Women In The Church

Meeting in Atlantic City, N. J., 2,500 delegates of United Church Women unanimously dedicated themselves to "eternal vigilance" against any abrogation of the U.S. Constitution or Bill of Rights, either by totalitarian governments or by certain undemocratic activities on the part of some of our own lawmakers. A resolution asserting that this nation has "to an alarming degree" tended to ignore the principles of the U.S. Constitution and Bill of Rights, expressed grave concern at "the extent to which the United States has become a vast whispering gallery of charges and counter-charges." In other resolutions the church women opposed racial segregation in public schools; urged the U.S. government to separate the Point Four Program from U. S. military programs, adopt the United Nations Covenants on Human Rights, fully support the United Nations and the UN International Children's Emergency Fund, and strive to secure international reduction and regulation of armaments.

Despite safeguards of the law, freedom of thought and speech in American radio and television for the first time have been infringed, an eminent woman radio commentator warned delegates to the recent assembly of United Church Women of the National Council of Churches. Miss Pauline Frederick, news commentator for NBC, described violations of free speech as maneuvered by political demagogues. "The economic pressure stemming from the passions aroused by the political medicine men have been known to force sponsors to cancel their sponsorship and stations to drop programs," Miss Frederick said. She declared that these "purveyors of uniformity of thought and speech are bent on running those out of business who attempt to exercise free speech until they, too, conform." Another warning on the loss of freedom in America was sounded by a noted educator who challenged the church women to "stand up and fight" for freedom of religion and education in the United States because "tomorrow will be too late." Dr. Buell G. Gallagher, president of the College of the City of New York, asserted that "it is no accident that the Bill of Rights, foundation stones of American liberties, begins with guarantees of freedom both to worship and to think without let or hindrance from the Congress of the United States."

Subpoena Threat Brings In Reports

A large number of persons who received subpoenas for failure to list taxes have reported, according to County Tax Supervisor Reginald Gary.

"Some of the listings will amount to a large revenue," Gray said, "with several ranging between $30 and $40, and $42.70 the largest to be listed of those receiving subpoenas."

There were 176 subpoenas scheduled to be served; however, some people reduced this number by reporting before the court orders were served. "Approximately 100 have been served with about 75 coming in to list their taxes. Others will be served this week and those receiving the subpoenas must report by October 31," the Tax supervisor explained.

Penalties are being charged against anyone who failed to list any taxes at all.

Whittemore And Lowe Playing Here Tomorrow

Arthur Whittemore and Jack Lowe, appearing Tuesday in the opening feature of the East Carolina College Entertainment Series for 1953-1954, are nationally famous artists, who have won an enviable reputation and a wide popularity as duo-pianists.

They will bring their own pianos to the Wright auditorium and will appear Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in a program of selections ranging from the classics to modern popular music. Chairman James W. Butler of the college Entertainment Committee has announced.

Face-setting programs, best-selling recordings, and news-making personalities have contributed to the success of the tours which the piano team makes every season. Whittemore and Lowe are in constant demand, not only in recital, but for radio and television appearances and as soloists with major orchestras.

The two artists opened their 1953-1954 season with an appearance at Carnegie Hall with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, Saturday, October 24.

At Carnegie Hall Saturday Whittemore and Lowe introduced in world premiera works for two pianos and orchestra written by Ernest Krennek and Morton Gould. The duo-pianists also appeared Sunday afternoon on the New York Philharmonic-Symphony nation-wide broadcast on the CBS radio network.

Busy all the year, the pianists include on their summer calendars New York's Stadium, Philadelphia's Robin Hood Dell, Denver's Red Rocks, Cleveland's Summer Orchestra Series, and Chicago's Grant Park.

Hard workers and excellently trained musicians, they play virtually all the standard music originally written for two pianos. They have also expanded the repertoire with almost 200 of their own transcriptions of works ranging from the classics to the best of today's popular music.

Whittemore and Lowe travel from city to city with the New York license plate 88WL heralding their arrival,—88 standing for the number of keys on the piano keyboard and WL for their initials. They are followed by a special truck carrying the two personally selected Baldwin Concert pianos, which they will play at their concert in Greenville.

During the 1952-1953 season, the pianists were offered one of the most attractive TV contracts ever known to classical artists, it provided for more than 100 appearances. The only classical instrumentalists to have their own television program, they were seen five times a week.

Robert Vogeler To Speak Friday For Local Club

ROBERT VOGELER

Members of the Pitt County Executive Club and their guests will get chilled and thrilled a-plenty Friday night when Robert A. Vogeler, the first American businessman to be imprisoned by the communists, will address the club.

Vogeler will be the first of a series of outstanding speakers who will address the local Executives Club during the 1953-54 season.

The meeting Friday night will be held in the north dining hall at East Carolina College at 7 o'clock. N. C. Brooks, secretary of the Pitt Executives Club, reminded members that reservations for the dinner meeting should be made by 9 o'clock Wednesday morning.

In his address Friday night, Vogeler will use as his topic "The American Way Versus the Foreign Way." He will discuss his experience as a prisoner of the communist in Hungary following his arrest by the secret police.

Vogeler, formerly vice president and European representative of the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation, was arrested by Hungarian government police and charged with espionage, sabotage, and conspiracy against the Hungarian government. He was forced to "confess" to the false charges, and was sentenced to 15 years in prison by the Hungarian government.

He was freed after serving 17 months of the sentence during which time great pressure was brought by the United States government for his release.

U.S. Girl Scouts Celebrate 'Week'

This week two million Girl Scouts all over the country are celebrating Girl Scout Week. They are commemorating the birth of Juliette Low, the great woman who was their founder, and the great program of fun and service she created.

Girl Scout Week has seven service days. They begin with Girl Scout Sunday. Yesterday each Brownie and Scout troop in Greenville attended the church of its choice in uniforms.

Today is Homemaking Day. Back in the good old days grandmother kept house with "a rag and a bar of yellow soap." It was hard work. In today's scientific world, homemaking is a lot less back-breaking, but it's just as important as ever. Yes, homemaking is still woman's work—but today it can be fun too.

As a matter of fact, homemaking is the most popular activity in the whole Girl Scout program. Support the Girl Scouts, this Girl Scout Week and all through the year.

Pauper's Oath Of VA Attacked

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Dr. Edward J. McCormick, president of the American Medical Assn., yesterday called the Veterans Administration's policy of admitting all patients who sign a pauper's oath a "threat to private enterprise."

