Final Approval To State Bond Issues Is Expected Today

Yesterday's Overwhelming Votes Of Approval Signals Probable Outcome; Constitutional Provisions Overridden

By EDWARD S. CORNISH United Press Staff Correspondent RALEIGH (UP) — The House was expected to give final approval today to Gov. William B. Umstead's request for bond issues to build schools and improve mental hospitals, and take action on a proposed $13,000,000 "catch-all" bond issue for a whole series of permanent improvements at other state institutions.

The representatives approved the $50,000,000 school bond issue by a unanimous 113-9 vote on its second reading yesterday. The $22,000,000 proposed constitutional amendment following each federal census, but the 1961 assembly ignored the mandate and the current legislature has killed redistricting bills. The House defeated a move to take a bill providing reapportionment of members' seats off the unfavorable calendar.

The salary boost raised the pay scale for teachers with "A" certificates from the present range of $2,200-$3,000 to $2,481-$3,491. It added $4,207,633 to the recommended general fund spending program for the next two years and sent it into the red by approximately $3,500,000.

Animals in the upper grades of Class I (individual fat steers) will be placed individually by the judges and the first and second will automatically be awarded Grand Champion and Reserve Champion ship ribbons.

Convoys Of Sick, Wounded Prisoners Sighted Pilots See Returnees

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP) — Reconnaissance pilots today spotted two convoys of sick and disabled Allied war prisoners "high-balling" down "freedom road" toward this truce site where ailing captives of both sides in the Korean war will be exchanged on Monday.

At Pusan where the first contingent of homeward-bound Chinese Communist prisoners arrived in a U. S. landing boat, authorities had to break up a sitdown strike of 745 surly Reds. The Fifth Air Force said a reconnaissance photo showed that convoy No. 1 of Allied prisoners which left Chongju near the Yalu River Tuesday had reached Yongsong, eight miles north of the Communist capital of Pyongyang.

Convoy No. 2 was seen 32 miles farther north on "freedom road" near Sinauju on the Chongchong River.

Frank Discussion Of Peace Efforts Scheduled Policy Talk By President

By MERIDIAN SMITH AUGUSTA, Ga. (UP) — President Eisenhower will give the American people a frank discussion tomorrow of current efforts to end the Korean war and will review "the chance for peace for all peoples of the world in 1953", the White House announced today.

The President's address to the American Society of Newspaper Editors in Washington, billed as one of major importance, will be broadcast and televised at 1 p. m. EST by all major networks. Presidential press secretary James C. Hagerly said "it will be a major speech on foreign policy and the chance for peace for all peoples of the world in 1953".

Pleven Asks For 'Recognition' Ready To Renew Armistice Talks

COLUMBIA, S. C. (UP) — French Defense Minister Rene Pleven called today for greater international recognition of French achievements in combating problems of the free world.

"There is too much talk of French difficulties and not enough of French achievements—too much talk of French problems and not enough of French solutions," Pleven said in a speech at the University of South Carolina. Pleven received an honorary degree from the university, the fourth oldest in the United States.

The surge toward political and economic unity in Western Europe "is a dynamic movement, one that is steadily growing," he said. The idea for a unified Western Europe, he said, came from France just three years ago. Since then, he said, six nations—France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, and Luxembourg—"have been working to tear down the frontiers that have divided them for so many centuries."

"We are trying to tear them down physically and psychologically, to create, if we can, a federation of states," he said. Besides eliminating tariff barriers, abolishing customs duties, and providing a common market, the six governments are working in the field of mutual security and seeking a political constitution.

Pleven said this is far faster progress than that made by the 13 colonies in forming the United States.

He said the people of Western Europe are looking ahead. "They feel, as I feel," he said, "that the old structure was not good enough. They have known, as I have known, the dangers of the old house. They want to build a new one."

Sealed Package Mailing Easier

WASHINGTON (UP) — Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield made it a little easier today for postal customers to mail sealed packages.

Henceforth, Summerfield said, they won't have to hunt up a printed label to stick on the packages. Under his new order, all they have to do is write, type or stamp on this inscription: "Contents: Merchandise, may be opened for postal inspection."

This inscription, he said, should be placed either above or below the sender's return address.

ACCIDENTAL BOMBING Seoul, Korea UP) — An Allied war plane accidentally dropped a bomb on the 10th Corps sector of the eastern front today, causing three casualties, 8th Army announced. One South Korean was killed and two were injured.

Officers participating in the fruitful raid were Ward, R. W. King and H. B. Lilley, all members of the Pitt County force, and Clyde Stubbs and Ben Stowe, Beaufort County officers.

Young Exhibitors Prepare For Tomorrow's Event Steers Weigh In For Show

Youthful cattle exhibitors began weighing in their steers today in preparation for the annual Pitt County Fat Stock Show and Sale which gets underway tomorrow at the Farmers' Warehouse.

Approximately 42 Pitt County boys, members of the Future Farmers of America Clubs and 4-H Clubs, are expected to enter cattle for show and sale. Four 4-H club boys will take part in addition to 38 FFA boys.

The boys began bringing their steers in this afternoon and the show will get underway tomorrow morning at 9:30; the sale will start at 1:30 in the afternoon. A luncheon will be held that night at 7:30 for the exhibitors, buyers, and other guests.

Claims Defense Dept. Cut Munitions Funds

WASHINGTON (UP)—Lt. Gen. George H. Decker testified today that the Army got money for ammunition "too late" to head off Korean shell shortages.

He blamed the office of the secretary of defense, not Congress. Decker, Army comptroller, testified before a Senate Armed Services subcommittee investigating Korean ammunition shortages. He told senators there is a long "lead time" between appropriation of money and actual delivery of ammunition.

In the summer of 1949, Decker said, the Army asked for more than $1,000,000 to begin production of ammunition which had been at a "virtual standstill" since World War II. Stocks left over from the war were "large" but "imbalanced," Decker said, and "inadequate to support a general war."

Decker said that the $1,000,000,000 request was scaled down to $30,000,000 in the budget for fiscal year 1951 by the "reviewing authority" in the office of the Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall. Questioned by Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.), Decker said the decision was entirely the Defense Department's and that Congress was not at fault.

Late in fiscal 1951, and after the Korean war started, Decker said, the Army received supplemental money grants totalling about $2,000,000,000. Those funds "appeared adequate at the time," he said, but the size and length of the war and the demand for ammunition were not correctly foreseen.

Former Army Secretary Frank C. Pace Jr. had testified that the Army did not move more rapidly in the early days of the Korean war to build ammunition stocks because of the prevailing view that the war would be over in six months.

Psychological 'Antidote' For Returning Prisoners Is Readied By U.S. Army

WASHINGTON (UP) — Army officials said today they are ready to administer an immediate psychological antidote to any released Korean war prisoners whose minds have been poisoned by Communist propaganda.

A carefully thought-out program has been set up to "reorient" them to the American way of life, and to help them discover for themselves how the Communists have dimmed lies into their ears during their months of captivity.

Army officials emphasized that American families should not get the impression that their returning sons will be neurotic or commu-

Britain's Budget Bolsters Market

LONDON (UP) — The stock market boomed today as the result of Chancellor of Exchequer R. A. Butler's tax-cutting budget.

Brokers lined up to buy in the sections devoted to government bonds and gilt-edged industrial securities. War loan bonds jumped $1.40 to a new high of $327.50.

There was a strong demand for the pound sterling in the foreign exchange market and its rate went up 1-4 cent to $2.81 3/4.

Conservatives talked of a new parliamentary election, believing they would win an increased majority in the House of Commons on Butler's "something for everybody" budget for the fiscal year which started April 1.

Radical and Conservative members of the House foresaw a big victory for Prime Minister Winston Churchill if he called a new election after Queen Elizabeth's coronation June 2.

