NATO Chief Says Allies In Europe Gravely Lack Airpower

Ridgway Notes Shortages

WASHINGTON (UP)—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway told Congress today the Allies in Europe are "still gravely short of airpower" and have "major deficiencies" in supplies and "ammunition".

He testified, "we still gravely lack airpower. To counter the threat from submarines and mines, we need additional escorts and mine sweepers. We must increase the reserves of our land forces, strengthen their supply troops, and insure the continuous supply of all our forces."

Ridgway, who steps up to Army chief of staff in August, said the administration's foreign aid request "is essential to the security of the United States as well as of all the NATO nations."

While these new weapons will contribute materially to our defensive strength, he testified, "they will also introduce new factors of vulnerability." He did not explain that point.

More Aid, Less Cost Is His Goal

Generals Clark, Harrison Confer On Truce Plans Secret Talks On Deadlock

By LEROY HANSEN, United Press Staff Correspondent TOKYO (UP)—Gen. Mark W. Clark and Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison held secret talks today on new United Nations command strategy to end the Korean truce deadlock on the war prisoner issue.

Harrison called the recess last Saturday "for administrative reasons" as his delegation "checked horns" with Communist negotiators on final disposition of prisoners of war who do not want to go home.

When Harrison arrived here Sunday he refused to comment on the deadlock or his reason for seeking conferences with Clark.

Twelve MIG-15s Are Shot Down By Sabre Pilots

SEOUL, Korea (UP)—Sabre jet pilots shot down 12 MIG-15s today with Capt. Joseph McConnell bagging three to run his "kills" to 16 and make him undisputed king of the Korean skies.

The Sabres tangled with the Russian-made supersonic jets for the sixth straight day and ran their total during that time to 36 kills. McConnell, of Apple Valley, Calif., became the world's first triple jet ace by downing MIG No. 15 on his first of two missions of the day.

Tar Heel Says Key Farm Programs Endangered Cooley Fights 'Economies'

WASHINGTON (UP)—Rep. Harold D. Cooley, senior Democrat on the House Agriculture Committee, today accused the Eisenhower administration of wielding "a meat ax on essential farm programs."

The fight centered on the conservation subsidies. The bill would cut $50,000,000 off the $250,000,000 authorization recommended by former President Truman for the 1954 crop year.

Benson asked Congress today to let him reorganize his department but balked at disclosing his specific plans.

McConnell and his wingman had encountered 28 MIGs on the morning mission and were too busy at the time to see whether the plane in question was a MIG.

Referring to Southern agriculture, Benson reminded he has had a long-standing interest in the area and has made several trips to North Carolina in recent years.

North Carolinians Make Up Majority Of Class Degrees Conferred On 316

In exercises held this morning as final event of the Forty-fourth annual commencement at East Carolina College, degrees were conferred on 316 graduates of the fall, winter and spring quarters of 1952-1953.

President John D. Messick of East Carolina presided at ceremonies in the Wright auditorium, and Dean Leo W. Jenkins of the college presented to him candidates for degrees. Dr. Earl J. McGrath, formerly U. S. Commissioner of Education, was principal speaker of the occasion.

Commencement exercises this morning began with an academic procession of faculty members, graduates, and special guests of the college. As participants, dressed in traditional caps and gowns, moved into the Wright auditorium the East Carolina Orchestra, directed by Dr. Kenneth N. Cuthbert, played the processional. George E. Perry of the faculty gave a program of selections for the organ.

Sec. Benson Offers Yardstick For Life's Decisions

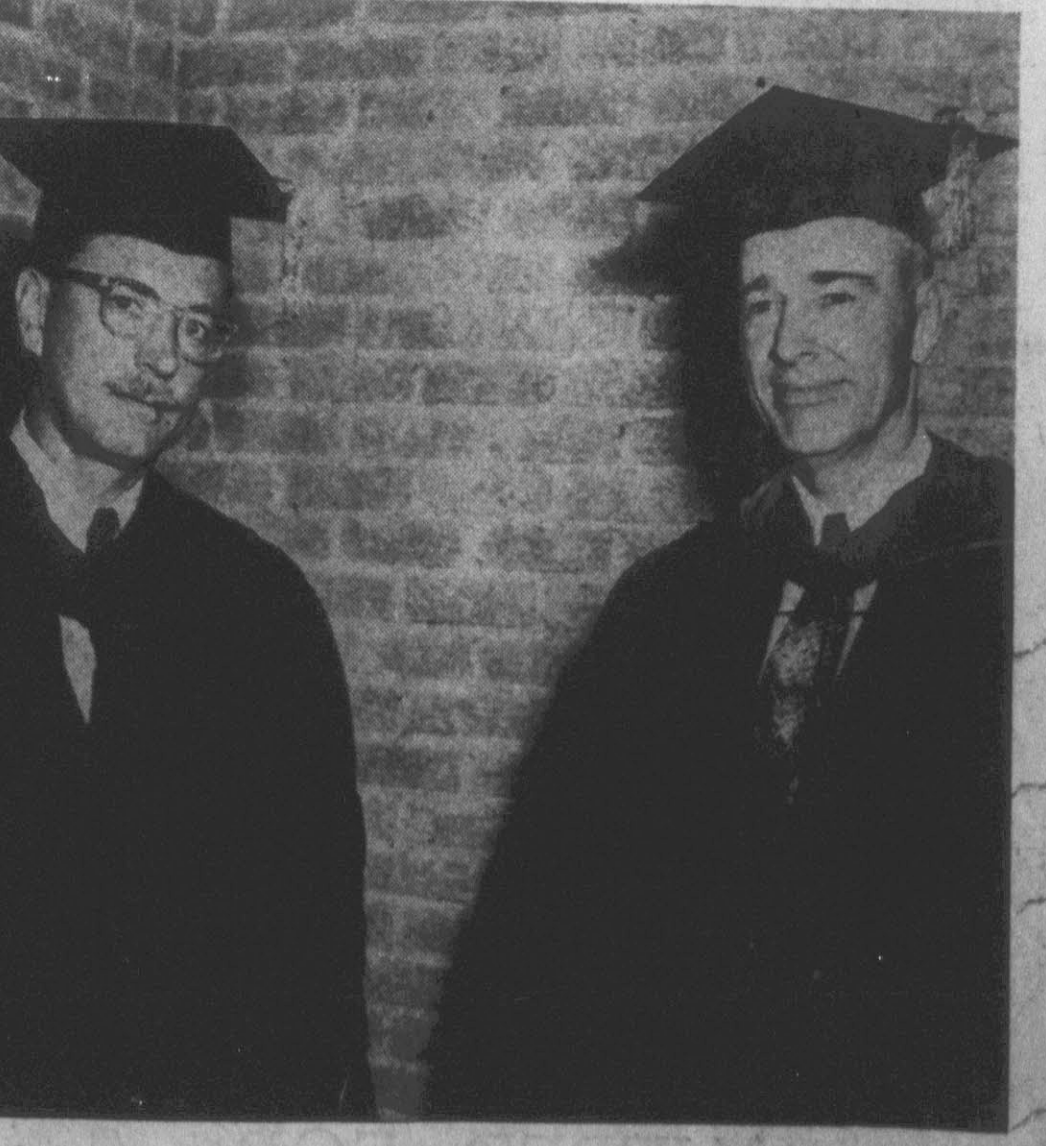

United States Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson presented the graduating class of East Carolina College a "simple standard of measurement" for evaluating "those aspects of human life which require a sound decision"—as he delivered the baccalaureate sermon here yesterday morning.

Speaking before an audience of some 2,000 people from many localities in the eastern section of North Carolina, the distinguished speaker addressed his remarks particularly to the 316 members of the class of 1953.