VA care now is supposedly limited to those who cannot afford to pay, but the VA has no authority to question a patient's application for admission.

Dr. McCormick, scheduled to speak tonight at the Oklahoma Clinical Society's conference, said he foresees an expensive system of "free" government medicine unless VA regulations are modified.

NAACP Warns Democrat Party To Retain Plank

ROCKY MOUNT, N. C. (AP)—The Democratic party was warned by a national Negro leader here yesterday that its stand on civil rights may determine its future success.

The closing session of the 10th annual meeting of the North Carolina branch of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People heard Walter White charge that Govs. Battle of Virginia, Byrnes of South Carolina and Tamm of Georgia "are demanding abandonment of the civil rights program and the restoration of the South's veto power in the Democratic national convention."

Speaking about the Democratic party's attempts to reunite, White, executive secretary of the NAACP, added: "This is a high price to pay under any consideration but it is a ridiculous price to pay in exchange for what these Dixiecrats can offer. Unity within the Democratic party at the sacrifice of civil rights may regain the South but it will surely lose the nation."

A Sound Proposal For Tobacco Farmers

Tobacco growers in Pitt and other leading tobacco producing counties would do well to lend their support to the State Farm Bureau resolution calling for acreage reduction in tobacco allotments for next year.

Naturally it is a difficult thing for farmers to urge a reduction in the amount of land they can plant in their principal money crop. Yet farmers of this section in the past three decades have proven to themselves it is more foolish to plant and produce much more tobacco than the market can absorb and suffer terrific price declines as a result.

With tobacco prices in this section reaching record peaks this year, it is a natural inclination for farmers to want more acreage in the golden weed next year. But those who are capable of looking back at the past years of tobacco production, and read the present economic signs are of the opinion the unusually high prices this year were caused by a particular group of circumstances not likely to repeat themselves.

It is a safe assumption that even the same amount of tobacco produced in this region next year as produced this year, prices would not be nearly so high as they are now. Were production increase any, the price would drop accordingly.

In asking for the reduction in acreage, the State Farm Bureau is seeking to keep tobacco production in line with demand in order to maintain as firm and sound an economic base for the crop as possible.

The Reflector is of the opinion that the reduction in tobacco acreage next year will serve the best interest of the tobacco growers in maintaining their economic position. Much as we hate to see Eastern Carolina cut back the production of its number one product, we would hate worse to see the bottom drop from under the tobacco prices which remain the basic economic factor in this area.

The New Broom Is Broadening Its Sweep

It is difficult to tell just how clean the new broom of the Republican administration is sweeping in Washington; but it is evident that it is moving out many government employes because they are not considered good security risks.

In the past four months, according to a federal report, 1,456 federal employes were either dismissed or their resignations forced by the new security program set up by the President last May 27.

It is not likely that the number of employes removed from government payrolls during the period has nearly cleared the government of its poor security risks, but at least it has removed a segment of a group which might betray government information to an enemy nation.

There is a good deal of work yet to be done to weed out communists and their fellow travelers in government positions; but the new security program appears to be making a good start. The new security program is gaining momentum as it moves along, and should put an increasingly tight pinch upon the communist espionage rings operating in this country.

The greater the progress made in that direction, the better off the United States will be.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
A STARTLING ALTERNATIVE
What are you trying to do—solve the problems of life or evade them? treat your ailments or cure them? Christianity has a lot to say about treatment, but treatment is but one step in the process of cure. God will not waste His time patching up our lives and making them a bit better. He is interested only in giving us new life.

The realization that new life is ours for the asking constitutes undoubtedly the most thrilling fact in the religious life. The Bible is full of accounts of transformed people—Moses, fugitive shepherd being transformed by the power of God into a great national leader; Isaiah, being God high and lifted up in the temple and being changed from an unclean man into a saint that has blessed the ages; the disciples, humble, unlettered men, transformed into historically influential personalities; Paul the persecutor, being changed into the most influential Christian leader that has ever lived.

You and I have problems in our lives. What are we seeking for, remedy or cure? Do we want pain killer which will make us forget our miseries, or light that will lead us out of darkness? Do we want a slap on the back and a cheap "cheer up," or do we want to hear stupendous words out of the mouth of God Himself, which will undergird us and give us new power?

Which are we seeking—treatment for our ailments or cure?

Mexicans Like Bill O'Dwyer

By RAY TUCKER
MEXICO CITY—The Kefauver Committee's vast television audience may not believe it. But the self-exiled William O'Dwyer, former Mayor of New York and Harry S. Truman's Ambassador to Mexico, is still one of the most popular Americans ever to represent the United States in this key Latin-American country. Both officialdom and populace refuse to regard him as even a minor villain in New York politics or of the Senate crime investigation drama.

The late Dwight Morrow, the House of Morgan partner, who was drafted in 1926 by Coolidge to settle disputes over Mexico's confiscation of foreign-owned oil properties, tops O'Dwyer. The kindly Josephus Daniels of North Carolina is more respectfully remembered for his lovable, human qualities, and his consideration of patriots and peons alike.

STREET NAMED FOR MORROW—They have named a street after Morrow in Cuernavaca, the mountain hamlet where he bought a modest home to escape Mexico City's fierce summer heat. The guides among the Mayan ruins in Yucatan never fail to tell tourists that Morrow contributed his own money for restoration of the relics of this vanished civilization. But Morrow is best known as the father-in-law of Charles Lindbergh, whose romance with the banker's daughter began there. The good Josephus is becoming a memory.

O'Dwyer, however, is known and liked by everybody the writer questioned here and throughout the interior. Mere mention of his name brings a smile to the faces of officials, headwaiters, taxi drivers, tradesmen, the priests of Puebla and the fishermen of Vera Cruz and Acapulco on the Gulf and Pacific Coasts, respectively.

"You Americans are unfair to O'Dwyer," said a well-informed Mexican lawyer. "We read regularly that he stays here because he doesn't dare to go home. But he was a good friend to Mexico. And you haven't sent too many friends as Ambassadors to us. You and the British don't think we are important enough for that. You are making a great mistake, in view of your troubles with Russia."

