South Korea 'May Reconsider' Pledge Of No Obstruction

Korea Truce Talks Hit New Snag

By LEROY HANSEN United Press Staff Correspondent PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP)—The Korean truce negotiations struck a new snag today when South Korea's foreign minister said his government "may reconsider" its promise not to obstruct an armistice. As Allied and Communist staff officers hammered out the last details of a truce, Foreign Minister Pyung Yung Tai said the Republic of Korea has dispatched an urgent cable to Washington demanding "clarification" of U. N. Command negotiators' assurances to the Communists of implementation of an armistice. ROK President Syngman Rhee kept an ominous silence himself. But Pym's statement indicated strongly that South Korea was still far from satisfied with the arrangements for the armistice. In Washington, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said today that remaining obstacles to a Korean armistice are not insurmountable if the Communists want peace. Dulles told a news conference Americans should be neither over-optimistic nor too pessimistic about chances for an armistice. No one can be sure of Communist actions until the final decision has been made, he said. Pym said senior U. N. delegate Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison's assurances, as revealed in a statement released by Communists, were in direct disagreement with the understanding reached at Seoul in the "little truce talks" between U. S. emissary Walter S. Robertson and Rhee. The ROK foreign minister said following a meeting in Seoul with U. S. Ambassador Ellis O. Briggs: "Everything will be decided when we get the definite answer from Washington." "We promised not to obstruct an armistice on terms of sufficient safeguards. When these safeguards looked impracticable in the light of armistice terms to which the United States means to adhere, it will be logical for us to reconsider our position." Pym, who attended many of the conferences between Rhee and Robertson, said those talks were "inconclusive" and that the ROK government agreed not to obstruct an armistice on two conditions: 1. That the U. S. government promised to protect South Korea against any future Communist aggression or else make a mutual security pact. 2. That the U. S. government gave definite assurances to help unify Korea if the political conference following an armistice failed to achieve the objective during a specific length of time. Now, Pym said, Harrison has told the Communists at Panmunjom that: 1. The U. N. would not interfere with "military action" taken by the Communists against South Korea forces if the ROK government resorted to unilateral action to unify Korea by force. 2. The U. N. promised that all supporting supplies and equipment to the ROK forces would be halted if the South Koreans "violated" an armistice agreement. 3. The U. N. agreed that there should be no time limit on an armistice in Korea. "We now cannot do anything for ourselves without being condemned for violation of the armistice terms," Pym said. "It will make our legitimate aspirations for unification illegal. We want to legalize our national privilege—our prerogative. If there is any nation prepared to illegalize her national sovereignty, that nation is qualified to condemn us. If we sin, I'm sure we are sinning in company." "They are asking too much of us," he said. Pym said he believed Harrison was "cornered" when he agreed to Red demands concerning the implementation of an armistice. Pym said his government's attitude depended on Washington's word on the "unsettled problems." "And until we get those answers from Washington, we are not going to say anything about an armistice," Pym said. The ROK foreign minister said the Rhee government had not considered sending a representative to the signing ceremony because "We haven't anything to do with it. That is a United Nations Command affair." Major Gen. Choi Duk Shin, who has been boycotting the truce talks, said he had no intention of attending the armistice signing. Rhee was reported to be preparing a blunt public statement disavowing reported assurances to the Communists by chief negotiator Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison that South Korea would abide by a truce indefinitely. The aged president and all his major advisers repeatedly've declared that 90 days is "long enough" for a postwar political conference to do something about unifying Korea.

East German Minister Applies Iron Hand To Labor Strikes Outlawed By Reds

By KENNETH BRODNEY United Press Staff Correspondent BERLIN (UP)—Strikes were outlawed today in revolt-ridden Soviet-run East Germany. The hated woman minister of justice, "Red Hilde" Benjamin, branded strikes "fascist attempts to overthrow the government." The East German regime attempted to sugar-coat this blow to hard-pressed labor with an announcement that Russia will help feed the food-short Soviet zone. Russia has extended 231,000,000 rubles (about $7,000,000) of credits for food. But the East Germans will be required to repay the Soviets with manufactured goods and labor. "Red Hilde's" harsh order is designed to assure that East German labor stays on the job to meet the Soviet bill for its help. In a speech reported today in the official Communist press, she warned that fail awaits workers after use strikes to protest intolerable working conditions. Frau Benjamin said that former Justice Minister Max Fechner was purged because he committed the basic mistake "of asserting that Soviet zone workers have the right to strike. Fechner was fired and jailed last week as an "enemy of the state." His successor earned the nickname of Red Hilde because of the harsh sentences she imposed on anti-Reds as vice president of the Soviet Zone Supreme Court. Fechner's statement on strikes, she said, "surrenders to the enemy, gives a leniency to provocateurs, spares criminals their just punishment and gives them the possibility to carry on their criminal work." The former justice minister's strike ruling, made in an interview with the official East German news agency ADN, "caused the unrest to rise up again and caused our state great political and material damage," Frau Benjamin said. Workers throughout East Germany have been striking and paralyzing in slowdowns to enforce demands for release of comrades arrested in the June 17 revolt, liberation of political prisoners, and new trade union elections to oust Communist officials. Some also have voiced demands for the resignation of the government of Prime Minister Otto Grotewohl. Since Frau Benjamin took over the justice ministry, Communist courts have imposed drastic sentences on anti-Communists in mass trials. ADN reported last night that 16 residents of the Saxony town of Niesky had been sentenced to jail terms ranging from 18 months to life imprisonment for taking part in last month's rebellion. The East German government in a move to counteract resentment caused by the Communist rejection of free American food, told hungry Soviet Zone residents Moscow will help feed them. The East German regime said the Soviet Union has granted it credits totaling 231,000,000 rubles (about $7,000,000) to buy food and raw materials from Russia during the last half of 1953.

Polio Strikes In Avery County During Weekend

NEWLAND, N. C. (UP)—Movers, churches, Sunday schools and other social events were suspended "until further notice" in Avery County today as polio struck with savage swiftness. Dr. C. F. McRae, county health officer, ordered the quarantine when five positive cases of polio and other "probable" cases were diagnosed. He said the county had been entirely free of polio until this past weekend when it suddenly broke out. "It has not reached a stage critical enough to warrant mass inoculations," he said, "but we're going to do everything we can to stop it before it gets any worse." All public gatherings were prohibited as of 8 a. m. this morning. The county is only a few miles from Elizabethton and Johnson City, Tenn., where officials are fighting an even fiercer outbreak of the crippling disease. Dr. McRae did not extend the quarantine to the Linville golf tournament which started today since the tourney "is out in the open air where it probably can't contribute to the outbreak." Meanwhile, five new cases of the disease were diagnosed in North Carolina's two counties where mass inoculation of some 28,000 children with polio-resisting gamma globulin has been completed. Catawba County reported four new cases to raise its total to 67. Hard-hill Caldwell county, just to the north, had only one new case for a total of 124.

Chinese Offensive 'Is Over', Says ROK Officer Fighting Dwindles In Korea

By WARREN FRANKLIN United Press Staff Correspondent SEOUL, Korea (UP)—Fighting along the Korean front dwindled today into two unsuccessful Communist assaults as truce map makers tried to plot a stable cease-fire line. "The Chinese offensive is over," a high-ranking South Korean officer told United Press Correspondent Warren Miller at the front. A single Chinese battalion struck southeast of Lookout Mountain near the junction of the Kumsong and Pukhan rivers before midnight, but South Koreans repulsed the thrust after almost two hours of fighting. In the other abortive assault, two Red companies crossed the Kumsong and hit a South Korean position on the south bank. The ROKs drove them back across the river. The Chinese attacks were regarded as final efforts to grab more property before staff officers at Panmunjom draw the cease-fire line and set up a 2 1/2 mile buffer zone separating the two armies. The Reds' most important property grab of the new week was the capture of East Berlin and Berlin outposts on the western front. Only 14 of a group of 30 to 60 Marine defenders survived. United Press Correspondent Frederick C. Painton reported from the western sector that the Marines who remained on the outposts had died or been captured because they had been taught to stay and fight. Painton said three generals, after considerable debate, decided the outposts weren't worth recapturing. "The hills were just pipsqueaks," a colonel said. Pfc. Horace Sawyer, an 18-year-old soldier who fought with his bare hands, said East Berlin was a "death trap." As the fighting died down, both sides tried to stabilize their positions. "Both sides appear to be digging in along new defense lines on each side of the Kumsong River," Miller said in a report from the central front where ROK troops have regained half of the 79 square miles they lost. Allied warplanes took over the major battle duty of the day Tuesday. Up to 200 fighter bombers hammered the Kumsong-Kumsong front and then ranged further north.

Lending Days Of RFC Appear To Be Nearing End

WASHINGTON (UP)—The lending days of the 21-year-old Reconstruction Finance Corp. appeared headed for a quick end today after the Senate voted to create a new agency to make small business loans. The House already has passed legislation setting up a federal small business administration to take over the lending functions of RFC. The Senate completed action late yesterday on a similar bill which would transfer the lending functions of the RFC to the new administration 60 days after it is created. The Senate voted to end the RFC outright next June 30.

4-H Delegates Told Farm Leaders Few

RALEIGH (UP)—Delegates to the 1953 National 4-H Club convention related their experiences in a panel discussion today to the 800 farm youngsters attending the 28th annual State 4-H Club week here. The club members also toured the governor's mansion and were officially welcomed to Raleigh by State College Chancellor J. W. Harrelson. Tonight, new members will be inducted into the State Honor Club. D. S. Weaver, director of the agricultural extension service, told the 4-Hers last night that agriculture is the most important business in the world but is suffering from a lack of leaders.

Tobacco Prices Showing Gains

VALDOSTA, Ga. (UP)—Sales opened with an optimistic note at markets in the Georgia-Florida flue-cured tobacco belt today as a result of yesterday's upward swing in prices. The U. S. Department of Agriculture reported a heavy volume of offerings with more fair and good and primings and cutters appearing. Prices for most grades Monday gained $1 to $5 per hundred pounds, wiping out a price setback which had followed opening sales of the 1953 season last Thursday. Some prices topped the first-day averages. Most of the 22 markets reported a smaller percentage of tobacco going under government loan. Averages per hundred pounds for representative grades: Leaf—good lemon, $61; fair lemon, $60; low lemon, $55. Cutters—fair lemon, $64; low lemon, $62. Lugs—good lemon, $62; good orange, $61; fair lemon, $58; fair orange, $56; low lemon, $48; low orange, $43. Primings—good lemon, $53; fair lemon, $52; fair orange, $50; low orange, $36. Woman Attacked In Duke Gardens

DURHAM, N. C. (UP)—A woman was seized by a Negro, dragged into the famous Sarah P. Duke gardens and raped last night on the Duke University campus here, police reported today. The woman, a 48-year-old switchboard operator at Duke Hospital, said the Negro threatened to kill her if she made an outcry. The attack occurred in the wooded, flowering gardens in the center of the beautiful Duke campus, almost in the shadow of the famous Duke Chapel. The scene was only a few hundred yards from administration buildings and dormitories.

