Paroles Board Is Starting Study Prisoners' Files

RALEIGH (UP)—The new three-man State Paroles Board began an exhaustive review today of the records of all prisoners who have served more than 15 years in jail.

"I've asked Highway Chairman A.H. Graham to furnish us with a list of all prisoners who have served as much as 15 years so we can consider them first for personal interviews," said Dr. Clarence H. Patrick, paroles board chairman.

Patrick said there are only nine men in North Carolina's 9,000 prison population who have served as much as 20 years and their cases have been reviewed every year for the past 16 years.

"Some of these men," he said, "probably would have been released before now if they had not consistently nullified all their gained time for good behavior by prison violations.

"There are no 'forgotten men' rotting away in North Carolina prisons. That's a favorite tale of critics of paroles commissions."

Patrick said the new review policy agreed on at a conference with Graham, doesn't mean that any of the 15-year men will necessarily be paroled. It also will not change the policy of reviewing all cases automatically as soon as a prisoner has served one-fourth of his sentence.

He said the board feels "we should give consideration for interviews to those with long records first."

Seven of the nine men with 20 years or more behind them are Negroes and all are serving terms for either first or second degree murder.

The two who have served the longest are Marvin McLeod of Smithfield and Percy Miller of Windsor, both having put in 24 years. The youngest is Homer Brown of Pine's Creek who was only 18 when sentenced to life imprisonment for murder in Haywood County in 1933.

Grocers Alliance To Buy More Ads

CHICAGO (UP)—The Independent Grocers' Alliance "has found newspaper advertising to be its most effective medium" and will spend more than $2,000,000 for space in U. S. and Canadian newspapers in 1954, it was announced today.

IGA national advertising manager Orville Jöhler told 1,500 wholesaler and retailers attending the alliance's 27th international convention that IGA has found it profitable to increase its newspaper advertising budget each year.

He also said that the group plans a "new look" in advertising "which we consider to be one of the most progressive steps ever taken in the food field."

"Full page ads will no longer show many items as was the general practice in the past," he said.

"Each IGA ad will, instead, feature a currently popular fashion that will be fully illustrated on the page and serve as the focal point of the ad. Food items to be advertised will be held to a maximum of 15 items.

"In this way, the housewife will be able to 'keep in style' in dress and in her food purchases."

Police Court Will 'Bear Down' On Speeding Cases

In Police Court Monday, Judge Charles H. Whedbee announced that the court is going to bear down on speeders in motor vehicles, and give proven violators the limit of the law.

"The continual reports of people being injured and killed on the state's highways and the numerous cases we have coming before us in this court are cause for alarm," the Greenville jurist said.

In the case of James A. Crandle, Negro, Route 1, Greenville, who was found guilty of speeding at the rate of 96 miles an hour, Judge Whedbee sentenced him to six months on the roads, sentence suspended on payment of $100 fine, court costs deducted. The court's judgment also provides that Crandle shall not operate any motor vehicle for a year. According to the law, if the defendant is found driving a motor vehicle within the next 12 months, he automatically will be sent to the roads to serve the six months sentence.

Clinton E. Reese, Route 1, Grimsland, speeding 70 miles an hour, 30 days in jail, sentence suspended on payment of $15 costs. The judgment also provides that he shall not drive a motor vehicle for one week.

Maek Jamison, Negro, charged with having defective brakes, was called and he failed to answer. An instant capias was issued to bring him into court.

Willie A. Banner, Negro, Route 2, Greenville, charged with driving without an operator's license, was called and he failed to answer. An instant capias was issued to bring him into court.

Jesse D. Brown, 1401 VanDyke street, driving while drunk, second offense, six months on the roads, sentence to be suspended on payment of $200 and costs. The court recommended that his driver's license be revoked for three years.

Virginium W. Haymes, no operator's license and improper equipment, taxed with court costs.

Nathan Coward, Negro, larceny of money, 30 days in jail, sentence suspended on payment of $17 to Robert Grimes and pay court costs.

Robert L. Hall was found not guilty of disorderly conduct.

Joe Wooten, Negro, carrying a concealed weapon (pistol), six months on the roads, sentence suspended on payment of $50 and costs. The weapon was confiscated. The judgment provides that he remain of good behavior and not violate any law for two years.

Della Bynum, Negro, who was charged with assault on a female, (Sarah Bynum) was found not guilty.

John David Milton, Negro, paid $10 for being drunk.

Storage Tank Of Gasoline Blows Up At Inchon

INCHON, Korea (UP)—An overflowing U. S. Army storage tank containing 400,000 gallons of gasoline exploded today and hundreds of South Korean civilians and American soldiers fled in terror across the rice paddies.

At least one person, a South Korean worker, was killed when, crazed by fear, he dashed directly toward the flames.

"His clothing just popped right off of him," an American soldier said. "And an explosion threw him down the hill. He is still up there by the tank and couldn't be alive."

Members of an American anti-aircraft battery stationed only a few yards from the tank barely escaped with their lives. They said the tank had been overflowing for more than an hour before the explosion.

Wednesday, School Bells Will Ring

Tomorrow the school bell rings for several thousand children all over Pitt County. In every part of the country except Greenville, kids will flock to their respective schools to begin another nine months of formal education.

In Greenville, it will be another week until school opens.

To those children who resume their daily trips to school this week, it is like a return to work after three months of vacation. Some are anxious to get back; others are a little hesitant. Nevertheless, for all there is in store an important year of learning in their young lives.

During the next nine months literally millions of dollars will be spent by the state of North Carolina for the education of its children. The money comes from the mothers and fathers of school children, and many other taxpayers who have only indirect contact with the schools.

To a great extent, the amount of benefit the individual child gets from this year of school will depend upon his interest and his initiative. At the same time, his interest in school during the coming year will depend upon the encouragement he receives from his parents. How much he learns during the school year will depend to an appreciable degree to the interest his parents take in his school work.

The success or failure of a child in public schools does not merely depend upon the student-teacher relationship. Just as the success or failure of the whole public education program of North Carolina depends to a great extent upon the support it receives from adults of the state, so does the progress of the individual student depend upon the support he receives from his parents.

Tomorrow begins another school year for most Pitt County youngsters; but also in a broader sense, it begins another school year for the parents of those thousands of youngsters. The interest Pitt County parents take in the school program this year will be a major factor in the success of the school year.

Transportation And The World's Food

It's a little difficult to believe that almost two-thirds of the people of the world are starving, or at least suffering from malnutrition.

According to a survey made by the American Geographical Society, the world's production of food, if properly distributed would provide food enough for everyone. That, however, is not the case. As a result, according to the exhaustive survey, it is the minority rather than the majority of the people who receive a balanced diet.

While the report listed only six countries which were unable to provide sufficient daily food for their populations, but less than half the countries were listed as among those in which the people received adequate diets.

The findings, while they are not likely to cause a change in the world's food picture in the near future, point to the need for modernization of food production methods in much of the world, and improved transportation in other parts.

The world, it seems, produces enough food for its inhabitants; but the surplus of some sections never reaches into the regions where food is not plentiful.

Strength for the Day

BY EARL L. DOUGLASS
FASCINATION OF ERROR

It is hard for those of us who hate communism to realize that some people love it so dearly that they are willing to die for it. In the midst of a world which they believe to be disintegrating they see communism as a great program for unifying men and making their efforts productive. Standing on the outside and viewing the movement objectively, we can see that at best communism is mistaken and at worst it is a conspiracy against everything that dignifies the soul of man and makes human life significant.

It seems to us utterly insane that anyone could see in the violence, cruelty and false economic schemes of communism any hope for the betterment of mankind. Yet, there are people who are so sure that modern civilization is foredoomed that they grasp the drastic program offered by communism and do so with the actual conviction that it will bring peace and order out of a world made weary with war anxiety and chaos.

To say this is not to intimate that communist leaders are simply mistaken men. They are almost without exception cruel, corrupt, cynical and utterly dishonest. The horrible truth about communism is that it has fascinated millions of people who might—if they only believed the Truth—be serving their fellow men effectively.

Deep Dive Into Local Politics

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON—President Eisenhower's deep dive into Mayoralty politics in New York City astonishes and disturbs many national Republican leaders. They fear it may entangle him in local issues and intrigues that will cost him prestige throughout the country. He may become a partisan rather than a national figure to millions of independents, liberals and the politically faceless who voted for him last fall.

As usual, Ike's unexpected intervention in a strictly municipal brawl is blamed on Governor Thomas E. Dewey by the latter's many enemies within the GOP. It would be a gay plume in the Albany man's political bonnet if he could use Ike to recapture City Hall for the Republicans, who have not won it on their own in modern times.

DEWEY'S AMBITIONS—Dewey's dragging of the President into the affair tends to confirm reports that he will run for Governor next year. It also indicates that he still cherishes ambitions for another Presidential nomination, either in 1956 or 1960.

