Dulles Wants UN Charter Revised

BOSTON (UP) — Secretary of State John Foster Dulles today called for important revisions in the "pre-atomic age" charter of the United Nations.

The present charter reflects "serious inadequacies," Dulles said, hinting strongly that the United States wants its veto provisions overhauled.

The charter was drawn up in San Francisco in 1945, a few months before the first atomic attack, against Hiroshima, Japan. That development made the charter "obsolete" before it came into effect, Dulles said.

In an address prepared for delivery before the diamond jubilee meeting of the American Bar Association, Dulles said the veto power, which Russia has used extensively in the United Nations Security Council, was one of the charter's "serious inadequacies."

A special conference to consider revision of the charter, Dulles said, will be considered at a 1955 meeting of the General Assembly. He reiterated that the United States will then vote in favor of holding the special conference on charter review.

Dulles also spoke out strongly against the so-called Bricker amendment to the Constitution which would limit the treaty-making powers of the president. He said the amendment, if approved, would have a "calamitous effect" on conduct of international affairs and decrease the government's ability to meet "peril."

The ABA international law section voted yesterday 64-12 against a resolution endorsing the amendment, named for its chief sponsor, Sen. John Bricker of Ohio.

The Eisenhower administration has faith in the United Nations, Dulles said, but it is necessary that the charter "be altered in some important respects" if the U. N. is to end the menace of danger facing the world today.

Had the delegates at San Francisco in the spring of 1945 known of the A-bomb's power for mass destruction, he said, provisions dealing with disarmament and the regulation of armaments would have been "far more emphatic and realistic."

Communists Free 133 More Jubilant Americans Today

'Big Switch' Nearing Close

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP) — The Communists freed 133 more Americans today as "Operation Big Switch" went into its final two weeks.

Besides the Americans, 267 other Allied captives of the Reds passed through "Freedom Gate." The Americans were in good condition and jubilant.

On the Communist side of Freedom Gate a dazzling ceremony was held for the men freed by the United Nations Command.

North Korea Lt. Gen. Lee Sang Cho, senior Communist member of the Military Armistice Commission headed the welcoming committee. Members were dressed in Russian-style blue trousers with crimson stripes.

Tuesday's exchange pushed the total of Allied prisoners freed past the 9,000 mark — including 2,128 Americans. If the Communists continue to repatriate prisoners at their present rate of 400 daily, the last captive, probably Major Gen. William F. Dean, will go through Freedom Gate on or before Sept. 10

United Nations officers believe Dean and a few other high-ranking officers will be the last to be freed.

An officer returned in Tuesday's group said some high-ranking officers are now at nearby Kaesong awaiting the trip to freedom.

First Lt. Henry L. Nielsen 24, of 400 LaSalle Ave., St. Joseph, Mich., the first man from officer prison Camp No. 2 to arrive at Panmunjom, said the officers recently had been released from prisons.

He said all Camp No. 2 prisoners had reached Kaesong, including colonels, majors and captains who had been sentenced to up to 10 months for "forming reactionary groups."

"I think they were very lucky," he said. "We figured they would be kept back."

Nielsen said he knew of no officers who had chosen to remain with the Communists or who had been classified as progressive.

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP)—The biggest mystery in Korea today centers around Major Gen. William F. Dean.

When will Dean, highest-ranking prisoner held by the Communists, come home to freedom? In the United States that would be called the $64 question.

The Communists claim that Dean is well and will be released when his turn comes. They say he will be repatriated without any fanfare and be treated as an ordinary prisoner.

The Reds have hinted they will hold him until the end of "Operation Big Switch," when the last of 3,313 Americans to be repatriated walk through Freedom Gate.

Only one of the 2,128 Americans released thus far had news of Dean while held by the Communists.

Sgt. Edward Williams, 23, of Vicksburg, Miss., said last Saturday that other prisoners told him they once saw Dean in notorious Communist Camp No. 5.

Another freed prisoner, Marine Pfc Leonard Steege, 20, Medford, Me. said he had heard rumors in Kaesong that Dean would be the last man set free.

Brigadier R. M. Jerram, head of the United Nations Red Cross team, disclosed yesterday that his unit, while inspecting Communist prison camps, discreetly had made inquiries about Dean. But the British brigadier said the Communists ignored the questions.

Many Cases For Criminal Court

By HOWARD LINDSAY
Reflector Staff Writer

A full schedule of cases, including at least three involving slayings for grand jury consideration, await the opening next Monday of Pitt County's criminal term of Superior Court.

Of the 70-odd cases on the calendar, 42 are for grand jury review when it convenes at 10 a.m. Monday. Not all of these, however, will be tried at this term.

Honorable J. Paul Frizzelle, resident judge from Snow Hill, is presiding for this session.

Booked for grand jury deliberation are cases of David Chadwick, 22-year-old Kinston Negro, and Ronald Ned Crawford, 24, of near Greenville, both referred for Superior Court action after Pitt County coroner jury rulings found probable cause.

Hearing for Chadwick will be in connection with the fatal shooting of William Stanley Gorham, 22, of Greenville, near the corner of Clark and Twelfth Streets in Greenville last June.

Crawford's case involves the knife slaying of 18-year-old Frank Braxton at a service station near the Greenville city limits on July 26. Both of these cases are set for trial.

Grand jury action also is slated for the case of Edward Hunter, 46-year-old Negro of Venters Crossroads section, in connection with the death last week of Sylvester Phillips of the same section.

Other jail and abandonment and non-support cases docketed after drawing of the calendar are slated to be added.

Other cases on the calendar for this term, the first held since last April, include a wide assortment of charges, ranging from arson to failure to list taxes.

'Thank You Notes'

The recent Little League Tournament held in Greenville was "the best it has ever been my pleasure to attend," said Assistant Sectional Director of the South Carolina Little League, Charles F. Neyle, in a letter received here this morning by Tournament Committee Chairman Lester Turnage.

Praising Greenville's "friendliness and hospitality," the note went on, " . . . if it were in these boys power they would certainly make Greenville their second home."

Neyle stated he wished to express "sincere appreciation and heartfelt gratitude" for the reception accorded the Little Leaguers here.

The letter, commending Turnage for "a job well done," concluded with the hope that "someday we will be able to return to the friendliest city in the south, Greenville, North Carolina."

Mr. J. W. Morgan, Mayor of Birmingham, Alabama, also wrote a letter of praise concerning the tournament, as he stated, " . . . the reception and courtesies extended our team while in Greenville were so extremely generous and good, prompting me to express . . . our deepest appreciation."

The Birmingham mayor added that he was sure team members and managers would "forever carry in their minds" memories of Greenville's hospitality.

All-Time Record For Leaf Prices

Prices being paid on the Greenville Tobacco Market today were "the highest that have ever been paid here in the entire 63-year history of the market even including the famous year of 1919," said Sales Supervisor W. L. Whedbee in a statement this morning.

After advancing his opinion on the unusually high price levels, Whedbee said comparatively light sales of yesterday and today were due to hot, dry weather, making handling of tobacco difficult.

Figures released on yesterday's sales show a total of 610,078 pounds bringing $319,200.35 for a gross average of $52.32. Producers sales accounted for 547,848 pounds for $298,753.05, an average of $54.53.

One farmer, who has sold his crop on the Greenville market for 57 years, stated this year was the best he had ever seen. It was unofficially reported that one barn of tobacco from his farm brought an average of 68 cents per pound for the entire amount.

Practical tops remained 69 cents, although several choice piles sold slightly higher on floors yesterday and this morning.

Whedbee's statement this morning also said, "If I were permitted to order . . . the exact prices that I would like to see paid to the farmers who sell here, I would order for the Greenville Tobacco Market exactly the same prices that are being paid here today."

The Sales Supervisor stated, that in his opinion, current high prices were due to the buyers' discovery that tobacco in other belts is in short supply and of inferior quality.

Primings, lugs, and nondescript grades continued to constitute the majority of sales.

Tobacco supported at 14 cents per pound brought as much as 33 to 35 cents yesterday and today while medium grades maintained continually high averages.

Increased sales are expected tomorrow and Friday.

Pitt's Freed GI Tells Of Ordeal In Korea, Captivity

Pvt. James E. Gatlin, Pitt County's first prisoner of war to return from Korea, calmly sat in the living room of his mother's home in Simpson this morning and told of his experiences as a prisoner of the Chinese.

The 23-year-old repatriated POW walked in the front door of his mother's home about 6:30 last night, and mother and son greeted each other with open arms. The mother, Zilphia Gatlin, knew her son was enroute home from Fort Jackson, S. C., but did not know what day he would arrive here.

Asked to comment on his return to freedom after five months in a communist prison camp, Pvt. Gatlin declared, "As I've said and always will say, it felt wonderful getting back to a new life again."

His mother commented, "It wasn't anything but God protecting him, and I will never forget the Lord for hearing my prayers."

Pvt. Gatlin was taken prisoner by the Chinese on February 27 while he and seven companions battled to hold their outpost near famous Old Baldy mountain on the blazing Korean front.

The repatriated soldier was reluctant to talk of conditions surrounding his capture or the fate of the other seven men with him at the outpost but he said he was the only one captured. He said American officials had told repatriated prisoners to "be careful" in talking with reporters about their capture and other soldiers.

At the time he was captured, Pvt. Gatlin said he was wounded in the right arm by a burp gun, and then taken prisoner by Chinese troops. It happened about 2 a. m. after heavy fighting in the sector.

His treatment by the communists was "fairly good", he said, and as a whole it seemed treatment of prisoners held by communists improved greatly after Januray, 1953. "The fellows captured earlier had a much rougher time than we did."

"When I was first captured I saw a doctor one time," Gatlin related, "and he dressed my wound. After that the wound healed mostly on its own."

After his capture, he said, he was taken to a small Korean village where he and four other Americans and one Korean were held for approximately 40 days in a wooden building five feet long and six feet wide. "We couldn't go out of the building except to go to the latrine," he said. Each prisoner was given one blanket and one quilt, and slept on the floor on the little building which had no lights and no fire for warmth. While there, they received two meals a day which consisted of rice in the morning and beans and rice in the evening.

Later, Gatlin was transferred to Prison Camp 5 which was just north of the Yalu River. There, he said, treatment on his particular group was better than he previously had received. He was placed in company six of the camp. That company Gatlin explained, was composed only of men captured after January 1, 1953, and the 79 men in it were kept approximately a mile from the main portion of Camp 5.

"We were kept entirely separate from the other prisoners," he said. "The Chinese told us the reason we were not to talk to those other prisoners was because they thought we were crazy. They told the other prisoneres we thought they were crazy too."

Pvt. Gatlin said he did not know anything about the treatment received by prisoners in the main body of the camp except what he learned from repatriates returning to the United States. He said, however, that the older prisoners received much harsher treatment from the communists than those captured late in the war.

In his own group, he said, the treatment was fairly good. The diet in Camp 5 consisted of rice, bean soup and occasional pork. Pvt. Gatlin lost 17 pounds during his five months as a prisoner of war. "We all lived together as happily as we could," he said.

The prisoners spent most of their time taking care of their own compound, repairing buildings and other jobs within their prison. A few men in his group, Gatlin said, found time to plant a small pot of flowers.

At least once every week, he related, the prisoners heard lectures by their captors but he added, "as far as I know there were no 'progressives' in our group. If there were I didn't know about it." Most of the news the prisoners got, Gatlin said, was distorted with a lot of communist propaganda; but they were able to fairly well keep up with how the war was going.

"When the news sounded good for the U. N. and bad for the communists," he said, "the communists were impatient with the prisoners and would punish prisoners for the slightest thing. It was up to the individual to use his own common sense and play it cool and not do anything that would cause any sort of commotion."