Laborites called it a rich man's budget. Privately they said it was a shrewd and clever one which the Conservatives might use to spring a snap election this year.

Lafayette Miller Execution Set

RALEIGH (UP) — Convicted Negro slayer Lafayette Miller will die in the state's gas chamber May 1 unless Gov. William B. Umstead should unexpectedly grant him clemency.

The death date was set automatically after the State Supreme Court received an order yesterday from the U. S. Supreme Court which had refused to review Miller's case. The 22-year-old Negro was convicted of the shotgun slaying of Harvey C. Boyd, a young white Beaufort County farmer, and the abduction of Boyd's wife.

Light on a retail basis if they can obtain a satisfactory release from one local commission.

No official action could be taken by the commission last night because not even a quorum was present for the regular, scheduled meeting. The only two members of the five-man commission were Chairman Roy Martin and John G. Clark. Absent were W. H. Woolard, Dr. K. B. Pace and Reynolds May.

Order Of Events A chronological order of events that led to Grimesland's current situation is a story of a variety of situations and reversals of opinion by numerous parties and groups.

As Mayor Fleming recounted them: 1. In the late 1940's Grimesland was buying power from the Washington system, but service was poor and Washington informed Grimesland to negotiate elsewhere for current if it could; they would be unable to furnish current any longer.

2. Grimesland began negotiating with Greenville; subsequently, Grimesland spent $200,000 on its own lines and Greenville spent $16,000 in re-building a connecting line to tie in with the Grimesland system.

3. The contract was signed in 1949, and Greenville began selling Grimesland current at wholesale rates to be re-sold at retail rates to Grimesland customers, but in 1951, Washington began "raiding" Grimesland's customers.

4. Grimesland brought legal action against Washington for building lines parallel with the Grimesland system and taking over customers by cutting rates far below those in force on the system. The courts held that since neither party owned the suit was privately-owned utilities company—both were municipally owned—lines could be paralleled.

5. Washington cut its rates in the Chocowinity area so low that Grimesland could not compete, and

ABC Raiders Catch Their Mar. In Raiding Moonshine Still In Beaufort County

It was liquor and not the proverbial straw that did the trick yesterday, and a man's back instead of a camel's was affected by the incident.

Pitt and Beaufort county ABC officers joined forces near Tranter's Creek in the Gaynor's Bridge section of Beaufort County to destroy one of the largest illicit whiskey stills found in that area in many months.

J. M. Ward, officer-in-charge of the Pitt force, said this morning the raiding party arrested John Ed Cratt, 24, of Beaufort, who was observed leaving the still with five gallons of bootleg liquor on his back.

Ward declared Cratt admitted to officers that he was the lone operator of the still, and stated to them that the most recent venture was the second time he had operated the outfit. At the time of Cratt's arrest, Ward asserted the still was in operation. Confiscated along with equipment was 22 gallons of liquor and 1,200 gallons of mash. The still was razed by a dynamite charge.

According to Ward's report, the outfit was a 100-gallon copper unit with two copper condensers. Cratt was given a hearing before U. S. Commissioner Buck Taylor of Washington, and was released under $300 bond for appearance at the next session of U. S. District Court.

Grimesland Spokesmen Put Power Problems To Greenville Utilities Commission

By JESS POINDEXTER Reflector City Editor "We're at your mercy, what sort of a proposition will you make us?"

Put in the cool, calculated terms of dollars and cents, that query aptly describes the dilemma projected last night to a skeleton complement of the Greenville Utilities Commission by neighboring Grimesland's mayor and town Board of Commissioners.

Members of Grimesland's official board had reference to a request that the local Utilities Commission state precisely what sum it would require the town of Grimesland to pay in order to be released from its wholesale electric contract.

As Grimesland's ruddy-cheeked, bespectacled Mayor A. F. Fleming contended before the commission, "We've got our backs to the wall right now; if we don't get some relief soon we're bound to go under"—and he backed up in that conviction by the town's five commissioners present at the meeting. Since January 17, 1949—the date the contract was signed—Grimesland has been buying electric current wholesale from the Greenville Utilities Commission and re-selling it at retail rates to customers connected with the Grimesland lines.

The contract was to have run for a period of 20 years. Grimesland owns its electric lines, and wants to know now what amount of money Greenville would require as compensation for building a larger line to connect with the Grimesland system. In addition, the town wishes to be released from the 20-year contract.

Science Exhibit Planned For ECC High School Day

Potential scientists among an estimated 3,000 high school seniors visiting East Carolina College this Friday on High School Day will have an opportunity to observe an extensive exhibition and series of demonstrations in the college department of science, Dr. Charles W. Reynolds, director, announces.

Planned under the supervision of the science faculty, an open house in the department will show much that is interesting and instructive in the world of science. Attention will be centered on general science, physics, chemistry, and biology. All classrooms and laboratories will be open to inspection.

Physics exhibitions and demonstrations will include scale models of atoms and atom smasher, Geiger counters, and alpha ray detectors. A display of stereoscopic lighting will be on view, and demonstrations of sound waves and electronics equipment will be made.

Simple experiments, such as those performed by science majors, and pre-engineering, pre-medical, and pre-nursing, and pre-laboratory technician students at the college, have been arranged. They will show the high school seniors something of the work offered by the department to science students interested in various fields of work. Several demonstrations in qualitative analysis will also be given.

Collections of mounted birds and of native wild plants seen on the East Carolina campus during April will be an attraction of the exhibition in the biological sciences. Live fish, amphibians, and reptiles will be shown, and a demonstration of the action of disinfectants on bacteria will be included.

A number of science majors at the college have cooperated with faculty members in planning the science open house and on Friday will assist in welcoming the high school visitors and guiding them through the department.

An informative souvenir booklet, with a block print cover by Francis L. Neel of the art department, will be distributed to visitors. It stresses positions for which scientists are in great demand and indicates how at East Carolina the science student may receive training for work congenial to his interests.

Strength for the Day

SCARS
Even the best efforts of a plastic surgeon often fail to obliterate scars. Once a scar has been made on the surface of the skin, we have to resign ourselves to the fact that no matter what the surgeon does for us, some of it is going to remain to annoy and embarrass us.

The same is true of scars on our souls and scars on our reputations. John B. Gough, the great temperance lecturer of several generations ago, once wrote: "What you learn from bad habits and in bad society you will never forget, and it will be a lasting pang to you. I tell you in all sincerity . . . I would give my right hand tonight if I could forget that which I have learned in bad society."

A scar left on one's reputation is a thing to be avoided at all cost. The boy or girl from a good home should remember this when the temptations of a gay and convivial crowd are beckoning to them. The married man who is laying himself open to temptations of infidelity had better stop and think before his reputation is damaged, his job lost, his family humiliated. The official who handles money and has got into the habit of "borrowing" now and again from his employer had better remember that the little pathway broadens out into a highway which leads to the prison gate.

We Can Not Afford To Live Alone And Like It

For the first time since his inauguration, President Eisenhower has spoken out strongly against an isolationist policy on the part of the United States or even the Western Hemisphere as a whole.

It was in his address before the Pan American Union that President Eisenhower reiterated his stand against isolationism as a part of the United States foreign policy.

Drawing from his vast first hand knowledge of world affairs, and particularly the defenses of the United States, President Eisenhower is keenly aware that the United States can not defend itself alone and let the rest of the world fall before an aggressor. He well knows that the defense perimeter of this nation reaches beyond the European shores to the Atlantic and the Asiatic shores of the Pacific.

Perhaps the Chief Executive took the occasion of his appearance before representatives of the Pan American nations to clarify the position of his administration in the light of past isolationist tendencies of the Republican party, and similar tendencies which may appear among some members of his party even now. Perhaps the statement will serve as a warning to Republicans who would seek to undermine the international policy of the United States.