If he can engineer a Republican triumph in the nation's greatest metropolis, he will rank next to Eisenhower as a glamor boy, despite his two national reverses. And Ike will shine in reflected glory as a result of his formal blessing of the campaign on behalf of the Republican nominee, Harold Riegelman, former Housing Commissioner.

Dewey's concern springs from the fact that he will be a major campaign issue. In an effort to lighten out the city's tangled finances, he is expected to brook subway fares to 15 cents and to impose heavy taxes. The Democrats expect to win votes by assailing him as an absentee tyrant.

PROFITIOUS TIME—Never, perhaps, were the times more propitious for a Republican demonstration of power and popularity in the balliwick of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Fiorello H. La Guardia, the late Senator Robert F. Wagner and James A. Farley, which also happens to have been the birthplace and laboratory of the New Deal.

The Democrats are weakened by internal dissension, and have just lost one of their ablest operators in the death of Edward J. Flynn, Bronx "boss"

Another Highway Death For Pitt

Pitt County's seventh highway fatality of 1953 was registered this week as a man injured in a motorcycle-automobile crash died.

Considering the fact Pitt County has as many vehicles as it does on the roads, and as many careless drivers as are evident most every day, perhaps it is merely luck that highway fatalities are no higher.

Over a period of several years, Pitt County has had what we feel is more than its share of deaths and injuries caused by highway accidents. Just where to point for the cause of such a record is a difficult thing to decide; but chances are most of Pitt's accidents are caused by carelessness on the part of some individual.

In that respect, this county is not much different from any other county. All sections have careless drivers, and all sections have highway accidents. It has now become practically a matter of degree as to the number of accidents and the number of deaths and injuries.

With the busy fall season at hand, there will be more traveling on Pitt County roads than during the earlier part of the year. That means if the accident rate in the county is not to increase, it will be necessary for drivers to be more cautious under the wheel. It behooves the people of the county to jack up their safety consciousness during the last months of the year to keep Pitt's highway record from becoming worse than it is.

It has become apparent in North Carolina that highway safety, in the final analysis, is going to be up to the individual citizen. The same is true for Pitt County.

Somebody Told Me

Life Seems Work Out Backwards

Nobody enjoys life any more than I do, but to me part of the joy is complaining now and then.

Last night, for example, I decided that life is backwards in many respects. Take this matter of finances. Although Wife Rachel and I consider ourselves very fortunate, there are many things that we would enjoy if we had more money.

Suppose we are lucky and in the next 20 to 30 years make money in excess of living requirements. If we do, nine chances in 10 are that by the time we have won we will have lost the lust for those luxury items that we would enjoy now.

Life is backwards in this respect: If you decide in your youth that you're going to be conservative with your money so that you'll have some in your old age, then you never learn how to enjoy extravagance. By the time you have acquired the money you're so much in the habit of pinching pennies that you can't enjoy letting 'em go, no matter how hard you try.

But if you keep yourself informed on extravagance, even if you ration it to just an occasional fling, you never acquire any money to leave letting it go in later years. If that isn't backwards, what is?

And about children: As much as W. R. and I enjoy our children, we like to engage a baby sitter now and then and get away for a few hours. Later, when the children marry and leave us for good, we'll probably regret every minute that we spent away from them.

As another example, take sports. Some young people enjoy participating in four or five, but have to work so many hours that they never have time for them. By the time they get financially able to participate, they are not physically able.

And sleep? Young people never seem to have enough time to sleep and older people have time but require far less sleep.

The answer, of course, is to take the middle of the road. Be conservative, but not so conservative that you forget how to fling. Maybe that's the way to keep young ideas all throughout life.

And I thank you. JACK EDWARDS

What Other Editors Are Thinking

EMPHASIS ON TEACHER-PURPOSE (Greensboro News)

At intervals the Daily News has noted criticism of some schools for using additional teachers assigned them to meet lower teacher-load stipulations for other purpose.

For instance, a new teacher who is supposed to reduce an overly heavy load in some classroom is diverted to enrich the curriculum, as the pedagogues put it. The load stays just as heavy as it has been or maybe increases a few pupils while the new teacher goes for some special service or subject, as art, health, physical education, safety or such.

The situation must have been something as heard for we get it via the Winston-Salem Sunday

Journal-Sentinel, which we take to be school-knowledgeful Sanktoford Martin writing that the State Board of Education has promulgated a rule which will end the practice. This new rule now decrees:

In an accredited elementary school a state allotted teacher may not be used for special service for subjects (such as art, health, library, music, physical education, safety or any other subject) unless the school can be so organized that no classroom teacher will have a load of more than 35 pupils in average daily attendance.

The new rule is as it should be, although it reflects no credit on the schools which took advantage of the opportunity for teacher-load reduction and forced its adoption.

There is no assurance that this new requirement will bring all classes under the state load standard but it should help and it should guarantee that teachers allowed for this purpose will not be used for something else. The situation cannot be fully met until sufficient teachers are available—and that goes especially for the elementary schools—and more classrooms are constructed for the housing of presently overflowing classes.

Enrichment of curricula may be all right in its proper place but that hardly means at the cost of poverty of instruction. Whatever our children are taught, with special emphasis upon core subject, they ought to be taught well and effectively.

Two Presumed Senate Seat Rivals Hard At Work

By LYNN NISBET

REALISTIC—One thing can be said for the principal potential actors in the upcoming race for the U. S. Senate: They are realistic about it. Neither Senator Alton Lennon, incumbent appointee and avowed candidate for election, nor ex-Governor Kerr Scott, presently unavowed but generally recognized candidate, take any part in the predictions of certain victory made by some of their loyal friends. Both men are hard at work on preliminary stages of the campaign. Lennon recognizes the need for getting acquainted with people throughout the state, since this is his first venture into state-wide politics. Scott does not need to do that, but he is getting around for another purpose.

SCOTT—If Scott gets into this race it will be his fourth major campaign in his own right, the sixth in which he was a star performer. In 1936 when he was first nominated for commissioner of agriculture, and in 1940 when he successfully defended that position against the vigorous attack of Wayland Spruill of Bertie, and in 1948 when he won the odd-on contest for Governor, he made important contacts all over the map. Also, in 1950 when he put everything he had behind his appointed Senator Frank Graham and in 1952 when he backed Hubert Olive for Governor to the limit, he learned other things about practical politics. Four years in the Governor's office gave him invaluable contacts and experience. The yield from these past campaigns and as Governor has not been all profit. Along the way he incurred some very positive opposition. Everything that has developed in recent weeks, however, indicates that his experiences have given him confidence and assurance. He knows where he wants to go and has a very good idea of why and how.

Lennon—Senator Lennon has no comparable experience base for confidence and assurance and he is frankly feeling his way around. He has made a splendid impression everywhere he has been and he is now in the early part of 10 week "get acquainted" tour. His public speeches and private conversations indicate knowledge of where he wants to go and why, but somewhat less knowledge of how.

DIFFERENCE—The major difference in approach of the two men to the issues involved seems to be that Scott puts emphasis on money. Lennon puts it on ideas. Lennon is not naive enough to think he can wage a campaign without finances, but to date he has not mentioned money in any public statement. To the contrary, Scott has made no bones about the fact if he can get enough money he can win, although he has meticulously avoided mention of buying the Senate seat. Months ago he told newsmen he would consider running if $100,000 were laid on the line before he started. In several public speeches, including one at the Chiquapien Appalachian barbecue two weeks ago, he has indicated need for $200,000.

MONEY—Those familiar with political campaigning in North Carolina concede that the $200,000 may be minimum requirement for any hope of success. But they also remember that in 1948 Kerr Scott filed a sworn statement with the secretary of state declaring there had been spent by him or to his knowledge less than $12,000 in the first primary and less than $6,000 in the run-off for Governor, except for personal travel expenses and a few other small exempted items. Other candidates in that race reported comparable amounts spent for the record. That was the limit permitted by the election laws prior to 1953. Governor Scott's several times told newsmen at press conferences that his headquarters cost about $60,000 and in private conversations Charlie Johnson admits getting as much as $25,000 from one county. The law has been changed now so that candidates do not have to perjure themselves in reporting campaign spending, but nobody expects them to report full amounts received and spent. At the same time there is growing resentment at the blatant demand for campaign money and the implication that if enough money comes in the votes can be had. There are some signs that Scott's emphasis on money is backfiring and that Lennon's emphasis on ideas is attracting support.

INCONCLUSIVE—Appraisal of issues or personalities likely to be involved in next year's elections is of necessity speculative and inconclusive. Presently Senator Lennon is the only avowed candidate. Ex-Governor Scott is expected to be in the running, and there may be five or six more—including some who have not been mentioned in any of the speculative dope stories. Any speculation based on a two-way Lennon-Scott race would be upset by entrance of one or more others.

ISSUES—As of now, Lennon is running on his own pronounced ideas about government, and the prestige of the Umstead administration. Scott is running on his record as commissioner of agriculture and Governor, plus a minimum of $100,000 and a de-stored $200,000 in hand to start with.

