston Field and Edgar Moore filled in for the varsity regulars and gave a good account of themselves. Their nervousness made ball handling difficult and shots from the court just wouldn't drop. The ball numerous times rolled around the hoop or bounded around the edge refusing to fall for the hapless Phantoms.

Perry, who was competing in a playing role for the first time this year, rang nine points to lead Phantoms scores. The All-Eastern football halfback had tough luck with shots from the floor but hit five of seven free throws.

Bobby Howell, Jayvee star, was called on by Coach Bo Farley in the second half and responded with four points and played a fine floor game.

The game got off to a rather slow start with both teams having difficulty finding the range with shots from the floor. Fields and Conway kept Greenville in the running until midway the first period when Gregg, Cecil Gooding and Buddy Potter began to hit with alarming accuracy.

As the game progressed the Red Devils grew more and more confident and popped the net with regularity from points distant on the court.

The Greenville lads had plenty of chances to score but couldn't take advantage. At one point the Phantoms took six shots at the basket before a Kinston defender finally pulled in a rebound.

Experience was the sum of the game. Kinston had it. Greenville didn't. "I'm sure the game would have been much closer had Greenville's regulars been able to play," said Kinston Coach Amos Sexton, "of course we expected a tough trial and the boys were up for this game."

Green Imps Score Thirteenth Win

By WAYNE BISHOP

Greenville's sharp junior varsity team roared to its thirteenth consecutive win as it overpowered Kinston 60-58 in the Greenville gym last night.

The Baby Phants trailed in the second quarter by 6 points and were behind 25 to 23 at halftime. It was a different story after the intermission as the Greenville club showed its supremacy.

Forward Tompy Saled kept up his brilliant scoring attack as he pumped in 14 points. Big Clark Nobles, a 6'5" sophomore, and freshman Harold Edwards added 13 and 12 points respectively to the well-rounded little spook's total.

Perkins, Sideris, Smith and Phantom first stringers Smith Worthington, Leon Hardee, Dixie Hogwood and Jimmy Cheatham missed the week's action due to influenza attacks.

Grimesland Boys Win Loop Contest From Chicod Five

GRIMESLAND—Coach Joe Lupton's Grimesland basketball team split a Pitt County Conference win-bill played here last night. The Grimesland girls lost the opener 45-34 to Chicod but the Grimesland boys more than made up for the loss with a 54-40 victory of their own in the second contest.

In the girls' game, Chicod's Patsy Mills and Grimesland's Becky Mills put on an individual scoring fight of their own but Chicod's Mills came out on top, 21-20, to lead her team to the victory. Jessie Kennedy added 14 for Chicod.

Chicod led throughout the ball game and never was seriously threatened. In the boys game, Coach Lupton turned loose Bobby Andrews and Jerry Gaskins and the high-scoring duo didn't disappoint anyone but Chicod. Andrews got 17 points and Gaskins got 14 to pace the scoring for both teams. Chicod's Walter Smith and Bobby Burroughs got 10 points apiece.

Grimesland will play at Stokes Tuesday night.

Coastal League Still Undecided

GOLDSBORO (UP)—The fate of the Class D Coastal Plain League for the 1953 season hung in the balance today pending approval by six clubs of a new alignment—replacing Tarboro and Rocky Mount with Elizabeth City and Wilmington.

Should Wilson, Kinston, Edenton, New Bern, Roanoke Rapids or Goldsboro decide not to field a team under the new set up, the circuit is expected to fold.

A decision must be reached by the deadline of noon Monday. Tarboro has been beset by financial troubles and Rocky Mount entered a vote by proxy at a meeting here last night to suspend league operations for a year.

After hours of discussion, the two clubs were voted out and invitations were extended to Elizabeth City and Wilmington. Various clubs opposed the new applications because of the travel involved.

