

Frightening Beauty Of Atomic Cannon Blast

The towering lacy mushroom from the first test of the atomic cannon rises from the desert floor at Frenchman Flat, near Las Vegas, Nev. The 280-millimeter gun which tossed the shell to its destination six or seven miles away is in the foreground. The rifle was touched off electrically, with the gun-loading crew entrenched a safe distance away. This picture, released today by the Air Force, was made probably about 10 seconds after the explosion. It was made with a telephoto lens which accounts for the foreshortening. (AP Wirephoto from U. Air Force Cut Feasible Due Advances, Says Solon Mundt Points To Missiles

WASHINGTON (UP) — Sen. Karl E. Mundt (R-S.D.) believes a "very significant" advance in guided missile development is one reason the administration considered it safe to slash Air Force funds. GOP Leader's 'Go-It-Alone' Suggestion Gets Second Rebuff

WASHINGTON (UP) — Sen. Alexander Wiley (R-Wis.) struck back hard today at Sen. Robert A. Taft's plea that America "forget about" the United Nations as a weapon against aggression. The enemies of the nation, he said, "would like nothing better" than to see the United States abandon the U.N. and attempt to "go it alone."

Disaster Groups Rush Relief To Stricken Towns

Disaster agencies struggled today to bring relief to two stricken communities where tornadoes killed two women, injured more than 15 persons and wrecked a village. The twisters rampaging through the Dakotas last night, practically wiped out the village of Fort Rice, N. D., hurled the body of a Solon, N. D., farm wife half a mile, and tore off a gymnasium roof at McLaughlin, S. D.

Final Blast Of Current Atomic Tests In Making

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UP) — It appeared today that preparations were under way for one final blast at the atomic proving grounds at Frenchman's Flat. 'Get Acquainted' Hour At Meeting

Greenville Kiwanians, at their weekly supper meeting last night, enjoyed an intensive program of "knowing the fellow better," conducted by Elt Bloom. Program Chairman J. C. (Red) Clifford said the 30-minute period of "neighborly fun" was substituted for the usual half-hour of music or speaking. Vice-President J. Bryan Brown said the experiment was a success and the Kiwanians appreciated the change. Master of Ceremonies Bloom asserted that "there are few men in the club who can stand up and name all of the 85 or 90 business and professional men in the club." Judge Dink James, acting Secretary John O. Reynolds, Bill Drum, and Bloom succeeded in naming all of the members. Past President B. E. Sugg, bank president and tobacco warehouse executive, named all but one. He had to put on his eyeglasses to identify Tiger Gardner, one of the most widely known members of the Greenville Kiwanis Club. Vice-President Brown, who presided for President Leo W. Jenkins, said the president is at present engaged in making commencement addresses at various schools in Eastern Carolina. The Kiwanis Club's officers and directors will meet at the American Legion Home on Evans Street Monday, June 8, at 6:30. Director John A. Collins, Jr., will be host at supper to the group. President Leo W. Jenkins will preside. NO TICKET OGDEN, Utah (UP)—A train took Victor E. Degen for an unscheduled ride. He was standing beside his auto with a door open when moving freight cars knocked Degen into the back seat, slammed the door, then dragged the vehicle down the track. He suffered only a bruised hand. Seventy per cent of the people killed in bicycle accidents in the United States are between the ages of 5 and 19.

THE FOURTH "R"
Some American pioneers believed that the limit of education was the teaching of "readin', 'ritin', and 'rithmetic." How far education has gone beyond that crude idea!
It has dared so many spectacular things that unless Man's spiritual progress keeps pace with his scientific achievements, the results may destroy him.
What we need most today is education in the most important "R" of all—Religion.
Here is where the Church—through its Sunday Schools and Vacation Church Schools—steps in to help save civilization from itself. We must strengthen the fourth "R" or the other three will mean nothing.
Unless education is made to include the knowledge and the use of moral and spiritual facts, all the rest will be in vain.
If you are not interested in the Church and its educational program, think of it in terms of what it can do for your children. Think of it in terms of insurance against what must be a black future for us all if the higher values are neglected.
THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH
The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of a character and good citizenship. Without a strong Church neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) Which needs the Church itself. Support the Church! Support the church regularly and your Bible daily.

Historical Society Hopes To Have Copy Of Sir William Pitt's Portrait

By Miss Jesse Reuntee Moyer
When the upper part of Beaufort County, North Carolina, was made into a separate political district in 1780, the new county was given the name of Pitt, in honor of Sir William Pitt, the Earl of Chatham, the most illustrious name in the civilized world, pronounced by every Englishman with pride and by every enemy of the English with mingled admiration and terror.

There is now hanging in the hallway of the Pitt County Courthouse an oil portrait of Sir William Pitt by Norris Haddaway, of Birmingham, Ala., which has recently been loaned to the citizens of the county in behalf of the Pitt County Historical Society by Mr. Gordon H. Sturm, manager of the Pitt Theatre in Greenville. The portrait has hung in the Pitt Theatre since it was built in 1934. Mr. T. Y. Walker, former manager of the theatre, had a painting of Pitt done at the suggestion of Miss Jesse Moyer, who had found a steel engraving of the Earl while doing research several years ago. The engraving, by H. T. Ryall, was from the oil portrait by Cook. There is also a picture of this in Long's "Mr. Pitt." Lord Chatham was painted by Romney, also, and other artists of his day.

The Pitt County Historical Society, a comparatively recent organization, hopes to eventually have its own copy of this portrait of this greatest of all English orators and statesmen, now hanging in the National Gallery in London.

William Pitt, the elder, the Earl of Chatham was born at Golden Square, West Minister, November 15, 1708, the second son of Robert Pitt and Lady Harriet Villiers. He was baptised in Saint James Church of Saint James Parish, London. Two years later the family moved to a country estate, Mawarden Court, at Stratford-under-the-Castle on the Banks of the Avon.

This good and beautiful mother's family, the brilliant Villiers counted their ancestry from the Norman conquest and was conspicuous for daring and artistic talent—a family destined for eminence in Statecraft and the arts even to modern times.

On his father's side of the house there was more common sense if less distinction. Well born, substantial property owners, clergy and members of the bar, some of the family had married into the nobility and there were a few titles on the family tree, but little wealth, until Thomas Pitt, the grandfather of William, became the Governor of Madras, the owner of the Pitt diamond which he sold to the French Court for 133,000 lbs., and the President of the East India Company. He might well have been a Villiers himself for he was as mad as a March hare. Married to Jaac Imies, a niece of the two principal agents of the company, he remained in India for many years, the terror of native misrule and British intrigue.

On his return to England in 1710, he bought great estates—Bocconne, then the finest place in Cornwall, and Shallowfield near Reading and when in London, he rented a fine house in Pall Mall. All of his children married into great families.

Thomas Pitt was a Whig of firm conviction. He had a deep respect for honor and decency in government. Once he wrote his son, Robert, "I never you intend to be great, you must first be good and that will bring with it a lasting greatness, and without it, it will be but blown away with the blast I would rather see a child of mine want than have him get his bread by voting in the House of Commons." Thomas, however, was a man of violent temper, a dominating tyrant, and he could never be happy unless in the midst of some furious controversy.

Young William Pitt was educated at Eton, the most fashionable school of the Whig aristocracy, and at Trinity College, Oxford. He studied at Utrecht in 1728 and in 1733 served in the army in France and Italy. On resigning from the army he toured the continent. At the age of 46, he married Lady Hester Grenville, the sister of his school fellows and beloved friends, Richard and George Grenville. Apparently, he had looked upon his delicate health, which had plagued him since early youth, as a drawback to romance. But his great charm of personality, his dignity and grace of bearing, his fastidious attention to dress, the arresting glance of his grey eyes made him exceedingly attractive to women. A great dramatist, he knew how to use his gifts to advantage. He was rather known as a Squire of Dames. Everyone courted him.

Lady Grenville long adored and unconsciously loved her brother's eloquent friend. A portrait of her at 29, with pleasant face and lovely silken hair, shows her as wholesome and full of life, and of wholehearted character, fond of country life, riding, walking and climbing hills. She looks, also, a little pleased with herself; one remembers she is a Grenville. Wealthy, of excellent breeding and well regulated mind, she had been bred up with politics and had many friends and many suitors.

Pitt's elder brother, Thomas, married the sister of his friend, George Lyttleton, and his sister, Ann, was maid of honor to Queen Caroline and later in the service of the Prince of Wales.

The Prince of Wales was an intimate friend of Pitt as were many sons of England's most notable families.

In 1735 Pitt entered Parliament where he opposed the King and led the young Whigs against Walpole, then at the head of affairs of State. When Walpole was driven out of office in 1742, Pitt's star ascended. While in power as Secretary of State, he was the prime mover of brilliant victories over the French. It was the great William Pitt who vanquished the French marshals in Germany, the French admirals on the Atlantic, who conquered on the country's great empire and on the frozen shores of Ontario and another under the Ganges.

He spoke strongly against the arbitrary and harsh policy of the English government towards the American Colonies and warmly urged an amicable settlement of the difficulties between them.

But when America having entered into treaty with France, it was pro-

A portrait of William Pitt, Earl of Chatham for whom Pitt County was named, now hangs in the hall of the Pitt County Courthouse. posed by the Duke of Richmond to remove the ministers and make peace on any terms. Lord Chatham, by this time a very ill man, came to the House of Lords. In a powerful address he protested against the implied prostration of Britain before the throne of the Bourbons and declared that war with whatever issue would be preferable to the proposed terms of peace.

The address secured a majority against Richmond's motion and war was continued. But it was the orator's last effort, for his physical powers suddenly failed and he was carried from the house by his son, William, who in less than five years was himself Prime Minister.

Chatham died May 11, 1778, in Kent, and was buried in Westminster Abbey where a statue was erected to his memory.

"No calendar can mark his days—he lived for seventy years—and for the generations which followed.