HISTORIC—Whether dollars or ideas win there seems little doubt that the 1954 campaign will make political history in North Carolina. It will be the first time that money has played such a

Business Today

Source Of New Ideas

By ELMER ROESSNER
Many companies are now seeking new products as part of the general trend toward diversification as a hedge against any dip in business. This is to remind them that one source of ideas may be patents available for licensing at little or no cost.

There are thousands of such patents. Most of them, of course, have special applications. A patent for a new way to wind armatures, to invent an example, would be of interest only to manufacturers of motors. But some of them will open the way to new products. And patents will often stimulate creative thinking. That hypothetical method of winding armatures, for example, might suggest a new technique in the production of spring-motor toys.

The Department of Commerce now has available a list of 609 patents available without charge, plus a list of 231 patents just made available to the public by Westinghouse Electric. Just write to the Patent Office, Department of Commerce, Washington 25, D. C.

There is also a book titled "Government-Owned Inventions Available for License" which lists 3,658 patents, arranged by industrial use. This book is sold for $1 by the Superintendent of Documents, Washington 25, D. C.

Another possible step is to write to the new Small Business Administration, Washington 25, D. C., and ask for a free copy of "Technical Aid for Small Business No. 29. This leaflet tells what the government is doing to make patents available to private business, and describes sources of patents and information about them.

Incidentally, inventors who have been trying to interest manufacturers in their ideas should at this moment intensify their efforts even if they have been discouraged in the past. Now that prospects for defense contracts are fewer, many manufacturers will take a second look at proposals. It is to their advantage to keep plants and employees busy.

As a general rule, companies already making related products are best bets for inventors. But now that many companies are trying to branch out into new fields, there is no telling who might be interested in a salable product. A steel company might be interested in a plastics item. And that "for instance" is not imaginary—two metals companies recently have bought out plastics producers.

A survey conducted by Erwin, Wasey & Co. for nine farm magazines showed, as might have been expected, that farmers are regular readers of farm magazines—93.9 per cent read one or more regularly.

It also disclosed that farmers are readers of other media, too. The survey disclosed that 83.9 per cent read one or more daily newspapers regularly, 67.1 per cent read one or more magazines (not women's) regularly, and that 5 per cent read women's, but not general, magazines regularly.

Politically, Just Like Old Times

By REILMAN MORIN
For Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP)—It was like old times in New York last week.

First, the President came to town for a day, and then Adlai Stevenson lunched down, returning from his trip around the world. Before you could say "National Committee," a fair copy of the spasms and convulsions that shake this republic every four years was taking shape all over town.

The hotel corridors were neck-deep in politics. The newsmen, hoarse voiced and croaking, pleaded with people to get out of their foreground. Patient New York grandees were trying to keep order, usually with a wisecrack, sometimes with an arm. The usual cranks and hangers-on invaded the news conferences. And there was that pleasantly familiar sensation of trying to take notes on a carefully worded statement with a photographer's elbow in your eye.

Yes, sir, it was exactly like last year when Eisenhower and Stevenson were warming up to the decision that came in November. Neither seems to have suffered much from the effects of election day.

The President was bouncing around in his suite on the 32nd floor of the Waldorf with the easy, free-wheeling grace of a professional athlete. He was still wearing a pair of army-issue officer's shoes, the buckle-over type they sell in the PX.

He looked a little thinner, much sharper, and very much more sure of himself. He sat, talking deeply with Col. Harold Riegelman, the GOP candidate for mayor of New York, apparently oblivious to the bedlam going on around him. The deep furrow that runs horizontally across the top of his nose, in moments of deep concern, never appeared once during the day. He whipped through a crowded schedule like a very old hand at crowded schedules.

In fact, it seemed to amuse him when Jim Hagerty, his press secretary gave the newsmen their "just two seconds more" for their pictures.

"First Sgt. Hagerty," he said. "Hagerty'd make a great 1st sergeant."

Adlai Stevenson looked a little tired, as well a man might after six months abroad. He said he would be glad to unpack now. But he had the same bubbling, spontaneous wit which may have been a political handicap last year—and he got the laughs, just as he always did.

When somebody asked him to comment on the situation in Iran, he said he understood that Mossadegh also had fled the country, pondered for a moment, and added:

"There might be a good opening there for a politician."

And when the radio men asked him to sit down, to be nearer the microphones on the desk, he said "Certainly, a politician always likes to keep his seat."

He stuck a thin stiletto between the sixth and seventh ribs of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles when he answered one question. A reporter, recalling what Stevenson had written about the Middle East, asked if his views coincided with those expressed by Dulles.

"I don't know that I can answer that," Stevenson said. "I know what I think, but I'm not at all clear as to what Mr. Dulles thinks."

All of which suggests, to this reporter anyway, that the gentleman from Chicago may be more in the center of the Democratic picture than his cagey remarks sometimes indicate. He has said, you recall, that he doesn't know whether he will run for the presidency again in 1956.

Also, he declined to answer, directly, when he was asked whether he considers himself the leader of the Democratic party.

But along with this, he said he intends to speak out on Sen. Joseph McCarthy and on foreign policy. And, in his own way, he will work for his party. If there are pieces of the jig-saw, they fit pretty neatly.

Well, anyway, it was nice to have the champion and the challenger in town again. . . . Just like old times.

Co-Op Hiring Is Proven Cheaper

LOS ANGELES (U.P.) — More than 100 small businesses receive the benefits of a large personnel department through their co-operatively run employment organization.

The Mutual Employers Association Inc., supported by 116 small companies, hires an applicant for any one of its firms at about one-fifth the usual cost and without charging the applicant, usual practice here.

MEA companies run from three to 350 employees. A company of more than 350 should have its own employment group, according to the association which was formed by businessmen four years ago and which now occupies 23 office rooms and has 14 employees.

Testing and interviewing produce a profile of the applicant which is then referred to a specific company. The company or MEA may do the actual hiring. An applicant who merely comes to the organization is, in theory, applying to 116 companies.

Fingerprinting gets rid of undesirable, who customarily depart in a hurry.

MEA's income, is derived from member firms. The association says the usual outside hiring cost runs to $300 per person while its cost is only $60.

Knee Pants For Men Unlikely To Be Popular

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

Some of the boys around New York who are not at all adverse to little publicity are appearing in public in garments called "Bermuda shorts," and are making inflammatory remarks about revolting against conventional male attire.

A couple of these revolutionaries are television performers and are more or less making professional capital of their radical departure from regular clothes. Others are actors making items for gossip columns — they were barred from their favorite night spots. Then there was a hardy band of four business men who braved the city streets, stares and wolf-whistles with their knees showing — although they took pains to tip off the press well in advance.

I would like to predict here and now that Bermuda shorts will not sweep the country as the normal warm-weather garb of the male city-dweller, no matter how logical, sensible and cool they are.

Male fashions, unlike female fashions, emerge through a sort of creeping evolution. It will be a long time before the boys climb into knee pants for office wear, although I wouldn't want to make any bets about what women would do if the event that Dior, Carnegie and a few other French and American designers issued decrees.

As long as I can remember, tailors and others interested in male haberdashery have been issuing idealistic, fiery statements on an average of once every six months. Men, these statements set forth, have revolted against their clothes. They no longer will submit spinelessly to the conventions of a choking collar and necktie; the discomforts of belts, the unnecessary weight of lapels, belts and flapping trousers.

Most of all, the pronouncements state, men will snap the chains of their bondage to drab color schemes. They'll go back to the days when knights were bold and their raiment rich in varied hue. And then, inevitably, comes the comparison of the swaggering male to birds, as if that were the clincher to the argument. The plumage of the male is usually more colorful than the female, a natural endowment utilized for courtship purposes.

I've been on the lookout for this revolution in men's fashions for years now. It never has come. But quietly, gradually, there has come considerable change in male raiment. For ordinary purposes, the starch has gone out of the boiled collar. When hot weather comes, it is permissible to eliminate the vest and go into light-weight, light-colored fabrics.

The boys even go in for a little color — but in fashion-plate circles, the splashy-designed sports shirts and the maroon pants are limited to week-end and time-off occasions. Except in a certain few free-wheeling communities, the best dressed men still are quietly dressed fellows with preferences for solid color ties and neutral colored suits.

Birds or no birds, the human male is a timid fellow when it comes to attracting attention by being different from his fellows. You can argue the points of comfort, good sense and helpful dressing all you want, but I'll still put my money on the fact that fear, of a slightly amazed look, a mildly derisive glance, is going to keep the American male in unobtrusive garb, with covered knees and a useless piece of cloth tied tightly around his neck for a good long time to come.

NO BOOTS OR SPURS?

STUART, Neb. (UP) — A mechanized cowboy has been reported by the Stuart Advocate, weekly newspaper. The paper said a cowboy in this area successfully herds cattle on a motorcycle.

VFW COMMANDER — Wayne E. Richards, of Arkansas City, Kas., was elected commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at the national encampment in Milwaukee.

