Frenchman Says Only America Can 'Afford' To Fight A War

By PHIL NEWSON
United Press Foreign News Editor

A French statesman visiting in the United States remarked the other day that "only a country with a stable government and national prosperity" could afford to fight a war.

He said that was why the United States could afford to fight in Korea and why the French could not afford to fight in Indochina.

The Frenchman was talking off the record and his name cannot be used.

What he said was, and probably was intended to be, an oversimplification.

But events are underlining his point dramatically.

The Indochinese shooting war against the Communist-led Viet Minh rebels enters its eighth year next month. It has cost the French some 147,000 casualties and $10,000,000,000 — or more than all the aid they received under the U. S. Marshall Plan.

Last July 3, in response to insistent demands from the three associated states of Indochina — Viet Nam, Cambodia and Laos — the French offered them independence within the framework of the French Union.

Such independence would include complete control of their own economic, judicial and financial affairs, with France continuing in control of foreign policy.

It also would include a promise from the three states to continue the war against Communism.

Agreement with Laos was reached some weeks ago and final negotiations with Cambodia will start shortly.

However, the reaction from Vietnam has been disappointing to the French.

Vietnam, stretching along the entire east coast of the Indochina peninsula and including the cities of Saigon and Hanoi, has borne the brunt of the fighting and is the scene of a rising tide of nationalism which is demanding complete severance of ties with France, except for possibly a treaty or alliance to be negotiated later.

The French constitution does not permit associated states to break away from the French Union. But the Vietnamese attitude has aroused bitter resentment in Paris, where an increasing number of deputies in the National Assembly are demanding that France finally abandon altogether the Indochina war.

These deputies are demanding Assembly debate on the issue over the objections of Premier Joseph Laniel and conceivably it could lead to the fall of the government.

Spurring the French is the fear of a resurgent, prosperous Germany on their border while they fight an expensive war half a world away. Adding to their dissatisfaction is that a truce, however unsatisfactory, has been reached in Korea.

On the Indochinese side is the increasing hatred for anything which might smack of colonialism, and the nationalist claim that many Indochinese fighting with the Reds, do so out of their hatred for the French rather than for any love of Communism. On that basis, they say the war could be settled quickly if the French only would get out.

Dramatic Club To Give Mental Hygiene Plays

Two plays dealing with solution of difficult problems in family relationships will be presented at East Carolina College Thursday, October 29, by students in a class in acting and interpretation taught by Joseph A. Whitney.

The program will be the second in a series of workshop plays to be given during the school year under the sponsorship of the Teachers Playhouse, student dramatic club.

Performances beginning at 8 p. m. in the Austin auditorium will be open to the public.

The short dramas to be given October 29 are "Scattered Showers" and "High Pressure Area," both publications of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene. These plays, Dr. Whitney states, were selected not only because they are of general interest but also because they have value in demonstrating a type of drama useful in such programs as are often presented in public schools, PTA organizations, educational meetings, and elsewhere.

Edna F. Jones, senior from Williamston, will direct "Scattered Showers," and Grace J. Eaton, graduate student from Greenville, "High Pressure Area."

Brush-Burning Laws Are Now Tighter Than Before

A major change made in the state brush burning law, which became effective October 1, will remain in force until next June 1.

Pitt County Forest Ranger N. S. (Kid) Tyson said the law, which was written by the late General Assembly, makes it unlawful for any person, firm or corporation without a written permit to start, or cause to be started, any fire or ignite material in woodlands under protection of the State Forest Service.

He pointed out that the brush burning law also makes it unlawful to cause such fire within 500 feet of any protected area, during the time from midnight to 4 o'clock the next day.

Tyson said the permits are available from 23 deputy rangers in Pitt County. No charge is made for issuing a permit.

"No permits are necessary for brush or debris burning," the forest ranger said, "if such burnings are started between 4 p. m. and ending at midnight, when winds are not so high."

During periods of hazardous woods fires, the state forester is authorized under the new brush burning law to cancel all permits and prohibit the starting of any fires in woods under protection of the Department of Conservation and Development's forestry division.

Violation of these laws is punishable by a fine of $50 or imprisonment for not more than 30 days. The law does not apply to fires started within 100 feet of an occupied dwelling.

Tyson said the unusually dry summer and early fall suggests to farmers, campers, hunters and others to exercise care with fire in or near wooded areas. The forest ranger also warned against the danger of throwing down lighted cigarettes, cigars and emptying pipes in woods.

Permits for burning brush may be procured from the following persons: Forest Ranger N. S. (Kid) Tyson, Forest Fire Tower, Aaron Case and Mrs. Lynwood Haddock of Route 2, Greenville; C. J. Satterthwaite, Mrs. Thurman Crawford, Route 1, Greenville; Murphy Brothers, Grifton; A. G. Little Lumber Mill, Grimesland; W. C. Spencer, Route 3, Greenville; B. B. Basden, Ayden; G. W. Dail, Winterville; W. G. Leggett, latter, Greenville; J. Henry Whitehurst, Stokes; E. M. Wooten, Falkland; Norman Pellard, Route 4, Greenville; Major Jones, Bethel; Wilbur Garris, Ayden; James J. ## Theme Music Is Exhausting Task

By JACK GAVER
NEW YORK (UP)—Background music for drama is an old story where the stage and movies are concerned but it is in the birth-pang stage on television, and Alex North is one of the obstetricians.

North, who has had his stage and screen baptisms in this field, finds that television composing — and conducting — is by far the toughest.

"I came out of last week's show completely exhausted," he said. "This is understandable when you realize that on a 'live' TV show the composer-conductor had to watch:

1. The score, to cue the musicians.
2. The screen, to a monitor set, to watch the action.
3. The dialogue, heard through one earphone.
4. The director's camera directions, heard through a second earphone.
5. A stopwatch for timing.

So far, most of the TV drama, when background music is used, relies on recorded bits, but North pioneered in "live" music for the Billy Rose show of two seasons ago, and last Saturday made with the sharps and flats for the Medallion Theater's presentation of "Time for Heroes," starring Victor Moore as a 90-year old Civil War helped send Hamilton and the other to prison, said he may withdraw his earlier objection to a parole for Hamilton because "it appeared from his statement that imprisonment has served its purpose."

Former Klan Head May Have Parole Re-Studied

WHITEVILLE, N.C. (UP)—Authorities indicated today that an imprisoned imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan may be reconsidered for parole as a result of his plea to other Klansmen to discard their masks and disband.

Thomas L. Hamilton, of Leesville, S.C., who once wore golden robes as the mastermind of a night riding band, is serving a four year prison term for conspiring to terrorize the people of Columbus County, N.C.

Sol. Clifton L. Moore of Burgaw, N.C., the prosecutor who sent Hamilton and 23 followers to prison and convicted 88 others, said he will give "serious consideration" to Hamilton's promise "to atone for my share in these sad experiences."

Moore refused to recommend Hamilton for parole when his case came up for review by a paroles board last week but he said he now may reconsider. Hamilton became eligible for parole on Oct. 1 after serving one year.

Hamilton issued his call to "all my friends everywhere to disband the Klan wherever it exists" in a 700-word letter to editor Willard G. Cole of the Whiteville News-Reporter, which won a Pulitzer Prize for its crusade against the Klan.

"I have prayed over the matter and I'm sure that God would want me to stay aloof from any organization which presents an opportunity for a person to hide himself behind a mask and commit a crime," Hamilton wrote from a prison camp at Castle Hayne, N.C. Cole, whose editorial campaign

Legion Auxiliary Has Dinner Meeting

The American Legion Auxiliary held its October meeting last night at the Silo Grill. Mrs. M. C. Sermons, chaplain, gave the invocation, after which a most delectable chicken dinner was served.

Mrs. J. C. Lamm, president, announced that one of the main topics of business would be "how to raise money to go in the treasury." It was decided that each member in the club would participate in a cake sale to be held the first Saturday in November. Also, each member who has paid her dues will be given a card for "holiday contributions."

Mrs. Lamm urged that as many members as possible attend the area conference to be held in Columbia, N. C. on November 10, convening at 10:30 a. m.

After all business was transacted Mr. Walter Tucker, the guest speaker, who is connected with the Veterans Office in Wilson, gave a very interesting and informative talk on Point Four Scholarships. Although he gave a thorough explanation of the necessary requirements he recommended that anyone interested in getting a scholarship contact Mr. Louis Gaylord Jr. here for suggestions.

Dreams Of Future Back Home Told In Love Letters Of POW

KINGSFORD, Tenn. (UP)—The GI who dramatically rejected communism this week told of dreams of a future back home with a girl named Kate in tender love letters he penned while he was a prisoner of the Communists in Korea, it was disclosed today.

Pfc. Edward S. Dickenson, the homesick 23-year-old mountain boy from Cracker's Neck, Va., spilled out his affection for 20-year-old Kate Laney, a girl he knew but had never dated.

"Kate, I would like very much to have you for my wife," he wrote in one letter.

Miss Laney said she replied that it would be best for them to wait until he returned home so both could talk over the marriage proposal. She denied earlier reports that she had written him a "Dear John" call-it-off letter after hearing he had at first refused repatriation

In the Korean prisoner of war exchange.

