Malenkov Stressed By Pravda

Official Red Organ Indicates Successor; Call For Russian Unity

LONDON (UP)—The first full Russian political statement concerning Premier Josef Stalin's illness indicated today that the prime objective of Kremlin leaders is to rally all Russians in support of the ruling Communist party.

An editorial in Pravda, official organ of the central committee of the party, also: Emphasized that Georgi M. Malenkov is in the line of succession to Lenin and Stalin as party boss.

The theme of Pravda's long first page editorial was given in its first paragraph, as broadcast by Moscow.

The power of the party of Lenin and Stalin lies in its close ties with millions of workers' masses, in its inseparable unity with the people.

Eisenhower Says Effect Of Stalin's Illness Under Study

Closely Eye Soviet Moves

By DONALD J. GONZALES WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower told a news conference today that the attitude of the American government toward the illness of Josef Stalin is one of very definite watchfulness.

The chief executive said he would be willing to travel half way to meet the new Russian leaders, just as he would have been willing to meet Stalin if such a conference would help the cause of peace and be consistent with American traditions.

The President deplored the recent revival of anti-Semitism in Russia and the satellite countries and called it heart-breaking.

MOSCOW (UP)—Stricken Premier Josef Stalin took another turn for the worse today and the newspaper Pravda, in a rallying call to the Russian people, told them to unite behind their "experienced leadership."

Polish Airman Escapes With Soviet MIG-15

ROENNE, Denmark (AP)—The first Soviet jet fighter plane to come into Western hands undamaged was brought to a breath-taking landing by a daring Polish refugee today on the Danish Baltic island of Bornholm.

While airport personnel looked on in horror, the jet screeched down the 1,300-yard long runway—about a third the length normally required for planes of that type. The landing was without accident.

Cold Reception For Proposal To Lengthen Draft

WASHINGTON (UP)—Congress poured cold water today on Gen. James A. Van Fleet's proposal to make draftees serve up to three years instead of two as at present.

Christine Was Always A Woman

LOS ANGELES (UP)—A woman arrested on a drunk charge told police her name was Christine Jorgensen the same as the name taken by George Jorgensen when he was changed to a woman by surgery and medicine in Denmark.

Senate Republican leader Robert A. Taft, a committee member, said he has not received a request yet to speed up the Bohlen nomination.

Thousands of anxious Muscovites gathered early at newsstands, despite the cold and snow which fell throughout the night.

Stalin entered his fourth day of deep coma and his nine attending physicians used oxygen, drugs and blood-drawing leeches in a desperate effort to keep him alive.

Stalin's illness was widely discussed within his administration.

Hodge-Podge Legislation Requires Streamlining

School Study Need Proven

By LYNN NISBET RALEIGH—The House Committee on Education at its Wednesday morning session furnished proof of the dire need for one bill which is approved.

The committee spent more than half its time listening to State Superintendent Charles F. Carroll, explain the purposes of HB-495 (which is identical with SB-231) relating numerous sections of the law.

Earlier in the session the committee had approved, without dissenting votes of record, but not without questions raised and warnings given about invasion of prerogatives, several local bills. These included banning noneducational picture shows in schools of Brunswick county.

raising the limit from $15,000 to $20,000 on school construction work in Lee County without approval of the county commissioners; permitting officials of any administrative school unit in Rockingham county to dispose of personal property (as contrasted with real estate) up to $500 for any one transaction, at private sale—without previous advertising or subsequent purchase.

The committee heeded warnings on several other "local" bills, one of which would have made the sheriff the school attendance enforcement officer in Watauga. Another would have made members of the State Board of Education liable for imprisonment if they failed to re-open a school in Martin county, which had been closed in the consolidation program.

Running through all of these cases and through numerous others about which bills have been offered (some local and some statewide in application) is the age-old responsibility. Almost every discussion has emphasized that, whether the folks involved like it or not, authority and responsibility go hand-in-hand.

would take from the State Board of Education some of the authority it has exercised over consolidation of schools. Most of these bills recognize that if the authority is restored to local level, obligation for financing the schools must be placed there also.

The committee on Wednesday also approved a bill requiring rural school buses to be routed so that no child more than a mile and a half from the school would have to walk more than half a mile to a bus stop.

There are bills pending which would take from the State Board of Education some of the authority it has exercised over consolidation of schools.

Sees No Gouging Of Consumers

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower said today that removal of price controls had not produced any discernible evidence of gouging of consumers.

Price controls have been removed from virtually all consumer items. Beer and coffee are among the bigger items still to be decontrolled. That action is expected this week or next.

Mrs. Fleming Gives Program For Book Club

The Thalian Book Club met at the Silo Grill February 23. In the absence of Mrs. B. B. Stagg Jr., president, Mrs. V. C. Fleming Jr. presided.

After the roll was called and the business completed the program was presented by Mrs. Fleming. It was a continuation of the study of the Ten Commandments. The ninth Commandment was taken up.

Mrs. Fleming divided her talk into three phases. The first phase was the interpretation in which legal aspects of the word witness was defined. The law of Moses had a novel way of making certain that the witnesses would tell the truth. When the sentence was imposed on an accused man, the witnesses had to carry it out. If, however, the witnesses were found in a lie, the same sentence he had passed was inflicted on him.

The second phase was the ways in which the ninth Commandment can be violated. This she stated, could be done by slander, by hints or suggestions, by adroit questions, by silence and lastly by flattery. The third phase was the application of the ninth Commandment to present day living. We must recover a sense of moral order in politics in the United Nations and in local government. Mrs. Fleming stated, She went on to say it was a curious paradox and a sad commentary on today's moral standards that we are more careful in what we say about atoms than we are in what we say about men.

Mrs. Fleming closed her program with the quotation, "He who steals my purse, steals trash; but he that filches from me my good name robs me of that which neither enriches him in riches and makes me poor indeed."

The books were then distributed and the meeting adjourned.

Scholarships For Contest Winners

Two scholarships at North Carolina colleges will be included among awards made to student winners in the state division of the National French Contest. Mrs. Marguerite A. Perry of the East Carolina College faculty, contest chairman, has announced that Davidson College has offered a scholarship of $27.50; and East Carolina College, one of $100.

The contest, held annually under the sponsorship of the American Association of Teachers of French, is scheduled for April 15 in North Carolina secondary schools. More than a thousand students of French from all sections of the state are expected to participate by taking examinations given at their local schools.

Changes in the dates for entering the state contest and for taking the examinations have been made, Mrs. Perry states. Though the deadline for making application was originally set for March 4, teachers may still enter their students in the contest, she says, if they immediately send in requests for examinations.

A conflict in date with the State High School Drama Festival at the University of North Carolina, also scheduled for April 15, need not prevent students from participating in the National French Contest. Through arrangements made with her by their teachers, students may take the French examinations on any day of the week of April 12-18.

Water Colors Now Showing At Gallery

"La Coiffure" by James A. Walker of Greenville is one of thirty water color paintings included in an exhibition by the local artist now on display at the Community Art Gallery in the Sheppard Memorial Library. This work was described by Bertha Fanning Taylor, art critic of note, as "curious, with effectiveness distinctly Persian in character and complexity."

The young artist exhibited a professional for the first time in February, 1950, when examples of his work were shown in the Eighth Annual Contemporary Virginia and North Carolina Artists' Annual held at the Norfolk Museum of Arts and Sciences.

Since that time his paintings have been included in exhibitions at the University of Michigan, State Art Gallery in Raleigh, Butler Art Institute, Norfolk Museum of Arts and Sciences, Little Art Gallery, High Museum of Art, Rochester Memorial Art Gallery, Springfield Art Association, Bradley University, Wayne University, and elsewhere.

He won an honorable mention in the Eighth Annual Piedmont Festival, and an Irene Leche Memorial Purchase Award in the Tenth Artists' Annual.

On the thirty water color painting by Mr. Walker now at the city art gallery "Vol de Nuit" was lent by Dr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Hunter of Greenville; "Ladies in Waiting" by David T. Ellis, R.A., of Atlanta; and "Hecate's Slave," by the Norfolk Museum of Arts and Sciences.

Thirty water color paintings by James A. Walker of Greenville make up an exhibition now being shown at the Community Art Gallery in the Sheppard Memorial Library here.

Mr. Walker is art supervisor in the city schools and supervising teacher of art for East Carolina College.

His paintings, unusual in technique and original in conception, are attracting much attention locally. They will be on display through March 28.

The paintings by Mr. Walker now being shown here will be included also in the first one-man exhibition scheduled to open Sunday, April 12 in the Tidewater Artists Gallery of the Norfolk, Va., Museum of Arts and Sciences. He will exhibit there by invitation of the Tidewater Artists' Association.

Undertake Long Range Program

A joint report for the month of February as submitted by the County Agent and Tobacco specialist for the county reveals a long-range planning program currently being undertaken by the two departments.

The report turned into the County Board of Commissioners shows that plans for a Junior Tobacco show and sale in cooperation with the Greenville Tobacco market has been started.

Both members of the Future Farmers of America and Four-H club members would be eligible, the report shows.

In commenting on tobacco in the county the report stated that some Pitt farmers have reported the presence of grub worms in their plant beds. Treatment for these insects has been recommended by the County Agent to all farmers.

During the month a dairy show was held under the supervision of the County Farm Agent and farm specialists from State College in Raleigh. Many local dairymen took part in the discussion and program.

A total of 22 joint meetings of the Farm Agent and the Four-H Department were held in February with attendance placed at 713.

Four-H Clubs in the county held 17 regular club meetings in the month and a general theme of "Identification of Bread and Judging of Dairy Cattle" was used.

REAL SERVICE
NEW BERN, N. C. (U. P.)—A silver communion service, believed to be the oldest in the country, has entered its third century of service at Christ Episcopal Church here. The service was given to the church by King George II of England in 1752.

Because no satisfactory engine could be bought, the Wright brothers had one built in their own bicycle shop to power their first airplane.

School Girl Run Over Alighting From Stalled Bus; In Hospital

PACTOLUS—Condition of an 8-year-old school child who was run over as she alighted from a stalled school bus Tuesday afternoon was listed today as being "fair."

The injured child, Margaret Ann Lee, 8, of Route 3, Washington, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noel Lee, Jr.

Hospital authorities at Tayloe Hospital in Washington where the child was taken, said that she was suffering from a concussion of the brain.

Cpl. C. E. Whitfield of Greenville and Patrolman Wesley Boykin, of Washington, were the investigators of the accident.

According to officers the child was enroute back to her home, located near the Pitt-Beaufort County line when the school bus on which she was a passenger stalled.