TURNED HIS BACK — FORT WORTH, Tex. (UP)—O.M. Boucher, owner of a package liquor store, decided to sleep at his place while it was undergoing repairs, as a precaution against burglars. When he went home to get a cot to take to the store, someone broke into the place and took $100 worth of liquor.

Negotiations In Phone Strikes Are Deadlocked

By UNITED PRESS
Negotiations in telephone strikes affecting seven states were deadlocked Tuesday as union officials charged the Bell System with pursuing "high button shoes" labor policy.

Meanwhile, 1,000 American Telephone & Telegraph Co. employes in four Eastern cities walked out for four hours yesterday to attend union meetings.

They charged that company employes were using "dilatory tactics" in long lines contract negotiations at New York.

At St. Louis, where government mediators worked to end a strike of 53,000 Communication Workers of America members against the Southwestern Bell System, the company planned newspaper advertisements to explain its position.

Only one issue held up settlement of that strike. The union called it a "no strike clause," and "last minute legal gimmick."

CIO communications workers staged peaceful mass meetings in Indiana last night.

CWA strike director A. J. Jones, Washington D. C., called on the company to "get rid of its high button shoes" policy at an Evansville, Ind., meeting. He referred to wage differentials, a strike issue in the Indiana Bell dispute.

The walkouts in the East, at Philadelphia, Boston, Providence, and Springfield, Mass., were similar to the one that disrupted long distance service in Chicago last week. Some 2,300 employes stopped work there to attend a "protest meeting."

The New York negotiations are for a new contract covering all 22,000 unionized AT&T employes in 40 states. The largest group represents operators. But 6,500 plant employes also are covered.

to heap scorn Monday on Moscow's announcement that it is ending reparations, turning back seized factories, establishing diplomatic relations, and reducing its overall claims against the East Germans.

The department said the purpose of the Soviet moves is an attempt "to bolster the puppet regime" headed by East German Premier Otto Grotewohl. It said the measures also were designed to weaken the influence of the Western powers in Germany and "embarrass" West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's government on the eve of the September 6 elections in West Germany.

American strategy in the face of the Soviet diplomatic offensive is to call the Communists' hand at every turn by challenging the real significance of the so-called friendship moves toward Germany.

Fatherhood Deferments Of Draft Is Virtually Ended

WASHINGTON (UP)—New draft deferments based on fatherhood were banned under a presidential order that went into effect today. From now on, draft-eligible youths who become parents may claim an exemption only if they can prove their induction would cause "extreme hardship and privation."

However, fatherhood deferments already granted or pending before local selective service boards as of midnight Monday night are not affected.

President Eisenhower issued the order July 11 "to correct a serious inequity presently existing in the selective service process."

In an accompanying statement, the White House said draft registrants were being deferred temporarily as students, farm workers or as critical defense employes "with the understanding" that when the basis for deferment no longer existed they would be liable for military service.

"However some of these temporarily deferred registrants," the White House said, "...have been able to gain virtually permanent exemption by acquiring dependents during the period of their initial temporary deferment. Such additional deferment, of course, constitutes a grave injustice."

The ban on fatherhood deferments not only applies to those between the draft ages of 18 1/2 and 26 whether they are parents when they register or become parents afterward.

Officials pointed out that fatherhood, under the law, "dates from conception" so that a registrant whose wife became pregnant before midnight Monday night is eligible for deferment "if he presented a physician's certificate attesting to the pregnancy before then."

Even if a registrant became a father before midnight, officials said he would not be eligible for a 3-7 deferment unless he had submitted his proof before the deadline.

Fatherhood deferments that already have been granted will be continued for the foreseeable future, the White House said, so long as the registrants "maintain a bona fide family relationship in their home and the cause for such deferment exists."

Officials estimated draft calls

removes ban on radios in taxis

NEW YORK (UP)—Mayor Vincent Impellitteri has lifted a four-year-old ban on use of radios in taxi cabs.

The mayor said either the driver or the passenger could turn on the radio, but if the passenger prefers silence the driver must comply.

Former POW Has Rejoined Army

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UP)—Sgt. I. C. Albert L. Howard, undaunted by a stretch in a Communist prisoner of war camp which ended with his exchange last spring, signed up Monday for his third hitch in the army.

"Everything can't be gray and the service life is best," he said.

California Town Smells Of Smelt

LOS ALTOS, Calif. (UP)—The town of Los Altos smelled of smelt today.

Smelt were found Monday in the town's police car, in the night deposit chute at the First National Bank, and in the mail drops at several business establishments.

Patrolman Burnell D. Hillard tracked down the prankster, a 14-year-old boy, and made him dispose of the rest of his catch.

RUFUS RUSTLED—Pufus, escaped red-necked hornbill, cause of a two-day skyscraper-rooftop chase in New York City, is held by ASPCA agent after wandering into a pigeon coop.

Soviet Concessions Are Admission Of Failures

WASHINGTON (UP)—Moscow's latest diplomatic maneuvers provide fresh evidence that Red rule has failed in Eastern Germany, American officials said today.

Experts described the rash of Soviet "concessions" to the East Germans as a frantic attempt by the Russians to recoup serious prestige losses suffered by the Reds throughout the Soviet zone.

Suspicion was voiced that the Soviet effort was "falling flat," and predictions were made in official quarters that no sizable group of Germans would be swayed to Communism by the Kremlin's diplomatic jockeying.

The current Soviet back-tracking actions, it was said, seemed designed to overcome a bad reaction in Germany to illegal and unpopular measures the Russians have imposed on Eastern Germany since World War II.

The Russians evidently were frightened into action by the June 17 riots that shook the Red zone and endangered its puppet government, informants said.

"Few, if any, Germans will be fooled at this date," one official said. "The East German people know what the Communists are and who they are working for." The State Department was quick

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW!

By FAGALY and SHORTEN

his brown head, careless and cocky. There was no one with him. He said easily: "Hello, Kit. Have you solved the mystery? Do you know where Libby is?" For a moment Kit stood staring blankly at Hugo. She couldn't believe her ears. He uncle said: "I told you you were out of your mind. Kit. Cavanaugh doesn't know a thing. I rang him right after I called you." Hugo was studying her face thoughtfully with his bright hazel eyes, eyes that had been black with anger when they last met. Sauntering over to the little yellow love seat sideways to the fireplace he sat down and lit a cigarette. If Libby wasn't with Hugo, where was she? Miriam VanKreef came along the hall. She nodded to Hugo. "Oh, Catherine, you're here." Hugo was asked questions. The last time Miriam had seen Libby was around 7 o'clock the night before. "She came in to see whether I wanted anything. I had one of my attacks—my heart."

had imprisoned the perfume left on the air, lily of the valley gone slightly stale. Kit's heart sank. Libby hadn't slept here last night. And their Aunt Miriam had been under the influence of one of her sleeping pills. Kit turned her head. Hugo was in the doorway. His face was sober. As always he was terrifically alive, but there was no light in his eyes now. "You can come in," Kit said. "Thanks." Hugo settled his shoulder against the lintel, his gaze circling the room. His bigness, his sharp masculinity, were out of place in that feminine setting of ruffled curtains, fragile furniture, and white rugs. Down the hall Miriam was going into her own room. Her door opening and closing created a draught that rattled something. Kit fished out a piece of paper caught between the sheet desk and the wall. It was a sheet of Libby's heavy deckle-edged notepaper. There was writing on it. "Darlings, don't worry about me. You'll be hearing from us in a few days." Libby's usual precise handwriting was slanted to toppling point and the pen strokes were strong on one side and wavering on the other. "Us," Kit said starkly. Hugo read the note over her shoulder. He looked at Kit intently. She said a little desperately: "It might be Judith Newberry. Judith's having trouble with her husband. Maybe she had to get away and Libby went with her—Harold Newberry's a mess when he's drinking—and Libby's very fond of Judith." She didn't believe it. Neither did Hugo, nor Philip, who joined them. Philip read the note, and crumpled it in an angry hand. "She knew I was coming home and she didn't even write the note to me. What's been going on around here?" Hugo said to Kit: "Look in the closet. Maybe you can tell what clothes of Libby's are gone, what she took with her."