In a series of letters written by Dickenson between Dec. 15, 1952, and last May 3 to his mother, Miss Bessie Dickenson, and to Miss Laney, the Virginia mountaineer gave no hint of why he refused repatriation at first. The letters were published today by the Kingsport, Tenn. News. They were obtained by managing editor Rudy Burke.

Dickenson wrote only of his longing to return home to his family and his desire to marry Miss Laney.

Dickenson proposed to Miss Laney in a letter dated Dec. 15, 1952.

"Kate, I would like very much to have you for my wife," he wrote.

"I know that I never tried to go with you before, but I'm sure that we could be happy together. I have some money in the bank — not very much — and we could build a house when I come home, or I could write to papa and he could build it for us while I am still here."

"It would not take much for us to get started living on. If you accept this, Kate write back and let me know. If you don't accept, you can still write, for I'll be glad to hear from you."

In another letter, Dickenson said: "Kate, regardless of what I am doing, I can't keep my mind from wandering to you. You are always in my dreams of when I return home. I don't think it will be long before the war will be over, or at least I hope not."

In a tender letter to his mother on Mother's Day, 1952 Dickenson said:

"In these lines, I'll try to explain how much I love you, but I can never tell you on paper. It has seemed like years to me, but Mom, maybe some day if God is willing, I'll come back to you. I miss your Bible reading and the teaching you gave to us kids before we went to bed at night."

"You are the sweetest mother anybody could have and now I am away from you, but I pray to Almighty God in heaven for my safe return to you someday."

"My prayers here and Jesus are the only ones I have to rely on. I hope the war will end very soon and there will be peace on earth again when everybody can live happy once more."

Statisticians Figure Odds On Widowhood

By DELOS SMITH
United Press Science Editor

NEW YORK (UP)—A massive statistical study proved today that a woman must marry a man younger than herself if she is to have a 50-50 chance of avoiding widowhood.

Dr. Earnest Albert Hooton, professor of anthropology at Harvard University, stirred feminine indignation recently by suggesting that women select mates from among younger and less mature males.

But today America's most respected statistical authority said, in effect, that Prof. Hooton was absolutely right. It showed that a woman who marries a man her own age does not have an even chance that her mate will live as long as she.

With a mate of her own age, she has 60 chances out of 100 of becoming a widow. If the man is five years older than she, her chances for widowhood are 70 out of 100. If he is ten years older, they become almost 80 out of 100, and if he is 20 years or more older, "widowhood is practically a certainty."

These statistics were provided by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, based upon its experiences with hundreds of thousands of policy holders.

The statisticians found that "currently about 660,000 marriages are broken by death each year. In two-thirds of these families the wife is the surviving spouse." Fifty years ago the corresponding proportion was close to one half—but 50 years ago the rate of death-disrupted marriages was 28 per 1,000 a year and now it is 18 per 1,000.

"As a consequence of such lower mortality rates, couples marrying today can look forward to a longer lifetime together than those who married in years past," the statisticians said, "but at the same time the likelihood that a wife will eventually become a widow has increased materially."

About one-quarter of each year's crop of widows are under 45, and the average age is about 56, the statisticians found. Of women widowed at age 65, one-half will live 15 years more and almost one-third, 20 years more.

Potential Death Traps Are Plentiful

It can happen in Greenville. That is, some child in Greenville or anywhere else in Pitt County could crawl into an abandoned refrigerator or ice box and lose his life. Apparently there are plenty of such death traps located in Greenville, and the same situation probably exists throughout the county.

We Wonder About Nixon's Statement

Vice President Richard Nixon, in his tour around the world should have a more important message for people of the many nations than the message he recently emphasized to Australian legislators.

Nixon took the occasion to re-assure the Australians that isolationism in the United States is dead.

With the return of Republicans to power in the federal government of the United States, perhaps the vice president thought it advisable to inform the rest of the world that the administration of which he is a member does not intend to return to the isolationist viewpoint which former Republican administrations have held.

For more than a decade, the world has not known an "isolationist" United States. It has known a United States that has recognized and assumed its place of leadership in international affairs.

It is doubtful that Nixon's statement in Australia came as a surprise to the Australian people or those of the rest of the world. The world has been told it for years. The American people have known in their own mind for years that this nation could never afford to return to its isolationist position.

Could it be that some Republican leaders are just beginning to realize the fact?

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
FAITH CASTS OUT FEAR
Nothing can torment us more than fear; nothing induces fear more than does uncertainty. When the future is a blank, when the future is so confused that we can assume nothing about it except uncertainty, then fear takes over the driver's seat. Uncertainty leads to torment.

All of which constitutes the reason why people should have in their lives something about which they can be certain. They need, for instance, to be certain that they are loved by someone. The child uncertain about the love of its parents grows up to be a neurotic, frustrated, social problem. The woman uncertain of her husband's love, the Christian uncertain of his faith—these are in torment.

Linger for a moment on that latter item—the uncertainty of a Christian about his faith. Well, he fights as well face the fact that the deepest truths in Christian faith can never be demonstrated as the multiplication table can be demonstrated. The great verities of religion have to be received on faith. But once received on faith, they become centers of certainty in our lives—moorings to tie to, well-charted channels, compass points, stars which can be depended upon through the voyage.

Life in its essence is uncertain. But in the deepest sense of the term, we can be certain about everything worth while. But we can only be certain if we have faith.

12-Month Use For Schools?

By LAWRENCE A. COLLINS SR.
Ray Tucker is on vacation, during which guest columns have been contributed by prominent newspaper editors. In today's column Mr. Collins, Editor of the Editorial Page of THE INDEPENDENT, Long Beach, Calif., discusses the school problem in his area, but the suggestions made are of national interest.

By no less an authority than Los Angeles Superintendent of Schools, Alexander J. Stoddard, we are told the 12-month use of schools may be the answer to our school problem. By the National Citizens' Committee for the Public Schools we are told that 61 per cent of all schools are overcrowded and that 40 per cent of school buildings now in use have been condemned and should be abandoned. And yet we use the sound buildings we have only three-fourths of the time. If they were used 12 months a year it would in effect add a third or a fourth as many classrooms as are now in use.

Long Beach voters will soon be asked to vote another $15,000,000 for new schools. That will only start of what will be needed for our greatly expanded population in the next ten years. While the national situation is bad, the California problem will be greater because our population is increasing much faster than any other section of the country. There is not only a shortage of school rooms under our present system but also a great shortage of teachers. They, too, are used only for the portion of the year the rooms are used. If they were employed and were paid for the longer school year, they, too, would profit by larger annual incomes.

FURTHER SUGGESTIONS—Some alternatives given in the report from the Los Angeles study are:

months, more than 27 children have lost their lives by being trapped while playing in abandoned ice boxes.

In every instance, the owners of the boxes had assumed they were not accessible to children at play. They never thought the abandoned pieces would become death traps. But they did.

Those ice boxes scattered around Greenville and Pitt County may never become death traps for children. But on the other hand they might. The death of one child from such a cause would be too many.

In the interest of public safety—particularly the safety of children—these many potential death traps need to be rendered harmless either by their removal or by removing the latches from their doors so they can not lock.

Something needs to be done about the situation now. It will be too late if Greenville and other communities in Pitt wait until after a child has perished in such an abandoned box before taking steps to remove the possibility of such an accident.

Atomic Energy In A Brand New Field

After all the preparation which has been made in the United States and a few other nations to channel atomic energy into weapons of destruction if needed in war; it is indeed encouraging to note that the United States is ready to begin applying atomic energy into constructive as well as destructive uses.

The announcement of the Atomic Energy Commission that the United States is going to build the first full scale atomic power plant is news the world has been waiting for.

Possible uses of atomic energy for the betterment of mankind as well as for weapons of war have been discussed for years. Some research has been done along those lines; but not nearly as much as has been done in developing weapons.

The only way the United States can maintain its leadership in this atomic age, is by relentlessly seeking to be first in all phases of development and application of this relatively new field of tremendous energy. It is destined to revolutionize peaceful living as it has already begun to revolutionize war.

There can be no question that the decision of the government to go ahead with its development of atomic energy for peaceful uses. The question of whether such developments should be made by the government of private enterprise will still be debated.

One thing is sure, however, use of atomic energy can not be confined alone to war purposes. It will prove as strong of force for freedom through peaceful applications as it has through the development of its war uses.

Selected Shorts

FRANKLINVILLE, N. J., SENTINEL: "The death of nine children in one day recently in discarded refrigerators provided shocking evidence that the danger . . . is still a very real one. Despite the fact that every death in a discarded refrigerator is inexcusable, they continue to occur because of the irresponsibility of adults."

Increasing number of students to a room; holding the number of students to 30 to a room with unlimited half-day sessions; eliminating kindergartens; transporting children from crowded to uncrowded schools; enrolling only children who fall within the compulsory education law, which means those eight years or older. It was pointed out none of these were ideal and that the study was to continue. But in the meantime 12,000 students continue on half-day sessions.