The child's mother happened to pass by and seeing the stalled bus stopped. When the small girl saw her mother, she dashed from the school bus and into the path of a car driven by Mrs. Louise H. Keys, 63, of 735 West Main Street, Washington.

The bus was stopped on the right shoulder of the highway headed in the direction of Washington on NC 33 at the time. The child struck the right front of the car near the headlight, sustaining the head injury.

All other occupants of the bus remained in the bus as they had been instructed by the driver when the bus stalled.

No charges have been placed, pending further investigation of the accident and the outcome of the condition of the child, the officers reported this morning.

The accident occurred around four o'clock Tuesday afternoon, six miles west of Washington.

FALSE LEADERS
If we could only arrange to leave the affairs of life in the hands of the ordinary men and women who make up our vast world population, we believe that somehow or other peace and good feeling would result.

This may seem like a naive fantasy. Take the neighbors on your street, for instance. They get along well with one another, do they not? Take the minority groups in this country as a whole. They have nothing against one another. Do we have anything against the Russians? Nothing whatsoever—only against their leaders.

The curse of the world seems to be its ambitious, bungling leadership. This may seem like an oversimplification, but examine almost any situation you know and you will undoubtedly be led to the conclusion that somebody possessing marked qualities of leadership has stirred up trouble. If any trouble has been stirred up, most people are good-natured, willing to live and let live, not interested much beyond the common joys and activities of their daily existence. But their leaders stir them up.

The common people are always in the middle. Our truly great leaders have come from the common herd. These understand human aspirations. They understand true tolerance. They are not consumed by ambition.

Stalin's Death - For Better Or For Worse

What will happen in Russia and to Russian foreign policy if Josef Stalin dies?

That question is in the minds of practically all top officials in capitals throughout the free world, and behind the iron curtain as well. Stalin's death would prove a staggering blow to the communist program around the globe.

Its repercussions could change the whole international outlook for better . . . or worse.

For slightly more than 29 years Stalin and his henchmen have ruled Russia with an iron hand. In recent years their brutal rule has extended almost halfway around the world. Loss of the living symbol of communism will cause chaos in the Soviet.

Although official opinions from most national capitals outside the iron curtain express opinions which anticipate little change in Russia's foreign policy, there are many things to be taken into consideration.

Molotov is considered Stalin's heir apparent in the Kremlin. But it must be remembered that Molotov is the third heir apparent whom Stalin has unofficially named in recent years. Reports have indicated unrest in the internal struggle for power in the Kremlin in recent years, and Stalin's death could prove the blow which will bring the struggle into the open. Party Secretary Georgi Malenkov would like to head the Soviet dictatorship as would Laurent Beria who is now head of the secret police.

Should an open conflict for supremacy arise between these top level Russians — or among other "dark horses" who may be in the running for Stalin's seat — the confusion at home may so weaken and disrupt things that the communist efforts on the international front would be delayed if not completely disorganized.

If there is widespread discontent among the masses of people in Russia under the communist heel, it could burst forth at Stalin's death.

Any of those possibilities — should they become realities — would be detrimental to the Russian policy of constant aggression the world has experienced in recent years. Any one of the possibilities may of necessity bring a change in Russian foreign policy which would be more conducive to world peace than the present policy.

So much for the optimistic side of the ledger so far as the international situation is concerned. Let's look at the other side of the ledger.

The man who takes Stalin's place will have tremendous shoes to fill. Chances are he will have a difficult time securing the loyalty and unity of effort on the part of the Russian people without outside help. To gain such loyalty and unity among the Russian people, any one of Stalin's unscrupulous lieutenants might incite open international conflict in an effort to solidify the Russian people under his command.

Any rash act toward such an end could lead to the immediate beginning of World War III from which neither the iron curtain countries or the free world could turn back until the conflagration had run its course.

While most citizens of the free world would privately hail Stalin's death as a blessing toward bringing about world peace, it could well create the spark to set off World War III.

That's Settled For At Least Two Years

The question of a North Carolina bonus for veterans is out of the way for another two years at least.

Good riddance!
The bill proposing the referendum on the bonus was unanimously killed by the House Committee on Veterans Legislation which is entirely composed of veterans.

It is a good bet that those individuals who have been agitating for some $160,000,000 to $200,000,000 of state funds to extend a gift to the state's veterans are unlikely to give up the fight. Chances are they will be knocking on the door of the General Assembly two years from now just as they have for the past two years with their "something for nothing" scheme.

It is apparent from the reports from around the state and from the hearing on the deceased bill held in Raleigh that the majority of North Carolina's veterans don't feel that the state owes them a cash payment for their services in foreign wars. Yet there are some who feel the world owes them a living and are out to coerce North Carolina into contributing a portion to that cause.

As The Reflector has stated before, there are good many things North Carolina needs worse for the betterment of its people — veterans included — than it does a state-sponsored give-away program. That will hold true when future Sessions of the General Assembly convene just as it has when past sessions have met.

We are glad the House Committee was fit to render its death blow to the issue rather than letting it linger longer and jeopardize some of the fundamental needs which are pressing the state.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—The refusal of the House Ways and Means Committee to extend Social Security benefits at this session has been interpreted generally as the first serious break between President Eisenhower and certain Republican leaders on Capitol Hill.

It has been advertised as an act of retaliation by Chairman Daniel A. Reed because the Administration has not immediately endorsed his demand for cutting taxes before reducing the budget.

Since Ways and Means is the most powerful legislative unit on the House side, such opposition bigwig as Sam Rayburn of Texas and John W. McCormack of Massachusetts have quietly welcomed this development.

INVESTIGATION OF SOCIAL SECURITY—Instead of according to the Eisenhower request for prompt action, Reed has named a committee, headed by Rep. Carl T. Curtis of Nebraska, to investigate the operations and needs of Social Security. Neither anticipate any major amendments at this session.

Together with the caution on cutting taxes and the relatively mild proposal for repudiation of Yalta and Potsdam Pacts, Reed's action has been branded by the Democrats as "another repudiation" of the GOP platform and Eisenhower's campaign pledges.

They contrast it with the manner in which the "Party of the poor" and the "Party with a heart"—Stevenson's characterization—enacted Social Security legislation fifteen years ago.

ECONOMY NECESSITATES REVISION—The hard but nonpolitical fact is that revolutionary changes in living prospects and economic values since the mid-thirties necessitate a complete review and revision of this legislation. The result may be that present and prospective beneficiaries will gain rather than lose from such a belated inventory, according to Chairman Reed's charts.

To describe the changed situation bluntly, old people are living longer than the Rooseveltian pioneers in this experiment had expected, partially due to the sense of security which this reform gives them. They are like the man who came to dinner.

Secondly, the dollars they depend on now are worth only half the value of the dollars they invested in Social Security when they were able to work.

PAR-REACHING IMPLICATION—The Reed statistics have fateful and far-reaching implications for the nation at large as well as for the immediate and future beneficiaries of the system. They show the need to stop and look at this experiment before it collapses of its own weight.

According to U. S. Census figures, an increase of 7.8 million is expected in the total working population between 1950 and 1960. But the added number of non-working children under 15 will be 7.5 million, and the increase of those past 65, when they may collect Social Security payments, will be 3.4 million. Thus the number enjoying benefits by 1960 will increase by 3.1 million more than the total of those employed and still supporting the system with their payments.

HUMAN STATISTICS—This will be the only third time in 70 years when the growth in the number of productive Americans did not exceed the increase in dependents over a decade. At that rate, it means, to paraphrase Churchill, that "never will so many be so dependent on so few."

Fifty years ago, to put it another way, there were nine workers for every person past 60. Now, the proportion is about five to one, and by 1960 it is expected to fall to four-and-a-half to one. If 3,500,000 men are still required for defense, seven years hence, the disparity will be even more threatening.

In view of these human statistics, the hard-headed believers in the system agree that the time has arrived for a factual and non-political survey.

DOLLAR VALUE—The decline in the dollar's value also reveals the need for a look-see. Both private and public pensioners are flooding Capitol Hill with complaints of their plight and demands for alleviation.

There are now 400,000 people still receiving Old-Age Assistance payments, financed by the Federal Government and the states, in addition to Social Security funds. It had been expected that the Old-Age group would disappear entirely when the Social Security system began to operate. Instead, they are increasing because the 1933 dollar "ain't what it used to be."

Somebody Told Me

By L. J. JACK EDWARDS, JR.

Before starting today's story let me make a final prediction on the approval of a TV station for Greenville. One week from today the grant will be announced. Also, if you want to hear some interesting facts about East Carolina College's President, John D. Messick, tune in my new weekly radio show tonight at 7:15.

This is an exclusive report from Korea, written by V. M. Mollodt, former principal of Greenville high school. When Vester was in Greenville he was known for his ability to express himself. In this letter, written to a Greenville resident, he proves that his talent has not ebbed.

There are very few well-to-do Koreans in Korea today. Many apparently have enough to eat and quite a few look very nice in their clothes. This number is limited, however, and would include the government workers, the professional people, the better sleepkeepers, and those working for the United Nations or some of its agencies.

Almost none of these people live in respectable houses according to our standards.

"We had dinner in the home of Dr. L. George Paik, former minister of education who is an international figure in education. His home here in Pusan is exceedingly humble but far above the others. The living room is about the size of a good-size breakfast room, and his dining room is much smaller. I did not see the kitchen, but it is likely a small earthen floor affair with crude heating devices around the edge. The several bedrooms are totally without furniture and each room would house on the floor just as many bodies as there are refugees from Seoul, where he had a fine house by Korean standards, but which was burned. And most of the officials here in the Pusan area are in just the same boat. We went into one fine home in Taegu, which was hundreds of years old and which had numerous out-houses for entertainment and living quarters, but all of these houses except the main one had been turned over to refugees and the resultant lack of care was depressing.

"Recently one of the best teachers I have met in Korea, a former student in the first Pusan workshop, visited me here at UNCAK and I took him back to Pusan to his home in a jeep. I went through the kitchen, an earthen-floor affair with open furnace places for cooking and then through a small paper-paneled door into the only room of the novel. This room was approximately eight by ten or twelve feet without a single piece of furniture. On two shelves were the blankets and the clothes of the wife and three wonderful little children, all of whom eat, live and sleep in this one spot. Yet in Seoul he too lived a comfortable middle-class life with a nice home of his own which he bought gradually."

And I thank you.