Kit went to the wardrobe. She said doubtfully—after all, she hadn't seen Libby except fleetingly in the last three months and Libby might have bought any number of new things—Her blue tweed suit is gone—and that lace robe you gave her for Christmas, Philip." Kit looked in the wastebasket under the desk. There was a crumple of gray paper there that, smoothed out, showed the same sloping scrawl. "Darling Philip, Kit and Aunt Miriam—" That was all. Hugo came over and looked at it. His elbow brushed Kit's and she stepped back. They both saw the snapshot at the bottom of the basket at the same time. A miniature Hugo looked up at them, deep in snow under the leafless beech beyond the tennis court. He was smiling in the direction of the invisible girl with the camera. Libby was an indefatigable and bad snapshot taker. This was one of her more successful tries. The picture woke Kit like a pail of ice water flung over a somnambulist. She had begun to tell herself that she had been wrong, that Hugo might have been attracted to Libby only briefly. But she was wrong. She had broken with Hugo in early February, and he had gone on seeing Libby, and loving her. The only real snow of the year had come in March, which was when the snapshot had been taken. The room was stifling. Kit crossed to the window and threw it up. The June night outside was soft and warm. Kit stared into the darkness, her hands pressed hard on the sill. She started to swing—and saw it. Her exclamation brought her uncle and Hugo. She pointed to the glass ash tray behind the looped back curtain. There was a single cigarette in the ash tray, king size. She said, pointing: "That's not Libby's. She doesn't smoke much, and when she does it's the ordinary ones." They all stared at the long cigarette from which no more than a few puffs had been taken. It wasn't a woman's. "Up"—Libby and a man. Philip said harshly: "You mean that there was a man up here with Libby helping her to peek, that she left the house last night with a man . . . ?" They went down to the living room, and Kit said to Hugo, "You've been seeing Libby, haven't you?" Hugo nodded. "Yes, on and off. Not much. I've been busy." (To Be Continued)

SYNOPSIS

Returning to his home in Denfield, Conn., after a long absence in Mexico, Philip Haven, a writer, finds his young niece, Libby, who also served as his secretary, missing from the house. Believing that she may be visiting her cousin Kit in New York, Haven phones the latter's apartment only to learn that Libby had not been there.

IN THE preceding October, a distant cousin had left Philip a large sum of money he didn't particularly need. Keogh, Campbell Strait and Frobisher had handled the legal proceedings. Hugo was a junior member of the firm. On his first date with Kit he had asked her how it felt to be an heiress. That had made her laugh. Not a chance, she had told him. "Philip will go through that money like a knife through cheese. He makes plenty from his books to live comfortably on. Besides, on the rare occasions when he worries, it's Libby he worries about. He says I can take care of myself." "Cavanaugh?" Philip stared at Kit. "Of course I remember him. What's he got to do with it? If you've got something to tell me, come to the point." "I think Libby and Hugo Cavanaugh—" Philip laughed on a short, high note. "Are you mad?" He was no longer looking at her. A car had come up outside. Footsteps crossed the terrace. The front door was still open. Someone came through it. Kit turned. It was Hugo. Kit hadn't seen him in more than two months. He looked exactly as usual, with that rakish carriage to

The three cars were in the garage. Libby hadn't called a cab. "Have you called people?" Kit asked Philip. "The Royals. Lucy Manning?" "Philip had. "No one knows anything." Kit wished Hugo weren't there. He seemed to think it was all a tempest in a teapot. "I'm going up to Libby's room," she said. The door at the far end of the upper hall was an unfamiliar panel of whiteness where there was usually a bright gap. Kit opened the door and went in and switched on the lights. The bedspread was unwrinkled, the dressing table immaculate. The closed window

Southern Bread Eliminates Home Builders From Play

Loose Fielding, Wild Pitching Accounts For Scoring Of Southern Bread; Yates Winning Hurler

Southern Bread scored five runs in the last two innings on just one hit to gain a 10-5 win over Home Builders in the Men's Double Elimination Softball Tournament at Rose Athletic Field last night. The loss eliminated the Builders from the tourney.

The Builders outbit the Breadmen eight to five, but wildness on the part of pitcher Dan Gordon and some loose fielding by the Builders set up the Southern Bread scoring. Gordon walked nine batters and hit one.

Leading the winners' attack was second baseman Billy McCoy who went two hits for four times to the plate. Randolph Tripp had a single and three walks in four at bats.

Sonny Scott, Ford McGowan, and Paul Jones each had two hits for the Home Builders.

Coming in to pitch in the third inning for the Breadmen was Charlie Yates, who received credit for the win.

Football Coach At Ohio State Makes Big Hit

By HASKELL SHORT
United Press Sports Writer
COLUMBUS, O. (UP)—Ohio State football Coach Woody Hayes is making a hit with fans in this football happy town because he talks the way they like to hear a Buckeye coach talk.

There were skeptics three years ago when the university picked Hayes of Miami, O., University, after passing up big names like Paul Brown, former Buckeye coach and now coach of the Cleveland Browns.

Those people chanted "I told you so" at the end of Woody's first year when his team won four, lost three, and tied two. They didn't pay much attention when Woody kicked off last season with the simple statement, "you will be proud of this team."

But Woody showed them. His Buckeyes were the only Big Ten team to whip Wisconsin, the Big Ten Rose Bowl entry. His team sagged in mid-season, but finished with 27-7 victories over Illinois and Michigan. The latter triumph made him a hero as this was the first victory over the traditional rival since 1944.

His team probably would not have been in the Rose Bowl had it not been for the stunning 8-0 defeat by Iowa, a rank underdog.

Now the fans are taking Woody seriously when he says, "we will be a good football team." They like it, too, when he says he would "never call our kids the underdogs because it would take away from their dignity."

This praise for the boys and Woody's sincere man-to-man interest in them is a big key to his success. He was obviously anxious his first season and the boys felt he demanded too much. But just before the 1951 Illinois game Hayes let up. He played recordings of Buckeye fight songs in the training room. The result was a scoreless tie, the only blot on the Illinois record.

Woody is more mellow now. He spends all of his time working at football. The boys get the idea of the value of hard work from Hayes' example.

The coach never criticizes individuals in public. His praise is honest. He doesn't alienate. He pined the Iowa defeat squarely on his own shoulders. None of his assistants has left and their area of responsibility is defined sharply.

The Bucks have the material for a winning team, barring injuries, although this squad will be inexperienced on the defense and the pass defense is worrying Hayes. But he adds, "it will come along."

Woody's more mellow now. He spends all of his time working at football. The boys get the idea of the value of hard work from Hayes' example.

Major League Leaders In Shakeup This Season

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (UP)—The major league leaders are in for an almost complete shakeup this season and the chief victims, as of today's production level, will be batting champion Stan Musial and home run king Ralph Kiner.

With only about one-fifth of the season remaining, both appeared in extreme danger of being replaced. And for each of them it would be a severe blow.

For both of these famed sluggers are swinging to etch their names even more indelibly in the record books.

Musial, shooting for his seventh National League batting crown, could tie the immortal Rogers Hornsby and then need only one more to match the great Honus Wagner. Kiner already holds the record of leading the National League seven straight years in homers and would like to extend the same greatest reign from point of consecutive years.

Each appears doomed. Musial, who won last year with a .336 batting mark, is some 26 points in back of Monte Irvin's .338 at the moment. Kiner, with 28 homers, needs a miracle to overtake pacesetter Eddie Mathews of the Braves, who leads with 39.

But the big two have plenty of company in the matter of departmental leaders.

Only Robin Roberts as the big pitching winner, Musial in the matter of doubles and Minnie Miems in stolen bases will hold their crowns. And Minos faces a battle against Jim Rivera, with whom he is tied at 20 for American League base larceny honors.

For the rest of the 1952 heroes, it's wait 'til next year.

In the American League, Larry Doby led last season in runs, homers and runs batted in. Now he has but 59, 18 and 70 respectively, against Minos's 87 runs, Al Rosen's 33 homers and Rosen's 116 runs batted in.

Rosen also is making a run at the batting title with a .326 average while defending champ Ferris Fain is clubbing only .269. Nellie Fox, who led in hits, has but 67, far off Mickey Vernon's leading total of 162.

Vernon also sets the pace with 35 doubles against defending leader...

1,500 Marksmen Shoot For Trophy In Match Today

CAMP PERRY, O. (UP)—Some 1,500 marksmen compete for trophies today in the 86th National Rifle and Pistol shoot.

Pistol experts will shoot for national individual and team trophies in the one-day competition, while small-bore rifle sharpshooters will participate in the Lyman Trophy team championship and Dewar course any sights team matches.

Two titles had to be resolved through the use of the rule book in Monday's rounds.

John J. Crowley of Clintonville, Conn., tied with Charles Whipple of Somerset, Pa., and John Moschkau of Waterloo, Ia., each posting scores of 3,197 out of a possible 3,200 in the national small-bore rifle shooting. Crowley won on the basis of perfect hits, getting 256 to 283 for Whipple and 252 for Moschkau.

Mrs. Viola Pollum of Yorkville, Pa., tied at 3,185 out of 3,200 with Mrs. Neva Seagle of Topeka, Ind., for the women's small-bore crown. Mrs. Pollum however took the title by having 234 upper bullets to 225 for Mrs. Seagle.

Charles Rodgers, 16-year-old marksman from Phoenix, Ariz., defeated in the junior small-bore rifle title division with a high score of 3,195.

Ball Players Wonder About Help Legal Council Is Able To Give

Phants Workout In Preparation For First Game

By Wayne Bishop
Greenville's Phantoms scrimmaged long and hard yesterday afternoon in an effort to get ready for the opener of the season against Wilson's Class AAA squad September 4.

In yesterday's workouts Coach Bill Kittrell had his potential first team on the offensive. Captain Bobby Conway and Harold Edwards tackled; Dixie Hobgood and Billy Arnold at guards; and Doug Morgan at center.