Likewise there is the possibility that the Republican administration, in view of its attempts to trim the federal budget — particularly in the realm of the defense program and foreign spending — may leave itself open to accusation of leanings toward isolationism. Eisenhower's statement will not preclude any such charges which may come in the immediate or distant future, but it will give the administration a leg upon which to stand if it has to argue the purpose of its policy.

In its position of world leadership, the United States can not draw itself into a shell. It can not withdraw to its own shores and let the rest of the world suffer the consequences. Even before the nation assumed its position of obvious world leadership, we found that we could not live alone. It was tried and proved costly.

The error of a second try at even modified isolationism now would prove even more costly. Indeed, it probably would prove disastrous for the remainder of the free world and ultimately the United States.

Remember Bataan In Today's Planning

It's hard to believe, but eleven years ago at this time the American people were shocked into the knowledge that they had a hard war to fight. Bataan had fallen (April 9, 1942) and save for a brief hold-out on Corregidor, the military forces of the United States had been decisively overwhelmed in the "first round."

Defense preparations on a huge scale had begun in 1940, but proved too late to meet the initial thrusts of a third-class power which maintained an atmosphere of militant preparations for years.

Numerically, the American and Filipino forces enjoyed an early advantage. Some 11,000 American troops and about 68,000 Filipino soldiers were facing 70,000 Japanese.

The difference lay in fact that the attacking army had superiority in the air, on the sea and with tools and supplies of war. Too, it was a veteran army. Half of the Filipino soldiers were recent recruits; and the defending forces were without aerial and naval support, without sufficient food and medicine and material.

That initial defeat unquestionably prolonged the war in the Pacific area . . . and it is the long wars that prove most costly.

This last point should be remembered by Congress and the people when considering possible reduction of military preparedness measures following a "truce" in Korea or in the cold war as a whole.

Luxuries and extravagance among the armed services, as well as waste, should be the targets for to-the-bone economizing.

But at the same time, the constant thought in the minds of all should be the question "Is our defense establishment adequate for a constant status of alert?"

Arts Festival Week Has Much In Store

Art and culture have played a vital part in the development of Pitt County over a long period of years.

In spite of the fact that the county is primarily rural and as a usual thing art and culture are thought of in terms of metropolitan centers, Pitt coveted and nourished the development of its people in an appreciation of the fine arts. That nourishment through the years, plus the development of East Carolina College and its influence upon the community around it have caused Pitt County to be referred to as the cultural center of Eastern Carolina.

During the present week, Greenville will celebrate its eighteenth Annual Community Arts Festival with an array of exhibits, music recitals, folk and modern dancing, movies and plays.

The annual arts festival through the years has made an impact upon the community life of Pitt County. As each year passes it gains more prestige in the community and throughout the state. It places upon the various arts an emphasis that is understood, and, at least for a while, remembered in the community.

The annual event this week will afford the citizens of the community many hours of entertainment and enjoyment if they only take the time to participate in the festival and view the various exhibits and activities which have been planned.

Arts Festival Week has meant a great deal to Greenville and Pitt County during the past 17 years, and it can mean a great deal this year toward advancement of the appreciation of the arts if the people only participate in the festival.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—President Eisenhower recently cross-examined his favorite Southern Senator for an hour on the conditions which enabled him to rout the Democrats so disastrously in Dixie last November. For understandable reasons, the first Republican President in 20 years would like to transform the once Solid South into two-party or debatable territory in national elections.

"In the first place," replied the veteran politician, "our people detested Trumanism, and did not believe that Stevenson could or would break away from that kind of government. Secondly, they liked and admired you. But I assure you that, in my county at least, it was not a Republican victory."

He grinned and stared out the window toward the statue of that great Virginian—George Washington. Like Eisenhower, Washington began his first term as President of all the people, but gradually veered toward the conservative faction which fathered the Republican Party.

SOUTH CONSERVATIVE—With respect to 1956, however, influential Southern leaders admit that their attitude will be one of watchful waiting. The political bleacherites include almost all the governors and senators who supported Eisenhower openly or refused to campaign for Stevenson—Byrnes of South Carolina, Russell and George of Georgia, Byrd of Virginia, Kennon of Louisiana, Shivers of Texas.

Assuming that Eisenhower has a fairly successful four years, and in view of his friendliness and patronage favors toward this section, he may have an excellent chance of duplicating his 1952 performance.

Dixie is definitely hostile to the dominant liberal wing of the Democratic organization—namely, the Stevenson-Mitchell-Harriman-Humphrey-Roosevelt group. It is becoming more industrialized and urbanized every day. It is conservative territory.

GOP TREND IN DIXIE—As a pro-Eisenhower factor, there is the fact that the popular and political reaction to Southern leaders' defection differs from the indignation which accompanied the desertion of Al Smith in 1928. The anti-Smith politicians, like Simmons in North Carolina and Heflin in Alabama, were driven from public life almost immediately. Not so, however, with the Eisenhower Democrats.

Take Senator Byrd of Virginia, for instance. Although he did not declare for Ike, he and Governor Byrnes spearheaded the anti-Truman movement.

And yet, running on the Democratic ticket, Byrd got 50,000 more votes than Eisenhower, although Virginia elected three Republican representatives. In other words the Senator was helped rather than hurt by his anti-Truman stand. The same situation applied in other states, notably Texas.

This development is extremely important insofar as it affects a continued GOP trend in Dixie. It has been the fear of losing local (state, county, municipal) control and elections which has kept Southern Democrats from deserting their party on a national scale. But if they find that they can back a Republican Presidential nominee without alienating the home folk, defection may become a habit.

Lest We Forget

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

After I had interviewed Tige Gardner by tape recording as the guest on my weekly radio show (tomorrow and every Thursday, 7:15, WGIC) he told me an interesting story that I was sorry was not included in the program.

For the past several years Tige and his wife have made a trip to Florida and en route have stopped in an antique shop in Darien, Ga. The lady in this shop has come to know the Gardners, and locks forward to seeing them every year. Each time she tells them interesting facts about the sale of antiques.

This year the lady had a story about false teeth. Her method of obtaining antiques for sale in her shop is to buy up the estates of people in Georgia who have passed away. Quite often, this involves a purchase look, stock and barrel.

In one particular case she bought the estate of a deceased dentist who had a few pairs of false teeth in stock. Being an antique salesman, this lady never throws anything away. One even put the teeth in stock.

One day an old gentleman came in her shop to look around. The lady did not figure him to be the type to buy antiques, but nevertheless was glad to have him browse around.

When he spied the stock of false teeth the lady could tell that he had found what he was looking for. Evidently, someone had told him that she had false teeth in stock.

"How much per pair?" he asked, looking at the teeth.

"This question almost floored the lady, because the idea of selling false teeth out of stock had never occurred to her. "33.50," she replied.

"I'll take a pair."

In a few days the man was back. "May I have my money back?" he asked. "These teeth hurt my gums."

Some time later the same man returned to the antique shop. "Do you still have those teeth?" he asked.

"Yes, sir."

"Well," he explained, "I finally decided to get married, and the old lady thinks I should have some teeth for the occasion."

"This time, the teeth remained sold."

And I thank Tige. Hear him at 7:15 tomorrow night.

Around Capitol Square

By LYNN NISBET

KEYNOTE — The keynote of the Eastern North Carolina Press meeting last week might have been expressed as "Continuity through contrast without conflict." This idea was forcefully presented during the Friday afternoon tour around the Town of Windsor and the meeting at Chowan College in Murfreesboro on Saturday. It was apparent in the formal program at the Friday night dinner.

WINDSOR — The visiting newspaper people were conducted on a tour which began with "Rosefield" the two and a quarter century old house built by John Gray in 1729 and continuously occupied ever since by members of his family. The tour ended at the ultra-modern quarter-million dollar home of Mr. and Mrs. H.B. Spruill, completed in 1953. It would be hard to conceive more striking contrast in architectural design of houses and furniture, but there was little difference in the genial hospitality now or at any time within the two century span.