Expressing himself as having an open mind, Dr. Stoddard went on to say, "Perhaps many parents would be willing to substitute their children's attendance during the summer for their attendance during other season of the year. As long as we have expensive buildings standing idle an appreciable length of the school year, there is a challenge to use them." Looked upon as probably the outstanding school executive of the nation, he raises a challenge for the school authorities and the parents of the nation.

SOLUTION MUST BE FOUND—We are approaching a point where something must be done to meet a problem that has grown extremely serious during the past ten years. Our birthrate has grown far ahead of what the experts in 1940 predicted. We have come up against a situation that needs a positive approach rather than the negative approach which has been prevalent among school authorities and parents. The nine months' use of schools, a custom which originated so children would be free to aid in the harvest, is no longer practical. To say that system must be maintained because it has always prevailed, will not solve the problem. It takes courage for a man in the position of Dr. Stoddard to present the possible solution which he suggested. We need more like him if we intend to find an answer.

City Councilman's Viewpoints

Yesterday I caught Greenville's Mayor Pro-tem, Gene West, when he had a few minutes to talk about the activities of the City Council.

But before talking business Gene had to tell me about his sore arm. "I went fishing yesterday and we really found the fish." The Whichards of the Reflector—Dave Jr., Dave III and Jack—along with Gene trolled off the coast of Morehead for King Mackerel. They came home with 10 fish, weighing 155 pounds on the scales at the Sanitary Fish Market.

The prize catch of the day was made by Gene, a 48-pound Cabo, which took 45 minutes to land. "Quite understandable fare about sore arms, eh?"

As Reflector stories in the past have stated, the Council is interested in swimming pools for white and colored. In spite of tremendous strides forward in recreation, the greatest need now seems to be swimming facilities. Gene is particularly interested in widening Greene Street from sidewalk to sidewalk in the congested area. This effort is also in the mill.

Drainage work in Hillsdale is slated for next spring. How about the City Manager plan in general? Gene says that the plan is shaping up fast and he thinks it will "give us a better Greenville."

Is Councilman West receiving many telephone calls from his constituents? Not many, he says. But with the new plan all calls are simply referred to the City Manager. "If everything isn't cleared through him," Gene says, "there's no point in having him. If satisfaction cannot be reached through him, then the council may be consulted."

And I thank Gene. JACK EDWARDS

What Other Editors Are Thinking

COL GILLETTE'S GOOD JOB (Henderson Dispatch)

Desire to relieve Colonel Colonel George W. Gillette of his office as executive director of the North Carolina State Ports Authority stemmed from the feeling that shipping from the State-owned terminals at Wilmington and Morehead City should have better promotion than they have had thus far. The colonel has resigned as of next December 31 and his resignation has been accepted by directors of the organization.

Inference in recent agitation has been that the colonel would be fired if he did not resign. Chairman A. G. Myers of Gastonia resigned from his office last week, giving ill health as the reason, but there is a theory that his loyalty to Colonel Gillette was possibly the real motive for his course.

The colonel is an engineer. As such, his knowledge of construction was efficiently and effectively applied in bringing into being the terminals at the two big State ports. There was a feeling, as we understand it, that he did an excellent job, but that promotional efforts are quite different from the task of building such facilities. There may be real substance to that argument, but the basic factors involved should be brought into the open instead of being around the bush. Since this is a publicly-financed and publicly-owned project, why not let the people know the whole story?

The State has invested seven million dollars in building the terminals at Wilmington and Morehead City. One has only to view these huge properties to realize their potentialities in bringing ocean commerce into the two harbors. The job has been finished more than a year and shipping concerns have not availed themselves of the facilities as they might have. Hence the desire to find an executive director who knows how to interest transportation companies in making use of the terminals.

This sort of program cannot be carried out overnight. Like other promotional activities, it requires time. Perhaps Colonel Gillette is not as familiar with that angle as some one else would be. At any rate, he has resigned and the imminent vacancy must be filled. It will be the responsibility of those who eased him out to discover just the right man needed as his successor. We hope they find such an executive, and unless they do may experience difficulty in convincing the interested public of the wisdom of their action in ousting the man who built the terminals and did a bang-up good job of it.

More N.C. Ports Promotion; Water Supply Importance

By LYNN NISBET

PORTS Resignation of Col. George W. Gillette as director of State Ports, following that of Chairman A. G. Myers of the Ports Authority, is expected to clear the way for more aggressive steps toward developing business at the ports. Whether these steps will be wise or to the long range advantage of the State will be questioned.

The incidents leading up to the resignations have been widely publicized, perhaps exaggerated as stemming from politics. The Ports Authority being a State government agency, and government being synonymous with politics, the charges are undoubtedly based in fact. So are accusations of rivalry between Morehead City and Wilmington.

Such rivalry has existed ever since the ports development idea was conceived many years ago. It is even more localized as between Morehead City and Beaufort, Wilmington and Southport. That was one of the handicaps faced by Governor Cameron Morrison 30 years ago and contributed to defeat of the proposed bond issue.

Advocates of this idea contend there would be less impact of policies than if the offices were maintained in Raleigh, and less friction among the ports by being removed from intimate physical contact with any of them. It is further argued that direct rail and truck lines might make possible storage of some material for shipment at Goldsboro warehouses for dispatch to either major port as shipping was available, and that competitive freight rates on less than car lot shipments might enable cheaper distribution of incoming merchandise.

WATER—Next to finances water was the most important item in the thinking of municipal officials attending the League convention in Asheville this week. It also had a prominent place in discussions of the Board of Conservation and Development in session at the same time.

W.H. (Pat) Riley, the State hydrologic engineer and chief of the water resources division of C&D had the final spot on the division reports to the board. He began with the statement that preceding reports had indicated more advertising, more factories, more visitors and more trees. "But, gentlemen, there is no more water."

Henry Powell, mayor of Henderson, made some of his municipal colleagues jealous. Lots of them biting their nails all summer because of desperate water shortage. Powell says his town has four million gallons a day flowing over the dam. That interested Ben Douglas and his C&D folks in trying to bring new industry to the area and industry needs water. Powell found that out when he had request from one prospect for seven million gallons a day.

Illustration of the need for water by industry was given the C&D group on occasion of the luncheon visit Monday to the American Enka plant near Asheville. That plant uses 11 million gallons of filtered water in processing and another 10 million gallons of filtered water in processing and another 10 million gallons of raw water in cooling equipment—21 to 22 million gallons a day. That is the estimated normal requirement for a city of 90,000 people.

Constant reminder that water is a growing problem were the neat little placards above the lobby in hotel rooms requesting guests to co-operate with the City of Asheville during the current water shortage. The city is completing work on a $2.5 million dam and reservoir which is expected to provide ample storage to serve the community for many years.

PUBLICITY—The matter of proper publicity came in for official consideration by C&D board members and for a lot of unofficial discussion among the city folks. Expansion of the State Advertising Division and the News Bureau to assure more adequate—and more accurate—presentation of North Carolina's advantages was approved. In semi-formal action the group insisted upon accuracy in local and general stories about polo and other epidemics, and protested some of the exagger-

Distribution Costs

By ELMER ROESSNER
Whether the "costs of distribution" are too high has been debated for generations by economists, manufacturers, retailers, wholesalers, advertising men, politicians, reformers and plain old consumers.

"Distribution" in this debate does not mean the cost of physical transportation of products, but the entire pattern of costs from the time a product is manufactured until the consumer starts using it up.

Distribution DOES take a large share of the consumer dollar, whether the consumer is a householder or a manufacturer. The average product that costs a manufacturer $1 to turn out costs the ultimate consumer $2; of each $1 a consumer pays for food, the farmer gets around 49 cents. Sometimes the differences are much greater.

Years ago, people berated the "middleman." He was a sort of monster who stood between the farmer and the eater, the manufacturer and the user. Many regarded him as a leech in the economy, contributing nothing but sucking off a bit of everything for himself.

Years later, people began to recognize the man between the producer and the consumer as someone more essential. It dawned on consumers that whatever a factory or farmer produced was of little good to them, except those in the immediate neighborhood, unless some accursed "middleman" got it from point of production to point of sale.

But the question of whether this intermediary gets too much has plagued thinkers for a long time. In fact, the entire cooperative movement in America and the rest of the world appears to have at least one leg of its foundation resting on the assumption that men between producer and consumer got too much. The fact that many co-op ventures have falld does not appear to start many people wondering whether the people in the middle—in either co-op store or a free-booting private enterprise—was actually paid enough for their services! In a lot of merchandising, the retailer pays around 60 cents for what he sells for a dollar. Wow! some people say. Forty cents out of every dollar! Gangway! Let me into that racket!

When they get in, or if they pause before getting in, they discover that if they can hang on to two cents of every hundred, they are fortunate. Rent, insurance, salaries, wages, mark-downs, taxes, thefts, deliveries, pensions, contributions, fires, floods, graft, breakage, obsolescence, deterioration, fees and other charges take the rest.

Nevertheless, the "cost of distribution" is large and seems unnecessarily so to many persons. In recent years, self-service, pre-packaging and other devices have been introduced in efforts to lower the cost of distribution. In one way, self-service does not exactly lower the cost; it simply gives the consumer less "distribution." She does part of the work the salesperson and delivery boy used to do.

