U.S. Officials Say Talks With Malenkov Still Impossible

New Russian 'Hint' Coldly Received

By JOHN SCALI WASHINGTON 7—American officials turned a cold shoulder today toward a new Russian hint that Premier Malenkov may be ready for peace talks with Western chiefs of state.

There has been speculation Churchill was planning to go to Moscow by himself. He reportedly stuck to the view during recent talks with Dulles in London, that some such meeting is needed if the West is to find out at first hand what Malenkov is like.

Some officials believed it possible Vishinsky was sending up a "trial balloon" to determine whether Eisenhower would be interested now in meeting Malenkov informally, as Churchill has suggested.

Corruption Flourishes In Jap Boom Towns Outside Big American Bases

EDITORS NOTE: Festering anti-Americanism threatens relations between the Japanese and the American troops based in Japan. One of the principal irritants is the shoddy "boom town," featuring sex, dope, dubious pleasures and easy money, that has sprung up on the outskirts of American bases.

By WILLIAM MILLER
United Press Staff Correspondent
CHITOSE, Japan (UP)—The Japanese call this "the world's most evil town." American GIs have nicknamed it the "sex circus."

Both Japanese officials and American Army authorities agree it is bad, but for different reasons. Each blames the other for its existence and the Japanese and Americans can't agree what should be done about it.

The "sex circus" is a muddy little town on Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost island. In general it resembles other similar boom towns which have mushroomed around American military bases here.

The problems these centers have raised emphasize the basic difference in American and Japanese attitudes on the subject of morals and a fundamental disagreement as to the cause and cure of the situation.

Packed into two square miles of marshy ground beside the Chitose U. S. Air Force Base and camp of the U. S. 1st Cavalry this "most evil town" has become a monster which has had American generals tearing their clothes for two years.

The muddy streets are lined with 564 houses of prostitution, 66 "beer halls," eight "restaurants" and "dance halls," plus hundreds of "lessor establishments" all specializing in parting the American soldier from his bulky payroll as speedily as possible.

The last official count by Japanese authorities listed 2,400 prostitutes in Chitose; 2,000 others who claim to be "steady" or "only" girl friends of Americans and another 4,000 who pour in on paydays.

These girls, mostly young victims of Japan's tragic overpopulation of females, generally come to Chitose from Japan's main island, Honshu. They do so for a profitable business with the 15,000 soldiers and airmen stationed here.

Dope is just around the corner. Heroin and morphine, all you want, sells for less than a dollar a shot. Marijuana is easier to get and less expensive than American cigarettes.

Adding to the general confusion is a military currency black market which has landed several American soldiers behind stockade bars for long sentences.

The names of the "establishments" brazenly declare their specialty: "The Passion Beer Hall," "Cupid," "The Hurry Back" and "The Green Cat House."

Brig. Gen. Orlando C. Troxel, member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, called the situation "shocking" and said the committee should keep an eye on it.

Sen. Lester C. Hunt (D-Wyo), another member of the Committee, said the town "should be declared off limits" to all U.S. personnel. "I don't know why it hasn't already been done," he said.

The commanding officer has authority to do this. He doesn't need any prodding. If the facts in this story are true, it should be done.

An Army spokesman said authorities here have been "generally aware" of the Chitose situation. But he said a United Press dispatch spelling out details was being sent to the Far East Command with a request for a full explanation.

Various steps have been taken to try to clear up Chitose, the Army said. But it said the attitude of local Japanese authorities and businessmen had proved a stumbling block.

Before World War II, Korean girls, located mostly in the north now held by the Communists, were more important than that of either Mexico or Turkey, says the National Geographic Society.

commander of the 1st Cavalry has called for a cleanup.

With considerable effort he has prodded the reluctant Japanese businessmen into taking at least some action. But where the American commander would like to have a genuine cleanup, with the offending places closed, the Japanese attitude dictates a different approach.

Many Japanese see nothing basically wrong with prostitution. What they object to is an open, vulgar display of sex, which they complain has become a dominant feature of the towns near American military bases. What they're interested in is keeping sex and sin discreetly out of sight behind the walls of "restaurants" and "hotels."

The Chitose "Self Discipline Promotion Association" has ordered measures including:

1. We will have the American soldiers follow Japanese manners, so do not hold hands or link arms with American soldiers in public.

