U.S. Officials Predict New Leaders Will 'Clean House'

Expect Soviet Purges

WASHINGTON (UP) — American officials predicted today that the new leaders in the Kremlin will move quickly after Stalin's funeral to purge Soviet and satellite leaders who might threaten their newly won power.

These officials feel there also is a slight possibility of a falling-out between Premier Georgia M. Malenkov and his rivals that could shake Russia and the Communist world to its foundations.

Authorities pointed out that Malenkov, as Stalin's "shadow" over the years, knows all the techniques for ruthlessly stamping out opposition with guns, prison cells and slave labor camps.

"They will have to clean house again, and it's anybody's guess where it will start and stop," one official said.

News that the Soviet leaders had been chosen a mere 20 hours after Stalin died came as a surprise to this government. The White House and State Department declined comment. But officials and congressmen generally agreed the implication was that Russian cold war policies would continue in full force, if not increased.

The Soviet reorganization was regarded as a Kremlin effort to present a solid front to the free and Communist worlds as a warning against action aimed at capitalizing on Stalin's death. And the selection of Malenkov as the top man indicated, officials said, that the Soviets hoped to avert frictions that might have developed out of a sharing of top power between several men.

Little is known here of Malenkov that would reflect the path of his leadership in world affairs.

Some authorities believed it possible he will follow a "harder" attitude toward the West. They said he might be less cautious than Stalin, he might underestimate free world power and be over-anxious to show his independence now that he has been placed above older Kremlin officials.

But other officials thought Malenkov, as Stalin's heir, would carefully follow his path of probing for soft spots to conquer and pulling back whenever pressures were encountered.

The sudden development was not expected to call for any change in the psychological warfare offensive the administration opened after Stalin's death. The Voice of America, it was pointed out, had not sought in the short interval to "back" any particular Soviet official for the top spot. The Voice and other psychological warfare arms of the government will continue their efforts to drive a wedge between Moscow and its satellites in eastern Europe and Asia.

New Soviet Premier Is 'Newcomer'

GEORGI MALENKOV

New prime minister and head of the Communist party. Age 51. A fat, swarthy man whose frame (five feet, seven inches, 250 pounds) is topped by an enormous head. He is a man of mystery whose origins are obscure. Began his quiet rise to power in 1925 as Stalin's devoted private secretary, but was little known outside the Kremlin until 1941 when he electrified a party conference with a speech that is still quoted. He is ruthless, brilliant, methodical and bitterly anti-American. Has never been on soil outside the Soviet orbit. When Nazis invaded Russia, Malenkov became one of five members of Stalin's supreme war cabinet and was put in charge of war production. Many party leaders refused until recently to take his power seriously and jokingly dubbed him "Comrade No. 2 1-2." But Malenkov emerged unmistakably as Stalin's favorite last October when he was picked as top speaker at the first Communist Party Congress in 13 years.

New Soviet Hierarchy Takes Over As Big Funeral Planned

Malenkov Is Stalin's Heir

By HENRY SHAPIRO
United Press Staff Correspondent

MOSCOW (UP) — Georgi M. Malenkov, 51, Premier Josef Stalin's heir, assumed supreme leadership today of the new streamlined Soviet government and Communist party.

The new hierarchy took over as thousands of persons ranging from bemedaled marshals of the Red army to factory workers streamed past the bier of Stalin, who died Thursday.

A mammoth state funeral will be held for the 73-year old Soviet leader Monday at noon. A pantheon will be built in Moscow to house the sarcophagi of Stalin and V. I. Lenin.

Stalin's body lay in state on a bed of flowers and wreaths. The Hall of Columns in the House of Unions was kept open all night and by this morning it was estimated 1,000,000 persons had shuffled silently past the body of their dead leader.

The government appeared considerably fortified by the inclusion in the Council of Ministers of some of Stalin's oldest collaborators such as Lavrenti P. Beria, Vyacheslav M. Molotov, Marshal Nikolai A. Bulganin and Lazar Kaganovich.

These men will take over the actual management of Soviet departments of internal, external and military affairs wherein they are the most experienced in the U.S.S.R.

The supreme leadership of the Communist party was transferred from the large Presidium, established at the party Congress last October and which numbered 25 delegates, to a small body made up of virtually all of Stalin's old collaborators.

The new premier's righthand men within the government are Beria, Molotov, Bulganin and Kaganovich — named in that order in the announcement — with the titles of "first deputy premiers."

Foreign observers expected an especially vigorous foreign policy under Molotov. They saw special significance in the emphasis Malenkov put on the United Nations by appointing former Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky as the permanent head of the Soviet delegation.

Vishinsky is expected to spend most of his time in New York while Jacob Malik, one time Soviet U.N. delegate becomes Molotov's righthand man in the foreign ministry.

Malenkov was trained exclusively under Stalin. And since Stalin's old collaborators were included in the new government foreign observers believed there would be little change in domestic or foreign policy — at least in the near future.

The supreme Soviet of the Soviet Union will meet in the Kremlin March 14 to ratify the governmental reorganization.

Stalin's funeral was expected to be one of the most lavish ever held in the Soviet Union. Details probably will be announced shortly by the special committee of government and party leaders.

A decree said that after the "pantheon is built the sarcophagi containing the bodies of Lenin and Stalin, as well as the remains of outstanding leaders of the Communist party and Soviet state buried near the Kremlin wall, are to be transferred to it."

Almost every man, woman and child of Moscow's 5,000,000 population are expected to view Stalin's body.

Hundreds of thousands of ...ers will come from other cities.

All public entertainment was cancelled by a Moscow city council order which decreed a four-day period of mourning for Stalin.

Soviet newspapers were almost entirely devoted today to the death of the Russian leader. All papers carried messages of condolence from foreign Communist parties.

Hints Belief Eisenhower Should Go Further

Taft Okays Ouster Action

By JOHN L. STEELE
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP) — Senate GOP leader Robert A. Taft hinted today he believes Republicans should go farther than they have to oust Democratic holdovers from key government jobs.

Taft stamped a "very good" on President Eisenhower's plan to eliminate several hundred Democrats holding government posts blanketed under the civil service system by orders of former President Truman.

But in talking with newsmen, the Ohio Senator suggested something a bit more extensive.

"It seems obvious to me," Taft said, "that a man running a government activity must have his own people in high office; every member of the cabinet has the problem and so have division heads.

"The President's contemplated order doesn't even raise the question of civil service. But I'm not even promising to maintain the civil service system intact."

Acting Defense Mobilizer Arthur Flemming, going farther than the President's directive, late Friday called on all Democratic holdovers in key posts to submit their resignations.

He especially suggested the withdrawal of any federal worker who has become "so attached intellectually and emotionally to a policy of the last administration that...he would be stultifying himself or injuring the country" if he remained.

Mr. Eisenhower's plan to remove policy-making jobs from the civil service system didn't draw much Democratic fire. But what had some senators concerned was that a more sweeping order may be forthcoming.

Sen. Olin D. Johnstown (D-S.C.) ranking Democratic member of the Civil Service Committee and as such his party's chief spokesman on the matter, said he was giving Mr. Eisenhower's plan his closest scrutiny.

"I am studying how far reaching the idea is, he said in an interview, "and I am opposed to anything that has a tendency to break down the civil service system for government employes."

American Patrol Fights Off 200 Chinese Raiders

SEOUL, Korea (UP) — An outnumbered American patrol withstood a withering Communist artillery barrage and fought off a 200-man Chinese attack force on the western front today.

The U.S. soldiers, backed up by Allied artillery rushed in at the last minute, smashed the Red attack before it had a chance to get started.

Red guns hurled more than 2,000 rounds at U. N. positions on Old Baldy and Porkchop hills, guarding the traditional western invasion route to Seoul, for 5 1-2 hours in a "softening up" operation. But the U. N. patrol prowling no-man's-land then held off a Red assault force for 30 minutes until Allied artillery could be brought in to smash the attack.

The badly outnumbered patrol had barely climbed from its trenches when it met the Chinese face to face.

"They were right there in front of us when we climbed out of the trenches," said Sgt. Robert L. Whitman, 21, of Warrenton, Va. "They started yelling and shooting as soon as they spotted us."

One small U.S. support element climbed out of an outpost trench near Porkchop Hill. Chinese, hiding only a few feet away in the dark, riddled the advancing Americans with grenades and burp guns, United Press correspondent Al Kaff reported.

"The grenades were falling all around us," Whitman said. "The advance group got the worst of it but some of the grenades fell down inside the trench."

In the air night-flying B-29s roared through heavy clouds and Red anti-aircraft fire to drop more than a third of a million pounds of bombs into a 250-acre Communist supply center in northwest Korea.

Seventeen of the medium bombers dropped their loads simultaneously at four points over the sprawling supply area at Onjong, northwest of the Chongchon River mouth. The Air Force said 125 buildings, 70 bunkers and numerous revetments housing Red supplies and troops were in the target area.

The 5th Air Force reported a slow week in Korean air operations. Allied pilots made only three claims against the enemy in the past seven days.

Replacing Vishinsky In United Nations Session

Gromyko Arrives By Plane

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UP)— Grim and tight-lipped, Andrei A. Gromyko, the original Soviet "no" man, arrived today to assume command of Russia's United Nations team.

Gromyko flew in posthaste to replace Andrei Y. Vishinsky, demoted from the post of foreign minister to that of U.N. chief delegate. Vishinsky sailed for home yesterday to consult with the new Kremlin administration.

Russia was scheduled to speak on Korea in the main Political Committee today and it was expected that Gromyko would be on hand to restate the Soviet policy on Korea.

Gromyko refused, however, to say whether he intended to speak today.

"I am not familiar with the situation," he snapped.

But the fact that he drove to the Russians' Park Avenue headquarters instead of to the Glen Cove Long Island mansion suggested that the bulbous-nosed Russian would turn up at the U.N. during the day.

Forty police and a dozen Russian diplomats awaited Gromyko at the airport in 25-degree weather as his plane from London landed almost three hours late.

Poland, India, Russia, Honduras and the United States were on the speaker's list in that order for the abbreviated Saturday session. If Russia cancels out today it was likely that the debate would go over until Monday with the prospect of a head-on clash between Gromyko and Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., the new U.S. chief delegate.

The return of demoted Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky to Moscow to be briefed by the Kremlin's new foreign ministry chief, Viacheslav M. Molotov, made it imperative for Russia to fly Gromyko here to speak for the Soviet Union in the critical debates still ahead.

Valerian A. Zorin, who will be replaced by Vishinsky as permanent Soviet delegate by April 1, has little reputation as a debater.

High U.N. diplomats agreed that the Kremlin shake-up establishing a new Soviet diplomatic high command of Premier Georgi Malenkov, Molotov and Vishinsky presaged increasing Russian activity in the cold war, with the U.N. becoming one of its major fronts.

Vishinsky was demoted from the top spot to become one of Molotov's deputy foreign ministers. He also is a member of the Presidium of the Central Committee of the Communist party, the ruling body of Russia. No other Soviet delegate here has held such powerful influence.

City Zoning Measure Is Tied Up By Legislator

Does Not Intend To Introduce Legislation Extending Control Over Adjoining Areas; Opposition Is Heard

By JESS POINDEXTER
Reflector City Editor

Rural citizens who reside in the one-mile area adjacent to the Greenville city limits may relax the vigil, their chicken coops and pigpens now seem safe from city regimentation.

Unless there is a drastic change of heart in the next few weeks, the proposed measure giving the Board of Aldermen authority to zone property up to one mile beyond the present corporate limits of the city will not be introduced in the General Assembly this session.

"I'm not going to introduce that bill unless I change my mind," Pitt Rep. Sam O. Worthington said this morning in response to queries regarding the status of the bill handed him last month by the Greenville administration.

Aroused Opposition

The Pitt legislator disclosed the proposed zoning bill aroused strong opposition, not only among residents of the area to be affected but also among people who live in Greenville and own property in the adjoining area.

Status of the bill, which was approved by the Board of Aldermen at its February meeting, has been a matter of great concern and speculation throughout the entire area for the past several weeks.

Worthington said a representative group appeared before him last Saturday and presented a petition containing the names of "at least 150 landowners" who opposed the measure. Most of them he stated, resented intrusion into their affairs by city officials.

Nothing Definite

But if a decision has been made on the zoning measure, nothing definite has yet been determined relative to the bill calling for a city-wide vote on the status of the Greenville Utilities Commission under a city manager.

The Greenville attorney, who has represented Pitt County in the General Assembly since 1938, declared the issue is a controversial one that "probably can be worked out satisfactorily" to the best interest of the people of Greenville.

"Something definite should be done in that regard," he asserted, "it certainly should not be allowed to continue in such a state of confusion."

Worthington emphasized the conviction that even if the issue is put to a vote of the people, in the event they do not vote to put the commission under city administration there still might be a possibility of friction between a city manager and the utilities department.