REASONS FOR O'DWYER'S POPULARITY—Why is O'Dwyer so popular, despite the besmirching of his reputation by Kefauver and New York Grand Juries? Without presuming to give all the answers, here are a few, and American diplomats at more important foreign posts might paste them in their hats: For one thing, O'Dwyer speaks Spanish fluently and frequently. Many Spanish-Irish adventurers with similar names—O'Farrell and O'Higgins—fought to free Mexico from Spain's rule. He persuaded his ambassadorial wife, the former Sloane Simpson, to study and try the native language, although not too successfully.

He appeared at the dedication of holy and profane places in every part of Mexico, despite the hardships of travel. He attended, on Sunday, both mass and the bull fights. He seemed to enjoy the cruel sport, although most Americans leave after the first kill, which is like walking out at the end of the second inning of a Yankee-Dodgers clash or after the first quarter of a Notre Dame-Oklahoma game.

Mexicans do not credit ugly rumors in Washington and New York about Hiznorer. It is reported that he is "broke," which contrasts strangely with contrary insinuations around Capitol Hill and Manhattan City Hall. It is said that he does not dare to return for fear of indictment. It is rumored that he is a broken, lonely, unhappy figure. He is supposed to be a man without a country. Here are a few qualifying facts:

HE LIVES IN HOTEL PENTHOUSE—O'Dwyer has a well-appointed law office in the old but established business section, two blocks from the American Embassy offices. He cannot practice law here because he is not a Mexican citizen. His principal clients are Hollywood and Mexican motion-picture interests. Without much chance of success, they are contesting the Cortines Government's requirement of a 50-50 division in the exhibition of American and Mexican films.

He lives in a two-room penthouse atop the Hotel Prince, a modest hotel in downtown Mexico City. He dines at the finest restaurants and often with a lovely local beauty. Living expenses and taxes are 50 per cent less than in the U.S. Save for rainy months, the climate is perfect.

As to his not daring to cross the border, he flies to San Francisco periodically for clinical treatment of a thyroid condition.

"If you have anything against him," observed my legal friend, "why don't you pick him up on one of these trips? If not, the appropriate judicial or political body should clear O'Dwyer's name!"

Business Today

Big Change Coming

The Census Bureau estimates that by 1975 there will be 20,700,000 Americans 65 years of age and over. In 1950, there were 12,400,000.

The Census Bureau is less sure about the number of young people there will be then; consequently it isn't sure about the total population. But it has made four projections, assuming a variety of conditions of boom and bust, war and peace, and places the population under 20 between 63,000,000 and 85,000,000 in 1975, and the total between 198,000,000 and 221,000,000.

Those figures mean a vastly different kind of America in 1975.

Crowded, to be sure. Traffic jams—in the air if the helicopter has replaced the auto. Sharpening concern over food supplies, unless we learn to like plankton. Grave water problems, unless we speed work on methods of de-salting sea water.

But the greatest problem of all is this: Whether the high or low census projection is accurate, people between the ages of 20 and 65 will have proportionately more people to support.

Under the low projection, there will be 114,800,000 persons between 20 and 65, and 83,700,000 above and below those ages. Under the high there will be 115,200,000 between 20 and 65 and 105,700,000 above and below. Every productive person is going to have to support more people, directly or through taxes, than he is today.

This could lead to some unpleasant things, such as:

A sharp cut in the standard of living.

The forcing of more people, especially teenagers and women, into the labor force. An alternative: a longer work week.

The raising of the pension age above 65.

A drop in the birth rate because people could not afford children.

There is one sweeping alternative to all of these things. That is a great increase in productivity—in science and agriculture, as well as in industry. Instead of worrying, as so many are now, whether we are in for a dip and how much of a one, we ought to be working on expansion of the economy so that those of the 115,000,000 who are able can, working a 25 or 30-hour week, support the 200,000,000 plus in a style to which we are yet to become accustomed.

URGES STANDARDIZATION IN ADVANCE OF NEED

Management faces the task of preparing uniform standards of health, safety, manufacture and operation for the coming electronic and atomic revolution in industry, Robert E. Gay, president, told the American Standards Association.

Standards will have to be agreed upon in advance of need, he said, or industry will later have to "unscramble a mess that should never have happened."

117 CITIES USING HOUSING LAWS TO UPROOT SLUMS

Of 228 cities surveyed by the National Association of Real Estate Boards, 173 are now engaged in a full or partial program of enforcing laws aimed at slum conditions.

"More than 69,000 dwelling units have been brought up to standards and 8,300 units unfit for rehabilitation have been demolished," Charles B. Shattuck, association president, said.

Drives for elimination of slums usually have the support of builders and social workers, as well as real estate men.

CORPORATIONS BORROW LESS, SPEND MORE

Corporations borrowed less money in the first half of this year than they did in the first half of 1952, but they were able to put 3 billion more into capital equipment.

There was no magic to this. Corporations increased earnings much more than they increased their dividends, and used more depreciation reserves, the Department of Commerce reports.

Here It Is, Hallowe'en Week Again

Discoveries And Inventions Which Are Now Progressing

By ROGER W. BABSON
BABSON PARK, Mass., — Let me name some discoveries and inventions which are now progressing:

(1) Indestructible Plastics which will not bend or rust, crack or split. These are based on certain new chemical compounds. They will be used for everything from houses and bridges down to automobiles, and even soft goods.

(2) The production and use of New Metals and Alloys. There are less than 100 elements, but these can be put together in millions of different alloys, of which only a small fraction has now been tested. These new alloys offer great opportunities for development.

(3) Commercial Isotopes, some of which the Atomic Energy Commission has released to the public. They are now being used by hospitals. The time is coming when these isotopes will be used for all kinds of industrial work, to find flaws in machinery, in steel rails, textiles, etc. They may develop into a great industry.

(4) The "Do-It-Yourself" Industries, which have a promising future. With the shortening of hours, everyone is given more opportunity to work at home. If I wanted to open any kind of store, I would have a store which would handle materials to help people get along without carpenters, painters, electricians, etc.

(5) The Mechanical Brain—an invention with great possibilities. The time is coming when these new mechanisms will do much of our thinking and analyzing, and may become almost as common as the adding machine.

(6) Watch Supersonics. By this I mean very rapid mechanical vibrations which are faster than sound waves. Supersonics may completely eliminate present washing machines and other household utensils. They have the power of cleaning metal and even cutting metal. We first had the electrical age; we are now entering the electronic age; and will some day enter the supersonic age.

(7) Vending Machines. Some years ago we had vending machines in railroad stations and on street corners, but the industry got into a bad rut because so many of the machines were broken and the products and money were stolen. Now, with the introduction of self-service, the vending machine is protected within the store. It is again coming into its own.