REVENUE—The drop in income tax collections during the month of February makes the report for March even more significant than had been expected. March 15 is the deadline for filing returns and paying taxes and experience has been that about half the total income tax receipts come within the first part of March. The Governor, members of the General Assembly and others directly concerned with balancing the State budget have agreed that the report on February receipts, the mid-month and final figures for March, would largely determine whether new taxes will be required to meet budget requirements.

JP—Revenue Commissioner Eugene Shaw noted that there was one less business day in February this year, 1952 having been a leap year with 29 days in the month. Despite that time loss, every schedule in the general fund list, except incomes, showed an increase and the total was $28,857 or 2.07 per cent more. Counting the last day for incomes and the other increases together, the budget folks concede that February was a little better than last year.

SALES—Sales taxes, the second largest source of revenue, showed an increase which reflected both higher cost of living and better enforcement of the law. It is noted that total receipts for the month and for fiscal year to date have followed closely estimates made by the budget folks. This contrast with recent years when collections have gone far above budget estimates resulting in treasury balances after appropriations have been met. This time, with the biggest appropriation bill in history passed by the budget commission, and with Governor Umstead recommending additional items aggregating between $10 and $11 million would require a debt service allocation of $5 million or more every year, there is little prospect of maintaining a balance without levying new taxes.

NEW—There seems to be difference of opinion as to what constitutes "new" taxes. Governor Umstead and most of the legislators campaigned on promises not to levy new taxes. The Governor says that changing the exemption list in the sales tax schedule will not be "new" taxes. Others contend that it is new if a tax is levied on any item that is now tax-free. Full application of the idea that changing exemptions does not mean a new tax would open up the entire field of taxation for increases. Including real estate in the ad valorem tax now levied by the State on intangibles would be no "new" tax including basic foods in the items now subject to the sales tax.

ESSENTIAL—Many North Carolinians believe that the State can and should expand its services, and it is contended that the people are able and should be willing to pay the price. Most of these same people, however, do not accept the proposition that the services can be rendered without new tax levies. The State now collects tax on income, sales and intangible property; it collects franchise, privilege and insurance taxes; it collects on gifts and inheritances. There isn't much else to levy upon. There can't be a "new" tax, but it is possible in any of these brackets to change exemptions and get a good many millions from sources which do not now pay anything to the State.

MURDEROUS—Charlotte has the highest homicide rate in the United States, said Rep. Arthur Goodman of Mecklenburg. Support of his bill to make the possession or totting of an ice pick or a broken bottle equivalent to carrying concealed weapons in Mecklenburg county. Goodman told the committee that he understood B. F. Goodrich R. Company got the idea of the self-sealing tire from stories about Charlotte darkies killing their enemies by sticking them with ice picks. The committee wasn't much interested until the Mecklenburg member told them that every weekend there are two or three or four homicides in its home town. Thereupon the bill was given a favorable report.

INSURANCE—Everybody agreed that maybe some changes ought to be made in existing laws about cancellation of health insurance but even sponsors of the bill pending in the House Insurance Commissioner Waldo Cheek and representatives of several companies in attendance that the bill before the committee didn't do what its sponsors wanted. Or rather, it did a whole lot more than they wanted. Spok men for casualty companies and hospital associations clearly proved that the bill if enacted into law as written would put them out of business and have the effect of denying North Carolinians health insurance.

It is our own feeling that the spending program presented by the budget commission is not all justified. It seems to us, however, that the most the General Assembly could be expected to do would be to stick to the budget as presented. That is to say, hold spending down to that level, and even cut it where possible. Very few constituents of legislators would find fault with denial of these colossal sums asked in excess of what has been recommended. Warning signals are flashing here and there along the economy road, and the State will do well to heed them before it runs into serious trouble.

It makes no difference whether Ten-thumbs is ever afterward of higher stature, a person of more importance. He is an elder statesman, the other workers pay him a grudging respect, and his opinion is valued, even if he sometimes makes himself a nuisance with them.

And Joe himself secretly has a new goal. He looks forward to his fiftieth anniversary on the job. He wants to become the first man in the plant to win a 25-year pin with an Oak Leaf Cluster.

Washington Letter
By JANE EADS
WASHINGTON—The press of the hour she gets to bed, and it's often been so in the morning when her husband became vice president. Mr. Richard Nixon is up at 7 a.m. Patricia, 7, and Julie, 3, are the reasons.

"The girls come to my room the first thing in the morning. They pop out of bed, 'pretty young,' Pat' Nixon told me. They are full of plans for the day and are eager to get dressed for school. Patricia takes a bath at 7:30 for Howard Marine public school. Mrs. Nixon takes time with other mothers chattering about the neighborhood—Julie and another 3- and 4-year-olds to a neighborly co-operative nursery. Both youngsters come home for lunch.

On Thursday, Mrs. Nixon takes her turn assisting teachers at Julie's nursery. I help dress the children to go to school, mop up spilled milk, pick up toys, she said. 'I enjoy this day very much.'

One day a week the little girls do peach and white ballet costumes and slippers, and their mother takes them to dancing class at the Wesley Community Center in the exclusive Spring Valley suburb where they live.

"When I called Mrs. Nixon she was deep in plans for Patricia's birthday celebration. The two-wheeler bike she wanted for a present was going to have to serve as a family present. Mrs. Nixon said she wanted everything just like her sister's and is very crushed when Pat gets something she doesn't like. She explained, 'We can't buy two, so they'll have to share the two-wheeler.'

"Since the inauguration the Nixons have usually attended one big social affair each night. 'Sometimes it's been two or three affairs,' 'Pat' sighed. 'Often we drop into a cocktail party or a reception and then go on to dinner. We had to stop somewhere, so now we're going only to things we consider official, and so that we offend no one we try to accept the invitations that come to us first.'

In addition to the evening functions, Mrs. Nixon says she attends at least one afternoon affair almost every day, and sometimes as many as three. The Nixons themselves have done very little entertaining of their own since coming to Washington, where for the first 4 1/2 years they lived in a small apartment.

"Once in a while we have a small buffet dinner at home, but any spare time we have we like to devote to the welfare of Mrs. Nixon said she needed to make some of my own clothes and hats, but now that I can manage it mending the girls' clothes and sewing buttons on."

Business Today

An awful lot has been written about the need for better salesmanship. Trade magazines, associations and economists, as well as this writer, have pointed out that the productive capacity of the nation has been expanded enormously and unless salesmanship can keep selling the production, there is real danger of cutbacks, unemployment and recession.

Most of the preachers have been concerned with the importance of teaching sellers more about the product to be sold, of suggesting related products, of stimulating more calls per day by outside salesmen and by establishing incentive systems.

Perhaps in emphasizing these more or less advanced points in the art of selling, some of us have neglected one of the primaries — that it is important for the seller to be a considerate person.

Certainly some of the studies by Dr. Charles L. Lapp, associate professor of marketing, Washington University, suggest that is true. Dr. Lapp found that 85 per cent of the women and something less than 50 per cent of the men are extremely critical of retail shoe salesmen. Another study found considerable dissatisfaction with hardware salesmen.

Too much high pressure and lack of sincerity were frequent complaints of customers. But most of the other complaints come under the head of lack of consideration.

Customers say salespeople show no willingness to help them with problems, they often are discourteous or indifferent, or assume a superior attitude.

Two frequently recurring complaints are about personal mannerisms and irritating phrases. People, it seems are annoyed by salespersons who fiddle with pencils, scratch their head, jingle coins in their pockets or "g" at their clothes.

Dr. Lapp has compiled quite a collection of words and phrases that irritate customers.

Among those that bother men are: "Sonny," "Buster," "Pa," or "Buddy" in greeting, and "In case you don't know, that's the latest style." Now let me tell you where you are wrong. "You don't know what you want," "Look mister, I've been selling these for years," and "Where did you get that last pair of shoes?"

Among those that bother women shoe shoppers are: "We've sold lots of that 'size to girls your age." "Well, how much did you want to pay?" "You're not too old for ankle straps." "With you foot you should model 'flats.'" "This shoe flattens your foot." "Honey, it is just what the girls are buying."

Some women also object to having their feet patted in a caressing manner.

"FAIR TRADE" LEGAL IN 4 STATES NOW

Four states and the District of Columbia are now without laws permitting manufacturers to mark the retail prices of their trademarked products. The Georgia Supreme Court found that Georgia "fair trade" law invalid. However, it was indicated that the constitutionality could be cured by the legislature.

MISSOURI, TEXAS AND VERMONT are the other three states. "STEEL SHIPMENTS DOWN 11 MILLION TONS IN '52"

Shipments of finished steel products in 1952 totaled 68,002,612 tons, a decrease of nearly 11,000,000 tons from 1951, the American Iron and Steel Institute reports. The loss was due to the steel strike. However, while the strike cost 16.7 per cent of production, the decline for the year was only 14 per cent, indicating a rapid post-strike recovery.

RANDOM READINGS OF TRADE BAROMETER

The Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan is seeking a research firm to find bigger and better markets for its fruit and fish. A health center in Florida, Ill., consists of 14 different types of in-solar machines. Wool consumption in 11 major countries rose 12 per cent or more than twice the normal seasonal gain in the last 1952 quarter, the Wool Bureau reports. State government indebtedness rose $600,000,000 last year, says Commerce Clearing House.

NEW PRODUCTS

KETTLE: An electric coffee maker that will not switch on unless filled, cannot boil dry and turns itself off after coffee is made, has been brought out by I. G. Hawkins & Co., 30 Drury St., London, W. C. 2.

SEALED: Valuable documents up to 8 by 10 inches can now be sealed in transparent plastic to prevent them from being torn or marred by Scrapbooks, Inc., 821 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J. The plastic is nonflammable.

DURABLE: A tire that is expected to outlast the car itself is now being tested by Goodyear, Akron, Ohio. It is made of a combination of natural and polyester rubber. The compound may also be used for shoe soles, heels, toy or ball, etc.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK (AP)—Every field has its elder statesman. In American politics today it is Bernard Baruch. In baseball for many years it was Connie Mack. In the American business world it is now the 25-year map.

The 25-year man is the wheel-horse of office and factory, a vital link between the oldest member of the board of directors and the newest office boy.

Time was when the man who celebrated his 25th anniversary of the job did so with a glum feeling of wasted youth. The best he could hope for was a pat on the forehead, a "back" and the word "well done" in his mind. He was a look-alike around for a younger man.

Today the 25-year man is a kind of hero of business, a symbol of achievement. Many firms now periodically take out full page ads bragging to the public about the number of such veterans they have on the payroll. For example:

"You don't have to worry about your little girl plays with Acme tiddlywinks. Yes, Acme tiddlywinks are completely safe. Four out of five craftsmen in Acme's giant tiddlywinks plant have spent 25 or more years on the job. That spells experience. Acme craftsmen know better than to leave any sharp edges on our tiddlywinks, because their own grandchildren play with them, too."