In recent days, there has been a notable contribution to thinking about "cost of distribution." Perhaps it doesn't "cost" at all! More about this here tomorrow. Thanks.

HOUSING STARTS DOWN, BUT GOOD FOR SEASON

The report on housing starts in September was not very cheerful; the Bureau of Labor Statistics found that there were only 92,000, compared with 94,000 in August and 99,200 in September, 1952.

However, the figure is not as discouraging as it sounds. When seasonal factors are taken into consideration, it is actually a better showing than the August figures, according to the BLS. August's 92,000 was at an annual rate of 970,000 a year, the BLS says, while the September's 92,000 is at an annual rate of 989,000. In short, the fall-off in September was less than could have been expected.

Oh For A Quiet Sunday At Home

BY HAL BOYLE
HOMETOWN, U.S.A. (AP)
Wilbur Peeble, America's most average husband, had a favorite speech of complaint, which ran as follows:

"The trouble with civilization is a man can't ever have a quiet Sunday. People always beating on your door, or calling you up wanting to go somewhere. "No wonder everybody's a nervous wreck. After working hard all week, why can't a man just stay home and rest and relax on Sundays, like they did in the old days?"

After 15 years of listening to this little speech, his wife, Trellis Mae, got pretty tired of it. She decided to give Wilbur the kind of old-fashioned Sabbath he yearned for.

So on this particular Sunday she let him sleep late, then brought him breakfast in bed.

"Honey, I just want you to take it easy today," she said. "Don't even bother to dress or shave. And you don't have to take me to church. I'll go myself."

Wilbur looked up, surprised and grateful. He was happy to skip church this morning because he knew the dynamic new pastor was going to call for funds to build a roller skating rink to attract more teenagers to his sermons.

Leter, yawning luxuriously, Wilbur put on his robe, went into the living room and picked up the Sunday newspaper. He glanced at the front page headlines, shuddered, and turned to the sports section and the comics.

He was glad when Trellis Mae returned. He was beginning to be a bit bored.

"Guess I'll call up Horace McWhinney, and see what's going on," he said. "Bet he'll try to talk me into a golf game."

"Dear, I had the phone turned off over the weekend so it wouldn't annoy you," said Trellis Mae.

"That's nice," Wilbur said dubiously. "Wondered why it didn't ring."

Later, when he tried to tune in the radio—television set, Trellis Mae said it had broken down and couldn't be fixed until the next day.

After a big mid-day meal, Wilbur tried to take a nap but couldn't sleep.

Several times Wilbur, getting more restless by the minute, seemed to hear footsteps at the apartment door, but nobody rang the bell. Finally he went to the door, opened it, and saw a sign in his wife's handwriting hanging from the knob: "Gone For The Weekend."

After two hours of nervous pacing back and forth Wilbur suddenly shaved, dressed, and told Trellis Mae:

"Let's go for a walk—just a short one."

He artfully steered their course past the McWhinney apartment, then said, "Let's run in see Horace and Hortense—just for a moment. But you know how they are: 'Let's go for a walk—just a night.'"

"Come in," gratefully said Horace, who was in pajamas. "We were just spending a quiet Sunday at home."

After half an hour, Trellis Mae began saying, "We really must be going," and Wilbur kept replying, "Yes, yes, we really ought to." But he made no attempt to get up.

Well, then Hortense fixed a snack of fish canapes that always made Wilbur sick. Then they got out the cards. Then it was time to listen to the 11 p.m. news. Then someone said, "Oh, let's look at the late TV movie, 'Love Beats Lockjaw.'"

Then Wilbur and Horace got into an hour long argument over the Eisenhower administration, and the clock struck 2 a.m. when the Peebles finally returned home.

Wilbur stopped off in the kitchen for some sodum bicarb to soothe his upset stomach, and then, as he sagged into bed, began to moan:

"The trouble with this civilization is a man can never spend a quiet—"

Dr. Messick Cites Growth Of College And Needs For People's Assistance

Expansion of facilities, growth of faculty and student body, and development of the physical plant of East Carolina College were cited by President J.D. Messick today in a message to the citizens of Pitt County.

The message, prepared for delivery to a radio audience, was presented as one phase of the campaign preceding the 3-day canvass of Greenville business and professional firms by the Greenville Junior Chamber of Commerce in a drive of the Pitt County Educational Foundation for a $100,000 scholarship fund.

"East Carolina College is a growing institution serving the needs of eastern North Carolina, with an enrollment increase from 978 in 1945-46 to 2,280 in 1953 and the present quarter's registration standing at 2,213 as compared to 2,076 at the same time a year ago," President Messick declared.

More than one-seventh of the student body — 318 of the 2,213 students — is composed of Pitt county students, Dr. Messick reported, and 200 are Greenville residents.

As an economic asset, East Carolina College stands prominently in the business life of the area, with operating expenses for 1953-54 set at $1,697,981, and already authorized are capital improvements costing almost $2,000,000, much of which will be turned into the channels of trade in Greenville the college president indicated in the course of his address adding that the college employs 286 persons, most of whom reside in Greenville.

Reviewing building activity of the past four years, Dr. Messick noted that "we have built one dormitory for men, an apartment dormitory for teachers which released the dormitory occupied by faculty to exclusive residence by men and the addition of an annex for 60 additional men."

Improvements Made
"We have also built a health and physical education building, a gymnasium annex, and an auditorium and cafeteria for the training school, a 'Y' hut, a grounds and storage building, and purchased a home for the president of the college, releasing the residence formerly occupied which now houses 18 girls. A pipe organ has been installed in Austin Building and a Wurlitzer electric organ in the College theatre. Several tennis courts and a football stadium have made possible the expansion of the athletic program, and many Greenville people have had a part in providing funds for the stadium."

Operating Fund, $921,734; Capital Improvements, $1,515,419; total, $2,437,153;
1951 Session
Operating Fund, $1,168,596; Capital Improvements, $221,000; total, $1,389,596;
1952 Session
Operating Fund, $1,611,090; Capital Improvements, $1,988,360; total, $3,599,450.

Great interest and much help from other administrative officers of the college the staff as a whole, the student body, the General Assembly with particular assistance from Pitt County Representatives S.O. Worthington and Frank Kilpatrick, Senator Paul Jones, Governors Cherry, Scott and Urnstead, and the people in Pitt county and other friends of the college contributed greatly to the achievements cited, declared Dr. Messick.

More Help Needed
"But East Carolina College could render an even greater service if it had sufficient endowed scholarships to help outstanding and worthy young men and women defray their college expenses. State funds are not available for this purpose. For the current year, 510 students applied for financial aid, but the college was able to help only 214 of them, and only 40 of these received outright grants," the college president said in his address.

Calling upon Greenville citizens to respond to the drive to complete the $100,000 scholarship foundation which the Greenville Jaycees will conduct, Dr. Messick said the college needs very much the income from a great deal of money to help worthy and needy students who are unable to go to college without assistance from some source.

The people living in Greenville and otherwise within commuting distance hardly realize how fortunate you are by having the college here, Dr. Messick concluded, and "be assured that we appreciate all you have done and yet expect to do. The college in turn will do what it can for you."

Public programs, too, including concerts, dramas and lectures are provided by faculty and students, and the college personnel is often called upon for programs for civic, church, club and other groups, and increasingly the athletic teams of East Carolina College are being recognized as outstanding.

Appropriations Breakdown
Dr. Messick gave a breakdown of recent appropriations for the College by the North Carolina General Assembly, beginning with the 1947 session, as follows:
1947 Session
Operating Fund, $921,734; Capital Improvements, $2,118,100; total, $2,879,948.

Wants It Known, No Hard Feelings

WASHINGTON (UP) — Singer Julius La Rosa wants everybody to know he still loves Arthur Godfrey like a father even though the radio and TV star fired him.

He spoke with feeling when he gave this message to reporters assembled in his hotel room here Thursday night. He would never forget all that Godfrey had done for his career, he said.

If the rustle of new big-money contracts helped along La Rosa's spirit of forgiveness, it was not apparent. And his manager, Thomas Rockwell, said he was real broken up.

Godfrey banished the 23-year old baritone from the ranks of the "Little Godfreys" Monday on grave charges. That he failed to show "that loveable, likeable, down-to-earth quality that for lack of a better word I call humility."

"This hurt badly," La Rosa told the reporters. "I still think the world of this guy for what he did for me."
How could he still love Godfrey? Well said the singer, "Maybe I can explain it this way: My father used to hurt me sometimes when he'd hit me when I thought I shouldn't be hit, but I never stopped calling him Daddy."

La Rosa came to town to perform in some Navy benefit shows tonight and Saturday. He conceded he had received some offers for paying jobs, including a couple of appearances on Ed Sullivan's TV show. He didn't comment on reports these would make his salary as a "Little Godfrey" look like peanuts.

New Members Of Honor Society

Rebecca Gail Plemons of Raleigh and Mrs. Hazel Garris Tripp of Greenville, juniors at East Carolina College, have become members of the college chapter of Phi Omicron, honor society for students of home economics.

The two students were chosen for membership because of their excellent scholastic records in the college department of home economics. Their initiation into the society was carried out under the direction of Mary Sue Cook of Hertford, president and Ruth Lambie, faculty advisor.