(8) Electric Power. The time is coming when electric power, sufficient to run home appliances, may be broadcast like radio.

Some even claim that we will buy our electricity in batteries, which will be brought to us once a month like bottled gas. This may give us electricity for the household cheaper than we could get it from the big central power stations.

(9) The Conveyor Belt, coming into use more for both people and goods. This will develop into a new industry, especially after the synthetic rubber plants are returned to private industry. A belt is now being devised to carry people from the Grand Central Station to Times Square, New York City.

(10) I am particularly interested in getting power, heat, light, and refrigeration from Solar Radiation. Statistics show that the most of sunlight on an acre of land is equal to a thousand horsepower. A very complete report on the future of Solar Radiation appears in the September issue of Fortune Magazine.

(11) Automatic Factories should permit decrease of prices and should allow workers more time for study and leisure. They are destined to increase rapidly in number. The printing industry is already on the verge of revolutionary changes whereby it can get along with a fraction of its present number of employes. Shoe factories, cotton mills, and others will enter the push-button stage where practically the entire operation will be done automatically. This will solve the union labor problem.

In Conclusion, Economics is my specialty. All this talk about making prosperity permanent by legislation is sheer nonsense, although Congress can temporarily extend same. In the long run, prosperity is dependent upon us developing spiritually and having better knowledge and self-control with a determination to render service. Too few of our people have these all-important qualities. Sometimes I think that young ministers and school teachers have the greatest opportunities for improving conditions.

Around Capitol Square

Governor Umstead Braved Frowns Of State Employes

By LYNN NISBET

TIME OFF — State employes based at Raleigh are somewhat peeved because Governor Umstead authorized the Department of Personnel to curtail the customary full day off to half a day for attending the State Fair. The Fair Thursday holiday has been a tradition for many years and State workers have come to expect it is a right, just like the Fourth of July, Labor Day and other officially recognized holidays.

Several former Governors have considered ending the practice, but pressure from around Capitol

Square was always sufficient to maintain the practice. Meantime, State workers based outside of Raleigh have complained that the holiday was discriminatory reduced the discrimination by cut-employees in the same classifications who were based at Durham or Greensboro or Rocky Mount could attend the fair only by using part of vacation or petty leave time which was charged against them.

Governor Umstead and Personnel Director John McDevitt have reduced the discrimination by cutting the free time to half a day for Raleigh employes. Nobody is very happy about the situation. The capital city workers feel they have been gyped out of half a day and those based at other points still think the Raleigh folks have a half-day free bonus.

It is also true that when the State office closes Thursday afternoon a great many of the released employes did not go to the fair grounds.

FLIGHT — Even though it may be true that the Wright Brothers, Wilbur and Orville, chose the outer banks of North Carolina as the site for experiments in flying machines 50 years ago, because it was the most desolate and windiest place they could find on the North American continent, the event has resulted in a lot of publicity for North Carolina. This publicity will increase until the December 17, the half century anniversary of the first flight, which will be observed throughout the world—but will center around Kill Devil Hill and Kitty Hawk in Dare county.

TEASERS — Allocations from the "surplus" highway fund for particular purposes often are more than endorsements of the projects. Up in the mountains the other day there was a good deal of facetious comment about ex-Governor Kerr Scott and Governor William Umstead bidding for the Haywood county vote with highway surplus moneys. Scott had allocated a million dollars to the Pigeon River project, which is not enough to complete it. Last week Umstead allotted three quarters of a million to the Canton viaduct, which is also not enough to do the job.

Three quarters of a million allocated to the Croatan Sound bridge is less than one third the estimated cost of the job. Other allocations come in the same category. These initial "teaser" allocations do serve the purpose of tying down the projects and putting pressure upon incumbent and succeeding highway officials to complete them—either by additional special allocations or by use of regular divisional highway funds.

CONTINUING — Some of the projects now being completed were tied down in this way as far back as the Broughton administration. Some of those included in the recent Umstead allotments may not be finished even during the next Governor's term.

The main consideration is that there are so many of these local projects which cannot be met out of current revenues, and to which no one Governor can feel justified in appropriating enough money to complete that they have to be strung out over long periods. Once started, however, their ultimate completion is reasonably assured.

Construction now in progress on US 29 between Concord and Kings Mountain, for example, was planned before World War II. Recently completed by-passes of Asheboro and in-process around Lexington on US 64 date almost as far back. The Eliand to High Point by-pass route on US 70 and the US 1 by-pass of Henderson come in the same classification, as did the recently opened US 1 route around Wake Forest and Franklinton. The "teaser" allocations ultimately pay off.

DISTRIBUTION — Money in the regular highway budget is distributed on a statutory formula. Different factors control the budgeting of construction and maintenance funds, but in the total picture they involve area, road mileage, population, automobile registration and perhaps other considerations.

There is no statutory requirements for distribution of surplus funds, that is money left over after the budgeted amounts have been met, except recommendations of the highway chairman and chief engineer and the will of the Governor. Every chief executive seeks an equitable balance among the several sections of the State in allotting these funds. That is evident in the balancing between the Croatan bridge and the Canton viaduct, the Henderson and Salisbury by-passes, the Cape Fear bridge and the Fontana road.

In each instance the projects involved were too big for regular highway allocations to handle and were deemed of sufficient general importance to justify not charging the appropriation to the particular highway division in which it is located.

TARHEEL — Randy Hamilton director of the Washington office of the American Municipal Association, is a thoroughly naturalized Tarheel. A native of Ohio, he spent some years as city manager of Carolina Beach before moving up to the top place in the national association. He confessed at the Asheville meeting of the N.C. League of Municipalities that he misses more than anything else the intimate contact with North Carolinians.

He said he sent other members of his staff, many of whom wanted to come to North Carolina, to other States but insisted upon coming here himself. G&D board members, meeting in Asheville at the same time, were delighted to find that Randy is doing a good job of publicizing North Carolina's attractions all over the country.

Washington's Own Uniform Is Cleaned

WASHINGTON (U.P.)—The uniform George Washington wore when he resigned his commission at Annapolis has "gone to the cleaners" for the first time in 170 years. The buff-and-blue uniform coat, breeches, and vest long have been among the most prized possessions of the Smithsonian Institution's historical collection. When it was decided to move them to a new display the opportunity—and the problem—of cleaning them arose.