"It was Pitt who built the foundations of the present Anglo-Saxon empire, who reclaimed the Magna Carta from the Archives and who was the protagonist of constitutional democracy against the Bourbons, dictators and the mob.

"He raised a nation from the dust and democracy from the scrapheap. He scorned monarchs and peers, plutocrats and place holders. He brought honesty to the army, integrity to the State and dignity to the common people. He defined the philosophy of democracy and trained men to defend it.

"He proclaimed the society in which the lowliest could affirm the rights of the Anglo-Saxon foreman.

"His perception of the inevitable worthiness of the individual man marked him for the ages.

"His second son and namesake Sir William Pitt, experienced a brilliant career in Parliament. Born at Hayes, near Bromley, Kent, May 2, 1759, he became one of England's most powerful premiers and held sway for 20 years. A member of the House of Commons at 21, his ability displayed there made him the most forcible subject in Europe before he was 25. Though a minister of great talents, honest convictions and liberal opinions, he knew tragedy in surprising and terrible emergencies. A man of rare judgment, he was pre-eminently qualified intellectually and morally for the part of a parliamentary leader. He died at Putney January 23, 1806, and was buried beside his father in Westminster Abbey.

Wealthy admirers of Lord Chatham gave him large sums of money. One of his estates, Burton Pynsent House, near Curry Rivel, England, willed to him by Sir William Pynsent, was beautifully landscaped by Pitt, an ardent amateur landscape gardener. Bold natural effects characterize his plantings which remain to this day. Only one wing of a charming red brick Georgian Manor is now standing. This wing Pitt added on to the much larger house to contain a large library and a bedroom for his own use. In 1805 the place was put up for sale. It is now a delightful country house with formal gardens and suitable Georgian interior.

TO KISS, OR KILL

Chapter 10

A cold wind, with a feeling of rain or sleet in it, turned the corner with the cab. Nothing had changed. The old one-story frame and red-brick houses looked a little shabbier, that was all.

Mandell picked up the box of candy and the roses from the seat beside him.

All Ma had let him do was to have the old house painted, buy her a new washing machine, and stuff the parlor with a radio-phonograph and a television set, both expensive.

Mandell climbed the sagging stairs. Before he could use his key, Rosemary opened the door.

"I hoped you'd come, Barney," she smiled. "Ma read the morning paper. She knows you've been released on bail."

Mandell stood dwarfing the small hall, his topcoat draped over one arm, holding the flowers and candy he'd bought. "Where is Ma?"

Rosemary said, "In the kitchen. Getting you a big breakfast. She was so certain you would come."

Rosemary laid her hand on Mandell's arm, the smile fading from her lips. "But for God's sake don't go next door. Pat swears he'll beat your brains in."

The sick feeling returned to Mandell's stomach. The brief glow he'd experienced faded. "Why? Why would Pat want to beat my brains in?"

"You don't know?"

"No."

A small woman with bird-bright eyes hurried down the hall. Mandell had heard their voices. She was wiping her floured hands on her apron. "Barney, my boy!" She looked at Rosemary reproachfully. "And you said I shouldn't feel bad if Barney couldn't come home this morning." She hugged her big son around the waist and tried to lift him off his feet. "But I knew Barney would come to see his Ma. And look. He brought me roses and candy."

She dabbed her eyes with a corner of her clean white apron, laughing and crying at the same time. "But here I am, making like an old fool. And you must be hungry, Barney. Such a big man to feed!" Clutching the roses and the five-pound box of candy to her shriveled bosom, Ma Mandell hurried back down the hall toward the kitchen. "Breakfast is almost ready, Barney. Come. By the table sit. It will be just like old times."

Mandell walked into the shabby parlor off the hall and laid his topcoat and hat on the sofa.

Rosemary followed him into the parlor and sat on the arm of a chair, swinging one nylon-sheathed leg. "Who put up your hall?"

Mandell lit a cigarette and blew the smoke at the tear-dropped crystal chandelier. "A guy named Curtis."

"Who's he?"

Mandell tried to tell her. He tried to tell her what had happened in the office and couldn't. Instead he ran his hands over his face and just stood looking at her. The freckle-faced little kid next door had moved into the big time as far as looks were concerned.

Rosemary was amused. "Think you know me when you see me again?"

"I think so," Mandell said. He tilted her chin with a crooked forefinger. "Now you look at me. Do I look crazy to you, kid?"

Rosemary said, "I answered that down at the station."

"Anyway, I was."

"Who said so?"

"Dr. Orin Harris."

"That egocentric quack?" Rosemary laid her hand on his arm again. "Look, Barney. What did the doctors at the asylum say?"

"They were puzzled. They went over with everything they had and couldn't find a sign of a brain injury. But my record was against me."

"You mean the hallucinations you told me about this morning? Finding your razor in the ice-cube tray? Hearing bells and voices that didn't exist? Bringing a parrot's neck? Or my record was against me?"

"That's right," Mandell ran his fingers through his hair. "I never saw the guy before or since. I couldn't. He didn't exist. See? It was all in my mind on account of me having taken too many punches."

"Gale explained it to you?"

"That's right."

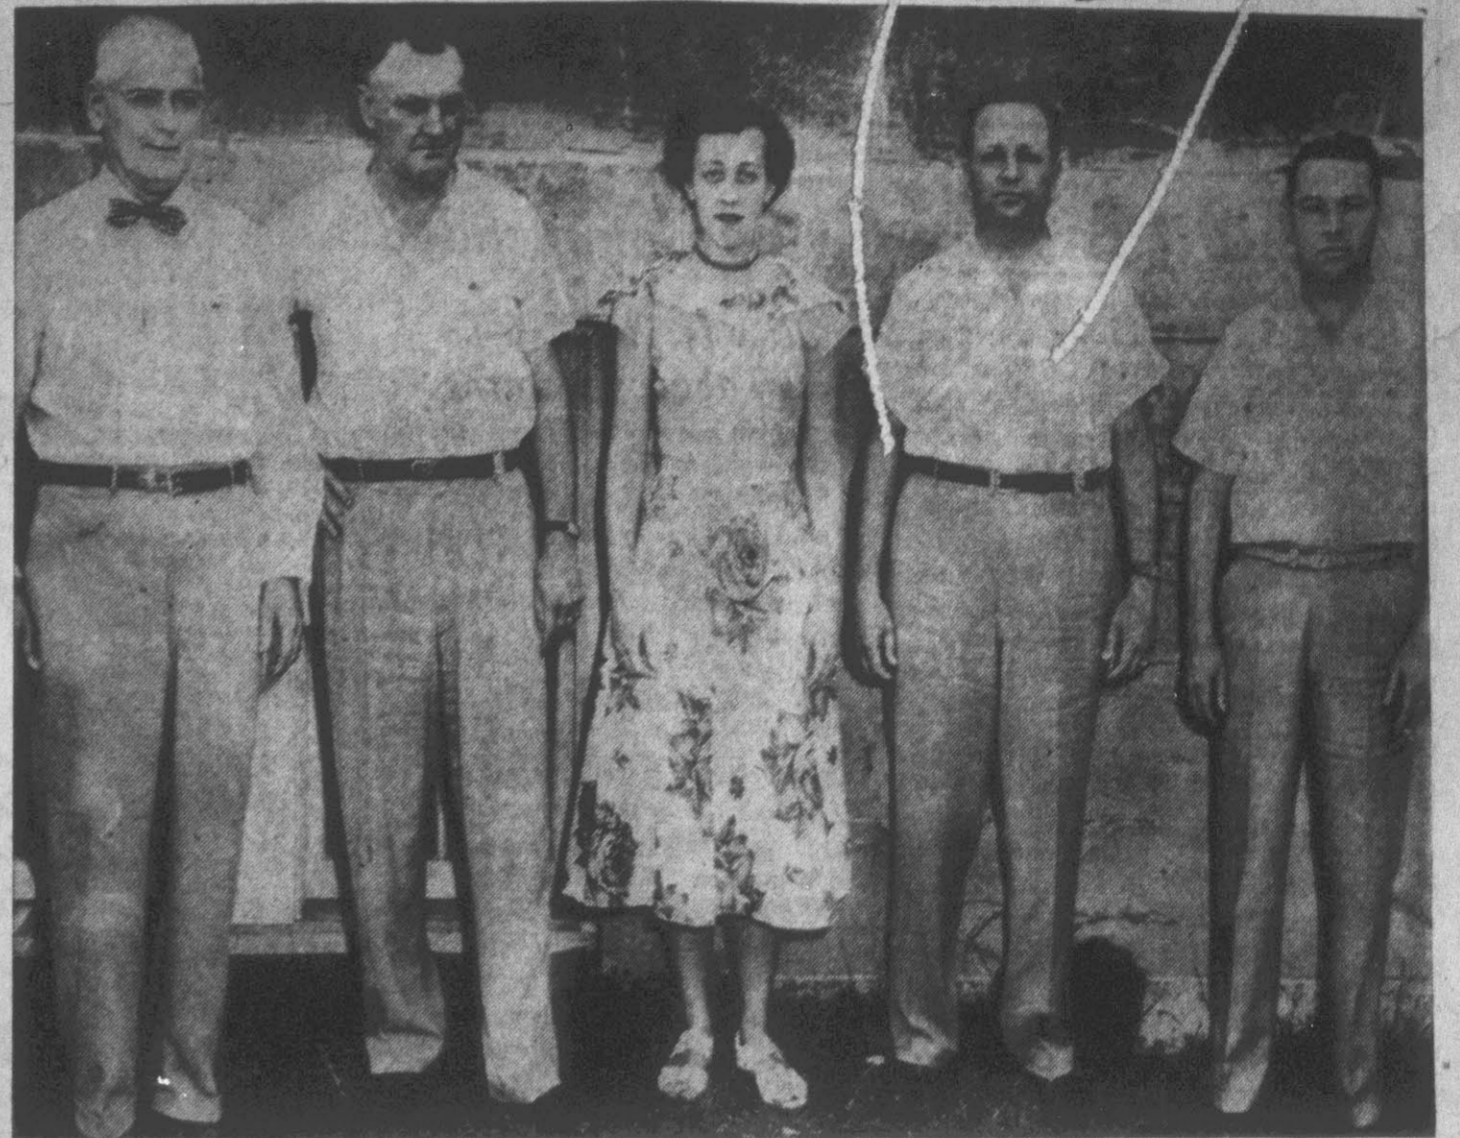

"But why stay in the asylum for two years?"