Crabs Turn Up Mineral Wealth

VANCOUVER (AP) A black substance on the bellies of crabs caught at the mouth of the Neas River in northern British Columbia may be a clue to a mineral treasure.

Fishermen found the crabs almost unsaleable because of the black coating and sent samples to the Pacific Fisheries Experimental Station here to see if anything could be done to make the crabs more presentable on fish store counters.

Dr. D.R. Idler and R.A. MacLeod scraped the offending substance off and discovered it was almost 24 per cent manganese, one of the world's most prized minerals used in making steel and chemicals.

BAD GUESS
WELLINGTON, N. Z. (UP)—William Henry Butcher came to a sorry end after he stole 44 pairs of trousers from a parked car. He found them to be unfinished and took them to a tailor to have them completed. The tailor told Butcher to return later. He did and found two detectives waiting for him. Of all the tailors in Wellington, Butcher had picked the owner of the trousers.

NEW ENVOY—Dempster McIntosh of Philadelphia, a foreign trade expert, has been given recess appointment by President Eisenhower to be ambassador to Uruguay.

Execution Chamber Is Big Enough For Couple

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UP)—Carl Austin Hall and Bonnie Heady could die together in Missouri's gas chamber.

There is room for two. The confessed kidnap-slayers of six-year old Bobby Greenlease, who demanded and got a record $600,000 ransom, were in custody here, awaiting formal grand jury indictment for violation of the Lindbergh kidnap law. After the indictment is returned they will go on trial.

A death sentence would result in their transfer to the state penitentiary at Jefferson City for execution "in the manner ... prescribed by the laws of the place within which a sentence is imposed."

The federal government uses local facilities for its executions under provisions of the U.S. Code, title 18, section 3596.

The potassium cyanide pellets of the gas chamber are swift. Death comes in two to three minutes, though it requires about 45 minutes before two physicians make the official death pronouncement.

Hall and his accomplice may be seated side by side. The pellets play no favorites when they tumble into the four-gallon iron vat of sulphuric acid. The gas chamber within the death house is octagon-shaped, with lower walls of metal and upper walls of glass. The glass shield is for the 12 official witnesses, two ministers, up to five relatives or friends, the physicians, prison officials and others. Usually about 50 persons witness an execution.

Hall's clothing would consist of a pair of black shorts and a black mask. Thomas E. Whitecotton, director of the Missouri Department of Correction, said he had not decided how he would garb Mrs. Hall, since a woman has never been executed in the Jefferson City gas chamber.

"I would suppose she would wear something like a two-piece bathing suit," he said, "and, of course, a black mask."

The deadly gas permeates clothing, and that is why the prison dresses the prisoner in so little of it.

Missouri's General Assembly adopted a central execution system in 1937 to escape the "Roman holiday" executions by the rope in various counties. Gov. Phil M. Donnelly, in 1937 a state senator, proposed that gas be employed rather than electrocution. He said gas was considered a more humane method. Since 1938, 30 men have died in the chamber. Two Negroes died in 1938 in the only double execution so far.

Skunk Catcher Knows His Trade

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) James R. Parker, agent for the Humane Society, is proud of his record as a skunk catcher. He's the man who goes out whenever a plea for help comes from a householder who spots one in the kitchen, the hallway or the cellar.

"I must have a way with skunks," says Parker. "I have handled hundreds of them. I just talk to it and start to move closer. When you see that tail coming up, you just stop and talk some more."

"There are frequent stops, but I finally pick it up and put it into a box."

Pirates Go After Sixth Win Against Quakers Tomorrow

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Sports Editor

The tension started building up again yesterday.

East Carolina College's Pirates didn't show many signs of it as they whipped through a non-contact drill but the weekend feeling was beginning to creep in, nevertheless.

The Pirates will go after their sixth victory this season tomorrow night when they play host to Guilford's upset-happy Quakers. The game will be played in College Stadium with kickoff time planned for eight o'clock.

If the Pirates win tomorrow night, it will mean that they have extended their undefeated streak to 13 games. Included in the streak, which started early in 1952, is a 41-0 victory over these same Guilford Quakers.

The Quakers have almost the same ball club they had last year but the few changes they have made have been strengthening ones. Already this year they have knocked off highly-rated Appalachian and strong independent Hampden-Sydney. Losses have been to Emory and Henry and Lenoir-Rhyne. In the Lenoir-Rhyne game last week, the Quakers played without the services of some of their top men but still got a 25-14 score out of a team which had defeated them 73-0 in 1952.

Work On Defense

The Pirates worked on their defense in yesterday's drills with an eye to stopping Guilford's split-T offense. The first team worked against Guilford plays that were run by a freshman squad. Most of the time was spent on stopping the ground game presented by the freshmen but pass defense got a thorough going over in the short time devoted to it.

About the only work on offense yesterday was pass pattern reviews run by the first and second teams. Dick Cherry, quarterbacking the first unit, and Boyd Webb, running the second team, did most of the tossing. Ends Bobby Hodges and Larry Rhodes and halfbacks Paul Gay and Topsy Hayes were the top receivers yesterday.

There was an indication yesterday that the Pirates might have their "first" backfield in top shape for almost the first time this year. Both Paul Gay and Topsy Hayes were in action and running at full speed. Gay has been bothered lately by a shoulder injury while Hayes had an early-season knee wound that has evidently healed.

Running with Gay and Hayes in the top backfield will be Cherry, one of the leading scorers in the conference with 24 points and 10 touchdown passes, and Claude King, the power man in the backfield.

Tickets for the game will be available at the gate tomorrow night. A near-capacity crowd is expected for the game which has been called the last in a series that started in 1933. Guilford officials served notice on Saturday that they would not renew the present contract which would not be renewed when it expires with tomorrow's game.

Native Dancer Leaves Questions

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UP)—Native Dancer left a number of questions unanswered because of his injury this fall, owner Alfred G. Vanderbilt said today, but "I believe he will answer them satisfactorily in 1954."

Vanderbilt, honored as racing's outstanding figure of 1953 by the Thoroughbred Club of America at Keeneland Thursday night, said "If Native Dancer is all right, and I believe he will be all right, he will race next year, either here or abroad."

The 4-year-old Vanderbilt, the youngest man ever to receive the Thoroughbred Club's annual award, also indicated that "Native Dancer" should do better next season.

MIX-UP MAN

Bobby Layne will often mix up the opposition by running for yardage on optional passing plays. Bobby holds every Detroit Lion passing record in the book. And his total offense mark for '52 shows 2,410 yards gained! Bobby likes to get the jump on winter, too.

"I put 'Prestone' anti-freeze in my car at the first sign of cold. Then I have complete all-weather protection—all winter long!"

Right, Bobby! One shot lasts all winter! And "Prestone" anti-freeze gives your cooling system full 4-way protection. No freeze-ups, no boil away, no rust-clogged radiator, no foaming off. No other anti-freeze gives your car the same complete protection. Always ask for it by name—"Prestone" brand anti-freeze!

Tech-Irish Meeting Top Gridiron Menu

By UNITED PRESS

The meeting between Notre Dame and Georgia Tech rates as the main course on college football's weekend menu, but several other side dishes should prove appetizing to the nation's fans.

For the television audience, at least, a hectic afternoon is anticipated Saturday when a panorama of four games will be offered in place of the NCAA "game of the day." In a unique show, the television cameras will pick up highlights of these games:

Cornell at Princeton in an important Ivy League tussle, Indiana at Iowa in a Big Ten meeting, Syracuse at Illinois in a major inter-sectional battle, and Mississippi at Arkansas in another inter-sectional contest.

But, as the old showboat captain used to say, that's only the beginning, folks.

Michigan State will place its 28-game victory streak on the line against Purdue, California and Southern California knock heads on the West Coast Rice meets Texas in a major Southwest Conference tussle, while Michigan and Minnesota get together in their annual "Little Brown Jug" game at Minneapolis.

In other inter-sectional games, hard-luck Villanova will be at Kentucky, Texas Christian at Penn State, Southern Methodist at Kansas, and College of the Pacific at Marquette.

There are only two major games on tonight's schedule, but one of them involves power-packed Maryland. The Terrapins, ranked third in the nation this week, were installed a 19-point favorite against Miami in Florida. Boston University hosts Lehigh in another night game.

Meanwhile, Notre Dame and Georgia Tech both are reported near full strength for their titanic meeting at South Bend, Ind., Saturday. The top-ranked Irish, favored by seven points, will be missing only reserve fullback John Gaffney, out with a pulled leg muscle, while Tech still is without first string tackle Roger Frey who has missed the last three games.

Notre Dame scouts have promised the Irish "a rough afternoon" against Georgia Tech, and the statistics appear to back them up. The Engineers, rated fourth in the nation, have yielded an average of only 181.2 yards per game and a total of only 23 points thus far this season.

Michigan State, favored by 1 point over Purdue can just about wrap up the Big Ten championship and a berth in the Rose Bowl this weekend. But the battle for the Pacific Coast Conference title and its accompanying Rose Bowl berth remains wide open.