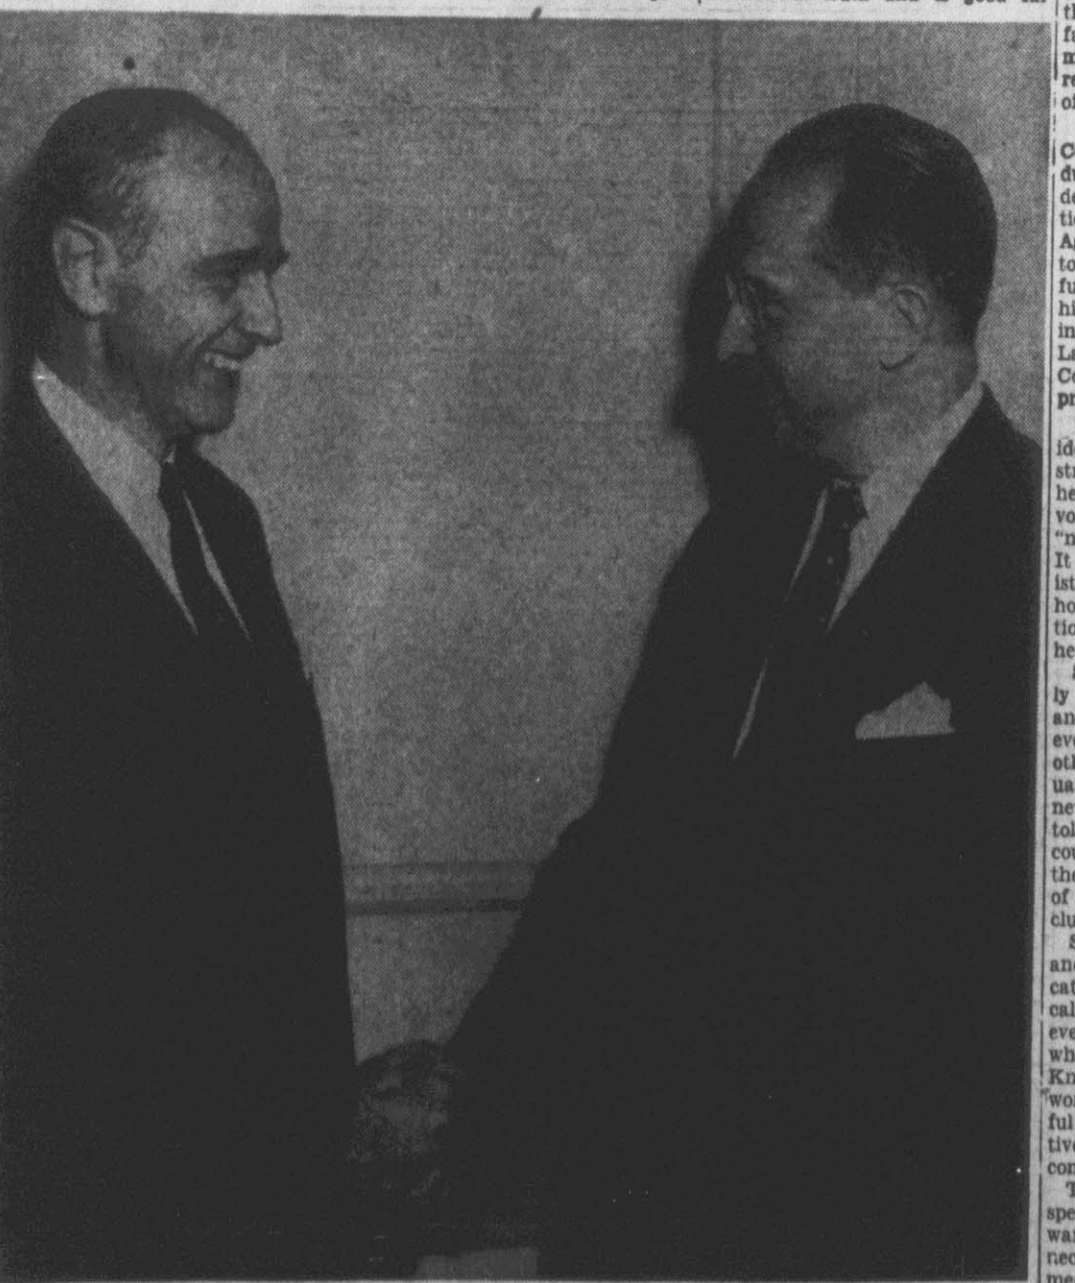

"If a thing is uplifting and ennobling, if it persuades a man to do good and become more Christ-like in his conduct and attitude, if it is an eternal truth and is good for man. The end result of such truth is to give man greater freedom in its sublimest sense," the speaker declared.

Prayer, patriotism and love of freedom; work as it contributes to the dignity of the individual; and the sacredness of the home and the family, received emphasis as fundamental human virtues which Secretary Benson examined in the light of this standard.

L. Y. Ballentine, North Carolina Commissioner of Agriculture, introduced Benson as a "great man—deeply rooted in American traditions." He stressed the Secretary of Agriculture's long career of service to American farmers, especially in furthering cooperative action, and his influence as a spiritual leader in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. East Carolina College President John D. Messick presided at the exercises.

Messick on the baccalaureate sermon he delivered yesterday to the graduating class at East Carolina College. At the same time, the Secretary of Agriculture congratulated Dr. Messick on the progress East Carolina College has made since Messick became its president in 1947. (Reflector Photo by Roy Hardee).

Siege Of Storms Again Threatens

NEW ORLEANS, (UP)—A third siege of storms was forecast today for the Louisiana area in which wind, flooding rain and five tornadoes left 12 persons badly hurt and $600,000 to $1,000,000 in damage.

The violent storms yesterday were punctuated by the crash of a Delta-Chicago and Southern airliner which killed 19 persons and the derailment of a speeding Missouri-Pacific streamliner at a wash-out.

While no new tornado alert had been issued as yet the weather bureau predicted locally high winds and scattered thunderstorms in some of the areas which had been lashed by destructive weather since Saturday.

The fifth tornado in two days roared through Sicily Island and Ferriday in the east central part of Louisiana while more rain storms engulfed northern Louisiana and nearby areas in Texas and Mississippi.

Twisters and cyclonic winds had destroyed some 60 to 75 homes in various parts of the state and rising waters forced more than 50 families from their homes along the Little River near Jena, La.

The two-engined DC-3 airliner crashed and exploded near Marshall, Tex., after striking a pine tree in a storm while making a landing approach to the airport at Shreveport, La.

Several persons were slightly hurt when the Southerner, bound from New Orleans to Little Rock, Ark., hit a displaced rail at a high speed during a severe storm near Sinms, La.

Missouri-Pacific railway officials said it was a "miracle" that no one was more seriously injured as the locomotive and baggage car overturned and four other cars left the rails.

Immediately after the wreck 100 feet of track was swept away at the spot by one of the torrential rains which flooded croplands in parts of the state, covered streets with water in several towns.

The tornado at Ferriday whipped through four blocks of homes and then struck the business district, caving in three stores, tossing the roof of another into the street and demolishing a lumber yard.

L. A. E. Rogillo of the state police reported no one was badly hurt at Ferriday but he said houses were unroofed, trees were blown over and 16 to 18 inches of water stood in the streets.

Rain caused a landslide which carried away two Negro dwellings on the far bank of the Mississippi River near Natchez, Miss., some 12 miles east of Ferriday, injuring a woman and three children.

Earlier tornadoes had struck Lewisburg, in southwestern Louisiana, four communities near Powhatan in north central Louisiana, near Greenwood in the northwest, and near Quitman and Chatham in the northeast.

It was the third consecutive 24-hour delay and the fourth postponement in all for the tower detonation at Yucca Flat proving grounds, 65 miles northwest of here.

Atomic Energy Commission scientists postponed the secret blast until 5 a. m. (PDT) tomorrow.

The AEC said that wind conditions were such that radioactivity from the atomic blast would have been carried into populated areas.

Women In The Church

Methodist Church women, and others concerned with the welfare of children throughout the world, are being urged by the denomination's Woman's Society of Christian Service (1,722,000 women in 30,000 societies) to call their congressmen's attention to "the grave consequences which will follow failure to make full appropriation for the carrying on of UNICEF" (United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund).

It seems that the last U.S. Congress authorized a total of $16,481,000 for UNICEF's work among millions of needy children; but it appropriated only $6,600,000. Measures now in Congress call for the appropriation of the remainder $9,881,000. The W.S.C.S. leaders point out that failure to appropriate this fund at this session will imperil the entire program to which the U.S.A. and 61 other governments are committed. "We urge you to write your congressmen at once on this," say the women. Representative John Taber (R-N.Y.), is chairman of the committee handling this measure.

Boys and girls in the Sunday school of the First Methodist Church in Birmingham, Ala. (Dr. Paul Hardin Jr., pastor) have erected and dedicated a beautiful bird bath on the church grounds. They began "saving their pennies" for the project when in the kindergarten and some of them are now in the senior department. The idea grew out of a Sunday school lesson on the verse, "Be ye kind." The first contributions were in the form of war savings stamps.

Dancer Samia Is Seeking Divorce From Playboy

CAIRO, Egypt (UP)—Belly dancer Samia Gamal said today she wouldn't "hang out of a window" her reasons for wanting a divorce from Texas playboy Shepard (Abdullah) King III.

But the sultry one-time favorite dancer of Egypt's exiled former King Farouk said that if her husband makes unbecoming statements about her at his home in Houston she will retaliate "and how!"

Samia announced Sunday she wanted to break up her 18-month marriage because of all the things King "did to me since our marriage." She declined to describe the alleged mistreatment.

"At the present stage it just wouldn't be decent if I made the reasons public," she said. "Besides, I don't think that should be necessary at all. But if Abdullah makes unbecoming statements at his end I will retaliate and how!"

AND A GOOD LAUGH, TOO
Bifocals! They can cause trouble, especially to golf players.

A physician fitted a pair of glasses to a patient some time ago, and then meeting him later asked him how his bifocals were influencing his golf game. "Oh fine," said the man. "I think my game is improving. You see," he said, "when I look down at the ball on the tee, I see two balls, one large and one small, so I hit the large one. On the fairway it is the same. When I get to the green, I see two balls on the green, one large and one small, and two cups, one large and one small. So I put the small ball into the large cup."

Well that, of course, is a way of looking at life, and, on the whole, not a bad way. If you have to use bifocals or a wooden leg or a glass eye, if you have to scrimp all the time to make ends meet, or bear some pain in your heart that nothing can assuage, there is a good-natured way of looking at such things, taking them in your stride, and getting fun out of a situation not wholly repulsive to joy.

The golfer may have been pulling the doctor's leg or he may not have been, but at any rate he was making the best of life as he found it and getting a good laugh out of it to boot.

Five Days Remain To Join In The Chorus

Five days remain for the special registration of voters who wish to cast ballots in the special referendum on the $1,500,000 for the Greenville school district.

Although the registration books at the city hall have been open for registration for the election since May 2, only a small percentage of the voters in the district so far have registered.

After Saturday, May 23, it will be too late to register for the referendum. It will be up to the voters who have registered during this registration period to decide the issue for all the citizens in the school district. Unless registration picks up sharply this week, it will be left to a relatively few hundred voters to decide a one-and-one-half million dollar question which will directly affect some 20,000 or more people in the Greenville school district.

The importance of this special referendum on the bond issue to the school district can not be minimized. Local school facilities are facing an urgent problem. School facilities of the district already are over-taxed with students, and the enrollment in the next several years is expected to show an appreciable increase. Therefore it behooves local citizens to support the bond issue.

But the fact remains that little active support can be given the issue by citizens who fail to get their names on the registration book before the registration period closes Saturday. The only way to assure passage of the bond issue is for those citizens who favor it to make sure they are registered in order to be eligible to vote for it.

Citizens of the district should bear in mind that a previous election of any sort makes an individual automatically eligible to vote in this special school bond referendum. Only those who register specifically for the special school bond referendum will be allowed to vote June 2.

As The Reflector has said before, the question of whether or not to spend $1,500,000 for local schools should not be left to a relatively few local citizens. It is a question which should be decided by a large number of local citizens who register and then cast their ballots in the referendum.

Peace And Freedom Continue To Be Costly

Peace and freedom have come to be expensive items in the lives of the American people. Surely no price is too great to pay for freedom. And those who have experienced war are convinced there are few prices short of freedom itself which are too expensive to pay for peace.

It is in that expensive process of preserving freedom through the maintenance of military might, and at the same time purchasing peace by having such a force that the United States finds itself.