Finally the day came when the communists came into Gatlin's compound and read the list of names of men to be repatriated in the first group. "There was a lot of excitement for the next two or three days."

Phone Strike Threat Is Held Up At Last Minute

NEW YORK (UP)—A threatened noon walkout of CIO long distance telephone workers failed to materialize today as union negotiators pressed for a "quick and peaceful" contract settlement with the American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

As the reported deadline for an unauthorized strike passed John Lotz, president of the New York local of the Communications Workers of America, issued a statement saying:

"We're doing everything we can to reach a peaceful and quick settlement with the company. The membership is restive, but there is no walkout and none has been authorized."

Negotiations involving 22,000 AT&T employes who man the nation's long distance and overseas telephone exchanges were resumed this morning amid charges by union members that the company was "stalling."

After a two-hour morning session, company and union representatives announced they would meet again at 2 p.m. They refused to comment on progress of the talks which were being watched closely by the hot-tempered membership of the Manhattan local which represents one-third of the CWA's total long lines strength.

Lotz said he expected the company to press for union acceptance of a wage settlement which its subsidiary, Southern Bell Telephone Co., reached with 50,00 employes yesterday in Atlanta.

The Southern Bell settlement was for a weekly wage increase ranging from $1 to $3 according to the size of cities where exchanges are located. The long lines workers are seeking a $3.50-a-week general wage increase.

Churchill May Intervene To Prevent Policy Split

LONDON (UP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill may make a direct approach to President Eisenhower in an attempt to close the dangerous breach between United States and British policy in Korea, it was reported today.

Churchill, about recovered from the illness which compelled him to take a two months rest, is now handling personally the British side of the makeup of the Korean political conference.

Informants close to him say that the Anglo-American policy rift is his chief preoccupation.

Well informed sources reported the possibility that Churchill may make some move to contact Mr. Eisenhower directly to stop what he is said to consider a dangerous trend.

Churchill has come to London from his country home twice in the last week to preside at special cabinet meetings, largely centered on the Korean issue and the United States' objection to including India on the proposed political conference.

The 4,000,000-a-day circulation Daily Express, owned by Conservative leader Lord Beaverbrook, came out in support of the American stand today.

"What matters most? Association with India or the American alliance?" the Express said editorially. "It is far more important that Britain and the United States should get together than that they should fall out over India.

"Under the government of Premier Jawaharlal Nehru, India is no friend of the United States and has no excessive worth of feeling for Britain. She has repeatedly put obstacles in the way of the relationship between Britain and America."

Suicide Ruled In Falkland Death

FALKLAND — Robert Jackson (Jack) Little, 45, of Falkland, died this morning at Pitt Memorial Hospital as the result of a rifle bullet wound which a coroner's ruling has termed self-inflicted.

Jackson, a life-long resident farmer of the Falkland community, died about 8 a.m. in the hospital.

Coroner G. H. Rouse said today at noon that it was "a plain case of suicide" and that no further investigation will be necessary. The bullet, he said, entered at the mouth and lodged in the head. Little's body was found by his wife in the front room of their farm home early this morning.

Funeral services have been set for 3:30 p.m. tomorrow at the home near Falkland, with burial to follow in the Falkland cemetery. Survivors include his wife, mother, three sisters and a brother.

Cost Of Living Index Hit New Record High In July

WASHINGTON UP) — The government reported today that the cost of living climbed to a new all-time peak in mid-July, marking the second all-time high in two months.

A pay increase of one cent an hour for 1,000,000 auto workers will become effective with the first payday after Sept. 1.

Rising prices for food, housing and medical care and transportation raised the Bureau of Labor Statistics' consumers' price index two-tenths of one per cent over the mid-June record. The mid-July index was 14.7 per cent above 1947-49 prices.

A further increase of just a tenth of one per cent in the index would have meant a two-cent hourly pay raise for the auto workers, whose contracts are tied to the rise and fall of the government's price report.

The Bureau said the new increase put the index 1.1 per cent higher than it was five months ago—in February, after which living costs started rising steadily.

The bureau said the largest increase from mid-June to mid-July was for housing and medical care, up three-tenths of one per cent. This was due to rent increases in such cities as Atlanta, Cincinnati, Detroit, Kansas City and St. Louis. Household operations rose due mainly to higher prices for laundry and dry cleaning services.

Transportation advanced two-tenths of one per cent with higher prices for gasoline and motor oil, while food costs edged up one-tenth of one per cent.

Despite the increase in food costs, the Bureau said the food index was still 2.1 per cent under July 1952, but 13.2 per cent above its level of June, 1950, just before the Korean war started.

There was a 9 per cent decline in fresh vegetable prices. Green beans, cabbage, celery and tomatoes led the items showing drops.

Protest Against Wearing Shorts

WINCHESTER, Ky. (UP)—Thirty persons representing five churches appeared before the City Commission here last night and protested that women wearing shorts on the streets are "ruining the morale of the people."

One Protestant called the wearing of shorts by women "terrible" and added, "we are all straight on the road to hell unless something is done about it."

Fraud Attempts Are On Upswing

WASHINGTON (UP) — The FBI reported today that cases of attempted fraud against the government were "on the upswing" last year.

It said that in the 1953 fiscal year which ended last June 30, there were 202 convictions for such crimes, almost double the 106 convictions of the previous fiscal year.

As a result of these convictions, the government recovered or saved $3,242,581, a boost of almost 50 per cent above the $2,165,000 of the previous year.

Nation's Schools Far Short Of Classrooms For Big Enrollment

WASHINGTON (UP)—Three out of every five school rooms in the United States will be overcrowded this fall, the U.S. Office of Education said today.

The nation's public grade and high schools are short about 345,000 classrooms for the record number of pupils who will be swarming back to school, the office said.

Grade schools also will be short about 72,000 qualified teachers. The office said this shortage can be met only by further overcrowding or hiring teachers who don't meet "desirable" educational standards.

A survey by the education office showed that school and college enrollment in the coming school year will be the biggest in history—some 36,949,700 students, or 23.1 per cent of the total U. S. population. That is nearly 2,000,000 more than last year.

Most of the increase will occur in the grade schools. Some 26,931,000 children—1,582,000 more than last year—will attend public and private elementary schools.

More than 3,000,000 of them will be entering first grade.

Secondary schools, both public and private, will have 7,302,000 students, an increase of 274,000. The college and university enrollment will total about 2,500,000 or 100,000 more than last year.

The education office said school construction "is not keeping pace with classroom needs," even though a record 50,000 new classrooms were built last year and many more will be added this year.

All told, 425,000 additional classrooms will be need by 1960, when the schools and colleges are expected to have 10,000,000 more students than they had last spring.

It also said colleges and normal schools are turning out an inadequate number of new teachers. For example, 45,700 elementary teachers were graduated this year, but the public schools need 118,000.

Superbomber Tried As Flying Aircraft Carrier For Fighters

WASHINGTON (UP)— The Air Force apparently has found a way to combine jet fighter speed and heavy bomber range for atomic attacks against distant targets.

It announced it has successfully turned the B-36 superbomber into a flying aircraft carrier which can release and retrieve jet fighter-bomber in flight.

Successful experiments have shown, the Air Force said that an F-84F Thunderstreak jet can be launched from the belly of a B-36 several miles above the earth and then recovered, still in high-altitude flight, by an intricate set of "sky hooks" and lifting apparatus which hauls it back into the "mother" ship.

This kangaroo-like combination would have both the intercontinental range of the B-36 and the speed of the fighter, the Air Force said.

The F-84F "parasite," rated in the "over 600 mile per hour" class, would be far less vulnerable to enemy fighters than the 435-mile-an-hour B-36.

Though the Air Force said the fighter would be used for "reconnaissance," it added that with slight modification the F-84F could perform "varied types of missions."

The Thunderstreak jet, a swept-back model produced by Republic Aircraft Corp., weighs about 25,000 pounds, mounts six machine guns and can carry a 4,000-pound bomb load or 32-five-inch rockets. Its operational combat range is more than 1,700 miles — meaning more than 850 miles out and back again.

Thus the intercontinental B-36—with a range of more than 10,000 miles — could haul the fighter some 4,000 or more miles from base, then launch it for an atomic attack 850 miles away at a speed the lumbering bomber could never match. The bomber could remain in relatively safe territory to recover its fighter and take it home.

Both the F-84F and the B-36 have operational ceilings of over 45,000 feet, or more than eight miles. The Air Force said launching the parasite at such an altitude would extend the range by eliminating use of fuel in climbing.

The Air Force said the experiments were conducted at Carswell Air Force Base, Fort Worth, Tex. They apparently reached a successful stage by the spring of 1952, if not earlier.

The Air Force plans its first public demonstration of the launching of a fighter from a B-36 in September at the Na[illegible] Dayton, O.

Mrs. George Finley Sims of St. Louis, formerly of Vosges, France, announces the marriage of her daughter, Gertrude Marie Dette, to James Calvin Smith of Arlington, Va. on Monday evening, August 17, in St. Louis.

The informal, double ring ceremony was performed in the sanctuary of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Messiah, with the Rev. George W. Wittmer officiating. Following the ceremony, members of the wedding party and close friends were entertained at supper at the Lennox Hotel.

Fashioned in the French empire style, the bride's champagne-beige, stitched satin gown was complemented by a cloud-pink feather calotte garlanded with small satin petals. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink summer flowers.

Dressed in pale blue net, Mrs. Melvin Reeder of Florissant, Mo. attended Miss Dette as matron of honor.

Mr. Smith, son of Mrs. John Preston Smith Sr. and the late Mr. Smith of Arlington, Va., formerly of Greenville, had as his best man George W. Hishman, General Auditor of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis. Ushers were Elmer H. Wobbe and Robert K. Hebden.

A graduate of East Carolina College, Mr. Smith is associated with the McDonnell Aircraft Corporation as a methods and procedures analyst.

Red Oak News

At a called meeting of the church board and church members last Sunday evening, the question of having a full-time minister was discussed. After a motion was made to go to full time service and much discussion it was voted to accept the motion. There were 33 members present at the meeting. Twenty-three or 70% voted for full time, 4 or 12% voted against and 6 or 18% did not express themselves. We will begin full time services in November. Our present minister, Rev. Harold L. Tyer, will serve us and he and his family are planning to move to Greenville sometime within a year. Of 17 members on the church board, 15 were present at the above meeting. Those absent were Joe Joyner Sr. and Robert Allen who is in the service.

The Young Married Couples Class of Red Oak met at the community building for their August meeting.

The meeting was called to order by the president, S. C. Winchester, and we sang "Take the Name of Jesus With You."

Old and new business was discussed. It was decided to have a "Fun Night" for everybody, both old and young, at the community building on Thursday night, September 3rd. Supper consisting of hotdogs, sandwiches, home-made ice cream, cold drinks, home-made candy and home-made cakes will be sold at the concession stand in the kitchen by Mr. and Mrs. Sam Winchester, Mr. and Mrs. George Haddock, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Joyner, Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis Allen and others.

This "Fun Night" will start off with a tacky party Everybody is invited to come dressed in something tacky. A prize will be given to the "tackiest" man, woman, boy and girl. Edgar Denton and Milton May will secure a judging committee.

Other games and contests will be planned by Hazel Tripp, Odell Evans, Bertha May Jackson, Charles and Nellie Ruth Tucker. A jail will be set up and there will be a policeman there to keep law and order. So mind your p's and q's or you will have to pay a fine. It is suggested that you bring a pocketful of pennies and nickels to take care of any fines that you may receive.

Mrs. Jarvis Tripp will get prizes for "Bingo" which will be headed by a committee composed of Amos Evans, Virginia Green, Dot Edwards, Sue May, Marjorie Allen, Jarvis Tripp Jr., Spooky Morgan and others.