Stanford, the PCC leader following its upset victory over UCLA last week, runs Saturday into Washington, unbeaten but tied once in the conference this season. This game was rated even, while defending champion Southern California was a six-point choice over California, and UCLA was 19 over Washington State.

Other major conference games on Saturday's program find Cornell at Princeton in the Ivy League Ohio State at Wisconsin in the Big Ten; Nebraska at Missouri and Colorado at Oklahoma in the Big Seven; Tulane at Auburn and Mississippi State at Alabama in the Southeastern Conference; North Carolina State at Duke in the Atlantic Coast Conference; VMI at pace-setting West Virginia in the Southern Conference, and Baylor at Texas A&M in the Southwest Conference.

WASHINGTON (UP)—A veteran football coach reminded football fans today of something they probably never noticed — the original T-formation is dead.

In its place according to Curley Lambeau of the Washington Redskins, professional teams and many colleges are using what amounts to a hybrid T and single wing.

"The defense caught up with the straight T a long time ago," Lambeau said. "I don't know of a single professional team that still uses the conventional T more than 10 percent of the time, if that often."

SAN FRANCISCO (UP) — Carl (Bob) Olson, who deserves a rest, tried to relax in his San Francisco home with his wife and four children and mother today — but he didn't get a chance.

Hundreds of well-wishers who "knew him when," called at the door and on the telephone and the weary Bobbo was for the first time, finding out what it's like to be the new world's middleweight champion.

"I'm just tired and weary and stiff and sore all over," said Olson, who arrived in the city less than 20 hours after he had defeated Randy Turpin of England for the championship in New York City.

"I just want to rest. All I'm going to do for the next few days is drive my new 1953 Cadillac," said Bobbo. "After that I'll keep in shape by doing a bit of running three times a week."

But even as he spoke promoters from all over the world were seeking his services.

Benny Ford, local promoter, said that he hoped to have Olson defend his newly-won crown in San Francisco, possibly next spring. Ford, who returned home on the same plane with Olson, said he could set no date for the fight.

In New York, promoter Jim Norris who handled the championship bout, said that he hoped to match Olson with Kid Gavilan in "either San Francisco or New York, in February."

Promoter Jack Solomons of London said that he would like to have Olson meet Turpin in a return bout in London on June 1.

Right now, neither Olson nor his manager, Sid Flaherty, are very serious in thinking about the future. All they want to do for a few days is relax.

Flaherty, who always watches the financial affairs of his fighters carefully, probably will advise Olson to put his share of the purse into the bank — or make a sound investment with it.

Bobbo already owns an 11-room house, where he lives with his wife, four children and mother.

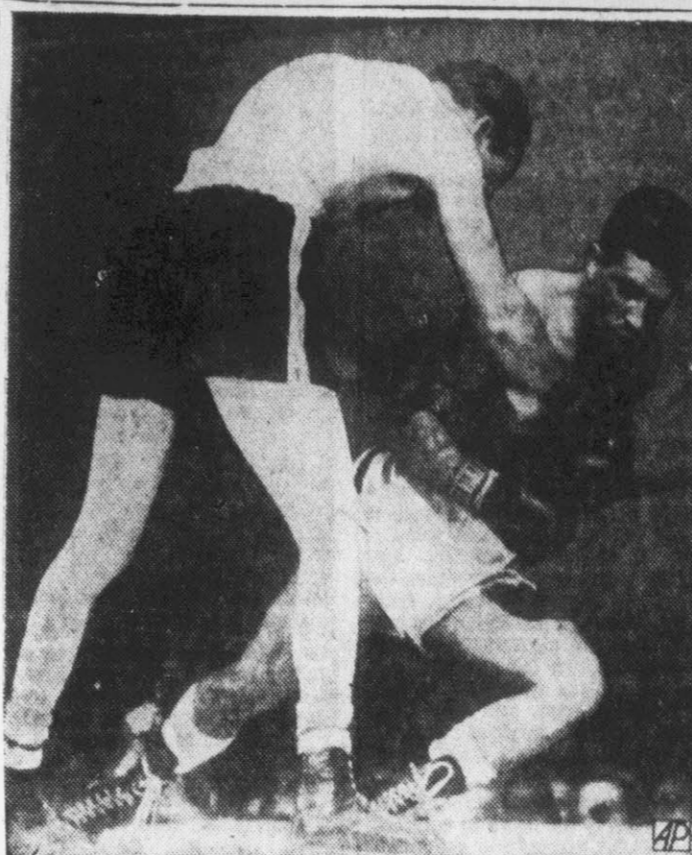

It is possible that his next appearance in the ring may be an exhibition in his home-town of Honolulu. Other than that, he has nothing in mind for the future—except long hours of rest.

Cox Scores Twice To Lead Gold's 25-7 Win Over Red

Straight T Dead Coach Reminds

Billy Cox scored twice yesterday to lead the Gold to a 25-7 victory over the Red in Midget Football League game played at Elm Street Park.

Cox scored his first touchdown from 15 yards out in the first quarter to give the Gold and early lead in the game. His second touchdown came late in the fourth period on an end sweep that went 75 yards.

In-between Cox's two touchdowns, the Gold spaced a pair of scores and the Reds got one.

Soon after Cox's 15-yard run in the first period, Sammy Pollard scooted across from 25 yards out and Bob Bilbro added the extra point for a 13-0 lead for the Gold.

The Red made their most serious threat to cut the lead late in the second period when Charles Roberts scored on a 40-yard off-tackle dash. Mack Roebuck added the extra point.

Pollard set up the third Gold touchdown when he went 40 yards before being shoved out on the four yard line late in the second quarter. Bilbro sneak across for the score.

Pollard, Bilbro, Cox and Stanley Hathaway paced the red-hot Gold offense. Billy James, Arthur Andrews, and Jimmy Jenkins led the defensive play.

For the Red, Mack Roebuck, Charles Roberts, and James Earl Henderson topped the offense while Joe Moye, Bobby Fridmore, and Harry Haggerty paced the defense.

Plaque Placed In New Gym At East Carolina

In memory of the late John B. Christenbury, coach at East Carolina College who lost his life during World War II, a handsome bronze plaque has just been placed in the Memorial Gymnasium of the college. It bears the names of eight athletes at the college who from 1946 through 1953 have received the annually presented Christenbury Award.

This award was first given in 1946 and has been presented at commencement exercises each succeeding year to "a young man who is a member of a varsity squad during his senior year, and who is selected on the basis of scholarship, character, and service to the college."

The plaque was recently chosen by a committee made up of Agnes Barrett, Dr. F. A. Toll, and Dr. N. M. Jorgensen of the college faculty and administrative staff and has now been installed. Names of future award winners will be added annually.

Coach Christenbury, a native of Statesville, N.C., served as a lieutenant (jg) in the Navy. He died July, 1944, in the Port Chicago explosion in California. Before joining the East Carolina staff, he taught at Crossnore, the Lee H. Edwards High School in Asheville, and Brevard College.

Conway Out Of Action With Shoulder Injury

By WAYNE BISHOP
Reflector Sports Writer

Coach Bill Kittrell's revengeful Phantoms will wind up their 1953 home schedule tonight in East Carolina College Stadium against the highly-rated New Bern Bears. Game time is set for 8 o'clock.

Preacher Parker and company will bring their undefeated conference record on to the Phantom gridiron rated as the best in the Class AA Northeastern Conference. The Bears have defeated three conference foes by convincing margins thus far.

The Phantoms once again will take the field with several key players on the sidelines due to injuries. End Bobby Conway is definitely out with a shoulder separation and fullback Bobby Langston may be out because of an ankle injury. The best that Langston is expected to do is see limited action against the Bears.

Good Game For S.C. Big Day

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UP)—Another meeting between arch-rivals South Carolina and Clemson failed to produce anything even approaching a riot, but it still turned out to be an interesting football game.

This is the game, held annually during the South Carolina State Fair, which in past years has been noted for its blood-letting, both on and off the field.

But not even one punch was thrown Thursday as South Carolina scored on passes of 45 and 24 yards to edge its state rivals, 14-7. A screaming but restrained crowd of 35,000 watched the 51st meeting of the teams.

Most of the action took place in the first half, but the only drive that counted was an 86-yard move engineered by South Carolina's star quarterback, Johnny Gramling who threw 45 yards to end Clyde Bennett for the first touchdown. Jim Jarrett converted the first of his two extra points.

Gramling left the game in the third period in favor of Harold Lewis, who quickly moved downfield to Clemson's 24-yard line. From there, Lewis tossed to end Joe Silas, standing alone in the end zone, to increase Carolina's margin to 14-0.

Quarterback Tommy Williams found end Scott Jackson with a 13-yard toss in the final period for Clemson's only score.

There during the season.

Norris also told Burns by telephone from New York that he plans two outdoor fights in Miami this winter. "Our plans include a Miami fight for heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano," Burns quoted Norris.

Norris said the Brockton, Mass., blockbuster's opponent in Miami Beach last summer with a stunning upset over former champion Edward Charles. Valdes currently is in Germany for a bout.

The title probably will be involved when Marciano makes his debut here.