Retiring Chief of Staff Gen. Omar Bradley asserted in his Armed Forces Day address that even if the conflict in Korea ends, the United States must continue to pour approximately 36 billion dollars a year into the cold war between the East and the West.

Even assuming peace comes in Korea, Bradley said, "the sustained burden of military aid to our allies and the adequate support of our own defense will cost us on the order of three billion dollars a month as far into the future as we possibly can see."

We are not sure just how far into the future the military experts of the nation assume they can see clearly, but it is reasonable to believe they can see at least several years.

In times of war, when it is clearly realized that the very freedom of this nation is at stake, the price that is paid in dollars for the defense of freedom is not difficult to take. In times when war is not raging close to home, it often becomes difficult for the taxpayers to see the justification for the spending of billions of dollars for domestic defense and foreign aid programs.

If the cold war alone is going to cost the American people a minimum of three billion dollars a month, it will mean for a long time to come the pro rata part for each man, woman and child in the United States will be approximately $20 per month. At first that may seem a high cost for peace; but when considered carefully, in terms of lives as well as money which the toll of war takes, the price is indeed extremely moderate.

Even so, it is no hard and fast insurance against all-out war, and certainly three billion a month for peace will continue to be a heavy burden upon the taxpayers of the nation.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—Our United Nations allies, especially the British and the French, are complaining forcefully but diplomatically against the brusque manner in which Lieutenant General William K. Harrison Jr. and Nam II are conducting truce talks at Panmunjom. They insist that seasoned diplomats replace the military representatives in an attempt to end the war for which they never had any heart.

The backstage criticism is not directed so much at General Harrison as it is at his superiors at Tokyo and Washington, who telephoned him full but rigid instructions several times a day. Likewise, General Nam II, the enemy's top delegate, is only a puppet. Both men simply receive and relay orders from their respective headquarters thousands of miles distant.

The American spokesman happens to be the target because he is the United Nations agent. Moreover, he is accessible to Anglo-French pressure exerted by their Foreign Offices and their diplomats at Washington, London and Paris. Nam II is fully as responsible as the U.N. representative for the formal, chilly atmosphere, but the servant of Moscow and Peking is immune to allied influence.

LONDON, PARIS CALL FOR ENDING CONFLICT—General Harrison has heard, and responded to these attacks on his conduct. He has admitted reluctantly that "it may be time for the diplomats to take over." Immediately following this remark, Ambassador Robert Murphy was instructed to remain at Tokyo as political adviser to General Mark W. Clark instead of rushing back to his new Washington post of Assistant Secretary of State.

London and Paris obviously want to terminate the Korean conflict as a start toward the top-level conferences with Moscow which Churchill proposed after consulting the French Government.

Thus their joint fault-finding with the Panmunjom proceedings represents an attempt to persuade the American spokesman to a more favorable attitude toward their call for a get-together with the Moscow-Peking axis.

STYLIZED PERFORMANCES—The behavior of the principals at the Panmunjom truce hut is hardly conducive to a satisfactory settlement of the Korean problem, according to confidential dispatches. It is a stiff, stylized and mechanical performance.

At each meeting five uniformed figures stride into the hut from opposite sides, approaching from their respective headquarters. They bow solemnly. General Harrison arrives with his statement as dictated from Washington via Tokyo. Nam II extracts his previously prepared paper from an aide's briefcase.

Each reads his document, which are mutually recriminatory. When objections are raised by either side, even on the most trivial points, there can be no reply except a rereading of paragraphs pertinent to that particular area of difference.

At the end of the conference, which rarely lasts more than an hour, each delegation "briefs" its newspaper corps. This "briefing," of course, consists only of distribution of the statements read within the hut.

IMAGINATION, INITIATIVE LACKING—Within such a framework, neither side has any initiative or imagination. Neither dares to make an original or daring proposal. Neither Harrison nor Nam II can think around or through even the most unimportant problem. Worst of all, perhaps, they seem intent on insulting each other in their public announcements to the press.

It is this arms-length kind of "negotiation" which Churchill seeks to eliminate by his proposal for more chummy discussions with the leaders who must make policy in the cold war. And the White House has learned that he speaks for all our U.N. allies, as well as neutrals like India, and not for England alone.

REASONS FOR TWO VISITS—A State Department official recently returned to Washington after welcoming Crown Prince Akihito of Japan at Hawaii and escorting him to the mainland. When the official was asked if this was his first trip to the Pacific Isles, he replied with an apt comment on the world turmoil: "No! Ten years ago, I was shipped to Hawaii to kill Japanese!"

PATTERN — While there remains dozens of appointments yet to be made by Governor Umstead, some of them of great importance, the announcements released to date have pretty well established the pattern of his administrative policy. The entirely new highway commission and the certainty of a new motor vehicles commissioner, and equal certainty of changes in other top administrative offices, proves clearly that the Governor will have his own team in policy making positions. The reappointment of several members of the state board of education and the board of agriculture affords proof that he is not interested in change simply for the sake of change.

The reappointment of members to the board of public welfare and several institutions gives further proof that Governor Umstead is not inclined to play personal politics with these services to the people.

CRITERION — Stated another way, it would seem that the test applied to appointees for the policy-making executive-administrative positions may be how the applicant voted in the primary last summer. In these places it is important for the Governor to have men and women who not only are loyal to him but who have demonstrated that their thinking follows the same lines as his own. Every Governor has had the same feeling, and criticism of the executive for choosing such aides has been misplaced. But, when it comes to advisory places on boards without actual authority in governmental matters, the test applied is not how they voted in the primary but how they have served the public interest.

PARADOX — The analogy stated in the foregoing paragraphs does not necessarily hold as the controlling factor. Governor Umstead apparently is choosing his working force not so much on basis of how they voted in the past, either in primaries or in board sessions, as upon how he thinks they will vote in the future. So it is that some who voted for him, especially if it appeared, that vote was just to get with the winner, have been discarded and some who voted against him have been retained. The aim seems to be to get the job done from here out like he wants it done.

BILL DRAFTING — The record shows that there were 1825 bills and resolutions introduced in the 1953 General Assembly. After making due allowance for duplicative and companion introduction of identical bills in each branch—a device often used to facilitate public hearings and times for other purposes—the number of separate bills which had to be prepared would approximate an average of nearly 20 for each legislative day of the session. Preponderant majority, probably more than 90 per cent, of these bills were written by the bill drafting section in the attorney general's office. That is a sort of hybrid under-financed operation that is a catch-all for legislative bill drafting and in the parlance of one of its most diligent workers "catches hell" during the session.

BURDENSOME — It is supposed to be a permanent and continuing operation; but, as has happened so many times in so many phases of public service, the legislature in authorizing it failed to make any provision for financing its activities. The result of that failure is and has been for a good many years that during the time the General Assembly is in session practically every person connected with the attorney general's office, from the stenographer, must devote nearly full time to writing bills for legislators. Little (?) things like having to prepare briefs and argue cases on appeal before the Supreme Court and defending the rights of all the people in rate cases before the Utilities Commission, must be sidetracked in order to prepare a bill for some legislator who wants to change the hours when the register of deeds office in his county will be open, or to increase or reduce the pay of a county auditor, or to ban the sale of beer on the operation of a pool room within a specified distance of some church. The impact of this load is burdensome on the office of the attorney general, but the burden could be greatly alleviated if the bill drafting section could be made actually a permanent and continuing activity.

WORTHWHILE — To most people the idea of maintaining a full-time staff for the purpose of preparing bills for introduction during the 12 to 15 weeks that the assembly is in session might seem wasteful. Those familiar with processes agree that it would very probably save money in the long run, as well as saving a lot of the confusion resulting from hastily and improperly written petitions and duplications on the law books because neither the legislators nor the public has been made aware of existing statutes, many of which are infrequently invoked.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

NORTH CAROLINA'S CONTEST IS A CHALLENGE (Rocky Mount Telegram)

It is gratifying to learn that 75 North Carolina counties now are enrolled in the "County of the Year in Rural Progress" contest for this year. This is a substantial increase over the 422 counties which entered last year. By another year it is reasonable to assume that the contest may include virtually all the counties competing in this challenge program.

And various individuals and concerns are seeing to it that the counties which are competing will reap rich benefits, too. The Telegram is glad to be able to announce that it will duplicate any prize won by a county within its circulation area. Here are the other awards: The Farmer's Cooperative Exchange will give a state prize of $1,000; the Progressive Farmer will give two district prizes of $500 each; The Raleigh News and Observer and Gordon Gray, president of the University of North Carolina, will give district prizes of $500.

In addition Editor Clarence Poe of The Progressive Farmer has offered $500 to the North Carolina county showing the most progress in Negro community development in 1953.

The County of the Year program is administered by the N.C. Board of Farm Organizations and Agencies, which also administers the five-point Challenge Program dedicated to "increased per capita income, greater security, improved educational opportunities, finer spiritual values, stronger community life, and more dignity and contentment in county living."

To us, the whole idea of rural areas organized into betterment programs is most heartening. Gradually people are realizing the real importance which should be attached to the role of our far-flung people in our everyday living. This challenge is aimed just as much at our city cousins as our rural neighbors. What benefits rural communities eventually benefits urban sections as well.

NASTY RECORD (William Enterprise)

North Carolina's 1953 General Assembly left a nasty record behind when it quit Raleigh a few days ago.

The legislators remained in session longer than any other session since about 1935—and accomplished less in a constructive way than any other session during all time.

It winked at the State Constitution. The people of this State were denied the right to voice their opinions on controversial matters, the legislators dodging behind high-handed tactics to hide their own positions. The people were brazenly told that what went on in committees was none of their business.

The assemblymen were accommodating on the spending end, but obstinate when it came to taking a stand necessary to finance the spending.

With some exceptions, the assembly members bowed down to the liquor and gambling interests, and told the defenseless working man that he was not entitled to anything more than starvation wages.

The assembly with some other exceptions, joined pressure groups of questionable intent, and spat on others who placed common decency and the welfare of the State and its people ahead of things of questionable value.

Politics and personalities ruled the roost, leaving the 1953 session with a record covered with shame and filth.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER - America is a land of ideas and frequently and regularly readers write this department, "I have a million-dollar idea for a new product. How can I get a manufacturer interested in it?"