The uniform was tailored of the finest domestic material available at the time—so fine, in fact, that it shows almost no deterioration. Inevitably, however, fine dust particles have worked their way into the fabric—each particle acting as a tiny razor cutting the fine fibers when the cloth is agitated in any way.

Not Pressed
The institution considered it unwise to allow the uniform out of the building to be cleaned by professional dry cleaners. The fabric could not be rubbed or sponged because of the risk of damage.

It was finally decided to use an organic solvent into which the garments were raised and lowered gently. The cleaning process over the uniform was laid out carefully on white blotting paper to dry. It was not pressed for fear of steam damage or pressure.

The Smithsonian received the uniform 70 years ago from the Patent Office, which had received it in turn as a bequest.

Mendel L. Peterson, the institution's curator of history, reports that although the material is the finest produced in America at the time, the uniform is not up to the quality of those worn by British generals who fought in the Revolution. The British wore beautifully tailored scarlet regalia which, in comparison, makes the blue coat and buff breeches and vest of Washington's uniform look almost plain.

With Chest and Sword
The coat is of woolen broadcloth with buff trimming for the lapel and coat tail. The lining is woolen with mohair stiffening, excepting the sleeves, which are lined with linen.

In its new setting the uniform is now displayed as a unit together with Washington's mess chest and sword. The chest, supposedly used by the General in the field, contains tin plates, a meat platter, knives, forks, spice and condiment containers, and bottles. In one of the bottles is a little crude salt—perhaps evaporated sea salt for the crystals are irregularly shaped—remnants of that actually used by Washington.

The sword was Washington's favorite. Known as a "hanger" because it was designed to hang from the belt, the short sword is silver-mounted and has an ivory grip. Stamped on the scabbard is the name of the manufacturer, J. Bailey, Fishkill, N.Y.

Enrollment Trend Of U.S. Colleges Is Again Climbing

CINCINNATI (U.P.)—The trend of full-time students in U.S. universities and four-year colleges turned slightly upward this fall after five years of decreasing enrollments.

Dr. Raymond Walters, University of Cincinnati president and an authority on collegiate enrollment movements, reported this on the basis of estimates received from 506 approved institutions.

"The estimated increase of a few percentage points in full-time totals is a consequence of larger freshman classes," Dr. Walters commented. "The total of new students now exceeds that of a year ago just as, in turn, 1952 freshmen had topped the 1951 figure."

"Registrars of both publicly and privately supported institutions typically report 'small increase' and 'no considerable proportions' in response to our inquiry as to full-time students under the Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act of 1952."

He pointed out that many Korean veterans, "chose rather to take well-paid jobs in industry and business so freely available."

"A considerable proportion of the GI's who followed through their original applications to the Veterans Administration are engaged in part-time study at urban universities, thus receiving up to $50 per month educational entitlement while holding regular jobs."

Breakdown Of Figures
The Cincinnati president believes abundance of jobs may be a factor in small decreases in full-time enrollments this fall as compared with last which are reported in universities in certain cities from East to West, most of them among what Dr. Walters terms the "Big 25."

Of all institutions reporting, 50 per cent showed increases, 27 per cent no change, and 23 per cent decreases in estimated full-time enrollments.

Among public universities 67 per cent reported gains ranging up to 14 per cent, 25 per cent no change, and 8 per cent decreases up to 7 per cent.

Among private universities, 8 per cent showed gains up to 7 per cent, 56 per cent no change, and 36 per cent decreases up to 14 per cent.

Among colleges of arts and sciences, 49 per cent, 27 per cent no change, and 24 per cent decreases up to 14 per cent.

Among technological institutions, 47 per cent showed gains up to 14 per cent, 25 per cent no change, and 28 per cent decreases up to 14 per cent.

Among teachers' colleges 59 per cent showed gains up to 24 per cent, 21 per cent no change and 20 per cent decreases up to 14 per cent.

Local Musician In Dance Orchestra

Herbert Dale Bland, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Bland of Greenville, has accepted the position of trumpet player and arranger with Tony Pastor's Orchestra.

Bland is a graduate of Greenville High School where he played in the band and was a member of the Glee Club for four years. He studied piano and theory under Mrs. Karl Gilbert during high school.

While attending East Carolina he was a member of the band, orchestra, and mixed chorus. During his stay at the college he studied voice under Dr. Dan E. Vornholt, theory with Dr. Carl Gilbert, and trumpet under Herbert Carter.

During the summers of 1952 and 1953, Bland was with Jesse Smith at the King Phillip Night Club in Boston. While studying in Boston he was arranger for the different local dance bands.

He is a graduate of the Schillinger School of Music in Boston. His major was the arrangement of modern dance music.

While in Boston he studied trumpet with John Goffey, teacher and trombonist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The local musician has plans for further graduate study in California in the near future.

Report New Peak In Registration

RALEIGH 7—Total motor vehicle registration in North Carolina has climbed to a new high, the Motor Vehicles Department reported today.

Foy Ingram, registration director, said that through Oct. 20 a total of 1,357,655 cars, trucks and buses were on record with the department. The figure compares with 1,272,975 registered through the comparable period last year.

During September, Miss Ingram said, a total of 13,103 new cars and trucks were registered. It was the highest monthly total for new vehicles since February, 1951, she said.

CHURCH THIEF
NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UP)—A maximum sentence of seven years was handed George C. Rogovsky after police said he admitted looting poor boxes at 26 churches in six weeks, netting a total of $20.

AP Newsfeatures
 Shine up your best broom and get set for a midnight ride with goblins, ghosts and ghouls. Halloween is an eerie time for witches and their pals.
 If your crowd doesn't have a party but once a year, Halloween is the time. It lends itself to enchanting decorations inside and out. And the autumn chill makes food taste better.
 Plan spook-to-spook hookups by getting the outside decked out in haunted house fashion. Black crepe paper may be put over the windows so that the entrance looks pretty grim, and when the guests enter the house a horrible clanging of bells might ensue. (Borrow a fire bell or ship's captain's bell from a friendly neighbor.)
 Engage the services of local small fry to assist you on the outdoor scene. The kids adore scaring their elders on a night like this, so let them participate to their heart's content. Dressed in appropriate masks and or sheets and costumes kids may hide behind rocks, barn, garage, house or up in the trees. Tarzan-types may sit in trees which must be passed by on the way to the house and unroll sheet-ghosts, witches or goblins to bring shivers to the spines of the guests.
 At the gate two pumpkins may glow in eerie contentment. If gale gusts are flat, pumpkins may rest on them. Otherwise put your pumpkins on long poles, about the weight of broom sticks and put them in the ground. To keep a big heavy pumpkin from sliding down the poles put wooden pegs or nails around the pole directly under the pumpkin.