Marciano To Meet Unnamed Fighter

MIAMI (UP) — Heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano is scheduled to fight an unnamed opponent here this winter, according to International Boxing Club president Jim Norris.

Jimmy Burns, sports editor of the Miami Herald, quoted Norris today as saying that the IBC will promote a nationally-televised fight at Miami Beach Jan. 6 and other indoor TV fights will be promoted there during the season.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

NANCY had wanted to see Dave Armstrong, too. She had thought about Dave half a dozen times that day. His new work was going along famously, according to reports that had come to her. Already he had received an advancement in his department.

It would have been nice to have Dave come to the house that evening. Nancy had half played with the idea all day that Dave and Lucy and she might go to a movie together, possibly stop at Joe Deutsch's cafe afterwards for a bite to eat. Joe's place was homey. They could find a table at the far end. They could talk and laugh and Nancy could try to catch the threads of her old life again. The life that she had been so ambitious to run away from, and which, now from the perspective of so few months, seemed to have a sweetness that she hadn't realized under the torment of worry over lack of money.

She had played with the idea of being with Lucy and Dave that evening and still the day had gone by without her having done anything about it.

Phil Stanley said he was going to count off the minutes. She had four minutes left. If she wasn't ready at the end of the five minutes he'd—

Nancy replied that he could stand there until Doomsday, she wasn't going to go with him. She knew now, that she was. Still it was a merry little game. Phil trying to count stern and she trying to look adamant.

Phil counted off another minute. He was tapping off the passing seconds with a well shod foot. Nancy watched his foot. Nice shoes she thought. They probably cost a lot of money.

As much as she had earned in a week pounding a typewriter, perhaps.

Phil touched his tie, tugged at his collar. Nancy's eyes followed his hand. An imported tie, probably from England. A tie could tell so much about a man.

He ran his hand over his hair. An aristocratic head, she would have thought. Clean, definite hair line against the white of his skin. . . . Dave had a well shaped head, too. . . . Dave was big and clean and . . . Dave had never paid more than ten dollars for a pair of Phil raised his eyes. "What are you standing there more minute." The light in his eyes belied his dreaming about? You have one threatening tone.

Nancy left to powder her nose. She stopped at the office to telephone that she wouldn't be home that evening.

Sam Sykes answered the phone. His voice gave Nancy a sickening feeling. Was he never going to find a job and get out of there?

"The music of Benny Goodland's orchestra at the Club Madrid served Nancy as a good antidote to the sound of Sam Sykes' voice. In Phil's car all the way out to the club-restaurant she could hear his voice. There was some note in it that she intuitively disliked. Sam and Moira had been at the Kelly home off and on for weeks now. Sometimes Sam said he had business out of town, but he always came back with indefinite stories about what the business was. Sometimes he had money to pay Moira for his and Moira's way, sometimes he had nothing but excuses to offer.

Nancy had been pestering Nancy for a job as a model in the shop. Nancy hesitated to put her off, though Mrs. Eustis had mentioned several times that a striking looking girl with a good figure should be employed to display dresses. Moira fit these qualifications, but she had the drawback of being too gabby and inquisitive.

Nancy knew that Moira was a throwback to some Kelly who must have lived in the long ago. There was nobody in the whole present relationship quite like her. Certainly she couldn't see Sam Sykes in the light that Nancy saw him.

When they were seated at a table in the Club Madrid, Phil suggested a lobster dinner. He ordered the right wines then stood up and said, "We dance, do we not?"

There he was again. Positive in act and statement, charmingly so, perhaps, but positive just the same. Nancy had experienced his charming positiveness before. She tried to decide whether she liked it very much or whether she didn't like it at all.

Phil had been charmingly positive when she had gone to Oconomoc lake that day to jobbat. He had been positive, certainly, when in the snow isolated lodge he had twirled her around and she had found herself fast in his arms, his lips crushing against her eyes, her mouth, her throat.

He even had been positive when she had called him a beast and he had apologized and said she was right. He had been charmingly, overwhelmingly positive when he tempted her to go into the venture of a dress shop that day in the Pfister hotel lobby.

His positive enthusiasm had caught her when with low spirits, and still stinging under the poison of Linda Van Vliet's words, she had turned to the ads, "Help Wanted, Female."

Nancy danced with Phil and tried to think if positive was the word she really meant. It was something compelling, something born of the fact she thought, that never in his life had he known what it was to be poor. He didn't know what the word dread meant.

Nancy in her way of analyzing character, working out the puzzle of people's personalities, was so overcrossed in the music that seemed to beat tempo with her thoughts, that she hardly heard what Phil was saying. He had said he'd give a dollar for her thoughts.

She said she was thinking of what gossips might be saying. "What gossips?"

"Any gossips. Evil, jealous, vicious-minded people. Don't you know any?"

"Can't say that I do."

Nancy was thinking how she might get Phil to mention Linda Van Vliet. She wondered if men ever had the intuition toward women that women had toward other women.

She wondered if Phil Stanley could sense the feline in Linda that she had sensed at that very first meeting in the Empire room, more so at the Colony Inn when Linda had so subtly given Nancy to understand that Nancy was a working girl, that Phil was a charming fellow, that Nancy no doubt had found him so as so many girls had. . . . "shall I say it? . . . to their regret."

The music stopped. The lobster was ready. Several waiters were hovering about their table. The host and owner of the Club Madrid was there to say good evening and to give a supervising glance at the table.

Now that Nancy had spoken of gossips and vicious-minded people, she found Linda Van Vliet's face and voice intruding themselves all during the meal. She felt that Linda must be in the club somewhere, that her cool, calculating eyes were observing her and Phil. She could hear Linda's poisonous, honey-laden voice. . . . even girls can buy anything. . . . even girls like you. . . . the world hardly lifts an eyebrow at a man. . . .

On the way back to town Phil remarked that he had left one of his driving gloves at the shop. Nancy said he could pick it up tomorrow. Phil said no, he wanted it tonight.

There he was again. His will against hers. They might be seen entering the shop together at a late hour.

"What would Mrs. Grundy say?" she asked.

"Mrs. Grundy who's she the janitress?" Phil won.

How silent and eerie the shop, for all its bright furnishings, seemed at this hour. Phil found the glove.

"It's so quiet here, let's talk." Phil grasped Nancy's hand, pulled her toward the chintz couch. She shook her hand free. She started to talk. She hardly knew what she was saying. Anything to distract his attention.

"You're a little devil, know it?" Nancy stepped backward.

"Phil, stay there. I want to ask you something. Why have you done all this for me—this shop, everything— You're supposed to be a notorious snob, and I, well I'm just Nancy Kelly from Cass street."

"Because you have more spirit in your little finger, than—"

He was holding both her hands now, crushing them until they hurt. There was desire in his dark eyes. "Phil, once I told you that you were a beast."

He dropped her hands. "I know, I know, redhead. I'm sorry."

Korea Veteran 'Illegally' Wore Army Uniform

NEW ORLEANS (UP) Roy Augustine Jr., 24, was wounded three times in Korea but today he was serving four months in prison for wearing an Army uniform. He has never been in the Army.

Rejected for a physical disability in 1950, Augustine obtained the uniform and credentials of a Korea-bound soldier, went overseas to a front line unit and received three wounds before his impersonation was discovered.

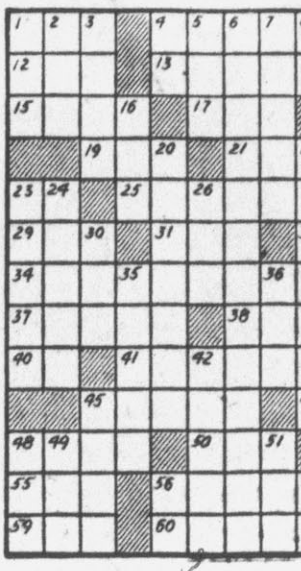

Sent home, he was picked up in 1951 at Camp Leroy Johnson where he was "trying to get into the first outfit going overseas." A federal charge was dismissed because of his service in Korea.

Found in uniform a third time, Augustine admitted he had donned a staff sergeant's uniform to impress his girl friend. A federal judge sentenced him to prison.

It is believed that chow dogs were first developed for their meat and fur.

Who, What, Why, Where And When They Will Share

In every reporter's vocabulary, there are five key words—Who, what, why, where, and when. Suppose, for example, you wanted to find out about the Girl Scouts, you would ask these questions and perhaps get these answers:

Who are the Girl Scouts?—They're your daughter and mine.

What are the Girl Scouts?—They're girls from seven to seventeen of every race, creed, and national origin.

Why are the Girl Scouts?—They are because the Girl Scout program offers the sense of belonging, usefulness, and accomplishment that all children want—and need.

Where are the Girl Scouts?—In practically every hamlet, village, and town of the United States.

When are the Girl Scouts?—Girl Scout troops exist when adults like you volunteer their time to keep the program going and growing.

Well that's the Girl Scout story. It's a story that concerns you because it's "who, what, why, where, and when" cannot be answered unless there are enough adult volunteers to provide Scouting for all the girls who want to belong.