Edenton advised it could not operate unless Elizabeth City was admitted. Only Roanoke Rapids said it is ready to field a team under any circumstances, whether the two new clubs are admitted, or whether the league is cut to a six team circuit.

Grifton, Stokes Divide Victories

GRIFTON—Stokes' Jane Bullock, usually the third high-scorer for her team, took over the bulk of the scoring duties here last night when Grifton bottled up her high-scoring running mates and led Stokes to a 35-34 victory over the Grifton girls. The Bulldogs, however, evened the count for the night when they romped to a 63-39 win in the second game of the Pitt County Conference doubleheader.

Grifton's guards—Peggy Buck, Gertrude Garris, and Louise Corey—did a good job of bottling up Stokes' but when the going got rough, Janie's superior height paid off in points for Stokes. Grifton had led 20-17 at halftime but Stokes quickly cut that margin down in the fourth quarter.

Colleen Braxton led the Grifton scoring with 15 points.

With the first team going the entire distance, Grifton had little trouble with Stokes after the first quarter of their ball game.

Stokes had led 18-16 at the end of the first period but Grifton coach Adrian Brown fired his team up and they began pulling away from their visitors almost as soon as second quarter action could be started. J. R.

World Champion Bobsledder Dies In Race Trial

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany (UP)—World Champion bobsledder Felix Endrich of Switzerland was killed today in a crash at 60 miles an hour on treacherous, ice-glazed "Bavaria" curve of the Olympic bobsled run here.

Endrich's four-man sled shot over the glassy rim of the curve during a practice run and hurtled into a row of trees. Three other crewmen, all Swiss international bobsled stars, were reported seriously injured.

The 1953 International Four-man Championships started on the 1,650 meter course today.

The course is the same one where Europe's Supreme Allied Commander Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway and his wife were given a bobsled ride as passengers this week.

A similar crash on "Bavaria" two years ago killed Swedish star Rolf Odnerick.

Endrich, a 32-year-old business man, won the world's two-man bobsled title in competition here last Sunday.

Bethel-Farmville Split Two Games; Wynne Scores 40

FARMVILLE—Bethel's Mary Jo Wynne scored 40 points last night but they were all for a losing cause as Farmville's girls defeated Mary Jo and her teammates 64-56 in a Pitt County Conference doubleheader played here last night. Bethel's boys won the second game, however, edging Farmville 37-35.

Farmville's Edna Wooten scored 32 points and Sue Flanagan added 12 to pace the high-scoring Red Devils. Other than Mary Jo, the visiting Indians had little to offer in the scoring line. Farmville led throughout the ball and had no trouble whatsoever, except for Mary Jo's personal point-making spree.

In the boys game, Bethel's Robert Nelson scored 15 points for the night but his most important field goal was with little more than a minute of playing time remaining. That goal put Bethel out of the reach of the Farmville team which dropped its eighth game of the year.

Tom Allen got 10 points and Charlie Fitzgerald got eight to pace the Farmville attack.

Atlantic Christian, a much smaller crew than the Pirates, was forced to rely on long shots and free throws for the majority of the Bulldogs' points. Bill Price and Eddie Johnson, a pair of set-shot artists, led the scoring for ACC with 13 points apiece. Jim Peebles, the visitors' biggest man at 6-4, chipped in 10 points.

Jim Hebbe, the Bulldogs' leading scorer, got only six points, all on long set shots.

N.C. State-Wake Battle Tonight

By UNITED PRESS
The long-awaited return battle between Wake Forest and North Carolina State takes the Southern Conference basketball spotlight tonight, even though the winner entertains no immediate hope of overtaking high-flying North Carolina.

Stung by a 51-50 defeat by the Demon Deacons Dec. 9 at Wake Forest, the defending champ N. C. State team has been pointing for tonight's struggle.