Hill-Burton Act Extension OK'd

WASHINGTON (UP)—The House passed and sent to the White House yesterday a bill to continue the hospital construction and survey program under the Hill-Burton Act to June 30, 1957. The existing law is scheduled to expire in 1955. The federal-state hospital construction program was started under the Hill-Burton Act in 1946. Some 100,000 hospital beds have been completed since then.

Oxnam Says House Probes Acting To Reds' Advantage

WASHINGTON (UP)—Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam charged the House Un-American Activities Committee today with using methods that play "into Communist hands" and promote "a new and vicious expression of Ku-Kluxism." In a blistering 2,000-word statement, the 61-year-old clergyman demanded that the committee "publicly announce the mistakes" it made in linking him to Communist front groups. He also called on Rep. Donald L. Jackson (R-Calif.) "to apologize on the floor of the House for his unprecedented and untrue statements" against him. Jackson had charged Oxnam with serving "God on Sunday and the Communist front the rest of the week." The vigorous Methodist leader made his statement as he began a dramatic appearance before the committee in a crowded caucus room in the House Office Building. The hearing was billed as a showdown in Oxnam's running feud with the committee. It also marked the group's first public session involving alleged Communist infiltration of the clergy. Jackson said recently the committee files showed that Oxnam's name appeared in connection with a number of organizations which have been labeled subversive by the attorney general or by state and federal un-American activities committees. In reply, Oxnam said "Loyalty to my family, my church and my country are fundamental to me and when any man or any committee questions that loyalty, I doubt that I would be worthy of the name American if I took it lying down."

Question Cashier For Hold-Up Clue Slight Increase Is Expected Over Last Year's Sum Larger Powell Bill Check

WAKE FOREST (UP)—Police and highway patrolmen questioned a frightened woman cashier today in the hopes she can give them a clue to the young bandit who robbed a local telephone office of between $400 and $500 yesterday. Mrs. Cora Shearon was alone in the small office of the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co., after lunch yesterday when a young white man walked in and asked for a telephone application blank. She said when she reached over to get the blank, he pulled out a pistol, scooped up the money and ran out. Officers immediately put up road blocks around this college town but admitted that "we don't have a thing to go on." "Mrs. Shearon was so unnerved that she couldn't give us very much information," police said. "She was too frightened to run out and see what kind of car he got away in." Mrs. Shearon was only able to tell officers that the bandit was a young white man, about 25, wearing a white sports cap and a short-sleeved shirt. She said the money was mostly in $10 and $20 bills. The office is a small, one-room branch used only for payment of telephone bills and applications for new telephones. City Clerk H. H. Duncan said today the city of Greenville soon should receive a check from the North Carolina State Highway and Public Works Commission for its annual share of Powell Bill funds. He said the commission already has acknowledged the city's application for its share which, if figured on the rate used last year, should mean a slight boost compared with that received last year. Using 1952 percentages as a basis, this would mean the total would come to more than $54,970, or about $100 more than received in 1952. The amount is not exact, however, he added, since some variation in the rate this year is likely. Powell Bill funds, distributed among the municipalities of the state, come from a per cent of the returns on the state-imposed tax on gasoline sales. Allocated to be used for improvements to streets other than state highways in towns, it is distributed on the basis of mileage of these streets and population. Last year, Greenville reported 60.53 miles of city streets other than those forming state highway links in town, and received a return of $54,972.79. The slight increase expected this year, if based on last year's rate, would be due to an addition of 26 miles of these streets during the year. The return last year was figured on the basis of $453.28 per mile of these streets and a rate of $1.84 per inhabitant, calculated by the 1950 census report of 16,724 population for Greenville. The city's records also show almost two miles of hard surfacing has been added over the last year, making a total of 28.21 miles of pavement on non-highway streets inside of town. The distance of unsurfaced streets has dropped from 16.21 miles last year to 15.87 this year, while 16.71 miles now have soil, stone or gravel tops. Records kept by the city clerk show Greenville's return under the Powell Bill compares favorably with that received by other North Carolina towns of about the same size. In 1951, the first year the fund was set up, Greenville received $49,739. Others within its range included: Albemarle, population 11,798, $44,567; Concord, population 16,496, $48,545; Hickory, population 14,758, $47,341; Kinston, population 18,236, $47,740; Lexington, population 13,871, $41,818; New Bern, population 15,812, $40,940; and Shelby, population 15,808, $43,964.

Survivor Relates Escape When Outpost Overrun

By FREDERICK C. PAINTON WESTERN FRONT, Korea (UP)—A lanky, 18-year-old Marine told today how the Chinese Communists had bloodied his head with rifle butts and left him for dead in the battle for outpost East Berlin. Pfc. Horace Sawyer of Baton Rouge, La., was one of 14 leathernecks who survived the Sunday night attack on the vital western front outpost. Young Sawyer's accounts of his remarkable escape came as a colonel said that the outposts of East Berlin and Berlin which were lost to the Reds are "just pipsqueaks" of no tactical value. Sawyer called East Berlin a "death trap." He said Chinese flares lighted up both hills "like daylight." "We could see them (The Chinese) coming right through their own artillery. "After a while, I seemed to be the only Marine on the hills, so I started to get out. We threw all the grenades we had. I started out of this trench and ran into this room. "He challenged me because he couldn't see who it was, so I grabbed for his burp gun and we started rassing around. There were three of them trying to hold me down, while another tried to bash my head with a rifle. "Everytime he tried to hit me, I moved and he hit one of the Chinks but he got me finally with a kind of glancing blow. "When you are lying down and you figure maybe you'll never get up, you get up fast." Sawyer said he raced down the trench line but encountered another Chinese. "We started waiting around, with me trying to keep the burp gun pointed toward him," Sawyer said. Sawyer said he was able to get away and was overjoyed to find another Marine in the area. They started down the hill, Sawyer said, "five or six goonies jumped us." "They killed my buddy when he tried to reach for his carbine," Sawyer said. "The Chinks beat him to it." "I just rolled down the hill," he said. "Then I turned my head so the back would show up with the flares so you could see everything. I guess they thought they shot me in the head, I was so bloody."

2 Prison Camp Inmates Escape

Two prisoners were reported to have escaped from Pitt County Prison Camp about 11 a. m. this morning. County police were alerted and on the lookout over an extensive area for the pair who, early reports stated, left a painting job at the camp to make their break for freedom. At 12:30 p. m. today, prison officials reported dogs had picked up the prisoners' trail and were chasing them along the west side of the Greenville airport. The two were identified as: Bobby Miller, 24, 145-pound white inmate whose height was described as five-feet-eleven and complexion ruddy; and Ralph Carver, 29, standing five-feet-nine, having brown eyes and weighing 142 pounds. Both prisoners were reported dressed in blue prison clothing when last seen.

Disabled Korea Veteran Becomes A U.S. Citizen

WASHINGTON (UP)—A year after Waclaw Jackiewicz came to America from Poland in 1950 he was drafted into the Army of his adopted country. Jackiewicz was sent to Korea and was wounded last Feb. 10 when a load of dynamite exploded in his hands. He is now in Walter Reed Hospital here, and yesterday became a U. S. citizen under a law applying to persons who have served in the armed forces for 90 days during the Korean war. U. S. District Judge Richmond B. Keech administered the oath at a special court session in Jackiewicz' hospital room. The new citizen wasn't able to raise his right hand at the ceremony, Nor will he be able to see his country. He lost both hands and eyes in Korea.

Disappointed When Saucer Fails Appear

BRUSH CREEK, Calif. (UP)—Miner John Q. Black said today he was "darn disappointed" that the little men from Mars didn't show up in their flying saucer with the retractable leg. "I don't know why they didn't come," he said. "It's too deep for me. I'm just a miner." Black and his partner, John Van Allen, had predicted the saucer would arrive at the junction of Marble and Jordan creeks at 6:30 p. m. yesterday. Black claimed to have seen the saucer seven times before. He and his partner said they saw it appear on May 20 and June 20 at 6:30 p. m. They thought maybe it would reappear last night on a monthly schedule. About 200 people, including news men and photographers, scanned the skies all day yesterday in hopes of seeing the silver-colored saucer land on the sandspit in a remote mountain area near here. Black and Van Allen said when they saw the saucer before, a little man about four feet tall in a forest green parka got out, scooped up water from the creek in a bucket and passed it to another occupant of the saucer. Then the saucer took off without a sound. A small crowd of about 20 or 25 was on hand at the junction of the two creeks at the appointed hour. They included news, television and newspaper cameramen as well as amateur photographers carrying everything from box cameras to expensive equipment.

The buffet was centered with a cake decorated with a miniature bride and this too was flanked by decorated candles.

Mrs. E. B. Beasley served party punch and others assisting in serving decorated sandwiches, ham biscuits, date bars, sand tarts, cheese straws, bridal mints and salted nuts were Mrs. J. M. Horton, Mrs. B. E. Owens, Miss Lucile Yelverton and Miss Martha Hardy Johnson.

Goodbyes were said to Mrs. L. P. Eagles and Miss Nancy Pruden.

The honorees were presented corsages on arrival and later were given gifts of silver in their selected patterns.

Approximately 150 guests called during the afternoon.

Enough Stalling In Korea; Action Needed

Reports from Korea indicate the signing of the long-awaited truce is near at hand. But we've heard the same story over and over again for the past two years in the three-year war on the Korean peninsula. The communist, through experience the free world has learned to distrust. A communist word or a communist signature on a treaty has become worth about as much as a plugged nickel in international affairs. Even with the Korean truce reportedly only a matter of days away, the Chinese army in Korea is throwing all the strength it can muster into the battle. True, it is costing them a grave price for the advances they have made; but at the same time it is costing the United Nations forces in men and material.

Time Has Run Out On Wordy Lawmakers

Whether it be on state or national level, when a legislative body convenes its members seemingly devote the first quarter of the session to promises and pronouncements the second and third quarters to a running debate on one or two topics (settling nothing); and the final quarter is devoted to "going home." It's in the last few weeks that results are evidenced. Wheels begin to turn, motivated by a unanimous yen to escape mid-summer heat and to mend political fences, and the true fruits of preceding toasty-turvy weeks are served on a platter to a waiting citizenry.

The Republican selection of legislation to be acted upon in this final mad rush, consists of: pending appropriation bills, Reciprocal Trade Act extension, oil rights in the outer continental shelf, emergency refugee legislation, higher postal rates, farm credit extension, military public works authorizations, a small business loan agency, Senate ratification of five treaties on commerce and navigation, and an agriculture surplus disposal measure. Hawaiian statehood and legislation on disposal of government-owned synthetic rubber plants "might" get through.

In the words of House Speaker Joseph Martin, "It would mean more action and less talk" to get these chores done in time. That same observation might well have been made when this august assemblage of lawmakers first convened.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
CAN WE TAKE THE TRUTH
We generally tell ourselves what we like to hear. Furthermore the people who stand highest in our esteem are the people who tell us pleasant truths, not unpleasant.