The present value placed on years of service makes the middle-aged man a vital figure in industry, and he is now recognized as a morale factor. The trend toward rewarding him with something more substantial than a letter of appreciation.

Take a typical case in the Acme Tenthumbs, a quarter century to the day from the morning he punched his first time clock, goes to work feeling a bit sorry for himself.

He still feels that way when suddenly the noon bell rings and he's two minutes early. A group of grinning fellow workers surround dazed Joe and break into "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow." The boss then steps up and fastens into his lapel the Acme firm's 25-year pin—a huge tiddlywink emblazoned with the figure "25" and with Joe's name on back of it.

Joe is led in for a lunch with the firm's officials but is too excited inside to eat much. "Without men like you, Joe, we'd be out of business," the president says, and hands him a bonus check of $25—a buck for each year—"And just a token, of course."

Joe is then told to take the rest of the day off, and he trudges home blinded by the realization that all these years he has meant something.

His wife may say, "They could have given you a trip to Europe." The other men on the vast tiddlywinks assembly line may kid him, "with that pin and a dime you can get a bus ride." And it may be true even that in Joe's own case his 25-year pin may represent the triumph of endurance over inability of endurance.

It makes no difference whether Ten-thumbs is ever afterward of higher stature, a person of more importance. He is an elder statesman, the other workers pay him a grudging respect, and his opinion is valued, even if he sometimes makes himself a nuisance with them.

And Joe himself secretly has a new goal. He looks forward to his fiftieth anniversary on the job. He wants to become the first man in the plant to win a 25-year pin with an Oak Leaf Cluster.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

STICK TO THE BUDGET (Henderson Dispatch)

With $142 million asked by State institutions and agencies above recommendations of the Advisory Budget Commission, the General Assembly might well appoint a sub-committee to go through the list with a fine-tooth comb with a view to trimming requests. In their over-all amount, these demands are preposterous. It is highly doubtful if any of those who boosted their figures actually expect to get all they seek.

The budget bill presented to the legislature called for some $732 million. If the legislature were to appropriate all of that and the $142 million requested at committee hearings, the amount for the biennium would approach close to the billion dollar level. Is there any one in the State, even including heads of the numerous departments and agencies, who seriously thinks North Carolina can afford such mass appropriations, or that they are actually justified?

We do not think North Carolina is a billion dollar State in operation of its government. We do not believe the people should be called upon nor expected to underwrite spending at such a rate. We are not convinced that the people themselves would readily consent to that sort of program. And if legislators think so, they are not reading the popular mind correctly.

It is our own feeling that the spending program presented by the budget commission is not all justified. It seems to us, however, that the most the General Assembly could be expected to do would be to stick to the budget as presented. That is to say, hold spending down to that level, and even cut it where possible. Very few constituents of legislators would find fault with denial of these colossal sums asked in excess of what has been recommended. Warning signals are flashing here and there along the economy road, and the State will do well to heed them before it runs into serious trouble.

THE VOICE OF LOVE

Chapter One
The boat chugged in from the ocean and made straight for Municipal Pier. It looked ridiculously small to be carrying fish as well as fishermen, but out went the usual cloud of gulls to blot it from view. Then, suddenly, Ruth Carlisle heard the roars of Mr. Hufford in rage. "Thieves!" he bellowed. "Blasted, bread-snatching thieves!" Fiercely the fat artist from Maine defended his own. He waved his straw hat, he kicked, he denounced the gulls luridly. But food was food, and whimsical Rod Pantussi happened to be sprinkling a lot of it on the deck behind the artist's broad back. Then it happened. Rod cried a warning, but it wasn't heard. Obvious to all but gulls and pelicans Mr. Hufford stepped on a fish. "Timber!" screamed Ruth from the pier. The man-mountain skidded, fought helplessly for his balance.

Came the crash! At which point he bellowed, "I quit!" and once again the Carlises had a problem on their hands. Ruth scowled. She went back to the bench under the awning and studied Nancy's pale, working face. Wasn't it time that Nancy found a new favorite? Hadn't penniless Mr. Hufford been the hotel's non-paying guest long enough? "You're here," she sighed. "What's the next bright idea?" Down the pier marched Seventeen to the berth of the Dauntless Me. As the fishing-boat came nearer she smiled alluringly at Rod in the bow. "Rod first," she announced grimly. "Or would you rather see Johnny 'skulled first?' 'I'd better be Johnny. Rod will toss you to the sharks.'" Sinking, the fat artist remained where he'd fallen. Spotting Nancy on the pier, he waved a ham-like hand. "I've quite. Nothing but buffoonery and a blasted ocean and slimy fish!" Announced Captain Johnny Lord: "You'll lose your pay, Huffie." "Blast it, I owe the hotel a hundred dollars!" "Well?" The great man struggled to his feet. Sunburned, wet, grimy, he made a sad sight after his first day as a commercial fisherman. Looking at him, Ruth felt pity. Then Mr. Hufford took his position in the bow and, watching him, she changed her mind. Obviously rough treatment had been what Mr. Hufford needed. Clearly afraid to blunder, the huge artist did an incredibly expert job of helping to warp the boat into the slip. Nancy Carlisle met her sister's amused eyes, and scowled. The wages happened to be grim necessity. Their father had been pleasant about it, but quite firm. It was pay up by the end of next week, or he evicted. That had been the decision and there'd been an expression on Mr. Carlisle's face that had clearly said he wouldn't compromise again.

Ruth chuckled, enjoying the warm sun, the smells and sound of the sea, the haggling. "You're lucky," she told the fat artist. "You'll never meet finer men or do more important work. And doesn't it make you feel good to know that you're paying off your debt?" "I'll never eat another piece of fish! Don't serve it to me, because I'll send it back to the kitchen." Sadly the artist dropped a bucket overboard. "Blast it I should be painting!" Ruth remembered the waiting Bob, and left. "All well?" Bob got out of the car and tossed a cigarette away. "Do you think Fatsio will live?" "All perfect, Bob. He may hate menial work, but he's sticking things out." Bob had more important things on his mind. He wanted to ask the question of questions. He scowled. He turned his back on toiling Mr. Hufford and the immense sea. He studied the rosy oval face, the lovely sight Ruth made in her beige wool dress. He wanted to kiss her then and there on the spot. He caught her arm as she sought to turn right instead of continuing straight across Ocean Road to Henderson's Park. "No nonsense, Bob! Drat it, no nonsense!" "We have to talk," he said stubbornly. "It's stupid to go on this way. We're throwing youth away, that's what."

"That's a nice thing to tell a girl!" "It's true." He led her into the great park with its rolling lawns and masses of trees. They'd played together there as children. "Nice," intoned Robert O'Brien. "But the farm is nicer. Heaven's a farm in springtime, that's what I think. A farm's the only place to live. There's something perfect about living close to the earth. Doesn't that appeal, Ruth?" It was wistfully asked. Bob's face was flushed now with the intensity of emotion. His gray eyes contained an almost feverish glitter. Along his left temple a tiny vein throbbled noticeably. "Isn't that the sort of life you want?" When she was in love a voice inside her would tell her so. She'd know. There'd be no doubts, there'd be no fears, there'd be no reservations. Like a bell the voice would be, and when it rang it would ring for happiness. Until then. "The voice says nothing, Bob. I'm sorry. But there it is. The voice just says nothing." "And you teach school? Heaven help the children you teach! They'll grow up to be fools!" He turned and left then, leaving her alone. She felt sorry for him, too, felt sorry for him as she'd felt sorry for Mr. Hufford. But could a girl marry a man she didn't love? Utterly, utterly ridiculous!

Rising, she snapped her fingers in the fragrant air. To be continued)

Bankers To Give 200 Scholarships

RALEIGH—The North Carolina Bankers' Association will provide scholarships for two farmers from each of the State's 100 counties at a short course in modern farming next June.

J. H. Hilton, dean of the State College School of Agriculture, and Joseph H. Wolfe, executive secretary of the bankers' association, announced today that bankers in each county would send two young farmers to a special short course to be held at State College June 15-28.

The course will be sponsored by the bankers in place of the speaking contest conducted for white high school students in past years. The association will continue to sponsor the speaking contest for Negroes.

The short course has been designed to present new developments in all fields of agriculture to young farmers between the ages of 18 and 28 years.

Local committees made up of county agents, vocational agriculture teachers, and "county key bankers" will select the men to attend the course. The bankers will pay the farmers' expenses and the college will conduct the course.

Wolfe pointed out that those selected should have finished high school, have definitely decided to farm, and should have outstanding records in either 4-H or FFA work.

MIDDLE—Rep. Arthur Goodman and Clifton Blue, introducers of the bill which would require ten years notice of intended cancellation or refusal to renew of a policy that had been in effect for 20 years were gunning for a few "bad" companies which have imposed upon policy holders. Spokesmen for the major casualty companies advised the Commissioner of Insurance now has authority to stop the alleged bad practices, without destroying the good companies. Spokesmen for the three hospital care associations made it clear they could not operate at all under the proposed law. That put Commissioner Cheek in the middle, and he got out of the jam by suggesting that the bill go to a subcommittee which should confer with interested parties and work out a sensible plan for the protection of the public. That course was followed.

TOO FAR—When he was convinced by arguments presented that his bill would effectively put the hospital associations and many of the casualty companies out of business, Rep. Clifton Blue confessed he didn't mean to go that far. It developed that the practical effect of the act would be to deprive any citizen of the right to buy term or limited health insurance, and to force every policyholder to pay exorbit-

Longest Mile Found On 'Death Road' Of Korea

DEATH ROADS which are under fire by the Reds often are used by troops in Korea. Picture shows a sentry guarding "76 Alley" to warn drivers that danger lies ahead.

By JIM BECKER

WESTERN—FRONT. Korea—There are gaping holes in the camouflage screen that attempts to hide the road they call "Chink Alley."

Chinese shells put them there. No one wants to repair them. "Chink Alley" is a steep twisting road that snakes from Allied main positions forward to lonely outposts where gunners are dug in waiting to blunt any Chinese attack.

Its sister road, to the east, is called "Death Valley."

Both of them are shell pitted and makes for rough riding. But there is no speed limit on either road.

Before a driver checks a trip down either he checks his gasoline supply and makes sure his motor is operating well. Then when he hops the ridge that shields him from the red gunner he tromps the accelerator to the floor and curses his vehicle for not responding more rapidly.