It is hoped that all the community and friends from Greenville and neighboring communities will come out and enjoy this "Fun Night" and help on the organ fund.

Mrs. Odell Strickland was presented with many gifts by members of the class in anticipation of a "bundle from heaven."

Several games were enjoyed after which our hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Winchester, served refreshments.

Kinsey Defends Survey Purpose

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (UP)—Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey today defended his controversial sex studies as the findings of a scientist and said they were not an attempt to change or reform American sexual behavior.

The graying University of Indiana zoologist, author of the Kinsey reports on male and female sexual habits, would make no direct answer to criticism of his latest work, "Sexual Behavior in the Human Female."

"We do not propose or advocate any policies, sexually or otherwise," he said in a news conference here Tuesday. "We are scientists. When it comes to social policy it is up to the people themselves."

Kinsey made his remarks before addressing a near-capacity audience at the Greek Theater here on behalf of the Southern California Society for Mental Hygiene.

The scientist denied that the clergy was united in opposition to the publication of his latest work. He said he received active cooperation from every denomination, but admitted that individuals in every denomination had either declined or denied cooperation.

Kinsey's findings, based on a survey of more than 5,000 women, have been criticized with varying comments since reviews of the book appeared last week.

WRONG ROAD

MT. VERNON, Ill. (UP) — "Tickets, please," said the man at the fairground gate when the Shrine Circus was in town. "Tickets, my eye," an angry motorist replied. "I'm trying to get to Harrisburg.' He had been swept off the highway by the jam of circus-goers.

'Thank Heaven! At Last There's A Special Shampoo For Dry Hair!'

If you're like a lot of women we know who have dry hair, you've experimented with many different shampoos. But unless we miss our guess, you've never found a satisfactory one. You found that your hair seems dryer than ever, and has a way of behaving in a fly-away fashion for from two to three days after your shampoo. And have you wondered why you've had such dissappointing results from practically every shampoo you've tried?

Well, stop and think a minute. Has it occurred to you that your hair is a individual as your skin? It stands to reason, then, that no one shampoo could possibly be right for all types of hair.

Since your hair is dry, you need a shampoo that will lubricate your scalp and at the same time give your hair brilliance and lustre. These are things that most "all-purpose" shampoos cannot do. If they could, they wouldn't be right for, let's say, oily hair, which requires an entirely different kind of shampoo!

That's why Revlon developed fabulous new Aquamarine Shampoo in 4 custom formulas—and one was created expressly for dry hair.

You'll say it's a blessing the very first time you use it. You'll find that your hair, instead of being dry and unruly after a shampoo is actually beautiful, shiny and instantly manageable.

There are two reasons for this:

1. This shampoo was developed with the special needs of dry hair in mind. It conditions and lubricates the scalp. It actually helps to normalize your hair, not rob it of oils as some detergents do.

2. Thanks to a marvelous new ingredient called Magnetol, your hair actually acquires body during the shampoo and is as manageable immediately after your shampoo, as it would ordinarily be two or three days later!

Let us tell you how Magnetol works. This amazing ingredient actually becomes part of your hairshaft, during your shampoo. It clings through repeated rinsings, coating each hair with a normal, protective substance. No afterrinse, no hair conditioner is needed to supplement this action.

Aquamarine Shampoo actually conditions as it cleans. You need no after-rinse. Your hair will have the gleam and gloss of a hundred brush strokes after your shampoo with Aquamarine Shampoo for dry hair. And it comes in an unbreakable plastic bottle—so safe, such a comfort! Only $1.25.

Cannibalism In New Guinea Seen

PORT MORESBY, New Guinea (UP)—A jungle patrol leader told government officials today that raiders had butchered and eaten young members of a rival tribe in a massacre.

W. J. Johnston said his patrol had found the corpses of women and children and remains of the young men who had been cooked in a blood-spattered vegetable garden.

"The raiding party was in a mad frenzy," Johnston said. "After killing their victims, they hacked into trees to work off their lust."

Johnston said his patrol frightened the killers with rifle fire.

"I think the effect of firearms will be so great they will behave for some time," Johnston said.

Semi-Quarantine Follows Sudden Polio Outbreak

WALDWICK, N.J. (UP)—A tight state of emergency held Waldwick in semi-quarantine today after seven persons in the city of 7,000 were stricken by polio within a week.

Mayor Nelson Lumley declared a state of emergency Tuesday night following a special city council meeting at which doctors reported four adults and three children within a 500-foot residential area contracted polio.

He appealed to federal and state authorites for gamma globulin to inoculate 47 other persons exposed to the disease.

But Rep. William B. Widnall (R-N.J.) telephoned the mayor that the office of Defense Mobilizer Arthur S. Flemming had "temporarily" turned down the request for G-G.

Lumley's emergency order banned public recreational activities, picnics, parties and group meetings. Swimming pools were closed. The mayor said the state of emergency would last at least two weeks.

Lumley also telegraphed appeals for medical aid to Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll, state Health Commissioner Daniel Bergsma and members of the state's congressional delegation in Washington.

He said Widnall was unable to explain the federal refusal of gamma globulin but the congressman promised another attempt to obtain an allocation.

Sen. Robert Hendrickson (R-N.Y.) also promised "100 per cent support" in the appeal for G-G, the mayor said.

The seven polio victims lived in a 500-foot area across the Hudson River from New York.

The city council met three and one-half hours before Lumley decreed the two-week state of emergency.

Nurse's Murder Charged Teen-Age Purse-Snatchers

By WILLIAM D. HALL
United Press Staff Correspondent

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (UP)—Two teen-aged purse snatchers knifed a spinster nurse to death when they mistook a paper bag she was carrying for a purse, police said today.

Officers arrested the two Negro boys yesterday and charged them with first degree murder in the Aug. 2 stabbing of Miss Helen Swink, 54. The boys were identified as Karay Harris, 16, and William A. McQuerry, 14.

Police Chief Frank N. Littlejohn said their arrest and statements ended one of the biggest and most baffling manhunts in this city's history.

Miss Swink, who lived a sheltered and retiring life, was found on a dark street by a passing motorist.

He rushed her to Presbyterian Hospital where attendants said she had deep stab wounds in the breast, and just before she died she gasped out to a nurse and two detectives: "A Negro man chasing me. He didn't get me."

Police were baffled since a diamond ring and wrist watch she was wearing were not taken, nor was $115 she had pinned to her underclothes. She carried no purse, but had been bringing home a jar of ice water in a paper bag from the nursing home where she worked.

The first break in the case came Aug. 14, when two Negro boys snatched a purse from a woman on a street here and ran. Detectives recovered the purse and traced it to Harris and McQuerry.

Littlejohn said the two boys, lurking in the darkness, had apparently mistaken the bag Miss Swing was carrying for a purse.

"They rehearsed the whole thing for us," he said. "They weren't looking for her in particular—just any woman carrying a purse."

Littlejohn said the knife, a switchblade pocket knife with a three-inch blade, was found at the home of one youth when they were arrested.

"One of them stabbed her," he said. "We're not particularly interested in which one did it."

He said the two youths each accused the other of stabbing Miss Swink after they were arrested. Harris, he said, was on probation after a breaking and entering charge here.

North Carolina's Prison System Problem

The shake-up in North Carolina's Prison administration should not have come as a surprise to those who have followed developments in Raleigh over the past several months.

It was pretty much a foregone conclusion when A. H. Graham stepped into the top highway commission post that Prisons Director Anderson would not hold his post too long.

That conclusion was supported in the latter part of July when Graham ordered Anderson to fire Miss Ronie Sheffield as head of the woman's prison.

It is no secret that several prison employes have not been pleased with Anderson's administration since he came to be post of director of prisons under former Governor Kerr Scott. It is no secret either that Graham and Anderson did not see eye-to-eye on the relative importance of punishment for prisoners and rehabilitation of prisoners. Graham was in his job for four years, and Anderson could be removed by the governor at any time. The break was bound to come.

With the appointment of Bailey as new prison director and the ousting of Anderson, it would seem that the punishment theory for prisoners now had the upper hand over the rehabilitation philosophy which Anderson fostered. Nevertheless, it can not be denied that the rehabilitation program of Anderson has appreciable merit and should not be junked in its entirety by the new rulers of the state's prison system.

Then too, the report of the Prison Advisory Council of the state behooves a closer look into the prison operations of the state to see that improvements are made. If the state's prison system were not far short of what the council thinks it should be, the council would not have included in its report to the governor the phrase "it would be much better for us to resign so that we can freely devote our efforts to a greatly augumented campaign to pull North Carolina out of the present untensable position it is in as regards to effective prison administration."

Many shadows surrounding the prison administration of North Carolina and its relative effectiveness when compared to other states make it difficult for the layman to accurately evaluate the system. Yet it would appear that many improvements are needed.

Since Governor Umstead and Highway Commission Chairman Graham have in effect asserted their prerogative to run the state prison system to their own liking; they at the same time they have shouldered the responsibility for bringing about the marked improvements in the system which appear necessary.

It is their responsibility now to follow through with a positive program for improving the state's prison system.

Maybe Adlai Aimed At Wrong Voters

"We carried every country overseas", was Adlai Stevenson's reflection on last year's national election. And to tell the truth, we couldn't hope but wonder how many votes that was worth.

From the troubles these other countries are suffering, one is left to wonder just how wise were the planks in the Stevenson platform that had widespread foreign support. After all, our friends' voting and policy stands seems to get them (and sometimes us) only into deeper trouble.

In a more serious vein, we'll stick to that position taken when the campaign waxed warm and heavy: "Too bad two such fine candidates had to emerge at the same time."

Co-incidentally, we'd suggest Stevenson refrain from any enthusiasm over "carrying" the popular vote outside the United States. No matter how much we may like those non-citizens, they can't vote.

Real Hospitality Is Always Welcomed

The hospitality and friendliness of individuals, displayed en masse, is the kind most appreciated and best remembered. And it is likewise true that hospitality without the heart-felt interest of a host in his guest is as empty and meaningless as just about anything in this world can be.

On many occasions during the Little League district tournament here, guests went out of their way to praise the welcome and courtesies extended them by Greenville people. Now, letters are being received . . . "thank you notes" from out-of-state people, all bearing the same message of warmth toward our town.

Off-hand we can think of no better way of spreading the name and character of this community than by utilizing the natural sense of hospitality our people display. "Good publicity" is hardly the proper term to apply; but it is true that favorable comment inevitably follows when a citizenry exerts itself, on the personal level, to be friendly.

The youngsters and their families could have been lodged in a hotel or dormitories and forgotten. Instead, they were entertained in a manner that won innumerable friends who will remember Greenville for years to come.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

AN EXCELLENT FORMULA

Are you greatly disturbed over the fact that people do not agree with you? Well, you had better get over it fast because they never will. There will be disagreement in families, among friends, within nations, and throughout the world as long as the world lasts. Only in Russia today does everybody agree—and then only in appearance and because a sword hangs over their unfortunate heads or the gallows casts its shadow across their pathways. In free countries men are strident in their proclamation of disagreement and dissent.

Don't let disagreement bother you—rather let it stimulate you. Think of this free country of ours where we berate our public officials from president down to alderman, where we criticise our preachers, where we talk back to certain learned authorities. If a feature article or an editorial offends us, we write a letter. If we don't like the candidates on the ballot we don't bother to go to the polls. We can go to church or stay at home. We can be right or wrong. We can succeed or fail. The glory of our country abides in its combination of unity and dissent.

Here is a good formula. It is old, not original, and very excellent: "Agree to differ; unite to serve; resolve to love." Democracy makes all that possible; Christianity demands it.

'Skips' Can Be Traced

By ELMER ROESSNER

Shoplifters and "skips" share the blame for most retailers' ulcers.