Opinion Vague

"The opinion dispatched from the Attorney General's Office on the status of the commission states vaguely that it would come under direct control of city under a city manager without an election," the legislator declared.

"But the entire situation is so confused and indefinite that it probably would require a test case before the State Supreme Court before the exact position of the Utilities Com-

Scott Calls For Confident Party

LEAKESVILLE (UP) —Former Gov. W. Kerr Scott advised Democrats attending the Leaksville township Jefferson-Jackson dinner last night to face the future with confidence and "shun the poison of narrow sectionalism or class hatred."

In his first political address since he left office in January, Scott urged party members to "face the future with confidence, serene in the knowledge that the party of which we are members has the most to offer the masses of the people."

The national party, he said, "is just taking a short nap and is gathering strength for the tomorrows that are ahead."

The former governor warned against the possibility of becoming weaker instead of stronger.

"Down the road of sectionalism," he said, "lies disunity, a sick and weakened party, and finally the graveyard of diseased and worn-out parties."

Dream's Details All Came True

SYDNEY, Australia (UP)—Mrs. Grace Grimston, 39, told her neighbors Feb. 26 about a dream in which she won a lottery and had an automobile accident.

Two days later she won the first prize of 12,000 pounds ($26,760) in the New South Wales lottery. She bought a car with part of the money and drove it 156 miles.

Last night the car smashed into a telephone pole. Mrs. Grimston's 18-year-old son was seriously injured, and she and her husband suffered cuts and bruises.

German Court Is Silent On Pacts

KARLSRUHE, Germany (UP) — West Germany's highest court refused today to rule on whether or not the Allied-German peace contract and the European army plan are constitutional.

The court's refusal to act on the constitutionality of the pacts cleared the way for the third reading of the treaties in the lower House of West German Parliament March 19 and 20.

The decision, said the federal court did not consider itself competent to decide whether treaties can be ratified by a simple or a two thirds majority of the lower house.

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, who holds a simple majority of deputies in the lower House, had asked the court for a ruling on what majority was necessary for ratification.

The Social Democratic opposition in Adenauer's government opposes the treaty and has insisted a two-thirds vote is necessary for ratification. A court ruling that a two-thirds vote was necessary probably would have blocked ratification.

Adenauer is now expected to get a comfortable majority on the third reading for ratification of the two treaties as he did on the first and second readings.

Association Not Behind Roberts

It was brought out this morning that J. W. H. Roberts, Greenville attorney, was representing Thursday night only the 66 business firms that petitioned for removal of one-way streets.

Wesley Harvey, president of the Greenville Merchants' Association, emphasized this morning that the association as a group is not entering the controversy.

It was erroneously reported yesterday that Roberts had been employed by the Merchants' Association.

Blue Mold

RALEIGH (AP)—Blue mold, the tobacco plant disease tobacco growers dread, has broken out in Columbus County.

The North Carolina State College Extension Service announced the outbreak yesterday and advised weed growers to begin dusting and spraying their plant beds.

Columbus County Agent Charlie Raper reported he detected "plenty of blue mold in all grades and classes" on several farms throughout the county.

The extension service advised farmers to see their county agents for ways to combat the disease.

The Record Says He's Pregnant

HARTFORD, Conn. (UP) —Navy veteran Forest G. Draper, 20, was having trouble enlisting in the Air Force today. They say he's pregnant.

Draper underwent a physical examination for enlistment, but an officer told him as far as the Air Force was concerned, he's going to have a baby.

When Draper left the Navy in January, 1952, someone made a mistake and gave him a medical discharge for pregnancy. That's article C-10306 (F) and applies to female personnel only.

The Air Force admitted it was a typing error, but said Draper still must sign a waiver stating he's not pregnant.

Allot Sum For Postal Inquiry

WASHINGTON (UP) — The Senate has appropriated $100,000 for an investigation of the Post Office Department's operations.

Object of the inquiry by the Senate Post Office Committee is to improve the efficiency of the post office and get it out of the red. The department has a $641,000,000 deficit.

Sen. Allen J. Ellender (D-La) opposed the investigation. He challenged the Republicans to give "more than lip service to economy."

"Why don't we give the Eisenhower administration a chance to do its own investigating," Ellender asked. "If it fails, then we should offer assistance."

Local Measures In House Hopper

Pitt Rep. Sam O. Worthington of Greenville yesterday introduced a bill in the General Assembly providing for extension of the corporate limits of the city of Greenville.

Defined as House Bill 675, the measure would bring about annexation of several small, isolated areas that the Board of Aldermen has recommended to be brought in.

At the same time, Rep. F. M. Kilpatrick of Ayden introduced two measures of local nature.

One, designated as House Bill 670, would allow volunteer firemen in Pitt County to install red lights on their private cars for use when answering calls.

The second measure introduced by Kilpatrick, entitled House Bill 669, would allow Ayden town commissioners to donate up to $2,000 each year in non-tax revenues for building and operation of a town library, and up to $500 for recreational purposes.

All three bills were referred to House Judiciary Committee No. 2, of which Worthington is chairman.

Morse Critical Of Refusal To Undergo 'Test'

WASHINGTON (UP)— Sen. Wayne Morse criticized his fellow senators today for eliminating themselves from an FBI loyalty check they ordered for 1,800 Senate employes.

The senators shouted approval of a measure sponsored by Sen. Pat McCarran (D-Nev.) requiring the FBI to check on the "loyalty and reliability for security purposes" of all Senate employes — present and future.

But they were equally emphatic in rejecting an amendment by Morse which would have made the loyalty test apply to the senators themselves. And they even smacked down the Oregon Independent's demand for a roll call vote on the issue.

Dr. Leon Meadows Dies In Ohio After Long Illness; Last Rites Set Tomorrow

Dr. Leon R. Meadows, 68, for thirty years head of the English Department at East Carolina Teachers College and president of the college from 1934 to his retirement in 1944, died at 5 p.m. yesterday at his home in Gallipolis, Ohio, after an extended illness.

The funeral service will be held at the home there at 3:15 Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Meadows came to East Carolina as head of the English department in 1910, the first year of the life of the college; and he served in that capacity for thirty years. At the death of President Robert H. Wright in the spring of 1934, he was appointed acting president, and following a unanimous petition of the faculty, was elected president on October 5, 1934.

He was widely recognized as an educator, and served in various capacities on a national level. He was chosen vice-president of the American Association of Teachers Colleges in 1941 and was elected to the executive board in 1942. In this organization he also did special work in visual education and served as a member of various committees set up to study educational problems. In 1943 he was called to Washington by the U.S. Commissioner of Education for a special conference on education, and was the only president of a teachers college to attend in this conference.

He participated in the meetings of the National Council on Cooperation in Teacher Education in 1943.

In North Carolina, Dr. Meadows was also prominent in educational affairs. He was president of the Department of Higher Education in the North Carolina Education Association, vice president and president of the North Carolina College Conference and, district chairman of the Governor's Committee for Balanced Prosperity in the South, set up in 1940.

During his more than thirty years in Greenville, Dr. Meadows was an active member of the Immanuel Baptist Church and for years a trustee of that church.

During his ten years as president the enrollment of the college increased almost fifty percent and the number of men students was raised by more than 400 percent.

Several departments of instruction were either added or reorganized during his presidency. The liberal arts curriculum was set up during this period. The business education department was instituted, library science courses were begun the industrial arts department was organized, the physical education department was reorganized as the department of health and physical education, courses in music education were expanded, the nursery school was set up. Federal aid was secured for the department of home economics, and off-campus practice teaching was started.

The Flanagan building on the East Campus was built during Dr. Meadows' administration and was dedicated in 1940.

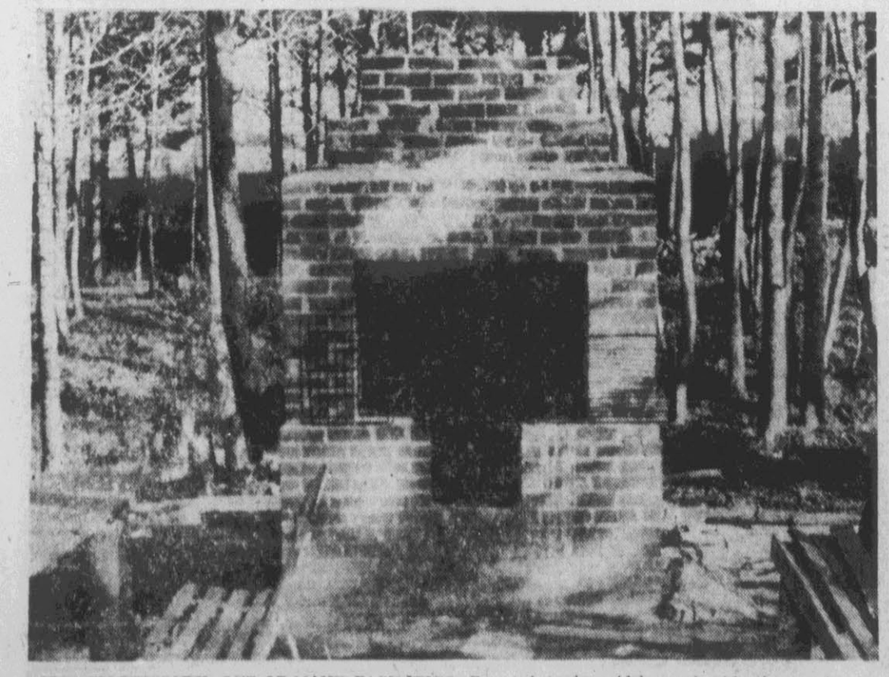

Dr. Meadows was born in Alabama, but spent most of his early life in Louisiana, to which his family had moved. He took the Ph. B. degree from Baylor University, the A.B. and M.A. degrees from Yale University, and the Ph. D. degree from Columbia University.

During World War I he held a responsible position in the Red Cross and was a member of the American Legion.

In 1919 he married Miss M. Lida Hill. Three children of this marriage survive,—Leon Renfroe Meadows, Jr.; Elizabeth Meadows, and Mae Meadows. Mrs. Meadows died in 1925. Two years later, Dr. Meadows was married to Frances Louise Goggin of Shelbyville, Tenn., who also survives him.

In 1949 Dr. Meadows published a book of poems, "Reveries." This was followed in 1950 by a second volume, "Moses and Other Biblical Poems."

Month-Long Search Rewarded; Captive Confesses House Entry

A 22-year-old Negro man has been charged with the daylight entrance into the home of Mrs. J. Bryan Brown here on January 30.

Formally charged with breaking and entering of the Brown residence located in the Rock Spring section of Greenville is Willie "Sambo" Waldon, 22, native of Georgia.

Waldon was arrested yesterday afternoon by City Detective N. H. Byrd, climaxing more than a month's search.

Byrd, in making the announcement of the apprehension of the man, stated that Waldon has confessed to two other robberies in and around the city, dating back as far as October.

In retracing his steps on the day of January 30, Waldon told the officer that he entered the Brown home in search of food, as he was hungry.

He got a sandwich, and took a ten dollar bill which was on top of the refrigerator with Mrs. Brown's wrist watch, which he did not take when he got the money.

When Mrs. Brown entered the house, Waldon told Byrd that he hid behind a record player and that she passed by him and he then hid in the closet under some clothes.

It was then that Mrs. Brown opened the closet door, revealing the man. Mrs. Brown fell against an open window and toppled to the ground below, slightly injuring herself, while the man fled.

He made no attempt to harm the woman.

After leaving the Brown home, the man told the officers that he hitched a ride with a truck from New Bern on the New Bern highway near the Gold Leaf Warehouse and left town.

He will be charged with breaking and entering and larceny.

Two other warrants also have been sworn out for the Negro. He is charged with the theft of $17 from the person of Albert Burns on October 8.

The third warrant charges the larceny of a one-half ton pick-up truck owned by Travis Baker, Winterville Route 1.

Chapter 3

Ephraim Carlisle grinned from ear to ear. He liked sunrises, and the present one was a beauty. He liked the fat end of a bargain, and he suspected he'd get one now. Better still, there was the open road before him, and for a few minutes he could forget that the Crescent Moon Bay Hotel even existed. "Life's good," he chuckled. "Life's perfect. You want to make a run for it? You want to go down to Mexico to see how all the Mexicans are getting along?"

"Mom would skin you alive, Dad. And Nancy! Nancy probably would not ever look at you again. Nope, you'll have to stick the old routine out. You're a married man, with lots of responsibilty." From him Ruth had inherited her brown eyes, her wide, whimsical mouth. From him, too, although it wasn't so obvious, she'd inherited the fey quality that enraged Bob so at times. It might have been Ruth declaring: "Oh, well, next time I'll know better than to marry!" Then they came to their favorite spot overlooking the ocean and Mr. Carlisle braked the car to a halt.