Longest Mile As the supply truck topped the rise and started down the longest mile in Korea, Lt. Joseph Luger, St. Paul, Minn., pointed to a mass of forbidding brown mountains just across a frozen ribbon of ice that glistened in the bright afternoon sun.

"Joe Chink is watching from those hills," he said.

A brutal, bone-chilling winter wind whipped through the open cab of the truck as it hurtled around the curves.

But the mile was negotiated without incident. Except for the huge holes torn in the green and brown camouflage screen and the splintered poles that dotted every few feet, there was little to indicate that the road is a favorite Chinese hunting ground.

Little, that is, until the truck reached the forward position of an anti-aircraft gun. Called "flak wagons," the fast-firing ack-ack guns are used on the Korean front lines to spray their heavy streams of lead at red bunkers and trenches.

Huddled beside the flak wagon, bundled like an Eskimo but still pink-cheeked and shivering from the cold, was Pvt. Kenneth Thomas of Russell Spring, Ky.

He peered across the valley that is owned by no one and pointed out the Communist trenches across the way.

Shells Arrive "We've had several incoming rounds this afternoon," he said. He said the shells were firing mainly at a tank position some distance to the left and an observation post to the rear.

"Joe Chink knows that flak wagon is here," he said. "But he's left us alone so far today."

He eyed the Chinese trenches gouged out of the brown hills in front and suddenly there was the angry chatter of an incoming artillery round 50 yards behind him along "Chink Alley."

A dirty smoke cloud boiled up and bits of metal clanged off rocks.

"That's a 120 mortar, I think," Thomas said.

There was a general movement to crouch beside the flak wagon. Thomas pointed out the twisted brown-charred hulk of a tank about 120 yards to the left. "They knocked that out yesterday with six rounds," he said. "Luckiest shooting I ever saw."

Tank Blows Up

He explained one of the Red rounds hit the gas tank and the whole tank caught fire. The men scrambled out safely just before their own ammunition exploded and blew the entire front off the tank. "Tanks are their favorite targets," he said.

A battery of Allied artillery guns "carrooned" far behind and the soft rustle of artillery shells passed overhead. Occasional brown dirt clouds showed where they landed in Red territory.

Then another Red shell crashed near the observation post just behind "Chink Alley." It seemed like a good time to go.

On the stomach-sinking ride back up "Chink Alley" Luger said: "This is the spot where the first round landed. I hope you don't mind the bouncing if I speed up a little bit."

Strange Circular House Goes 'Round And 'Round

EXTERIOR of the James Dresser round house in Madison.

INTERIOR arrangement of the circular house.

AP Newsfeatures

MADISON, Wis.—The phantom of the sunflower is the name of a dome-topped, circular house, built and occupied by a young Madison architect, James Dresser. The house with never a corner to dust was named from the manner in which the windows jut out from the dome, resembling the petals of a sunflower and the circular motif is carried out throughout the house.

The fireplace, hallway and kitchen are circular. The snack bar is round and so is its bench. Even the flooring has been bent into a circular pattern.

Kitchen in Center In the center of the house is the kitchen, merging into the hall of the house which is combined living room—dining room. It can be closed off by pulling a drapey on a circular track.

Above it is a circular skylight in the roof. The house is designed for a minimum of upkeep. Walls are concrete with brick inside separated from the outside structure by air space. The house is 40 feet in diameter, and according to Dresser, has more floor space than a 30-40 foot ranch house. Its cost is about $17,000, including the lot, in a newly opened development on Madison's west side.

Dresser was a student of Wisconsin's Frank Lloyd Wright before he struck out on his own in Madison.

Quonset Hut Ribs In constructing the house Dresser had standard quonset hut ribs and Philippine, who are happy to contribute their few pennies for Pinocchio.

A five dollar bill came from Noyes School of Evanston, Ill., with a note that said: "Brownie Troop 105 has voted to send its bit."

There were hundreds of others.

S.C. Pastor At Fountain Church

The Reverend William Howard Kryder, Minister of the Presbyterian Church, Abbeville, South Carolina, will be the preacher for the annual Evangelistic Crusade in the Presbyterian Church, Fountain, North Carolina.

Mr. Kryder was born in Savannah, Georgia, April 12, 1925. He was reared in Columbus, Georgia, attending the city schools there. He received his B.A. degree from Presbyterian College, Clinton, South Carolina. His B.D. degree was awarded by Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Virginia, a his Th. M. degree by Princeton Theological Seminary, Princeton, New Jersey.

He was Assistant Minister of First Presbyterian Church, Athens, Georgia, and Minister to students in the University there for two years. While working on his Th. M. degree at Princeton Seminary, he was Interim Pastor of the Dickey Memorial Presbyterian Church, Baltimore, Maryland. Since July 1950 he has been Minister of the Presbyterian Church, Abbeville, South Carolina.

Mr. Kryder, a gifted speaker, will begin his series of evangelistic sermons on Sunday Morning, March 8 at 11 o'clock. The services will continue each evening Sunday through Friday at 7:30 o'clock. They will feature special songs for children and a sermonette for them, a season of hymn singing which will be led by the pastor of the church, the Reverend Philip M. Cory; and then the main message by Mr. Kryder.

Pinocchio Drive Indicates Folks Like A Good Fib

By JACK BRUSINI

PESCIA, Italy—This little town's world-wide penname for Pinocchio drive proves that almost everybody loves a cheerful liar.

It shows, too, that a lot of us would like to be allowed to tell a few harmless fibs, ourselves. Money for a monument to the long-nosed puppet started rolling in when Rolando Anzillotti, Mayor of Pinocchio's home town, offered certificates allowing donors to tell one lie a week.

A good share of the money is coming from the United States. It's not just from children, either. A lot of husbands and wives—and one lawyer from Madisonville, Ky.—have sent contributions and asked for the certificates.

Lie Certificates Help So far, mostly since promising the fib certificates, Mayor Anzillotti has raised 5,327,000 lire—over 8,500 dollars.

That is about half what he wants to start building next spring a Pinocchio monument in Colodi, a suburban hamlet which comes under his Pescia administration.

There, just 70 years ago, the popular puppet was born in the hunger-whetted imagination of Carlo Lorenzini, an out-of-work Florentine newspaper reporter.

To pick up some spare spaghetti money, he wrote the stories for a boys' magazine under the name of Colodi.

Since then the puppet's adventures have been translated into every major language of the world, and won even wider fame through Wald Disney's cartoon film.

Was U.S. Teacher Mayor Anzillotti taught English at the Illinois Wesleyan University a few years ago. Previously he had met Miss Gloria Italiano of Waukesha, Wis., while she was studying Italian and Italian literature at the University of Florence.

They married in Waukesha in September, 1951, and after the term ended at the Wesleyan University she followed him back here. Anzillotti teaches Italian literature in a high school in Florence. Two days a week he spends in Pescia to take care of his town's problems.

After a few articles were published in the Italian and foreign press about the mayor's intention to build a monument to Pinocchio, the response just about snowed under the little post office of Pescia, a town nestled in the olive groves east of Florence.

Sen. Hoey Raps Reds In Schools

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP)—Assailing Communist teachers in colleges and schools, Sen. Clyde B. Hoey declared last night there "is no such thing as a Communist not teaching communism."

"He may not openly espouse the cause," Sen. Hoey said, "but running through his whole teaching would be the philosophy of communism." He spoke at the state meeting here of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The group closed its meeting today.

The senior Tar Heel senator commended the DAR for being "a constant foe of communism, socialism, and extreme radicalism."

He told the delegates, "No Communist should be placed in a position where he could corrupt the minds of the youths of this land."

Hoey said that contrary to some opinion, our aid to Europe and the operation of the Marshall Plan has not failed. He stated, "We stopped communism in its tracks in Europe, and it has not advanced a single yard in all that domain since the Marshall Plan became effective."

East Carolina Wins N.A.I.A. District Tournament

Pirates Defeat Elon 72-56; Hodges, Russell Top Scoring

Last Night's Results
High Point 82, Erskine 70 (consolation)
East Carolina 72, Elon 56 (championship)

By JIMMY ELLIS
The Pirates packed their bags last night. They're going to Kansas City.

The Pirates won the right to make the trip when they bumped off Elon 72-56 last night in the finals of the N.A.I.A. District 26 tournament held in the East Carolina College gymnasium. Elon was the defending champion of the district.

The Pirates were never in any serious trouble in the contest. Sonny Russell hit for 19 points in the first half to give the Pirates a 37-30 lead at the half and Bobby Hodges came back for 19 in the second half to make sure that Elon didn't overtake the determined Pirates.

Russell's dead-eye shooting put the Pirates into the lead for keeps after only two minutes and 24 seconds of the first quarter. After that, the Pirates built up a 10 margin which they held throughout most of the contest. A late scoring surge gave them their final margin of victory.

Hodges, the big center from Kinston, hauled down the individual scoring honors for the game. He got hot from the free throw line in the last half to rack up 14 of the free tosses which, when coupled with his eight field goals, gave him a total of 30 points for the night.

Russell, doing almost all of the East Carolina scoring in the first two quarters, got 24 points, including 10 field goals.

For the visiting Christians, Center Dee Atkinson came through with 17 points. No other Elon player got in the double figures although sub-forward Jack Mitchell got nine for runner-up honors.

The game was close, so far as the score was concerned, only in the first three minutes. Jack Mustey started the scoring with a free throw after a minute of action but Russell put the Pirates in the lead with two points at the 1:37 mark. Atkinson tipped in a follow-up shot a half-minute later but Russell scored again almost as soon as East Carolina could get the ball down-court and Elon never caught up again. Russell was particularly "hot" in the first period when he scored 11 of his points and the Pirates 18. Only he and Hodges scored for East Carolina in the first quarter.

In the second quarter, the other Pirates began hitting and the Pirates began to pull ahead, slowly. Russell was slowed down some by Mitchell but Hodges and the other Pirates were able to take up the slack.

In the last half, the Pirates seemed to want to hang onto the ball and slowed their offensive pace somewhat to do so. They got most of their second half points from the free throw line but they maintained a control of the backboards which kept Elon from getting close.

The Bucs will leave sometime this weekend for the national N.A.I.A. finals in Kansas City next week. Their tournament opponent out there hasn't been announced yet but officials of the national tournament are expected to contact Coach Howard Porter as soon as the pairings are made.

The victory moved East Carolina's season record to 19-4, their best mark since entering the North State Conference in 1947. They had a regular season mark of 15-3, a conference tournament record of 1-1.

and a N.A.I.A. tournament mark of 2-4.