 If you live in a house with a roomy cellar you can really scare your guests skinny. Make the cellar the party entrance, keeping it dark and full of surprises. Stretch a piece of twine across the cellar and hang cold spaghetti from it—just low enough so it brushes across the forehead and face. Other ideas may be scared up, depending on your little helpers.
 In the corner of the cellar, for instance, a kid may stand on a step ladder which has been draped with a sheet or black witches robe. If he wears the proper mask and there is another kid to flashlight the witch's face at the right moment, your giant witch will get the party off to a screaming start in the house.
 By the time your guests get upstairs they will be all set for fun. A real old-fashioned Halloween party can't be beaten. So why not have bobbin' for apples, apples on a string and fortunes in a cake?
 The apples rather than the cake may contain the fortunes. Let these be intriguing with such predictions as "a certain senior has eyes only for you" or "before the week is out you will meet your fate." Unless you have a separate container of apples for boys and girls, the fortunes should apply to either.
 Hang apples in the doorway, offering prizes for those who can bite into a swinging apple suspended by string without using their hands.

Aerial Map Was Very Misleading
 CLINTON, Okla. (UP)—Flier W. D. Andrews of Miami, Okla., saw an airport on his map and confidently used it to land his light plane.
 He found himself in a wheat field the plane bogged down in mud. His map was printed in 1946. The airport buildings burned down in 1947 and the runways have been planted in wheat each year since.

Medical Director For Prisons System Named

RALEIGH J.—Dr. Charles Ely Flowers, 64, of Zebulon has been named medical director of the State Prisons System, effective Nov. 1.
 His appointment was announced yesterday by Prisons Director W. F. Bailey. Dr. Flowers, a native of Pamlico County, replaces Dr. Charles E. Angstadt of Raleigh who has been filling in temporarily as medical director since the recent dismissal of Dr. John D. Browning.
 Bailey also announced that medical services will be improved at Central Prison. Plans call for three full-time registered male nurses to be on duty at Central Prison to serve in shifts around the clock.
 Dr. Flowers will have offices in the prison hospital and devote full time to supervising the medical needs of the nearly 10,000 inmates in the prisons system, Bailey said. His salary will be $9,000 a year.
 Dr. Flowers, a veteran of World War I, attended the University of North Carolina and the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond. He formerly practiced general medicine in Columbia N. C., and Norfolk.
 A Wilmington convict died recently in the Central Prison Hospital after slashing himself on the arm. He was being held in an isolation cell for mental observation. Following an investigation, Bailey said he felt the prisoner did not receive proper medical attention.

 ALLIANCE, Neb. (UP)—Sallor, a dog that got lost while the Marlon Kamerzell family was visiting in South Dakota, walked back home a week—and 200 miles—later.
 The population of the Saar is so dense that the people could live only 50 to 60 days a year on their own farm output.

Tobacco Prices In General Drop

RALEIGH J.—Weekly price averages were at the lowest of the season on two belts and next to the lowest on the third as flue-cured tobacco markets today entered the new sales week.
 But the Carolina Border Belt, which closed last week, set an all-time high seasonal average of $56.76 per 100 pounds. Volume of 347,800,717 pounds was 15 million higher than last year but about 9 million under the record 1951 sales.
 The North Carolina-Middle Belt averaged $47.39 last week, low for the season and down $1.97 from the previous low set the week before. Season figures now are $4,599,216 pounds averaging $51.12.
 The North Carolina-Virginia Old Belt averaged $46.48. This also was a weekly low. It was down $2.61 from the previous low of the week before. The $1,401,135 pounds sold so far this season have averaged $49.15.
 The average of $56.23 last week on the Eastern North Carolina Belt was $1.80 under the previous week and the lowest since the fourth week of sales. Figures for the season are 444,650,509 pounds averaging $57.60.

ROCKIN' CHAIR'S GOT 'EM
 STOUTON, Wis. (UP)—Taking it easy on the job is the order of the day for employees of a local clothing company. The 75 employees must lean forward and then back as they sew, so the firm tried out a rocking chair as a test. It worked so fine that production went up 20 per cent, and all employees now are equipped with rocking chairs.

Here are America's lowest-priced V-8's...

Ford Tudor—America's lowest-priced V-8 Sedans
 Check the other V-8's and you'll discover Ford's Tudor sedans and business coupes are the lowest-priced of all! Like all this year's Fords they bring you the smoothest going ever. Specially tailored front springs and new shock absorber action give a ride that's a wonder. Front end road shock alone is reduced up to 80%.

Ford Victoria—America's lowest-priced V-8 hardtop
 Meet America's "Best Dressed" Car, the Ford Victoria. Its Crestmark body is hultight. And under its baked enamel finish is the only V-8 in the low-price field. With Ford's Automatic Power Pilot, it gives 110-h.p. high-compression GO on "regular." (Center-Fill Fueling makes fueling-up easier from either side.)

Ford Ranch Wagon—America's lowest-priced V-8 station wagon
 The 2-door Ranch Wagon, also available with Ford's Six, is actually two cars in one. It's six passengers big, yet converts to a cargo hauler in seconds... with 6 1/2 feet to the end of the tailgate. Ford also offers two 4-door "quick change artists," the all-metal Ford Country Sedan and the wood-trimmed Ford Country Squire. Both are V-8 powered.

Ford Sunliner—America's lowest-priced convertible V-8
 More people drive Ford convertibles than any other make. And no wonder! Its V-8 engine is the same type of engine powering America's costliest cars. You can have it with Fordomatic, Overdrive or Conventional Drive. And you can have any Ford V-8 with Ford Master-Guide, the last word in power steering.

Ford is the only V-8 in the low-price field.

Ford Master-Guide, Fordomatic and Overdrive optional at extra cost.

Red Heads Don't Cry

By ROY L. FOLEY

LINDA knew that Nancy Kelly had no idea of her own power to attract men. She knew that there were a lot of Nancy Kellys in the world whose paths never led them beyond a humdrum existence. They never met men. They slaved away in obscure, monotonous jobs, got tired faded in looks, and opportunity passed them by.