"Because Dr. Harris thought it was best. He made up a case history on me, and the brain doctors out at the asylum read it and said he was right."

Since you won your first Golden Glove tournament, you haven't taken enough punishment to break an egg, let alone scramble the few brains in that thick head of yours. You're no crazier than I am, Barney."

Sheriff And His Deputies Depend On Cooperation To Perform 'Big Job'

Standing outside their main office, the Pitt County Courthouse in Greenville are deputies of the county sheriff's staff. As authorized by the Pitt Board of Commissioners, the staff is composed of (left to right) Deputies Lloyd Manning, Jasper Lee Mills, Miss Sarah Jones, "Duke" Andrews and Elmer Haddock. Each of the four male deputies has a two-way radio on his car, and is in direct contact with both the sheriff's office and the Greenville Police Department. (Reflector Photo by Roy Hardee)

The sand trails and woods paths in Pitt County are infinite, numerically, but few indeed are those that are not familiar to Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson and his deputies.

Enforcing within the boundaries of Pitt County the statutes of the State is truly a prodigious responsibility, but small is the segment of the county's more than 63,000 people that has not felt, directly or indirectly, some effect of Sheriff Tyson's diligence to the duties demanded by his office.

Whenever trouble develops, whether it be small family spat, robbery or murder, rural residents of Pitt turn immediately to the counsel of the sheriff's office. Through application of a little homespun philosophy, deputies can and sometimes do bring about a peaceful solution of the problem—often without necessity of arrest.

"Big Job"

Admittedly, it is no mean task for the sheriff and four working deputies to keep the peace in a county the size of Pitt. Sheriff Tyson himself defines it as a "big job" and with one phrase sums up an explanation of just how it is done. "It's cooperation," he says.

"Without the willing and active cooperation of all law enforcement agencies in the county we never could do the job so effectively," Sheriff Tyson pursues. "That cooperation includes interlocking effort of the ABC force, police departments of the various cities and towns in the county, and the State Highway Patrol."

In fact, the sheriff adds, Superior Court judges have been known to remark from the bench that there seems to be better cooperation and exchange of responsibility between all agencies in Pitt County than in any other county in the State.

"Whether that's true, I don't know," Tyson declares, "but that's precisely how we operate."

Elected 1946

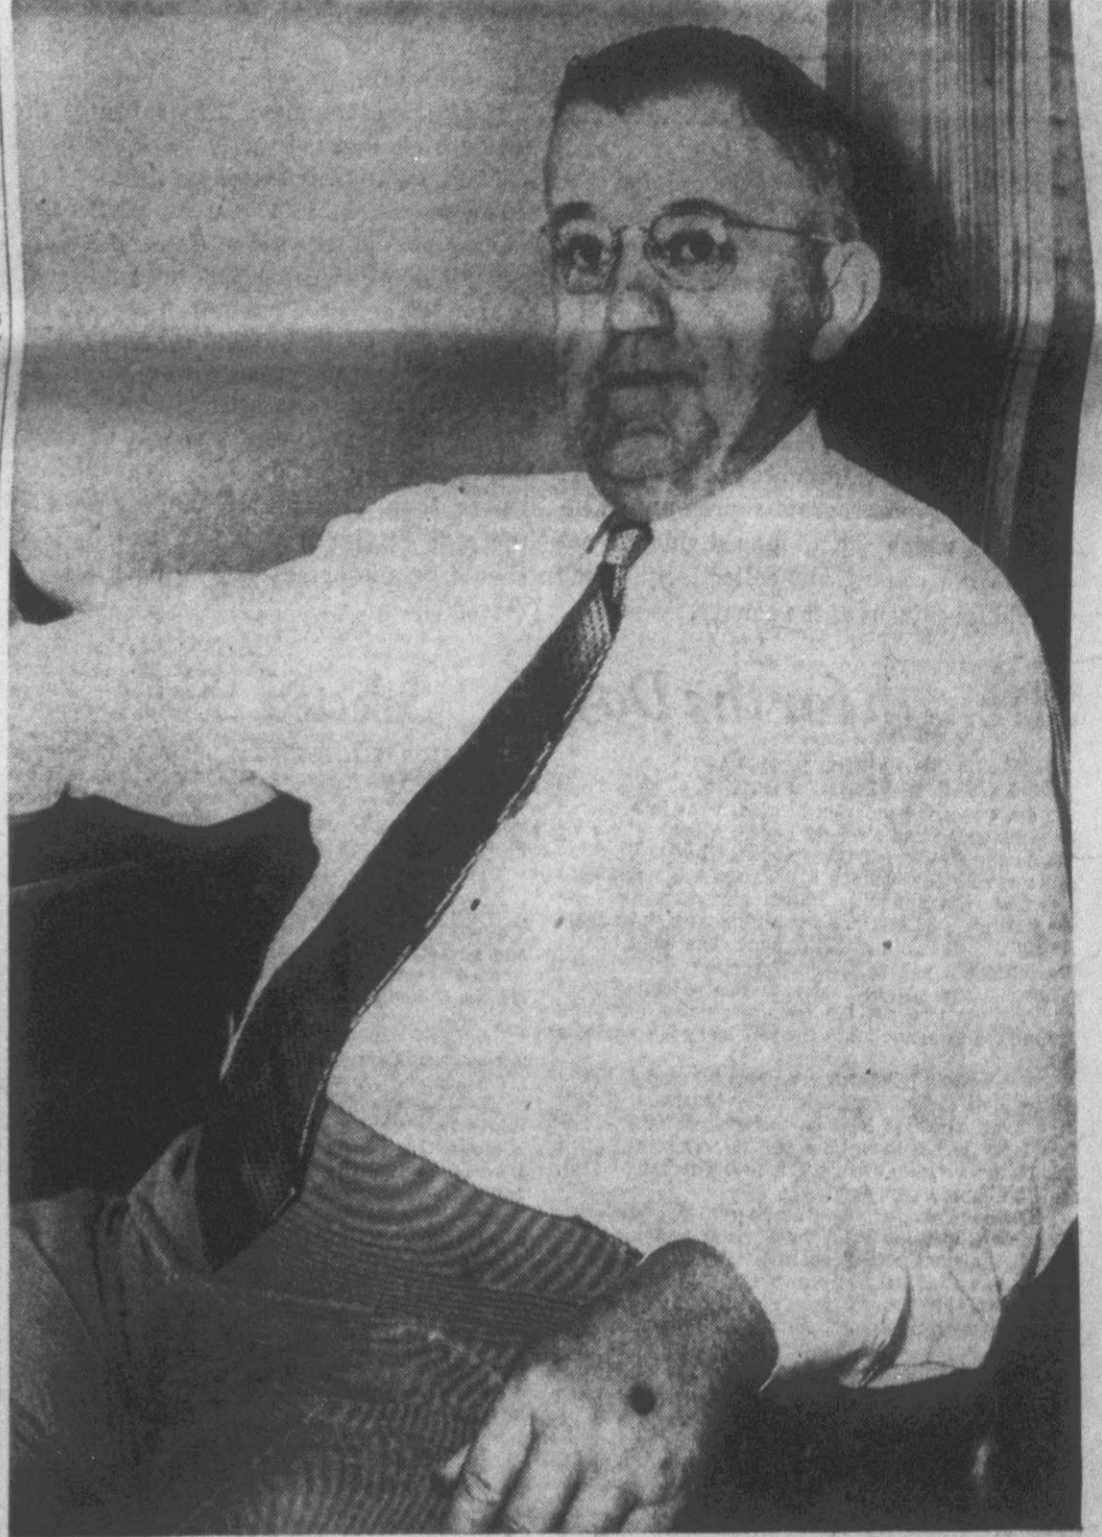

Born at neighboring Ayden in 1907, Tyson became in 1938 a deputy under Sheriff J. Knott Proctor. He ran for the top office of sheriff in 1946 and was elected. Currently he is serving his second four-year term, having been re-elected sheriff in 1950. Before joining the sheriff's department Tyson was engaged in farming near Ballard's Crossroads.

During his tenure of office as sheriff, Tyson witnessed and participated in an event taking place in Pitt County that set a record for criminal trials which still stands in the annals as the longest in North Carolina's history. That was the embezzlement trial of Dr. Leon Meadows, former president of East Carolina College.

"The first trial, which ended in a mistrial, lasted eight weeks," the sheriff recalls. "When the second trial was held a jury was drawn from outside the county, and those trial jurors remained for 12 consecutive weeks in the custody of an officer."

Daniels Case

But the trial in which feelings ran highest, according to Sheriff Tyson, was held in 1950, when two Negro cousins, Bennie and Lloyd Ray Daniels, were charged with the first degree murder of Benjamin O'Neal, a Greenville taxi driver. At the conclusion of a week-long trial, the jury returned a verdict of guilty as charged.

Ruel W. Tyson of Greenville has been sheriff of Pitt County for the past seven years. His name is synonymous with law enforcement to rural residents of the county, because he fills an elective office that serves the entire Pitt area. "High" Sheriff Tyson has been engaged in law enforcement work in one capacity or another since 1938.

Has One Son

Pitt's "high" sheriff is a portly, genial 50, and is married to the former Miss Annie Bert Gupton, originally from Lenoir County. They have one son, Ruel W. Jr., who will graduate with honors in June from Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va. The sheriff is a son of Charles L. and Mary Willoughby Tyson, and is a life-long native of Pitt County.