A recent writer has said: "It is more than questionable whether any politician is likely to arise and tell the public that the benefits for which it clamors... have to be paid for by harder work or by going short on something else. He is equally unlikely to say that there is a limit to the benefits which can be extorted from the state. He is more likely to float along on the current which bears the whole population toward a self-imposed dictatorship."

The evils which befall us are mostly of our own making. Taken by and large, the human race doesn't want to have any problems to solve; it wants to be let alone and to be allowed to enjoy its comforts. We'll get into ruts—and we like them. Occasionally an invader makes a nation captive. Usually, however, nations fall as the result of internal weakness. If we keep on here in the western world, wanting to get something for nothing, we shall end up by getting nothing at all. The theory of perpetual motion has been demonstrated to be fallacious—and this goes for government and economics as well as for mechanics.

Questionable Debt Liquidation

WASHINGTON—Sentiment in favor of the Bricker constitutional amendment has been strengthened considerably by Senate approval under peculiar circumstances of an agreement for lopsided repayment of money owed by Germany to the United States Government and to individual investors in that country's prewar issues of securities. It was the first time that the treaty-making power has been invoked in this kind of transaction.

Although the agreement concerned disposition of debts totalling almost $4 billion, there were less than a handful of members on the floor during explanation of the complicated question. It is doubtful if more than a score of senators understood that, while bond-buying clients of the great New York banks were to receive 100 cents on the dollar, United States taxpayers would get back only 33 cents per dollar investment.

PAYOFF TO ISSUING BANKERS—Despite floor charges that the liquidation of the German debt amounted to a payoff to the issuing bankers at the expense of heavily burdened taxpayers, a motion to recommend for further investigation was defeated by a vote of 51 to 16, with 28 not voting. Most of the members lined up for the proposal rushed into the chamber at the last minute, when the bells rang that summoned them to roll call.

The highly questionable debt agreement was negotiated during the Truman Administration, with New York lawyers and bankers representing the United States. Hermann J. Abs, Hitler's erstwhile fiscal agent, spoke for his country.

Senate ratification was recommended by Secretary John Foster Dulles, former member of the New York firm of Sullivan and Cromwell, which is frequently characterized as the "Wall Street annex of the State Department."

FACTS INFLUENCING REPAYMENT TERMS

With realization of the international situation — both in Korea and elsewhere around the globe — this present attempt, it seems should be the last to reach a truce in Korea.

If the communist wanted peace there, they could have had it long ago. If they want peace in Korea now, it is waiting for them.

If the Chinese communists attempt again, through their devious means to scuttle a Korean truce, the United Nations should proceed immediately to use every means at its disposal to destroy the Chinese army in Korea.

There is nothing to be gained by the free world in letting the Korean situation continue to drag out indefinitely. For the past two years since negotiations opened, every moment gained through stalling has been used to advantage by the Chinese.

Their time now has run out. The United Nations can leave routes to negotiations open if this attempt at a truce fails; but no time should be wasted in bringing communist forces in Korea to their knees.

For too long a time U. N. forces in Korea have been forced to fight a war with one hand tied behind their backs. Unless peace is to come now, the young men who are offering their lives on the altar of freedom certainly should be allowed to fight with both hands.

Red Oak Church Sets Shining Example

Members of the Red Oak Church of Pitt County have set an outstanding example which other churches in Pitt may well profit by.

The Red Oak Church has been chosen one of the three churches which are finalists in the contest sponsored by Emory University to pick the outstanding rural church in 13 states. Although the final decision will not be announced until July 29, the progress and community service rendered by the church is worthy of note.

From a field of more than 1,300 rural churches entered in the contest sponsored by Emory, the impressive record of Red Oak church has brought the church to the final phase of competition.

The Reflector joins other Pitt Counties in wishing the Red Oak Church luck in final judging; whether or not the church is picked as the most outstanding in 13 states, its achievements are something of which all Pitt County may be proud.

From the record of the churches in final competition, it is apparent a church or community does not have to be large for a great deal of service to be rendered. One of the churches in the final competition had only 16 members when it entered the contest a year ago and has only 32 members now.

The Red Oak Church, by comparison can not be considered one of the larger churches in Pitt County, but its record of service sets a high mark at which other churches in Pitt can set their sights.

Beauties On The ECC Campus

Consider yourself notified: East Carolina College has 19 per cent of the pretty and talented girls in North Carolina! This figure seems fantastic, but figure it this way: Of 37 girls entered in the North Carolina Beauty Pageant, seven were East Carolina students.

Actually, the figure should be set at over 19 per cent, because of the seven, four were among the 12 finalists! The seven in the contest from ECC were Pat Davidson, representing Greenville; Shirley Moose, Salisbury; Joyce Smith, Wilson County; Delores Matthews, Henderson; Ann Byrd, Windsor; Jean Page, Roanoke Rapids; and Judy Perry, Morehead.

The big news for Greenville is this: Jean Page, who came in second in the local beauty contest behind Miss Greenville, won third in the state finals! The four ECC girls among the 12 finalists were Shirley Moose, Joyce Smith, Delores Matthews and Jean Page.

The man who never misses a trick, East Carolina's President John Messick, was on hand at the finals Friday night to give his girls a boost. Master of Ceremonies Bob Rouse, Farmville attorney, recognized Dr. Messick as one of the dignitaries and commented that he had good reason to present.

The "job" of escorting Miss Greenville was split between two Greenville batchelors, J. B. Smith and Jim Lanier. The entire JC Club is awaiting a full financial report from Jim and J. B. who were given expense money and wired the second night for $50 more.

It's a shame to ruin a good story, but I've already talked to J. B. who can account for wise spending of every penny. Nevertheless, the JC Club will have plenty of kidding for the two escorts for weeks to come.

Greenville had the distinction of having the smartest Nash Rambler in the parade, J. B. says, and the biggest sign. The Morehead City JC's sent instructions to every club to have a sign, 17 by 22 inches, on each door of the car telling which contestant was inside.

The instructions coming to Greenville were misplaced and J. B. didn't get the word. Consequently, he had a sign made seven feet long and a foot high, with big letters saying, "MISS GREENVILLE." The Morehead City JC's yelled, but J. B. had a good excuse and used the largest sign of any club represented.

And how did the boys come back batchelors, with no strings? J. B. says, "All I did was give my eyes a real workout." And I thank you. JACK EDWARDS

AIR BASE EXPANSION (Kinston Free Press)
Current improvements and additions at Stallings Air Base, which are designed to enhance the work of the civilian flight training school for Air Force personnel, constitute good news for residents of Kinston and Lenoir County. It means the work at the base, which has been growing since Serv-Air Aviation Corporation took over the base a little over two years ago, is on a sound footing and is meeting top Air Force standards for civilian flight schools.

Among the improvements at the base are a new briefing room, a large paved taxiway, tennis courts and a new ultra-modern control tower. A new hangar, built some months ago, has already been pressed into service.

Rumors have had it at various intervals since the GOP Administration took over that the school here eventually would be closed. But those rumors have been without foundation. The operators of the school have pressed forward to improve their safety and cost records to place the school in the upper ranks of the nine schools maintained by the Air Force for purpose of getting to and from places, many people believe their greatest benefit is in the auxiliary dividends of improved homes and rural churches. This is particularly noticeable in the care given to church premises. There is no immediately at hand evidence of the effect upon church attendance and interest of the congregation. It would seem reasonable to assume there has been advancement along those lines. It is a heart-warming experience for one who has traveled over thousands of miles of North Carolina roads to go back over the same routes and note the changes. There are occasional instances of neglect and encroaching dilapidation. For every one of these there is a dozen cases of improvement.

GENERAL — The rule is so general it would be unfair to cite specific illustrations. Your reporter can call up mental pictures of churches in every section of North Carolina which a few years ago had unpainted buildings, bare and eroded grounds, weed-infested cemeteries, and which now have painted or brick-veneered and enlarged, or entirely new, and modern edifices, shrubbery planted all around and graveyards cleaned.

ROADS — Good roads helped to bring about these improvements, on the simple theory that there was no use to make the place look nice if nobody ever saw it. As people began to pass by, sprucing up was necessary. Higher living standards was a contributing factor. It is recalled that King David benighted that he lived in a house of cedar while Jehovah dwelt in a tent. Newspapers and magazines had a lot to do with it by bringing news of what other communities were doing. Hundreds of other factors are involved and none can claim full credit. The end result is the main thing, and it is a very gratifying thing to contemplate.

ENROLLMENT — The current issue of State School Facts shows a decrease in elementary figures on school enrollment. It is noted that the 914,269 pupils in the 1951-52 session, latest for which figures have been tabulated, was an all-time high. It is expected the 1952-53 enrollment will be larger. Of the total number 720,391 or 78.8 per cent were in grades 1-8, and 193,878 or 21.2 per cent in grades 9-12.

BREAKDOWN — Further analysis shows that for several years there has been a percentage decrease in elementary grades, an increase in high schools. There are more boys than girls in elementary schools, more girls than boys in high school. Almost 30 per cent of the enrollment is in Negro schools, although the ratio to total population is about 27 per cent. This offers further evidence that Negroes are making better use of public school opportunities.

ROADS — It is just about 200 miles from Raleigh to Morganton on US-64, the most direct route. There are several alternate routes of just a few miles variance all on primary highways. A man who usually knows what he is talking about said the other day he could drive from Raleigh to Morganton on hard surfaced roads with total mileage of 225, not more than 10 of which would be on primary or numbered highways. Just what route he would take was not learned.

It is becoming generally known that if a traveler knows what he is doing he can save many miles and avoid heavy truck and bus traffic by taking these secondary alternate routes. In fact, it is almost impossible in North Carolina, except in the mountains and coastal marsh areas, to get as much as 25 miles from any point and not have more than one way to get back over black-topped or paved roads.

DIVIDENDS — Valuable as these roads may be for the main as potent in claiming quarters in the Senate office building at Washington as in the assignment to committees. A few days after Sens. Willis Smith died a Republican Senator from down the hall decided he might like to have the office suite which Smith used, Broughton and Graham had occupied. He sent his aides with tape measures and other devices to determine if the size and arrangement would be more convenient than his present office. They found the situation to be somewhat more desirable and tentatively stated that they would take over and move in.

HOODOO — John K. Slear, Smith's secretary who is being retained by Senator Lenoir, and who has been around capitol hill long enough to be a recognized authority on protocol, but who didn't much want to move, helped the fellows from down hall all he could. As they were leaving he said the transfer would be entirely agreeable, but he casually reminded his friends that the five most recent occupants of that suite had either died or been defeated a short time after moving in. The prospective tenants reported back to their boss Senator, and then advised they had decided to stay where they are.

ECONOMY — Senator Lenoir is following the example of the late Senator Smith in practicing economy instead of prating about it. He authorized use of a rubber stamp to overprint his name on the office stationery, thus saving about $600 in printing bills. It was noted some months ago that Senator Smith had saved about $12,000 out of his expense allowance by cutting down on clerical help and office expenses.