"Poor Wake Forest" has become a familiar chant at the huge Reynolds coliseum where a sell-out crowd of 12,500 will see tonight's game. State is a favorite to snap a two-game losing streak, but Wake Forest has the benefit of an 11-day rest. The reserve-shy Deacons also have the nation's ninth highest scorer in Dickie Herndon, who shoots in Jackie Williams and Billy Lyles.

League-leading North Carolina breezed to its 12th conference win last night, beating Davidson 73 to 52, and will be after No. 13 tonight against Clemson.

The Tar Heels were never pressed by Davidson as the Wildcats had a remarkably poor night at shooting. They had only an 11 per cent accuracy. Davidson got only two points in the first quarter and only 15 in the first half. The Tar Heels' Al Lifson was high scorer with 16 points.

William and Mary whipped Virginia Tech 91 to 74, and The Citadel beat Newberry 74 to 61.

A third conference game tonight is Virginia Tech at Richmond. The Spiders must win to keep pace with Duke in the battle for the eighth spot in the league tournament.

Other games tonight have Navy at Duke, Piedmont at The Citadel, Georgia Tech at Furman, and Bethany at West Virginia.

Magic Putter Is Golfer's Weapon

TUCSON, Ariz. (UP)—Determined E. J. (Dutch) Harrison stood guard over the $10,000 Tucson Open Golf Tournament treasure chest at the halfway mark today with his magic putter as a cutthroat.

The Ardmore, Okla., veteran putted his way to his second straight par-shattering round Friday to increase his lead after two rounds of play to two strokes.

Going into the round with a one-stroke lead and a first-day card of 64, Harrison fired a four-under-par 66 Friday by one-putting eight holes.

That gave him a two-day total of 130, two strokes better than his nearest rival, Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va., who had a 66 for a 132 total at the halfway point.

The field was trimmed from 135 players to 60 pros and two amateurs for today's third round as par took a merciless hammering. Fifty-one of the remaining contestants had scores of even par or below.

In third place with a two-day total of 133 was Tommy Holt of Maplewood, N. J., who backed to a 68 after taking a 65 on the penning round.

Fourth place was being held down by live good performers, Johnny Palmer of Charlotte, N. C.; Jerry Barber of La Canada, Calif.; Jim Ferrie of San Francisco; Tony Holquist of Chicago and Johnny Bulla of Verona, Pa., all with 134's.

Charlie Huffman Leads Pirates Against ACC

By JIMMY ELLIS

A practically unsewn member of East Carolina College's swash-buckling Pirate crew picked up the marbles last night as the Bucs swamped Atlantic Christian 92-59 in ECC's Memorial Gymnasium. The victory strengthened East Carolina's hold on first place in the North State Conference and brought the Bohunk Buck back to Greenville.

Charlie Huffman, a junior from Thomasville, was the man of the hour last night as he outdid his better known team mates in scoring, rebounding, and all-around defensive play. Huffman scored 32 points, led the rebound play for both teams, and was one of the more outstanding defensive players for the Pirates. He did all his work in less than three quarters, too, because he sat out the entire fourth quarter and there were a couple of times in the first three periods when he was removed for a short while.

Right behind Huffman in leading the point parade was East Carolina's "Mr. Basketball," Sonny Russell. The All-State and All-Conference forward from New Bern tossed in 19 points. Center Bobby Hodges fouled out of the game with four minutes and 51 seconds remaining in the third quarter but he still managed to pick up 15 points before he was invited out.

With Huffman and Russell doing the bulk of the work, East Carolina ACC's throat almost as soon as the game got underway. There was a rather awkward pause right at the beginning when the Bulldogs went ahead 2-1 but that was the only time they ever got close to leading. The night was made for Huffman and his mates and they made the most of their opportunity—with tonight's foe, Western Carolina sitting in the stands watching.

Atlantic Christian, a much smaller crew than the Pirates, was forced to rely on long shots and free throws for the majority of the Bulldogs' points. Bill Price and Eddie Johnson, a pair of set-shot artists, led the scoring for ACC with 13 points apiece. Jim Peebles, the visitors' biggest man at 6-4, chipped in 10 points.