For a store selling on credit, those who skip away without paying bills are probably the greater irritation. Piano dealers, for instance, worry little over shoplifters.

Stores can get police assistance against shoplifters, but running away from debts is not a criminal matter, except in certain circumstances, such as when mortgaged goods are removed.

Retailers, however, have defenses against skips. First, they can always get credit ratings before granting credit. Second, with diligence, they can trace defaulters.

Some of the steps by which a "skip" can be run down are disclosed in the current issue of Credit World. Here is how to trace John Q. Deadbeat, who moved without making the last 112 payments on a TV set:

Check with his employer, including his supervisor and the personnel department. See if the telephone company has a new listing for him. Check his wife's mother and all other relatives. Contact those whom he gave as reference. Check the references he gave other companies and follow up information on those you did not have.

Contact his former neighbors: two on each side of John's old home, two across the street and two across the back alley. Telephone his and his wife's former employers.

Check his finance company or bank references. If John lived in a housing project, try to find his address through the project office.

Send a deliver-to-addressee-only telegram to the old address and ask Western Union to report where delivery was made. Send a registered letter to the old address, writing on the envelope: "Deliver to addresse only. Please forward. Return receipt requested, showing address where delivered." Draw a new credit report, noting any information not on the original report. Write to "Occupant" at John's former address, asking for information.

Check neighborhood merchants. Check nearby schools where John's children may still be enrolled. Place person-to-person calls to cities to which John may have moved, and to John and his wife at their parents' address. Then turn the bill over to a collection agency.

SELF-SERVICE SPREADS TO TELEVISION REPAIRS

Here's another new kind of business. Charles Schlosser and Melvin Flatt have opened a "fix-it-yourself" television store in Brooklyn.

Parts are offered at discounts up to 40 per cent. The partners will give guidance for minor repairs but refer complicated repairs to mechanics. The store does not repair work on its own.

NICARAGUA LEADS IN CREDIT SURVEY

Nicaragua has been the best Latin American country to do business with in the last six months, according to the semi-annual survey by the National Association of Credit Men. It ranked first in credits and collections. Dominican Republic and Panama shared second place. Brazil was the only market in the "very poor" credit classification and the "very slow" collection class.

He Stared Down Dread Death

By RELMAN MORIN
For Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP)—A friend of mine, a newspaperman, closed his typewriter for the last time the other day.

The news hit hard and hurt, at first, as it always does. The vision of his red hair arose, and the freckles, like flecks of cinnamon, all over his Irish mug. His nose was large and defiant, and shaped pretty much like the prow of a frigate. He had a wide mouth and a boulder for a chin. The whole effect was of a fierce and formidable man.

And sometimes, around the office, he tried to put on a mask of irascibility, but it wouldn't have fooled a 4-year-old because he could never get the grin out of his warm brown eyes. So vivid a man he was.

But there is no room for sorrow in the manner of his passing, and that is the reason for this story.

Bill had cancer.

He weakened one morning in a hotel room a long way from his home. The pain had him so bad, he said, that it almost unhinged his knees.

Still, he got in his car, and barely crawling because of the weakness, started home. On the way, as he told me, a thought came to him suddenly. It sounds strange in the telling, but not if you look at it as he did.

He was glad it had come to him in this way, while he was alone, away from home, and the only one to know. That was his thought, and with it came a plan.

You can picture him on the highway, holding hard to the wheel, fighting down the pain and fear, and thinking, working out in his mind what he would do.

For nearly a week—and this is the gallantry and the wonder of the human soul—he said nothing and tried to let no sign appear in his face.

Meanwhile, he was conducting his own diagnosis. Bill had a strong bent for medicine and the study of it. He might have been a good doctor. Anyway, he said, he determined for himself what had happened, and the zone where the trouble must lie. He did it by turning to some medical books and matching his symptoms with what was written there.

His diagnosis turned out to be correct.

Then he went to a doctor for the examination. "The point is," he told me, "I was already 99 per cent certain. So the very worst news he could give me would be no more than I expected. And if I was wrong, well, that would be just that much better."

He made them give it to him straight, including the percentages in an operation,

Only then did he go home and tell his family. That was the hardest part, he said. He tried to think of some way to break it gently. He even considered lieing about it. The only time he ever flinched was in the moment when he must face Helen and the boy.

Incidentally, Bill had been a hard-shelled woman-hater until he met Helen. Now she and the boy mattered more to him than his own anguish. He used to say of his son, with mock despair ". . what he's good at his eating. . he'll eat anything that won't bite him first."

When he told them, he added, with that chin stuck out a mile, "this business may kill me, but by golly, it's not going to scare me to death. So cheer up."

Well, that was nearly two years ago. As soon as he could, he came back to his desk. If he had an occasional set-back, he tried not to show it. He never spared himself on the job. And he would kid around about how much better off he was than other people. He even claimed, "Why, they cut eight strokes off my golf game with that operation."

I don't suppose he ever tried to fool himself, though. He knew he would be a long time getting out of the woods. Bill never quite made it.

So vivid a man, and so brave. Surely, there can be no better proof of the indestructibility of the human soul than that if harbors such gallantry.

Farmville Club Is Keeping Busy

Yesterday's mail brought an interesting letter from Farmville written by Charles S. Edwards, with stationery headed, "The Courtesy Seat of Pitt County, Farmville."

Charles had read my column about the Greenville Kiwanis Club's scholarship fund and wanted to tell about Farmville's Kiwanis activities:

"I thought you might be interested in the work of the Farmville Kiwanis Club, which was sponsored in 1945 by the Greenville club. Ed Rawl and Chester Walsh headed the group which gave us the initial push, and we still have some of that first steam left.

"Our fund for underprivileged children is financed by proceeds from a food booth we operate each year at the Farmville Farmers Day. The committee in charge of this fund is most active.

"We also have a Scholarship Fund which has provided a total of ten years of college for young people in our community. One young lady graduated from East Carolina College last spring and we will have two students there in September.

"Money for this fund is provided by the Kiwanis Carnival, which is held in the local gym each fall. The talent is all local and mostly Kiwanis. The carnival consists of about 30 exhibits and half as many interesting booths, plus a minstrel. This year Sam Bundy will probably be a clown. If he is, he will be rather unusual in that it will not be necessary for him to make his face up!

"Dr. John Messick of ECC is an honorary member of our club. Put your family in the back seat and ride over to the carnival on the evening of either the 25th or 26th of September. You and Rachel will enjoy it all and the children will especially like the train."

Charles not only displayed his community spirit, but also his sense of humor. He started the letter, "Dear Cousin Jack: I am not sure we are related, so if you are just an ordinary Edwards with nothing left after paying your bills the first of each month, just ignore the word 'Cousin.' "

The idea of attending the Kiwanis Carnival sounds particularly interesting, especially the note about the train. That's something that I'd like to hear more about; not only to relate the news to the children, but to drink it in myself. No matter what size the train is, I'll enjoy it more than the children.

And I thank Charles.

What Other Editors Are Thinking

A BARGAIN BUY, BUT NO ADDED BONUS

(Charlotte Observer)

Some thought-provoking talk emerged from the first of a series of public forums on attracting new industry, held the other night in Zebulon. But, while a six-point program outlined by visiting industrialist is five-sixths sound and supportable, we disown the merit in his proposal that approved industries be given a five-year tax exemption as an added inducement.

Such an expedient, though employed in Mississippi with some apparent success, is patently unfair to existing industries that have financed their own development and paid their own way, counting taxes a basic part of the cost of doing business.

It amounts to public subsidy of private enterprise during the tax-free period, with no assurance that industries thus assisted will remain permanently established in the community or state involved.

Even if a waiver of taxes were legal in North Carolina and it isn't, we'd hate to see the state enrolled in a "giveaway" plan approaching open admission that our natural advantages for industrial development are not sufficiently strong to complete with our neighboring states in a fair-trade market.

We're willing to concede, as the visiting executive suggested, that North Carolina communities should cooperate with new industrial shoppers by installing water, sewer and utility services to serve industrial sites. Each community ought to survey its available labor potential, and develop vocational training programs geared to the need for skilled workmen. Preservation of future industrial areas by zoning and other restrictions is essential to a planned development The encouragement of a friendly attitude toward new industry by industrialists already established makes acknowledged sense.

But North Carolina's wealth of land, labor, transport, markets, climate, and natural resources is not yet so depleted that we need to wave a "tax free" banner at every possible investor who's looking for a Dixie bargain. For the package we offer, the price already is right.

Recession Worries Are Fading

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON—Although long-range economic forecasts can be as fickle as weather predictions, Government and private experts now anticipate no serious recession for the rest of 1953 or for 1954. Save in a few sectors, the outlook has become steadily brighter than it appeared to be only a few months ago.

Although official statistics on current business conditions will not be available until after Labor Day, preliminary figures reveal that the postwar boom is still rolling along.

Despite the Korean truce, the stretch-out of military production, falling farm income, high prices and pilfering taxes, the American people are earning and spending more money than ever before in a time of relative peace.

OPTIMISTIC SPIRIT—Manufacturers' advance orders, especially in such basic industries as steel and chemicals, and the increasing volume of purchases on credit reflect a general spirit of optimism. Rightly or wrongly, the earlier concern over a depression has disappeared.

Arthur F. Burns, President Eisenhower's economic adviser, sets great store on popular psychology as a national asset. Customers' habits and thinking, he feels, can depress or improve business conditions. The August letter of the National City Bank of New York emphasizes the importance of national attitudes. It says:

"Business depends, in the end, upon the enterprise and ambitions of people; upon their willingness to work in order to raise their standard of living; upon research and technological progress; upon saving and investment; upon good management of public and private affairs; upon cooperation and understanding to maintain fair and equitable terms for exchange of goods and services; and, finally, upon peace, order and stability."

On all these counts, or most of them, the American people appear to rate a high mark.

HIGH-LEVEL BUSINESS ACTIVITY—Basic conditions for high-level business activity are still present, as these figures suggest:

The gross national product for the July-August-September quarter will total about $350 billion, representing the value of both goods and services. The previous record for a similar period was $368 billion in the second quarter of this year, when there was no summer slowdown.

Personal income runs about $275 billion, or 5 per cent higher than a year ago. Of this amount, recipients spend about $225 billion, leaving a tidy balance for savings.

Employment still tops the 63,000,000-mark, failing to show the normal summer decline. Production cutbacks of weapons will reduce the amount of overtime work rather than the number of gainfully employed.

SPOTTY UNFAVORABLE SIGNS—There are a few unfavorable signs, but they are spotty and not too ominous.

Farm income is down, curtailing sales and employment in such lines as supplies and equipment. Drought has contributed to an agricultural downturn. But large crops and Government support still keep most farmers' income fairly high, in comparison with other years. Cattle and wheat prices have begun to show a slight increase.

Homes, automobiles and household appliances are moving more slowly. But buyers' caution and "choosy" habits are forcing sales and lower prices that will correct this situation. Many of these durables have been kept at inflated levels, as manufacturers' profit reports suggest.

GRADUAL PRICE FALL—Finally, Federal forecasters anticipate a general but gradual fall of prices, a trend which they regard as favorable. It will result, in their opinion, from a combination of such forces as buyers' restraint, sharper competition and the need to move inventories from warehouses and shelves.

Drought Losses Ran Very High For N.C. Agriculture

By LYNN NISBET

LOSS — It is virtually impossible to estimate with fair degree of accuracy what the 1953 drought cost the people of North Carolina Much of the loss is indirect and intangible, such as the retardation of pasture development, research projects in plant and livestock animal breeding and other items requiring several years to complete. In addition to the actual current cash loss in feed and food, the interrupted sequence of experiments mean tremendous total loss. If it were possible to estimate accurately the aggregate figures would be almost meaningless to many people.