WORTH NOTING
TELL CITY, IND., NEWS: "Too many people are looking at this war situation merely from the standpoint of finances, they have more money in their pockets than at any time during their lives. Why can't these people realize that eventually they are going to have nothing. Their pockets have money in them that is coming from the government and being gradually built up into a debt that will bankrupt the once-richest country the world has ever known."

FAIRFIELD, IOWA, DAILY LEDGER: "It appears the CIO unions are changing some of their positions on socialistic ventures. In their Sixth Constitutional convention held recently they adopted this resolution: 'No federal agency should construct or operate, except for national defense or where private industry fails or refuses adequate service, any project the sole purpose of which is the generation of electric energy.'"

It has been our opinion all the time that both labor and management have the same stake in the future welfare of the country. Whenever times are prosperous for management they are also prosperous for labor."

Fallacies About Selling

By ELMER ROESSNER
For 10 years Dr. C. L. Lapp has been studying salesmen and sales managers, not in the sanctuaries of Washington University, where he is associate professor of marketing, but in stores and offices, the natural habitat of genus venditor.

Now that trends toward a buyers' market are stronger than ever it may pay companies with sales organizations to examine 13 fallacies that Dr. Lapp has found sales managers susceptible to. They are:

1. Salesmen are born, not made.
2. Only graduates of well-known universities with highest marks will make good salesmen.
3. Standardized tests will solve the problem of selecting salesmen.
4. All men should be put through the same training routine.
5. Salesmen are expendable, therefore it is foolish to use money to train them.
6. The only way to learn is through experience.
7. All men should be treated the same.
8. Giving a salesman good pay and good sales equipment makes a company a good place to work.
9. It pays to allot almost all supervisory time to low men on the quota production pole.
10. Past sales are the chief factors in forecasting sales for an ensuing period.
11. Sales volume is what is wanted from salesmen.
12. Quantitative evaluation is sufficient.

13. Outstanding sales records are the sole qualification in selecting executives.

The trouble, Dr. Lapp says, is that each of these suppositions has a bit of truth in them. But thinking each one through, he believes will show that they are false guide for effective management of sales men.

"These are only a few of the fallacies which have been limited in the sales success of far too many sales organizations for far too long Dr. Lapp said. "Eliminate fallacious thinking in your sales organization and you will step up sales effectiveness 30 to 80 per cent."

WORTH TRYING FOR.
PICKING UP TV SIGNALS.
BASIS FOR 163 BUSINESSES.
Television, in addition to creating thousands of opportunities in manufacturing, retailing and service, has also created 163 enterprises in bringing signals to communities in valleys.

The American Municipal Association reports that many communities have established common television antenna services, picking up signals from hilltops and relaying them by cable to sets in saloons and homes below. These communal pickups have led to the sale of more than $30,000,000 worth of television sets.

There is a tendency, the association notes, to consider these services as public utilities, putting them under state regulation and giving them state protection.

Little Blowhard Begins To Talk

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—"Little Blowhard," the pet in our family, is four years old and at last is beginning to talk.

"Clankety clank" were his first words, and now he says them over and over and over. We would just as soon his vocabulary gets no larger, and actually would prefer for him to forget what he has already learned.

Baby talk is bad enough in human infants. In mechanical babies it is sometimes more than a fellow feels able to put up with.

And that's what "Little Blowhard" is—a mechanical baby. He is only our air conditioning machine, but, as pampered cats and dogs sometimes come to believe they are human beings, so it is with "Little Blowhard."

No one has bothered to tell him he isn't a person and certainly he acts more and more like a person as he gets older. One of the big differences between machines and people is that you are supposed to be able to predict better what machines will do.

Tested by this standard, "Little Blowhard" has moved over and joined the human race. Nobody can tell for sure what he will do next. He has a personality all of his own—stubborn and proudful and like most children, he responds to praise more quickly than to punishment.

For eight months of the year "Little Blowhard" does lazily and uselessly in his window corner, careless of mankind. He is strictly a hot weather fighter. In June he begins to huff and puff, warming up for his battle against the summer heat. By July, his metal is an fine kettle, and he is the king of what we call our "keep cool room."

"Blow, Little Blowhard," says my wife, Frances, and he begins to puff and sputter.

"Oh, come now, you can do better than that," Frances coaxes. And so, put upon his mettle, "Little Blowhard" blows and blows, until we have a semi-Arctic glow in the room.

It is silly, I suppose, for a man to be jealous of a machine. But "Little Blowhard" will do anything for my wife, absolutely nothing for me. If I turn him off, he keeps blowing cool air. If I turn him on, he sulks in silence, sneering at me through his little brown ventilator as if to say, "Look at who wants to be air conditioned now; You certainly meet all kinds in this type of work."

Naturally, this burns me up. But what is even more galling than his disdain for me is the way he shows off for neighbors. All one has to do is pat him on his little brown head and say, "Well, how's 'Little Blowhard' today—and the vain little smart alec will blow out a fuse trying to create a cold wave."

He blew out two fuses that way in one evening last week, bragging to neighbors. The next day he wouldn't even take a deep breath for me. I got so mad I hauled and kicked him, and Frances came in and caught me.

"You do that just one more time, Rover," she said, "and you may force me to decide between keeping you or 'Little Blowhard.' If you do, you know what the choice will be—in this weather."

The other evening Frances and I sat in "the keep cool room" and talked about the possibility of retiring to Florida in the far, far future. I asked her whether, when the time came, she would want to take "Little Blowhard" along.

"I would if he behaves himself," she said loudly. "My, isn't it getting a bit warm in here?"

The soft mechanical purring sound in the corner immediately changed to a frantic, "clankety clankety clank; clankety clank."

A few minutes later I looked at "Little Blowhard" and saw an icicle forming on his ventilator. Then the lights went out. The hard-working little rascal had blown another fuse trying to show what a good boy he was.

I guess, wherever we go we'll have to take "Little Blowhard" along. He's become one of the family.

Salvage Work On Old Warship Moves Ahead

TROMSOE, Norway (U.P.)—After an unprecedented hard winter one of the world's most peculiar salvage works was resumed here. The salvage company, Hoevding Skipsopphugging A-S, began by bringing to the surface four of the biggest guns from the former German battleship Tirpitz. The guns, each weighing 150 tons, had been buried in six meters of mud on the bottom of Tromsoe Fjord off the island of Kvaløya (Whale Island).

By using a German floating crane—the only one in Scandinavia capable of taking up to 200 tons—they were moved to a rock-bottomed part of the fjord, where they will remain till it has been decided what to do with them.

Sunk By RAF
The Tirpitz was sunk in the fjord Nov. 12, 1944, by British planes after an earlier attempt by two British midget submarines in other equipment have also been taken from the hull and sold.

1986 GOAL
A painting of the Tirpitz which was found was given to the Royal Norwegian air force, which presented it to the RAF as a tribute to the British pilots who bombed and sank the ship.

The salvage company estimates that 40,000 tons of steel plates are still left, and they do not expect work to be concluded before 1956. Huge quantities of ammunition still left in the wreck have been a great problem, although only minor mishaps have occurred so far.

One of the most difficult operations was to bring the guns to the surface. When the Tirpitz sank the cannon towers were flung deep into the mud. The steel-plated towers were built to withstand great explosions, and the divers had much difficulty in blowing them up to get the guns free.

Serving as a lighter to bring the scrap steel from the wreck to nearby Tromsoe is another former man-of-war, the Norwegian frigate Aalesund. When salvage operations are completed, the Aalesund will be scrapped.

So far 16,000 tons of steel have been broken up and sold to Norwegian iron works, to plants in the Ruhr district, and to the Swedish Bofors company. Electric pumps, 60,000 meters of electric cable and

Sixth Big Scale Gamma-Globulin Campaign Rushed

BRISTOL, Va. (UP)—Medical authorities rushed plans today to launch the nation's six mass inoculation to fight a polio outbreak that has stricken 43 persons in this Virginia-Tennessee area since June 18 killing two of them.

Dr. James Suter, health officer for Washington County, Va., said the inoculation of the 15,000 children under 10 years old here and in Sullivan County, Tenn., will begin Wednesday if a promised shipment of gamma globulin arrives in time.

He said $3,000 of the 106,000 cubic centimeters of gamma globulin allotted to the two counties will be given children on the Virginia side of the state line which bisects this city because Washington County's polio outbreak is more severe than Sullivan County's.

Jaycees Win First Game Of Championship Play-Offs

Allen Gets Credit For Opening Tilt

Walker Lee Allen pitched the Jaycees into a 1-0 lead in the city Little League championship playoffs yesterday by taking a 10-1 victory over the Kiwanians.

Backed up by a nine-hit attack, Allen had perfect control throughout the contest. The young right-handed ace did not allow a Kiwanian to reach base via the walk route, and set twelve batters down on the third strike.

After spotting a 1-0 advantage to the Kiwanians, the Jaycees came back in the third inning to push four runners across the plate and put the game on ice. Sonny Hodges and Rick Saive walked to lead off the frame. Buddy Murray quickly loaded the sacks as he worked Kiwanis pitcher Billy Cox for another base on balls.

Dick Nobles singled at that point to score Hodges and tie the score at 1-1. Allen reached base on a fielder's choice as Saive was cut down at the plate. Arthur Andrews then singled to push Murray and Nobles home. Jasper Tripp grounded out to the first baseman with Allen coming in to score the fourth tally.

The Kiwanians had taken the lead in the first inning with a single run. Successive singles by Bobby Edwards, Cox, and Jimmie Rogers produced the run.

The Jaycees came back with a single tally in the fourth, and scored four more in the fifth. A single run in the sixth finished the scoring for the afternoon.

This was the first of a three of five game series to determine the league champion. The second game will be played this afternoon at 5 p.m.

Marciano Tries For Hand Speed

By JACK CUDDY
GROSSINGER, N. Y. (UP) — Trainer Charley Goldman said today, "Hand speed is what we'll concentrate on this time."

The attempt to speed up Rocky Marciano's punches will feature his training here for the Sept. 24 defense of his heavyweight crown against Roland LaStarza.

Why? "Because LaStarza is a young feller with very fast hands for a heavyweight," Charley explained. "That's what impressed us most about him when he fought Rocky back in 1950. That and his toughness."

Marciano won a disputed split decision over LaStarza that night. "It was too close for comfort," said the gnome-like trainer with the first-battered nose.

Is Goldman really concerned about the September fight at New York's Polo Grounds? "LaStarza is the only opponent of Rocky's I ever really worried about," he said. "I didn't know what most of the others could do against Rocky, and I figured he couldn't take care of them with his punch. But I know what LaStarza can do against him. And I know Rocky had him on the canvas but he got up and made it awful close."

Champion and trainer have been here at this swanky resort in the Catskills for a week now. Thus far, Rocky has confined his conditioning to long walks in the mountains "to toughen up."

He will begin running on Thursday and sparring about Aug. 7. They are quartered now in a guest house known as "Millionaire Cottage." On Thursday they will shift to their old cottage at Grossinger Airport, where the training will be done in a hangar.

As Charley loafed in a big folding canvas chair on the porch today, Rocky came out of the cottage and joined him.