"Let's have it," he said tersely. "Not about Gomez, but about Bob."

"Dad, I'll be late! And you know very well that Mr. Quince doesn't like us to be late on blue-Monday. He says it sets a bad example for the children."

"Personally, I like Bob. I think he'd make a good husband for you."

She was hardly in the mood to appreciate Bob's good qualities. "He's a child! There, that's all I say. And we won't drop the Manuel Gomez business, either. It's important. The man needs the chance to rehabilitate himself. And if Doctor says his drinking's over, then it is."

"He's been known to lie before, Ruth."

She wished her father wouldn't keep bringing that up. Actually, Doctor had never told anything but white lies, and those only to help people who needed help.

"I'll vouch for Mr. Gomez."

Ephraim Carlisle wagged his head, liking the day better and better. Now pink was all over the sky and dripping down to the water. The fat end of the bargain was coming closer and closer. "Besides," he added in musing tones, "I'm not sure I want the extra expense. I'll have to hire someone to write my campaign speeches, you know. After all, income can be stretched only just so far."

She eyed him suspiciously. But his face was too innocent for description. "I'm supposed to volunteer my services?"

He was quite astonished. "Do you think I'd bargain about a thing like that?"

"I do."

"Ruth, you wrong your poor father. I'm as sympathetic as the next fellow. I'd give Gomez a chance if I could just afford to."

She heaved a long sigh. "All right. I'll write your speeches. That's to say, of course, if you pledge support to the hospital plan. Dady, you'll have to declare before the nomination's made. And a lot of the delegates will back you. This thing's growing. Doctor's campaigning for it already, and you know how effective and persuasive Doctor can be."

"A heap of money, Ruth."

"Suppose Mom and I had been killed on that foggy road the night I was born? Would your money have made you happy then?"

His blood ran cold. He'd never forgotten that wild, frightening night he never would. "Shucks, Ruth, I've already made up my mind. Is it a deal?"

""A deal."

Father and daughter solemnly shook hands; then Ephraim Carlisle started the car again and finished the long drive to Union County Elementary School. Grace Taylor, grinning, dropped a little curtsey. "Welcome to the jute mill, Miss Carlisle. Aren't you thrilled to be back?"

The two teachers fell into stride and walked slowly up the path under the pepper-trees toward the big redwood buildings.

Grace chuckled as they went down the hall of the main building to the faculty room. "Nice weekend? Mine was a pip. Drove to San Francisco and spent it with my aunt. We sailed on San Francisco Bay. We had Saturday dinner in Chinatown, Sunday dinner on Fishermen's Wharf. That was a traitorous thing to do, but we did it, and I'm glad!"

They found the faculty room empty. There were several new notices on the bulletin board, but nothing of major importance. Mr. Quince would appreciate the views of his staff on the subject of progressive education. He would appreciate any information regarding the breakage of several of the windowpanes of his office window. Lastly, he would appreciate it if the staff would forbear smoking while on the school grounds.

Grace sighed. "He never relaxes, does he?"

"It's an important job. Of course, if you were to marry him—"

"Heaven forbid!"

But Grace was blushing. Her purple eyes went everywhere but to Ruth's face.

Ruth envied her. At least, she thought, Grace knew. In the mind of Grace there was no doubt. And wasn't that half the battle, just to know?

Forestry Expert Conducts Event

Extension Specialist James H. Phillips from State College gave a forestry demonstration in the Shivers community, near Greenville, Wednesday.

The demonstration was held on William Smith's farm. A score of framers and tenants attended the demonstration. The forestry specialist explained such topics as timber scaling, timber thinning, preservative treatment of fence posts and forest planting.

Negro county Farm Agent D. D. Dupree assisted in the demonstration. He and the forestry extension specialist answered questions plied by the farmers and tenants present.

Dupree announed a timber scaling measuring contest with the observing farmers and tenants as contestants. A scale stick was offered as the prize. The farmer getting the losest estimate to the volume of timber in the tract estimated by the State College specialist won.

The county Negro farm agent said farmers at the meeting expressed appreciation for the opportunity to learn something about measuring and estimating timber in various tracts. He said his department plans to hold similar forestry meetings for Negro farmers and tenants during the coming years.

EXECUTRIX NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Having qualified as Executrix of the estate of John I. Gray Sr., late of Pitt County, North Carolina, this is to notify all persons having claims against the estate of said deceased to exhibit them to the undersigned on or before the 14th day of February, 1954, or this notice will be pleaded in bar of their recovery. All persons indebted to said estate will please make immediate payment.

This the 14th day of February, 1953.

BLANCHE C. GRAY
Stokes, N. C., Rte. 1, Box 100
Executrix of the Estate of John I. Gray Sr.
Feb. 14-21-28 Mar. 7-14-21

By His deeds, by His teachings, by His death upon the Cross, Christ demonstrated the duty and responsibility of Christians to share with their less fortunate fellowmen.

Today as we read our newspapers and listen to our radios, we sometimes tend to disregard the need and suffering in other parts of the world. Momentarily we may feel sorry, but it passes quickly as we return our thoughts to personal affairs.

To help us become more aware of our opportunity and responsibility for helping others, there has been instituted "One Great Hour of Sharing," a united effort by America's churches to assist overseas relief. Next Sunday tens of thousands of churches will simultaneously cooperate in this great plan at their Sabbath services.

Through "One Great Hour of Sharing" millions of destitute peoples will be aided and comforted. Millions will learn that because of the unselfish and understanding heart of America, there is for them hope of a brighter tomorrow.

And to America, "One Great Hour of Sharing" will bring the priceless blessing of spiritual enrichment that rewards those who have obeyed these words: "Go ye into all the world . . . to every creature."

Won't you go to your Church on Sunday, and join this great effort?

'Impulse To Create' Has An Outlet

Group Of Local Citizens Has Gone Back To The Classroom; Once Each Week They Meet In Industrial Arts Department At College To Learn Handicraft Skills

Metal on metal strikes up a terrific din as Mrs. H. F. Steinbeck, 2303 East Fifth Street, hammers away at a piece of aluminum which bids fair to becoming an attractive and useful tray. Mrs. Steinbeck is learning the craft as a student at East Carolina College's department of industrial art.

People in all walks of life like to make things with their hands.

In all situations among all people, hobbies of one sort or another are prevalent —the rule rather than the exception. In many instances they afford a diversified attraction just the opposite of activities demanded in one's occupation or vocation.

Doubtless, in some unique manner, they render small relief from the stale monotony of laboring to achieve a simple, ordinary livelihood. Often hobbies are creative in nature, in other cases they yield nothing tangible, but always they provide mental diversion to their authors.

Bank executives may hurry home from the office to "piddle" until bedtime in complete, fully-equipped shops located in their basements or garages. Housewives oftentimes chance the consequences of hungry husband's irate tempers as they work passionately past mealtime refinishing antique furniture.

Creative Impulse

That instinctive impulse to create has attracted a group of mature Greenville citizens back to the classroom.

Once each week they meet in the industrial arts department at East Carolina College and spend a few agreeable hours in originating designs, making serviceable and decorative articles and learning skills useful in everyday living.

East Carolina's adult education program has provided that opportunity. The course, extending over a period of 11 weeks, is taught by Donald Amelon, a member of the college faculty.

"Members work on projects of their own choice," Amelon says, "and they seem to enjoy themselves as they learn."

A skillful and resourceful instructor, if one may judge by what goes on in class, he conducts the weekly meetings with an easy informality which makes the work of his "pupils" a pleasure.

Diversified Group

Fourteen men and women are enrolled for work under Amelon's instruction, and they represent a good cross-section of Greenville society. The group consists of six housewives, a bank cashier, a salesman, five teachers and a student, all of whom are engaged in the various activities of the class.

Lee H. Moore is the only "graduate" student.

Two years ago he took a similar course at the college and became a good craftsman. Combining work with sentiment at that time, Moore made a handsome walnut frame for an oil painting of Old Timothy Church near Gardner's Crossroads, which his grandmother helped establish.

In the current class he is now making a small desk table for his little granddaughter and a pair of end tables for his home. Moore seems to have a knack of handling tools and is becoming more expert as his work progresses.

Varied Activities

Metal work; tooling of leather; refinishing of old furniture; constructing lamps; and making tables, bookcases, wall cabinets and other household equipment are keeping class members busy.

Projects for a group of that size are extremely varied. Mrs. H.F. Steinbeck, homemaker and mother of four children, is doing a hammered aluminum tray.

Margaret Ann Tifft of the college faculty is working on a hand-tooled leather purse, and Mrs. Shelia DeSavigny, who has two sons at East Carolina, is constructing bookcases.

An old cane-bottomed chair, a family heirloom now being refinished by Margaret Johnson, is beginning to take on the appearance of an antique worth treasuring.

Transform Materials

Using old materials—often discarded as useless—and constructing something serviceable and attractive from them is adding spice to a number of projects.

The glass top of an old drug store coffee maker is being converted by Mrs. W. Clyde Hollowell into an attractive lamp. A square of slate found in her yard—and a number of metal pipes — inspired Mrs. R. B. Lee to make an attractive porch table.

Hammering sawing and manipulating the screw driver, not always the forte of the weaker sex, are becoming accepted skills with members of the class.

Students also are becoming familiar with more complicated tools such as the circular and band saw, jointer, shaper, sander, jig saw, banding brake, drill press and the welding outfit.

Adjustment Made

"I find that a pair of pliers," one lady member of the class remarked, "has become as easy for me to use as my pinking shears."

Samples of some of the work done in the adult education class soon will be found in a number of Greenville homes, where doubtless they will be enjoyed for their beauty or appreciated for their serviceability — perhaps both.

Those who are taking the course are enjoying it now, are preparing themselves for pleasant use of leisure time in days to come, and are learning skills that are constantly useful.

A second "offender" is Lee H. Moore of Greenville, who is rapidly rounding into shape as an expert craftsman. He is currently participating in his second adult education course in industrial arts at East Carolina College. Observing his polished methods at the rip saw is Ruth Lambie, head of the college nursery school.

A few pertinent suggestions on constructing a table are pointed out to Mrs. R. B. Lee, wife of the city attorney, by W. W. Howell (right) and Robert Gray, faculty members at East Carolina College. All three are "pupils" in an adult education course in industrial arts now being offered on the campus.

Mrs. Shelia DeSavigny, 205 North Harding Street, does a bit of sanding while engaged in constructing a bookcase in the East Carolina College workshop. Mother of two men students on the campus, she is participating in the adult education course currently being taught at the college.

Miss Margaret Johnson of Greenville is shown busily engaged in converting an old cane-bottomed chair into a thing of beauty. Long in the family, under Miss Johnson's skillful hands it is taking on the appearance of an antique worthy of a second glance.

Lamond Amelon, faculty member in industrial arts at East Carolina College and instructor of the course now being enjoyed by 14 men and women from Greenville, checks work done by Beatrice Chauncey of the college music faculty. Miss Chauncey, who has expended a great deal of effort in making a coffee table, looks on with interest.

Ewe Belonging To Pitt Herdsman Has Triplets; Rarity In Sheepdom

"Triplets happen far more frequently among sheep than among humans, but in either instance it's certainly unusual."

And, as Lawrence Tyson of Ballard's Crossroads says, it most certainly is unsual for a ewe to give birth to three lambs and have all of them live.

But that's exactly what happened last week to a sturdy, two-year-old ewe owned by the Pitt County herdsman. On Friday, February 27, a ewe in Tyson's herd dropped three lambs — one white and two mottled — and all are thriving.

One unique aspect of the birth — biologically possible only in certain instances — is the fact that the father of the white lamb is a Dorset ram, and the father of the two spotted lambs is a Southdown ram.

Odds Great

Tyson states that he has been told — "and I assume it is true" —that the odds of a ewe giving birth to triplets are approximately 700 to one against it.

Pitt Farm Agent Sam Winchester declares that during "lambing" season, for a ewe to give birth to twins is not unusual and, in fact, is expected by sheep raisers so they may speedily build up their herds.

"However," the farm agent asserts, "the birth of triplet lambs is rather rare; and it is even more unusual if all three of them live to grow to maturity."

This latest accomplishment by a resourceful ewe is not the first such escapade among Tyson's flock, but after all he has been in the business long enough to know it was not an ordinary event in the strictest sense of the word.

Came Natural

Sheep raising came perfectly natural to Tyson, because he grew up with it. His father, Elbert Tyson, has been raising sheep for 50 years, and Lawrence explains that was one of the first tasks assigned him as a small boy — "tending" to the sheep.

Lawrence and his father are the largest sheep raisers in the county at present, and they ship more wool than any other one individual resident of Pitt County.

Currently they are grazing 136 mature sheep and 99 lambs. The younger Tyson explains sheep shearing time is approaching, because the flocks are relievec of their winter wool in May.