Smith, a 148 pound freshman, and Langston, a senior letterman, made several gains through the defensive line on running plays.

Leading the defensive play were Lettman Thomas Whitaker and halfback Pete West.

Halfbacks Johnson and John Ed Arnold and fullback Bob Howell dressed in light equipment. These boys have pulled muscles in their legs.

The squad has grown considerably since the first practice, and at the present there are 42 boys on the roster, which makes it necessary for coach Kittrell to make a cut soon.

Colorado Coach: One Platoon Bad
HOUSTON, Tex. (UP)—Colorado's head football coach Dallas Tiao predicted today that "the public is not going to like" the new look in single platoon football this year. He doubts that play under the new rule would be an economy move as its backers planned.

"The 'haves' will continue to have; 'have nots' will not," he said.

Ward, here to coach the North all-star football team and as a lecturer at the 21st Texas High School Coaches Association School, said regardless of platoon ruling, "I still don't see how they can produce a well-trained team with a squad of less than 45 men."

"I don't think the public is going to like it as well," he went on. Ward, who this year stars his sixth year at the Boulder, Colo. University, said he at first believed there would be a great switch to single wing offense, such as he has always used, "but the only indication I have of it now is Nebraska, which I understand is switching this season."

Fans At Houston Lick Their Chops Over Prospects

HOUSTON, Tex. (UP)—Houston football fans are licking their chops over the tantalizing prospect of having two championship teams cooked up in their own backyard this season.

They are finding not the least bit unsavory the possibility they'll watch Rice Institute march to a title in the always potent Southwestern Conference while newcomer University of Houston is successfully defending the Missouri Valley title it won for the first time last year.

The prospect isn't far-fetched because both Rice and Houston, cross-town rivals, are generally rated the favorites in their respective conferences this season.

At any rate, Houstonians figure they'll see some top notch football this fall and are beginning to lay claim to the title of the Southwest's football capital.

From Sept. 19, when Rice is host to the University of Florida, until Dec. 5, when Houston closes out the season against Tennessee, only two week ends will pass without a game in Rice's splendid 70,000-plus seat stadium.

On Sept. 26, Rice is idle and Houston goes to College Station for its season opener with Texas A&M. On Oct. 3 Houston is in Austin meeting Texas and Rice is at Ithaca, N.Y., facing Cornell.

In between, the two teams will host such powers as Kentucky, Baylor, Oklahoma A&M, and Arizona State of Tempe, among others.

Barbara Romack In Favorite Spot In Women's Play
BARRINGTON, R.I. (UP)—Canadian Hillist Barbara Romack of Sacramento, Calif., occupied the favorite spot today in the second day of the 53rd National Women's Golf championship at the Rhode Island Country Club.

Miss Romack's decisive 8-7 victory over Mrs. Shirlee M. Finnegan of Wallingford, Conn., coupled with the upsets of pre-tournament favorites Marlene Stewart of Pottsville, Pa., and Mrs. Murray of Urtland, Vt., left her in the favorite's role.

A flawless display of golf gave Mrs. John I. Hunteng of Warwick, R.I., a 3-2 victory over Miss Murray. Mrs. Hunteng has been the Rhode Island titlist for five years.

Miss Stewart failed in her bid to become the third woman golfer in history to hold the American and British championships at the same time when she suffered a 19th hole defeat at the hands of 19-year old Joyce Ziske of Waterford, Wis.

It took Dr. Anne Rumsey of Pasadena, Calif., 20 holes to notch a 1-up victory over Mrs. George Bilo, wick of Butler, Pa.

One-sided 7-5 victories were turned in by Mary Lena Faulk of Thomasville, Ga., over Mrs. Raymond S. Patton Jr., of West Hartford, Conn., and Mrs. Donald K. Mc Clusky of Worcester, Mass., over Mrs. C. George Taylor of Littleton, Colo., R.I.

Stengel, Dressen Plotting World Series Strategy Now

By JOHN GRIFFIN
NEW YORK (UP)—They won't talk about it publicly, of course—because there's that little matter of pennant-clinching to be taken care of first—but managers Casey Stengel of the Yankees and Charley Dressen of the Dodgers already are plotting World Series strategy.

That means both teams have their ace scouts watching each other, and both skipper are figuring out pitching plans and batting orders.

It seems fairly safe for Stengel and Dressen to start making series plans today, because only a baseball earthquake now can prevent the fall classic for the fourth time in the last seven years. As the Dodgers open an 11-game home stand, they're nine games ahead of second-place Milwaukee, while the Yankees open their last western road swing with an 8-1-2 game edge on the second-place White Sox.

The Yankees' tour opens with a day game against the seventh-place Detroit Tigers, the only day action in the major leagues today. The Dodgers play host to another seventh-place outfit, the Chicago Cubs, in a twilight doubleheader. How close are the front-runners to clinching? Well, the Dodgers are home free if they win 23 of their remaining 32 games, regardless of what the Braves do. The Yankees are "in" if they win 24 out of 32. Every game the Braves and White Sox lose, of course, brings the end that much nearer.

So it's easy to see why both Stengel and Dressen are dropping hints about how they'd like to clinch the pennant with some time to spare.

The pitching plans may depend a lot on what the scouts say. Andy Krichel, chief Yankee scout, has been watching the Dodgers for many days now, looking for those little weaknesses coaches always like to spot. Chief Dodger scout Andy High also has been giving the Yanks his personal attention.

The first two games of the series will be played in the American League park, probably spacious Yankee Stadium. Thus it wouldn't be surprising to see veteran left-handers Preacher Roe of the Dodgers and Ed Lopat of the Yankees pitch the opening game, since they perform best where there's lots of room for fly balls to be caught. Dressen might follow then with Johnny Podres, Carl Erskine, and Russ Meyer in that order, against the Yankees' Whitey Ford, Vic Raschi, and Johnny Sain.

Shah Barely Edged Out Reds In Ousting Mossadegh From Post

By WALTER G. Rundle
United Press Staff Correspondent

Now that the dust and the uprooted statues have settled back into place in Iran, one thing has become uncomfortably clear: Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and friends beat the Communists to the draw in that mid-Eastern hot-spot by the narrowest of margins.

Mossadegh, who gave his nation blood and tears without the sweat, had run the situation so far into the ground that something had to give.

The British, who have the biggest direct stake in the situation, admit now that they'd just about written Iran off as lost when the Shah and his chosen successor, to Mossadegh, Maj. Gen. Fazlollah Zahedi, appealed to the Army to dislodge Mossadegh and his "illegal government."

The desperation of the situation can be understood when it is recalled that Zahedi was in hiding for fear of his life and the Shah was in Iraq, enroute to Rome, for similar urgent reasons of health.

The beginnings of the mop-up of singleaders of the Tudeh (Communist) party this week have given a hint of the extensive preparations by the other side to cash in on the heritage of woe Mossadegh had accumulated for his people.

The actual strength of the outlawed but openly active party remains one of Communism's best-kept secrets. But the best available estimates put its membership at between 25,000 and 30,000 with a large following of sympathizers.

Russia was smartly watching Mossadegh's activities convinced that the country had reached a position where it would fall, like over-ripe fruit, into the Soviet garden whenever the Kremlin shook.

In his state-of-the-union message last February, Mr. Eisenhower said the law, passed last year, "contains injustices" and "does in fact discriminate" against some would-be immigrants. He has since asked a congressional committee to consider changes.

McCarran, a sponsor of the law which bears his name, emphasized he was not "quoting" Mr. Eisenhower with whom he conferred privately recently. But he said his opinion was based on "statements that President Eisenhower has made."

"I have a complete belief he will not personally spearhead a movement to alter or change the McCarran - Walter Immigration Act," McCarran said.

McCarran attended a White House conference on Mr. Eisenhower's emergency refugee program in the final days of the last congressional session. He remained behind to speak with the President but it was later stated they did not discuss immigration matters.

He asserted that "minority groups" have organized a campaign to "discredit" the McCarran-Walter act because they want to "open the flood gates to promiscuous immigration."

For example, he said, Justice Department proceedings to deport movie star Dick Haymes are being used "fallaciously" to give "the RABAT, Morocco (UP)—French authorities alerted security forces today to prepare for a possible wave of Communist-inspired sabotage.

Government spokesmen said the derailment of the Algiers-Casablanca Express Sunday, in which two persons were killed, was not the work of Nationalist supporters of the exiled Sultan Sidi Mohammed Ben Youseff.

Expert investigators said their inquiry into the derailment uncovered clues that pointed to the Communists.

They said, however, that even though the saboteurs' methods differed from those used by Nationalists in the past, there was no assurance the two groups would not get together.

It was recalled that the Communists and Nationalists collaborated in the bloody 1952 Casablanca riots that resulted in the death of 50 persons.

Officials, referring to Communist denunciation of the removal of the Sultan as a French plot, feared the Reds would use hit and run tactics rather than attempt to incite the people into mass riots.

President Plans Time For 'Play'

DENVER (UP)—President Eisenhower kept his business calendar relatively free today and White House aides said he hoped to spend the afternoon either golfing or fishing.