Did the champion share Goldman's worries about LaStarza? "Did he expect a hard fight? "Yes, I do," he said frankly. "He gave me a lot of trouble in our first fight. He's got a bad style — hard to open up. And when you open up yourself, he tries to nail you with counter-punches. He's young and takes a good punch."

He recalled his best previous season when he won 10 in a row to finish the 1949 season with the Phils. He had 17 victories and the best earned-run average for a right hander in the league.

"I was going every third or fourth day then, and my arm never felt better," he said. "I told Charley that I felt more loose last night because I had worked Saturday, even though I was knocked out."

Dressen was torn between a relation over the best job yet by Meyer and anger over the pitch by Cub right hander Bob Rush that felled Dodger outfielder Carl Furillo. Furillo wasn't seriously hurt, but he won't play today because Dressen wants to rest him.

"One of these things could ruin us in the pennant race, if the umpires don't make the pitchers cut it out," Dressen said. "What else can you think about a pitcher when he is tagged for a home run and starts throwing at the next batter?"

Furillo followed Roy Campanella to the plate in the second inning. Campanella had drilled his 24th homer of the season into the left field seats. The first pitch by Rush was high and inside, over Furillo's head. Then he was felled by a blow which struck the top of his protective helmet.

Rush said his control was "a little off" because he had been pitching hard in this game for the first time after being laid up with a sore shoulder.

Cub Manager Phil Cavarretta said Rush merely pitched Furillo high and tight and had no intention of "dusting him off."

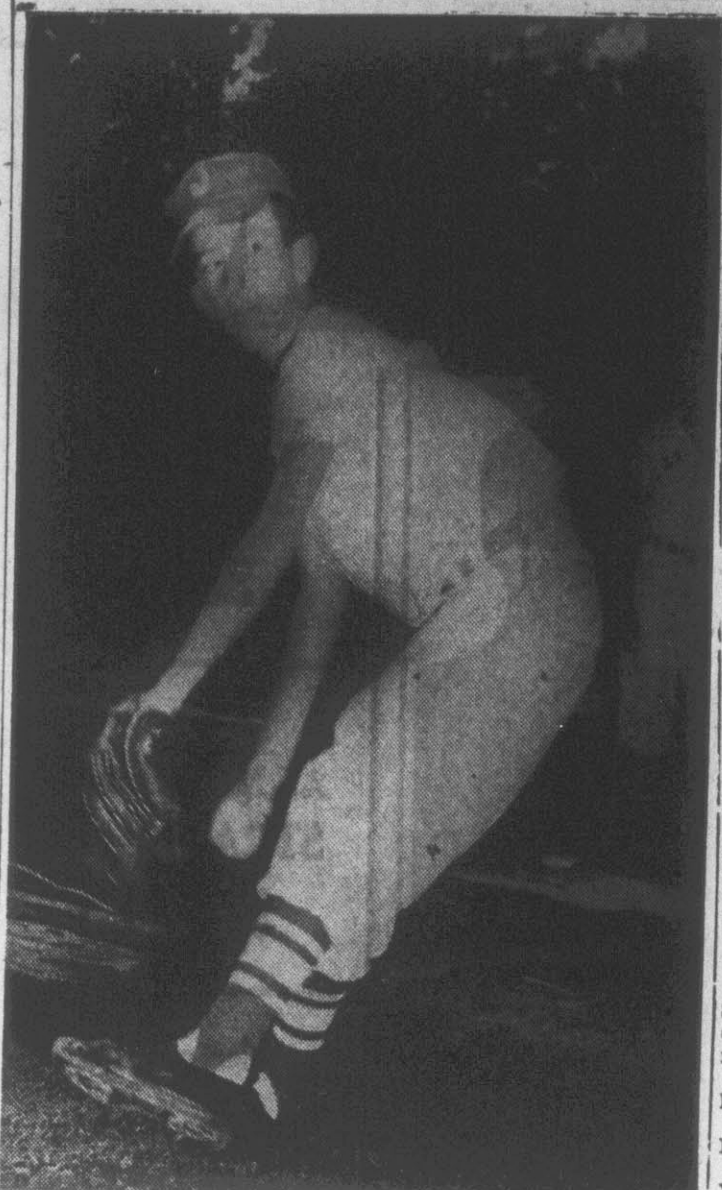

The victory put the Brooks 3 1-2 games in front of idle Milwaukee. Campy's homer was the only run Meyer really needed as he turned in his eighth victory against four defeats. In the ninth inning Meyer got in his worst trouble when the Cubs put two men on with one out, but Jim Hughes relieved and nailed the next two batters to clinch the win which was Meyer's eighth in a row over his old Cub teammates.

Seixas, defending champion, topped fellow Philadelphia Stewart McCracken, 6-1, 6-2, and Traber eliminated Jeff Arnold, of Coral Gables, Fla., 6-1, 6-4, in Monday's opening day play.

Meyer Pitches Brooklyn To 3-0 Win Over Chicago

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (UP) — Pitcher Russ Meyer finally has convinced Brooklyn Manager Charley Dressen that he needs more work to be a consistent winner — and from now on he'll get it.

The fiery right hander says the big reason for his nine-strikeout, five-hit, 9-0 victory over the Cubs Monday night was "that I got knocked out of the box on Saturday."

"I had better stuff last night than in any of my last four starts," Meyer said. "I like to work often. My arm stiffens up, or I don't have control when I have a long time between starts."

He recalled his best previous season when he won 10 in a row to finish the 1949 season with the Phils. He had 17 victories and the best earned-run average for a right hander in the league.

"I was going every third or fourth day then, and my arm never felt better," he said. "I told Charley that I felt more loose last night because I had worked Saturday, even though I was knocked out."

Jaycee Members Are Working On Regional Tourney

Members of the Greenville Junior Chamber of Commerce are now at work planning the program for the Region V Little League baseball tournament to be held at the Elm Street Park August 17-20, according to Tournament Chairman Lester Turnage.

At present the Jaycees are soliciting advertisements for the souvenir programs. Turnage stresses the importance of selling the ads, for money is needed to make the affair a big success. Any profits made from the event will be turned over to the local Little League program.

The Jaycees are expecting over 500 out-of-state guests each day of the regional playoffs. All available rooms in the city will be needed to house the guests.

To entertain the visitors while the ball games are not being played, the sponsors have lined up a lunch luncheon at the Greenville Golf and Country Club. Fathers of the players will be offered the facilities of the club, comments the tourney head.

Mrs. Dorothy Edwards is sponsoring a coke party for the mothers of the players.

Eight state champions will be playing in the local tournament to see who will represent Region V in the Little League World Series in Williamsport, Pa., later in August. Making up the local field will be teams from North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, North and South Florida, Tennessee and Kentucky.

East Carolina college has offered dormitory space to house the boys on the visiting teams, as well as the services of the college dining hall.

Sala Loses On Split Decision

NEW YORK (UP)—Ring veteran Lee Sala today blamed his surprise loss to young Randy Sandys on a fractured left thumb and asked for a re-match with the promising Harlem middleweight as soon as the injury heals.

The 22-year old Sandys received a split decision over the 26-year old Sala, of Donora, Pa., in their televised 10-round bout Monday night at Brooklyn's Eastern Parkway Arena.

With cheering thousands, marching bands, and official speeches, it'll be the biggest celebration New York has staged for an athlete since it welcomed golf star Bobby Jones home from a similar triumph 23 years ago.

The 41-year old Hogan, who won the U. S. Open title and the Masters crown this year in addition to the British Open for a "grand slam" rivaling Jones', will be accompanied through the celebration by his wife, Valerie.

Valerie also was riding in a car with her husband that fateful night four years ago when a crash nearly ended his career.

Since that accident, Hogan has staged one of the most astounding comebacks in sports history to be acclaimed by many experts as the greatest golfer of all time.

Hogan Welcomed In New York

NEW YORK (UP)—The big town goes all out today in a gigantic "welcome home" celebration for golf king Ben Hogan.

The mighty mile from Texas, who scored one of the most dramatic and amazing triumphs in sports history this month when he won the British Open golf championship in Scotland, will be the central figure in a ticker-tape parade up Broadway and a reception at City Hall.

With cheering thousands, marching bands, and official speeches, it'll be the biggest celebration New York has staged for an athlete since it welcomed golf star Bobby Jones home from a similar triumph 23 years ago.

The 41-year old Hogan, who won the U. S. Open title and the Masters crown this year in addition to the British Open for a "grand slam" rivaling Jones', will be accompanied through the celebration by his wife, Valerie.

Valerie also was riding in a car with her husband that fateful night four years ago when a crash nearly ended his career.

Since that accident, Hogan has staged one of the most astounding comebacks in sports history to be acclaimed by many experts as the greatest golfer of all time.

GIs On Patrol Behind Red Lines Found Beer

By AL KAFF
United Press Staff Correspondent
CENTRAL FRONT, Korea (UP) — Eight dusty soldiers blinked their eyes in amazement.

Patrolling deep inside Chinese territory, the sweat-soaked infantrymen stumbled across a cache of American beer, abandoned when the Communists drove south last week.

It was a muggy, 90-degree afternoon and their mouths were dry as the Sahara. They pulled out their bayonets, stabbed holes in the cans and for a brief moment imagined they were back in the corner taproom off Main Street.

"We found enough beer for every man and 20 more left over," said Sgt. Donald J. Fuller, 21, of Brownling, Mo. "All of us came back with two or three cans stuck in our pockets."

"The beer was hot," said Pvt. Ivan J. Sargent, 22, of 363 Monticello St., Clarksville, W. Va. "But it was wet."

When 20,000 Chinese attacked the western hinge, a week ago, American artillerymen in a small valley had just enough time to pull out with some of their howitzers before the Chinese closed in.

They left their beer behind. United Nations patrols now scout that valley by day, blowing up abandoned military supplies and hunt-

Forty-Seven Cases Heard In City Court Yesterday

City Recorder's Court disposed of 47 court cases in the four and one-half hours in which it was in session yesterday.

The heavy overload was due in part to a number of cases which had been held over from the past several weeks when City Court was being held only one day a week instead of the regular three times weekly.

James Clifton Taylor, Negro man, confronted with 12 charges of worthless checks and one count of larceny of a watch was given a 12 month sentence to be served on the road.

The case against Mrs. Elmer Cox, charging failure to pay tax fare was not pressed.

Assault on female: Joe Baker paid $57 to Georgie Littleton and pay $25 less costs and be placed on good behavior for 12 months; Raymond White, paid $15 and ordered not to harm, molest wife; Robert Lee Cherry, paid $15.

David McCallum, charged with larceny of chickens on two counts was given a 30-day sentence at the County home in each case.

Non-support: Joe May, 30 days, them were not even finished. We found billfolds and pictures of girl friends right where the guys had left them.

The patrol brought back these pathetic mementos of the Chinese advance so Army officials can start the grim job of tracing missing men.

The case charging Arthur Woolen with assault with a deadly weapon, prosecuting witness would not testify and the witness was taxed with the payment of cost of court; Sidney Scott was given 60 days suspended upon behavior for a period of 12 months.