Local Girl Scouts will observe Girl Scout week October 25 through 31. Among the activities planned for the week are a program to be presented before the local Rotary Club and a program by the local Girl Scouts over radio station WGTC

Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock. Plans are also underway to decorate four store windows in downtown Greenville in connection with the annual event. Also a series of articles will be carried in the Daily Reflector concerning local Girl Scout activities. The Girl Scouts are a participating agency in the Community Chest drive, which is now under way in Greenville.

The War Against Beverage Alcohol (Temperance Lesson)

WHAT THE SCRIPTURES TEACH ON THIS SUBJECT

Scripture—Proverbs 23:29-35; 31:4-5; Isaiah 5:11-14; Matthew 18:6; Luke 19:1-10; Romans 13:11-14; James 4:17.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

OUR LESSON today deals with one of the world's major problems which has troubled all nations from ancient times right up to the present day—intemperance. The primary class teachers may find this a rather difficult subject to present in an interesting and helpful manner to their children. But, alas! some young children may be acquainted with the problem of drinking intoxicating liquors, if not in their own homes, then in those of relatives or friends.

To these it may be pointed out that alcohol makes fools of persons. It makes them act ridiculously, takes away their God-given intelligence, and often makes them quarrelsome and dangerous.

These young children should be helped to see that there is a right and a wrong manner of behavior and that they must learn to be strong and take the right way to resist the temptations that assail even the youngest, and to stand firm in the right.

when it is red, when it giveth his color in the cup... At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

For those in authority—kings, princes, judges—strong drink is particularly vicious. They need clear heads to handle the matters that come before them with wisdom and justice.

Isaiah said: "Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink, that continue until night, till wine infaime them."

To show how Jesus turned a man's life away from evil to good with His love and understanding, our lesson includes the story of the little man, Zacchaeus, who in Jericho, climbed a tree to see Him pass by. Glancing up, the Lord saw him and called to him with the help of the Master.

MEMORY VERSE

"Be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God."—Romans 12:2.

Older children may run into situations which may require courage to enable them to take a stand against their classmates on this subject of drinking. Adolescents fear ridicule or to be made conspicuous by their refusal to follow the example of others. To them the prayer, "Give thy servant an understanding heart... that I may discern between good and evil,"—I Kings 3:9, should be memorized.

We all are given a choice between what we know to be good and what is harmful and evil. Parents and Sunday School teachers alike should put particular emphasis on the necessity of developing the strength of character to stand for the right, relying on God's help.

Statistics prove that drinking and the consumption of intoxicating liquors is increasing. What do our Scriptures have to say on this subject?

"Who hath weep? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions; who hath babbling; who hath wounds without cause, who hath redness of eyes?"

"They that tarry long at the wine... Look not on the wine."

to come down, for He would lodge with him that night.

Zacchaeus was a chief publican who had gained much of his wealth dishonestly. Jesus might have upbraided him, but, no, he would lodge with him—the sunnier—and suddenly, Zacchaeus saw his whole life pass before him and felt that Jesus knew all about him.

Coming down from his perch he received his Lord joyfully, and acknowledging his wrongdoing, promised to undo as much as he could the evil results of it, and lead a moral life. So swiftly can the power of Christ turn a man from evil ways to goodness.

St. Paul admonishes the Romans to "cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light. Let us walk honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness; not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying, but put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make no provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof."

Finally, a word from St. James: "Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin."

Grifton Board Votes To Buy And Install Water Meters

GRIFTON — The Board of Commissioners voted here last night to purchase 100 water meters for installation in local homes and business establishments.

The Board met in a special session called by Mayor Sam Nelson to consider the possibility of purchasing water meters and also to consider a paving petition signed by local citizens. All of the commissioners were present for the meeting.

Installation of water meters has been under consideration for some time because Grifton's water supply has been running low at times. City Clerk Robert Wheeler said today it is hoped that by this action the town will be able to keep enough water reserve on hand for meeting emergencies such as fire fighting. Wheeler said.

The motion for the purchase of the water meters was made by Councilman G. G. Sugg and seconded by R. B. Johnson. It was passed unanimously by the Board of Commissioners.

Wheeler said that the 100 meters will cost about $30 apiece. He said that this would not be enough to furnish all water customers in Grifton but that more would be purchased as money is available.

The Board also received a petition from property owners on Charles Street, Miami Avenue and Cannon's Boulevard for paving of the streets in front of their property and to assess the property owners.

The petition was signed by 80 per cent of the property owners along the streets and was presented to the Board by Bill Dawes and C. R. Kline.

A motion was made by Councilman B. B. Tucker to accept the petition and it was seconded by W. C. Chauncey. The Board passed on the motion with no dissenting votes.

G. G. Sugg moved that property owners who have failed to sign the petition be required to pay their share of the assessment as set forth in the North Carolina Statutes. The motion was seconded by B. B. Tucker and unanimously passed by the Board.

The paving will start at the existing pavement on Charles Street continue to the corner of Miami Avenue and then run the entire length of Miami Avenue to the Grifton school. Cannon's Boulevard will be paved from Wall Street to Miami Avenue. The entire project will be about 1400 feet in length.

The Councilman also passed a motion requiring the property owners of vacant lots along the streets to install sewer lines from the main sewer line to their property lines so that street will not have to be torn up for this purpose in the future. The property owners will not have to pay the usual tap-on fee at the present time, however.

In other business taken up by the Commissioners, G. G. Sugg made a motion that the Board adopt a schedule of privilege licenses as set forth by the North Carolina League of Municipalities. No local merchant would be required to pay more than a $25 maximum for privilege license under this plan. The motion was passed unanimously by the Board.

The Board also voted to purchase one set of the North Carolina General Statutes for use by town officials.

A motion was made by R. B. Johnson that the Board accept a proposal by Sam Wilson to extend a two-inch water main on Grifton's Main Street for another 100 feet. The motion was seconded by G. G. Sugg and carried in a vote by the Board.

Next meeting of the Board of Commissioners was called for next Monday night by Mayor Sam Nelson.

Red Oak News

The annual "Harvest Sale" or "Country Auction" sponsored by Red Oak Church is set for Wednesday night, October 28, at the Red Oak Community Building. The menu to be served will be turkey with dressing and gravy or barbecued chicken, potato salad, candied sweet potatoes, collards or snap beans, bread, rolls, hot coffee and a dessert. Plates will be fixed for those who wish to take them out. Supper will be served from 5 o'clock until 7:30.

After supper, Mr. Reginald Alston, our town auctioneer from Scotland Neck, will auction off to the highest bidder a variety of home-grown produce consisting of cakes, pies, homemade candies, dressed poultry, meat, dairy products, sweet-pickled peaches, fresh country eggs, all kinds of canned goods, fresh garden vegetables, preserves, pickles, handicraft, dish gardens, and many other items. This will be Mr. Alston's sixth year with us. His hobby is helping rural churches "get on their feet." Our goal this year is to raise enough with what we already have on hand to pay a note for $661 December 1 on the club building and to pay a note for $622 on our organ on February 1.

We invite all of our friends to come and have supper with us and stay and enjoy the auction. You will truly enjoy the food, fun, and good fellowship; and, at the same time, be helping a good cause. We are asking every member of our church to come and bring their whole family and eat supper and help in some way with the auction.

We are very happy to learn that the little granddaughter of Mrs. Onan Allen, who has been critically ill with polio at Duke Hospital, has recovered sufficiently to be returned to her home at Williamson. Red Oak Community welcomes home Charles Allen, who has just returned from Korea. He was overseas for several months and he saw his little daughter for the first time when he arrived home. Mr. and Mrs. Sam Winchester and Katherine Winchester, Mrs. Jarvis Tripp, Mrs. James Allen, Mrs. F. L.

Allen and Mrs. Amos Evans attended the Harvest Dinner and Auction Sale at the White Oak Baptist Church near Wendell on Thursday.

A goal of 150 present at Sunday School for the first four Sundays in November has been set for the Red Oak Sunday School and an increase of ten percent at each succeeding church service. November marks the beginning of the most progressive step ever taken by our church. We are beginning full time services with our present pastor, Rev. Harold Tyer, as minister. This is quite an undertaking for so small a church but with the same fine spirit of cooperation that is so prevalent in our community, we will make it go off. We invite all of our friends to come and worship with us whenever they can.

Troops Called In London Strike

LONDON (UP)—British troops today were ordered to smash a gasoline transport strike—alleged to be Communist inspired—which spread a creeping paralysis through the world's largest city.

His decision was announced to a grave House of Commons. The Laborite opposition immediately backed the government against the 3,000 wildcat strikers who have defied their own union by the work stoppage.

Mitchell and Mrs. Margaret Wade, assistant home agent, directed arrangement of the exhibit. ## Confidence Vote

LONDON (UP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill's government won a vote of confidence Thursday night on its swift action to prevent what it considered a threatened Communist attempt to seize power in British Guiana.

By a vote of 294 to 256 the House of Commons voted down a motion by the Labor opposition to censure the Conservative government for suspending the constitution in the South American colony, ousting government ministers and sending in troops.

Following the vote, Commons shouted approval of a government motion calling for endorsement of Britain's actions in Guiana.

A Conservative spokesman said the government would resign and call for new elections if the Laborite motion was carried.