Jim Hebbe, the Bulldogs' leading scorer, got only six points, all on long set shots.

TOPS IN TIPS . . .

DON'T SKIMP ON TIMBER FRAMES OF NEW HOMES
Springtime is building time and enthusiasm for long-dreamed-of projects mounts high. But before you plunge in, here are a few very vital points to remember:

The timber skeleton of your house is going to be all covered up, but if you skimp on it, you'll have sagging floors that squeak at every step.

Windows and window frames can be purchased for very little money, but their price can be multiplied many times in years to come in the form of lost heat, drafty floors, and wet walls. Carefully designed, precision and window frames complete with weatherstripping will insure comfort for years.

Gadgets can be added to the home anytime, but the essential foundations are costly to repair and improve, so start out right in your building this spring with good quality well-constructed flooring, timbers and windows.

Call 3743. Everything for Home Building and Fix-up! Free estimates cheerfully given.

TODAY'S KITCHENS ARE "DESIGNS FOR LIVING"

Today, just walk into the kitchen of any model home or into one of a friend whose hobby is her home! You're greeted by an aura of friendliness and charm as in the days when the kitchen was the very heart of the home—as indeed, it's becoming now!

Gay calico curtains hang at the windows, plants bloom on the sill, mellow pine cupboards reflect the gleam of copper pans—and there's a heart-warming effect of coziness. That's the American kitchen of 1953!

If your kitchen still has traces of that barrenness that characterized kitchen-fashions of yesterday, don't despair! Make it your Spring project to redecorate your kitchen into one of warmth and charm—and delight your family!

Friday's Cases In Police Court

Six cases of speeding appeared on the Greenville City Court docket yesterday with a capias instantly being issued for James Dixon, who is charged with speeding, when he was called and failed to appear.

Francis R. Robert, Harry D. Lape, and Wallace L. Sowell, charged with speeding were each given 30 days in jail, sentence suspended on payment of $20.00 and ordered not to drive a motor vehicle for one week.

Robert Young and Jimmy Anderson, found guilty of speeding were given 30 days in jail, sentence suspended on payment of $15.00. They were ordered not to drive a motor vehicle for seven days.

Joe Frank Hopkins, assault on a female, was given six months in jail, sentence suspended on payment of $25.00 fine. He was ordered to pay Christine Harrison $5. and Dr. Graves $25.

Allen Moore was given 30 days for being drunk, sentence suspended on payment of $10. Vance Sheppard, charged with being drunk, was fined $10.00 and costs and ordered to pay $1.00 to Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Louis Johnson, Jr., charged with violation of a court order, was given 30 days on the roads. Also found guilty of assault with a deadly weapon, Johnson was sentenced to six months on the roads, sentence suspended on payment of $25.00 fine and ordered to pay $25 to Smith Clinic. He was placed on probation for 12 months.

Fred H. White, found guilty of non-support was given six months, sentence suspended on payment of $18.50 to Pitt Memorial Hospital and payment of $25.00 per week into the Pitt County Welfare Department for support of his children.

He was ordered to remain on good behavior and not violate any law for two years.

George Franklin Griffin, found guilty of larceny, was given 60 days, sentence suspended that he remain on good behavior for two years and on probation for two years.

Sambo Joyner, found guilty of damaging property, was ordered to pay $267 property damage and $10. court costs. He was ordered to remain on good behavior for six months.

John A. Perry, charged with making an improper left turn, was found not guilty.

Judge Whedbee found no evidence of disorderly conduct against Clyde Whitfield and he adjudged the prosecution was frivolous and malicious and taxed the prosecuting witness with the court costs.

Abandon Truck After Chase

PACTOLUS—After being trailed a short distance by Pitt ABC officers Thursday before dawn, two Negro men abandoned a darkened truck on the highway near here and fled into the woods.