MURFREESBORO — The newspaper folks went next day to Chowan College at Murfreesboro which looks back over more than a hundred years with pride and affection, but is looking forward to the next hundred with the enthusiasm of a zealot. The college was established in 1848. The main building bears the date of 1851 on its corner stone—and the visitors helped break ground for a new graphic arts building to house a school of printing. The idea of contrast and progress was noted here, in that emphasis in the printing school is put upon machine type composition by use of typesetters and photo-engraving methods which were not invented until almost a century after the college was founded.

AHOSKIE — On the way from Windsor to Murfreesboro the group stopped at Ahoskie for a visit to the establishment of Parker Bros., printers of interstate prestige and publishers of several of the best county weekly newspapers in the county.

PROGRESS — Here the progress motif was more noticeable than a contrast. The center of attraction was a young lady, dressed for the luncheon meeting later in the day, operating a Fairchild engraver which makes from a glossy print photo an engraving for reproduction in a newspaper, by use of electric impulses. A few old time printers in the crowd, remembering the paper-strewn floors and ink-spattered walls—and workmen—of the old shops could not fail to note the contrast of living room cleanliness about the Parker place.

IDEAS — The formal programs at the Windsor dinner and the Chowan College luncheon indicated both continuity and contrast in ideas as well as in physical equipment. From the beginning of recorded history men and women have waged war with those in political power for the right of the people to know about their government. So it was inevitable that major part of the programs should be devoted, directly or indirectly, to the current fight in North Carolina for repeal of the legislative secrecy law enacted a few weeks ago. The association adopted a formal resolution calling for repeal, but the idea probably was better expressed by Dr. F.O. Nixon, Chowan College president, when he suggested as a slogan for public officials and newspapers alike: "Tell the people the truth and trust them."

SENTIMENT — There were a couple of sentimental sideline incidents lending interest to the occasion. The Windsor chamber of commerce, through "Cousin Wayland" Spruill conferred upon each visitor (and gave certificates to prove it) the title of "Honorary Cousin." In Eastern Carolina for generations past the designation "cousin" has been one of respect and affection, having no relationship to blood, streams or marriage-in-laws. And, on one corner of the four-story massive-columned main building at Chowan College somebody had placed a tiny Confederate flag, reminiscent of the time when a president of the college during reconstruction days following the Confederate war tore down a similar flag which had been placed by some of the patriots in the area—and was fired for his action.

HISTORIC — Northeastern North Carolina and Southeastern Virginia has often been termed the cradle of the American way of life. Roanoke Island and Jamestown, Edenton and Williamsburg, are words of magic significance. The course of man's search for freedom has always been westward. From the beginning of things in the mid-Asian plateau, progress moved to Egypt and Greece and Rome and Spain and Britain and across the Atlantic to the Carolina-Virginia border. It moved rapidly westward from there to the Appalachian mountain range where it was temporarily halted before going on to the Mississippi, the Great Plains and across the Rockies to the Pacific coast.

REVIVAL — There is right now a wholesome revival of interest in this westward progress of civilization in North Carolina. Currently with efforts for memorializing the historic places in the Albemarle, Roanoke-Chowan area and the restoration of Tryon's Palace at Newbern, outdoor dramas at Boone, Cherokee and Asheville are perpetuating the story of the opening of the "far ter and not by statute. Once a tolerance is written into law it becomes just another name for a new maximum weight limit.

Most states, and the vast majority of highway engineers, view 18,000 as a reasonable axle weight limit law. Once the maximum rises above 18,000, the rate of highway destruction, as proved by the Maryland truck weight test, jumps sharply.

The current truck weight bill should be killed completely. It was a poor bill from the start, and no amount of amending can make it any good.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—The unpredictable Carreese Crosby, who has polished off the memoirs of her exciting and unorthodox existence here and abroad, came back to Washington for an "autograph party" and to announce her next bid for the headlines.

In her book, "The Passionate Years," the chic, shapely and socially prominent New York-born Carreese describes herself as one "who always said yes to anything that would bring joy and excitement." This pleasant acquiescence led her through a kaleidoscopic journey during the hectic '20s and '30s. Most of that time she lived among the literati and the newsmen; in the continent.

In the past few years, Mrs. Crosby has turned to more sober pursuits. In 1950 she returned from a sojourn abroad to register as a lobbyist in Capitol Hill, seeking cooperation from Congress and the "women of America" to do something "realistic about peace and progress in 1950." This project didn't get very far. Then Carreese said yes to another idea.

She went back to Europe, where she became a founder of the Women's World Center of Non-Governmental Organizations. Currently the Center is proposing a world exchange of women's home handicraft objects.

Out of the Women's organization has grown a plan for "world citizens" to meet this May on the slopes of Mount Paranaus at Delphi, Greece, where Mrs. Crosby finished her book and suggests that the cornerstone of a free world order be laid and a "Commonwealth of World Citizens" be built.

Mrs. Crosby was first married to Richard Rogers Peabody of Boston and Peabody, Mass. They had two children: Mrs. Crosby was divorced in 1922 and in Paris married Harry Crosby, a poet and a Bohemian—"in the best sense of all things elusive." They set up the Black Sun Press in Paris and brought out first editions of the works of James Joyce, Marcel Proust, D.H. Lawrence, Kay Boyle, Hart Crane and their own poetry.

Crosby died in 1930, but Carreese remained abroad until 1937, when she came back to "settle" briefly on a plantation near Bowling Green, Va., where she entertained such notables as Salvador Dali, the painter, and Henry Miller, the writer. In 1941, as a war effort, she opened the Crosby Gallery of Modern Art for new young and strange artists. She had known in Europe

Don't worry, Don't take over-eat, don't take violent exercise, don't over-indulge in anything. My single exception is dancing. I can dance all night with a good partner."

And Charlie added, his eyes twinkling: "I have no morals, and I don't moralize."

The phone rang then, and Coburn stared balefully at it through his monocle and said wistfully, "Point killer!"

Charlie once was known as the world's highest paid actor because he got $10,000 for saying a single line.

"I've forgotten the line now," he remarked. "It wasn't one for the ages."

Another time he got $15,000 for a single movie scene that the public never saw. Charlie was paid $10,000 for it, but the director asked $5,000 it would be cut

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
The free-wheeling American traveler, popularly regarded as one easily separated from his money, took second place to the Canadian last year in this country.

Despite superior numbers, the Americans managed to spend only $258,000,000 in Canada in 1952 while Canadians parted with some $294,000,000 in this country—a difference of $36,000,000.

All told, Canadians made 21,600,000 visits to the United States and other countries, compared with a total of 26,300,000 visits to Canada. Expenditures in Canada by travelers from other countries were estimated at $276,000,000. But Canadians spent $336,000,000 abroad.

Increased spending outside its borders seems to be something of a trend in the Maple Leaf country. In 1948 travelers brought $145,000,000 more into Canada than Canadians took out. This declined to $92,000,000 in 1949 and to $49,000,000 in 1950. By 1951 there was a deficit of $6,000,000 which last year increased to $60,000,000.

This traveling splurge could be due to either of two factors or both. The first is that Canadians have a lot more money. There's no doubt about that but it seems unlikely it would completely account for the tremendous increase in trips to foreign countries. The second is that Canadians—long cooped up in their country by money and travel restrictions—are making up for lost time with accumulated savings.

One thing is certain; it's nice for Americans to find the shoe on the other foot for a change and see, in at least one small instance, more money coming in than going out.

FOREIGN FIRMS OFFERS LISTED
A number of interesting offers of patents, processes, secret formulas, techniques, services and equipment are listed in the Mutual Security Agency's latest "Contract Clearing House Service." Among them:

A French firm offers to license the manufacture of a combination post car with glasses attached for bi-color relief viewing—suitable for use in advertising, insertion in foodstuff containers, theater programs, etc.