TOBACCO — Only when the aggregate is broken down to family size can any comprehension of the impact of the drought be understood. Take for instance the flue-cured tobacco crop. The State-Federal crop reporting service estimates that the prolonged drought all over the flue-cured producing area cut anticipated production 85 million pounds. A front page News and Observer story notes that at $50 per 100 pounds that means a money loss of $42.5 million. That is for one crop, albeit the major one, and the direct loss falls upon approximately half the area of the state.

ANALYSIS — It is entirely probable that the average price received for the 1953 crop may fall a bit below $50. It is also practically certain that the price is affected by the short crop and if maximum production had been obtained the price would have been somewhat less. On the other hand, it may be argued that dry weather prevented proper maturity of the leaf and its curing, resulting in lower grades and consequently smaller cash value. Let's take all these factors into account, along with the added labor cost incident to handling the full poundage, and fix an arbitrary loss of $30 million instead of $42.5 million. That still doesn't mean much, because the average person cannot conceive the real value of one million dollars, much less 30 or 40 millions.

BREAKDOWN — That thirty million means 12,000 new automobiles at $2500 each; or 60,000 TV and radio sets at $500 each. It means that 15,000 homeowners could have spent $2,000 each on painting and repairs which they do not have to spend now.. Thirty million dollars would just about pay the full year's cost for every student enrolled in North Carolina colleges. Failure to have the thirty million means that some boys and girls who had hoped to go college cannot go. It means also and girls who had hoped to go to to wait to have needed dental and eye treatment, which is another phase in the long range intangible toll of the drought.

TURNOVER — Remember, that estimated $30 million is the deficit in cash paid to farmers selling tobacco. Added to the loss must be the direct profit which warehousemen and other handlers of leaf would have made, and the indirect profit of merchants and traders on the repeated turnover of the money. That also is an important factor in the overall economy.

TAXES — An experienced accountant suggests that in normal trade channels a dollar "turns over" about ten times a year, maybe once a month. Therefore, for purposes of handling-charges and taxes the absolute loss of $30 million becomes a potential loss of $300 million as a source of profit and tax revenue. This same accountant, who violently objected to being quoted by name, did a bit of fast mental calculation and came up with the estimate that the tax revenue loss to state and local government units on account of the $30 million shortage in tobacco selling, will approximate $10 million. That estimate takes into account the pyramided sales and income taxes all along the line, the ad valorem levies on improved homes and new automobiles and the gasoline taxes that would accrue from more extensive travel if the $30 million had been originally available. It was further suggested that loss in Federal taxes might approximate the combined State and local losses. If these tax estimates are correct the various levels of government have lost $20 million in public revenue because of the short flue-cured tobacco crop alone.

PROJECTION—The figures given here are for one crop in about half of one state. The drought has been general over the nation. Paradoxically it has been as severe and the damage toll as heavy in areas which also suffered flood damage during the year. One could easily go plumb crazy in projecting the ascertained loss incident to one crop in one small section to include the aggregate estimated loss in the diversified agriculture and industry of the nation. Even for North Carolina alone, with its wide diversity of resources, the particular tobacco loss is a relatively small part of the whole tirbute exacted by the drought from present and future citizens. The set-back in crop diversification, soil conservation, livestock development and other long range projects may be exacting toll long after the immediate hardships of 1953 have been forgotten.

TEMPTATION — That will be true because a great many Tarheel farmers may yield to the temptation next year or the year after to abandon or curtail long range plans in order to recoup cash losses through emphasis on quick-money crops. The farmer may fully agree with suggestions of the experts that he will fare better in the long run to continue his soil conservation, diversification and reforestation programs. The inescapable truth is that the prospect of a thousand dollars profit in five years doesn't help to pay for getting Mary's teeth straightened this year or buying shoes for Billy so he can go to school next month. And the average Tarheel father is more concerned about taking care of Mary and Billy now than about prospective future profits.

The Velvet Hand

By HELEN REILLY

SYNOPSIS

Returning to his home in Denfield, Conn., after a long absence in Mexico, Philip Haven, a writer, finds his young niece, Libby, who also served as his secretary, missing from the house. Believing that she may be visiting her cousin Kit in New York, Haven 'phones the latter's apartment only to learn that Libby had not been there. Kit hastens by train to the Denfield house where she and her Uncle Philip, and her Aunt Miriam, a neurotic, are joined by Hugo Cavanaugh, an attractive young attorney who once had courted Kit, but who had switched his affections to Libby. Search of Libby's room reveals a note, urging her family not to worry, promising that they shall hear from her soon. An unfamiliar cigaret butt in the room might indicate that Libby had had a male visitor.

CHAPTER THREE

PHILIP found a focus for his bewilderment and anger in Kit's question. "Haven't you been seeing Libby, Kit? Haven't you been here week-ends?"

She shrugged. "I've been busy, too, Philip, ever since you went to Mexico. When I did see Libby in New York, when she dropped into the apartment, I thought—sorry, Hugo—that you and she were about at the announcement stage. She'd come in wearing flowers and was as happy as a lark."

Hugo said, "Well, you were wrong." He went on, "Can't you think of anyone Kit, not the men around here that Libby's known all her life but—maybe someone in New York?"

Kit sent her thoughts back to December, January. Something was coming—Daisy Ballentine's room, Daisy Ballentine's party.

Daisy was merchandise editor of Parasol and it was one of her usual affairs, mixed up and mad and amusing, for a little while, Kit could see it all clearly. There was a man who played the flute and a girl with long red hair and an immense harp. George had taken her and Libby.

She and George were sitting on the sidelines withdrawn as far as they could get from the sound and fury when Kit caught sight of a man's extraordinary head. Handsome was too weak, too insufficient a word. A nearby candle had increased the illusion of an inhuman perfection. The man's hair was a clear bronze and as bright as metal. His profile might have been carved in marble by a master—human features would show some small reassuring flaw. He was laughing at something and it came as a shock. Magnificent marble busts didn't laugh aloud.

George had said in her ear: "Daisys robbed a museum. I know who did that guy. Michelangelo. He's on loan from the Metropolitan."

And then another head had appeared, and it was Libby's. It was at Libby, with Libby, that the Adonis was laughing.

Later on Libby had tried to introduce her to him, but Daisy Ballentine had thrown her arms around him. "Tony, you utter angel. I'm going to give you a kiss to see if you're real."

He had removed her arms, n gently, and Daisy had said: "Pardon me—and pray don't apologize for spraining my wrist. Oh, Kit Haven. You're next in line—got your admission charge?"

Kit remembered that the man's eyes had travelled over her with an odd effect of sightlessness in them, and his mouth had hardened. He knew she didn't like him. She had said, "I won't need any admission charge, Daisy," and had walked away. Shortly after that she and George left. Libby was having fun and had stayed on. The Adonis had brought her home a couple of hours later. What was his name?

Hugo said eagerly, "You thought of someone, Kit." Philip half started from his chair. "Who is he?" Kit got it then. Wilder—Tony Wilder. She told them.

The effect of Wilder's name on Hugo was astonishing.

She could feel rage seize Hugo, shake him. She thought there was nothing odd about that. He was in love with Libby and Libby had chosen the other man. Hugo met her eyes and instantly all trace of his fury vanished. He covered it up carefully. That was the queer thing. He denied knowing anything about Tony Wilder. Philip poured out questions. Kit knew very little and that little she censored—no use making her uncle feel any worse than he did, and after all they weren't sure. She said that Wilder was in his early 30's and very good looking and that he seemed anything but broke. Now that she thought of it, Libby had mentioned meeting him first at the Nevins' in Santa Fe when she was there before Christmas.

Philip turned to Kit. "You thought Libby had run off with Cavanaugh, when, as a matter of fact, in a letter Libby wrote me shortly after I left she said something about you and Cavanaugh."

Kit felt the blood rising to her face. She said, "Libby was mistaken," and got up. "I'm going to call Daisy Ballentine and see what she can tell us about Tony Wilder." She looked in the book and dialed long distance. While she was waiting, Philip went past her and upstairs to talk to Miriam. He came down and said: "Your beloved aunt never heard of any Tony Wilder. The fellow never came here. Maybe you're wrong." He plunged past her like a runaway horse.

Kit couldn't raise Daisy.

Listening to the empty ringing at the other end of the wire, she made herself relax. What difference did it make now? The thing was done. In spite of Philip, she had a feeling that she was right—and Libby had been gone for 24 hours. She and Wilder were probably married by this time, they would have made their preparations in advance. It was odd that Libby hadn't waited. She had always talked of a big wedding, with a veil and bridesmaids and flower girl . . . and there was something else. Libby hated to be disapproved of criticism crushed her. She always wanted to please people even if it was only in choosing a hat. How much more so where a husband was concerned . . . . What was there about Tony Wilder that had made her go away with him without a word to anyone? Kit dropped the phone.

William Grant came in. He was Miriam VanKreef's nephew and no relation of the Havens. He was an innocuous young-old man of 30 with staring brown eyes behind glasses. He came every week-end and on holidays to visit his aunt and her family by her first marriage. He considered the Havens to be ric people who did what they wanted when they wanted while he slaved his life away at an arduous job as a hotel clerk.

William was excited and upset. He said, "I called Aunt Miriam. She told me that Libby had disappeared, so I jumped on the train—"

"Why?" Philip said.

"Because—because I thought I might be able to help."

Philip eyed him. "Can you?"

William couldn't. He had never met or heard of Tony Wilder.

Kit said, "I'm going to make some sandwiches," and went into the kitchen.

Hugo followed her.

"How's George?" he asked.

"In excellent health, thanks."

"Are you going to marry him?"

Kit gave him a cold stare. "Nice of you to be interested, Hugo. When we decide you'll be one of the first to know."

"Look, Kit, Libby's got to be found."

"Of course. But it's up to her now. She said she'd let us know."

"You can't think of anyone else. What do you know about Tony Wilder that makes you dislike him so much, Hugo?"

It seemed to her that he hesitated. Then he said: "Nothing. But I think you ought to make certain that the man who left that cigarette upstairs in Libbys room was Wilder."

Kit said nothing. She picked up the tray and they returned to the living room.

Falling hungrily on the sandwiches, William didn't help matters any. He said: "Libby's been gone since last night. Maybe you ought to go to the police."

Philip said threateningly: "Now that you're here I presume that you're going to stay the night, but my niece and I and Mr. Cavanaugh would like a little privacy, so when you've finished your meal—"

William showed no resentment. "I understand." He finished his milk and got up.

TEEN TALK

Dear Judy:

Looking for an unusual back-to-school decor idea? Well — why not try the big-game-hunter theme? Or use the heap-big-fisherman motif, if you prefer.

The outdoor look should be the rage this year predict school belle decorators.

One enterprising young lass — 19-year-old Bridget O'Shea of Wilton, Conn. — got a decorating idea for her college room from fraternity houses. The boys use mounted deer and moose heads to perk up their rooms. Why wouldn't the same idea work for a girl's room, reasoned the blonde, blue-eyed Bridget.

But not having mounted animal heads handy around the house, she advertised in the local Bulletin. Believe it or not, mounted heads are scarce — and expensive. So far the only offers she has received are for slightly moth-eaten bucks with a big price on their heads. Although some sportsmen have had their kill stashed away in mothballs for a couple of decades they still are loathe to part with the beasts for less than $15. (A standard price even in junk shops, says Bridget.) Her offer is $5. Says she:

"One man had 2 mounted deer but still wouldn't take less than $15 for one. Another offered me a 14 pt. bull moose from Canada. The antlers probably would be bigger than my room at college."