Before taking the first step, it may lessen future heartbreakers to be grimly realistic about the new idea. Relatively few inventions are worth vast sums. Again, often what seems to be a new idea may not be so new. The human memory plays tricks. Something seen and forgotten can return to consciousness as a seemingly original thought. Furthermore, most successful manufacturers maintain departments to develop new ideas and something thought up by an outsider may have already been worked out and tested—and perhaps discarded—by some manufacturer.

Another bit of realism is to consider that all ideas in itself is not worth a cent. It is only ideas plus-selling that have any value. The greatest idea in the world is worthless unless the inventor works hard to get it accepted. After this bit of reality, a good first step is to discuss the idea with an attorney to determine whether it can be patented, copyrighted or protected in some other way.

Then, if the lawyer has no hot suggestions for marketing the idea, the next best step is to locate the manufacturers most likely to be interested in it. The most likely are those who are already manufacturing something similar.

Regional offices of the Department of Commerce, Chambers of Commerce, and trade associations in the particular field can usually help in this. Other good sources are the manufacturers' advertisements in the field. Letters to them will usually get prompt replies. However, most manufacturers will ask persons to sign a waiver, promising not to sue for infringement, before discussing the idea. It is best to show these waivers to one's attorney before signing; the attorney will usually approve of signing if the manufacturer is reputable.

If a manufacturer is interested, it is stupid for the originator of the idea not to consult his attorney before signing any agreement. Even the most reputable of manufacturers may be inclined to write a contract that gives him most of the breaks.

And if all manufacturers turn down a new idea, don't think that they are in a conspiracy to crush inventors. A good idea can make money for a manufacturer, and nobody ever conspires against making money.

FURNITURE PROSPECTS BRIGHT BUT NOT DAZZLING - Good, though not boom, business in furniture is expected during the remainder of the year by officials preparing for the home-furnishings market at the American Furniture Mart, Chicago, June 22 to July 3.

So far this year, business has been much better than during the same time in 1952, they say. A survey indicates that manufacturers' shipments of furniture have been 15 to 30 per cent higher; shipments of appliances and radio and television sets have shown "a marked improvement," and air-conditioners have shown "tremendous gains."

Retail sales, the survey indicates, were up 5 to 15 per cent during the early months of this year and have been even better since then.

NEW PRODUCTS - TIE CASE: To keep neckties from wrinkling and curling in a suitcase, an easy-to-use leather tie case with a transparent front has been brought out (by Adams Service Products, Box 1206, Santa Rosa, Calif.).

KILLER: An insecticide solution guaranteed to kill odors, maggots, bacteria, and ants, has been announced by Plasti-Kote, Inc., 425 Lakeside N.W., Cleveland, Ohio. It is said also to prevent refuse from sticking to containers, and is packed in pressurized spray cans.

CLEANS: A portable unit, using a rotary pump as its heart, has been devised by Visa Clean Corp., Randallstown, Md., for removal of sludge, dirt, water and other impurities from liquid storage tanks. Its primary use at present is for cleaning fuel oil tanks, though, says the maker, it can be applied to almost any type tank and almost all liquids.

Hal Boyle's Column

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Suppose this Sunday every church in America were locked and the front door bore this sign: "Going out of business. Building for sale or rent. The minister isn't mad at anybody. He simply has decided to enter a field offering more opportunity for advancement."

Well, you can imagine what would happen. There would be the greatest religious revival in the nation's history. You never love anything so much as when you are afraid you'll lose it. At first everybody would simply be angry with the ministers. "They must be crazy," people would say. "What's the matter with them anyway? They get paid for what they do."

The regular church-goers would cluster restlessly around the locked doors, then go back home, restless and uneasy. The Sabbath golfers would shout indignantly at their wives: "The kids have to be able to go to Sunday school. It's good for them. I guess you'll have to read them something out of the Bible today, until we get this thing straightened out. There must be a Bible around here somewhere."

And of course, the angriest of all would be the people who rarely or never attend their church, and don't even know the pastor's first name. "The delegation after delegation would call at the homes of the ministers and say stormily: "All right, if it's more money you want—how much?"

But if all the ministers still stayed away from their churches, the delegations would cease to bluster, and plead and plead fearfully: "You have to come back. You can't do this. Who is going to bury us, baptize our children, bury us when we are dead, and give hope to those we leave behind?" And the ministers might answer: "We are weary of simply marrying you, baptizing your children, burying you and consoling your survivors. And it isn't a question of getting more take-home pay either. We will open the churches again only if you promise to live up to your religion in your daily life and then live up to that promise."

And when the churches did reopen their doors they would be as crowded as a real estate office in the Florida land boom. At least for a few Sundays.

I suppose every minister had had a day dream of that kind at some time or other. And while I am not advocating a nation-wide sit-down strike for ministers, it certainly would stir up a mighty interest in religion—and a little overdue appreciation for the parson.

A minister gives up a great deal for a mighty cause. In wartime a good chaplain is often as much of a hero as any frontline doughboy. In peace he must show a finer, quieter bravery, with no medals to win and only the crying bugle in his own spirit to cheer him on.

His mere act of dedication sometimes humiliates, and makes him sometimes lonely. But like any other human being he is subject to discouragement and frustration. The time other men save for their family life he must always put at the disposal of his congregation.

Every minister wants to build one new church in his lifetime. But usually this is neither vanity nor the urge to spend money. If he has to build a bigger church he knows he has succeeded—he has brought more people to the practice of their faith than were there when he first came.

This is his opportunity for advancement—his only real one. For this is his ultimate consolation, the proof that he has not failed in his dedication—he has led many to the worship of the Lord he serves.

And like any other fisherman he yearns most for the ones that got away.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Dennis Chavez, wife of the Democratic senator from New Mexico, has been storing away reminders of her 22 years' experience in the capital in the hope of one day finding time to write a book.

These items include all the things that people put into memory books — invitations, programs, photographs and scads of clippings — but the most interesting is a collection of placecards Mrs. Chavez has wheeded from her dinner partners. She has gone to a lot of dinner parties since her husband was first sent to Washington as a congressman back in 1931, and she has had many a famous gentleman for a dinner partner. In recent years she has added cards from dinner parties in South American and European countries that she attended with her husband and other members of the Senate Appropriations committee on tours of investigation.

Among the cards are autographed placecards of the King of Norway and President Peron of the Argentine. "I was not their dinner partner, but I sat next to them as ranking lady of the visiting senatorial group," she told me. Some of the autographed cards carry flattering messages — "You know how men are."

Several years ago, sitting next to President Truman, Mrs. Chavez asked him if he might have his card for her collection. According to protocol, the card was inscribed merely "the president," but Truman volunteered to autograph it.

Like any other congressional wife, Mrs. Chavez is constantly on the go attending luncheons, teas and receptions, and she's active in the Senate Ladies Club, which meets Tuesdays to sew and roll bandages for the Red Cross. She never collects cards from women, she said, but she saves clippings of these events. A high light of her collection is the set of clippings on her daughter Gloria's wedding here in 1946 to Jorge Tristani, scion of a wealthy Puerto Rican sugar planter. It was a spectacular social event with Margaret Truman, one of the 12 attendants. Most of the capital society was on hand for the reception.

Now data on grandchildren is filling boxes in the basement of the Chavez Washington home. Gloria, living in Puerto Rico, sends clippings and photos of her sons, Jorge, 5, and Dennis, 3. There are items too concerning Stanley, 16, and Imelda, 14, the children of the widowed elder Chavez daughter, Mrs. Stanley Miller, who makes her home with the senator and his wife.

"Ever since we came here people from all over the world," Mrs. Chavez told me. "We've met 'most anybody you can mention."

School Kids Run Own Post Office In Ayden

AYDEN—Growing out of a desire to write letters to their parents, students of grade 4 B at the Ayden Negro School last year established a post office unit in their own school from which teachers and students mail letters daily.

Under the direction of Mrs. M. J. Albritton, fourth grade teacher, the fourth grade group began studying letter-writing which later grew into a study of the functions of a post office and laws which effect the post office.

To establish a sound foundation for the beginning of the post office unit, the students wrote a letter to W. C. Ormond, Ayden postmaster, invited him to come out and talk with them on the origin and operation of a post office.

Ormond reviewed for the class the information they were seeking and in turn, the students were invited by Ormond to visit the post office. At the post office in Ayden, the students were shown various types of stamps, including Ormond's personal collection.

In addition, the students, divided into groups, saw how mail was treated when it first entered the post office until it left for its destination.

With the cooperation of J. J. Brown, school agricultural teacher, his students and the boys in the fourth grade built a miniature post office in the classroom and painted it mahogany.

The classroom post office was built with two windows, one for stamps and special delivery letters and one for parcel post. The classroom post office also had individual mail boxes for each pupil with the pupil's name printed below his box, a slot for letters, two extra boxes for teachers, and for magazines and newspapers. Signs were made and posted stating the postal rates and the time the mail would go out.

The post office was operated by students who acted as clerks and mail messengers. Both the clerks and messengers were selected for honesty, courtesy, alertness, and dependability. Clerks changed daily and they sold envelopes, stamps, postal cards, placed mail and in the pupil's boxes and saw that register blanks were filled out properly.

Duties of being a messenger also changed daily and these mailed all letters, postal cards, packages, and purchased postal materials.

Another service afforded by the unit was that people living on rural routes were able to send their mail by the children to school and get it mailed at the classroom post office.

Postmaster Ormond praised the work done by the students in operating a post office efficiently. "The post office unit has been in operation for two years and now seems to be a permanent feature of the Ayden Negro School," stated Ormond.

"My desk at the post office is near the window to the street and almost daily the 'mail messenger' of the day or some other student who has served in that capacity, knocks on the window, waves his or her hand, smiles, and gives the postmaster a joy that can come only from one who is also enjoying giving excellent post office service to his patron," stated Ormond.

Every day a "mail messenger" from the school picks up all the collected mail, and with cash from the sales, deposits the letters at the post office in town and purchases more stamps for resale during the next 24 hours.

At the end of study on the unit the students wrote an explanation of their post office and told how much it meant to them.