A German firm offers to license the manufacture of a couch that automatically transforms into a bed—powered either by electrically or by one-hand movement.

An English firm offers to license the manufacture of a shoe cleaning device which is "inexpensive and easy to make, mechanically simple and removes all dirt from footwear."

An Italian firm offers a process for the quick manufacture of flat paint brushes through the elimination of wood handle and metal ferrule—which are replaced by synthetic resins pressed into a single piece.

5 CENTS AN 18 CENTS STORES HAVE RECORD YEAR
The expansion by service yourself grocery stores into unrelated lines (including sundries) doesn't seem to have affected variety stores as much as drug stores.

"Variety Store Merchandiser" reports 1952 sales of the 19 leading five-and-ten chains were $2,266,979,303, up 4.2 per cent over the previous year. Margins and net profits, however, did not do as well—the former declining from 8.5 per cent of before-tax sales to 7.6 per cent; the latter dropping from $80,100,000 to $75,700,000.

Average sales per store rose from $429,500 to $439,100, while net profits per store declined from $17,200 to $16,700. This equals earnings of about 4 cents and 3.6 cents, respectively, for each dollar in sales.

FERRIARY GAS SALES RISE 1.2 PER CENT
Gas utility industry sales continued at a high level, totaling 5,376,000,000 therms in February, an increase of 1.2 per cent over sales of 5,431,000,000 therms in February, 1952.

The American Gas Association reports sales for the 12 months ended February 28 were $2,963,000,000, a new record and 7.8 per cent over sales of $2,742,000,000 in the preceding twelve months.

Natural gas sold in February totaled 5,006,808,000 therms, a gain of 1.5 per cent over the 4,931,182,000 therms in February, 1952, and further increasing its vast lead over manufactured and mixed gas sales which totaled 368,957,000 a decline of 2.7 per cent from the 1952 month.

from the final film. It was a long life has left Coburn with only two more goals.

"A man has to be careful not to start repeating himself," he said. "So I would like to do something I have never done before in the theater—anything fresh, bright and new. And I would like to see the 18th amendment to the Constitution repealed."

That amendment is the one that created the income tax, and when ever Charlie talks about it if the eye behind the monocle sees red. Looks red, too. How's a spry young guy turning 76 ever going to pile up any jelly beans for his old age?

Off screen, Charlie is definitely a young cogder indeed, with spring in his step and summer in his heart. No studio has ever been able to chain him to a long-term contract.

"I like to be free to do what I like," he said, as we chatted in his hotel suite. On the table before him were a bunch of jelly beans. On his desk was a magazine called, "Lifetime Living—for People Who Plan Ahead."

Coburn started his movie career in 1937 after the death of his wife, with whom he had toured for 32 years. The two once played in the old Coburn Theater, which now stands shuttered and dark on West 63rd St.

"No, I won't go by to look at it," he said, "I would only make me feel sad."

Charlie doesn't believe in looking back or letting yourself feel blue and lonely. He always wants to try something new. Recently he finished his latest picture, "Trouble Along the Way," and is looking forward to attending his first Kentucky Derby.

He learned to drive a sulky at 70 fell in love with horses and now owns a stable of top trotters and pacers. He spends the summer touring the state fair circuit with them.

"The horses are more than a hobby," he said. "I'll make money on them this year."

"A horse is different from a woman. You can't buy his affection, and he always remembers you. I can go to a field and call one of my horses I haven't seen for a year—and he'll come running for a kiss and a lump of sugar."

Charlie's favorite vice? Besides jelly beans are cigars, liquor, poker and gin rummy—all practiced philosophy after 63 years on stage.

"Don't worry, Don't take over-eat, don't take violent exercise, don't over-indulge in anything. My single exception is dancing. I can dance all night with a good partner."

And Charlie added, his eyes twinkling: "I have no morals, and I don't moralize."

The phone rang then, and Coburn stared balefully at it through his monocle and said wistfully, "Point killer!"

Charlie once was known as the world's highest paid actor because he got $10,000 for saying a single line.

"I've forgotten the line now," he remarked. "It wasn't one for the ages."

Another time he got $15,000 for a single movie scene that the public never saw. Charlie was paid $10,000 for it, but the director asked $5,000 it would be cut

If It's Beauty Or Relaxation You Seek, Go To The River

There is beauty on the bend of the river; and just as there are many rivers, there are many scenic spots to delight the heart. Whether standing on the banks, or drifting with the current, there is magic in gazing on "other side" of the most sluggish stream.

There are fish in the Tar River; ask Furney Tripp and he'll agree, and maybe even show you a recent catch. The discolored river waters don't hide as many finny denizens as in bygone days, but there are still many sportsmen who like nothing better than to slip away for a few hours in a boat or along the banks with a hook and line.

Whether one goes to the river to fish, or to get-away-from-it-all, sitting on the bank of the Tar is one way to find relaxation of the mind and of the body. Even if the fishing is only a half-hearted gesture, there grows a feeling of being at peace with the world. (Reflector Photo by Roy Hardee)

No One 'Happy' About Africa Federation Plan

By PHIL NEWSOM
United Press Foreign News Editor

On the African continent, where extremes seem to be the rule rather than the exception, the British are making an attempt to reassemble the scattered bits of empire.

So far, no one seems very satisfied.

Last week, the self-governing colony of Southern Rhodesia voted to join a federation which would be composed of Southern Rhodesia, Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland. The latter two are protectorates, and whether or not they will join the federation will be voted on soon by their respective legislatures. Both are expected to approve.

But still, it seems practically no one will be pleased.

The idea back of the plan is to set up an area which will be almost self-sufficient economically, but which at the same time will protect the interests of both the White settlers and the black natives. Therein lies the rub.

The Africans are afraid it will remove all chance of self-rule and leave them at the mercy of the Whites.

The Whites are fearful it will give the Africans too much influence.

Just to the northeast lies Kenya where the terroristic native Mau Mau Society is attempting to drive out the White man by violence and fear.

Adjoining Southern Rhodesia on the south is the Union of South Africa where Wednesday an election will be held testing the policies of Premier Daniel F. Malan. Malan is probably the world's foremost advocate of "apartheid," meaning "White supremacy."

Malan would bar Negroes and Indians from the polls and make them subject of strict segregation. The result has been widespread rioting and unrest in South Africa.

Altogether, British rule in Africa extends to some 79,000,000 persons.

And, as in the remainder of Africa, the black population far outnumbers the White in the three areas which now are proposed for federation. In size, they approximate California, Indiana and Oregon. Their total population is around 6,000,000, of which about 200,000 are Europeans.

The British propose a system of states rights for Southern Rhodesia, Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland, over which would be superimposed a federal government which would consist of a governor general, a prime minister and an assembly of 35 members of whom six would be Africans.

There would also be an African affairs board to protect the interests of Africans. The board would consist of 12 members—half African and half European—under a European chairman. Both sides, because of the conflicting interests involved, have protested the board's make-up.

But the British view is that something must be done to improve the whole area's economy.

TEEN TALK

Dear Judge

AP Newsfeatures

What kind of religion do young people enjoy behind the iron curtain?

Are Bibles edited by the state? Are clerics jailed to keep them from bringing their religious messages to troubled minds? We don't know for sure. But we can guess.

Here in America, founded on the idea of freedom of worship, men and women devote their lives to religious teachings. Lay people offer their services to Sunday Schools for the same purpose. Through them youth discovers religion and adults rediscover it.

Why don't you investigate what religion can do for you, if you never have before?

The discipline, sacrifice, self-denial experience to achieve brotherhood, strength and character are worth the effort. It is during the early years that body and spirit are prepared to withstand future emergencies and rigors of life.