"Some sheep yield more and others less, but the average yield at each shearing is approximately six pounds of wool per sheep," the herdsman says. He states that all wool is sold and shipped through the Farmers' Cooperative Exchange.

Dairy Interst

In addition to their sheep-raising interests, the Tyson father and son operate a dairy with a large herd of Holstein cattle at Ballard's Crossroads. They adhere to the theory of diversified farming.

Winchester, the farm agent, says that sheep yield more revenue on less operating overhead than any livestock venture he is familiar with. About the only cost involved is pasture for grazing, he opines.

But the three lambs who, as yet, have not "gone astray" are frolicsome and happy at their grazing ground in the American Legion fairgrounds near Greenville.

They are galloping about on spindly legs these sunshiney days, seemingly oblivious of the out-of-the-ordinary interest they have created by being born.

Already walking and only a week old yesterday? That is no idle banter when it applies to the above lamb triplets mothered by a two-year-old ewe owned by Lawrence Tyson of Ballard's Crossroads. They are hale, hearty and hungry, but are not prone to leave their mother just yet. (Reflector Photo by Roy Hardee)

News From Ballards

By MRS. G. S. NICHOLS

Rev. Herbert Dale will fill his regular appointment at Ballards Presbyterian Church on Sunday evening, March 8, at 7:30 o'clock. Everyone is invited to be present for this service.

R. F. Lloyd, Sunday School superintendent, recently presented Mrs. W. B. Crawford, Bryan Joyner, Doug Joyner, and Graham Crawford 4-year perfect attendance awards. If you are not attending Sunday School anywhere else a welcome awaits you at Ballards.

The Youth Crusade for Christ program conducted by Rev. Wells is still being well attended on each Saturday evening and the pictures of the life of the apostle Paul grow more interesting each time. The seventh in the series will be shown on this Saturday evening and Evangelist Paul Black will preach. He will also preach on Friday evening, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and Sunday evening at 7:30. All these services are held in the Ballards Community Building and every one is invited. They are interdenominational.

Dacron, Orlon, Dynel, and Vicara, today's newest fabrics, was the main topic of discussion in the demonstration given by Mrs. Sue May, home agent, at the March meeting of the Home Demonstration club. Sample of each one of these fabrics were shown and the values, uses and advantages of these new synthetic materials was brought out in a most interesting way. Other fabrics shown and discussed were cotton, nylon, and rayon.

The meeting was presided over by the vice president, Mrs. Burnette and opened with the group singing, "On Top of Old Smoky" followed by a very helpful talk on "How to Keep from Getting Tired While Doing Household Duties" by Mrs. H. D. Moye, Family Life leader. Mrs. Wilbur Smith gave a talk on poultry and Mrs. G. S. Nichols on home management. Mrs. Lloyd Allen, Mrs. Nichols and Mrs. Smith gave interesting book reports.

At the business session it was decided that the club donate $6.00 to the Red Cross drive and it was announced that the district federation meeting would be held at the Contentnea School in Lenoir County on April 9, at 10:30 o'clock. EMPTYING THE MAIL BAGS

Have you ever watched Post Office employees emptying mail bags? They are not allowed simply to shake out the contents and then to reach down and see if there are any letters left in the bottom of the bag. Regulations require that they turn the mail bags inside out. One letter having momentous consequences for some person or corporation or perhaps for the government might be sticking in that mail bag.

We often hear about people getting religion. When people really get religion they turn their lives inside out. There are a lot of nominal Christians in the world. They are Christians because they were born Christians and brought up in a Christian home and under the influence of a Christian church. They have grown up to be pretty decent citizens. But there are others who became religious as the result of a profound experience. There is nothing inherited about their religion. The time came when for some reason—epochal for them—they turned their lives inside out.

Psychology and religion both unite in affirming that life can be satisfactorily improved only when it is basically transformed. Said Jesus to Nicodemus, "Ye must be born again." And the passing centuries have not altered the basic situation. Get a new start; turn your life inside out.

Embarrassing, To The Committee Members?

Why should it be embarrassing to elected officials for the people who elected them to know where they stand on votes on public matters?

The only answer to such a question we can think of is that the individual officials do not possess the courage of their apparent convictions, and are therefore reluctant to have their votes on particular issues exposed to the light of public scrutiny.

In other words, it would not be politically expedient.

Such a situation arose in Raleigh before the legislature. When Chairman James H. Pou Baily moved that the committee go into a closed session in order to vote on the bill, reporters refused to give their ground and leave the peoples' representatives to the darkness of a closed door session.

In the face of that Bailey called for a motion of adjournment and the committee adjourned rather than let the people know how individual senators cast their ballots on the favorable or unfavorable committee report on the bill. Later Bailey explained to reporters he did not think committee members should be subjected to possible "embarrassment" by having their vote in committee made public.

That in a nutshell is one of the greatest troubles with government officials in this country today on all levels. They are too busy playing politics and not busy enough devoting their full attention to looking after the best interest of the people who elect them.

If a legislator is first and foremost seeking to do the best job he can for his constituents, it should not be embarrassing to him if the people in his bailiwick know how he votes in a General Assembly committee.

It may cost the legislator a few votes if his ballot in committee is made public but it should not cause him any embarrassment.

Statements such as Bailey made in connection with the Senate committee vote on the mechanical inspection bill, makes the people back home wonder whether some legislators are showing one face to the people and exhibiting another when committee doors are closed.

At Least Part Of The Job Will Be Done

Getting Greenville's registration books corrected and brought up to date is going to be a sizeable job for the city clerk to get done between now and the city elections May 7.

There is no question about the fact that work needs to be done on the city's registration books. The number of citizens who found their registration fouled up at the last two city elections indicate the election books are in an inexcusable mess.

The Reflector hopes the effort to get the registration books of Greenville up to date before the election is successful. We hope the books are revised so that those citizens who have transferred their residency from one ward to another will not have to go from one polling place to another before they can find where their names are registered. We hope the names of deceased voters are removed from the registration books to obviate the possibilities of ballot box stuffing.

Action taken by the aldermen to get the registration books straight is one which will do some good. But we doubt this action alone will result in as accurate of set of registration books as Greenville citizens would like to have when they go to the polls. Sooner or later it is going to take a complete new registration in the city.

Correcting the record of current voters in Greenville and recopying the registration books is going to be a great help to the voters and to the poll holders. Nevertheless the city officials should not do away altogether with the idea of holding a complete new registration in Greenville as soon as it is feasible.

No Tears Shed In The Free World

Varied reaction to the death of Josef Stalin has been depicted by the wide assortment of statements concerning the passing of the world's most powerful dictator.

Outside the iron curtain, while there were qualms about what the future would bring under new Soviet leaders, there were no statements which indicated any nation felt keen bereavement over the loss of the communist dictator.

The way the story of Stalin's death was played in newspapers around the globe likewise is an indication of the way citizens outside the iron curtain felt. The London News told the story under a one column headline on page eight. The single column headline read "Death of Mr. Stalin."

At the other extreme was the newspaper in Mexico City which kept its readers aware of the latest bulletins on Stalin's condition after the Russian dictator was stricken. In the 24 hours preceding Stalin's death headlines over stores of his condition read: "He's Still Alive;" "Bulletin No. 2 "Not Yet"; "Bulletin No. 3 "Still Not Yet." When the news of Stalin's death arrived, the Mexico City paper told the story in a 12-inch banner in an extra: "At Long Last."

The treatment of news of Stalin's death by most American newspapers ranged between the extremes of the London paper and the Mexico City paper. For practically all newspapers it was big news. Yet death, no matter where it strikes, is nothing of which to make fun.

By and large, the free world breathed a sigh of relief at Stalin's death. Whether it will mean less strife or more strife in the world remains to be seen. But most private opinions lean to the optimistic side.

National Whirligig

Every Saturday this veteran Washington newspaper correspondent devotes his column to answering readers' questions of general interest on national and international policies and personalities. Questions may be sent direct to Ray Tucker at 6308 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON—"Doesn't it strike you that the Eisenhower Administration," asks M.H. of Brooklyn, "is blundering and floundering around? So far, it has done nothing and kept none of its campaign pledges.

"Where is the businesslike kind of government they were going to give us? Where is the change we were supposed to have voted for?"

Answer: A simple and easy answer to these querulous questions, which echo the charges of counter-attacking Democrats on and off Capitol Hill, is that President Eisenhower has been in office only 38 days.

Secondly, that no incoming executive was ever beset with so many difficult problems, domestic and foreign, or buried beneath such a "mess." Changing the guard at Washington after 20 years is not a minor operation.

What many readers, who reflect M.H.'s grievance, do not realize is that, within less than two months, Eisenhower has fixed the pattern of a new kind of government. He has moved for economy, decentralization and a return of many powers to the people and the states. That was his basic pledge in the campaign.

It will take months, perhaps years, to execute this program. But the principal point is that he has made a start. He can no more accomplish his aims in a few months than a person can take off 200 pounds of surplus fat in the same period. Such a violent cure would kill both the individual and the nation's economy.

DEFENSE SPENDING—"Why is the United States spending twenty times as much for defense as Canada?" explodes J. M. of Middletown, N. Y. "Canada is the same size as our country. After all, the American people never voted for the Marshall Plan or any of these other give-away programs."

Answer: Canada may be almost as large as the United States, geographically, but she has only one-tenth the population. Despite current booms and mineral developments, Canada's financial resources are relatively small.

Moreover, Canada gives defense aid in many indirect ways as a member of the British Commonwealth. We would be fortunate if all our supposed allies were as loyal and as brave as the Canadians. I knew them in World War I. Finally, Congress votes for the "give-away programs."

FAIR HANDLING—"Why this legal ring-around for the Rosenbergs, convicted atom spies?" inquires a Waterbury, Conn., teacher, who fails to give her name. "Why the delay in applying the penalty they deserve? Who will have the last word?"

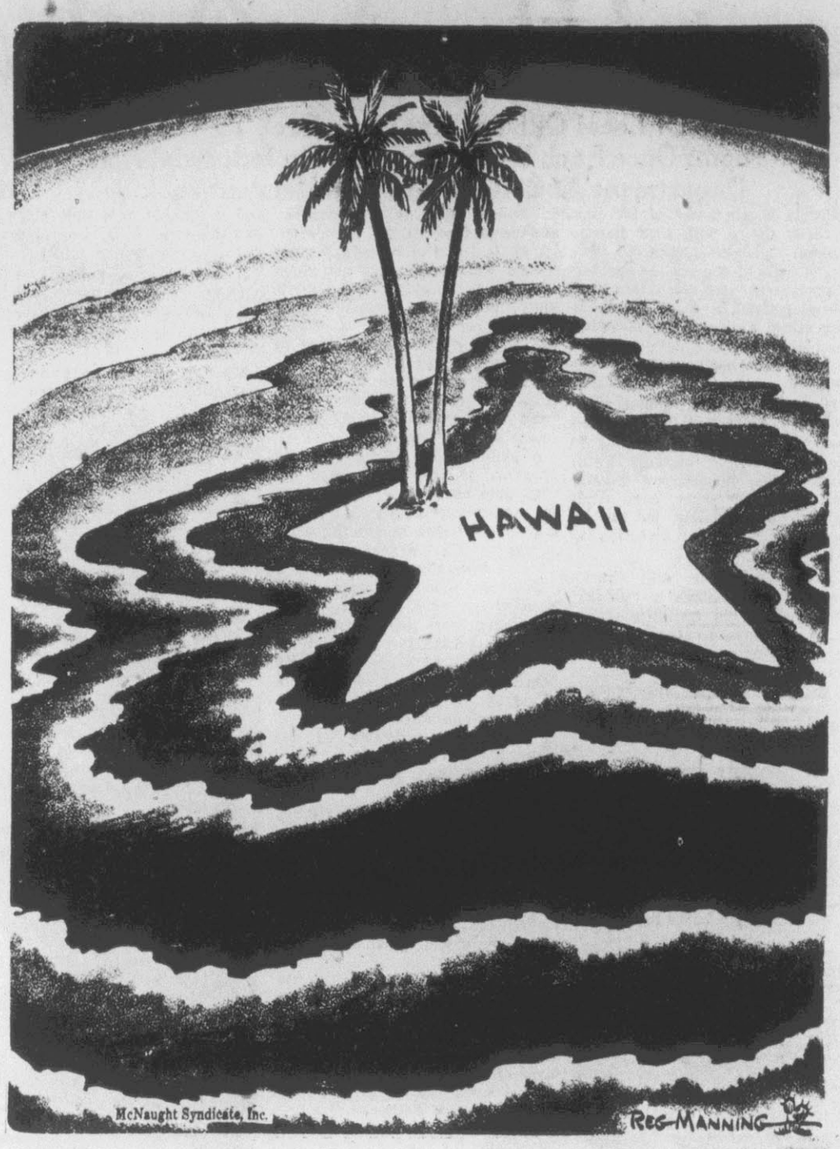

Answer: Despite their mortal offense, the Rosenbergs are entitled to every legal safeguard vouchsafed them under the Constitution. Moreover, our fair handling of their case may be a lesson to peoples who have fallen for Russian communism. The Supreme Court will have the last legal word, of course, since Eisenhower has already refused executive clemency.