J. W. Ormond, principal of the school, said both the school and community received much benefit from the post office operated the class.

Building Plans Not Respected

KNOXVILLE Tenn. (UP)—Knoxville's building inspector, Ben R. England, says, "I love the woman—God bless 'em!—But I wish they'd let the men work out building permits instead of doing it themselves."

England recently spent many hours on the details of a permit involving the building of an additional room to a house. After he drew the plans, the woman of the house decided she didn't want the room after all. What she really wanted was a porch.

Teachers and students alike use this miniature post office set up in the fourth grade classroom at the Negro School in Ayden. Mail is collected daily by the "clerks" and taken to the post office in Ayden by "mail messengers" who are chosen to work at the little post office.

Ghost Town Now Stands Inside Big H-Bomb Plant

By TOM PRICE
United Press Staff Correspondent
AIKEN, S. C. (UP)—The ghost town that once was Ellenton, S. C., stands inside the highly restricted Savannah River H-bomb plant, a monument to atomic energy and the hydrogen bomb of the future.

Ellenton, population 600, was the first town to be "destroyed" by the hydrogen bomb. Its empty houses and stores and deserted streets left their impression on some 30 newsmen who were taken on a guided tour of the enormous 315 square mile H-bomb plant reservation Friday.

The Atomic Energy Commission and the Du Pont Company, which is building the plant for the government, were hosts to reporters in a day-long seminar at the plant.

The morning and early afternoon hours of the seminar were spent in a giant lecture room where high AEC and Du Pont officials explained as much about the plant construction and operation as security regulations would permit.

But by far the most impressive phase of the seminar was an hour and 45 minute bus ride through the length and breadth of the plant which sprawls over portions of three South Carolina counties across the Savannah River from Georgia.

Reporters got an early taste of the security that is thrown over the area. They had their pictures taken upon reporting at the main administration building, and each newsmen was provided with a badge bearing his photograph.

After the bus left the administration building, it was halted seven times within the plant and a guard clambered aboard the bus to scrutinized methodically the badges of every one of its 30 occupants.

For the most part, the ride might have been through any ordinary piece of countryside. There were few indications of top secret activity.

The only hints of government ownership were occasional signs that announced the area was "U. S. Government property." Other highway signs warned: "Government vehicles only. Private vehicles do not enter." Very large signs reminded that "Security is everybody's business."

The bus moved over the roads through the slightly rolling terrain past wooded areas and what once were fields and pasture lands.

A few abandoned farm houses and outbuildings were passed, ghostly reminders of what used to be. On each abandoned building the government had placed a metal plate bearing a number.

The various construction areas inside the plant are in clusters. The bus drove by these, giving

French Student Wins Distinction

Jacqueline Phalempin of Arras, France, fellowship student at East Carolina College during the 1952-1953 term, has been awarded a Certificate of American Studies "with distinction". She is the second person to receive this award from East Carolina, the first being Genevieve Longevialle of Tulle, France, in 1951.

Besides assisting in the college department of foreign languages here, making talks in various eastern North Carolina high schools, and performing other duties, Miss Phalempin has completed 33 hours of class work. On more than half of these she made the highest possible grade.

At East Carolina Certificates of American Studies are awarded upon recommendation of the director of the department of foreign languages to foreign students who meet specific scholastic requirements.

Miss Phalempin will leave Greenville Monday, May 18, on a trip to the west coast and Canada.

Charge Breaking, Entering Home

On July 15 she will embark from New York for France.

A 40-year-old white man was confined without bond in a Greenville jail this morning on charges of breaking into and entering a home occupied by a widowed Negro mother and her eight children.

In reporting the incident his morning Pitt County Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson said the prisoner, Henry Evans of near Pactolus, will be given a hearing on the charges sometime today. At that time, he said, a bond will be set.

Evans was arrested yesterday afternoon at his home between Pactolus and Stokes by deputies Lloyd Manning and Jasper Lee Mills and brought to Greenville where he was lodged in the Pitt County jail. Both officers quoted Evans as saying he was drunk at the time he entered the house.

Sheriff Tyson said that sometime before daylight Sunday morning local man entered 2 houses in which Annie Carney and her eight children were sleeping. He said when the break-in occurred Annie awoke and found Evans in the living-room. She then called officers. Deputy Sheriff Mills stated when he and Manning arrived at the Carney home they found a man's shoe lying in the livingroom and another lying on the front porch. When Evans was locked up a tentative charge of breaking and entering was lodged against him.

The next word in the case will be handed down today, after a preliminary hearing is completed. Under ordinary circumstances where in criminal intent is suspected or can be proven, a crime of that nature falls into the category of a capital case.

Sparrow Dropped Five Dollar Bill

TARBORO (UP)—Policeman Frank O'Neal saw a sparrow with a large article in its bill.

O'Neal approached the bird near the back door of a drug store. The bird flew off, but dropped its prize, a new $5 bill.

O'Neal promptly put it in his pocket and went back to the police station.

"If that sparrow will contact me at the police station I'll be glad to return his money," O'Neal promised.

Indians End Losing Skein With Double Win Over A's

By MILTON RICHMAN
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (UP)—Cleveland came off the floor today, using its one-two punch—Early Wynn and Mike Garcia—to bounce back into the American League pennant race again.

Wynn halted the Indians' five-game losing streak when he pitched them to a 7-3 triumph over the A's in the first of two games Sunday and Garcia made the day complete by following Philadelphia, 9-1 in the 10-inning nightcap.

Jim Hegan put the first game on ice when he blasted a three-run homer off Bobby Shantz in the second inning, a frame in which the Indians netted four runs. Wynn took it from there, limited the A's to six hits and was rewarded with his fourth triumph.

Garcia scattered nine hits for his third victory in the nightcap as the Indians shelled Alex Kellner and Harry Byrd amid an eight-run barrage in the 10th that included seven hits and two Philadelphia errors. By winning, Cleveland moved into third place, only two and a half games behind the league-leading Yankees.

Billy Martin's two-run single in the 10th gave the Yankees a 6-5 decision over the Browns in the opener of a twin bill but the second game was called at the end of three and a half scoreless innings because of darkness.

Martin's blow came with the bases loaded after Clint Courtney delivered a pinch single in the top of the 10th to put St. Louis ahead, 5-4. Irv Noren's two-run triple the ninth tied the game after the Yankees had trailed from the first inning. Bob Kuzava, fourth Yankee hurler, was the winner and rookie Mike Blyskal the loser.

Paul Richards' exciting White Sox remained a half game behind the Yankees by toppling Washington, 7-3, as Saul Rogovin scattered 11 hits. The White Sox clinched the contest in the third inning when Sam Mele hit a two-run homer off ex-teammate Chuck Stobbs to give Chicago a 5-1 margin.

Rain postponed the Detroit-Boston double header in the American League and the Philadelphia-Milwaukee twin bill in the National.

when he held the Reds to one hit, a sixth-inning run single by Gus Bell, to pace Brooklyn to a 10-0 decision in the nightcap of a double header after Cincinnati took the first game, 13-5.

Erskine, who pitched a no-hitter against the Cubs last June 19, allowed only one ball to be hit to the outfield as his teammates pounded out 20 hits, including a homer by Bill Antonello, to snap their four-game losing streak Cincinnati "out-homered" the Dodgers in the opener, Jim Greengrass, Ted Kluszewski, Willard Marshall and Bell each homering for the Reds while Jackie Robinson, George Shuba and Roy Campanella did likewise for the Dodgers.

Tookie Gilbert, rookie Giant first baseman, highlighted a four-run sixth inning rally with a three-run homer to pace his team to a 9-6 victory over the Cardinals. Gilbert collected four of the Giants' 17 hits as Jim Hearn, who hurled the first victory.

Chicago swept a double header from Pittsburgh, 6-2 and 7-3, the second game behind halted after six and a half innings because of darkness. Paul Minner held the Pirates to six hits in the opener and Johnny Klippstein was the winner in the final although touched for homers by Ralph Kiner and Cal Abrams.

Gary Middlecoff Wins With Steal In Golf Tourney

WESTBURY, N. Y. (UP)—Dr. Cary Middlecoff, who switched from drills to divots as a living, today credited a "stolen" drive for his long sought victory in the Palm Beach Round Robin golf championship at the Meadow Brook Club.

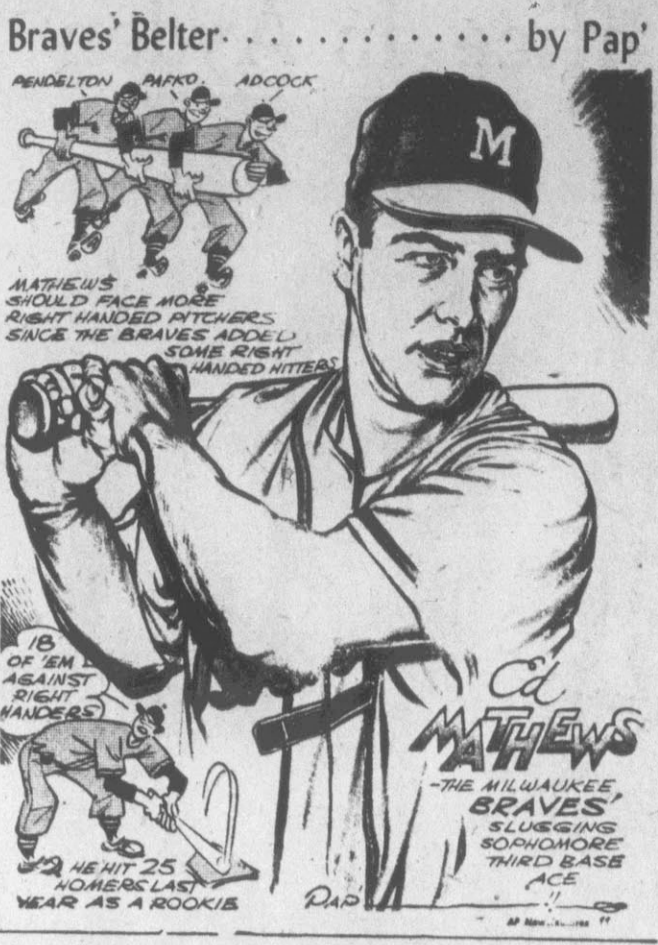

Middlecoff, long a patsy in the Round Robin, finished dusting off 15 hand-picked professional rivals four under par 66 which gave him a 17-under-par 333 for the 90-hole distance.