High Point College's North State Conference champions overpowered Erskine 82-70 last night to take third place in the District 26 N.A.I.A. tournament. The game was played in the East Carolina gym.

The Purple Panthers put on a 32-point performance in the last quarter to completely crush the Flyers. Up until the time High Point got rolling in high gear in the last period, the lead in the game had changed hands 20 times and the score had been tied 11 times.

Freshman center Howard Alexander was the big man for High Point and Erskine in every way last night. The 6-7, Indiana native dropped in 33 points to tie a tournament scor-

Bobby Perry Chosen On Eastern All-Star

GREENSBORO (AP)—A 24-man Eastern squad, studded with the names of seven all-state players, has been named for the fifth annual North Carolina All-Star football game at Greensboro August 8.

Co-coach Winston Siegfried of Henderson announced the lineup picked by himself, Buddy Luper of Fayetteville, his aide, and a three-man advisory committee. The East and West have split the decisions in four previous games.

Durham, Henderson, Fayetteville, Rocky Mount, Graham and Sanford each placed two boys on the squad. Ahoskie, two-time Eastern and Class A title winner, led the group of towns represented by one player each. The others are Rockingham, Wadesboro, Warsaw, Wilmington, Whiteville, Clinton, Roanoke Rapids, Oxford, Orphanage, Raleigh, Elizabeth City and Greenville.

These are the all-state picks: Jimmy Davis and Buddy Bass, Durham; Charlie Bussey, Henderson; Nappy Robbins, Rocky Mount; Fred Godfrey, Sanford; George Wallace, Rockingham; and Tom Newton, Raleigh.

Riotous Celebration Follows Buc Win 'On To Kansas City'

By HERMAN HICKMAN
Reflector sports Editor

MEMORIAL GYM—"On to Kansas City" was the happy battle cry of East Carolina basketball players and fans here last night.

East Carolina's proud Pirates added another laurel to its regular season North State Conference crown here last night by vanquishing Elon's Christians 72-56 to win the right to represent the Carolinas in the NAIA basketball tournament finals at Kansas City, opening Monday.

Tension was taut as a bow-string on players and fans alike throughout last night's important battle. But as the final buzzer sounded confirming East Carolina's victorious, barriers of emotion burst and avid Buccaneers fans poured onto the floor to join the happy Pirate players in riotous celebration.

"How far is it to Kansas City?" queried the derisive players as they hugged and congratulated each other. "Tear down the nets," came a cry and in the tumult somebody thrust a knife into Cecil Heath's hands and the little Pirate playmaker clambered onto his teammates' shoulders to do the honors.

"We may not win the national title, but they are going to know where we're," promised the victors.

"East Carolina will make a better showing in the nationals than any other team in the conference would," was the general opinion of opposing coaches who have seen the Pirates perform this year.

"They're sure got a fine ball club," wagged Elon Coach "Doc" Mathis. "We've beat everybody in the conference but this team."

Noticed in deep consultation after the game were Howard Porter and "Doc" Mathis and the conversation strangely enough wasn't basketball talk—it was travel talk.

Coach Mathis' Christians won the district NAIA tournament last year and he was giving Porter the route he traveled to Kansas City.

Coach Porter and the team plan to embark immediately by airplane. The national playoffs begin Monday with 32 teams drawing lots.

When asked if the Pirates didn't depart from their usual game style and employ more measured tactics in last night's game, Coach Porter—affectionately dubbed "The Fox" by his players—explained with a sly twinkle, "You know how it is when you're playing poker and the game narrows down to where everything is at stake, that's when you begin to play them close to the vest, isn't it?" A very well worded example of last night's play. "Now we understand, coach."

To agitate the fretting basketball fans who were pulling for the game to hasten along while East Carolina was leading, the scoreboard clock went on the blink and action was stymied for ten minutes.

An all-out searching party was appointed to find a stop watch, and when a breathless runner emerged through the door with a watch the finicky scoreboard began working again.

The busy man in a blue suit and red necktie who was hustling all around the gym taking care of tournament details was Jim Butler. He has done a remarkable job handling tournament games, dedication games, etc. for activities held in the new Memorial Gym this year.

Howard Alexander, High Point's genial freshman sensation, set a new High Point school record when he recorded 33 points last night to bring his season total to 638.

North State Conference scoring record was established this year by Ronald Rodgers of Western Carolina, a total of 686 points.

Although the tournament was a great success for Pirate players and fans, a bad break from old man weather caused a financial deficit for the Greenville Rotary Club who was sponsoring the tournament for the benefit of Scout Activities programs.

Several Rotary members succumbing a shortage due to bad weather breaks came forward last night before the receipts were counted and contributed $100 donations.

Elizabeth City Cueball Ace Advances In Billiards Play

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Luther "Wimpy" Lassiter, wavy-haired youngster of the World Pocket Billiards Tourney, spilled former Champ Jimmy Caras last night and caused a quick schedule change by gate-minded promoters.

Wimpy, from Elizabeth City N.C., had been expected to lose to Caras, then become a sacrificial offering to the 10-time champion, Willie Mosconi of Haverford, Pa., in tonight's feature match. But the 34-year-old Southerner upset Caras, from Philadelphia, 150-133 in 16 innings, and replaced Caras among the big four.

The schedule was switched to send Caras against Mosconi and give Lassiter a potential greater in thrice-beaten Eddie McGehean of San Francisco. If Wimpy continues winning, he won't meet Mosconi until later, when the stakes are higher.

There's a four-way tie for first place among Mosconi, Lassiter, Irving Crane of Binghamton, N. Y., and Jimmy Moore of Albuquerque, with two victories each. Caras and Joe Procta of Los Angeles are 1-1. Joe Diehl of Rockford, Ill., has lost two games and Art Judice of Fitching, N. Y., has lost three along with McGehean.

N.C. State Is Team To Beat In SIC Meet

Tournament Play Gets Underway At 2 p.m.

By WILLIAM MSHIRES
United Press Sports Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (UP) — It was the same old problem today as the annual Southern Conference basketball title tournament got underway—how to stop rampaging North Carolina State.

State's Wolfpack, which meets arch-rival North Carolina in the finale of today's four-game first round, has won the title six straight years.

Their record this year, the regular-season league title plus the Dixie Classic tournament crown, makes them favored to do it again.

Here is today's first-round schedule, with regular-season conference records in parentheses:

2 p.m.: West Virginia (11-3) vs. Furman (10-3).
4 p.m.: Maryland (12-3) vs. Duke (12-4).
7:30 p.m.: Wake Forest (12-3) vs. Richmond (13-5).

9 p.m.: North Carolina State (13-3) vs. North Carolina (15-6).

The field is considered more evenly matched this year than at any time since Coach Everett Case of the Wolfpack brought his Indiana-style basketball to Dixie seven years ago.

The Wolfpack's clash with North Carolina will be the "rubber" meeting of the two rivals this year. North Carolina in its first season under Coach Frank McGuire, whipped State in the first meeting, 70-69, but State won the second easily, 87-66. McGuire is rated a master of tournament strategy.

Last year his St. John's club was the surprise of the NCAA tourney as it beat N.C. State, Kentucky, and Illinois to win the Eastern title.

The opening game on the program will feature the nation's leading major-college scorer, Furman's Frank Selvy. Furman enters the tourney red-hot, with a 12-game winning streak and 19 victories in its last 20 games. But it has beaten only one of the eight teams in the tournament—Richmond.

West Virginia, on the other hand, has beaten Maryland, Duke, and Richmond. A smooth-working combine built around all-conference forward Jim Sottile, also boasts wins over such teams as NYU, Penn State, and Pitt.

Duke also is red-hot, having won 12 of its last 15 games, including nine conference scraps. However, the blazing Blue Devils may have plenty of trouble with Maryland's deep-freeze. The Terrapins lost four games in February, but all of them by close margins.

Wake Forest, which has beaten the best on occasion, was a solid choice over Richmond.

The West Virginia-Furman winner will meet the North Carolina State-North Carolina winner in the semi-finals at 9:30 p.m. tomorrow. The winner of the Maryland-Duke game will face the Wake Forest-Richmond winner at 7:30 a. m. tomorrow. The finals are Saturday night, with the winner of that big game going to the NCAA tournament.

Dodgers Picked To Repeat In '53

77 IMPROVED 44 AY720A
TAMPA, Fla. (UP) — A group of baseball men predicted tonight in a straw ballot that the Brooklyn Dodgers will repeat as National League champions in 1953.

Club officials, managers, coaches, sports writers, photographers and broadcasters at the annual National League dinner given here by President Warren Giles were asked to list how the league's eight teams will finish.

The experts gave the Dodgers 62 first place votes out of a total ballot of 110. The Philadelphia Phillies were runners-up with 25 top votes to only 13 for the New York Giants, who finished third.

With eight points given for a first place vote, seven for second, and so on, the teams lined up: Brooklyn 807, Philadelphia 701, New York 670, St. Louis 511, Cincinnati 376, Chicago 358, Boston 307 and Pittsburgh 126.

In a second ballot, Cincinnati was named "the most improved club since the close of the 1952 season."

The Reds were top choice of 46 of the experts while the Phillies and Braves tied with 47 votes each as next best among the most improved clubs.

Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick and American League President Will Harridge also took part in the polls.

Clark Griffith Says Senators May Win Flag

ORLANDO, Fla. (UP) — With the glint of optimism in his twinkling 83-year-old eyes, owner Clark Griffith of the Washington Senators today compared his 1953 team with his 1924 pennant winner and expressed confidence it could be just as successful.

That 1924 team, marking the debut of Bucky Harris as a major league manager, won the American League pennant and then went on to beat the Giants in a memorable World Series.

He said his 1953 team reminded him so much of that club because it has "youth and speed."

"I'll never forget that 1924 spring training," Griffith reminisced. "It was a young fast team, but was so unimpressive in spring training that one Washington baseball writer left the club because he was sure it would finish in the cellar."

Except for pitching, shortstop Roger Peckinbaugh and catcher Muddy Ruel the club was made up of youngsters. There was Joe Judge at first; Harris, then the boy wonder manager at second; Ossie Bluege at third and Goose Goslin, a rookie, and Sam Rice and Early McNeely in the outfield.

The backbone of the pitching staff was Walter Johnson. Al Zachery and the old relief specialist, Firpo Marberry.

"Our pitching this year won't be as good as it was then, but it could be enough if Bucky comes up with a good relief pitcher. It has need for them to all have a good year at once," he declared.

He said the rest of his 1953 team reminded him so much of that club 29 years ago, "because with the exception of Mickey Vernon at first, all of them are youngsters."