A cheery greeting is always extended to those citizens of the county who come into Greenville during court week and stop by the sheriff's office for a short chat. Sheriff Tyson always is the convivial conversationalist, and through his office pass the trials and tribulations of Pitt's troubled populace.

Progress Made

That department has come a long way since Ruel Tyson became a deputy in 1938. At that time there was only one other deputy, R. W. King. King is now a member of the Pitt ABC force. Now there are five deputies, and the sheriff's office has radio connection with all deputies and Greenville police cars.

As composed at the present time, Sheriff Tyson's staff consists of regular deputies "Duke" Andrews, Lloyd Manning, Jasper Lee Mills and Elmer Haddock. Miss Sarah Jones is office deputy and radio contact officer.

That will be the signal for thousands of lights to be turned on all over the city.

Paid $4,345 For Bale Of Cotton

HARLINGEN, Tex. (UP)—A Mission, Tex., farmer who repeated this year as producer of the nation's first bale of cotton was paid $4,345 for his 1953 effort.

Ray Barnick's 615-pound bale was auctioned yesterday at Harlingen for a record $3 a pound. J. E. Sommerhauser, a vice president of Lone Star Brewing Co., was high bidder at $1.845.

Barnick also claimed $2,500 bonus money from the Harlingen Chamber of Commerce for the $4,345 total, topping the previous high of $3,130 sale price and bonus paid the 1951 cotton derby winner.

Commissioners Are To Be Commended

Pitt County's revaluation program, costly as it will be going to be a mighty good investment for the county.

The program not only will do away with the inequities which have existed on the county tax books for many years, but it should provide a sound basis which can virtually prevent gross inequities from appearing on the county's tax books in the future.

The low bid of $87,000 for the revaluation program is somewhat higher than most members of the County Board of Commissioners expected, and it will bring the total cost of the program — including the mapping — to approximately $104,000 to Pitt. That's a big price to pay, but it apparently is not out of line when one considers the big job to be done in revaluing all the property in Pitt County for tax purposes.

After more than two years of consideration and debating, the County Commissioners are certainly to be commended for taking the much-needed step. The last revaluation of property in Pitt County was made in 1937 and since that time it had become increasingly apparent that a complete revaluation by an independent appraisal firm was needed in Pitt.

Some fears have been expressed about the payment of more county taxes because of the revaluation program. Before the program is completed in 1954, there will probably be some severe criticism of the county commissioners for initiating the program. The Reflector is certainly of the opinion the revaluation program is not a scheme of the county officials to increase tax revenue, and we are likewise convinced that the money spent for the revaluation program will not be "money wasted."

The county's revaluation program this time is being done with a view to a long range, well planned method of handling the matter of ad valorem tax of the county. The revaluation program represents an investment which should pay dividends not only to the county, but collectively to the individual citizens of the county.

Quality Is The Key To 1953 Tobacco Returns

All eyes in Eastern Carolina are glued to the item which makes the wheels of economy hereabout turn: the green crops which now are growing in neat rows over literally hundreds of thousands of acres.

As every farmer knows, it is far too early now to hazard a prediction as to what the hot summer days and fall prices on the market will do to this year's farm production.

Nevertheless, it is well to consider a few factors which are likely to change little between now and the time the 1953 crop goes to market.

In the big money-crop of Eastern Carolina — tobacco — the word being passed along is that a high-priced or low-priced season is going to depend upon the quality of the crop. At first that statement sounds rather elementary; but a brief explanation points to its meaning. People who are in a position to analyze the outlook for the 1953 tobacco crop say the inventories of better grades of tobacco are low. If the general quality of the 1953 crop is a little above average — or better — the outlook is for a strong buyer demand and good prices this fall.

If on the other hand the quality of the 1953 crop is poor, chances are the demand will be less, and the prices low.

The point seems to be that returns for the crop now in its early stages of development are going to depend on the quality of the crop. Under such circumstances — and with an eye to poor crop produced last year — it certainly behooves farmers to strive for quality production in 1953.

So far this year, the progress of crops throughout this section is just as good if not better than average. If the progress of the crop continues as it has started, 1953 should be another good year for the farmers of the area.

Shall This Be Their Memorial?

Somebody Told Me . . .

The Lord's Blessings Traded

This column was written at one o'clock this morning, with hands dirty from counting that old green folding stuff, money. When the dust had settled last night from the St. James Methodist Church Auction it appeared that the revenue would near the $3,000 mark, with an estimated expense of less than $300.

Burney Warren, Conner Merritt and I had the joy of counting the cash on hand, over $2,100, with revenue to come tomorrow from deals on appliances and vehicles.

Without a doubt, this unique fund-raising campaign is the most painless you can imagine. Instead of draining Greenville merchants for donations we simply asked a few for small door prizes. Over 50 were given away. The big items came from Greenville car dealers, who offered their vehicles to the church at their cost, with all above that going as profit.

But the bulk of the revenue came from hundreds of items that manufacturers sent to their customers gratis for sale at the auction. For example, Ruland Davenport of Home Furniture Store wrote to several of his suppliers all over the country, who chipped in furniture and appliances that were valued at over $1,500.

Other members of St. James wrote their suppliers, and the response was overwhelming. Purchasers at the auction bought items at bargain prices, which was painless to the church because most items were 100 per cent profit.

"How do you feel about the auction?" I asked the Rev. Ed Eamhardt last night.

"Tired," he exclaimed. Then Ed said emphatically, "I never saw the Lord's blessings trade for the Lord's blessings so fast and furious. Some day the members of St. James may look at the church building and remember many nights when they worked late and hard, were very tired, but they'll be proud of their church."

It really was fun to see the bidding and to be a part of it. The St. James committee cannot take the full credit for making the auction a success, because so many members helped that it must be called a church project.

MOREHEAD'S FIRST CARGO

(Henderson Dispatch)

Morehead City's first cargo of leaf tobacco ever to move through that port was shipped last week. A German freighter carried more than 2,500 hogsheads of leaf valued in excess of one and a half million dollars, and destined for Europe. The tobacco came from merchants in Eastern North Carolina and South Carolina, and was represented as being a sort of test of the port's facilities for handling such shipments.

And that's the background for what gives every promise of furnishing a new shipping outlet for this important flue-cured crop in North Carolina and likewise toward development of the port itself. This may be the beginning of the pay-off for the $2,500,000 spent on the Morehead terminal by the State and which was completed last summer.

Promoters of the port facilities are so enthused over prospects for future development that they are already planning additional warehouses for leaf storage and for handling of other commodities which will be handled by water shipment. Efforts are being made now toward financing a new million-dollar construction project at the terminals.

North Carolina has never utilized to the fullest potentials its possibilities in shipping. Only in the past few years, in connection with terminals provided at Wilmington and Morehead City, has any serious effort been made to that end. Exports abroad and coastwise shipping could be sufficient to support a thriving business in this field, and it appears that the idea is taking hold to the extent not only of financing the undertaking but likewise of patronage for utilization of facilities as they become available.

All of this is just another angle of the State's industrial and commercial development. It is a field in which activities have too long been allowed to lag.

'Sins Of Omission' And The Late Departed Assembly

By LYNN NISBET
OMISSION — Most people consider doing something positively wrong is worse than failing to do something good. The moral purists, however, regard sins of omission as equally heinous with sins of commission. It is significant that the General Confession in the Episcopal Book of Common Prayer gives precedence to having "left undone those things which we ought to have done," before confessing to having "done those things which we ought not to have done," followed by the blanket admission that "there is no health in us." The recent Legislature offered no exception to the long standing rule that things not done probably were more grievous than any positive wrongful action taken.

SECRET — On the positive side, perhaps the worst thing done by the 1953 General Assembly was enactment of the "secret law," providing for closed door sessions of legislative committees while considering the distribution of tax money collected from all the citizens. As the truth about events leading up to and immediately following this action become generally known, the people are waking up to the fact that it was not just a hassle among a few reporters and a few members of a legislative committee. The public is beginning to realize that it was actually the denial of an inherent right of the people in a democracy to know what their elected representatives are doing with the people's money — and why they do it.

ISSUE — There are definite signs that this question will figure in the next political campaign in several counties, and it may well become an issue of statewide import. No other positive action of the recent Legislature has such potentialities. The other matters which may become campaign issues were on the negative side, representing failure of the Legislature to act rather than because of alleged wrongful action. There are several of these items and in the aggregate they may have almost controlling influence upon the choice of members of the 1958 General Assembly to be elected next year.

NEGATIVE — The General Assembly failed to take any action looking to increased revenue, and for the first time in more than a quarter century appropriated more money than appears to be in sight to meet the appropriations. A substantial number of citizens, but apparently a minority, think that might come under the head of positive well-doing. This group sincerely believes that government spending should be curtailed. An apparent majority of the people hold the idea that the State, having assumed certain responsibilities with respect to education, health and public welfare, should meet the challenge of needs in these fields, even though more tax money should be required. Governor Umstead can qualify as the leader and spokesman for this majority group.

COURTS — The Legislature also failed to do anything permanently constructive about increasing the regular judicial manpower of the State. After weeks of State-Senate controversy between House and Senate over bills to add additional regular elective judges to existing districts or to increase the number of districts, the legislators adopted a compromise expedient of increasing the number of temporary appointive special judges.

REPRESENTATION — The most glaring sin of omission committed by the 1953 General Assembly, and the one which may have most far reaching repercussions, was failure to comply with the mandate of the constitution for reapportioning representatives in the United States of Representatives and in both branches of the General Assembly.

This is especially true with respect to the State House of Representatives where no problem was involved that the application of fourth grade arithmetic would not have solved. Congressional, State senatorial and judicial redistricting does involve a lot of questions other than simple geography and arithmetical count of population. Although the constitution does not recognize area and mileage, common sense dictates that these factors should be considered. Distribution of membership in the House of Representatives is purely mathematical under the constitution, but seems to be wholly political in concept of the legislators.