MARSHALL ACCEPTS BOTH SALARIES—"Is it true?" asks E. S. of Muskegon, Mich.," that General Marshall drew both his Army retirement pay of $16,000 at the same time that he served as Red Cross president at $22,500 a year? Many workers give free time to this cause."

Answer: I am asked about this at the start of every annual drive for Red Cross funds. The question, I am told, prevents many people from giving. Marshall did accept both salaries.

But he worked full time for the Red Cross, rebuilding it after the postwar letdown. He traveled 40,000 miles in 30 days, although no youngster. An executive heading a corporation with the Red Cross budget of $200,000,000 would be worth $100,000 a year.

The 49th Star

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Normally I steer clear of political issues in this column. However, there is so much interest in the one-way street question that it is impossible to pass it up. Last night a housewife from Winterville called me and said, "If you want to know what's wrong with Greenville, I'll tell you—and it's not the one-way streets."

The lady went on to emphasize that the clerks in the Greenville stores apparently have no desire to wait on the customers. She named a few exceptions in various stores, but said that in general the Greenville clerks were lax unless the manager happened to be on the floor. "Then," she said, "you can really tell a difference.

"I have heard other people talking about this same thing," she said, "so I'm not the only one. It just seems that clerks in other towns have a different attitude."

This lady likes the one-way streets. She thinks that if business is off here it is not due to the one-way streets. "And another thing," she said, "people don't seem to realize how much the short crop has hurt us."

Captain Bill Rooney of the Air ROTC unit, East Carolina College, showed me an interesting survey made by one of his Cadets, Charles Watson of Greenville. Charles made the survey in response to a class assignment by Captain Rooney, who requested that his students analyze some particular system. In general, Charles' detailed survey led him to the conclusion of favoring the one-way streets.

Charles asked 50 Greenville citizens their opinion, and every one favored the system. However, he quoted one farmer and warehouse owner as saying, "Farmers in the Stokes township plan to trade in Washington until the one-way streets are abandoned."

Another warehouse owner and farmer said, "Farmers in the Vanceboro area that do not like the one-way streets are in the minority." He said the one-way streets did not hurt his tobacco sales.

Charles' survey reveals one very startling fact: Since it has been put in accidents have increased 52 per cent.

A janitor at the State Bank Building relates, "Before the one-way streets traffic would be lined up on Dickinson Avenue from Five Points to White's Stores. Now traffic hardly ever backs up on Dickinson Avenue.'

Charles concludes that the system should be continued. Its position seems shaky at the present time. The Board of Aldermen would appreciate your comments, for they will have a bearing on the destiny of this plan.

And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

By LYNN NISBET

TENSION — The tension which has been felt around the capitol halls for the past month or more was lessened somewhat this week when the joint appropriations committee decided really to get to work on the biennial appropriations bill. There continues an atmosphere of uncertainty and confusion for the reason that there is doubt about where the real leadership is vested.

UNIQUE — Oldtime cannot recall a situation comparable to that now existing in State government. It hasn't shown up in every expression or action, but there is background and underground tension which those who move in or close to legislative circles can sense—but not quite identify or isolate. In some respects it is similar to conditions prevailing in the early days of the Scott regime. In other ways it is more like the situation at beginning of the Ehringhaus administration 20 years ago. In 1949 everybody knew about accumulated treasury balances and upward swing in State revenue. In 1933 the State was in the depth of a depression, having a treasury deficit and faced with prospects of declining revenue. Now there is a small treasury balance, stabilized or possibly declining revenue prospects and unprecedented demands for expanded State services calling for many millions more than can be counted upon from present revenue sources.

LEADERSHIP — In the Ehringhaus and Scott administrations the leadership of the General Assembly was not in full accord with the executive. The current session began with leadership definitely in the camp of Governor William Umstead. Pre-session announcement that Frank Taylor had been designated as the Governor's legislative counsel, and unopposed selection of Eugene Bost as Speaker in the House and Edwin Pate as President protem in the Senate justified predictions that this would be a "conservative" administration in both executive and legislative branches.

CHANGE — Then came Governor Umstead's inaugural address and later his budget message. Between these communications from the Governor two significant happenings served to change the course of thinking on part of many legislators. The Governor was hospitalized with a heart attack and the appropriations bill of the advisory budget commission was introduced. The budget bill called for an unprecedented $637 million spending for the next biennium. Members of the Assembly were not able to discuss the items with the Governor, and the budget message was sent from his bedroom and read to the joint session—calling for additional appropriations of unspecified amount but somewhere between $15 and $32 million, plus a $15 million bond issue by legislative enactment and $72 million to be submitted to vote of the people.

LET DOWN — Immediately there was a lot of talk about these facts: That the Governor and most members of the General Assembly had won election on campaign opposition to any increase in taxes; that the budget bill was essentially in balance after using up whatever balances or reserves were on hand; that the $15-$32 million additional spending and the necessary $5 million debt service charge to carry the bonds, if issued, could not be afforded without additional taxes. The next logical step was for strong primary supporters of Governor Umstead to complain that they had been "let down." (Actually, most of the current recommendations of the Governor were implied if not specifically stated in his campaign speeches.

CONFUSED — The legislative situation became confused by reason of the fact that Senate and House officers and committee chairmen, all of whom had supported Umstead in the primary, were reluctant to go along with the budget proposals, while the so-called liberal element in the membership, which had opposed him in the primary, moved into position of championing his program. Nothing quite like that had ever happened in North Carolina. The nearest approximate precedent was in 1933 when Governor Ehringhaus had a personally and politically "friendly" but legislatively antagonistic General Assembly.

HISTORIC — The 1933 session of the General Assembly was historically important. That was the year in which the State took over major responsibility for operating the public schools, adopted the policy of a general sales tax, and wrote a revenue bill that has been changed only in minor points since. Some folks are wondering now if the 1953 session may have comparable opportunity to make history which would become precedent for many years

What Other Papers Are Thinking

THE DAYS OF INFLATION
(Wilson Times)

Strange, but no one likes deflation. Strange, too, but no one likes inflation. But, if the truth were known, more people would vote for the latter than for the former. Some labor leaders showed that the other day when they accused the Eisenhower administration of helping the employers by putting more value into the dollar. But doesn't that additional value accrue to us in the same way that it accrues to the employers? And wouldn't we all be better off if the present 52-cent dollar, climbed back to a 59-cent dollar, it's value before Korea?

Inflation, when it starts, is like sweet wine. The people do like it because it gives them an opportunity to raise the prices of the things they sell. Employes like it, too, because they have grounds for wage increases. But since the end of the war in 1945 we had far too many increases. The man who earned $50 then is likely earning $90 now. But look, on the other hand, what he's paying for a car; look what he puts out for food! What he would like is what all of us would like, the present wages with 1939 prices. But when President Eisenhower tries to give us a better dollar, they complain.

The difference lies in the fact that most people believe that a dollar can be more easily picked up during periods of inflation. They hark back to the days when eggs sold for 10 cents a dozen and remember that not always did they have the 10 cents. They hark back, too, to the bargains. They want the import-export had some capital. But isn't it all relative? While your dollars in investments might be growing, your dollars in the bank might be shrinking. It's in keeping with the old theory that for every action there's a reaction. If we're wont to criticize the administration for doing what it said it would try to do, let's bear in mind that as our dollars increase in value prices will come down correspondingly. Otherwise there'd be no increase.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

Of 2,237 leading corporations, real estate companies in 1952 made the largest gains in net profits over 1951, according to the annual survey of the National City Bank of New York.

The 58 real estate companies increased their net earnings by 65 per cent. The next best showing was by 22 restaurant and hotel corporations, up 44 per cent, and 18 fire and casualty insurance companies, up 38 per cent.

The grand total of all the corporations, however, was 3 per cent lower than the year before.

The industrial groups were down 11 per cent. There were wide variations among the industrial groups, however, with 23 aircraft and parts corporations up 27 per cent, and 48 textile products, excepting cotton, down 65 per cent. The 29 cotton textile companys' profits were down 51 per cent.

All the trade groups, chain, department, specialty, wholesale and others showed declines with wholesale and miscellaneous undergoing a 33 per cent drop in their nets.

All transportation corporation groups cited showed gains, with 131 railroads up 20 per cent, 11 air transport corporations up 3 per cent and 45 miscellanous transportation companies up 25 per cent.

The meat packing, sugar, beverages, coal mining and amusement groups all showed declines of 25 per cent or more, while construction groups showed gains of more than that figure.

In the aggregate, the 2,237 corporations showed an increase in sales to a new all-time high, but higher operating expenses, strikes, inventory write-downs and price ceilings brought about the 3 per cent lower return for stockholders.

DISTILLERS SPLIT ON BONDING PLANS

Proposals to amend Federal laws so that whisky can remain for twelve instead of eight years in bonded warehouses have split distilling companies into two opposing groups.

Each group has formed its own organization to impress its view on Congress. One group points out that high taxes on whisky have slowed sales so much that the total in bond is abnormally large and that forcing the eight-year-old stuff out would bankrupt many companies. (They pay the tax when the whisky comes out of bond.) The other group says the four-year respite would benefit only a few companies and would cause a drop in tax revenues. Some independent observers agree with this point, noting that many companies would leave as much hard stuff as possible in bond in hopes that taxes would come down.

There is still a third group in the industry that holds that the other two groups should compromise and not divert attention from the campaign to lower alcoholic beverage excises.

"FAIR TRADE" IS OUT OF FIFTH STATE

Even as we were reporting here that the number of states in which manufacturers are permitted to fix the prices of trade-marked goods was reduced from 45 to 44, the New Jersey Supreme Court made it 43

The Court held that all retailers could not be bound by a contract between a manufacturer and one retailer. Since it is generally impossible for a manufacturer to get every retailer to sign such an agreement, it appears that fair trade no longer exists in New Jersey.

TANNERS FIGHT FOR SALES WITH NEW COLORS, QUALITY

Leather is fighting the inroads of plastics and other materials with more colors, new finishes and new textures, it appeared at the annual leather show held in New York this week. Manufacturers of shoes handbags and other leather goods displayed considerable interest in the better grades and newer colors for next fall and spring production. Leather in more than 75 shades was displayed.

New stylings and new accessories also aroused attention at the Allied Shoe Products and Style Exhibit, on at the same time.

NEW PRODUCTS

AIR CONDITIONERS: A line of packaged home air-conditioning equipment, said to remove twice as much water from the air as other equipment and to require less water and fuel, has been unveiled (by Coleman Co., Wichita, Kan.). The line includes combination heating and cooling systems.

TIGHT: A new cellphane adhesive tape, said to stick six times tighter than before, has been announced (by Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co., St. Paul, Minn.). Despite its high adhesiveness the tape unwinds easily from the roll.

TANNER: A new device to give a quick suntan consists of wide, flat cardboard collar, coated on the top side with foil. Worn around the neck, it doubles the amount of sunshine played on the face and hence will give a tan at any time of the year. (It is by Spee—D—Tan Co., 100 S. Providence Ave., Atlantic City, N.J.)

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK (AP) — What makes and breaks a dictator?

The death of Joseph Stalin leaves the average man wondering:

"What makes a guy like that anyway? I wouldn't have lived his life for all the gold in Ft. Knox."

He feels that a dictator is a freak offshoot of some kind, only rarely to be reckoned with. The truth is the human race has been afflicted through all time by dictators, large and small. It still is, it perhaps always will be.

The ordinary man can look around his own small world and count any number of seedling dictators, a spoiled child, domineering wife, a brow-beating husband, an overly stern schoolteacher, the little straw bosses of business and the ward bosses of politics, the petty tyrant bureaucrat, an officious cop, a brass-happy officer in the armed forces.

How do they differ from Stalin, Hitler, or Mussolini? Only in degree. They lack the brains, energy or courage to extend their dominance. But they are linked to Stalin, Hitler and Napoleon by the same basic drive, love of power.

Most people like to love and be loved, to hate a little, to rule and be ruled, to have enough prestige to make them feel good-but not at the price of too much responsibility.

And they find it difficult to believe anyone would want power for the sake of power alone.

But dictators, great or small, do. The ability to exercise pure naked power is to them food, wine, love and money. To gain power they will sacrifice on the altar of their ego all other human satisfactions of body and spirit.

All dictators, in homes, schoolrooms or vast empires, plead use the same excuse in their drive to gain and hold power. "I am not doing this for myself. It is for your welfare I do these things." Dictators are always selfless in their own stupendously blind eyes. To them their aims are always pure and great.