Officers reported this morning the truck, a new pickup, had been running without lights and the driver evidently had spotted the officers' car, also without lights, approaching from the rear.

J. M. Ward, member of the local force, said the truck is registered in the name of W. T. Angle, Greenville, Route 5. The truck was turned over to ATTU agents for disposition.

In the back of the truck officers found 25 100-pound bags of sugar and 30 cases of half-gallon fruit jars, all new. The sugar and jars were confiscated.

Charge Robbery Of $170 Friday

Samuel Wilson, of 606 Cooper's Lane, was arrested last night by city detectives and charged with the theft of around $170 from the Pitt Coal and Wood Yard on 14th Street.

Chief of Police S. G. Gibbs reported that Wilson admitted entering the office of the coal firm and taking the money which was in a wallet.

The robbery occurred around 11 o'clock yesterday morning and was broken with Wilson's confession late last night.

Wilson told the officers that he used some of the money to purchase new clothes. He did not have the wallet on him at the time of his arrest.

Gibbs stated that it was reported that a $100 bill, one $50 bill and a $20 bill were contained in the wallet along with some smaller bills at the time the robbery occurred.

Map Relief For 1,400 Victims

PUSAN Korea (UP)—The South Korean cabinet met in emergency session today to set up relief for 14,000 victims of a fire that swept through Pusan's black market center last night.

Seven thousand persons were estimated to be homeless. Relief was needed for twice that number because thousands lost their stores and shops.

The cabinet authorized distribution of 30,000 blankets and a 10-day rice stock for 1,000 persons.

The fire, driven by a stiff wind, blew through the crowded section last night and flames ate out an area 1-1/2 miles long and one-half mile wide.

Turned Around

NEW YORK (AP)—Bewildered and grief-stricken, an Army Sergeant was returned here last night aboard a Europe-bound military ship which turned around 40 miles at sea so he could go back to his tragically-lorn family in Arkansas.

Sgt. Finnis F. Pummil of Newport, Ark., was headed overseas on the military sea transport service vessel Eltinge. Word was radioed that his 2-month-old daughter, Barba Jean, was dead, and his wife, Ora, 26, seriously ill.

The Eltinge reversed its course and raced back to Ambrose Lightship, where a tugboat waited to bring Pummil ashore.

The Red Cross arranged for a loan so the sergeant could fly home.

Gun Crew Will Help Fight Fire

MORGAN CITY, La. (UP)—An Army 75-millimeter rifle crew was called out to fire more shots today at a twin gas well fire that has blazed out of control 10 miles off the Louisiana coast since Monday.

Fire-fighting expert Myron Kinley last night succeeded in yanking off the T-shaped nozzle of one well with a crane and steel lasso in a first triumph over the spectacular fire.

The gun crew from Camp Polk, La., which has tried repeatedly to shoot off the nozzle, will make another attempt on the second well standing 10 feet from the first on the offshore drilling platform.

Until both nozzles could be knocked off so the flames would rise vertically instead of being directed horizontally, no one could get close enough to snuff out the fires with dynamite.

A spokesman said that despite Kinley's progress the Pure Oil Co. started a 30-day job of drilling a third well with which to pump the gas into the gas pocket 10,000 feet below ground from an angle. This would seal off the flow of gas.

The company estimate the fires thus far had consumed more than 500,000 cubic feet of gas, each day burning enough fuel to supply a city of 100,000 population.

John L. Lewis Is Re-Elected

WASHINGTON (UP)—John L. Lewis began another four-year term today as president of the 400,000-member United Mine Workers.

The union said Lewis, president since 1920, received 39,293 votes in the referendum among locals. Also re-elected were Vice President Thomas Kennedy and Secretary-Treasurer John Owens.

A spokesman said the 72-year-old Lewis was unopposed for the office. The UMW constitution provides for retirement from the president's office at the age of 70, but the executive board extended the limit to permit Lewis to continue in his position.