DISTRICTION — The constitution provides for eight educational districts for appointment of members of the State Board of Education, but imposes no limitations as to size, area or population of these districts. The constitution also provides for judicial and solicitor districts, but leaves to the Legislature the number and boundaries of such districts. The number of State Senators is fixed at 50, but there is no constitutional limit on the number of senatorial districts. It is required that the state be divided into a convenient number of districts, containing as nearly as may be an equal number of inhabitants, and that territory of the district shall be contiguous. It is further provided that the districts shall be altered after each census in order to maintain the equality with respect to inhabitants. Under the constitution nothing is left to chance or discretion with respect to apportionment of members in the House of Representatives.

CLEAR — The language is unmistakably clear. Each county, regardless of size gets one representative. That accounts for 100 members. The remaining 20 are to be allotted wholly on basis of population as reported by the

Business Census Hit

By ELMER ROESSNER
A large segment of business is considerably concerned because the House Appropriations Committee has struck an $11,500,000 from the budget for the 1954 census of business and manufactures.

Many companies want the census because it would give them a sharper picture of their market in the years ahead. They point out that while the Government gave manufacturers of consumer goods the basic facts for projecting their markets when it made public the 1950 census of the population, it is denying an equivalent service to industrial manufacturers in abandoning the business census.

The business service would be valuable to advertising and marketing services, news papers, magazines and other establishments whose plans are best based on an accurate understanding of business and industrial markets. It would also be useful to inventors and those planning new businesses. It would help them determine which fields have too many enterprises already — and which have too few.

It would seem to be of value to defense planners, too, especially in event of a war. Precise knowledge of how many plants, and what sections of the country, could produce such type of equipment, might speed the task meeting requirements for arms.

Abandoning the census does not fit the pattern of getting the Government out of business, because business itself could not take such a census at any price. It is only the Government that can get answers necessary for a complete and accurate tally of our business and manufacturing facilities.

The cost of the census does not appear excessive. The Truman budget called for $20,000,000. The Eisenhower budget asked for $11,500,000, although an additional $5,600,000 would be necessary next year to pay for tabulation and publication.

Furthermore, if the census project is dropped, all the time and money spent in preparations will be wasted.

Some proponents are hopeful that the Senate will restore the sum sought, and many are writing and wiring their Senators urging such action.

N.Y.C. SERVICE TAX MAY PROMPT MOVES

Another exodus from New York City may be prompted by a measure now before the City Council that would extend the 3 per cent city sales tax to 30 services now levied upon. While it would exempt doctors and other giving purely personal services, it would levy upon sales of services by advertising agencies, brokerages, real estate agencies, bank service charges and building maintenance and construction costs.

Previous taxes upon financial institutions and other enterprises have caused many to migrate to nearby areas in New York State and New Jersey. Now advertising agencies may join the trek. Banks and building maintenance men can't.

PARKING METER ADS MAY NOT BE LEGAL

About 50 cities have acted to sell advertising space on parking meters, but some of them may run into legal difficulties.

The American Society of Planning Officials reports that authorities in two states and several cities have ruled that selling advertising space on meters is unlawful and that Massachusetts has prohibited it by law.

The Society also points out that Federal law prohibits parking meter advertisements as well as commercial signs, posters and billboards within the right-of-way limits of Federal-aid roads.

Could This Be The Last One?

By HAL BOYLE
LONDON — (AP) Coronation chitchat.

Many Americans have the idea next week's coronation may be the last in British Empire history, and some English hold this view, too.

"The queen is young and will have a long reign, but will the throne survive after her?" one said. "After all times are changing, and we are changing with them."

This has been a century of war, privation and suffering for Britain's common people. And the contrast between their own pinched way of life and the pomp and pageantry of the royal family stirs some to grumble and question: "Is it worth the cost?"

E. H. Hughes, a Laborite Welshman, startled the House of Commons last summer by proposing that the monarchy be ditched and Buckingham Palace turned into an apartment house. But the shocker Conservatives went right ahead and voted the usual annual royal budget of $1,336,000. They also refused a Laborite demand that the yearly allowance of the Duke of Edinburgh be chopped from $112,000 down to $28,000.

Hughes was so annoyed at the coronation "festival" he refused even to stay in town this week. He stormed off to Scotland, saying he wouldn't return "until this jamboree is over." However, if he left an empty seat behind no one has found it.

London is so crowded that they even have arranged for a floating hotel to care for visitors who can't find a bed ashore. It is the 10,123-ton Spanish liner, Monte Ulla, the largest vessel ever to enter London port.

But while many here may grumble at the high cost of maintaining the monarchy, there is little real evidence that Queen Elizabeth's son, fair-haired Prince Charlie, will grow up unemployed.

The crown is firm in the hearts of most British. You have only to walk around the bleak streets of London to see the signs. The great thoroughfares, of course, are formally decorated with flaring banners.

But in the back streets the working people have caught the coronation fever too. Thousands of small homes have a portrait of the Queen in the window and the legend "Long May She Reign."

In one block 40 families have put out 750 flags. They chipped in to raise about $325 for the decorations. The average rent in these homes is about $2.50 a week, the average wage earner in the area gets less than $29 a week.

"We're proud of our show," one said. "That spirit is typical. The coronation is unlike any American celebration. Each Englishman feels he has a part in it, whether his station in life is high or low. And most take a personal pride in the Queen."

"Get rid of the royal family!" one pub owner said. "What would we have to take their place?"

"You Americans could use a royal family. It kills a people, doesn't it? And with all the money you Yanks have, you wouldn't have to stop at one. You could easily afford two royal families, couldn't you?"

ON THIS ROCK

On a recent Sunday in Florida, I sat in a church building which had formerly housed a bank. For some reason the directors of that bank had had the artistry to accept for the building a design which was almost identical with a famous Italian church. Then came the hard days of 1926, and some time later the Florida "bust" and the closing of that bank. The building was auctioned off, and a little congregation of Christians of moderate means took it over and put a big mortgage on it. They tore out the counters, put wainscoting around the safe, and today the sanctuary is an artistic gem.

Men's plans fail but God's plans press realistically on to a divine consummation. The business of this poor bank had been built on bad judgment. Speculative fever had inflamed its policies. The institution was of the world in every particular. The bank closed, and the church took over.

Empires fall, but the Church continues to exist. "On this rock will I build my Church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." "Practical" men often smile good naturedly over the Church — a nice lot of well-intentioned people" they say — or "The Church is useful to supply the superstitious with what they need."

But the truly wise know the nature and overarching significance of the Church. It survives when all else perishes.

They Oppose Air Force Stretchout

Every Saturday this veteran Washington correspondent devotes his column to answering readers' letters of general interest on national policies and personalities. Questions may be sent direct to Ray Tucker at 63088 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — How do Spaatz and other outspoken military experts regard Secretary Wilson's present stretchout of Air Force expansion? Inquires DLB of Orville, Calif. "What do he and the outgoing members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff think of the cutdown on the draft and other economy moves in the field of national defense?"

Answer: General Spaatz is openly critical. He has not permitted his long friendship with President Eisenhower to prevent him from challenging the Wilson statement that less money will provide more aerial defense. In private conversation and in the article he writes for a weekly magazine, he insists that it is a dangerous program, especially in view of Russia's admitted superiority in the air. He calls it "inadequate." It is my opinion that most fliers in a position to talk frankly share this viewpoint. General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, former Air Force member of the Staff, has given that impression. General Omar N. Bradley, retiring chief, has testified along the same lines before Congressional committees.

Perhaps, when he actually steps out in August, Bradley may feel more free to express his real thoughts. Unfortunately, then it may be too late, provided Congress approves the Eisenhower budget.

ALARMING DEFENSE PLANNING — General Vandenberg's experience, in my opinion, reveals a system of national defense planning that is shocking and alarming. It indicates that the civilian heads in the Pentagon make serious decisions without consulting the experts. Worse still, the experts are not permitted to interpose objections to what they regard as unwise decisions.

According to Vandenberg, he was present at a session of the National Security Council when Wilson explained his proposed reduction of funds and air wings. Then comes the damaging admission. Although

Who has stopped them from getting what we have? Certainly not the United States. No—their leaders are to blame."

SPRINGHILL, LA., PRESS: "James A. Linen, publisher of Time magazine, speaking to the national radio audience from the Metropolitan Opera House on National Opera Day, said: 'Apparently one of the things we are going to keep with us in our new world is music. One of the most important things that has got to happen if the United States is to maintain its position of leadership in the world is for the rest of the world to give us credit for culture as well as for bathos.'"

ALMA, MICHIGAN RECORD: "A wholly changed attitude toward the dollar is held by the Eisenhower administration compared with the attitude toward it since 1933. Now the dollar is beginning to assume some importance in its own right, instead of merely serving as a tool to accomplish some purpose of the government."

he disagreed with the Wilson plan, he did not express his opinion because, as he says, "I was not asked for it." Apparently, under protocol, the military can advise only when formally requested to do so.

CONGRESS ASKS IDENTITY OF WILSON'S ADVISERS — In view of this incident it is not surprising that Congress wants to know the identity of the Army, Navy and Air officers who advised Wilson in his preparation of his budget. And also the names of the men in the Air Force who, at the request of Representative Samuel W. Vorty of Los Angeles, dared to dispute Wilson's thesis that he can cut the amount of dollars without shortchanging us on planes.

What concerns and amazes Capitol Hill is that such an angry dispute over military economy should occur under the Presidency of the first professional soldier since Ulysses S. Grant. The tentative Congressional conclusion is that Ike is leaning backward to refute forever the theory that a war commander should not hold this office.

NOT HELPFUL TO COMMUNIST — "Is it true," inquires W.F. of Dallas, Tex., "as J. Edgar Hoover predicted, that the McCarran Security Act has driven the Communies underground in the United States?"

Answer: Hoover was not referring to the McCarran legislation when he made that statement. He was discussing the possible effect of the Smith Act, under which the eleven Reds in New York were indicted, tried and convicted in the famous Medina trial.