No probable cause was found in the case charging James Madison with auto larceny.

Benjamin B. Taylor, was given a six month probation sentence and ordered not to go into the Garris Supply Company for three years and pay into the court for drunk and disorderly conduct, $15.

Carris Nobles was not guilty of assault as was Charly Best.

Possession of lottery tickets; James Stalon was fined $5. He had four in his possession at the time he was arrested and booked for the assault on a female charge.

Willie Clark, Jr., was not guilty of assault, but was given a 30 days suspended road sentence upon payment of $15 for disorderly conduct.

Non-support: Leroy Smith, ordered to pay $10 per week support of family to begin on the third day of August.

Raymond G. Ippock charged with being drunk and damage to property was given a 30-day suspended sentence of $10 and make payment to Pitt Memorial Hospital for damages there.

David Woolard, assault on female, paid court costs.

Mary Walker, charged with assault: was given six months suspended upon payment of $25 less court costs and be of good behavior for two years and placed on probation for two years.

Beatrice Worsley, charged with assaulting her husband with a deadly weapon was given 30 days suspended on payment of $25 to Pitt Memorial Hospital and pay $50 to the court, and be on good behavior for a period of two years. The arrest was the outgrowth of a week-end cutting spree in which the woman knifed her husband in several places requiring 87 stitches to close the man's wounds.

Robert Lee Jordan, charged with drunk and disorderly conduct was given 90 days suspended upon payment of $50 and placed on good behavior and ordered not to enter the premises of the West End Tea Room for 12 months.

Driving drunk: Alonzo R. Adams, paid $100 and costs and ordered to be of good behavior for one year and the court recommended that his operator's license be revoked for a term of 12 months.

Peter E. Rasberry, non-support, six months suspended on payment of $22.50 per week on support of his family, (rent included).

George Edwards, drunk, paid $10.

South Greenville Park Fund Is Nearing Its $3,000 Goal

The South Greenville Park Project has received donations amounting to $2,587 toward their goal of $3,000, according to a report given at a meeting of the Recreation Commission last night.

A midget baseball field will soon be ready for use, and a picnic shelter has been constructed at the area from material given to the project by the Utilities Commission. It is hoped by the commission that the greater portion of the project will be complete and ready for a full summer's use next year.

Teen-age dances have started again and are now being held each Friday night on the tennis courts at Elm Street Park. Lighting for this past week's dance was paid out of Mrs. Carrie West's teen-age funds.

For the past five weeks the Recreation Commission has been working with a group of people interested in square dancing. There were over 150 persons who gathered this past Wednesday night to work on the program! At least 40 of the persons present took an active part in the activities.

Recreation Director Warren Carroll reports that the summer playground program is better organized this summer, and it has a bigger variety of activities than in past years. Carroll comments that the actual playground participation and interest of the colored group is much better than the white areas, and he adds that there has been a marked improvement in their program.

Tournament time for the Greenville Pony League is about to get underway. A double elimination tournament, part to be played here and part in Rocky Mount, will start July 23. The regional tournament

TEEN TALK

BY VIVIAN BROWN

AP Newsfeatures
If you are between the ages of 17 and 19, chances are you are married, engaged or that man is just around the bend in the road. One out of every three girls in your age group has set up house-keeping and marriages in the earlier years are on the upswing. So if you haven't been tagged, don't despair. That man might have his eye on you right this minute.

Since there are so many teenagers saying "I Do" these days, perhaps some pointers on how to behave at that wedding might be in order. After all, if girls are putting down their school books one day and picking up the wedding bouquet the next day, there isn't very much time to brief up on bridal techniques. So here are some suggestions for teen-age brides-to-be:

1. Be natural. Don't try to make yourself look older or more sophisticated. Your husband-to-be would like you to look like the girl he proposed to. The day before the wedding is your personality.
2. Set up an intensive soap-and-water routine well in advance of the wedding day so that your trousseau is in spotless order. This is particularly important if you have a small budget for bridal finery, and must wear some of your old clothes.
3. Your complexion should be on a three-times-a-day washing schedule so you won't be bothered with last minute skin problems. Watch your diet at this time. You don't want to break out in a "sweats" rash, the result of too many sundaes and sodas.

COOKIE IS A MILLINER—Cpl. Joseph F. Joyce, USMC, a baker at U. S. Navy Annex, Arlington, Va., finishes a hat he designed for Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower, wife of the President.

4. Shampoo your hair as often as possible, and if you are the type who looks better with a permanent wave, don't wait until the last minute to get it. Do it several weeks before the wedding if there is time, and be sure to shampoo it a few times before the wedding for a more natural look. Wear the coiffure your sweet-heart remembers. Don't experiment with new hairdos now.

5. Choose a dress that is right for you. It is fine to read the ads, but don't select a wedding dress merely because it looks well on the model or the sales girl recommends it. Take your mother or close friend with you so that you will get expert advice from some one who knows you. Young girls should stick to simple gowns, rather than fancy overwhelming outfits.

6. Be practical about your trousseau. If you have a house to furnish, and the income is to be small, select your garments sensibly, so that they may see service later.

7. Jewelry and accessories should be selected carefully. Long dripping earrings, big elaborate necklaces and jangling bracelets are inappropriate for a bride. If you plan to wear jewelry, stick to simple pieces. Pearls are traditional for brides, unless you happen to have a jewel bag of diamonds in the family safe.

8. Your nails should be lovely at this time, because your hands will be up for inspection for quite a while after the ceremony as your wedding ring admired. If your nails have been neglected, start immediately to get them in shape by scrubbing them with a soap brush and using the emery board to smooth little snags. Be sure to have a good professional manicure the day before the wedding, unless you are an expert with polish.

9. You shouldn't need much make up. Powder and lipstick should suffice for a teen-ager whose natural complexion may be heightened anyway by the excitement of the event. Whatever happens don't use mascara or eyebrow pencil, unless you know how to use them so artfully that they merely enhance your looks without making you look made up.

10. Get plenty of rest for at least a week before your wedding day. You'll need the stamina to withstand all the last minute confusion.

Weapons Clues To Civilizations

WASHINGTON (U.P.) — You can tell a lot about a man by the weapons he leaves behind. Especially if that was 11,000 years ago.

It was a crude spearhead that resolved an age-old controversy in the Southwest. Until its discovery, geologists had been unable to establish whether the Folsom and Yuma peoples were contemporaries, or how much time lapsed between the two civilizations.

The walls of a small valley in the Staked Plains of eastern New Mexico bear evidence of life around a small lake. Here a stone spearhead beside the bones of a now extinct bison identifies the Folsom period. The next stratum contains no human or animal remains. Another spearhead somewhat cruder follows in a later period marking the Yuma culture. A recent report of the study of the area released by the Smithsonian Institution indicates that probably several thousand years separated the Folsom and Yuma man.

There are no natural harbors on the Gold Coast of Africa.

Doctors Act Promptly As Polio Found At Boy Scout Jamboree

By UNITED PRESS
The discovery of a polio case among 50,000 Boy Scouts encamped at Newport Beach, Calif., for their national Jamboree led doctors today to isolate a "suspect" case and inoculate 11 exposed youths with gamma globulin.

Meanwhile, reports circulated in central Illinois that some children may have received injections of gamma globulin by "gate crashing" a mass-inoculation program in Macon County.

And health authorities at Marquette, Mich., and the border communities of Bristol, Tenn., and Bristol, Va., prepared to begin community-wide inoculation programs Wednesday.

Boy Scout Kirk Mathews, 12, of Gallup, N.M., was hospitalized Monday at the Jamboree with a mild, non-paralytic case of polio. His condition is good.

Orange County (Calif.) Health Officer Edward Lee Russell reported that another "suspect" case had been placed in the county hospital communicable diseases ward. Eleven other Scouts, who had been exposed to Mathews, were given gamma globulin.

Russell said there was an "adequate" supply of GG on hand "just in case" of an epidemic outbreak at the Jamboree. However, Scout leaders said the health of the Scouts was "excellent and far beyond expectations."

At Decatur, Ill., county seat of Macon County, officials were startled to learn they had administered 21,111 injections of GG last Friday and Saturday. They had expected to give 19,000.

Dr. A. C. Baxter, Decatur city health superintendent, said he was convinced some children who were not residents of the county used false names and addresses to get GG.

Dr. C. Elliott Bell, president of the county Medical Society, and Robert Aiz, who directed the inoculations, disagreed with Baxter, saying that population estimates may have been inaccurate, leading officials to the false conclusion that only 19,000 children were eligible.

But Bell said that perhaps a "very negligible number" of children were brought into Macon County from other areas for "boot-leg" shots. He said a few may have lied about their ages. Gamma globulin, due to a shortage of the anti-polio serum, is restricted to children under 10 in the mass inoculation programs.

Despite the injections at Decatur, four new cases were reported, two of them among children who had received GG. Two cases were also reported at Caldwell County, N.C., which recently completed injections. Montgomery, Ala., which also conducted a GG program, reported two new cases—Nos. 94 and 95—after five polio-free days.

Five cases suddenly cropped up in Avery County, N.C., which had been free of the disease, and authorities feared the county may become a hotbed spot. Minnesota reported 12 new cases Monday, and Iowa 10.

The Juniper Tree

By FAITH BALDWIN

Having imbibed unwisely while attending a convention away from home, successful businessman David Barton awakens unsteadily in a small hotel room. His slumber had been disturbed by bad dreams, but bad dreams had been usual with him ever since the bitterness of grief had so completely engulfed him. It was the grief, he told himself, which caused him to drink too much. He who'd always been a sober fellow—

CHAPTER TWO

BARTON roused himself, and took the telephone and called room service. Suddenly he recalled the room number. "David Barton," he said, "in 41. Will you please send up—" He broke off, indecisive again. What had it been last night? He added, "Hold on a minute," and got himself across the room, to a round table. A tray stood on it, the last, he assumed, of a succession; in a bowl, water which had once been ice; in a glass, colored dregs.

He took the glass and smelled it; and sickened. But he must have help; he was going to telephone home.

Returning to the telephone buzzing empty, he roused the switchboard. Room service had, naturally, disconnected. When he reached it, a voice inquired unenthusiastically, "our order, please?"

"This is 41 again. Bourbon and water. Yes, for one. Please hurry. I'm checking out."

The boy came, put down the tray, was tipped, and answered a question. "No, sir, the dining room closes at nine, the grill's open till midnight."

There was a bathroom. Dave took fresh things from his bag, and a toilet kit. The other business suit had been pressed and carefully packed. He showered and shaved. The face in the dingy mirror was his; bad color; thinish, which wasn't becoming. His eyes were red-rimmed.

With a towel clutched about him he returned to sit on the bed. He'd dress in due time. First, the drink, which he'd taken to the night table and left there and which, he'd been aware all along, waited for him. It was incredibly difficult to swallow. He did so, and waited. After a struggle, it decided to stay down. He swallowed again, it was easier. After that, no trouble at all.

He took the telephone and asked for long distance. The operator spoke in a slow drawl. He gave her his home number and waited, taking the glass in his free hand. Then he heard the crisp accents of a New England operator.