The president's only announced appointment was with Mayor Quigg Newton of Denver.

Since he began his vacation here 11 days ago, Mr. Eisenhower has had only two chances to go trout fishing. He has played golf at the Cherry Hills Country Club course on several afternoons, but always after a busy morning at his offices at Lowry Air Force Base.

The President Monday met with Fred A. Seaton, Hastings, Neb., publisher and former Republican senator. Later he met with Sen. Frank Carlson, (R-Iowa), then spent a little more than an hour dictating.

Carlson said he talked with the President about a plan to designate townships instead of counties as disaster areas under the new federal drought relief program.

The Kansas senator said Mr. Eisenhower assured him he intended to see that isolated areas in the drought states received federal support.

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—Mrs. Joseph Sosinski of Hartford, figured out an unusual gift for her husband. While he was away on a trip, she had his automobile painted and, with her own hands, reupholstered its interior. Sosinski was more than happy. His car is a 1928, air-cooled Franklin, and he wouldn't part with it for anything. While he's been driving it, Mrs. Sosinski has used up seven new cars.

Here's why: Mossadegh had run the Iranian treasury, once bulging with oil revenues, as dry as the great salt desert southwest of his capital. The national bank had secretly boosted the note issue from an authorized 7.8 billion rials to more than 12 billions and had, at the same time, spent $39,200,000 of the London account which supposedly backed the snowdrifts of paper currency.

The nation's ambitious seven-year plan was on the rocks from lack of funds and thousands promised employment through it were out of work. Mossadegh, stubbornly, had tried to live up to his promise to keep the workers in the huge Abadan refinery employed and was keeping a back-breaking 40,000 non-sweating oil workers on the payroll at a cost of nearly $2,000,000 a month.

Of such materials are Communist coups traditionally made.

The appeal of the Shah and Gen. Zahedi to the army was a long-shot gamble. It worked, apparently, because the soldiers, empty bellied and wearing tattered shirts, had abandoned hope of improving BEVERLY HILLS, Cal. (UP)—Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, secretary of health, education and welfare, said today it is a "complete surprise" to her if her department has not been fully cooperative with Congress.

She made the statement after Rep. Carl T. Curtis (R-Neb.) charged that the department has been withholding "essential information" requested by his House Ways and Means subcommittee.

Mrs. Hobby, on her way to Los Angeles to address a Red Cross meeting, said she believed her department had "always been cooperative" with Curtis' subcommittee.

A spokesman said she might make another statement later today.

Curtis, who heads the subcommittee, said in a statement distributed by his office Monday night that he would not like to believe that Mrs. Hobby "has been insincere in her statements about improving social security."

But, he said, "the fact remains that her department has not been cooperating" with the subcommittee's social security investigation.

He said the proceedings against Haymes are based on a provision of immigration law which was already on the books and was simply codified by the McCarran-Walter Act.

New Times Set For Examining Of Food Handlers

Examinations for food handlers' certificates will be held at the Pitt County Health Department, Third and Greene streets on Wednesdays of each week.

The first examination will be tomorrow afternoon from 1 to 4:30 p.m.

A state law requires that all persons who handle food for sale at grocery stores and markets, restaurants, cafes, hot dog stands, drug stores, and carnivals and persons who prepare sandwiches for sale (at home or elsewhere) shall pass an examination and have a certificate of health.

Dr. Walter C. Humbert, county health officer, said the physical examinations are in the interest of public health. Tests include blood, tuberculosis, etc., and X-rays and examination for skin diseases.

It is against the law to hire any person to handle food for sale who does not have a health certificate from the Board of Health.

Camera News

TOM A. MARAN of Euclid, Ohio, won First Prize in the Senior Division, 1953 "Folks are Fun" Photo Contest with this picture titled "Nightie Night".

"What camera do you suggest I buy?" is probably the most frequent question asked of professional photographers. It is heard so often that the temptation is great to brush the question aside with a quick "go see the local camera shop owner, he is sure to have a camera that will suit your needs and pocketbook." That in itself is a good answer, but not good enough.

The question should start the professional off on a series of questions of his own. What kind of photographs do you expect to make? Do you want color or black-and-white photographs? Will you process your own film? How often have you used a camera? What do you expect to do with the pictures after you make them? And countless other related questions.

Cameras are not like automobiles, except that there seems to be a certain relationship between the high price ranges of the two articles. Autos use gasoline giving varying mileage per gallon. But cameras of the same film size give the same amount of exposure whether the camera cost $10 or $1000. Flashbulb costs remain constant, and naturally the photo finisher cannot consider what camera was used to expose the roll film that he is asked to process. He must base his price on the costs involved in processing that roll and printing the negatives.

Automobiles give adequate transportation in any weather, but cameras have shutters with varying speeds. Cars all have similar headlights to brighten the road at night, but not all cameras have built-in synchronization for flashbulbs. These facts should all be kept in mind when the new camera is considered, and a few extra dollars spent on the original investment should prove well worth while during the very long lifetime of your new camera.

The expert amateur photographer must decide for himself the type of photograph he intends to produce. Will he be satisfied to purchase a reasonably priced 35mm camera with the intention of making color slides to project on a screen in the comfort of his home, or does he want to concentrate on black-and-white photography with prints to show and mail to friends with an occasional roll of color for special occasions? Is it his or her intention to fix up a darkroom, and spend the evenings processing the film and making contact or projection prints, eventually ending up as one of the pillars of the local camera club? Consider these questions before entering the local camera store, for in that store is a large selection of cameras of many shapes, sizes and prices.

Personally I believe that the popular 120-620 size roll film cameras are ideal for amateur use in black-and-white work. Film is readily available, the camera is compact and cannot be considered a burden. Some of the folding types slip easily into a coat pocket. Many of these cameras are available with fine lenses, and shutters with speed suitable for any need. Flash equipment, filters and other accessories are reasonably priced, and will give a lifetime of service. The negative produced gives a contact print that is worth looking at.

Many of these cameras are available with complete outfits that cost between $50 and $100. Color is not beyond the reach of these cameras, but personally I believe that 35mm slides are the most economical and practical method of making amateur color pictures. A slide projector and screen is needed in addition to the camera, and the results when the slide is projected often amaze the viewers. A good 35mm camera with slide projector and screen can be purchased for $75 to $125.

Heredity, Environment Clash In Nature, Too

By DELOS SMITH
United Press Science Editor
NEW YORK (UP)—Scientists pursuing summer science in the cool of the Maine woods have agrish that some individuals would flourish in their environment if it weren't for their heredity while others would realize the full possibilities of their heredity if it weren't for their environment.

Every summer scientists gather at the Roscoe B. Jackson Memorial Laboratory in Bar Harbor where facilities for scientific work are as ideal as the weather is pleasant. One group this summer held an informal discussion of how and to what extent the first experiences of an individual establish his personality.

They cited both baby humans and baby dogs in their arguments, and one scientist had reference to either environment or heredity could limit personality development.

Differences Noted
Dr. Sibyle Escalona, of the Child Study Clinic, Yale University, cited her studies of human infant behavior at the Menninger Foundation, Topeka, Kan. They showed that no two humans behaved alike at the very beginning of life in the world, and these differences in behavior appeared to be innate, that is produced by the genes and therefore inherited.

She granted that no one could say with certainty if these differences in infant behavior continued despite environmental influences through childhood and into adult life. The conferees agreed that here was a fertile field for scientific study—if these hereditary differences do persist, scientific handling of the child might permit the most favorable development of his personality possible.

Dr. Sherman Ross, associate professor of psychology, University of Maryland, who served as chairman, summarized Dr. Escalona's findings into six "areas of differences" in innate human infant behavior. They differed in their general sensitivity, in their reactions to what went on around them, in the level of their activity, in their degree of muscular tension responses, in the time of these responses, and in responsiveness of their bodies (skin response, diarrhetic response, etc.).

Dr. J.P. Scott, head of the division of behavior studies of the Jackson Laboratory, said genetic behavior differences appeared also in dogs. The Jackson Laboratory specializes in the breeding of genetically pure animals for scientific work. And "the real problem" in dogs, he continued, was whether or not these genetic differences continued into adult behavior. His dog studies gave some indication that they did.

Other Animals
"In the early period up to 10 days of age," he said, "the puppy shows little behavior except reflexes having to do with eating and defecation. Between 10 days and three weeks of age, the puppy undergoes a metamorphosis of behavior. He develops sight, hearing, motor co-ordination and begins to learn: as the adult learns. Between three weeks and 10 weeks of age, the puppy normally forms primary social relationships."

"If he has associated solely with dogs until he is past 100 weeks of age, he may never become a good pet for humans. All puppies go through these same general stages. Differences in behavior can be found at the very earliest stages and differences in the emotional and physiological processes seem to be particularly important."