The McCarran law empowers the Attorney General to declare that the Communist Party and certain organizations are subversive forces. If the Subversive Activities Control Board, after open hearings, upholds him, the condemned units must report their membership, finances and activities to the government. Failure to comply means heavy penalties.

SACB has already held the Communist Party to be Moscow-controlled, and is now preparing to apply the law to twelve front organizations. The purpose of the act is to force the Reds above ground. Finally, going underground is not helpful to the "Commies. The isolation and decentralization and secrecy make it more difficult for them to operate.

Report From State Meeting Given By Delegate At PTA

At the final meeting of the Training School PTA, which was held last Wednesday, a report was heard from Mrs. E. W. Larkin, Jr., on the state convention from which she had recently returned as a delegate. Mrs. Larkin, who represented the local unit, said that the theme for this year's convention was "Building Leadership for Peace." Many outstanding speakers from all over the country were present to lead discussions and to present verbal pictures of some of the conditions which can be improved by the PTA groups.

The convention, which met in Wilmington the latter part of April, was largely attended. Mrs. T. R. Easterling of Rocky Mount, state president, presided and set the tempo of the meeting by the reading of a poem entitled "My Need." Dr. Charles Carroll, state superintendent of public instruction, stressed the fact that children were the greatest unexploited resource of the state. This same idea was expressed by other speakers at the convention. Mrs. Larkin stated, through the panel discussions and speeches.

Among other prominent educators who addressed the assembly were Miss Kate Kitchen, Dr. John D. Messick, Mrs. R. R. Smith of North Dakota, who is vice president of the national PTA, and Dr. John Harvey, who is known as the "flying lecturer." Miss Frances gave the devotional for the meeting and Mrs. J. S. Jenkins, president, presided. A discussion relative to the coming election for the issue of bonds for the schools of Greenville was led by Frank Steinbeck. Statistics were quoted to prove the necessity for a new high school, elementary school, expansion of present plants and other facilities to meet the rising enrollment. Members were urged to register and vote in the coming election. Yearly reports were heard from various committee heads, and carnival plans for next year were mentioned.

A rising vote of thanks was given to Mrs. Ellen Carroll and to Miss Annie Redwine. To the latter was also given a gift of appreciation, as she is retiring at the end of the year.

Sports Reflections

BY Tommie Lupton

Rumors have been circulating around the North State Conference for some time that East Carolina College was trying to seek admission into the Southern Conference, and after the "seven teams" seceded from the conference the rumors grew even stronger.

East Carolina, we believe, would definitely like to become a member of the Southern Conference. Athletic Director N. M. Jorgenson said yesterday that the college was planning to send a delegation up to the Southern Conference meeting in June.

Three teams are seeking a place in the conference—Presbyterian, Florida State and East Carolina. The local college is more favorably located than any of the others, for we lie right in the midst of all the other schools while the other two applicants are rather far south.

Southern Conference President Max Farrington, according to Wednesday's Greensboro Daily News, says that East Carolina has thought enough about entering the conference to seek information from his office. After talking to Dr. Jorgenson, we believe that the local college has full intentions of trying to join the conference at the earliest possible date.

Enrollment at East Carolina ranks as high as most of the Southern Conference schools, though there may be a larger percentage of women students here than at the other institutions. The Citadel has 1,480 students; Davidson, 824; Furman, 1,001; William and Mary, 1,000; Virginia Tech, 3,000; V.M.I., 950; and George Washington, 10,148.

At the present West Virginia with 4,400 students is in the Southern Conference, but we believe that they will be the eighth team in the seceded group.

Should East Carolina be admitted into the Southern Conference, the making of schedules would not be as difficult, according to Dr. Jorgenson. For the past couple of years the college has encountered much difficulty in making schedules.

The North State Conference has been saying for the past couple of years that East Carolina was getting too large for the rest of the teams in the group, but yet EC has not won a major title, though without a doubt we believe all the members have felt the blows dealt by East Carolina. In basketball the Pirates proved they were the best team, even though they did have a bad night in the tournament and got beat by High Point. Revenge was gained in the NAIA tournament the next week.

Seating capacity now at College Stadium is approximately 4,000, but already the college through the efforts of the Pirates Club, plans to add 1,200 more bleachers by fall.

If East Carolina could become a member of the Southern Conference, we feel that the athletic contests would draw enough spectators from the eastern part of the state to provide more money for a few more needed scholarships. More scholarships would be needed to compete with the teams in the Southern Conference.

At present there are 24 football and one and a half basketball and one and a half baseball scholarships given each year. The 24 full football scholarships probably benefit more than 40 boys, for they are broken up in many variations. Some boys get meal books, some rooms, others get tuition, and a few "the works."

Having the highest faculty rating of any teachers college in the nation on basis of degrees held, East Carolina is an accredited college.

East Carolina the past year played Carolina and the State All-Stars in basketball and made a good showing. They played some good football teams and built up prestige in this field. Of all the Southern Conference schools that have visited the campus, all of them have been favorably impressed with the college's athletic plant. Such schools are The Citadel, Carolina, N.C. State and George Washington.

To get in the Southern Conference, a school has to be recommended by three member institutions and elected by a two-thirds majority of all the members.

Just what does the future hold for athletics in the eastern part of this state? Will East Carolina file for membership to the Southern Conference that will be completed by the beginning of school in the fall?

Bynum Pitches Elks To Extra-Inning Win Over Kiwanians In League Play

Elks Move Up In Standings With 5-3 Victory; Minor League's Red Sox Win Over Yanks 15-5

Merrie Bynum pitched a three-hit win for the Elks yesterday as his teammates scored two times in extra innings to beat the Kiwanians 5-3 in a Little League contest played at Elm Street Park. The win was the first complete game that Bynum has pitched all season.

In hurling the win Bynum struck out nine Kiwanian batters, and issued only four free passes. All of the three hits off his offerings were of the one-base variety. Billy Boyd Cox was the losing pitcher. Cox struck out seven and walked one while yielding nine base hits to the Elks.

Three of the hits off Cox were doubles, two by the game's leading hitter, Harry Forbes, and one by Charles Roberts. Lucian Bryan had two singles to aid the Elks' win. Carl Bestedt singled in the two winning runs in the seventh inning.

The win moved the Elks into third place, just one game behind the Lions and Jayces, who are tied for first place in the standings.

In Minor League play yesterday afternoon the Red Sox raved rough over the hapless Yanks as they scored a 15-5 win. The Sox are setting a hot pace in the league race with a 6-1 record.

Monday the Lions play the Exchange in the Little League. The box:

Manager Marion Says Courtney Player's Player

By OSCAR FRALEY
NEW YORK (UP)—Fearless Fraley's facts and figures:

There are continued whispers around the American League that battling Clint Courtney of the St. Louis Browns is disliked even by his own pitching staff but Manager Marty Marion denies this vehemently.

Courtney is a ball player's ball player in that he fights relentlessly to win, Marion insists. To this end he needles the pitchers and, when their control starts wobbling, fires the ball back at them with a "get on the ball" jolt. Duane Pilette certainly is one Brownie hurler who appreciates Courtney's tactics.

"I like him to get all over me," Pilette told Marion. "It makes me mad—and makes me a better pitcher"—and a lot of other pitchers could use some of this realism.

Jersey Joe Walcott' camp still isn't convinced that Rocky Marciano is a great fighter but admits unreservedly that the heavyweight champion has no peer when it comes to lowering the boom with savage swiftness.

"Marciano hasn't any real class," contends trainer Dan Florio, who conditioned Walcott for all his big bouts, "but I will say that it doesn't matter where he hits you. Wherever he lands, he hurts."

Maybe this is a new one on you, as it was on me, but Eddie Arca says he used "pinchers" on Jamie K. the colt with which he almost caught Native Dancer in the Preakness. "Pinchers" are a pair of rubber - sheathed tongs with which a jockey grips a horse's ear to make him behave in the starting gate. Something like an arm-lock to keep the colt from shifting and sidestepping. When the gate opens, the jockey drops the tongs and the colt runs from sheer pleasure - sorta like the guy who hits himself on the head with a hammer because it feels so good when he stops.

Record Field Today At 500 Mile Event

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UP)—It was anybody's victory today as a record-threatening field of 33 cars headed into the annual breakneck run against time in the 37th annual 500 mile auto race.

Bill Vukovich, who missed winning last year by 20 miles, ranked as the favorite for the event, but the Fresno, Calif., pilot denied any ambitions to come home at a record breaking pace.

"I'm just going to go fast enough to stay in front of everybody else," he said. "They can have the record. The payoff is to the one who comes in first, and that's what I want to do."

Vukovich rambled into the pole position with the fastest speed over the 10-mile qualifying stretch, 138.392 miles per hour. But the entire field averaged 136.435 miles per hour and the slowest in the pack, John Thomson, hit 135.262, and could easily catch the pace-maker over the 500-mile route.

The record qualifying speeds brought quick predictions that the 500-mile record, 128.922 miles per hour by winner Troy Ruttman last year, would be eclipsed. But there were many who believed that should accidents occur to slow the pace, or should weather be unfavorable, the field could be held to a comparative crawl.

Strangely, Vukovich was by far the leading choice for the chase. Usually at least five pilots hold favorite rating, but this year Freddie Agabashian, Bill Holland, Johnnie Parsons, Tony Bettenhausen and Jack McGrath ranked only as the most likely upsets.

Ed Furgol Leads In Western Open

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UP)—Dark-horse Ed Furgol of St. Louis led with a two-under - par 138 going into the third round of the Western Open Golf Tournament at Bellevue Country Club today.

Play in today's and Sunday's rounds will be limited to the lowest 60.

Furgol, a local pro who won few open tournaments when he toured regularly, forged ahead among the top contenders at the midway point with a 68 after shooting par-70 in the first round.

A year ago Vukovich paced the field, then the fastest ever too, for 150 laps before he went out after 192 laps when the steering mechanism of his car broke down.