He and Emily, George and Maria lived in a small, lively city with a busy waterfront. Pete and Polly lived nearby. George was his brother, and Pete was Emily's. Pete lived in a suburb but he and George lived in town, their houses similar: Georgian, whitewashed brick, with captains' or widows' walks. They stood less than three blocks apart, on wide streets, edged with ancient maples. Between houses and sidewalks grass, and more trees. He'd been born in his house, the elder of two boys, and George also. But George's house had belonged to a bachelor great-uncle.

In summer George took his holidays at the place in Maine where Maria and the kids stayed from school closing to re-opening. But he, Em and Tim went to the river cottage. Tim loved the river. This summer, Em had advanced excuses why they shouldn't go. They hadn't, except to open the cottage over one May weekend. Then they'd lent it to friends, for weeks or longer. Em said she couldn't be spared, many of her various committee members were absent, and the autumn drives had to be planned. Besides, she'd rather keep occupied. Suppose they tried it in town, this year? They could go to the cottage now and then, when it wasn't being borrowed.

He'd told her he wouldn't take a vacation this summer. Em had let that slide; she said she understood. Perhaps later?

"I'm ready with your call, Mr. Barton," the operator said.

"Em? I'm sorry, I meant to telephone. Yes, I left there a couple of days ago, thought I'd take it in easy stages. I was tired, I holed up here last night." He tried to remember, failed, fortuitously looked down at the smudged glass of the tabletop. There was a card under it. "Place called Jason."

But she'd know, the operator would tell her.

"I'm fine, slept most of the day; in fact, just got up, and had a shower. I'll get something to eat and start back. Why shouldn't I drive at night?"

Ask a foolish question, get a foolish answer. He'd stuck his neck out on that one. Em told him why, exactly, and then she asked a direct reply but, unlike his wife's, it was irritable.

"Yes, I've been drinking. I drank at the convention and so did a lot of others, after meetings. Also I've been drinking since. But now I'm sober."

He listened and then said, "For heaven's sake, Em, stop nagging!"

"This was unjust. She never nagged. Fine way to treat her. Em was a good wife; she'd been a good mother, the best. And he hadn't forgotten Pete's saying, unhappily, after Tim's birth "Not again, Dave. Not ever. Poor kid, it will be rugged, telling her. But you have your son."

Now he said: "I'm sorry, Em. Dear, I'm all right. I'll eat and check out. No, I couldn't sleep, not possibly. Please don't worry. Call George, tell him I'm on my way. I'll call you, along the road, sometime tomorrow. By, Em."

But when he'd dressed, repacked, and sent for a boy to take the bag and leave it in the lobby check-room, he couldn't face the grill room—small, hot and crowded, certainly; and with, very likely a jukebox. He said: "Take the bag on down, and ask the cashier to make out my bill but hold it for a room service charge. I'll have something sent up from the grill."

He ordered: hot soup, chicken sandwiches "very little butter, no lettuce or mayonnaise," and a HOT NEWS FROM LEIPZIG—Flames consume a news stand in the old market in Leipzig as some 80,000 demonstrated against the East German Communist regime. bourbon and water. When food and drink came he could contemplate them without revulsion. He ate and drank, slowly, reading an old New York paper which he found in an unemptied trash basket. And when the waiter had come again and gone, he went to the lobby, turned in his key at the desk, stood by the cashier's cage.

The bill was sizable, but he had plenty of cash with him, a man who always, despite warnings, carried a good deal. He hadn't needed it at the convention, except for tipping. His cheque was as good as the firm he and George had inherited. Wholesale drugs. The 17 grandfather had founded the firm after he ceased to practice medicine. Their father had inherited it and his sons after him. It was a pattern. Private day school, then Daleway and after that the university, and a degree in pharmacy too, as background and preparation for the good, easy groove.

A fine business, it provided a living for many people, directly and indirectly. It afforded more for himself, George and their families. It was expensive educating George's three daughters, including dancing, music, riding and the usual sports. It had educated Tim at the day school and Daleway, where the thread broke and the pattern went wrong.

Call Again For Cotton Records

The Pitt County PMA office reminded farmers again today to fill out questionnaire cards on cotton production and return the cards to the office as soon as possible.

The cards sent to farmers concerning cotton production in 1953 requests farmers to indicate only whether or not they planted cotton in 1953, and to fill in their farm serial number and signature.

A spokesman for the office explained that information is being gathered in the event cotton acreage allotments are in effect in 1954.

After cards are received from farmers, the local PMA office will measure the number of acres of cotton under cultivation by each farmer so the exact acreage can be used in arriving at cotton allotments. The 1953 cotton acreage, the card said, "will be measured right away at no cost to you."

Not As Hot

Whether it seemed like it or not to you, it really didn't get as hot here yesterday as the day before.

It remained to be seen, however, if today's temperature will rival the torrid 104 reached for the same date a year ago.

Yesterday's high was 92, compared with 94 the previous day, and 99 99 a year ago. The low was 69, 61 degree off last year's low mark of 75 for the same date, and at 8 a. m. today, it was 75, compared with 85 a year ago.

No rain fell during the 24 hour period beginning at 8 a. m. yesterday.

China Calls For Additional Grain

HONG KONG (AP)—The Chinese Communist regime has called upon its farmers to produce more grain and its consumers to eat less. This was to enable China to build up a grain stockpile necessary to its Five Year industrialization plan, according to the party newspaper, the Peiping People's Daily.

Peiping also told the farmers not to divert any more acreage from grain to cotton.

Government cotton prices have been cut and grain prices boosted. The Reds have subsidized cotton during the last three years and now anticipate some trouble in reversing the trend.

ANTS

There's a new and better way to kill ants. It's called Roach Film. When applied to any surface with the built-in cap-applier, it leaves a hard, dry, clean, invisible film. The film can't harm or soil any surface; but when ants touch it their legs become paralyzed and they die in two hours. A single application remains effective for months. You never see it, but it sure does get rid of ants and roaches! Roach Films is available at Belk-Tyler's, 3rd Floor. —Adv

Soviet Offers Trade In New Cold War Tactics

By PHIL NEWSOM
United Press Foreign News Editor

Russia has opened an effective new front in its cold war against the United States.

It is dangling before the eyes of hungry West European and other nations the promise of juicy markets in Russia, the satellites and Red China.

Three new Russian-engineered trade deals were disclosed last week. More will follow.

Announcements last week covered France, Greece and the Netherlands. Earlier it had been known that the Reds were negotiating with Argentina and were near a deal.

The deal with France was especially interesting.

Economically, France is the sick lady of Europe.

In June she lost a whopping $56,000,000 on foreign trade. She has plunged steadily toward bankruptcy since the middle of 1952, and now has only enough gold reserves to sustain about another 10 months of similar losses.

Drastic curbs on imports have failed to halt the drain.

Ironically, the industrious French people have plenty of gold but it is out of reach of the government, and will continue to be so until the government does something to bolster the people's own confidence in the French franc.

At any rate, it is obvious that the French face a crisis and need to do something.

Under her agreement with Russia, the two sides agree to an exchange of goods totalling nearly $60,000,000 in the first year, divided equally.

France will sell cargo ships up to 5,000 tons, textiles, fruit and transport equipment, all classified as "non-strategic."

Russia will sell France coal, corn, oil, grain and metals.

The Russian deal, of course, will not cure French economic ills. The entire first year total is only a little more than France's June deficit.

But that deal is only one of several. A $28,000,000 contract was negotiated with Red China recently by private French interests. In April an $8,500,000 agreement was signed with Czechoslovakia, and a previous trade pact was made for Polish goods.

The new deals are not by any means the full extent of Communist economic penetration.

A British mission is on the way home from Peking with contracts for two-way trade valued at around $36,000,000.

India is reported ready to enter a long-term agreement with Russia to import 1,000,000 tons of wheat annually for the next five years. Ceylon is considering a renewal of the trade agreement for sale of rubber to Red China in exchange for rice.

Russia's economic campaign is running hand in hand with her current peace offensive, designed to split the United States from her allies. The nations she has dealt with so far are especially vulnerable because each is operating now at a deficit.

Ice Age Pin-Up Girl Is Turned Up

WASHINGTON (UP)—An anthropologist may have discovered a veritable pin-up girl in Iran — one who walked the earth sometime during the last ice age.

Described as taller, slenderer, and fairer even than present day Norwegian women, she was a far cry from the grotesque Cro-Magnon and Neanderthal types so familiar in school text books. The amazon-like woman is believed to represent the earliest known member of the true human race.

Scientists offer this description of the female cave dweller from her skull alone, all that was located in an excavation under three levels of glacial gravel in Iran.

Other less well-preserved skulls also were discovered nearby and from these and relics found with the indicate that the people with whom the woman lived were primitive hunters and food gatherers.

Fortunately, head size is no indication of intelligence or modern women would be anxious of her ice age counterpart. The ancient skull is 100 cubic centimeters larger than the average for today's women.

Unsavory Record Is Catching Up

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The past of a not-too-friendly Indian has caught up with him.

Someone suggested naming a new stretch of western Pennsylvania highway after Chief Guyasuta. The state highway department investigated and decided the name wasn't appropriate.

The reason: Guyasuta roamed the American forests in Revolutionary times warring on the settlers and "collected scalps by the basketful."

Hint Wider Scope For Peace Parleys

By K. C. THALER
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON (UP)—Britain may favor broadening the post-armistice conference on Korea into a discussion of an overall Far East settlement with the Reds, authoritative sources disclosed today.

But there is one important qualification: Britain will make such a course dependent upon whether the Reds show good will and readiness for a settlement in the opening stages of the conference.

The British are discussing this question at present with the Commonwealth countries and with the United States, but have not yet reached a decision.

The chief argument in favor of widening the scope of the post-armistice conference on Korea into one dealing with other Far Eastern problems is that it might allow for more latitude in the negotiations.

Discussions also are in progress on the composition of the conference.

Britain wants to be represented, and the Commonwealth countries also have intimated their desire to be included. Australia or New Zealand, in addition to India, are said to want representation.

Officials here say that, once an armistice agreement is concluded on Korea, the United Nations General Assembly would be convened. The Assembly then will determine the date and place of the political conference.

Under the armistice agreement, the political conference is to be called within 90 days after the signing of the armistice. While Red China is expected to be a party to the talks, nothing have been heard thus far from Russia. Officials here said there have been no indications from Moscow to date indicating the Soviet would seek representation at the conference.

If Moscow raises the question it will cause considerable difficulty and probably very strong opposition from at least some of the Allies, including the United States.

British diplomats feel it will be difficult and not very practical to try to limit the projected post-armistice political conference to the single item of Korea.

The question of Red China's status and her admission to the United Nations is almost certain to come up, as is the question of Formosa. In the British view, therefore, it might thus prove more practical to throw open the discussion to other Far Eastern issues, including Indochina.

Navy Board Will Probe Tragedy

WHITING FIELD, Fla. (UP)—A Navy board of inquiry today opened a formal investigation of the crash of a Marine transport plane which killed 37 naval ROTC students and four crewmen.