Rainbow Jimmy Demaret had the best chance but he couldn't match Cary's stretch drive. As the final round started Sunday, Middlecoff was only one slender point in front of Demaret in this tournament where each member of a foursome matches medal scores. Middlecoff had 35 points and Demaret had 34.

Middlecoff earned seven fat points with his 66 against a 67 for Jim Ferrier and 69's by sore-handed Sam Snead and Dave Douglas.

Demaret, closing with a 69, was held even by third place Jackie Burke and corner Ted Kroff, gaining his one point off the 70 posted by National Open champion Julius Boros.

Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago lost six points with a closing 70, against 68's by Tommy Bolt, Porky Oliver and Bobby Locke, but had enough of a cushion to finish fourth with a plus 14.

MILWAUKEE (UP)—The National Boxing Association today attacked television for its "disastrous effect" on boxing and the NBA also recommended that present fighters' weight classifications be reshuffled.

The NBA Executive Committee voted at its annual meeting Sunday to ask TV sponsors and network officials to meet with the NBA to work out a plan for future operations.

NBA Commissioner Abe Greene said television fights "are ruining boxing in this country."

Greene said "most of the small boxing clubs have disappeared and if we don't do something about it in a hurry, boxing will be dead."

Robert Christenberry, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, said "such a match as the recent one in Boston between Jimmy Carter and Tommy Collins was staged because we didn't have the guts to stand by what we thought was right."

Harvey L. Miller, executive secretary of the NBA, said the average weight of American youths has been increasing steadily since the end of World War I. He said a reshuffling of the classifications of boxers "has been needed for a long time."

Lady Luck Against Sammy Snead In US Open Golf Championship

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer
WESTBURY, N. Y. (UP)—Lady Luck frowned on Sammy Snead again today and once more it threatened to cost the hillbilly Slammer the coveted U. S. Open golf championship in what might be his last big chance.

Three times the lean slugger from the Virginia Hills has finished second in America's most coveted golf tournament. Another time he blew it with that now famous "eight" of 1939, when a par five would have taken it all.

"This time, when he would have been a hot favorite because he likes the Oakmont course where it will be played next month, Sam may be on the sidelines.

Because for the fifth time, Snead has what appears to be a broken bone in his left hand, X-rays will be taken today or Tuesday and the golf world will wait almost breathlessly, both the men who would have him to beat and the legion of fans who always will be rooting for one of golf's most colorful performers.

Sam's hopes aren't very high. "It feels like an ice pick is sticking in it most of the time," he said, rubbing the definitely swollen hand. "I'll have to have an operation. That would take me out of the Open and keep me on the shelf for at least a year."

At 41, that could be the end of Sammy's dreams.

Dreams, you might say, which up to now have been mostly nightmares.

Because the lean, lithe Sam should have won the very first Open in which he played. That was back in 1937 and Sam was in with a new record of 283 when handsome Ralph Guldahl pounded through the shadows with a winning 281.

Then it was 1939 and Sam stood on the final tee at Spring Mill needing a par five to win. His sky-rocket eight to finish fifth gave Sam one of his blackest moments.

Again in 1947 it looked like the Slammer might do it. But out of nowhere came Lew Worsham to tie him. And, on the final pole of their play off, Sam missed a 32-inch putt to blow the title.

One year later, there came Sam again disproving the theory that he was a fold-up golfer as he fired the hottest final round in the entire field. Yet, once more, it left him one shot back—this time behind Cary Middlecoff.

But Sam had high hopes for this year. The Open will be played at Oakmont, where he won the PGA in 1951. Snead plays it like he owns it. But a baseball slide a few years back may have been his undoing.

All in all, he has broken the bone in his left hand five times. The last was a week before the recent Masters when he slipped on wet rocks while fishing. The first time was while playing softball with caddies at his White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., club.

Jaycee's Allen Top Batter, Pitcher In Little League

Slugging at a .833 clip, Walter Allen of the Jaycees is the leading batter in the Greenville Little League baseball race. Two Kiwanians, Cox and Edwards, are close on the heels of Allen and .800 and .727 marks, respectively.

Miller of the Lions is the top homerun hitter with two. Others who have clouted circuit blows include Churchill of the Lions, Edwards and Cox of the Kiwanians and Bynum of the Elks all with one homer.

The Jaycees Allen also leads the pitchers with two wins and no losses. Cox, Kiwanian flinger, and Puryear of the Lions each hold one victory against no defeats.

Rocky Mt. Wins Over Farmville In Two Contests

Rocky Mount swept both games of a weekend series from Farmville of the Bright Belt loop by taking Saturday night's contest 9-8 and Sunday afternoon's game 10-3.

In the game played in Farmville Saturday night the Rocky Mount nine tallied the winning run in the top half of the tenth inning. Doug Whitley paced the Rocky Mount batters by knocking out three singles and a double in six at bats. Bill Kennedy had three for five for the Farmville team.

Whitley was also the big man in the Sunday game as he lashed out three singles and a triple in five times at bat to lead the Rocky Mount team to victory over the visiting nine.

Dark Star Meets Three Year Olds In Tune-Up Race

PIMLICO, Md. (UP)—Dark Star, the brown colt who warmed up for his surprise Kentucky Derby victory by winning the Derby trial, times up for Saturday's $100,000 Preakness today when he meets five other three-year olds in the $7,500 Preakness Prep at Pimlico.

Dark Star's Derby triumph didn't earn him much support for the Derby, but he will be about a 6 to 5 favorite to win the mile-and-a-half race which touches off Preakness week at the old Hill top course.

Native Dancer, the grey colt who lost the Derby to Dark Star by a head after starting as the odds-on choice, isn't in the Prep. But three Derby also-rans—Royal Bay Gem, Correspondent and Ram O'War—are in the field.

The other entries are Lord Jeffrey and Country Gossip, whose chances of running in the mile and three sixteenths Preakness depend upon their showings today.

Greenville Drops Coastal Golf Match To New Bern Club

Greenville's golfers went down in defeat at the hands of New Bern on the victors links Sunday afternoon. The 9-4-2 loss was the second in 11 matches for the local linksters, and the New Bern team now leads the race in the Coastal Golf association.

A return match is scheduled here Wednesday when the local boys will get a chance to gain revenge. If Greenville would win this match it would mean that Kingston, New Bern and Greenville would be in a three-way tie for the top spot in the standings. This would probably call for a play-off on a neutral course.

Medalist for Greenville Sunday was S. Moye with a 72. Leading the New Bern team was Bernardo and Darnell with 72 each.

Other low scores for the locals were C. B. Moye, 7; Ercell Webb and Ben Harrison, 76; Reynolds May and Red Corbett, 77; Bill Allen, Bill Goodwin, Lucian Bryan and Molt Massey Jr., 78; and Hunter Keck, 79.

500-Mile Race Features Vukovich In Pole Position

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UP)—Bill Vukovich, the hard-luck driver of last year, will occupy the pole position when the 33 fastest cars in history get off to a flying start in the 500-mile Memorial Day auto race.

The dapper, 34-year-old Fresno, Calif., pilot beat the rain and six other lead-footed drivers Sunday with the second-fastest qualification sprint ever turned in to nail down the inside spot in the first row.

Driving the same four-cylinder racer in which he was denied 500-mile glory last year when he hit the wall only eight laps from victory Vukovich averaged 138.392 miles an hour for the four-lap, 10-mile trial run around the brick and asphalt speedway oval.

Only the late Chet Miller, killed when he crashed in a practice lap here last Friday, has ever qualified faster, but observers believe his record of 139.024, established last year, will be eclipsed during next weekend's trials.

Locals Open Tobacco Belt Play With Wins

Opening weekend of the Tobacco Belt league saw Greenville take both ends of two games with Farmville. Playing in Guy Smith stadium Saturday, Greenville won 6-4 behind the pitching of Dave Dickerson.

Bill Hendrix hurled the Greenville team to victory in Farmville yesterday, but had to be relieved by Coach Bill Kittrell in the ninth, after walking the first batter.

Leading the local batters in the first game was Jim Corbin, who knocked a homer over the leftfield fence with one mate aboard.

Bobby Nunn and Hal Edwards led the hitting for Greenville with two for four each in the Sunday game. Edwards got a double with the bases loaded to drive in three runs that put the game on ice.

Walstonburg defeated Winterville in both games over the weekend by the scores of 3-1 and 8-3. Greenville and Walstonburg are now tied for top place in league standings.

Mize, Slaughter, Elliott Nearing 2000 Hit Mark

NEW YORK (UP)—Johnny Mize was running first, Bob Elliott second, and Country Slaughter third today in baseball's race to the 2,000 hit mark.

Mize of the Yankees stands the closest to that sum with 1,994 hits in his major league career. Elliott of the Browns has 1,990, and Slaughter of the Cardinals has 1,941.

There's a chance that Elliott may overtake Mize and reach the "charmed circle" first. He's playing third base regularly for the Browns, while Mize is being used currently as a pinch-hitter.

Felix Bocchicchio Seeks Satisfaction For Walcott's Loss

CHICAGO (UP)—Felix Bocchicchio, manager of the defeated challenger for the heavyweight championship, Jersey Joe Walcott, will seek satisfaction for his fighter today even though he can't get him the title.

Walcott lost his bid to regain the crown Friday night when he was knocked out by titleholder Rocky Marciano in 2:25 of the first round.

But Bocchicchio had a three-point program to follow today, although there was no expectation that he could get the outcome reversed.

First with his attorney, Angelo Malandra, he planned to protest to the Illinois Boxing Commission that Walcott suffered a short count that the ring was too small, and that the ring floor was padded too softly.

Shirai, a veteran of 44 professional fights, is a more polished boxer than Campo, who has fought 43 times. The champion was expected to utilize his advantages in height, reach, and speed to score against the challenger.

Nelson Blount and Mickie Sumrell succeeded John Brooks and Harry Scott as roving representatives.