By opportunity, Linda meant men, rich men. They represented luxury, idleness, danger, adventure to any woman. She lived by her wits, and one's wits grew sharper with constant use. She excelled in matching her wits against men's wits, and the more dangerous the match the better she enjoyed the game.

Certainly, at this point of the game with Phil Stanley, she wasn't going to let movie-ingenue sort of girl, with violet eyes and a blaze of copper hair, walk away with Phil. She would destroy the rival. It should be so easy as to be laughable. But how?

She had lain awake nights plotting how. She had one idea. She had gotten it on the day that she visited Nancy's shop and saw coming into the shop. Later the idea seemed silly.

Anyway, she would tell Spike about it. Spike knew all the tricks. He had a genius for working up ideas into action.

There was that unheard-of obstacle of Sam Sykes, once a member of the old ring in Miami, by some crazy coincidence up here in Milwaukee, married to a sister of Nancy Kelly, and trying to go straight.

Straight to the extent that he had a lapse the first time he saw opportunity to make some quick and easy money. Of course he had muffed it. Sam was a coward. He couldn't work alone. He'd muff anything without Spike Adams swinging the whip over him.

Well, Spike would know what to do about that, too. Spike was a wonder.

Spike was at the apartment door now. Two short rings, a long and a short.

Linda doused her cigaret in the dregs of a highball. Her temples were throbbing. She hadn't felt this way since Spike had advised a split-up when things were getting hot for them all in Miami. Spike's whipped her blood. It meant danger and danger was the breath of life to Linda Van Vliet.

She loosened the bolt on the door. They didn't speak until Spike was well inside the apartment and the door closed behind him. Walls, even in as genteel an apartment building as this, had a way of hearing.

"Pretty swell, Cassie. Looks like you're doing the society act again."

"It's wonderful the way you deduce things, Spike. You should have been a detective. Only I told you my name is not Cassie. It's Linda. Linda Van Vliet."

"Where'd you pick that one?"

"Part out of a novel. Part out of a Chicago telephone directory."

"How are you living up to it?"

"Famously. It's gone over big in this town."

"No questions asked?"

"Not too many I've dodged them all."

"A young, hot-blooded, blue-blooded millionaire."

"Sounds good. Same old story, I suppose. You're going to get him in deep, then allow him to buy you off?"

"That's the general idea."

"How many times have you worked that before?"

"Don't be silly, just once. I'm only 28."

"You look 20."

"I didn't get you up here for compliments, Spike. I want your advice."

"There's a little redhead by the name of Kelly that's got my millionaire going gaga yet, but I can see the writing on the wall."

"Sounds interesting."

"Listen Spike, here's the whole story, right from the start . . ."

An hour later the cut glass decanter on the cocktail table beside Linda's chaise longue was an island in a sea of cigaret stubs.

Linda had told every detail of her plot to victimize Phil Stanley, of Nancy Kelly and the shop of Sam Sykes' marriage to Nancy's sister, of Sam's abortive effort to pull a job on the Stanley Construction company. She even added the detail of Moira's employment in the shop as a model.

Spike had listened with hardly an interruption beyond a few questions. He kept running his hand over his heavy bearded jaws in the manner that Linda knew so well.

"What would you do, Spike, if you were me? Give the thing up, get out of this town?"

"I would not."

"You really mean it, Spike?"

"Of course I mean it. You're not going to let a few little complications scare you out, are you? You haven't lost your guts, have you, Cassie?"

"The name's Linda, please. I've told you half a dozen times."

"All right, Linda. Give me some more of that dope about the stuff Sam got on that company . . . what do you call it?"

"Phil's dad's company, the Stanley Construction company."

"Is it still any good?"

"It ought to be. The trial's been dragging on for half a year. There's been an adjournment for a number of months, according to the papers. The judge has been sick."

Spike poured himself another drink.

"Why? What's on your mind, Spike?"

"Oh I was just thinking—what's that stuff about you spoiling the reputation of the redhead, doing a snatch or something in her shop?"

Linda repeated parts of her story over again. She said that while coming out of Nancy's shop she got an idea when she saw a lot of jewels on a puffy eyed old dowager. She said she had an idea that somehow she could snatch some jewels, or money "or something" from a customer in the shop, perhaps plant them somewhere and make Nancy Kelly or her sister look "guilty as hell."

"Plant them where?"

"In the shop, idiot, or in the redhead's purse. Hell, Spike it was just an idea. I've got to do something. There would be publicity. Phil Stanley's name would be brought into it. I could see to that, and old J.G. Stanley, his father would have a hemorrhage. And his mother—you ought to see his mother. She's one of those touch-me-not old aristocrats. This Kelly person is just a nobody who lives down by the railroad tracks someplace. I've got to—"

"Cassie—I mean Linda—keep your shirt on. The idea may be all right. If you're so hipped on ruining the redhead's competition it should be easy. A gal with your experience. You're getting excited."

"I've got to have your help, Spike. Why don't you move into this town. It hasn't been worked for years."

"Maybe I will. That stuff about Sam mugging the shakedown sounds interesting. We've got to get Sam up here, talk him into something."

Spike took another drink.

"Say, Linda."

"Yes."

"Sam hasn't forgotten he's a bigamist, has he?"

Summons of Sam Sykes to Linda's apartment was accomplished the next night.

It was fast work for Linda but Spike Adams said it had to be done, that he was anxious to get back to Chicago where he had work of considerable more importance to do. He didn't tell Linda what work, nor did she ask him.

"If there's a little job for me to do here, let's get it over with."

People didn't ask Spike Adams too many questions. They just did what he told them to do. Just being in his presence again brought back all the old times to Linda. It all seemed like yesterday with Spike the big captain whipping out orders to his lieutenants.

The lieutenants usually did all the work and Spike always got the biggest scoop of the gravy. Shakedowns, protection bribes, blackmail. The technique of their accomplishments always had been a marvel, even to those who were links in Spike's chain of shady pursuits.

Spike was the big shot, the magnet, the brains, the one most feared, the one most hated.

Sam Sykes was one whose mixture of fear and hate for Spike ran deepest, yet in the past when Spike whipped out an order or a rebuff, Sam was like a dog that crawled back on his belly for more.

Spike knew Sam.

Linda knew Spike.

She knew that Spike got an evil pleasure in bending Sam to his will and then making Sam squirm. Both knew that Sam, however, he might try was too cowardly to pull a job alone.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (UP)—Special issues stood out in a firm, quiet stock market early today.