The Navy appealed to everyone who witnessed the explosive crash late Friday night a short distance from the auxiliary airstrip here, where the R4Q Fairchild Packet transport had stopped for fuel.

High Finance Brought Down To Earth By Experienced Lender

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
WASHINGTON (UP)—I've always been interested in how to raise cash and influence bankers. Neither of these projects is too easy, but I bumped into a man (by appointment) who knows most of the answers.

His name is Arthur Richland, an experienced lender himself. He is head of a financial consultant company, with banks among his clients. He's one of the few men in finance I ever knew who doesn't fuss about the bulls and bears of the markets. To him, a bull is a beast which gnaws on grass in the pasture and a bear is an animal which smells out the berries in the woodland.

Richland is down to his earth in his reasoning. Incidentally, I pilfered the title of a book he has written called "How to Raise Cash and Influence Bankers," in my first paragraph.

"What many people don't realize about a loan," he said, "is that it must be repaid. A lot of times a well-dressed sophisticated applicant has to be told that before he can borrow a hatful, he must show when and whether he can pay up."

When you are after a loan, Richland's advice is to be prepared to tell the lender the truth. "He's a business man, and he'll find out anyhow," Richland said. "One thing that a banker dislikes is a surprise. If you are in trouble and need money, give the man all the facts. If he learns that you are that honest, he'll help you if you can show that you can pay back."

According to our expert, a banker decides on whether you can have a loan on a formula that works something like this:

First he assembles all of the facts and checks them. Some folks who want to put the arm on a bank are inaccurate in their facts, however unintentional.

"Then," said Richland, "the lender must analyze each element in the situation as it bears on the borrower's ability to pay. Then he adds up the 'pro' factors and subtracts the 'cons.' If the answer is okay, the loan is made."

(That reminds me of a remark once made to me by Michael MacDougal, a card detective. He said that "gamblers don't gamble.")

Our man's advice to the borrower is that he examine himself and answer these questions:

"Can I repay the money as agreed, without hurting the purpose for which I am borrowing it?"

"Do I need a short term or long term loan? The long term loan means that my credit must be better than if I need a short one."

Motorist Tests 'Speed Traps'

NEW YORK (UP)—An unidentified motorist was off on a nation-wide tour today to find out how badly American drivers are being victimized by "speed traps."

The "Mr. average driver" left here yesterday in a Buick test car. His name, and the year, model, color and license plates of the car, were not disclosed.

The trip was arranged by the American Automobile Association and Cars Magazine, a monthly publication.

"We are interested in complaints that innocent motorists have been victimized by traps allegedly designed simply to levy extra fines," said Arthur Unger, editor of Cars.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (UP)—Aluminum stocks declined a point or more today on the government's move to cancel contracts for the purchase of Canadian aluminum.

Aluminum Co. of America, which was to purchase 1,200,000,000 pounds of aluminum, sold down a full point and Aluminum Ltd. from whom the purchase was to be made fell 1-1/4 points.

Two rails and one oil provided the other market features. The rails: Central of Georgia up a point and Denver & Rio Grande at a point and 1/2 up 1-1/2, did not help the rail average which lost 1/4 cent. Rails used in the average were steady or slightly easier.

Deep Rock Oil gained a point while Amerasia was up nearly a point in an otherwise slightly easier oil market. Motors held steady or eased a bit after their drop yesterday. Electric Auto-Lite slipped to a new low in the auto equipment and Goodrich lost 1-2 in the tires.

The rest of the market was labeled a penny market with fluctuations, most of them downward, held to 1-1/2 cents or 25 cents each.

Asks FBI View Of Red Charges

WASHINGTON (UP)—Sen. Harry F. Byrd said today he has asked the FBI to confirm or deny J. E. Matthews' charge that Protestant ministers are the "largest single group" supporting Communism in America.

The Virginia Democrat, who previously demanded that Matthews support his charge or be branded as a "cheap demagogue," said he wrote FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover because Matthews implied in his controversial magazine article accusing the Protestant clergy that Hoover supported his accusation.

As a result of his charge, Matthews resigned under pressure from President Eisenhower as executive director of the Senate investigating subcommittee headed by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis.).

Meanwhile, McCarthy said criticism of Roy M. Cohn and G. David Schine, two of his subcommittee staff investigators, amounts to "an anti-Semitic movement." In making the statement to newsmen, McCarthy ignored the denunciation of "pure and arrant demagoguery" made by Sen. Herbert H. Lehman (D-N.Y.) following McCarthy's charge of "anti-Semitism" in a telecast Sunday night.

The furor over Matthews' article led to the resignations of the three Democratic members of McCarthy's subcommittee, who charged McCarthy with "one-man rule."

Last Celebration Of Coronation On River Thames

LONDON (UP)—The last celebration of the coronation of Elizabeth takes place Wednesday on the River Thames—the broad highway of England's history.

For several hours the placid river will relive some of the great days of its past, days before its place was usurped by other and swifter means of transportation.

Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh will review from the pier of the Royal Festival Hall a pageant of river craft ranging from 1013 A.D. to the proud little vessels which helped rescue the beleaguered British army at Dunkirk in 1940.

All types of river boats will be in the procession, which will travel the Thames from Greenwich to Westminster behind the naval barge "The Nore," accompanied by waterborne bands.

Constant Speed Big Factor In Saving Gas

CHICAGO (U.P.)—One of the nation's top drivers advises that smooth driving at constant speeds is a big factor in obtaining good gasoline mileage.

Les Viland, winner of the 1953 Mobilgas Economy Run, said fast starts and jerky driving costs more gasoline mileage to the average motorist than any other driving habit.

"Abrupt starts and an irregular driving pace cost more mileage because they slosh gasoline around in the carburetor and the car burns too rich a mixture," Viland said.

- Take These Tips
- Here are some tips Viland outlined for gasoline economy:
- 1—Drive at a steady pace and avoid excessive speed.
 - 2—No jack-rabbit starts and stops and eliminate jerky driving.
 - 3—Try to regulate your speed so that you pass lights while they're green and won't have to start and stop.
 - 4—Avoid long engine idling.
 - 5—Have your engine tuned for top efficiency.
 - 6—Don't use heavier lubricants than the owner's manual of your car specifies.
 - 7—For maximum gas mileage, shift quickly into second and third so you have the gasoline saving advantage of high gear driving.

Flying Pastor In Forced Landing

NEW YORK (UP)—The Rev. Marshall Milton of Roanoke Rapids, N. C., made a perfect landing with his light plane here yesterday—in the Great Kills Marine Park of Staten Island.

Police said the North Carolina pastor set his plane down when he feared he would crash into some of Manhattan's towering skyscrapers because of a heavy smog.

With him in the four-place Piper Cub were Mr. and Mrs. Alired Martin and a Mrs. Dunne, all of Roanoke Rapids. They had left North Carolina yesterday morning.

The Veterans Cooperative Club will meet tonight at the home of Chick Forbes, 1308 Ward St., at 8:15.

Mr. and Mrs. George Veiverton of this city spent the weekend in Baltimore and Philadelphia with relatives and friends.

Last Rites For Mrs. I. H. Bowles' Father

Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Bowles have returned from Martinsville and Roanoke, Va., where they attended the funeral of Mr. W. T. Merricks, father of Mrs. Bowles, who died a few days after he suffered a broken hip in a fall.

The Bowles were called to Virginia prior to the death of Mrs. Bowles' father.

Mr. Merricks, 95, was a retired farmer of near Chatham, Va., and is survived by eight children, a host of grand children, and one sister.

Flo Chadwick To Try Round-Trip Channel Splash

DOVER, England (UP)—Florence Chadwick churns through the chilly waters of the English Channel these days in search of the greatest cleanup of international prizes since Bobby Jones won everything worthwhile in Anglo-American golf 23 years ago.

The 35-year-old former San Diego, Calif., stenographer swam the 24-mile Catalina Channel off the California coast last September, and before this September rolls around hopes to swim:

1. The English Channel both ways non-stop—45 miles airline distance but closer to 125 miles as the currents meander.

2. The Turkish Dardanelles both ways non-stop—a total of only eight miles but filled with treacherous currents.

3. The Straits of Gibraltar—14 miles.

This is the time of year when fish in the channel move over to make room for humans lured by what is still the supreme accolade of long distance swimming—a channel conquest.

There are about 20 swimmers in Dover or nearby Folkestone training in wind-shipped waters colder than they have been for many years in July.

But the husky, bronzed Californian—a solid 155 pounds—is acknowledged queen of the pebbly beaches. And she is even given a good chance to beat all the men's as well as the women's records, if she gets a break.

"I've already swum the channel both ways," she said in a little hotel snug against the towering white cliffs of Dover. "So this time I'm after the records—all of them."

The England-to-France route is the tougher one and I'm going to start from here and head for Wissant in Normandy. If I get there in good shape, and I ought to, I'll start right back for Dover.

"It's probably my last year of record-breaking so I want to get in all the swim and all the marks. Then I can go back to the States and concentrate on sportsmen's shows and coaching, and leave the younger generation something to shoot at like Jones did in golf."

How About Whooping Cough?

ALLIANCE, Neb. (UP)—An Alliance family was relieved when the quarantine sign on their front door finally came down. One of the three children contracted measles and a little later the other two had the same disease. Then all three became ill with chickenpox—and the mumps.

They Talked About The Weather, In 1766, Too

—Efforts to beat the heat are as old as American summertime, according to records in the Colonial Williamsburg research files.

For example, there were the 18th century versions of air conditioning units advertised by an enterprising merchant in the July 25, 1766, Virginia Gazette. These devices, called "ventilators" and inserted in windows, actually were boxes enclosing bellows which drew air in and blew it out again. They provided a reasonable degree of comfort except, of course, for the able-bodied men needed to push the bellows.

Not everyone approved of letting in the summer breeze, especially at night. In his journal, the 18th century tutor Phillip Vickers Fithian said he kept his windows shut on summer nights panting, "to keep out 'dangerous dew.'"

The 18th century rules of decorum limited the amount of clothing people could shed for hot weather comfort, but a 1721 atlas reports that in Virginia ladies' gowns and gentlemen's jackets were fashioned of light weight materials in the summer-time.

Just Hot Air

There was difference of opinion as to just how hot these early American summers were. In 1705 the Virginia historian, Robert Beverly, wrote that complaints about the heat were unfair propaganda circulated by merchants from England who "go sweltering about in their thick cloaths all the Summer."

Some years later plantation owner William Byrd confessed to an English earl that "we have about three months that impatient people call warm." He added, however, that his lordship would find them cool enough for a pair of blankets, and perhaps a comfortable counterpane into the bargain.

On the other hand, there was the English gentleman who warned that in the colonies "the heat is beyond your conception."

Colonial summers never got hot enough to fry an egg on the sidewalk—but only because there were no paved sidewalks. The Virginia Gazette reports that on August 9, 1766, "Colonial Tayloe's gardner" by way of experiment put an egg on a stone pedestal in the garden and ate it four hours later "sufficiently roasted."