His departure let Ruttman, a 22-year-old Lynwood, Calif., jockey, move in front and win. This year Ruttman will miss the scrap due to an injured arm, and he picked Vukovich to succeed him.

A mob of around 175,000, perhaps the largest ever to see the race, was expected because the spectacle will be held on a holiday Saturday.

Weather predictions anticipated scattered clouds, high humidity and high temperatures, perhaps ranging to 90.

Only two former champions, Holland and Parsons, were in the field but two former winning cars will study two former winning cars. Ruttman's vehicle while rookie Cal Niday will handle the car in which Lee Wallard won in 1951.

The race will begin at 11 a. m. (cd) with the finish probably between 2:50 and 3:00 p. m. (cd). There will be a full radio broadcast on a special network of 131 stations, but there will be no television.

Wholesalers Top Granites As Builders Romp To Win

After being shutout for five innings, Garner-Wynne-Manning exploded for 11 runs in the last three innings of the first game of the Men's Softball League last night at Third Street Park to go on and win over the Granites 11-0. In the second contest Home Builders defeated Wagner-Waldrop 15-9.

The Granites looked like champions for five innings in the first game last night, but in the sixth inning Garner-Wynne-Manning came alive and scored four runs on five hits and some loose Granite fielding. Leading batter for the victors was N. A. Roebuck with three for four. Frank Manley had a homerun for the winners.

J. Warren and Bobby Nunn paced the losers at the plate with three hits apiece. Rausch, Nunn and Roberson hit homeruns for the Granites.

Home Builders pushed across four runs in the bottom of the sixth on a three-run homer by Julian Vainright after Tommie Lupton had scored earlier on an out. Vainright also had a bases loaded double and a single to pace the winners' hitters. Red Painter belted one from the park in the fifth with one mate aboard. The game was halted by the "four-run curfew."

For the losers Spooky Morgan, pitcher, had three hits for three times at bat.

Bob Elliott Gets 2000th Base Hit In Major Leagues

DETROIT (UP)—Bob Elliott, the 36-year-old veteran third baseman of the St. Louis Browns had two prize baseballs among his souvenirs today — the newest a ball he smashed to left field for a double and his 2,000th major league hit.

"I'll tell you this," Elliott said, "the first 2,000 hits are the hardest."

"But all kidding aside I feel wonderful."

After Elliott's two - bagger off Dave Madison which highlighted a six - run 11th - inning rally that sent the Detroit Tigers down to an 11-5 defeat Friday, plate umpire Ed Hefley stopped the game.

He walked to the mound and took the ball from Madison, continuing to second base where he presented it to Elliott.

"That ball will go right alongside one I got two years ago while I was with the Braves that drove in my 1,000th run," Elliott said.

Ward 3-Down On Carr In British Golf Meet

By HENRY THORNBERRY
United Press Sports Writer
HOYLAK, Eng. (UP)—Defending champion Harvie Ward of Atlanta, Ga., trailed Joe Carr of Ireland, 3 down, today at the halfway point in their 36-hole match for the British Amateur golf championship.

Carr, two-time Irish open champion, outdove and outputted Ward in his bid to keep the 27-year-old nine holes and went to lunch with the same margin. Ward did not win a hole until the 13th. He also won the longest hole on the course, the 532-yard 16th, with an eagle three. That cut Carr's margin to two holes but he went 3 up again with a par four against Ward's bogie five on the 18th.

Carr, one of Britain's longest hitters, fired a par 73 on the first 18, going out in a one-under-par 35 and coming in with a one-over-par 38. Ward had a three-over-par 38-28-76.

HOYLAK, Eng. (UP)—Joe Carr of Ireland led Harvie Ward of Atlanta, Ga., 1 up, today at the end of 27 holes of their 36-hole final for the British amateur golf championship.

American from winning the title for the second straight year, Ward defeated former champion Frank Stranahan of Toledo, O., in last year's final at Prestwick.

Cloudy skies and cutting wind held the gallery to about 1,000 as the two players completed the morning round over the 7,078 yards of flat, sandy turf at the Royal Liverpool Golf Club.

Yankees Come From Behind In Last 10 Games To Win

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (UP)—Champions come from behind and champions win the close ones. Those two axioms of sport made the cause of the Yankees look brighter than ever today in their quest for a fifth straight pennant.

In the last 10 victories by the world champs, they have come from behind. What's more, they have trailed the opposition during 17 of their 26 victories this season. And as for the close ones, they have seven one-run victories and have lost but four by a lone run.

Champions also dominate the league and aside from the Chicago White Sox, the circuit is strictly a cake-walk for the Yankees (sofar). They are 3-0 against Cleveland, 7-2 against Boston, 7-2 against Washington, 3-2 against Philadelphia, 2-0 against St. Louis and 3-1 against Detroit. That 14 minus record against the White Sox leaves them with only seven defeats against the other seven clubs.

Friday, in a typical come-from-behind performance, they spotted Philadelphia a 4-0 lead in the first inning then went on to win 11-7. Starter Vic Raschi was knocked out in the big inning when Gus Zernial hit a three-run homer, but Ray Scarborough pitched six-hit ball thereafter.

Scarborough also put the Yanks back in the game in the second with a three-run homer, his first in the majors. The Yankees got five more in the third, three on Gil McDougald's homer; later Irv Noren and Billy Martin also homered while Eddie Robinson hit a two - run A's homer in the ninth.

Bob Elliott got the most memorable hit of his 15-year career, his 2000th,

More Than 100 Extension Workers Attend Session

By CHESTER WALSH
More than 100 Negro agricultural extension workers attended the annual conference of farm and home agents at Bricks Rural Life School in Edgecombe county this week.

They were from the 50 counties in which there are Negro farm agents' offices established. The conference convened Tuesday and adjourned Friday morning. M.W. Coleman, Negro farm agent for Bertie county, presided.

Some of the highlights of the three-day conference were addressed by Dr. J.R. Speigner, director of Resource Use Education at North Carolina College, Durham, Dr. D.S. Weaver, North Carolina extension service director; and C.M. Ferguson of Washington, D.C., director of extension service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, and Dr. John W. Mitchell, field agent for the U.S. Department of Agriculture at Hampton, Virginia.

Dr. D.S. Brown, farm management specialist, N.C. State College, Raleigh, discussed the "Principles of Learning."

W.C. Cooper, 4-H Club specialist at A. and T. College, Greensboro, reported on the 4-H Camp location and construction. He said work will start shortly on building a camp for Negro 4-H Club boys and girls at Hammock's Beach.

Panty-Raiders To Appear In Court

RALEIGH (UP) — Fifty-two State College students will alternate exams with appearances in city court next week as Judge Albert Doub continues to mete out punishment following the vain attempts at panty raids at Meredith College Wednesday and Thursday night.

Doub ordered 10 students yesterday to pay $50 fines but suspended them during two-year periods of good behavior. Five other students were acquitted on charges stemming from the raids.

About 250 students including a sprinkling of coeds jammed the courtroom yesterday and laughed and boomed during the proceedings. They calmed down somewhat when Doub pronounced sentence on the first defendant, Harold M. Hughes of High Point.

The students were charged with unlawful assembly, resisting and obstructing police, creating a disturbance, trespassing, participating in a riot, and "engaging in a riot moving toward an object with destructive intent."

Meanwhile, State College Chancellor J. W. Harrelson said the college will conduct its own investigation into the raids next Friday following the examination period.

Harrelson said the investigation will be made by members of the college staff and one or two students of the board of inquiry.

Human Element Often Steals Coronation Show

By ROBERT E. JACKSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON, (UP) — Kings and queens are, after all, mere humans and seldom has a coronation come off without the human element providing the unexpected and with it a laugh or a tear.

At the coronation of the late George VI in 1937 there was one of those embarrassed silences while the Archbishop of Canterbury peered closely at St. Edward's crown trying to spot the tiny thread which marked the front. Some over-zealous attendant had snipped it off in the final examination and it was some time before the archbishop could determine how to set it on the king's head.

That little incident was as nothing, though, compared to the wild scene at the coronation of William the Conqueror in 1066. William had stationed his Norman soldiers around Westminster Abbey and when they heard the shouts of the recognition of the new king in the strange Anglo-Saxon tongue inside, the soldiers broke into the church.

They flailed about with their swords to right and left until scores of wounded lay moaning on the floor. Candles were upset and the tapestries caught fire before the Normans were convinced their leader was being honored.

George IV was a man who liked his bottle, and half way through his coronation, in 1821, he stopped the proceedings and retired to a chapel with his closer cronies. Bishops were shocked at the number of empty bottles found later. But the king was in far better spirits when he returned to the ceremony and, as one of the churchmen leaned over to kiss his cheek in homage, he grinned broadly and said "Thank me dear."

His queen, Caroline, whom George had accused of infidelity and barred from the abbey, was meanwhile beating on the doors trying to get in. She soon lost the sympathy of the crowd and when they began booing her, she fled in tears.

Victoria was only 19 when she was crowned and the pity of the young girl overcame her regal formality when one of her peers, Lord Rolle, who was over 80, tripped over her.

Engineer George W. Russell, Jackson, Mich., said he noticed the woman standing on the tracks with her arms folded as the train rounded a curve about 500 feet away.

He sounded the train whistle and jammed on the airbrakes but was unable to stop. "She didn't move a muscle until the train was only a few feet away," Russell said. "Then she raised her arms toward the engine and appeared to be screaming."

Three-five cars rolled over her body before the train could be brought to a stop. Police could find "no apparent reason" for the bizarre suicide. The woman's husband, Robert Vedder of Royal Oak, Mich., a junior in the school of dentistry, said he had met his wife downtown minutes before the tragedy and she appeared in good spirits.

Mrs. Vedder was majoring in English and Thursday night had put the finishing touches on her master's thesis. She also worked parttime for Prof. E. V. Moore, dean of the university's school of music. She and Vedder were married last June after a campus romance.

VFW Auxiliary Holds Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Post 7032, was held at the clubhouse on Thursday evening, May 28, with Mrs. E. T. Joyner, president, presiding.