Thus Napoleon wrecked a continent with incessant wars, drained French manhood of most of its blood, and all he was really trying to do he said was to create a peaceful Europe. Thus a domineering mother makes a stranger of her husband and drives her children from her home, and cannot understand it, because, "I only tried to make them do what I thought was best for them. And if they had only done it, everything would have turned out all right."

What destroys dictators? Their egomania usually carries them too far, their excesses become too much for the people to bear, and they meet the fate of Nero. Or, like Hitler and Mussolini, they are deluded into believing because they are skilled in politics they also are masters of war. They get to thinking they can do anything. And who is to tell them they can't?

In this respect Stalin is the most successful dictator of modern times. He pitted his enemies against each other rather than against him. He kept a wolf-like sense of caution to the end.

Dictators on thrones or in pulpits, in kitchens or classrooms, at factory benches or executive desks, usually share one other thing—they are lonely, distrustful men and women.

For there isn't room in the human heart for both the love of power and the love of love itself. Most people prefer love to power. If they didn't there would be no human race.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—The brilliant, bitingly witty Clare Boothe Luce, tapped by President Eisenhower as ambassador to Italy, has been seen in the Capital a lot in recent weeks. She knows her way around having served from 1939 to 1946 as a member of Congress from Connecticut. The former journalist and playwright has made frequent flying trips to Washington not only for conferences but to vie with local hostesses in the art of strategic entertaining.

One of her most talked-about dinners, given with her husband Henry Luce, Time-Life-Fortune publisher, was in honor of the speaker of the House, Joseph Martin (R—Mass.), with Vice President and Mrs. Nixon among the 100 or more top-ranking Republican guests.

Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy came to town to entertain the party, as did opera singer Gladys Swarthout and the popular Rosemary Clooney, stage, radio and TV songstress. A top-flight orchestra played during the dinner, but, clever Clare introduced a "measure of economy". As a Republican promises to cut extravagances, she served only three courses and one wine.

When Truman cabinet officers gave up their posts to the Republicans they also forfeited the luxurious chauffeur-driven limousines that went with them. Mrs. Oscar Chapman, wife of the former secretary of the Interior, now introduces her husband as "my new chauffeur," and Mrs. Jesse Donaldson, wife of the former postmaster general, has been taking driving lessons.

The Mexican Ambassador, Rafael de la Colina, says he can cat-nap for five minutes or five hours anywhere, any time to catch up on lost sleep. Senora de la Colina recently gave him one of the new contour chairs to make snoozing even easier.

Mme. Wellington Koo, wife of the Chinese ambassador, has combined in a single opulent bib necklace what used to be individual strands of rare pearls, rubies and emeralds.

Jean Macgregor Lynch, one of the Capital's most imaginative decorators, has set up a unique gallery in what used to be an old apothecary shop in swank Georgetown. It's for the transfer of the unused décorator treasures she believes lie buried in the attics and barns of half of the people to the homes of the other half.

'Roman Banquet' Staged By GHS Latin Students

Entertainment afforded the guests at the Roman banquet staged by Latin students of the local high school was a dance by costumed "slave girls" carrying trays.

Costumed slave girls, first year Latin students, are shown serving the guests at a Roman banquet staged last night as a culmination of a study by high school students on Roman life and customs. One slave girl fans the guests in the usual custom during the meal. A mural depicting Jupiter and Juno, who "presided" over the banquet is shown in the background. (Reflector Photos by Muriel Shotwell.)

Latin classes of the Greenville High School last night turned the calendar back approximately 2,000 years and held a Roman banquet in the basement of the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

As a culmination of almost a year's study of Roman life and customs, the second year Latin class, under the direction of Mrs. J. K. Long and with the help of first year students, put their studies into practice by staging a banquet similar to those of the Romans 2,000 years ago.

The students, all dressed as Romans, filed into the dining hall to music and John Brooks, host, called on Jupiter and Juno, in the Roman custom, to preside over the banquet.

A large mural behind the banquet table, drawn by Jay Robbins, depicted Jupiter and Juno.

The "slaves" mixed mulsum (drink) before the guests and after the first course was served, minus knives and forks, the boar's head with an apple in his mouth was brought in by a slave girl and the chief carver, Mickey Sumrell.

During the three-course banquet, a large number of "slave girls" danced and Sara Adams did a Grecian vase dance. Songs sung in Latin furnished music for the event and all of the greetings were done in Latin in addition to the program printed in Latin.

The banquet hall was decorated with "marble" columns. The long banquet tables were covered in white with ivy running the length of the tables. Bowls of fruit and flowers were placed on the table and one centerpiece was flanked with candles.

Approximately 50 students took part in the banquet with the first year class acting as slaves. Slaves were Grayson Waldrop, Betty Sugg, Nancy Ann Hoot, Alice Edwards, Ellen Gibson, Ronita Respess, Jean Moye, Nancy Brown, Henrietta Swayne, Terry Tripp, and Madalyn Colemon.

Teddy Fountain served as chief cook with Nancy Harris at the head of the dining room. Sam Winchester and John Brooks were general chairmen of the banquet with the following committee heads: Norma Faye Mills, food; Mary Will Long, entertainment; and Nelson Blount, decorations.

Special guests included Mrs. J. H. Rose and Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Dowd. A number of parents, students, and teachers were invited to the banquet to take part as the "spectators."

White Shrine Has St. Patrick's Party

Greenville White Shrine members were entertained with a gala Saint Patrick's party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Kennedy on Wednesday evening.

The house was artistically arranged through out with beautiful mixed spring flowers.

Mrs. Maude Baynor Foy of Kinscharge of many interesting and unique games which caused much merriment, and prizes were awarded to lucky winners in various contests. Between games Mrs. Blanche Jackson gave several comic readings. "You've Got the Flu" and "Woman's Essay on Man" were especially liked. Mrs. Jackson also conducted a riddle program.

Mrs. Maude Baynor Fay of Kinston, Mrs. G. A. Pittman of Snow Hill and Mrs. Elba Warren were special guests. Other out of town people present were: Albert Scott, Mrs. Marie Scott, Mrs. Dora Cayton, Mrs. Thelma Phillips, Mrs. Katie Carter, and Mrs. Eva Warren of Kinston. There were approximately fifty persons present.

A refreshment plate of decorated St. Patrick homemade cup cakes and tasty open faced sandwiches, with pickles, potato chips and hot coffee was served by the entertainment committee composed of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh J. Sawyer and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Jackson.

Pirates Leave For Finals Of N.A.I.A. Tournament

12-Man Squad To Represent School In Tournament

Twelve Pirates, not quite sure of what faces them in the next week, left Greenville this morning on the first leg of a trip to Kansas City and the national tournament of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics.

The East Carolina College basketball team, winners of the District 26 tournament and regular season standard bearers for the North State Conference, will arrive in K. C. late tonight. They'll fly from Raleigh to Washington, then transfer to another plane which will carry them into Kansas City.

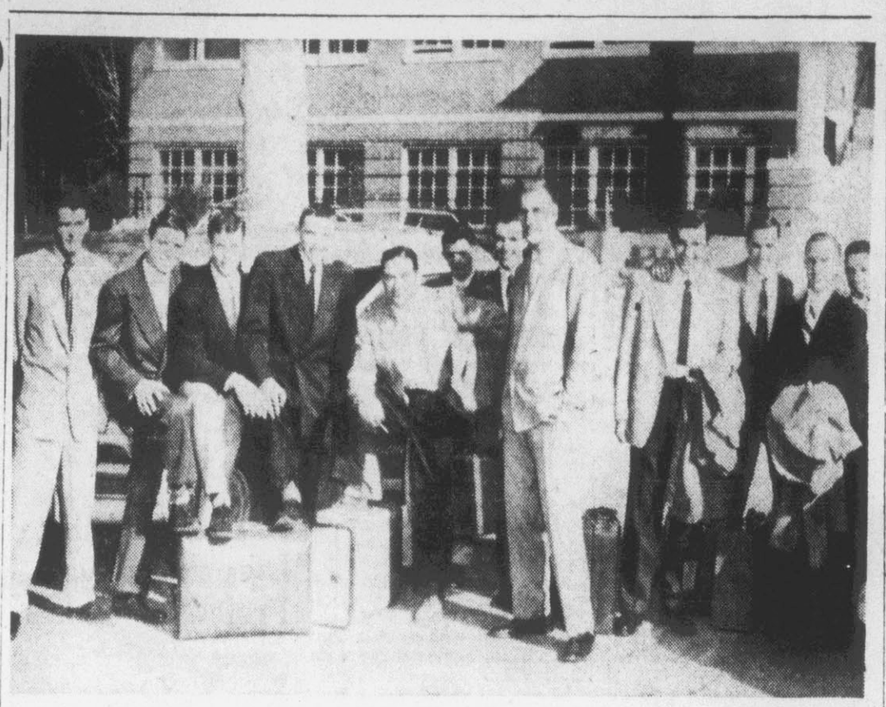

The Pirates will be going into the tournament "blind." That is, they won't know who will be their first round opponent until they get situated Sunday. There are 32 teams entered in the tournament with Hamline College in the favorite's chair as defending champion.

Coach Howard Porter is taking ten players and a manager to the national dribble derby. The group is headed by a pair of All-North State Conference players, Bobby Hodges and Sonny Russell. Other members of the squad are Charlie Huffman, Paul Jones, Bob Moye, Harry Hayes, Jere Hilburn, J. C. Thomas, Cecil Heath, and Jack Carr. The team manager is Norwood Talton.

The squad drove to Raleigh this morning. Their plane was scheduled to leave Raleigh-Durham airport at 2 o'clock. They will have a three-hour lay-over in Washington, D. C., and are expected to arrive in Kansas City at approximately 11:30 (EST) tonight.

The Pirates went through a 22-game schedule this year with 18 victories and four losses. One of the losses was to High Point in the North State Conference tournament, one was to the University of North Carolina, and the others were to Western Carolina and Lenoir Rhyne.

The record was one of the best ever posted by an East Carolina team. Their conference mark of 14-2 was the best winning mark turned in by a North State team in a number of years.

BON VOYAGE—East Carolina's basketbal team packed up and pulled out of Greenville this morning — destination Kansas City. The Pirates will represent the Carolinas in the national N. A. I. A. tournament opening in Kansas City Monday. Left to right: J. C. Thomas, Harry Hayes, Sonny Russell, Charlie Huffman, Coach Howard Porter, Bob Moye, Jere Hilburn, Bobby Hodges, Paul Jones, Jack Carr, Cecil Heath, and Manager Norwood Talton.

Graham Confirms Boxing Decision

NEW YORK (UP)—Welterweight Billy Graham was delighted today that he had "taken the officials off the spot" by finally giving middleweight Joey Giardello a thorough trouncing.

And now Irish Billy of New York would like to shoot for the vacant middleweight crown. His ambitions were whetted by one of the most impressive victories of his career Friday night over the younger and heavier Philadelphian who previously had won two controversial split decisions over him.

There was no controversy Friday night as 30-year old Billy battered out a unanimous 12-round decision over 22-year old Giardello before 8,638 who watched the nationally televised and broadcast bout in Madison Square Garden. It was the Garden's largest crowd of the year. The gate of $30,649 was also the largest.

Giardello out-weighed Graham 155 1-2 pounds to 149 1-2, and it seemed in the first two rounds that muscular Joey's fire might wither veteran Billy in a hurry. But Billy survived a deep gash on his nose and a thorough battering in the early sessions to come on with persistent rights to the kidney that had Giardello floundering and holding on as early as the sixth round.

There were no knockdowns; but after the sixth round the big question was whether Giardello could remain afoot for the 12 rounds—two more rounds than in either of their previous bouts. At the finish, Joey [illegible] a gash at the corner of his left eye and from a gash inside his lower lip. Also his left ear was badly swollen.

ADVICE FROM MOTHER—A bay filly, daughter of Citation, Calumet Farm's millionaire racing champion of a few years ago, apparently gets an earful of motherly advice from Flitaway, during romp at Claiborne Farm near Lexington, Ky.

Joe Louis Starts On A New Career

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UP)—Former heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis embarked today on a new career in — get this, boys—table tennis.

Louis and Reba Monness, table tennis expert and one-time international women's champion, introduced at the opening of the St. Louis Sports, Travel and Boat Show a new act which they hope to take around the world on night club and vaudeville stages.

Miss Monness does the especially difficult tricks in the act but the lumbering Louis, whose shuffling stance was well known to boxing fans, proves that he's remarkably light on his feet.

Louis can handle a game with Miss Monness using two and three balls at a time with little difficulty. They also have mastered a routine in which they play a tune while using frying pans as paddles.

"When I was in training for fights I played a lot of table tennis because it's good for coordinating mind and muscle," Louis said. "And I really like the game."

He should also be pleased with the money he's getting for switching from punches to ping pong. The pair is reported to be making about $5000 for a nine-day run here.