Bridget loves animals — she used to have horses and dogs before she went off to Mt. Holyoke at South Hadley, Mass., where she will be a sophomore this year. She loves the sea, too, and last summer lived on a sail boat with her family.

She's not so sure college authorities will admire her liking for big game decor, however.

Most colleges do not approve of pets, so thousands of parakeets, cats, dogs, hamsters, horses, turtles will be left home — unlike Mary's little lamb when kids take off for school. So the animal, bird, fish decor should make a hit — cheering as well as interesting conversational pieces. If mounted fish or deer heads don't materialize, the room can be decorated with prints of favorite animals.

This is a big year for game-hunting Dads. They'll be pretty popular with the college crowd, especially if there are mounted deer, pheasant or quail around.

If daughter lives at home during the school year, so much the better. Dad will be happy to see his prize relegated from attic anonymity to daughter's room. Even Mom, who has objected to its presence in the living room, might enjoy its usefulness as a coat or hat rack in daughter's bedroom.

Bridget's beaus are highly in favor of her pursuit of deer head but so far haven't offered to help her corral one. Instead they ask "please get one for me."

Her forest room decor goes like this: Pale walls, woodland green bedspread, light green Chinese rug a plaid-like chair in gay black, red yellow, green — and a beautiful mounted deer — she hopes.

Visitor To Jail Is Kept There

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UP) — Frank Martinez, 22, and Mike Gonzales, 25 came to the Bexar County jail to visit a friend and wound up in the same cell with him today.

Another visitor reported $15 stolen from her purse and a witness indentified Martinez and Gonzales as the thieves. The desk sergeant found a $10 bill in Martinez' mouth. He figured the other $5 had been swallowed.

CAMP RIPLEY, Minn. (UP)— Wisconsin's 32nd "Red Arrow" Division acknowledged defeat by a swarm of mosquitoes today.

National Guard troopers started their maneuvers before 13 visiting generals Tuesday but had to retreat back to camp at nightfall because of mosquitoes in the swampy maneuver area.

Actress Takes Side Of Dior In Squabble

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP) — Elaine Stewart came all the way from Hollywood just to tell me that women with pretty legs ought to show them.

In other words, she is taking sides with Christian Dior, the French designer, who shocked the world recently by saying that the gals should go back to the flapper age and wear shorter dresses, to show a little more leg.

Elaine also came here to plug her latest picture, in which she is the only feminine player. It's a rugged comedy about Army life and won her the title of "The sweetheart of 30,000 GI's" during the filming at Fort Bliss, Tex.

But getting back to legs; our gal has them—the kind worthy of being looked at.

Elaine didn't mention any names during our early morning interview, but she turned up a pretty nose at the way women dress in the nation's capital.

She was smart enough to say she thinks Mrs. Eisenhower has good taste, looks good in bangs and wears her dresses the proper length.

"But most Washington women," the pretty brownette said, "hide the best part of their legs. Dresses here, and in a lot of other places, are about 14 to 16 inches from the floor, according to the height of the woman. That's too long. I think Dior has something. Not only that, it would save husband's the cost of extra yardage at the dressmakers."

(Note: Elaine is unmarried.)

Also she took one look at the unpressed me and said that Washington men, the American men in general don't know how to dress either.

"What are you sweating for?" she asked.

"You Easterners follow tradition," she said. "Folks in the West are sensible. The men run around without coats or ties. They wear sleeveless shirts. They go to the Brown Derby like that. Why don't you wise up and keep cool?"

Elaine could see nothing wrong with wearing shorts—for men, that is. I told her that I created something of a mid-summer stir recently by appearing in certain high governmental places wearing boots, earmuffs, a wool overcoat and fur mittens and felt pretty cool while doing it.

She gave me a pretty upper lip Men, said Elaine, should be smart enough to keep their backs exposed to whatever breeze is about.

Backless shirts for men?

The vision of fat me running up to Capitol Hill with my shoulder blades wagging in the breeze suggests one thing—go home, lady!

Garner-Wynne-Manning Tourney Winners, 12-0 Score

One-Sided Game Features Final Evening Of Softball

Garner-Wynne-Manning walloped Southern Bread 12-0 in the final game of the Men's Double Elimination Softball Tournament at Rose Athletic Field last evening to be declared winner of the event.

A five-run first inning was headed by rightfielder Bill Moore, who hit a triple to drive in two runs. Buck Roebuck had a double in the big first inning. Other hits were collected by George Fuller and Bill Phillips.

The Wholesalers came back in the third to tally six more times. With two men down and one runner on base, the next eight batters reached first safely. Six hits were given up by Charles Yates in this frame.

Roebuck had three safeties for fourtimes at bat to lead Garner-Wynne-Manning. Tom Boyd and Johnny Poell each collected two hits. Cleanup batter Joe Roland was the only batter for the winners who failed to get a hit, as a total of 12 given up by Yates.

Smith Worthington accounted for two of the four hits off the offerings of Phillips.

Ed Mathews Third National Leaguer To Hit 40 Homers

MILWAUKEE (UP)—Ed Mathews of the Milwaukee Braves today was the third National League player in 23 years to reach a season's homer total of 40.

Mathews hit his 40th of the season as the Braves divided a doubleheader with the Phillies Tuesday night. Johnny Mize and Ralph Kiner were the only other National Leaguers to reach the 40-mark since 1930, when Hack Wilson set the league mark of 56.

Mathews' hopes of equalling Babe Ruth's record total of 60 in 1927 remained dim, however. The 23-year old slugger's 40th homer came in his 126th game. In 1927, Ruth had hit 42 in 126 games and he hit his 43rd in his 127th game.

Nation's Women Amateur Golfers Remain In Play

BARRINGTON, R. I. (UP) — Thirty-two of the nation's top women amateur golfers, who survived two days of highly competitive match play at the Rhode Island Country Club, remained today in the fourth round of the National Amateur Women's Golf championship.

Still in the favorite's role was the calmly confident Barbara Romack, Canadian titlist from Sacramento, Calif., who seems to improve with each round.

She registered a 6 and 4 victory over Maureen Orcutt of Haworth, N.Y., after a second round 5 and 4 win over Mary P. Janssen of Charlottesville, Va.

Today Miss Romack opposed Patricia O'Sullivan of Orange, Conn., who pinned a third-round 3 and 1 defeat Tuesday on Elanne Cranston of Pasadena, Calif.

Grace S. Lenczyk of Newington, Conn., rated consideration today after her third round victory over 19-year old Joyce Ziske of Milwaukee, Wis. Miss Lenczyk's opponent today will be Mrs. Harold Bycott of Wheeling, W. Va., who defeated Mrs. Harrison Flippin of Ardmore, Pa., Tuesday 3 up on the 16th hole.

Other strong choices to advance beyond today's play were Patricia Lesser of Seattle, Wash., Mrs. John L. HHulteng of Warwick, R.I., and Mary Lena Faulk of Thomasville, Ga.

'Sunday Golfers' Sideline Watchers

MONTREAL (UP) — Most of the "Sunday golfers" watched from the sidelines today as the 1953 Canadian Amateur moved into the third and fourth rounds at the Kanawaki Golf Club in the Indian village of Caughnawaga.

The field of 200 was cut to 62 for the third round this morning. Thirty-two golfers from Canada, the U.S. and Britain were scheduled to play in the fourth round this afternoon. The field will be whittled to 16 for the fifth round Thursday.

Williams Says Piersall Best He Has Observed

By MILTON RICHMAN
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP)—They say in the dugouts:

Thumping Ted Williams insists teammate Jim Piersall is the outstanding American League ball player he has seen since returning from Korea...

Shortstop Bobby Morgan owns the best batting eye on the Brooklyn ball club. Authority for the statement is Manager Chuck Dressen...

Bob Porterfield, the Washington shutout specialist, doesn't blame the Yankees for turning him loose. "I wasn't helping them and I wasn't helping myself," he says. "I would have done the same thing if I were in their shoes."...

Majority of big leaguers, including several managers, don't know how to keep a boxscore of a ball game — simply because they've never been called upon to do it...

The Senators have soured on Pete Runnels. They're expecting Jack Luttrell, soon to be discharged from service, to take over the first string shortstop job in 1954...

Wally Moses, now coaching for the A's, tells how he accidentally received "the greatest ovation ever given a ball player" while still a member of the White Sox in 1943. "I had just stepped up to bat at Yankee Stadium when it was announced over the public address system that Mussolini had abdicated as premier of Italy," Moses recalls. "The fans simply tore down the joint."...

National League pitchers are rewriting "the book" on Johnny Lindell of the Pirates. They were told he was "strictly a high ball hitter" so they fed him a steady diet of low balls and were murdered...

Washington Manager Bucky Harris apologized to rookie pitcher Gerry Lane for letting him absorb a 10-run shellacking against the Yankees recently. "I had no one else to put in," Harris explained. "That's okay, Bucky, but I'd like another crack at 'em some time," Lane replied. Harris gave it to him and Lane gained his first major league victory against New York...

Gene Conley of Toledo would make Milwaukee Brave officials much happier if he didn't play basketball with the Boston Celtics this winter. Milwaukee Manager Charlie Grimm is counting on the six foot, eight Conley to be one of his starting pitchers next year...

SAFETY FIRST

FLINT, Mich. (UP)—T. M. Carlton, general secretary of the YMCA in London, came all the way to Flint for a new car—but decided not to drive it until he was back in England. He felt he had driven on the left side of the road too long to change the habit. He had the car shipped home via New York.

Gavilan Favored To Defeat Jones In Bout Tonight

NEW YORK (UP)—Welterweight champion Kid Gavilan was favored at 13-5 to beat middleweight Ralph (Tiger) Jones tonight and thereby earn consideration as challenger for the middleweight crown.

The non-title 10-rounder between 27-year old Gavilan of Cuba and 25-year old Jones of Yonkers, N.Y., will be televised nationally from Madison Square Garden.

Gavilan, ruler of the 147-pound division, is confident that a victory over middleweight contender Jones will give him a shot at the 160-pound crown, to be worn by the Bobo Olson-Randy Turpin winner on Oct. 21. Promoters always relish a "battle of champions."

Despite the 13-5 odds, however, Gavilan is facing an aggressive mechanical hooker who thrives on ambitious welterweights. Jones provided a thundering upset last Dec. 5 when he thoroughly trounced Johnny Bratton, top welter contender, at the Garden.

In three fights this year with welterweight Danny (Bang Bang) Womber, Jones won twice and drew once. Womber caused a mild quake at Syracuse, N.Y., on May 2, by outpointing Gavilan in a non-title bout.

Jerry Coleman Joins Club After Hitch With Marines

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP) — The Marine has landed but he isn't in any hurry to take the situation in hand.

Capt. Jerry Coleman will be marching back to Yankee Stadium soon after missing almost two full seasons. But the slender, handsome man who flew 113 missions in two wars is proving once again that whether in Marine green or Yankee grey he's always a team man first.

"I don't want to displace anyone," Coleman said. "Of course I want to play, but I don't want to gum up the works with things going so smoothly for the team."

That's Coleman, who quietly took over second base for the Yankees in 1949 and was one of the slick cogs in a machine which won three straight pennants before he was called back to service in April, 1952.

Jerry had marched off once before. That was after his first year in organized ball with Wellsville of the Pony League in 1942. For three years he was a Marine dive bomber pilot with 50 missions in the South Pacific.

He came back in 1946, moving up through Binghamton, Kansas City and Newark before the Yanks moved him up in 1949.

"But I was a lot younger then," he grins.

He was, only 24. And now he'll be 29 come September. He's about 15 pounds underweight, too, but the lithe movements and the sunny confidence still are there. Those and the willingness to give it all he's got — plus the ability to deliver in the clutch.