Pass Measure Legalizing Acts

RALEIGH (UP)—The House has passed and sent to the Senate a bill to legalize the acts of E. L. Arthur of Jacksonville whose commission as a justice of the peace expired in January 1952.

The bill, by Rep. Carl Venters, would validate all of Arthur's judgments in misdemeanor cases and at least half a dozen marriages he performed during the period when he was not qualified under law.

Scorns Demands Of Firefighters

HAMILTON Ont. (UP)—Mayor Lloyd Jackson said today the Hamilton Firefighters' Association's demand for a three-day holiday in event of the death of a member's mother-in-law was a lot of "bunk and rubbish."

The firemen also want a pay increase.

Dogcatcher Quit At Extra Duties

CHESTER, Pa. (UP)—Chester was without a dog catcher today. Allen Shinn, dead animal retriever for the city, asked when officials told him he was to be the new dog catcher, or else.

Shinn said a live dog and a dead cat are two different things, and he quit.

In England, the practice of holding "wakes" over a dead body seems to be older than Christianity and in pre-Christian times was designed to guard the body against evil spirits.

Killed Mother To Prevent Agonies

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—"I thought if I killed her she wouldn't have to go through with that torture," that was how Robert Harold Matlock, 19, explained the death of his mother, police said.

Matlock's statement was recorded after the sobbing youth walked into the police station yesterday and said he had killed his 51-year-old mother to prevent her suffering from a nervous breakdown.

"I couldn't stand to see her lay there and suffer and die, and when her head was turned I hit her over the head with a pop bottle. . . . I wasn't sure that I killed her, and stabbed her several times with a knife. I don't remember how many times—maybe 20," the statement said.

The woman and boy lived in a suburban auto court where police found her battered body stuffed in a closet.

Police took the youth into custody but no charges were filed pending an investigation.

Matlock said his mother had been suffering from a nervous breakdown.

Overheated Oil Stove Brought Out Firemen

Firemen were called last night to the home of James Brewer, 820 Evans Street, when an oil stove became overheated.

Local firemen who responded to the telephone call around 9 o'clock stated that the stove caused no damage other than to itself. Heat from the burning oil caused the paint on the stove to crack off in spots, firemen reported.

It was the only call answered by the department in the last 24 hours.

It is believed that the Viking ships were, to some extent, modeled on Roman galleys, especially in regard to their sails.

amount of benefits and broaden the field of eligibles for participation in the retirement system.

LOGIC—There is logic behind all these proposals. Since the other State institutions of higher education are accepting Indians and Negroes, there seems little sense in maintaining complete segregation at Pembroke.

From a social service viewpoint there is more reason to admit daughters of Confederate soldiers to the Home now, when the daughters are in the Home now, when the daughters are in the Home now.

ters are relatively old women, than there was for admitting them when the policy was first adopted. Increased retirement benefits proposed will still not keep with the increased cost of living for beneficiaries.

COSTLY—Logical as these proposals are or may be, the fact remains that most of them add tremendously to the burden imposed upon the taxpayers. Exception to that rule might be the Pembroke College idea. Segregation is an expensive luxury. Successive budget commissions have found the per-capita pupil cost at Pembroke exorbitantly high. The per capita cost can be substantially reduced, and perhaps some neighboring day students given opportunity for college training they otherwise could not afford, by liberalizing the admission requirements.