Foremost of the features was Friggs Manufacturing, up 6 1/2 points on an opening block of 6,500 shares following weekend announcement that Chrysler is buying Briggs' auto body plants and equipment. After the initial pile-up of orders had been satisfied, the price slipped to 35, up 3 1/2.

Chrysler in turn added 3/4 point to 67 1/2. The move was seen as reflection of the auto industry's preparation for sharpening competition, and raised the old rumors again in Wall Street of a Nash-Hudson merger and of General Motors dickering to buy Kaiser's huge Willow Run plant.

In the same group, Studebaker gained 3/4 to 25 1/2 on a 2,000-share opening block, reflecting continued pleasure over declaration of the company's regular quarterly dividend, which many in the street had expected would be cut. Studebaker later eased to 25 1/4, up 1/2. General Motors rose 1/4 to 59 3/4.

Volume for the first hour of trading amounted to 270,000 shares, compared with 280,000 last Friday.

WASHINGTON (UP)—President and Mrs. Eisenhower returned to the White House last night after spending a short weekend at Camp David, the presidential retreat in the Catoctin Mountains near Thurmont, Md.

The Eisenhowers traveled in a seven-car motorcade frequently disrupted by speeding motorists who cut in and out of the line of cars. None, however, came close to the President's limousine which was guarded by a Secret Service car.

State Fair Said To Be Greatest Ever Presented

RALEIGH (UP)—The 1953 North Carolina State Fair which closed Saturday night, was the biggest and greatest in its 100-year history.

The record-shattering attendance was "well over a half million," according to Dr. J. S. Dorton, Fair Manager.

Financial success of the fair seemed assured, but Dr. Dorton said it will take State Auditor Henry Bridges' office several days to check all receipts and expenses.

"The fair of 1953 is over," said Dr. Dorton, "and it turned out to be a wonderful first of the new century of service by this institution which was started in 1853."

Officials agreed it was the safest and most orderly crowd in history.

Divorce Cases Highlight Start Of Court Term

The October term of Pitt County Civil Superior Court convened this morning with Judge J. Paul Frizelle presiding.

Seven cases were scheduled for hearing today with five of seven divorce cases.

The calendar for the four-day term of court is small with only 16 cases listed.

Divorces scheduled today: Hugh M. Jenkins-Clara B. Jenkins, J. B. Hardee-Virginia Hardee, Herschel M. Tyson-Ruth M. Tyson, Frances W. VanDyke-Zack P. VanDyke, and Sam Williams-Lucy Bell Williams.

YDC Neutral In Coming Primary

GREENSBORO (UP)—President Horace Konegoy of Greensboro says the North Carolina Young Democratic Clubs will be neutral in next year's primary election.

"It's not our function to advocate or campaign for any particular Democratic candidate in primaries," he said in an interview Saturday.

Konegoy said he felt the Young Democrats would welcome back former members who campaigned and voted for Eisenhower. But he added it may be some time before they can regain the standing they had before.

STRUCK IT LUCKY ROME, Italy (UP)—A one-armed war veteran and a textile worker decided after some discussion—

"because times are so hard"—to risk 16 cents each on yesterday's football lottery. They won $167,000 apiece.

In 1952, about three automobiles were scrapped in the United States for every four new cars sold.

Bethel's Weekly Paper Suspended

BETHEL — The Bethel Post, weekly newspaper published here for the past two years, has suspended operations.

It was announced by officials of the Community Charity and Betterment Association, publishers of the weekly newspaper, that publication was suspended with last week's issue.

The newspaper was founded in 1951 by Robert Lewis, and later became the property of the community association. Rev. Carl E. Bjork, editor-manager of the newspaper, assumed his duties with the publication in March 1952, on a temporary basis, and the organization had been working toward the establishment of a printing plant in Bethel and the employment of others to handle those responsibilities.

Leyton Blount Jr., president of the Association which published the Bethel Post, indicated the group had been unable to find someone to take over the various duties involved in the newspaper work.

With the suspension of the newspaper, the Bethel Print Shop will also be closed. The department did commercial printing in Bethel and surrounding community.

Red Oak News

Everything is shaping up for what we believe will be the biggest and best Harvest Supper and Auction ever held by the folks in Red Oak community. Turkey and all the trimmings or barbecued chicken with a variety of home-grown vegetables with hot coffee and a dessert will be served from 5:30 o'clock until 7:30 o'clock.

After supper the call for the first bid on many items of good food-stuff, home-made articles, poultry, candy, hams, etc., will be made by our faithful auctioneer, Colonel Reginald C. Alston, who has been with us at every auction sale we have ever had.

Everybody is cordially invited to the supper and to the auction. The proceeds will be used for the church and the community building.

Approximately 30 women of Red Oak Church met last Sunday night to perfect plans to organize a Christian Woman's Fellowship. Three Circles were organized and Circle No. 1 and Circle No. 2 have already had a meeting.

Circle No. 1 reports a wonderful meeting. Eight members and one visitor met at the home of Mrs. Ethel Crawford. Mrs. Andrew Garis was elected president, Mrs. Charles Tucker, vice-president, Mrs. H. R. Allen, secretary and treasurer. They will meet each Monday night after the second Sunday in each month.

Circle No. 2 met with Mrs. Edna Simmons on last Monday night. Mrs. Amos Evans had charge of the program. They used the Christian Women's Fellowship material. They voted to sponsor a bake sale on the Wednesday before Thanksgiving Day.

There will be a called meeting of all former members of the old Circle No. 1 of the church to decide on what to do with the funds in the treasury. This meeting is called for next Sunday morning, November 1, immediately after church services.

One hundred and twenty-four persons attended Sunday School last Sunday. We have set as our goal

Benefit Supper Nets Over $300

Although all figures are not complete, indications are that better than $300 will be cleared from the Elm Street Park Project benefit supper and auction last week, according to Recreation Director Warren Carroll.

The director seemed pleased at the benefit supper, but said that a lot of things scheduled for the auction sale were turned back in because too many people "ate and ran."

Carroll said that $87 worth of merchandise was sold at auction, but that was not half of what was on hand for the sale.

All articles sold were donated by local merchants.

Cake walks, using cakes baked by women of the town, brought in $12.

The Recreation Commission have received many questions since the meal last week asking when there would be another such supper. Carroll stated, with everyone commenting on the good food.