Rookie Roy Dietzel, whom Griffith tabbed as "a sure fire star" at second base is 21; shortstop Pete Runnels 24; third baseman Eddie Yost, 29; center fielder Jim Busby, 25; left fielder Jackie Jennings, 25 and right fielder Gil Coan, 28.

"Give or take a few years, that's the same age as that 1924 group," Griffith said.

"All we need is for Dietzel to make good and Coan to come back. Then if Bucky can find that relief pitcher, we'll be in a good spot."

Jim Jeffries Frowned On Modern Day Boxers

NEW YORK (UP) — Heavy-weight boxing's last link to the old past was gone today with the passing of Jim Jeffries, and the moderns could walk with heads held high.

Old Jim always ran them down. He gave them the line that the fighters of this era should have stayed in the seminary and they couldn't refute him. He had them stopped on seniority.

And old Jim rubbed it in. Somebody gave him a television set a few years back and he wouldn't condescend to watch boxing bouts on the thing.

"I'd rather watch wrestling," he growled. "At least they give you a show."

It was the insult supreme. There's no denying that in his fighting days he was by the tape, a picture heavyweight. He was darkly handsome, the young boiler-maker from Carroll, O., and he stood a rugged six-feet, two-inches which tugged the beam at 225 pounds.

Old Jim, who died this week at 77, always was sneering at the training regime of the current day fighters. He pointed scathingly at Ezzard Charles and Jersey Joe Walcott when they fought for the title he once held and insisted that in the "good old days" they wouldn't have been first class preliminary boys.

This I doubt. Personally, I think that because of the advancement of boxing science, the old timers would have had rough going.

Old Jim was always complaining, too, that the moderns didn't train enough. He boasted dog-sen, 25 and right fielder Gil Coan, 28.

"Give or take a few years, that's the same age as that 1924 group," Griffith said.

"All we need is for Dietzel to make good and Coan to come back. Then if Bucky can find that relief pitcher, we'll be in a good spot."

JIM JEFFRIES
... Last Of The Greats ...

matically that he trained six months or more for some of his fights.

The answer to that one is simple. The boxer of today fights so often that only a brief period of extensive conditioning is necessary to put him back in top shape.

For instance, Jeffries had only 23 bouts in his 10-year career. Only once did he fight five times in one year.

His record shows a grand total of 219 rounds—and that includes four 20-round efforts.

Charles, whom he criticized so vehemently, has fought that much in less than three years and has had as many as 17 bouts in one year.

Speaking of condition, Jeffries sneered at Walcott. But I don't believe that even in his palmy days, Jeffries could have been in better shape than old Jersey Joe is in every day of the year. As a matter of fact, the way it looks now old Jersey Joe will still be fighting when he's 77.

Frank Selvy Tops College Scorers; Has 29.3 Average

NEW YORK (UP) — Furman's Frank Selvy, who averaged 29 points a game during his last seven regular-season assignments, starts play in the Southern Conference championship to-morrow today with a stranglehold on the major college individual scoring title.

Selvy has an average of 29.3 points a game, NCAA Service Bureau statistics reveal, to 27.8 for Seattle's Johnny O'Brien.

O'Brien and Seton Hall's Walter Dukes, however, both seem sure to break one record even if they don't catch Selvy. Dukes, whose average is 26.5, has 791 points this season and O'Brien 751.

The most ever scored in one season of major-college play was 831, by Dick Groat of Duke last year. Since Seattle has two more regular-season games and at least one in the NCAA Tournament, and since Seton Hall is top-seeded in the National Invitation Tournament and can play three games by reaching the finals, both centers—the 6-foot, 11-inch Dukes, and the 5-foot, 9-inch O'Brien—have a good chance.

Selvy, too, is shooting for a record, the per-game average of 32.2 set by Bill Milky of Temple in 1951. The only other player to approach 29 for a full season was last year's champion, Clyde Lovellette of Kansas, with 28.

Music Students Are 'Old Pros'

BOULDER, Colo. (U. P.) — Bill and Taudie Simons, man-and-wife music student at the University of Colorado, had extensive professional careers before going to college.

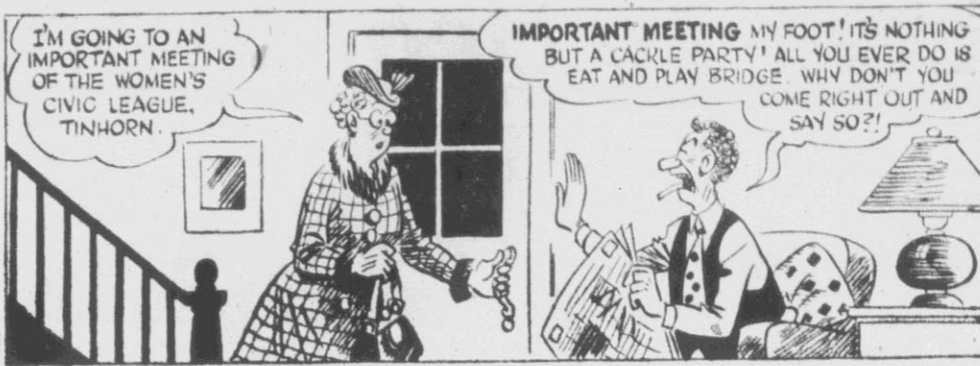

Taudie, who was born in Dalton, Ga., as Floyd Dalton and claims to be a descendant of the famous outlaws, the Dalton boys, started her career in minstrel shows at the age of four.

In 1942, she went to Tulsa, Okla., as secretary to the program director at station KVOO where she soon had a program of her own. Later she became vocalist with Jimmy Palmer's dance band. She returned to Tulsa in December, 1945, where she met Bill Simons and married him in 1947.

Bill had been busy with his musical career, too, having started out in the 1920's. He got his start in radio, playing a concertina over the station his cousin built and held many orchestra and radio jobs joining the Air Force in World War II.

Simons decided to use his GI bill privileges in 1950, so he and his wife enrolled at the University of Colorado. Bill is studying for his master's degree in composition and arranging. Taudie, who is studying voice, will graduate in June.

Excitement, But No Fire Damage

A fire in the downtown business section of Greenville around 12:30 yesterday caused a lot of excitement but no damage from fire.

Firemen were called to the Ben Roberson garage, located on Co-tanche street, when a pan of gasoline ignited. Origin of the blaze was not known, firemen reported.

The fire was out on arrival and only smoke damage was reported.

The belief that all substances are composed of one primitive matter led to the development of alchemy which was the attempt to make gold out of baser metals.

Your Red Cross

(A POEM)

Symbol of hope, how it glows through the darkness!
 Spreading compassionate arms wide above
 Fear and disaster—encircling the hopeless,
 The hungry and helpless, with your care and love.

Wherever need is, your Red Cross is ready!
 Helping those stricken by fire and flood,
 Cheering the lonely man far from his homeland,
 Staying Death's hand with your life-giving blood.

Your Red Cross—tireless in missions of mercy.
 Done in your name! Make it strong—make it live,
 A symbol of hope glowing bright through the darkness!
 Answer the call... from your open heart, give!

Red Oak News

The Red Oak Christian Church of Pitt County has enrolled in the first annual Town and Country Church Development Program, sponsored by Emory University. It was announced this week by the pastor, Rev. Harold R. Tyer.

This is one of over 700 churches from 36 denominations which have enrolled in this program, designed to stimulate interest and promote growth among rural churches in 13 southern states.

Mrs. B. L. Tyson is in charge of the program at Red Oak church. Others on this committee include the chairmen of all organizations connected with the church. This church will compete with other churches in the state, located in communities of under 5,000 population, for the award as the Rural Church of the Year in the state. The state winner will receive $500 and the next four $100 each. The Rural Church of the Year in the South will be selected from among the 13 state winners to receive an additional $500.

The awards will be announced at Emory University's Town and Country School in July, according to Dr. Earl Brewer, director of the Development Program and a member of Emory's faculty. The Sears-Roebuck Foundation is cooperating with Emory in the program.

The General Progress Committee has been appointed by the chairman and they are as follows: Rev. Harold R. Tyer, minister; Milton May, chairman of the Church Board; Miss Ella V. May, secretary and treasurer; F. L. Allen Sr., superintendent of Sunday School; Bruce Thigpen, treasurer of Sunday School; Mrs. James Allen, chairman of Circle No. 1; Mrs. Jesse Jordan, chairman of Circle No. 2; Lawrence Tyson, chairman of Youthful Workers Club; Sam Winchester, president of Young Married Couples Class; Mrs. Charissa May, chairman of Lord's Acre Plan. A meeting of this committee will be called at an early date.

The "Better Church" subcommittee is as follows: Mrs. Travis Crawford, Mrs. Rena Manning and Milton May.

The "Better Community" committee is: Mrs. Sam Winchester, Bruce Thigpen and Willie Pate.

The "Better World" committee is: Mrs. James Allen, Sam Winchester and Rev. Harold Tyer.

We regretted very much to hear of the death of one of our neighbors, Mr. Allen Humbles. We extend our sympathy to his bereaved family.

Friends of Mrs. R. O. Williams will be glad to learn that she is greatly improved from a recent illness.

4-H Clubbers To Celebrate Week

RALEIGH—North Carolina 4-H clubs, with a total membership of 140,369 rural youths, will join with clubs throughout the nation in observing National "4-H Club Week" March 7-15.

L. R. Harrill, State 4-H club leader for State College Extension Service, pointed out that in 1951 North Carolina led the nation in 4-H club enrollment and that 7,000 new members probably kept it in the lead again last year.

A Tar Heel youth, Francis Pressley of Iredell county, a student at State College, will take part in the "National Friends of 4-H Breakfast" Monday at Washington. Pressley, winner of the 1952 citizenship award, and other national 4-H award winners, will call on President Eisenhower the week of March 8.

North Carolina's 2,280 organized clubs will tell the story of their activities through posters, displays, school and civic club programs, church services, and radio broadcasts.

Harrill pointed out that during 1952 Tar Heel 4-H'ers completed 158,327 projects, following the recommendations of the extension service.

Harrill said that 4-H has as its chief objective the training of farm youth in the art of living—providing them with training in economic, social, physical, moral and spiritual development.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (UP)—Trading fell off sharply on the stock market today after an active decline yesterday on news of Premier Stalin's critical illness.

Orderly operations resumed in all sections. Some new buying developed, particularly in special issues and prices of several were up more than a point. A few fell a point or so but they were in the minority.

Allied Chemical, responding to a favorable earnings report, rose 1 1/2 points to 74 and helped sustain the industrial average. Other chemicals balanced off small gains and losses.