Miss Frances Lamb, council adviser, pointed out the most important accomplishments and honors of the organization this year. In spite of its small enrollment, GHS boasts a strong and respected student council. The efficiency of its standing committees was recognized by Dr. Van Pool of the National Association. The local council was honored with an invitation to send a delegate to the National Convention in Portland, Oregon, this summer.

In the Southern Association, consisting of 14 states, GHS was one of ten schools selected to provide a discussion leader. Roy Taylor enjoyed the distinction of being a leader in the recent Florida meeting.

At the State Convention Frank Brooks was a discussion leader, and Billy Bost served in this capacity at the district meet. Billy was also elected vice-president of the division. Janice Ormond was district secretary last year.

Locally, the SCA has attempted to strengthen public relations between the school and city. It has cooperated with the recreation commission, has tried to relieve fire hazards in the building, and has collected clothing and toys for underprivileged children.

College Head To Retire June 30

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (U.P.)—Carl A. Lohmann, who served as secretary of Yale University under three presidents, will retire at the end of the current academic year, June 30. He got the job in 1927.

President A. Whitney Griswold revealed that he will be succeeded by Reuben A. Holden, present associate secretary, who has been a member of Yale's administrative staff since 1946.

Dartmouth Ivy Goes To Texas

HANOVER, N.H. (U.P.)—Dartmouth College officials report some of the school's ivy-covered tradition may take root in Texas.

Maine Brothers Have Tire Secret

WESTBROOK, Me. (U.P.)—Numerous trucking companies in nine states send solid industrial tires needing renovation to a small shop in this Southern Maine city.

The three Elowitch brothers—Julius, Abraham and Morris—run the shop and they aren't talking about the process they have hit on to restore tires often thrown away in the past.

"Everybody in the rubber industry has secrets," explained Abraham.

STREAKING SENTINELS — Sabrejets, based on Long Island, patrol over New York City. The F86Fs, in the 600-mile-an-hour class, are part of the "inner defense ring" around the city. Manhattan is in the foreground; Brooklyn and Queens in rear.

A pair of English ivy plants were sent to the San Angelo (Tex.) High School when students there requested it for their school "to hide its ugly walls."

The cuttings were from vines that originally came from the fabled holdings of the Earl of Dratmough in England.

LIGHT AT HOME
CHARLESTON, S.C. (U.P.)—Charleston firemen didn't even wait for the alarm to sound before rushing to put out a fire late one night. The fire was downstairs from their sleeping quarters.

MASTER OF THE ARTS — Lionel Barrymore, recently 75 and eldest member of the famed stage family, shows some of the pictures he has painted at his home near Chatsworth, Cal.

Raleigh Man Is Plagued By Eagle

RALEIGH, N.C. (U.P.) — Some people are plagued by ants in their homes, some with mice and some with termites. Bolie T. Perry has an eagle problem.

Perry found the eagle about a year ago. He made the mistake of taking it home with him. He didn't want it flying around the neighborhood, so he built the bird a comfortable cage.

However, federal fish and wildlife officials told Perry recently it is illegal to cage bald eagles. They took the bird several miles away and released it but it kept heading straight for Perry's home and its comfortable cage.

Now Perry faces trial in federal court if he doesn't get rid of the eagle but he can't even drive the bird away.

"I don't know what to do about it," he groaned. "I know I can't keep it but I can't do anything to make it leave."

State College Is Sponsoring Course In Fishing, $100

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (U.P.)—If you're one of those fishermen reduced to tilling lamely about the big one that got away, maybe a little study in an angler's college is what you need.

North Carolina State College is sponsoring its annual Salt Water Sports Fishing Institute here this June. It promises a "relaxed and informal" classroom on the Atlantic.

Scientists, veteran fishing guides and expert salt-water fishermen will teach the art of Gulfstream, off-shore, surf and sound fishing. One of the experts this year is Henry Lyman of Boston, publisher of the Salt Water Sportsman magazine.

Enrollment is limited to 48 with a tuition charge of $100. Even if you're a poor pupil you're sure to learn a lot of fresh, new alibis. After all, the teachers are experts.

Back To Sea And Safety For Tar

LOS ANGELES (UP) — Sailor Vernon Harootian, 20, said today he would be glad to get back to sea and safety.

Harootian, on shore leave, failed to make a turn in his car Friday night and knocked down a row of palm trees.

"I'll take the sea anytime," he commented after he climbed uninjured out of his car. "When I make a wrong turn out there I don't have to worry about trees."

Chapter 34
Brindle walked to the circular vault doorway and surveyed the broad corridor. Toward the back he saw a familiar face. He walked forward slowly.
Gray-red mustache lined face. Cigar in mouth. Peter Ranson. Brindle took a chair opposite him; it was several moments before Ranson looked up.
'Fancy meeting me here?' Brindle said.
Ranson's face was without his earlier good humor. His eyes stared at Brindle boldly. He even chewed his cigar.
How did you find me?' he asked soberly.
That's not important,' Brindle said. 'Are we friends?'
'Of course.'
'Why did you hire me?'

'You weren't a part of the ring' of course not.'
'I don't get the connection.'
Ranson hesitated. 'Can I tell you something in confidence?'
Brindle nodded.
'The man you knew as Harry West was actually Harry Ranson. My son.'
A silent whistle formed on Brindle's lips.
'Yes. That surprises you, doesn't it? Well, don't think I'm proud to admit it. Do you want the whole story?'
'Naturally.'
'As you saw, Harry was a strange boy. He actually thought he was another Beethoven. About six years ago he went to study with Hallstrag, the composer. He idolized the man. But when Hallstrag saw a sample of his work, he told my son to forget music.
'Harry went to pieces. He had a nervous breakdown a few months later, and I had him in a sanitarium for over a year. He was a violent case and narcotics were frequently given to quiet him. When he was released, he was very much changed. A mean streak came out in him. But he didn't entirely give up composing.
'He got in with a rough crowd. Finally, about eight months ago, he brought Durst and his wife to live with us.
'It was about a month later that I learned Harry was taking heroin and that one of Durst's friends was supplying him with it.
'I tried to kick Durst and the woman out of the house but they became very nasty. Then I learned that Harry was mixed up in their smuggling business, earning money for his heroin. I had never allowed him a very large allowance, and of course heroin is expensive.
'Durst told me I could either play ball or he'd kill both Harry and myself. He began using my home as a stopover for his foreign friends.
'I was afraid of the man. I was vicious. As a front, he and his wife pretended to be my relatives. He had come to hate me—as a result of his own guilt, I suppose—and I think he felt changing his name detached him from me.
'But he was still my son. I let things ride, thinking the mess would straighten itself out. But I came to see it was no use.
'I began to act quite pleasant toward them. Durst even tried to offer me money for the use of the house. To gain his confidence, I took it. He let me go to Ensenada with him a few times, and I learned where Harry was getting his narcotics.
'A week ago Monday I went with Durst to Ensenada. The boat was coming back with three aliens—one of them an old man. It turned out that he was a little short on money. But he insisted on being taken; otherwise he threatened to spill the racket to the authorities. So Durst took him about ten miles out, cleaned his pockets and over he went.
'Then it was his body that was picked up last Sunday,' Brindle put in, shifting in the chair.
'Of course. I was amused to read in the papers that Durst had identified it as me. He knew it wasn't, and must have realized I was still alive. But of course, at the time he wanted the Ranson affair to seem at an end, as far as the police were concerned.
'I see,' Brindle said. 'He knew then he'd better clear out before you put the finger on him.'
'I suppose so.'

Rain Chaps For Trousers Legs

United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK (UP)—A man made a better rain outfit recently and now he's beating paths to many doors to explain how it's possible to keep pants legs dry.
James Arthur Field is designer, president, sales manager, advertising director, button buyer and pouch stuffer for his new business. The 29-year-old former Air Force pilot quit his advertising copy writing job in January to concentrate on his "rain chaps."
They're plastic pants legs that snap around the lower part of a man's trousers. He worked out a way to button them easily on the inside pockets of any kind of a raincoat.
Nice And Wet
Field had a pleasant spring, since it rained more than usual in Manhattan, and he had plenty of opportunity to demonstrate his idea for dry pants legs to soggy prospects. Unfortunately, the first big factory output of the plastic chaps didn't begin until late in April, too late for the rainy season.
But I've got it rolling now," Field said. "The buttonhole man sends it to the strap man. The strap man sends it to the plastic man. I get it from the plastic man and stuff it in the plastic pouches."
This operation sounds just a bit tedious for mass production, yet Fields is so enthusiastic he easily convinces doubters. At the moment he's doing strictly a mail order business, with a Fifth Avenue office address.
"You wonder nobody thought of it before," Field said. "There were things to keep men's hats, shoes and coats dry, but nothing that really worked for the trousers."
His slogan, which the former Dartmouth man wrote for himself: "Don't get caught with your pants drowned."

Drive On To Stop Minors Drinking

BUFFALO, N.Y. (U.P.)—Bar-tenders and tavern proprietors will attempt to eliminate teen-age drinking by requiring "doubtful" youngsters to sign affidavits attest-ing to their age.
Charles O'Neill, secretary-treasur-er of Local 175, Bartenders' Un-ion, said the program, used in a few other cities, will require minors to provide proof of age and other details before being served.
Bartenders in Erie County's 1,850 taverns are being sworn in as notaries public to validate signed statements of the "doubtfuls." The union said it will prosecute violators of the affidavits.
New York law requires that an individual be 18 years old in order to buy alcoholic beverages. When an under-age drinker is found the tavern or restaurant where he was served faces a stiff penalty.
O'Neill said he hopes the plan will be a deterrent to youngsters and thus provide more protection for the business.
Other cities using the plan are St. Louis, Detroit, Columbus, O., Saginaw, Mich., and Omaha, Neb.

Fair Employment In 25 Cities

CHICAGO (U.P.) - Twenty-five municipalities in nine states have enacted ordinances governing fair employment practices, according to the American Municipal Association.

In addition, 11 states also have some form of fair employment practice law, and in seven of these states—Oregon, Washington, New York, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New Jersey—the law is considered enforceable.

Colorado has a law applying only to public employment. Indiana and Wisconsin provide conciliation but not enforcement, while New Mexico's law is not in effect for lack of an appropriation.