By DAN SPIEGLE

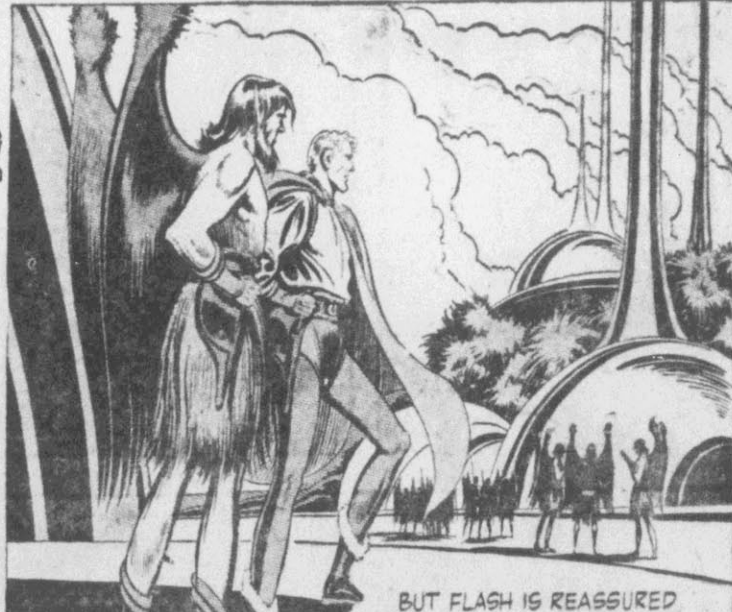

FLASH GORDON.....by Mac Raboy and Don Moore

ANXIOUS TO MAKE PEACE ON VENUS, FLASH OFFERS A FULL PARDON TO THE DEPOSED TYRANT STANG. BUT WITH THE PARDON GOES A WARNING. "VENUS MUST BE FREE," FLASH SAYS, "NOT ONLY FOR ITS INHABITANTS BUT ALSO FOR VISITORS FROM EARTH." STANG EAGERLY PROMISES TO COOPERATE...BUT ALREADY A PLOT IS HATCHING IN HIS CRAFTY MIND.

VIKKI, THE FORMER QUEEN, IS ALSO PARDONED AND REUNITED WITH STANG. THEIR FIRST MEANINGFUL GLANCE IS A SECRET, UNSPOKEN PACT TO REGAIN THEIR POWER AT ANY COST. DALE, WARNED BY HER WOMAN'S INTUITION, PLEADS WITH FLASH: "DON'T TRUST THEM, DARLING. THEY'RE AN EVIL PAIR AND I'M SURE THEY'LL BETRAY YOUR CONFIDENCE!"

BUT FLASH IS REASSURED BY HIS CHIEF ALLY, KRILLIR. "DON'T WORRY ABOUT STANG," KRILLIR BOASTS. "THIS CORPS OF LOYAL TREEMEN I'M ORGANIZING CAN HANDLE ANY EMERGENCY." HOWEVER, FLASH DECIDES TO PLAY SAFE. "KRILLIR," HE SAYS, "YOU'D BETTER ASSIGN A COUPLE OF MEN TO KEEP AN EYE ON STANG AND VIKKI--JUST IN CASE!"

THE WILY STANG IS NOT LONG IN NOTICING THAT HE IS UNDER SECRET SURVEILLANCE. HE ENTERS HIS QUARTERS, AND WHEN THE GUARD FOLLOWS, BOLDLY OFFERS THE STARTLED TREEMAN A FABULOUS BRIBE. "THESE GEMS ARE YOURS," STANG SAYS, "IF YOU WILL BUT DELIVER A MESSAGE TO MY FRIENDS!"

GREEDILY THE GUARD REACHES FOR THE BAG OF GEMS AND AT THE SAME TIME SNATCHES UP THE MESSAGE, WHICH CONTAINS INSTRUCTIONS FOR AN ATTACK ON FLASH AND KRILLIR--TO BE LAUNCHED DURING THE MEETING OF THE PLANETARY PELEGATES, WHICH IS ALREADY BEGINNING THE TASK OF CHOOSING A NEW LEADER IN THE GREAT HALL OF THE PALACE. MEANWHILE, FLASH STEPS TO THE ROSTRUM TO NOMINATE KRILLIR... UNWARE OF THE MORTAL PERIL TO HIMSELF AND HIS CANDIDATE!