Coleman wasn't a great hitter, his best mark being .287. But he always was murder with men on base. And now that he's back, after 63 missions in Korea without a scratch, there's no reason to believe that his luck has changed.

He will, of course, have to replace old Casey Stengel's "boy," Billy Martin, if he is to take over second base again. But the fellow who knows how "lucky" he was in Korea may play in luck once again as he well deserves.

Coleman's destiny well may lay at shortstop with the Yankees.

That has been the worry spot for the world champions since Phil Rizzuto, the team's admitted sparkplug, reached the age of easy adversity. The little man can't go the full distance anymore and, although he subsequently denied his words, he said at the end of last season that this one might be his last.

Meanwhile, Jerry plans to rejoin the club sometime next week and give it a lift when and where he can. They'll observe his return by giving him a "day" at Yankee Stadium on Sept. 12. They should give him a whole week. He's that kind of a guy.

Mathews Blasts 40th Homerun, But Roberts Gains 21st Victory

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP)— Young Ed Mathews probably won't reach the golden goal of topping Babe Ruth's 60 homers in a season, but he had an outside chance today to beat the National League mark of 56, set by Hack Wilson of the 1930 Cubs.

Mathews, the free-swinging Milwaukee sophomore, was only two homers behind Ruth's record pace of 1927 today after drilling Robin Roberts, the best pitcher in baseball, for his 40th homer at Philadelphia Tuesday night. But from now on the tempo must quicken, since Ruth set a blistering stretch pace in which he hit 17 homers in his last 27 games in the month of September.

Psychologically, that pace has knocked many an aspirant out of the race for all-time home run honors, and it probably will be too much for the 22-year old kid from Texarkana, Tex. But he has a better chance to top the Wilson mark.

It was just 23 years ago today that Wilson set a new National League mark with his 44th homer, a record he was to break himself 12 more times in the remaining Cubs' games.

Mathews would have to hit 17 more to top Wilson's mark, since he is four behind him at this stage, but Wilson in the final days of the campaign tailed off and this muscular young kid looks like he might just be getting his second wind.

Roberts, though touched for a homer and single by Mathews, gave up only five hits in achieving his 21st victory in the opener 6-1.

The Braves took the second game, 6-2, Lew Burdette going the route for his 13th victory. Del Ennis batted in four runs in the first game and two in the second to bring his total to 102.

The Dodgers stayed nine games in front of Milwaukee by defeating the Cubs 6-5 as Jack Robinson highlighted a five-run eighth with his second homer of the game with two on, after Chicago took the opener 3-1 on the steady pitching of Bob Rush and the hitting of Clyde McCullough, who drove in all the runs with a homer and double.

Cincinnati topped Pittsburgh 8-6 and 9-8, winning the first game on a two run pinch-homer by Bob Borkowski and the second on a two-run homer by Roy McMillan. The Giants ended a seven-game losing streak when Ruben Gomez pitched a four-hitter for a 3-0 triumph but the Cardinals won the second game 9-2 as Gerry Staley pitched five-hit ball for his 16th victory and the Giants committed five errors.

The Yankees boosted their American League lead to 9 1-2 games when they defeated Detroit in 11 innings, 6-3, while the Athletics topped the White Sox 4-2 and collapsible Cleveland dropped 14 games behind in third place with an 8-4 loss to Washington.

A four-run rally in the 11th in which Gil McDougald hit a three-run double for the winning margin bailed the Yankees out at Detroit. The Tigers scored a run in the bottom of the inning but Johnny Sain came in to choke off the rally and save the victory for reliever Bob Kuzava.

Speight Romps For Touchdown In Phantom Drill

By Wayne Bishop

Greenville's Phantoms wound up the day's work with a hard scrimmage session yesterday afternoon when Halfback James Speight romped through the entire defensive team for a touchdown.

Speight, Bob Howell, and Charles Smith showed some class in the running department yesterday behind the blocking of their forward line.

Bruce Baker, Jerry Phillips, and Sam Winchester were in on a large number of the tackles made by the defensive team.

Encouraging news came from the Phantom camp today when it was learned that Left Halfback Mitchell Johnson should be ready for heavy duty again tomorrow. Johnson has been sidelined by a pulled muscle.

The Green Phants now have 45 boys on the roster since Back Joe Taft, Center Harris Northrup, and letterman End Bill Taft reported to practices yesterday.

After the drill yesterday Coach Bill Kittrell commented, "The boys are coming along slowly so far. Our quarterbacks, Jerry Drum and Bobby Nunn, have improved but they still have a long way to go."

Camp Hills Wins In World Series Of Little League

WILLIAMSPOHT, Pa. (UP) — Camp Hill, Pa., with a record-shattering 17-3 victory over Little Rock, Ark., and Schenectady, N.Y., with a 3-2 squeaker over West Newton, Mass., today were assured of semi-final berths in the seventh annual Little League World Series.

Camp Hill smacked 13 hits, four of them home runs, to roll up the highest score in any Little League World Series game in Tuesday's opening round. The 8-to-12-year old Pennsylvanians will meet Schenectady in a semifinal game Thursday, while Front Royal, Va., faces Vancouver, B. C., and Birmingham Ala., plays Joliet, Ill., in the windup of first-round games today.

Garry McGhee clouted an eighth-inning home run over the right field fence to give Schenectady its victory over West Newton after the game moved into overtime with a 2-2 tie at the end of the regulation seven innings.

Camp Hill's record-breaking run came across in the sixth inning when Dave Falk walked, stole second and was doubled home by Harry Lundy.

HONESTY TROUBLE

HARTFORD, Conn. (UP) — Norman Ouellette found a savings bank, a fountain pen and a pair of women's gloves in the back seat of his car. Being honest, he turned them over to police, only to have to ride back to the station house a short time later to recover them. His wife had put them there to be returned to a relative to whom they belonged.

NC State Denies Charges Of Paying Ronnie Shavlik

RALEIGH (UP)—North Carolina State College, one of the country's top basketball powers flatly denied published reports today that it had paid star center Ronnie Shavlik $75 a month to play basketball and ascribed the report to "jealousy" on the part of coaches who had wanted to land the lanky Colorado boy.

N.C. State was put on probation by the new seven-member Atlantic Coast Conference for one year earlier this month for paying transportation of 12 prospective cagers to Raleigh for tryouts in violation of conference and National Collegiate Athletic Association rules.

State admitted the violations. The 12 athletes were permanently barred from intercollegiate athletics at the college.

Athletic Director Roy Clogston said the charge concerning Shavlik tained in a questionnaire sent the was nothing new and had been college last Jue by the NCAA which was then investigating the other violations.

"We haven't tried to conceal anything from the NCAA," Clogston said. "We told them last June that the charge concerning Shavlik was untrue."

It was reported that Shavlik, a six-foot, seven-inch center from Denver, Colo., had been paid $75 a month, given three round-trip tickets to Denver, a new set of golf clubs, golf privileges at two Raleigh courses and other benefits.

"Ronnie Shavlik doesn't even play golf and has never owned a set of golf clubs," a college spokesman said. "We've never paid him a cent to play basketball for N.C. State."

"Shavlik came to N.C. State because he wanted to come to a good basketball school and get recognition for his play and also because we did a good job of selling him on the school," the spokesman said.

Unwilling Repatriates Are Target Of Major UN Plan

By RUTHERFORD POATS
United Press Staff Correspondent

TOKYO (UP)—The United Nations Command is working out a major plan to persuade Allied Korean war prisoners who refuse repatriation to change their minds, it was disclosed today.

Details of the plan are secret, and they cannot be put into final form until Allied authorities know just who the non-repatriates are.

But it was made known that American officials hope that most if not all of the American soldiers who refuse repatriation will be persuaded to come home.

The plan will go into operation when the non-repatriates are put into custody of a neutral repatriation commission. This is to be done not later than two months after the signing of the armistice.

It was announced in Panmunjom today that the Communists have formally notified the U.N. Command that they hold about 400 men who have decided to refuse repatriation. It is indicated that up to 30 of the 400—possibly more—are Americans.

South Korean prisoners who have been freed have named about 250 of their comrades who are among the 400. Probably the total is considerably higher. Americans, Britons and Turks are among the remainder.

The Peiping Radio said that the Communists are trying to persuade the anti-repatriates to go home. Allied authorities believe this is true. They take the view that the prisoners are merely an embarrassment to the Communists, who would much prefer to have them go home and spread Red doctrine.

Reports of returning American prisoners have indicated that the GIs who refuse repatriation are in three classifications:

1. Confused men, usually young and ill-educated, who succumbed to the Communist indoctrination program with its emphasis on social and economic inequalities in the United States.

2. So-called "liberals," who even before their capture sympathized with the leftist line. These are the "progressives," as the returned prisoners call them.

3. The so-called "squealers" who informed on their fellow prisoners in order to get privileges from the Communists. Some of these men are afraid to return home.

Prisoners of both sides who refuse repatriation are to be turned over to the neutral repatriation commission by Sept. 25.

'Lucky Lizards' Aren't Collecting

DURBAN, South Africa (UP) — Technicalities are keeping seven "lucky lizards" from collecting their inheritances of $560 each, the Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals reported today.

The will of Mrs. Marion Kellett was so involved that none of the bequests to her pet lizards has been paid, the society said. Four have died in the two years since Mrs. Kellett's death.

Each lizard's "fortune" reverts to Mrs. Kellett's widowed husband upon the lizard's death.

SMART ATHLETES

CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (UP)—The University of North Carolina says that of the 800 some athletes winning varsity athletic letters here since 1933, more than 60 were Phi Beta Kappas.

Red Faces For Red Prisoners

PANMUNJOM (UP)—Red prisoners had red faces today when they stripped off their uniforms in protest against the United Nations.

Two young women from Communist Poland turned up to welcome the Communist troops to freedom. The repatriates had nothing but caps to cover themselves.

Surprise Proved Double Surprise

OWOSSO, Mich. (UP)— Estes H. Wilson, 27, didn't know his mother was planning to pay him a surprise visit Tuesday until his auto collided with another at an intersection. The other driver was his mother, Mrs. Lora Wilson, 61.

Neither was injured.

NEW '53 PLYMOUTH

easy to look at!

All-new styling and balanced designing make the new '53 Plymouth a more beautiful car, and a more spacious car! Inside, there's more head room, more hip room, more leg room—in all, 12 more cubic feet of space for passengers and luggage!

easy to handle!

Plymouth's new HY-DRIVE lets you drive all day without shifting. Hy-Drive, the newest, smoothest, least expensive no-shift drive in the low-price field, gives you instant acceleration with whisper quietness. And you'll be amazed at the new Plymouth's ease of steering and parking!

easy to get in!

The new front seat in two-door models is divided ⅓-⅔—not in the middle. Rear seat passengers don't have to move a large, heavy seat section to get in and out, and they can enter and leave the rear compartment without disturbing passengers in the front seat.

and wait till you feel that truly balanced ride!