Miss Monness got the idea for the act after playing against Louis a couple of years ago when he was in training at Grossinger's Resort in upper New York state.

"Joe's reflexes are excellent," she said. "And as a person, he is very alert."

She also has played against current heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano and contender Coley Wallace at Grossinger's.

Louis and his new partner make a sort of Mutt and Jeff combination. She is 5 feet 4 inches tall and he is 6 feet 3 inches.

Louis has to keep up a mild training routine to be able to bounce around after elusive ping pong balls, but still the act makes him do some heavy breathing.

"This is rougher than Marciano," he puffed after a fast-paced rehearsal.

Major League Briefs

MIAMI, Fla. (UP)—Jackie Robinson moves back into his old cleanup batting spot and Ralph Branca gets a chance to start a pitching comeback today as the Brooklyn Dodgers open their 36-game exhibition season against the Boston Braves.

Robinson hit .308 last year while batting third. He batted fourth in three previous seasons and never hit under .328. Branca, victim of Giant batter Bobby Thompson's game-winning homer in the deciding game of the 1951 National League playoff series, had a disappointing 4-2 record last year.

TUCSON, Ariz. (UP) — The New York Giants were at full strength for their exhibition opener against the Cleveland Indians today as Al Dark, captain and shortstop, joined the club.

Dark, who held out until three days ago when he agreed to a two-year contract for $65,000, will not play today. Giant Manager Leo Durocher said right hander Sal Maglie, who had a bad back and an 18-8 record last year, will pitch against the Cubs at Phoenix Monday.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (UP) — Jackie Jensen, former Yankee outfielder who made good with Washington last season, will bat cleanup for the Senators today in their exhibition opener with the Philadelphia Athletics.

Jensen compiled a .280 average while batting third after the Yankees sent him to Washington early in the 1952 campaign.

MESA, Ariz. (UP) — Flu and a sore arm forced Manager Phil Cavarretta of the Cubs and Manager Paul Richards of the White Sox to shuffle their pitching choices for today's exhibition opener between the Chicago Clubs.

Rookie left hander Fred Baczewski will substitute for Calvin Howe, who came out of Thursday's inter-squad game with a sore arm. Baczewski will join veterans Bob Rush and Warren Hacker in handling the Cubs' pitching. Lou Kretlow, Tom Byrne and Jim Suchecki will pitch for the White Sox.

HAVANA, Cuba (UP) — With home run king Ralph Kiner the only absentee, the Pittsburgh Pirates open their exhibition season tonight against the Cuban all-stars.

Fred Haney, new Pirate manager, said the early exhibitions will be "experimental" ones with a different lineup playing each game.

Meanwhile at his Palm Springs, Calif., home, holdout Kiner said the "next move" is up to Pirate General Manager Branch Rickey. "I did my part when I agreed to Rickey's terms offered me in February. I haven't heard a word from him in three weeks," Kiner said.

All-Stars Lose

The Greenville Recreation Dept. All-Stars lost to the Kinston Civitans on Thursday night 35-24 in the opening round of the District Midget Tournament in Kinston.

The locals were held to 5 points during the first half while the Kinston outfit was building up a 19 point lead to coast on to victory. The Greenville lads came back in the last half and outscored the Kinston outfit 19-11, but it was too late after the weak start.

Charles Lewis was high scorer for Kinston while Wilkerson and Jordan led Greenville with 6 points each. Kinston was held scoreless in the fourth period while the locals racked up 12 points.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla.: Richie Kid Howard, 132, Halifax, Nova Scotia, outpointed Joey Gambino, 120, New York, (10).

Sam Snead Takes Golfing Lead

BATON ROUGE, La. (UP) — Slammin' Sammy Snead, one of golfdom's most consistent winners, moved out today for undisputed possession of the lead over a blue-ribbon field as the $10,000 Baton Rouge Open Golf Tournament swings into its third day.

The old pro from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., almost nabbed the top spot in the second round Friday, but he missed a nine-foot putt on the fast 18th green that would have given him a one-stroke lead instead of a tie with youthful Dick Mayer of St. Petersburg, Fla.

Snead, whose long shots down the moss-draped fairways were perfect, toured the 6,444 Baton Rouge Country Club course with a four-under-par 68 for a 36-hole total of 137. Only the missed putt—"my worst shot of the day." — kept him from moving into the lead.

But the 27-year old Mayer fired a five-under 67 to go with his 70 in the opening round for a tie with Snead at 137.

Mayer rolled in six birdies and only a bogey on the ninth kept him from taking the lead.

Snead, the gallery favorite, became the favorite to take the tournament despite his tie with Mayer.

Freddie Haas, of New Orleans, co-leader in the opening round with Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va., slipped to a two-under par Friday which put him one stroke back of the leaders with a 138.

Bulldogs To Play Kinston Monday

C. M. Eppes High School will play its last regular season home basketball game Monday night against Atkins High School of Kinston. The Bulldogs Jayvees will start the evening's action at 7:15.

The contest will be the last for the Bulldogs until they go to Goldsboro next weekend for the district tournament. The tournament is scheduled for March 12, 13, and 14 but the Bulldogs won't have to play until Friday because of a first round bye. The dribble derby will be held in the East End Gymnasium in Goldsboro.

Fraley Predicts: Probation Period Over For Mantle

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP) — Fearless Fraley's facts and figures:

The decision of the New York Yankees to move Mickey Mantle into the cleanup spot in the batting order indicates that this is the year master Mickey will be asked to prove whether he is going to be the "new DiMaggio."

Mantle has had two years to get his feet on the ground, a pair of seasons in which, despite the enthusiasm for his talents, he has been something less than sensational. He hit only .267 in 1951 and but .311 last season.

Now 21, Mantle no longer is a "boy" and must start producing in larger quantities. Joltin' Joe was 21 his first year with the Yankees and batted .323. He boomed to .346 his second year... so from an age and experience angle, Mantle must payoff this season...

Ken Loeffler, whose LaSalle team defends its crown in the Nanament opening tonight at Madison Square Garden, boasts that he never has been beaten by a club using a big man as a fixed pivot.

In last year's tournament his quintet beat four such, Bob Zawoluk of St. John's, Walt Dukes of Seton Hall, Monk Meineke of Dayton and Jim Tucker of Duquesne. The lone exception was Kansas and Clyde Lovellette, but their fixed pivot beat Loeffler when his tallest man was out of action. LaSalle has lost only two of 27 this season, the pair of defeats by DePaul, a fast break team...

Did you know that Del Webb, president of the New York Yankees, once was in Alcatraz? It was only a visit. As a young ball player, a tug on which his team was traveling to a game was forced to put in at the prison island during a storm. Webb and his teammates spent several hours as guests of the warden... that's the kind of host who doesn't ask you to come back for a longer visit.

Willie Shoemaker, the California jockey, is noted as a man of few words and Eddie Arcaro can substantiate those claims.

"We were taking a seven hour train trip together for a race and I thought I'd get to know him pretty well during that time," Arcaro relates. "But the only thing he said to me during that whole time was 'please pass the salt.'"

Proving, no doubt, that the dinner table makes an able conversationalist out of many people.

Winterville Sets Sights For State Girls Tournament

JEAN ANN LIVERMAN

Pitt Champions Face Crossnore In First Round

Winterville's topflight girls basketball team is tournament-bound.

The Pitt County girls basketball champions turn to new fields of conquest next week when they journey to Aberdeen to pit their court skill against some of the best teams in the state in tournament play. Winterville is one of 16 teams selected from more than 40 applications from all over the state.

The tournament, "the state championship in girls basketball," is scheduled to run March 9-11 and March 16-18. The Winterville team will meet Crossnore Tuesday night in a first round battle slated for 7:30. If they win, their next adversary will be the winner of the Aberdeen-Alamance game. The second ruond contest is scheduled for Monday, March 16, at 6:30.

Leading the Pitt County champions into battle will be All-County forward Jean Ann Liverman, a versatile scoring ace who has tallied 670 points thus far this season. Liverman is rated by many Pitt County sports veterans as one of the finest girl basketball players in this area.

Liverman has drawn strong support in the scoring division from Joan Averette and Jean Little. As a sophomore, Little has developed steadily all season and turned in her best performances under pressure during the Pitt County tournament.

The combination of guards—Anne Kittrell, Faye Branch, and Betty Lou Nobles — was recognized as one of the strongest defensive units in the county during the past season. Winterville was beaten only once and tied once during the regular season.

Top reserves on the club include Jo Ann McLawhorn, Phyllis Jones, Jane Corey, Patsy Tripp, Carol Tyson, Janice Stocks, Joyce Tripp, Peggy Mobley, and Nancy Worthington. The team is coached by Paul Clark.

Teams included in the tournament are Bethel of Person County, Tabor City, Carthage, Raeford, Biscoe, Fremont, Lincolnton, Henderson, Reeds, Rose Hill, Trinity, Rich Square, Crossnore, Aberdeen, Alamance, and Winterville.

Ayden, Winterville Share Coveted Awards

You have to win the most games to rank at the top of won-lost standings but you don't have to be a winner to show good sportsmanship.

Ayden's girls team proved that old saying by coming through with the most votes in the annual Sportsmanship Trophy voting conducted among Pitt County Conference high schools. Ayden and Winterville tied for top honors in the boys division.

County Superintendent of Schools, D. H. Conley, said today that the Ayden girls team had led the voting in its division with 29 points, four more than runner-up Farmville was able to poll. Champion Winterville was in third place with 17 points and Belvoir came in fourth with 15 points. There were a total of 108 votes cast in the girls division.

In the boys division, Ayden and Winterville both polled 22 votes to share the top honors. Farmville was in third place with 14 points and Belvoir and Stokes tied for fourth place with nine points apiece. There were a total of 90 votes cast in the boys division.

The votes were cast by members of teams in the Pitt County Conference. The boys teams had 10 votes apiece and the girls teams had 12 votes each.

The trophies will be presented to the winning schools at a later date by Walter Latham, chairman of the Pitt County High School Athletic Committee, the sponsoring organization for the trophies.

In reviewing the past basketball season, Mr. Conley said this morning that the schools had had "... a very good season. Sportsmanship has been stressed throughout the year by all teams."

NIT Tourney Gets Begins Tonight

NEW YORK (UP) — The first of college basketball's major post-season tournaments begins tonight when the National Invitation event gets off with a triple-header program at Madison Square Garden.

Meanwhile, the NCAA tourney filled two more berths Friday night when Wyoming and Hardin-Simmons clinched conference championships. Three of the four remaining open berths in the NCAA event conceivably could be filled tonight.

Wyoming won the Skyline Conference title and an NCAA berth by edging Colorado A & M, 54-53, when Ron Rivers tossed in a jump shot with three seconds left to play.

Hardin-Simmons qualified for the NCAA event by beating Arizona, 68-61, in a playoff for the Border Conference title. Hardin-Simmons now must play Santa Clara in a preliminary round for the right to meet Wyoming.

The overlapping of the NIT and the final stages of the strife for NCAA berths set up a full program for tonight.

In the NIT, Duquesne plays Tulsa in the opening game at 6 p.m. e.s.t., while Georgetown is pitted against Louisville in the second game, and St. John's of Brooklyn against St. Louis in the triple-header finale. Duquesne is favored by nine points, Louisville by two and St. Louis by three.

Redskins Reverse Field On Canada

WASHINGTON (UP) — The Washington Redskins pulled a novel reverse today when they lured center Ulinski back from the Canadian Football League.

Ulinski, former Kentucky star, played in Canada last fall after performing for the Redskins of the National Football League in 1950 and 1951. The U. S. professional league has been losing players to the Canadian circuit since World War II.

Although the Baltimore Colts recently lost their No. 1 draft choice, Billy Vessels of Oklahoma, to Canadian football, Redskin officials said they also hoped to sign quarterback Jack Scarbath of Maryland soon. Scarbath, Washington's top draft pick, also is being wooed by the Canadian League.

Price has said that anyone interested in trying out for a position on the team is invited to attend the workouts.

Patty Berg Paces Women Golfers

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UP) — Some of the nation's finest women golfers faced a tough task today in attempting to overhaul pace-setting Patty Berg in the second round of the Jacksonville Women's Open Tournament.

The chunky Minneapolis star, who now plays out of St. Andrews, Ill., got off to a three stroke lead in Friday's opening round by firing a 69.

N.C. State, Wake Forest To Meet Tonight In SIC Finals

By LOWRY BOWMAN
United Press Sports Writer

RALEIGH, N. C. (UP) — Defending champion North Carolina State and second-seeded Wake Forest, two teams which battled from behind in skin tight semi-finals games, tangle for the Southern Conference basketball crown and a berth in the NCAA regional tournament tonight.

Wake Forest had to come from behind in the last 39 seconds to beat Maryland 61-59. State fought grimly to overcome a staggering 15-point deficit and trim West Virginia 85-80 in the semi-finals of the 32nd annual conference tournament last night.