Ohio Leads

Of the 25 cities with "FEP" ordinances, 13 are in Ohio. These include Akron, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Lorain, Warren and Youngstown.

Other cities with such ordinances include Chicago, Milwaukee, Wis., Phoenix, Ariz., Richmond, Calif., Sioux City, Ia., and East Chicago and Gary, Ind.

Most of the ordinances, enacted since 1950, cover both public and private employment and grant enforcement powers to the agency administering the ordinance. A Minneapolis, Minn., ordinance sets up the right of employment to public employment. Indiana and Wisconsin provide conciliation but not enforcement, while New Mexico's law is not in effect for lack of an appropriation.

Safe Crackers Frightened Off

Safe crackers eyed a Greenville business place over the week-end but were apparently scared away before being able to complete their mission.

A city police prowler car in charge of Lt. H.E. Wooten discovered the rear door to "Smitty's" open in a routine check at 1:26 Sunday morning.

Chief of Police S.G. Gibbs reported that the rear door of the building had been pried open and entrance gained into the building.

Officers figured that the safe robber or robbers were scared away from the scene of their intended crime as they had just begun to start working on the iron safe.

Gibbs said that the safe had been moved from one room into another before the robbers attempted to open it.

Gibbs, Wooten, Captain S.B. Dorsey and Officer Paul Jewett investigated the robbery attempt.

Lone Survivor Sheds Little On Cause Of Crash

WASKOM, Tex. (UP)—The lone survivor of the crash of a Delta-Chicago and Southern Airlines DC-3 which killed 19 persons, said today the plane seemed to hit an air pocket shortly before the disaster.

"I had fallen asleep in the rain," said Mrs. Hazel Cox, 31, of Panama City, Fla. "The plane evidently hit an air pocket and it woke me up. Just after the plane seemed to hit the air pocket, it seemed to be shuddering. Then I saw some flames. I don't seem to recall whether it was lightning or fire."

The accident occurred shortly after noon yesterday six miles west of this little town on the Louisiana-Texas border.

The pilot, co-pilot and hostess and 16 passengers, including a two-month-old baby, were killed when the plane, enroute from Dallas to Atlanta, crashed and exploded in a heavy rain and hail storm in swampy pine forest.

Mrs. Cox was reported by hospital attendants as "getting along fine" but the extent of her injuries has not been determined. X-rays were being taken. Her husband, an Air Force staff sergeant, said she may not have a broken leg, but it's badly bruised.

"My wife remembers only a few details of what happened before the crash, then she was blanked out until after the accident," Cox said.

Civil Aeronautics Authority and Civil Aeronautics Board investigators worked under searchlights early today to learn the cause of the accident.

The pilot had checked with the airport at Marshall, Tex., 20 miles west of where the plane crashed, and reported everything normal. He radioed the control tower at Shreveport, La., 20 miles east of where the crash occurred, about 16 minutes before the crash and asked for landing instructions.

The plane was scheduled to make a routine landing at Shreveport. The tower gave him the instructions but heard nothing more from the plane.

The DC-3 sheared the tops from trees for 300 or 400 yards. The part of the plane from door to tail was not destroyed, but the rest burned to a skeleton.

Mrs. Cox was taken to Kahn Memorial Hospital at Marshall with a broken leg and head injuries. Physicians said she may also have broken ribs.

She told Dr. Roger Harman that she woke from a nap as the plane clipped the tops of trees, rolling over and over.

"Mrs. Cox said she had fallen asleep — it was raining heavily," Harman said. "When she woke up, the plane was going over and over. She was in a puddle with a man who was dying. She saw the flames... heard people screaming."

Her husband, Air Force S-Sgt. J. W. Cox of Panama City, Fla., had been sent to Jackson, Miss., enroute to Camp Kilmer, N.J. from where he was to go overseas. Mrs. Cox was flying from Albuquerque, N.M., to Jackson for a final visit.

Guillotine Faces Opposing Clergy

BERLIN (UP)—East German Communists have warned clergymen they face death by the guillotine if they oppose the Red regime in the Soviet zone.

The threat was made in the official Communist newspaper Neues Deutschland which charged the church is sending "subversive clergymen" into East Germany.

It said the "law for the protection of the peace" known in the West as the "death law" would be used to punish members of the clergy "who are propagandizing for war and spreading hatred on Western orders."

Registration Continues Slow For Referendum

Registration for the referendum to decide whether school bonds not to exceed $1,500,000 shall be issued in Greenville school district continued at a rather slow pace today.

Through 11 o'clock this morning only 331 voters had been placed on the registration books. That report came from E. R. Conway Jr., registrar in charge of books at the Greenville City Hall.

Conway said a great many local voters seem to be misinformed and confused relative to the school bond registration. "In order to vote in the referendum to be held Tuesday, June 2, voters must register in the special registration currently being conducted," he stated.

"This registration is not to be confused with city and county politics; it is being held for the express purpose of deciding on the proposed school bond issue."

The registrar emphasized that the registration period closes next Saturday, May 23, and books definitely will be closed at that time. "Any one who has failed to register during the prescribed period just won't be able to vote on the school bond issue," he explained.

At the same time Conway clarified to some extent a confusing issue that seems to plague a great portion of the people who come to the City Hall to register. "To carry, the issue must be approved by a simple majority of the voters balloting in the referendum; those who are registered and do not vote will not in so doing cast a vote against the issue."

As proposed, approval of the bond issue will authorize issuance of bonds not to exceed $1,500,000, such sum to be used to finance the cost of three new school buildings and acquisition of sites in the Greenville school district.

Additions Provided

The issue also provides for construction of additions and alterations to existing buildings, improvements to existing sites and for furnishings, equipment and operation of present facilities.

The referendum includes not only the city of Greenville, but also the area lying outside the corporate limits that is included in the present Greenville school district.

There will be only one registration and polling place — the Greenville City Hall — and all residents of the district must register and vote at that voting place.

Registration books for the referendum have been open since Saturday, May 2, but will close next Saturday, May 16, and all who have not registered during the period will not be allowed to vote.

Four Accidents During Weekend

One person was injured in one of four traffic accidents investigated by city police over the week-end.

William D. Spellman, age 15, of 1015 Mack Street, City, suffered a fractured leg when the bicycle on which he was riding was struck by an automobile Saturday afternoon.

According to investigating officer T.E. Gladson, Spellman was traveling East on Tenth Street and pulled across the highway into the path of a car driven by William O. Moore, 42, of 605 East 9th Street, City.

No charges were placed. Spellman was removed to Pitt Memorial Hospital by ambulance for treatment of his injuries.

Cars driven by Leon S. Pettit, 1206 Dickinson Avenue and Wilbur R. Smith Route 3, Greenville, collided at the intersection of Second and Cotanche Streets Saturday afternoon.

No injuries were reported but property damage was listed as $300 to both cars.

Investigating officers Lt. R.W. Harris and H.H. McGowan, charged Smith with failure to stop for a "Stop" sign.

Investigation is still underway into a hit and run accident early Sunday morning which occurred at Second and Washington Street.

Investigating officer W.W. Joyner, listed the driver of the automobile which was hit by the hit-and-run car as being William H. Sessions, 427 York Street, Elizabeth City.

Joyner reported that Sessions' car was headed east on Second street at the time of the accident. Only slight damage was reported to the car. The unknown car was meeting the car at the time of the accident.

No arrests were made as the result of a two-car accident at Boyd and Dickinson Avenue Sunday afternoon.

Investigating officer W.W. Joyner reported that the cars involved were driven by Richard Lee Lovett, 30, of Snow Hill and Melvin Lee Ham, 24, of 214 East Caswell Street, Kinston.

Exhume Body To Learn If Wrong Man Executed

LONDON (UP)—Scotland Yard dug the body of a woman from its grave in a mist-shrouded suburban cemetery today to find out whether the wrong man had been hanged for her murder 3 1/2 years ago.

An owl hoisted eerily as the body of Mrs. Beryl Evans was dug from its grave in a chilly gray dawn.

The woman and her little daughter Geraldine were strangled in a tenement house in the shabby Notting Hill section of London in November, 1949. The husband and father of the victims, Timothy Evans, was hanged for the murder.

The chief witness against him was John Christie, self-confessed "Notting Hill strangler," now awaiting trial for multiple murder of other women.

Exercises Conducted At Belvoir-Falkland

The Baccalaureate Service for Belvoir-Falkland High School was held Sunday night in the high school auditorium.

To the strains of the traditional "God of Our Fathers" the 24 graduating seniors marched into the auditorium. Afterwards the congregation sang "Lead On O King Eternal."

Rev. William Clifton delivered the invocation, after which O. H. Forrest, principal, recognized the school board members and paid tribute to the retiring chairman, W. R. Tyson.

Principal speaker for the evening was Rev. George Bon Durant, president of Roanoke Christian College, Elizabeth City, who chose for the topic of his message, "The Road of Life."

Following the address, the high school Glee Club rendered two selections, "Living For Jesus" and "Bless This House."

In conclusion Rev. Bon Durant delivered the benediction.

Marshals for this year's graduation exercises were Peggy Lewis, chief; Tanya Anderson, Shelby Waters, Glenn Ross, Viola Brown and Dolores Briley.

The seniors held their annual class night program in the high school auditorium, Friday night. The theme of their program was, "The Future Train." Doris Nichols opened the program with her salutatorian's address, after which Neel Dupree gave the welcome. Highlights of the play included a prophecy, flash backs and "last will and testament."

Near the conclusion of the program the seniors presented the School its gift, a stone lawn seat. On behalf of the student body Principal O. H. Forrest received the gift. Following this part of the program mascots Debbie Turner and J. P. Brewer gave small gifts to each senior.

Mrs. William Nelson, class advisor, was remembered with a gift from the group.

The program ended with the seniors singing their class song.

French forces won their biggest Indochinese victory in six months in the savage weekend fighting. They regained complete possession of the vital Yen Vi defense works guarding the rich Hanoi rice bowl.

But observation pilots reported that the battered Vietminh Communist forces were regrouping today only a few miles south of the battlefield. It was believed they might launch a new assault soon against the steel-and-concrete bunker system.