Frank Bauer of the Jackson Laboratory told the conference that some goslings that have seen humans in the first seconds of life later consider humans to be geese and ignore true geese that a duck raised among chickens fell in love with a rooster; that a white peacock baby raised with sea turtles wanted to associate only with sea turtles and ignored peacocks; that kittens raised in an environment in which cats killed rats, grew up to kill rats but kittens raised with rais were slow in learning to kill them and never learned to eat them. From all these examples, Bauer concluded:

"The human, with its great capacities for learning, must certainly be affected by early experiences. Early experiences have effects upon lower animals."

Suckers Lose In Glass Eye Caper

LOS ANGELES (U.P.)—The latest bunco game in these parts is known as "the glass eye caper."

The operation is simple and very often very effective, possibly because the victim may have a bit of larceny in his heart. It goes like this:

A well-dressed, impressive looking man enters a store—just about any small establishment will do. As the proprietor or clerk looks up, he sees the gentleman (he's obviously all of that) suddenly raise a handkerchief to his eye, then appear to look for something on the floor.

He explains he has lost his glass eye, and continues the search.
However, he gives up in a few minutes, explaining he is in a hurry to catch a plane. He gives the proprietor the name and address of a fashionable hotel where he says he lives and tells him he will give him a $100 reward if he finds and returns the eye.

The "gentleman" leaves, and shortly afterward another man enters the store pretends interest in the goods until something on the floor catches his eye. He stoops down and, lo and behold! he apparently has found the glass eye.
The bargaining starts, with the $100-minded proprietor finally getting the eye from the man for $50. He figures at least a $50 profit.
But the proprietor's telegram to the hotel is returned. It seems the gentleman isn't known there.
And the victim discovers too late the eye is worth a lot less than $50.

About 700 million pounds less of creamery butter were produced in 1952 than in 1940 in the United States.

Australian Flora Suffers Decline

MELBOURNE, Australia (U.P.)—A British botanist, giving Australia's native flora the once-over, found enough in nine months to produce a few shocks.

Dr. Ronald Melville, in charge of the Australian section at Kew Gardens, London, will spend 12 months in all on the project. Here is what he claims to have found already:
1. Many native plants are entirely extinct and little is left of the rest.
2. The big timber has disappeared for good.
3. In 100 years Australians have destroyed the natural appearance of the country.
4. Fire, rabbits and human beings are the worst enemies of Australia's native plants.

Erosion Serious
Melville criticized government inaction over soil erosion. He pointed out that erosion noted in an official survey in 1946 had proceeded unchecked since then. This makes the water flow down the mountainsides in small rivers instead of leaking through gradually, the botanist added.
Dr. Melville "roughed it" in the outback regions of Western Australia, South Australia, Queensland, Tasmania and Victoria. He traveled mostly in a truck and carried a tent, two cameras (one for color) record notebooks and collecting presses.
He found several new kinds of boronia and orchids. He also discovered new forms of rushes which will help him work out intricate problems of classification. Dr. Melville made sure he gathered five specimens each time—four for herbariums in Australia and one to take back to New Gardens.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (UP)— Railroad shares, with losses ranging to more than a point, led the stock market downward early today on increased volume.

The decline in the carriers drove prices in that group to their worst levels this year. Industrials, as measured by the averages, now reach back to June 22 levels.

Dealings also picked up on the sell-off with the low-priced issues dominating. Sales in the first hour totaled 350,000 shares, the most since June 25, compared with 180,000 in the same period yesterday.

Denver & Rio Grande issues led the carriers downward. The common slumped 4 3/4 points to 91 1/4, and the preferred was off 2 points to 93 1/2. Southern Pacific was also a weak spot with a loss of 1 1/2 points to a new low of 41 1/2. Others declined fractionally.

A few highprices oil shares showed wide changes. Superior Oil of California dropped 20 points to 80 1/2.

Benquet Consolidated Mining dominated dealings. It opened on a block of 74,900 shares at 1 1/4 unchanged. Steels and autos dipped fractionally, tires had declines ranging to around a point, and utilities dipped a few cents.

Pitt ABC Force Destroys Liquor Still

Truman Asserts Peace Requires Show Of Force

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UP)—Former President Harry S. Truman warned the nation that America may not be able to avoid World War II unless it meets the threat of Soviet aggression "with force."

Mr. Truman broke his self-imposed silence Monday to express his views before a convention of 1,500 Disabled American Veterans. He said that Hitler and Mussolini were "second raters compared to the Russians," adding:

"The only way to meet the threat of the Russians is with force."

The former President praised his own "containment" policy as having kept "the Russians from overrunning the free world." He added that if America had assumed its responsibilities in 1920 World War II might have been averted.

"We offered disarmament," Truman said, referring to the stand of the U.S. under his administration. "We offered control of atomic energy on an international basis, but we were blocked in every attempt by the Russians."

President Eisenhower sent the convention a message expressing regret that he was unable to attend. His message, which was printed in the official program, said the "proudest proof of the value we Americans place on our citizenship in a free land is the readiness, whenever necessary, to risk our lives in defense of our country."

N. Koreans Spat In Colonel's Face

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP)—A New York colonel stood by helplessly today while 12 North Koreans spat in his face.

Lt. Col. Arthur Le Fevre of 176-11 76th Ave., Flushing, declined to strike any of the North Koreans in order to avoid an incident.

But Le Fevre said he would report the action of the North Koreans to his control officer with the hope that a protest would be made to the military armistice commission.

The insults began when the truck load of North Koreans returning to Communism pulled up at the prisoner exchange point.

Their leader made a propaganda speech against the United Nations and exhorted them to take action.

As each North Korean stepped down he walked over to Le Fevre and a South Korean officer and spat in their faces.

Le Fevre stopped the unloading of the truck on three occasions and protested bitterly to a Communist officer on duty with him at the exchange point.

The Communist officer ordered the men to behave but they ignored him and he took no other action.

Four Communist members of the neutral nations supervisory commission also watched the proceedings but made no move to prevent the North Koreans from spitting on Le Fevre.

Pictures Taken In Palestine To Be Shown Here

Motion pictures made in Palestine less than six months ago will be shown at the Pentecostal Holiness Church at Thirteenth and Cotanche Streets this evening beginning at 7:45.

Bringing his newest movies of Bible lands to Greenville, is the Reverend Dr. Bryon A. Jones of Portsmouth, Virginia who has visited the Holy Land a number of times since World War II.

Dr. Jones will speak briefly and then narrate as the picture proceeds, giving explanation where such is deemed necessary to a clear understanding of the pictorial presentation.

The Reverend Jones is pastor of the London Street Pentecostal Holiness Church in Portsmouth, Virginia and has occupied this pulpit for eighteen years. Aside from his pastoral work he has taken a great interest in the department of Education and Youth of his denomination.

Saw Russians In Gun Positions

TOKYO (UP)—A freed Turk who spoke to Russian soldiers in North Korea confirmed today earlier reports that Soviet troops manned anti-aircraft guns against United Nations planes during the Korean conflict.

Cpl. Jan Andronikyan, 25, of Istanbul, Turkey, said he saw Russian soldiers working around guns that dotted the hills along the route of his march to prison camp No. 5. He said he spotted "about 30 Russians" riding south from Pyongyang in a truck.

"I know they were Russians because I spoke to them in Russian," he said. "They passed us on the road and I said good morning to them and asked for some matches. They tried to give them to me, but the Chinese stopped them."

The young corporal, who speaks six languages and was used as an interpreter, said the Russians "were wearing mixed uniforms." All of them had Russian boots, but the rest of their uniforms were slightly different. They did not wear Chinese uniforms, so it was easy to tell them apart.

He said he did not actually see the Russians fire the guns; but the weapons were used against U.N. planes during the many aerial battles he said he watched from the prison compound on the banks of the Yalu River.

"We saw many dogfights," he said. "A lot of the planes were knocked down by anti-aircraft fire and in plane-to-plane fights, but we could not tell whose they were."

Andronikyan told of seeing what he thought were "Russian diplomats" riding in jeeps near the North Korean capital.

Drunken drivers caused accidents which killed 54 people and injured 1,406 in Belgium in 1952.

RUSSELL, Kan. (UP)—Kansas' puppy 1953 wheat crop gave birth to the story that a farmer's straw hat blew off during the harvest and went through the combine. "That's all right," he said, "with this lousy yield I've already lost my shirt."

Israel Sentences Terrorist Group

SARAFAND, Israel (UP)—Thirteen convicted terrorists were sentenced to prison terms of from one to 12 years by a military court today for a program of violence designed to overthrow the government.

The court said the 13 may appeal their sentences to Premier David Ben Gurion and to the commander-in-chief of the Israeli army.

Members of the group were accused of planting a bomb which damaged the Soviet legation in Tel Aviv in February, leading to a temporary break in diplomatic relations between Israel and Russia.

Running Again

PINETOWN (UP)—A contest for the U. S. Senate in next spring's Democratic primary was assured today as perennial candidate Olla Ray Boyd announced he will run against all comers.

The Pinetown pig breeder has often been a candidate for the Senate, for governor and last year sought backing in a bid for the Democratic presidential nomination. He has never won an election.