Every child needs religion. Parents who lament the way their teenagers act should ask themselves whether they offered their children a chance to build their religious life-preservers during childhood. If there is no ladder, there can be no incentive to climb.

It is never too late, however. So a church may have a message for you. It can be absorbed at Sunday School or in religious schools or special classes of either Protestant, Catholic or Jewish religions.

The Laymen's National Committee a non-sectarian organization to encourage religious education, apprises us...

Protestant Church.

The variations in Protestant religious education are great. There are parochial schools, church kindergartens, clubs and classes on week days after school, classes on "released time" during school hours, young people's societies and clubs on week-day evenings and on Sunday evenings, schools on Sunday as well as many summer camps and institutes under church auspices.

Most churches (Protestant) rely on Sunday morning or afternoon classes spoken of as Sunday or church school.

"There is a service of worship, 35 to 45 minutes of class sessions... consisting of Bible studies, history of the church, Christian faith, the church's missionary outreach and meaning of Christian discipleship for personal and social life today."

Roman Catholic Church
The Sunday School is becoming more and more of a rarity in Catholic religious education because of these factors, according to the Fraternity of Christian Doctrine:

"1. The emphasis upon urging children to participate at Mass on Sunday morning and to receive Holy Communion. While fasting, it would be a physical burden to require them to remain afterwards for Sunday School."

"2. The adoption of the practice of providing religious instruction for the public school children of the parish on a week day after a school. This has come about to a large extent as a consequence of number one."

"3. The extension and growth of the 'released time' program which has further tended to leave Sunday morning exclusively for divine worship."

Jewish Education...
"Jewish education in America may be divided into three groups—Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform. Of 336,084 children enrolled in religious schools in 1952, 176,007 were enrolled in Sunday schools and 160,077 were enrolled in week-day schools."

"... Course of study includes Bible, Jewish history, customs and ceremonies, religion, history of Jews in America, post-Biblical Jewish literature, the prayer book, Hebrew language..."

Full House Watches Womanless Wedding

Greenville Rotarians blossomed out in their matrimonial splendor last night as they presented their Womanless Wedding to a packed house at Austin Auditorium on the East Carolina Campus.

The Rotarians were bedecked in dresses of varying designs and lengths, wigs to suit the occasion and make-up which they thought suitable for the "women" of a womanless wedding.

The production was under the direction of J. B. Kittrell, Sr., who was dressed as most other members of the cast in the attire of a woman. Wyatt Bryan portrayed the father of the bride, and Leon Roebuck served as best man of the groom.

Bridesmaids, dressed in unlike gowns which defied description, were: Reid Perkins, Sammy White, Wendell Smiley, John Webb, Bill Bryan, Tommy Thomas, Lindsey Wilkerson, Bob Thompson and Charles Bissette. The matron of honor was J. Herbert Waldrop, the maid of honor Dr. Karl Pace, the flower girl J. B. Kittrell, Jr., and the ring bearer Ty Wagner.

Honorary bridesmaids were J. B. Newman, Dr. Fred Irons, Joe Bateman, Conner Eagles and Dr. Branch Armstead.

Lowly Cockroach Is Opening New Vistas

By DELOS SMITH
United Press Science Editor
DENVER (UP)—Studies of cockroaches are telling scientists things about man they never knew before.

Dr. Berta Scharrer, a basic research scientist of the University of Colorado's School of Medicine, finds, for one thing, that a brain gland of the cockroach is very similar to the hypothalamus section of man's brain—the section which controls the pituitary gland.

The cockroach gland is much more primitive than man's, of course. The primitiveness makes minute studies of its function easier.

father, and Guy Evans as an aunt; Dr. John Winslow as mother of the bride, Hugh Winslow and Ruel Tyson as sisters of the bride, John Proctor and T. Y. Walker as younger brothers of the bride.

The groom's family was composed of Joe Moyer as the grandfather, Sherman Parks as the grandmother, Ollie Van Nortwick as a great aunt and Lyman Ormond as an aunt; Sam White as father of the groom, Lawrence Stroud as the groom's mother, Dave Whitchard and Dr. Herbert Lindsey as younger sisters of the groom, and Harding Sugg as younger brother of the groom.

Groomsmen included Elmer Browning, Ernest Willard, L. M. Buchanan, Charles White, Francis Bowen, Jack Boone, Willie Pate and Rev. Leon Russell.

Vocalists for the wedding were June H. Rose as a male singer and Bancroft Moseley as a woman singer. The vocalist sang solo each and joined in a duet which brought echoes of laughter from the audience.

Dignitaries on hand for the wedding were Badger Johnson as General Eisenhower; Knott Proctor as Mamie Parlepost Eisenhower; Er-cell Webb as Eleanor Myday Roosevelt; Haywood Dall as Rudy Black-beauty Hoople; Howard McGinnis as Harold Exit Stassen; Ollie Van Nortwick, Sr., as Bennie Canbuild Quicker; and Fitz Gammon as Charlie Goodyear Willfix.

Others taking part in the production were Mr. and Mrs. Jean Booth of Kingston as dignitaries from Japan, John G. Bragaw of Washington as Veep Tevee Barkley and Lallah Bragaw of Washington as Marie Antoinette Barkley. Jim Butler did the announcing for the wedding, and Mrs. Toll played the organ music for the wedding.

Following the wedding, members of the bridal party and their wives were entertained at a reception honoring the bride and groom at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Kittrell, Sr.

Paris (UP)—A postage stamp picturing a woman clad in a slinky blue-grey evening gown against a background of the pink-tinted Place Vendome will go on sale here April 25 for 30 francs (nine cents).

The 14-mile Adaminaby irrigation tunnel in Australia will be the longest such tunnel in the world.

From her cockroach studies Mrs. Scharrer has learned why man responds so quickly to any stimulus to his eyes—the sight of a pretty girl, for instance.

Her studies showed the existence of hormone-producing cells in man's hypothalamus. This brain section, she found, produced chemical substances and sends them along nerve fibers into his pituitary. These substances control pituitary secretions which regulate man's other glands.

Like man the cockroach has an organ for the reception of hormones from his brain gland. It is like the back part of man's pituitary. When the hormone-transmitting nerve is cut the front of this organ swells enormously.

The nerve transmits impulses into the blood hormones produced by the front of the pituitary as well as hormones which are stored in the back of the pituitary.

Dr. Scharrer can produce tumors in cockroaches at will merely by cutting the nerve to the salivary sac.

Her work, involving hormonal transmission along nerve fibers, is radical and new. It was among developments shown today to science writers inspecting cancer research centers in a tour organized by the American Cancer Society.

Another scientist, Dr. Rudolph Anaker, assistant professor of obstetrics and gynecology, said research he has been doing indicates a number of unknown forms of female sex hormones. An overabundance of female hormones may predispose women to cancer of the breast and uterus.

Dr. Anaker seeks a reliable means of measuring hormone levels in women by isolating and identifying excreted hormones.

He pointed out that the chemical structure of the female sex hormone estrogen is similar to cancer producing coal tar derivatives.

Sports Reflections

BY Jimmy Ellis

Somewhere along the line, years and years ago, some sage came up with the somewhat questionable assumption that "all fishermen are liars — except you and me."

For most people the usual belief today is that "all fishermen are liars, period." There's enough evidence, documented and otherwise, to give some basis to the more popular assumption but the folks around at Williams Sport Shop think they've found a fellow who is an honest fisherman.

The Sport Shop runs a fishing contest each week. The contest is set so that four prizes are awarded weekly and then monthly prizes are handed out for the top fish reported each month in the four divisions. There's no charge for entering the contest, the only necessary item being that you register before you go fishing.

Well, anyway, last Saturday Jack Minges, local resident, took off for Broad Creek. He had some new equipment and was planning to go fly-rod fishing for the first time. He had heard about the contest at the Sports Shop but he just neglected to register last week.