Miami Copper gained nearly a point to a new high but other copper eased slightly. United Dye & Chemical issues were strong with the preferred up 8 1/2 points. Owens Illinois Glass, Johnson & Johnson and Missouri Pacific preferred gained a point or more. Hackensack Water rose nearly a point to a new high. Solvay American preferred lost 5/8 on one sale.

Other firm spots included Kern County Land, Minnesota Mining and American Cyanamid.

Cost Of Larceny Slashed With $4.56 Corn Theft

Revivalist

Rev. Robert B. Crawford, pastor of Bryan, Texas, Church, will conduct a revival meeting at the Greenville, North Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church, beginning March 11 and running through the 22nd.

Mr. Crawford is a former pastor of the Greenville Church and is an outstanding minister of the Free Will Baptist denomination. The public is invited to attend this revival.

BETHEL—Despite prevailing high prices in many realms of endeavor, the cost of larceny in Pitt County has been slashed to only $4.56 per offense.

That conclusion may be drawn from details of a corn theft committed near Bethel Tuesday night and reported by Pitt Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson this morning.

The sheriff disclosed that Roosevelt Rogers, 20-year-old Negro of near Bethel, was arrested late yesterday morning and charged with stealing $4.56 worth of corn from the Neura Manning farm.

According to officers' reports Rogers went to the Manning farm a few miles from Bethel Tuesday night and stole a small quantity of corn from a barn where it had been stored until it could be shucked.

After taking the corn, the sheriff and Rogers transported the few ears he had stolen to a Greenville corn mill where he disposed of the entire "haul" for $4.56.

The young Negro was arrested just before noon yesterday by Deputies "Duke" Andrews and Lloyd Manning and Bethel Police Chief S. H. Martin. He was placed in the Bethel jail, but was released under $100 bond yesterday afternoon.

Rogers is scheduled to be tried on a charge of larceny at the next sitting of Pitt County Court, which is set for Tuesday, March 10.

FHA Program Meeting Staged Here Yesterday

The annual Educational and Business meeting of farm families taking part in the Farmers Home Administration program in Pitt, was held yesterday morning.

Ralph Harris, County supervisor for the FHA program in both Pitt and Greene Counties, led a discussion concerning the outlook for 1953 from the farmer's standpoint.

It was brought out by Harris in his talk that the price outlook for '53 appears to be very similar to the past year for most farm commodities. Production costs may be somewhat higher and thus farmers will need to produce as efficiently as possible by using the best farming practices or they may feel some difference in their net income, Harris pointed out.

In concluding his talk, Harris urged the farmers to balance their livestock production with their crops, to utilize better their land and labor in order to obtain a greater income at the end of the farming year.

Sam Weeks, County Tobacco Specialist, discussed pests and tobacco diseases and practices which need to be followed for better and increased tobacco production.

Bill Alligood, of Grimesland next talked on swine production and better management. He reviewed the progress made by borrowers in the FHA program for 1953, and noted that yields and income were reduced due to the weather conditions of last year.

Harris next told the group of farmers that borrowers operating under the FHA plan had made six year payments in advance of date their payments were due.

Three members of the Federal Home Administration committee were present for the meeting; they were Henry Smith, Fountain, Bell Johnson, Grifton and John Carroway, Belvoir.

A similar meeting of all Negro farmers taking part in the FHA program will be held Friday morning at the Warren Chapel Church.

THAT WEAKER SEX BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (U. P.)—Henry Lykes took a long taxi ride, then refused to pay the fare of $5.70, police charged. When he attempted to leave the cab without paying, the driver slammed the door in his face and kept him there until a woman arrived. The driver was an officer.

IT'S A SALE—More than 100 different items made by blind people in Pitt and other counties, went on sale yesterday morning. All types of leather goods, baskets, clothing and many other items were on display, showing a high quality of workmanship in the products. The sale will continue through this afternoon. Reflector Photo by Roy Hardee.

One Arrested In 2 Auto Mishaps

One arrest was made yesterday by city police as the result of investigation of two traffic accidents.

No injuries were reported but property damage to four cars was reported.

A freak accident around noon yesterday occurred when the driver of an automobile attempting to enter a local garage lost control of his car when the brakes failed and struck a parked car.

Officer W. B. Cole listed the driver as Henry Lewis Langley of Route 4, Greenville. His car's brakes failed and rolled backward hitting a car belonging to Howard Lee Brewer, 117 North Summit Street, City. Damage to both cars was listed by Cole at $250.

Ervin Baker, 17-year-old youth from Hamilton, was charged with failure to yield the right of way after his car collided with one driven

Funeral Friday For Mrs. J. L. Roberson

Mrs. Mary Cooper Roberson, 80, died at 10:20 Thursday morning in Stokes at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Heber Everett. Her health had declined for several years and she had been sick for three weeks.

Funeral services will be conducted Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Stokes Methodist Church by the pastor, the Rev. T. J. Barrett of Wilson. Burial will be in the family cemetery at Stokes.

Mrs. Roberson was born in Pitt County and lived in the Stokes community nearly all her life. She was married to J. L. Roberson in 1895, and his death occurred in 1937. She was a member of Stokes Methodist Church.

Surviving are four daughters, Mrs. Heber Everett of Stokes, Mrs. John James Jr. of Bethel, Mrs. Percy Allen of Greenville, and Mrs. Rob Barnhill of Wilmington; two sons, Ben Roberson of Greenville, and Linwood Roberson of Rocky Mount, a step-son Lee Roberson of Stokes, 15 grandchildren; 10 great-grandchildren; and a brother, W. G. Cooper of Lexington.

THRIFTY BANKER SHERBORN, Mass. (U. P.)—Augustin H. Parker, Jr., 43, president of the Old Colony Trust Co. of Boston, drives a 1936 touring car from his farm here to the Wellesley railroad station where he entrains for his office. He says the car has gone more than 132,000 miles.

Local Citizens To Speak In Red Cross Campaign

Five minute talks on all phases of the Red Cross work over the local radio station will feature two more local citizens for the remainder of this week.

Speaking at 5:55 today will be J. H. Waldrop and scheduled for tomorrow at the same time is Colonel Roger Fuller of the ROTC at East Carolina College.

In behalf of the Red Cross Fund Campaign now in progress, short talks by local citizens have been given this week over the local radio station. The talks will continue into next week and the speakers will be announced at a later date.

Hound Trapped For Four Days

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) City Councilman Cas Walker and some friends were hunting coons Saturday night near Hawkinsville, Ga. About 1 a. m., they decided to wind things up, but Purple, a veteran coon dog, was nowhere to be found.

They scoured the area without success.

Walker yesterday sent three men into the area to search. One of the trio found Purple, his head stuck in a hollow tree for four days.

He freed a coon, tried to go after him and got stuck. The dog seemed to be in good spirits despite his experience.

The coon is in the bag—which also should prove something.

High School Day For Seniors Set Friday At ACC

WILSON—North Carolina High school seniors will come to the Atlantic Christian College campus Friday, March 13, to take part in the annual "high school senior day."

Billy Tucker of Greenville, ministerial student, president of the ACC student body and student chairman for the project, said about 500 seniors are expected to attend.

Tucker, son of Mrs. Ethel Godley Tucker of Greenville, presided over the recent World Fellowship Youth Meet at Eighth Street Christian Church in Greenville.

The high school day program is an annual event on the ACC campus. During the day the seniors will be given an opportunity to get a look at college life both in the classroom and in the extra-curricular field.

Gen. Mark Clark Plans To View Indo-China War

TOKYO (UP)—United Nations far East commander Gen. Mark W. Clark will fly to the Indo-China war front about March 17, it was announced today.

Clark's headquarters said he would visit the French command at Saigon, Indo-China, and remain "several days."

The visit will be at the invitation of Jean LeTourneau, minister for the Associated States and high commissioner of France in Indo-China.

Clark may be accompanied by Indo-China by former French Premier Paul Reynaud, now mildly ill in Tokyo but planning to visit Korea this weekend.

In memory of my husband, Theodore R. Moore, who passed away March 4, 1952.
We walked together you and I
In sorrow and in joy
We shared our pains and happiness
With love without alloy
And death shall never end our love
For through the mist I see
Our glad reunion in the sky—
For all Eternity.

Ask Bids For Surplus Boats

NORFOLK, Va. — Sealed bids were invited today by the U.S. Coast Guard for the sale of two surplus surfboats at the Coast Guard Base, First and Randolph Sts., Portsmouth, Va.

Both craft are self-bailing, clinker built and 25 feet in length. One is equipped with a gasoline engine; the other is a pulling boat.

They can be seen by contacting the Commanding Officer, Coast Guard Base, Portsmouth, between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Mondays through Fridays until March 19 when bids will be closed.

Thieves Took 6 Bottles Of Wine

Thieves entered the Manhattan Grocery on 14th Street last night and walked away with six bottles of apple wine.

L. M. E. Corbett and "Cap'n" S. B. Dorsey said the thieves pried off the lock of the front door in gaining entrance.

Other than the wine, nothing else in the building was reported to have been missed.

UP GOES THE POWER OF EVERY BUICK.
Special Super and Roadmaster!
World's newest V8
Television treat - the BUICK CIRCUS HOUR - every fourth Tuesday
It's more than pride that makes a man want a lot of horsepower beneath the hood of the car he owns.
For the real point in reaching record horsepowers and compression ratios goes beyond miles per hour. It steps up performance and economy in normal driving.
That's what Buick engineers did when they upped the power and compression of each 1953 Buick - SPECIAL, SUPER and ROADMASTER - to the highest figures in Buick's fifty-year history.
In the SUPER and ROADMASTER, they put a new kind of V8 Engine—first passenger-car V8 with 8.5 to 1 compression, and a long list of other major engineering advances.
For the SPECIAL, they redesigned the famed F-263 Fireball 8 Engine—gave it shorter flame travel, faster firing, higher horsepower and compression.
And to these spirited engines they coupled the new Twin-Turbine Dynaflo Drive* that adds flash-fast, quiet getaway to utter smoothness.
Just to give you an example of what all this means: The 1953 Buick SPECIAL with Dynaflo can beat the mighty 1952 ROADMASTER on getaway—can reach 30 mph (when the law allows) with a combined speed and jerk-free smoothness no other car can equal.
Of course, there's far more to these new Buicks for 1953—some seven dozen new features alone.
But why not come in and see for yourself that these are the greatest Buicks—and the greatest values—in fifty great years.
*Standard on Roadmaster, optional at extra cost on other Series.