A report of the visit which some of the members made to Caswell Training School on May 7 was given by Mrs. Robert Fleming. Emphasis was placed on the efforts the school is making to rehabilitate and train these children in some type of work which they are capable of doing.

The State Auxiliaries have sponsored projects there for a number of years. Bingo prizes are being sent this month by the local auxiliary.

The invitation was given to attend the Christian Church as a body for the services on Memorial Sunday. The group favored placing a wreath on the grave of a deceased member of the Post on Memorial Day.

The yearbook committee reported on its progress. The scrap book of the past year's activities was shown. This scrapbook will be entered in the State Contest at the State Encampment at Nags Head in June.

A donation of $5.00 was made on the gift to be given to the retiring State President, Mrs. Edna Bumgarner, at the Encampment.

After the business meeting refreshments were served the hostesses of the evening.

'Ticker-Tape' Parade Is Planned For Top Jet Ace

MIAMI, Fla. (UP) — Miami planned a "ticker-tape" parade today for Capt. Manuel J. Fernandez, small but handsome young jet ace, returning from the Korean fighting with 14 MIG kills to his credit.

Fernandez, who became the world's leading jet ace with his 13th kill, arrived here at 4 a.m. (EST) today aboard a commercial airliner. He was whisked by police escort to a swank Miami Beach hotel where he rested before a morning parade along Flagler Street and a luncheon in his honor at Miami Beach.

He was honor guest at Memorial Day services here later in the day and tonight will attend a dance sponsored by the Air Force Association.

The 28-year-old veteran went on to make his 14th MIG kill shortly before completing his 126th aerial mission in Korea but lost his top rating the same day to Capt. Joseph McConnell Jr., Apple Valley, Calif. McConnell bettered his score by two.

Fernandez, once considered "too small" to make the high school football team, had at that early age already become an aviation enthusiast. He shot down his first MIG in Korea last Oct. 4. Just 219 days later he bagged his 13th enemy plane.

Among his greeters were his mother, Mrs. Effie Fernandez, a nurse here, and father, Col. Manuel J. Fernandez Sr., who commands an Air Force communications group at Donaldson Air Force Base at Greenville, S. C.

"Korea was never like this," he laughed. As he came down the passenger ramp his mother, Mrs. Effie Fernandez, dashed up to give him a big hug and a kiss. Photographers insisted they repeat it several times.

"He is my boy and I'm proud of him," said Mrs. Fernandez. "I'm so happy he's home."

"I don't have any definite plans," said Fernandez, "but I know I'll be plenty busy."

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UP) — Phoebe Roberson Mason and Phoebe Roberson Walker, the same person, has filed suits here to divorce two men at the same time.

The Negro woman alleged that neither man had divorced his first wife before marrying her. She said she filed the suits to clarify her marital status "for future benefit."

ABINGDON, Va. (UP) — Army cutworms crept, crawled and chewed their way across farms in Washington County and adjacent areas of Tennessee today as county agents fought back with poison sprayed from aircraft.

J. W. McClain, agent in nearby Sullivan County, Tenn., said worms have never before appeared in such large numbers in the area. McClain said he has counted as many as 140 worms to the square foot and as many as 15 worms on a four-inch corn stalk.

Some farmers said the worms are so thick that from 100 feet away the ground appears to be rolling in waves as the worms surge from stalk to stalk.

A plane from Henderson, N. C., dropped poison yesterday as county agents warned that the plague may cost farmers in the two counties up to $100,000 in damages unless the worms can be halted at once.

The inch and one-half long green worms are biting hardest at corn, clover, and bluegrass pastureland, but are also cutting down barley, rye, wheat, tobacco and anything else in their path county agents said.

WORCESTER, Mass. (UP) — Three girls born on the same day held their eighth joint birthday party here. Noreen Fitzgibbons, Diane Dunn and Carol Mullins, whose mothers shared the same room when they were born at St. Vincent hospital in 1945, alternate at each other's homes for their annual parties.

Elizabeth was beautiful in her pink and white crinoline dress and sparkling tiara. A crowd of 20,000 cheered when she, Prince Philip and Princess Margaret drove up to Hampton Court palace on the Thames to attend the ball.

Philip apparently got little sleep after the ball was over. The handsome young Duke of Edinburgh was up early to greet three new royal visitors—Crown Prince Olav of Norway, arriving by barge at Westminster pier, and Prince Albert of Belgium and Prince Alex of Denmark, coming in by train.

London police braced for the biggest week-end crowds in Britain's history. Workmen toiled feverishly to complete decorations and stands along the six-mile route from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey.

About 13,000 more troops invaded London today to populate tent cities in the royal parks.

Wheat yields per acre in Sweden are about twice those in the United States.

Light Docket In Court On Friday

In Police Court Friday, Judge Charles H. Whedbee found Katie Swinson, Negro, 207 Cross street, guilty of possession of non-tax paid whiskey.

The court gave her six months in the Women's Division of N. C. State Prison, sentence to be suspended on payment of $100, court costs deducted. The court's judgment also provides that she is to remain of good behavior for two years, and she was placed on probation for one year. ABC officers J. M. Ward and H. B. Lilley made the arrest.

George Dixon, Negro, speeding, 30 days, suspended on payment of $25, costs deducted and he is not to operate a motor vehicle for 30 days. F. G. Laughinghouse paid $15 for driving without an operator's license.

Abram Newton, Negro, paid $10 for being drunk. Sylvester Vick, a frequent offender, was given 30 days in jail, sentence suspended on payment of $10.

Walked Calmly In Train's Path

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UP) — A married university of Michigan coed who only hours before completed her thesis for a master's degree committed suicide Friday by standing in front of a speeding freight train.

Witnesses said pretty Mrs. Ann Elinor Vedder, 22, walked calmly onto the tracks of the New York Central Railroad and stood for more than a minute as the train bore down on her.

Engineer George W. Russell, Jackson, Mich., said he noticed the woman standing on the tracks with her arms folded as the train rounded a curve about 500 feet away.

He sounded the train whistle and jammed on the airbrakes but was unable to stop. "She didn't move a muscle until the train was only a few feet away," Russell said. "Then she raised her arms toward the engine and appeared to be screaming."

INTRODUCING - MADCAP MIRIAM.

ARE YOU PROPOSING TO ME OR TO THE HORSE?

MISS MIRIAM, AS YOUR SECRETARY, MAY I ASK WHEN YOU WILL MARRY?

WHEN I FIND A MAN ROMANTIC ENOUGH! AFTER ALL, I AM RICH, FAMOUS, WITTY, YOUNG AND BEAUTIFUL!

I'VE NEVER SEEN A MAN GOOD ENOUGH FOR ME. CAN YOU THINK OF ANYONE GOOD ENOUGH, STEVE?

NOW THAT I THINK OF IT--NO.

I WANT TO MARRY THE MOST ROMANTIC MAN ON EARTH! FIND HIM FOR ME--NO MATTER WHAT IT COSTS!

WHAT ABOUT MISS DOOLEY, MR. SHERIFF?... SHE'S SICK... REAL, AWFUL SICK!

SHE'LL BE OKAY, RUSTY... JIM WOODS TOOK HER HOME WITH HIM... HIS WIFE'S A NURSE, AND HE'LL GET A DOCTOR... COME ON IN THE HOUSE.

I WANT TO PUT AN ALARM OUT FOR THEM... YOU SAY IT WAS A 1950 BLUEBIRD STATION WAGON?

YES, SIR... AND THEIR NAMES ARE TRIXIE AND MEL.

MEANWHILE, ABOUT 20 MILES AWAY... THE OFFICER SAYS YOU WERE GOING SEVENTY MILES PER HOUR IN A FIFTY-MILE ZONE!... WHAT ABOUT IT?

OKAY, OKAY... I ADMIT IT... WHAT'S THE FINE? I'VE GOT TO GET GOING!

YOUNG MAN, THE ALARMING INCREASE OF RECKLESS SPEEDING ON OUR HIGHWAYS IS A SERIOUS MATTER AND I INTEND... WHAT IS IT, OFFICER?

EXCUSE ME, YOUR HONOR. COULD YOU STEP OUTSIDE A MOMENT, SIR?

WHAT'S ALL THIS ABOUT, COPPER? I WANT TO PAY MY FINE AND GET GOING!

KEEP YOUR SHIRT ON! THE MAGISTRATE'LL BE RIGHT BACK.

I HOPE YOU HAVE A GOOD REASON FOR CALLING ME FROM THE BENCH.

THE SHERIFF AT HONEY HOLLOW HAS A PICK-UP ORDER FOR A COUPLE LIKE THEM... DRIVING A BLUE-BIRD STATION WAGON!

THOUGHT YOU MIGHT STALL 'EM 'TIL THE SHERIFF HAS A LOOK AT 'EM.

SEVERAL HOURS LATER

THANKS FOR HOLDING THOSE FOLKS... LOOKS LIKE WE'VE LANDED SOME BIG FISH... THEY'RE 'GREENGOODS MEL', AND 'PANAMA TRIXIE'... THE F.B.I. HAS A FLIER OUT FOR THEM!

NO WONDER HE WAS ANXIOUS TO PAY HIS FINE AND GET GOING!

MEANWHILE, AT THE DOOLEY PLACE

GOLLY, FLIP, I THOUGHT YOU AND I HAD A REAL SWELL HOME, BUT IF MISS DOOLEY HAS TO GO TO A HOSPITAL, I GUESS WE'LL HAVE TO PUSH ON...

...BUT THOSE POOR HORSES! C'MON, FLIP... WE'RE GOING TO TAKE CARE OF THEM 'TIL MISS DOOLEY MAKES SOME ARRANGEMENTS FOR THEM.

WHO ARE YOU, MISTER? WHO DO YOU WANT TO SEE?

NEVER MIND THAT FOR NOW, SON... I WANT TO ASK YOU A FEW QUESTIONS.