In both games a pair of free throws under nerve-wracking pressure made the difference.

Maryland led by three points in the last three minutes of play as the Terps' great Gene Shue shattered the tournament scoring record with 40 points. Then a desperate Wake Forest drive beat the Terps at their own brand of possession play and burley Deacon center Dickie Hemric dropped in two free throws with 39 seconds left to give Wake Forest the win.

But the State-West Virginia game was the highlight of the night.

West Virginia started off with the Wolfpack's own brand of race-horse basketball and nearly ran State off its feet. The Mountaineers raced to a 29-16 first period lead with every player scoring within the first four minutes.

West Virginia held a 46-39 halftime lead but then State got back in the game. With center Mel Thompson hitting for 14 points in the second half, State took over from the tiring Mountaineers and tied it up in the last six minutes.

However, guard Herb Applebaum provided the winning margin with a pair of free throws with a minute and 26 seconds left, and forward Bobby Speight added the clinching field goal in the final 27 seconds.

Thompson scored 25 points, Applebaum got 14 — all in the second half — and Speight hit for 16.

West Virginia's ace sharpshooter Mack Isner fouled out in the final period with 12 points to end the Mountaineer hopes. Jim Sottile had gone out with 11 points in the third.

The Wake Forest-Maryland contest was closer. Maryland led almost all the way but the margin always was close. Shue a lanky poker-faced junior from Baltimore, was the whole show for the Terps as far as scoring went. He scored all of Maryland's 10 points in the third period and did all the scoring in the final period until Ralp Greco sank a field goal with four minutes left.

In the last three minutes, the Terps held a three-point lead. But Deacon guard Jack Williams stole the ball and raced to a quick layup to make the score 57-56. Guard Billy Lyles stole it again seconds later to put Wake ahead 58-57.

After an exchange of free throws, Hemric was fouled under the basket and dropped in two free tosses.

Shue's 40 point performance eclipsed the tournament record of 37 set the night before by Furman's Nield Gordon.

If you depend on the sale of products for a living, note this advertising score:

Advertisers invest their money in newspapers 3 to 1 over other media:

3 times as much as in radio
4 times as much as in magazines
4 times as much as in television

Why? Simply because advertisers know from experience newspaper advertising pays off ... because the newspaper reaches just about everybody in town who can possibly buy.

You have a voice in the advertising of any product you sell ... so insist on the newspaper. It's first with the most news ... the most people ... the most advertising!

'Breathing Spell' Is Predicted For West

Stalin's death and its implications received attention at East Carolina College Thursday and Friday of his week in the course of three lectures on the campus by Dr. Tibor K. Bebek, formerly a citizen of Hungary and a professor of the University of Pecs. The speaker was presented under the auspices of the college Entertainment Committee, and his talks were heard by students, faculty members, and visitors from Greenville.

Inside Russia, Dr. Bebek stated, a struggle for power is already under way, the results of which may not be apparent for a long time. To the West a 'breathing spell" is offered, he said, and stated his belief that Russian leaders will not launch a global war during this critical period of internal upheaval in the Soviet Union.

In subjugated countries, he continued, Communist leaders, who were chosen by Stalin and who owed personal allegiance to him, will remain in doubt as to the outcome of the struggle for power and existing unrest and discontent will increase.

The West, he said, should take advantage of these conditions and use the period to build their strength at home and behind the Iron Curtain.

In talks in the Austin building during his visit to East Carolina Dr. Bebek discussed "Aims and Methods of Soviet Policy," "The Soviet Challenge and How It Can Be Met, and "The Soviet Menance to Christian Faith." He emphasized the conflict between the Soviet aim of world domination and the desire for peace and the triumph of democratic ideals in this country and other nations of the West.

Firemen Answer 2 Calls Friday

Local firemen answered two calls yesterday one out in the county and a second one at East Carolina College.

Firemen responded to a call from Noah Hardee's farm around four o'clock yesterday afternoon when a grass fire swept out of control and set fire to a pile of logs.

The logs were put out before an oil drum and tobacco barn nearby could be damaged.

Last night, around eight o'clock a grass fire was reported in the woods behind the East Carolina College. Firemen reported no damage.

Kiwanians Talk Convention Plans

By CHESTER WALSH

Inter-Club Relations Chairman "Tige" Gardner presented the program at the Kiwanis Club last night and showed a movie entitled "New York Calling."

The program boosted the Kiwanis International's 38th annual convention to be held in New York June 21-25. The sound picture showed scenes in the metropolitan city and of nearby places. Gardner said the Greenville club will elect two convention delegates and two alternates. Any Kiwanian and members of his family may attend the convention. The North and South Carolina Kiwanians will be quartered at the Statler Hotel.

President Leo W. Jenkins said reservations should be made through club Secretary David C. Moore Jr.

The president also announced that the annual Kiwanis minstrel show, which this year will be the "Kiwanis Spring Follies," featuring music, dancing and singing girls and the Kiwanians in a chorus number. The show will be given at Austin auditorium on the college campus Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, April 27, 28 and 29. Eli Bloom is the producer. Tickets will not be reserved. The show is for the benefit of the Kiwanis Underprivileged Child Fund.

Kiwanian Durwood Hart gave a one-minute autobiography.

Past Lieut.-Gov. Ed E. Rawl inducted into club membership Dr. Ed J. Carter, director of extension at East Carolina College.

Kiwanis minstrel program chairman C. Ken Beatty and his committee conferred after the meeting. The committeemen plan to complete the solicitation of ads for the program next week.

John Barnhill won the attendance prize. J. Hicks Corey had a birthday and donated a dime for each year of his age. Dr. H. Glenn Haney called attention to the "evangelism visitation" to be held here next week under auspices of Protestant churches of the city.

The Greenville club will send a delegation of members to the Seventh Kiwanis Division conference to be held in Wilson next Thursday night April 9. Lieut.-Gov. Talmadge L. Narron of Wilson will preside. Tige Gardner will pilot the Kiwanians on this pilgrimage.

Guests of the club last night were David Clifford, Rev. E. W. Holmes of Farmville and Greenville High School Junior Kiwanian Frank Brooks.

Traffic Violation Skein Climaxed By Auto Wreck

A string of traffic violations finally caught up with a Camp Lejeune Marine last night.

A car operated by Kevin Shalloe, of the Eighth Marines stationed at Camp Lejeune, wrecked after midnight last night injuring three persons.

According to Military Policeman Cpl. George Mingee, the Shalloe car left the highway about six miles East of Greenville on US 264 and rammed into a dirt embankment.

Shalloe and two other occupants of the car were removed to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries.

Mingee stated that a traffic ticket, issued March 4 in Delaware, was found in the man's wallet. He was charged with three traffic violations there. A receipt was also found dated the fifth day of March from a Jacksonville Justice of the Peace for payment of a traffic violation. The accident on the sixth climaxed the three-day traffic violation spree.

Shalloe, the most seriously injured of the three, was admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital suffering from lacerations of the head and face and a dislocated hip. The other two injured, Don Cohen and James S. Rockwall, were taken by ambulance to the Cherry Point Marine Hospital.

Highway Patrol officers James W. Boykin and Jim Davis reported this morning that investigation of the accident is still incomplete.

The car, a 1942 model, was described by the officers as being a total loss.

Dog Tax Year In City Is Revised

Authorized by the Greenville Board of Aldermen at its Thursday night meeting, the present dog tax year has been changed to run from January 1 to December 31.

The former dog tax or license year ran from July 31 to June 30.

At the suggestion of Dr. Walter Humbert, health department director, the amendment changing the tax year was passed in order to act in conjunction with the county law, therefore not having a split year.

Dr. Humbert conferred recently with City Attorney R. B. Lee and Lee drew up the amendment which was presented to the mayor and board and passed.

In explaining how the new tax year will work, Dr. Humbert said those people who have purchased dog license since January 1 and have a tag reading "expires July 31" has been changed to expire December 30.

"Those persons who have bought licenses since January 1, 1953, that license is good for one year," he explained.

"If owners have a new dog which on October 1 is 13 weeks or older, they may buy a dog license at that time which will be valid until the next calendar year.

"All dogs 13 weeks old, according to Greenville law, must be vaccinated and taxed, and by failure to do so, the owner is liable for a $25.00 fine," Dr. Humbert emphasized.

mission could be definitely determined."

In addition, Worthington stated, there would not be anything legally binding even if an election should be held to decide the issue. He conveyed the impression that the matter can only be cleared up by an amendment to existing laws and provisions.

Suggestion

In fact, the representative suggested an amendment as being a practical solution to the controversy. The amendment could be introduced in the legislature and passed the same as any other bill, he said.

Worthington explained that his suggestion for that amendment would be: 1. maintain the Utilities department as a separate entity of the city government; and 2. put the city manager on the Utilities Commission as a voting member and allow him to function as a full-fledged member of the commission.

"Both factions would profit from that set-up," he stated. "If the city manager is already familiar with operations of a utilities department, the commission will profit from his experience; if he is not familiar with such an operation, he will profit from the commission."

PERSONALITIES — It is axiomatic that in a democracy ideas and principles are more important than persons. It is equally true that the forcefulness of persons in promoting ideas must be reckoned with. William Umstead is a forceful person, even when his doctors make him stay in bed. Lieutenant Governor Luther Hodges has demonstrated that he is a forceful person. Many legislators and others are not too sure about how nearly Umstead and Hodges are together in their thinking. That is a large contributing factor to the existing uncertainty. Up to now there has been nothing to indicate either conformity or divergence in opinion.

RECORD — On the record there is nothing to indicate the attitude of Senators Edwin Pate, Grady Rankin, John Larkins, Claude Currie, Speaker Eugene Hart, Representatives Bill Rodman, Kemp Doughton, Larry Moore, Alonzo Edwards—and a dozen more recognized leaders in the Legislature. There are many off-the-record instances indicating that these leaders, individually and collectively, are not happy about the course of events during the past few weeks.

EXPECTANCY — Up to now almost everything the Governor has asked for in the way of delegated powers and reorganization has been given without protest. There remains a air of expectancy that somebody may take over leadership, or that in order to retain their influence in the Legislature some of the presently recognized leaders may change their attitude toward administration matters. It is, to say the least, an interesting situation.

FLASH GORDON.....by Mac Raboy and Don Moore

MAKING A FORCED LANDING ON THE MOON, FLASH AND HIS PARTY ARE CONFRONTED BY AN ARMED TRACTOR. THROUGH HIS SPACE-HELMET, FLASH RECEIVES ORDERS IN PERFECT ENGLISH--OBVIOUSLY THE VOICE OF AN EARTHMAN! "MARCH TOWARD THE LUNAR BASE!" THE VOICE COMMANDS BRUSQUELY. AND FLASH, GLANCING AT THE MENACING CANNON, REALIZES THAT HE HAS NO CHOICE BUT TO OBEY.

TUNED TO THE TRACTOR'S WAVE LENGTH, FLASH CAN HEAR THE DRIVER RADIO HIS MOON STATION: "MARC TO DR. STELLA. ROCKET PILOT CLAIMS TO BE FLASH GORDON." SURPRISINGLY, IT IS A WOMAN'S VOICE THAT ANSWERS. "BEWARE!" SHE SAYS. "HE IS AN IMPOSTOR! GORDON WAS KILLED BY A COMET!"

Copr. 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc., World rights reserved.

AS THEY ENTER THE PRESSURIZED MOON-BASE, FLASH LOOKS FOR CLUES THAT WILL EXPLAIN THE STRANGE ACTION OF HIS CAPTORS. THE BASE IS AN ODD SIGHT--PART FORTRESS AND PART SCIENCE LAB! IT IS CRAMMED WITH THE MOST ADVANCED STAR-RADARS, ROCKET LAUNCHERS AND NUCLEAR DEVICES.

WITH A WAVE OF HIS GUN, A GUARD MOTIONS FLASH INTO DR. STELLA'S OFFICE. SHE STARES AT HIM SEARCHINGLY. "I'VE SEEN PHOTOS OF GORDON," SHE SAYS SLOWLY. "YOU LOOK LIKE HIM--BUT YOU COULD BE AN IMPOSTOR, A SPACE-SPY TRYING TO FERRET OUT THE SECRETS OF THIS LONELY OUTPOST OF EARTH!...WELL, WE'LL SOON FIND OUT!"

GIVEN A SHOT OF HYPNO-SERUM TO INSURE THE TRUTH, FLASH IS GRILLED SHARPLY. STILL DRUGGED, HE DOES NOT HEAR STELLA WHISPER TO HER AIDE: "HE'S REALLY GORDON! ...AS LONG AS HE REMAINS HERE, OUR SECRET IS IN DANGER! WATCH HIM!" NEXT WEEK - PHANTOM SHIP 3-8