He got down to his favorite fishing spot and started casting. When he got back to Greenville, he had a nice six-pound, 12 ounce bass to show for his efforts. The fish is one of the best catches that has been made thus far this year but it was no good so far as the contest was concerned because Jack didn't register.

The honest part of the idea comes in when Jack didn't mind admitting that he hadn't registered. Of course, he was just a wee bit sick about it but he left the fish at the Sports Shop where it was on display for anyone who wants to look at it.

The contest is going strong but there's still plenty of room for more entrants. J. B. Smith took the top prize two weeks ago with a two pound, four ounce bass and Wesley Johnson was the man with the biggest catch last week with a two pound, 11 ounce bass. Both men made their catches in this immediate area.

According to the local reports, the speckled robin, bass, and bream are beginning to bite rather good but the bream are a little slow thus far, when the weather gets a little more consistent, however, the fishing is expected to pick up considerably.

Getting out of the immediate area for some fishing comment, we learned last week that the robin that spawn in the Little River in Wayne and Johnston counties are going to get a break. Conservation officials in Wayne have closed the river to all fishing for about three months so that the robin can spawn in peace. Not all of the river is closed, but a good portion of Wayne County's section is.

That closing of the streams is something that isn't nifty and the favor (we'll call it that for lack of a better word) is accorded to robin alone. Just about every other type of fish that inhabits the rivers in this area get a break when the rivers are closed to fishing.

We tried our luck with the hook last week-end at Morehead City but the only thing we got out of the deal was wet.

We were fishing in the Newport River between Morehead City and Beaufort but were out only 30 minutes when it rained. The party we were with didn't especially care to sit in the rain (we didn't either for that matter) so we packed up the gear and got out. And we left without having a solitary nibble to inspire us.

Don Schlens, the news editor, had about the same luck although he stayed home to have it. He went down to one of the creeks prepared to do some big fishing but the rain messed him up, too.

Don says that instead of quitting when the rain came, he just crawled under the first available bush to sit it out. He got soaking wet, dirty, and sore from doing so much sitting but he didn't get any bites the whole time he was out.

We wouldn't know whether the trouble with both Schlens and us is just plain ignorance, amateurism, or a poor personality as far as fishing is concerned but we're both hoping for better days.

And we're going to register for the fishing prize before we go, too. We're optimistic.

Another battle on the card, following the opening day of the 1953 baseball season here, featured Chico Vejar against Tony Cimmino, Bayonne, N.J., in a return match. However, the former, Conn. boy, who studies drama at N.Y.U., left no doubt that he was the master in their 10 rounder which he took by unanimous decision.

Eight more boys reported for practice at the Little League baseball field yesterday. They brought the total of newcomers of unsigned veterans to 30.

Jackson Williams, Allan Jackson, Jackie Foley, Lester Brown, Bill Jenkins, Paul Wright, Jimmy Cox, James Sutton were the newcomers who reported yesterday. They will be given trials before all the Little League managers and then be assigned to either a Little League or Small Fry team.

Boys who wish to do so may report to practice any time this week, according to George McMillan, the Recreation Department's representative who is directing the workouts.

EXCHANGE—Jeff Fountain, Billy James, James Ward, Herbert Steinbeck, Walter Pollard, Richard Evans, Erskine Duff, Bill Clapp and Tommy Braxton.

JAYCEES—Jan Vincent, Jasper Tripp, Randolph Taylor, Ralph Sullivan, Richard Nobles, Carlos Murray, Arthur Andrews, Walker Allen, Gene Adams.

LIONS—Aubrey Harrison, Jimmy Waters, Tommie Strickland, Charles Stator, Steve Noble, Ray Mackenzie, Rommie Brock, Albert Crawford, Charles Puryear, Carl Whitfield.

KIWANIS—James Rogers, Burke Stancil, Nat VanNortwick, Edwin Aycock, John Barnhill, Gene Byrd, Billy Cox, James Cummings, Bobby Edwards, Coleman Ruffin.

MOOSE—Bigs Cannon, Leonard Topping, John Adams, Robert Hardee, Thomas Henderson, Emmett Koonce, Donald Joyner, Leon Stocks, Robert Taft, Luther Finch.

Directors who returned Hot Springs, Ark., to the Cotton States Baseball League refused today under threat of a $1,000 fine to say whether the team's two Negro brothers could play ball.

Officials held a 3-1-2 hour closed session here Tuesday and voted to reinstate the Hot Springs club, which was ousted last week for refusal to release two Negro pitchers.

Greenville High School's scheduled Northeastern Conference baseball opener was called off yesterday because of transportation difficulties.

The Phantoms left Greenville as scheduled but got only as far as Beargrass when their bus broke down. Edenton High School officials were contacted and the game was postponed until a later date.

The game would have been the first against a conference foe for the Phantoms. In pre-conference activity, they lost to Rocky Mount of the Eastern AAA Conference and defeated two county teams.

That closing of the streams is something that isn't nifty and the favor (we'll call it that for lack of a better word) is accorded to robin alone. Just about every other type of fish that inhabits the rivers in this area get a break when the rivers are closed to fishing.

Directors who returned Hot Springs, Ark., to the Cotton States Baseball League refused today under threat of a $1,000 fine to say whether the team's two Negro brothers could play ball.

The Phantoms left Greenville as scheduled but got only as far as Beargrass when their bus broke down. Edenton High School officials were contacted and the game was postponed until a later date.

The game would have been the first against a conference foe for the Phantoms. In pre-conference activity, they lost to Rocky Mount of the Eastern AAA Conference and defeated two county teams.

That closing of the streams is something that isn't nifty and the favor (we'll call it that for lack of a better word) is accorded to robin alone. Just about every other type of fish that inhabits the rivers in this area get a break when the rivers are closed to fishing.

We tried our luck with the hook last week-end at Morehead City but the only thing we got out of the deal was wet.

We were fishing in the Newport River between Morehead City and Beaufort but were out only 30 minutes when it rained. The party we were with didn't especially care to sit in the rain (we didn't either for that matter) so we packed up the gear and got out. And we left without having a solitary nibble to inspire us.

Don Schlens, the news editor, had about the same luck although he stayed home to have it. He went down to one of the creeks prepared to do some big fishing but the rain messed him up, too.

Don says that instead of quitting when the rain came, he just crawled under the first available bush to sit it out. He got soaking wet, dirty, and sore from doing so much sitting but he didn't get any bites the whole time he was out.

We wouldn't know whether the trouble with both Schlens and us is just plain ignorance, amateurism, or a poor personality as far as fishing is concerned but we're both hoping for better days.

And we're going to register for the fishing prize before we go, too. We're optimistic.

RUSTY RILEY

THE HEART OF JULIET JONES

BLONDIE

THE STRAW DONKEY CASE

Chapter 6
The office was divided by a partition into a two-by-four waiting room and a two-by-four inner sanctum. In the waiting room there were water colors on two walls, green leather chairs, a magazine rack, and a frail brunette with a bruised eye who was trying to interest herself in a copy of Time.

Brindle took a seat close to the front doors. The car began to fill. Presently the gray coat stepped aboard and found a seat halfway back in the car. Paul Oaks sat down across the aisle from Brindle. The streetcar crawled forward, stopping again at Fifth Street. With the load waiting there, passengers were soon standing in the aisle. At Sixth Street, the aisle became jammed.

India Has Food, And Starvation

NEW DELHI (AP)—Indian government food larders are full, but more than 27,000,000 people are still not getting enough to eat. Food Minister R.A. Kidwai told a questioner in parliament. Kidwai said the most serious scarcity areas were Madras where 8,470,000 suffered, and Bombay State, with an estimated affected population over 6,000,000. Government spokesmen blame low purchasing power and distribution difficulties for the scarcity conditions. The central food ministry tries to help local areas by advancing loans to make possible public works projects.