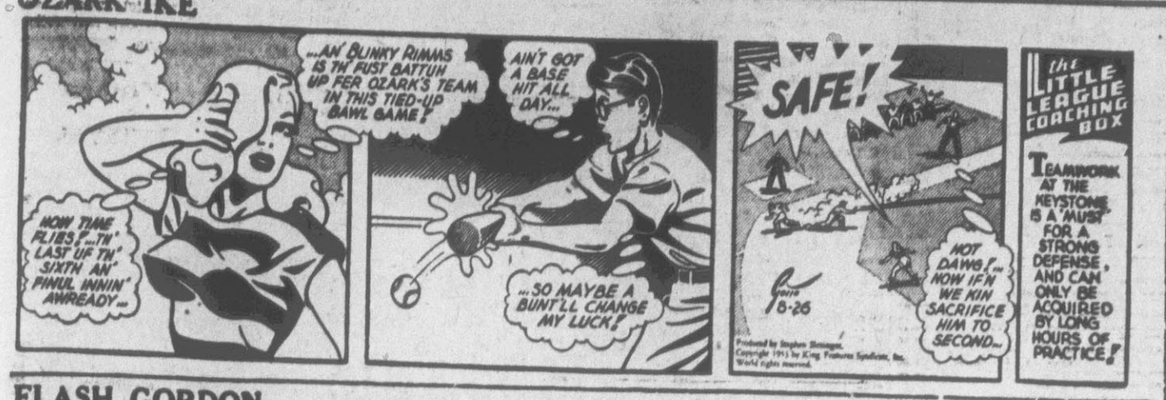

It's easy to see why so many motorists say the new '53 Plymouth is the finest low-price car ever built! Why not visit your nearest Plymouth dealer soon, and let him show you all the new value features in this great new Plymouth? Your dealer will be happy to arrange a demonstration for you.

PLYMOUTH—Chrysler Corporation's No. 1 Car

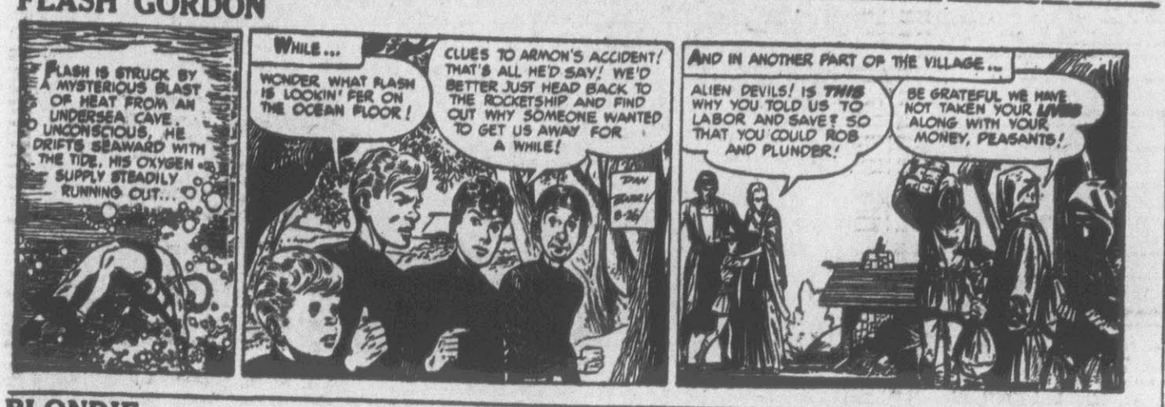

Hy-Drive is available at low extra cost on any 1953 Plymouth

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (UP)—Stocks rose a few cents early today in moderately active dealings.

All departments joined in the modest advance which was an extension of yesterday's late recovery movement. Market experts described the advance as mostly technical because of the recent decline which drove railroad prices to a new 10-month low.

Despite the strength displayed by the market, dealings were highly restricted with low-prices issues dominating the trading. Sales in the first hour totaled 210,000 shares, compared with 350,000 in the same period yesterday.

A few high-prices issues managed to move out of the narrow range. Amerada Petroleum rose 1½ points to 162. Texas Pacific Land Trust added a point to 123. Others rose fractionally.

Benguet Consolidated Mining, yesterday's most active stock, again dominated dealings. It appeared on the tape in large blocks at 1⅛ unchanged.

In the main industrial group, steel shares rose fractionally, automotives tacked on small gains and utilities generally held around their previous close.

Wreckage Of Logging Truck In Which Driver Was Killed

PITT'S EIGHTH TRAFFIC FATALITY—The twisted ruins of a log truck, shown above is all that remained to mark the site where a 32-year-old logging truck driver was killed yesterday, in a yet unexplained accident. Killed instantly was Hubert Reed, of Nashville, who died around 10:15 yesterday morning on the Sharp Point Highway, three miles East of Fountain. Exact cause of the accident has not been placed as yet by Coroner Griffin H. Rouse and Patrolman W. W. Joyner, of Farmville. (Reflector Photo by Roy Hardee)

he said. All but four of the prisoners in Gatlin's group of 79 were listed among the repatriates on the first day, he said, and the other four were transferred to another prison group.

The day before they were to be repatriated, Gatlin said, the communists staged a celebration for the prisoners in his group. The treatment of the prisoners during their trip from the camp to freedom village was good, he said. "They didn't attempt to hit on us or beat on us coming back," Gatlin commented.

From Freedom Village all the way back, he said, it was like starting a new life. "All the different army areas tried to get us home as quick as possible."

Pvt. Gatlin arrived in San Francisco Sunday morning, flew to Fort Jackson, S.C. Sunday night, was processed there and started home by bus Tuesday morning.

For the next 30 days he will be on leave, and his plans after that are indefinite. Gatlin said he will try to get a discharge from the army when his leave is up, but if he has to remain in service, he will have his choice of stations.

NARCOTICS IN JAIL

TIJUANA, Mexico (UP)—Police Chief Jose Maria Reyes looked for new jailers today after a surprise inspection of the city prison turned up 700 marijuana cigarets, two cans of opium, a quantity of heroin and a device for purifying narcotics. He fired Chief Jailer Emilio Barrera Portilla and 10 deputies.

EAGER FIREMEN

Told Family Son Is Alive; Proven Hoax

DETROIT (UP) — An imposter who told a Detroit couple he saw their missing son in a North Korean prison camp and then admitted his story was a lie will be charged with illegally wearing an Army uniform, police said today.

Fred Bueford Fisher, who said his home was at Four Mile, Ky., was held in Wayne County jail.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Hill said Fisher rang their doorbell and announced he had some "good news" for them. He said he saw their son, Jesse Douglas, alive and well in a POW camp.

The Hills, whose son was reported missing in action in December, 1950, were overjoyed. They rounded up as many of their 13 children as they could on short notice to celebrate the occasion.

"You're the guest of honor," the elder Hill told Fisher, who wore a uniform with the stripes of a technical sergeant.

During the gaiety, a friend of the family became suspicious of Fisher, who had hinted several times that he was broke. The friend, a Korean veteran, also noted several discrepancies in Fisher's "war" stories and asked to see his identification papers.

"They're in my room at the YMCA," Fisher stammered.

"Then get them," the friend demanded.

When Fisher left and failed to return, the Hills called police. The "soldier" was found cowering in the YMCA basement under the furnace pipes.

Fisher, who said he had been drinking, admitted his story was a hoax. He told police he bought the uniform in a war surplus store after his regular clothes were stolen.

"No, I didn't know the Hill boy," he said. "I heard about him in a bar and decided to meet his family."

The elder Hill had a nervous collapse when he heard the confession.

Posse Will Hunt Wild Dog Pack; Shoot'em All

ROXBORO (UP) — A posse of law enforcement officers and determined farmers armed with shotguns will comb thick woods in Person County Friday to search out and kill a pack of wild dogs that have become a menace to men and livestock in the area.

Highway patrolmen will protect passing motorists as the posse fans out over a three-mile wide section between Payne's Tavern and Whittown on the Hurdle Mills Road and drives the pack toward the highway so hunters can shoot at the dogs.

"We're going to shoot at every dog that doesn't have a collar or tag," said county dog warden Brady Breeze, urging dog owners to confine their pets on the day of the hunt.

He was married to Ruth Aycock of Selma in 1952, and she survives. Also surviving are his mother; three sisters, Mrs. N. M. Duke, Mrs. J. F. Moore and Miss Mattie Little, all of Falkland; and a brother, Edward Little of Wilson.

More Money For Iran Is Discussed

TEHRAN, Iran (UP) — U. S. Ambassador Loy W. Henderson called on Iranian Premier Fazollah Zahedi today and an embassy spokesman said they "discussed all mutual outstanding problems."

The embassy said the U. S. Point Four program would be continued, giving Iran $23,500,000 this year and possibly more money for developing projects.

Informed Iranian sources said Iran might receive an additional $30,000,000 under the Point Four program.

The Shah of Iran, brought back from brief exile after his supporters had overthrown the regime of Premier Mohammed Mossadegh in a bloody coup, said upon his return his country desperately needed money. He said he would accept money from any source, as long as there were no conditions attached.

The Shah, in a blistering indictment of Mossadegh, accused the ousted premier of bankrupting Iran and issuing worthless currency that had no backing.

Mossadegh and several members of his cabinet are being held for trial.

Zahedi announced that Ibrahim Alami, labor minister in the Mossadegh cabinet had been arrested and placed in detention last night.

Mossadegh will be tried on charges of treason in disobeying an order from the Shah. Zahedi said Mossadegh acknowledged receipts of a letter of dismissal and then drove the Shah into exile.

Sailed Atlantic In 12-Month Trip

MIAMI (UP) — A 40-year-old engineer and two "hitchhikers" he picked up along the way rested here today after a 12-month trip across the Atlantic in a 50-foot yawl.

Robert Shankel of Berkeley, Calif., put into port here yesterday and expressed the opinion that the romance of foreign ports was dead.

"I've seen so much poverty and suffering during my travels I have no desire left to sail to other countries," the engineer said. "I think I'll just switch my plans and see a little of my own country."

Despite his observations, Shankel described the cruise from Southampton, England, to Miami as "a pleasant one," and he said he was proud of the way his 56-year-old vessel "The Nettie" handled in rough weather.

Shankel's wife sailed as far as the Canary Islands then came on here by plane. A 27-year-old Swedish navigator, Rolf Nilsson, joined Shankel in the Canaries and completed the voyage.

At Barbados, Shankel picked up another hitchhiker, Winnie Gordon, 28-year-old Australian girl who wanted to share in the sea adventures.

Winnie like Nilsson, is spending a few years seeing the world. Both said they wanted to remain in the United States for awhile.

However future plans of all three may be decided for them. Shankel became involved with port authorities when it was discovered his navigator had no visa. He faces a review by immigration authorities.

Relieve Atom Scientist To Prevent Blackmail

LONDON (UP) — A Russian-born atom scientist was removed from his post at Britain's secret Harwell atomic laboratory today and newspapers said the action was taken to prevent the Soviets from "blackmailing" him for top secret information through threats to his family in Russia.

The Ministry of Supply said the scientist, Dr. Boris Davison, is not under suspicion of having leaked top secret information to the Russians.

Davison, the ministry said, has been transferred from Harwell to the mathematical physics research staff at Birmingham University in the industrial Midlands.

He will retain his 1,700-pounds ($4,900) salary received while at Harwell in his new post, the ministry said.

Davison himself was not available for comment and his immediate whereabouts was not disclosed.

It could not be learned whether the transfer was made at his own or at the government's request or whether any actual blackmail threats had been made against him by Soviet agents.

Davison was born in the Soviet Union of a British father and Russian mother. He is married to a Russian wife who is with him in England.

But members of his immediate family are living in Russia and press reports said security officers guarding Britain's atomic research projects feared threats against their safety might be used in an attempt to force him to reveal secret information.

Dr. Klaus Fuchs, who peddled the secret of the atom bomb to Russia worked alongside Davison before Fuchs was arrested and jailed as a spy.

Seek 100 Hands To Pick Cotton

A call for 100 hands to harvest this year's cotton crop is being issued today by the Greenville office of the North Carolina Employment Service.

According to Douglas R. Taylor, farm placement interviewer, this is the number needed to start operations next Monday. Peak of the season is expected the latter part of next week.

Taylor said any workers seeking jobs in the fields should contact him, and urged farmers needing additional help to get in touch with him.

An estimated 2,000 workers, Taylor said, will be needed this year to harvest some 12,000 acres of cotton in Pitt County. He added that plans for the most part call for making use of local labor this year rather than importing of out-of-state helpers.