Bulldog Is Hero In Subduing Of Bull On Loose

SUFFOLK, Va. (AP)—"Butch," a bulldog, is the hero of this city's greatest bullfight.

A bull, slaughter house bound, crashed through the gate of a pen, terrorized Main Street, invaded a residential area and led police and slaughter house cowboys to the edge of a swamp.

When the pistols of patrolmen and 22 calibre rifles started peppering him, the bull began charging. After that he retreated onto high ground in the swamp.

Then R.C. Stone, who owned the bull, thought about the bulldog, and brought him to the scene. He rushed in where others feared to tread. There was a commotion and the bull emerged with "Butch" hanging from his throat. This encumbered, the bull was quickly shot to death.

Although not specifically trained in that regard, a defendant in Pitt Superior Court yesterday donned the "cloak and guise" of a practicing attorney and pled his own case before a trial jury.

But a firm contention of innocence on the part of William Asa Garris evidently was not convincing enough for the 12 men, because after deliberating only five minutes they adjudged Garris guilty of failing to stop for a stop sign.

Presiding Judge Henry L. Stevens of Warsaw took meticulous care to see that the man on trial received his rights under the law. "It's a case for the jury," Judge Stevens said at the conclusion of all the evidence.

"Since you don't have a lawyer you may make a statement to the jury if you wish," the jurist told Garris. "I want you to have all your rights under the laws of our State."

Garris took advantage of the judge's consideration and performed the ancient legal rite of argument to the jury. The jury took advantage of the evidence, deliberated five minutes and returned a verdict of guilty. Judge Stevens took command of the situation and fined Garris $10 and court costs for failing to stop for a stop sign.

Other Cases Heard Yesterday were: Marshall Lee, driving drunk, pled not guilty and adjudged guilty in jury trial, sentenced to eight months on the roads.

Marshall Lee, worthless check, pled guilty and received a sentence of eight months on the roads, sentence to run concurrently with a sentence of the same nature previously imposed.

Joseph "Booty" Willoughby, assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, through counsel pled guilty to assault with a deadly weapon and sentenced to 12 months on the roads suspended for two years on condition he remain of good behavior and not violate any law for two years and pay court costs.

Lillian E. Thomas, driving drunk, through counsel pled guilty "en absentia" and prayer for judgement was continued for two years on payment of a fine of $100 and court costs.

Thomas Abner Stocks, speeding, through counsel pled guilty "en absentia" and judgement was suspended on payment of $25 fine and court costs.

Joe Louis Cox, and Johnnie Williams, Jr., breaking and entering, the State's evidence court directed a verdict of not guilty.

Jake Simpson Parrish, careless and reckless driving, pled not guilty and at the close of the State's evidence the court directed a verdict of not guilty.

Franklin Bowers, violation of motor vehicle law, pled guilty and prayer for judgement continued two years on condition he not drive a motor vehicle for 12 months and pay a fine of $200 and costs.

Court is slated to be in session through tomorrow afternoon.

Pactolus Ruritan Hears Minister

FACTOLUS—Dr. M.O. Fletcher of Washington, guest speaker at the last meeting of the Pactolus Ruritan Club, praised the work of rural churches and urged that their activities be extended.

The speaker praised the Pactolus Club for its community work and influence for education and religion.

He recalled some of the religious meetings of the long ago, and pointed out that "in those days people lived close to God." He did not advocate going back to the old ways of living, but he did urge more faithful living of the Christian religion seven days in the week.

The minister said all denominations are looking to rural areas for training leaders, and reminded that some of the most influential leaders in religion and education—men and women—are from rural communities.

Ruritan J. P. Davenport introduced the speaker. President Jack Tripp presided.

The Pactolus Club will conduct "Mothers' Day" service at Pactolus Baptist Church Sunday evening, May 1, at 7:30. The Church Committee, W.R. Langley, chairman; J.R. Chauncey and C.F. Laughlin, are arranging the program.

At the Armory, through Friday April 17th, the Greenville Public Schools Art Show will be on view. This exhibition is in connection with the 18th Annual Greenville Arts Festival.

The children's art defies customary standards applied to creative work by adults, and in that very defiance achieves results that, though more than frequently crude and lacking in technical finesse, provide an interest and impact that is not readily achieved by the mature artist.

There is a reason for this in the children's art. True, their motivating interest is simply that of "making a picture." But, more essentially, that very urge becomes a normally expressed experience which they build one upon another in the process of "growing up."

Their paintings are experiences and interests in which they participate at their own age levels with a zest of living. Splashes of color and out-of-proportioned forms come together in getting the idea across with an amusing point of view and honest and out-spoken audacity.

Lower elementary grades—Lines begin to emerge to give a positive sense of form in combination with color. The head may be as large as the hips (but there is now a torso), eyes may have a closer resemblance to saucers, and a mouth may have some resemblance to a slice of watermelon. But there is definite progress toward achieving a combination of line and color to give form.

Later elementary grades—Figures begin to have a better sense of proportion and children begin trying their hands at combination of figures in a co-ordinated meaning and expression. They are not daunted by a flat surface even though a "standing" figure may appear to be flat on his face because the art of conveying third dimension in depth has not been mastered. But the arrangement of figures on the two-dimensional surface is such that the intent of third dimension is achieved so that the "flat" figure becomes "upright" in terms of the total expression.

Junior high school—Earlier art experiences combine into a completeness and refinement of expression as individual growth in techniques and skills along with broadened interest and understanding, mark a positive step in reaching the maturity of an artist. Significant is the fact that individuality is maintained, a quality that is an essential character of a creative being. There is a stronger sense of composition and ability to mold color, form, and relationships into a visual third dimension of depth. Details are more refined and more pointed in meaning to the total impression.

The children's art work demonstrates that the conception of teaching art in the public schools is based on a recognition that children are normally creative, that creative expression is not a thing restricted only to a limited group having a sort of preordained talent. It conceives that creative talent exists to variable degrees among all children, and is as normal a part of their being and growth as in their development of speech from babbling and a few definitive words to the coherent and grammatical expression of ideas. It is a type of teaching that avoids a dogmatic authoritarianism that seeks to dominate a youngster with a resultant curbing of his natural instincts and ability. Rather, it is a type of teaching in which the skill and understanding of the teacher becomes a guiding influence in the development of the child in his own terms and abilities.

Children To Join Capitol Square Clean-Up Work At Griffon Park

GRIFTON — Pre-school children through adults will meet at the Griffon Park Friday afternoon to finish clearing the area getting it ready to construct playground equipment.

The development of the park is the main project of the 1953 Finner Carolina Contest which Griffon is entering after being a winner in the 1952 contest. This year the contest is under the direction of Mayor W. E. Rasberry and Mrs. Tom Gower.

The Griffon Park Commission, headed by W. H. Gower and Bill Daws, in cooperation with the Griffon Service League, is sponsoring the "clean-up" at the park. A member of the Service League will be among each working group and the group which clears the largest pile of roots will receive a prize.

Following the "clean-up," a wiener roast will be held for all the participants. Children in all grades of the school will work in addition to pre-school children who will work in groups with their mothers. All Griffon citizens are invited by the park commission and Service League to take part in Friday's event.

Gower instigated the idea of the "Clean-up" day for the park and the following women from the Service League are helping: Mrs. Ruth Kline, chairman; Mrs. Joseph major contribution to the story of North Carolina and American development.) SALEM — Meanwhile, without fanfare or special event celebration, a group of people in Forsyth County are moving along with a program for restoration of Old Salem, dating back to the original settlement by a group of Moravians 170 years ago. A number of Winston-Salem families have spent their own money to re-make homes to the original designs. There are some public buildings which must be restored at approximate cost of half a million dollars. Sponsors of the project are not panhandling, but they have indicated they will not turn profers of help on these items.