2. Wooden boards will be placed on windows so people cannot see in from outside.

3. All questionable signs, which seem to say "this is the place to have sexual intercourse" will be removed.

4. Try not to have business on the main highway. Those already there try to make it unnoticeable.

are true, it should be done.

Chimes Of Big Ben Are Still Freedom's Symbol

By AHROLD GUARD
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON (U.P.)—The majestic chimes of Big Ben that carried messages of hope to oppressed peoples in the darkest hours of World War II are tolling the sound of freedom now to peoples behind the Iron Curtain.

The world remembers the measured strokes of the great clock in its tower over the House of Commons during the evacuation from Dunkirk. The idea of a daily moment of united prayer and silence was born then.

It became known as "the silent minute," signalled by the chiming and the striking of Big Ben at 9 p.m. each day. Americans listening to the war broadcasts of the BBC heard its great bronze beat.

And among the resistance movements in Europe and among peoples of the Commonwealth the movement grew during the war until millions were united in keeping this evening tryst together. There emerged from this time of trial a Big Ben Council to perpetuate the idea in the cause of freedom.

World-wide Response
A member of the council said the movement has continued ever since and that Big Ben's symbolic message is reaching now far behind the Iron Curtain into Russia and China.

The council includes former ranking officers of the three British fighting services. It has been endorsed by Queen Elizabeth and Prime Minister Winston Churchill. Nightly, there is the powerful striking at 9 o'clock, and then a pause in the broadcasts of the BBC. Those beyond reach of the BBC still observe it.

During the past year, a council member said, letters have been received "from almost every country in the world indicating that "the silent minute" continues to spread."

"It is indeed becoming a round-the-world observance," he said. "It is impossible to synchronize the keeping of the minute at the same moment everywhere, and it is the habit of those beyond the reach of Big Ben's voice to remain silent and receptive when their own clocks strike nine each evening."

The council has received letters from America, all over Europe, Australia, Africa, India, China and Russia," expressing loyalty to the common cause of freedom."

A Nazi's Opinion
A message broadcast in Russian said:

"We, men and women of good will in Britain and elsewhere wish you, your family and all your friends, freedom and happiness." The council recalls the comment of a high Nazi official when asked by British Intelligence why he thought Germany lost the war. "During the war you had a secret weapon for which we could find no counter measure and which we did not understand but it was very powerful," he replied. "It was associated with the striking of Big Ben each evening." Council members said the world now faces a graver crisis than was even the case in the days of Dunkirk.

"The piling up of arms, atomic and otherwise can but lead to war," they said. "On the other hand, we believe the power of a constructive idea will triumph over evil, and the cold war and create the foundation for peace. That is why the Big Ben minute is considered to be of such vital importance in the interest of human welfare."

WELL, HARDLY!

EPOKANE, Wash. (UP)—Police Judge Gordon Lower asked John F. Trimmer, a transient, how he got a black eye. Trimmer replied he had been fighting with another man. "Is the other fellow in jail, too?" asked the judge. "I don't think so," was the answer. "He was a policeman."

Dr. Utterback Is Guest Speaker For Literature Dept.

Mrs. J. C. Galloway and Mrs. Lloyd Mills entertained the Literature Department of the Woman's Club Tuesday afternoon at Mrs. Galloway's home on Student Street.

Mrs. B. C. Batterfield presided over the business meeting in the absence of the president, Mrs. Jesse Moye.

Mrs. J. L. Tripp, Mrs. D. A. Blue and Mrs. Roy Everhart were welcomed as new members and the guests for the program were Mrs. Warfield Spry, Mrs. Emma M. Hooper, Mrs. M. E. White Sr. and Mrs. L. E. West.

The program chairman, Mrs. Paul T. Ricks, introduced Dr. Elizabeth Utterback who spoke on "Early American Literature." Her subject was confined to the very earliest writing in the colonies, particularly in Massachusetts, Virginia and North Carolina. Early writing consisted of letters, journals and diaries, Dr. Utterback stated, and interesting excerpts from each were read which portrayed the simple life in the colonies, their love for freedom and their religious tendencies.

The first book written in America was by Captain John Smith which was nothing more than a history of the Jamestown settlement. All of the colonists kept a diary or log which was published in England but American literature was not recognized in England until about 1821. James Fenimore Cooper and Washington Irving were responsible for this recognition, said Dr. Utterback.

Some of Governor Winthrop's love letters to his wife were read which showed the importance of religion in their life. Humorous selections from Samuel Sewall's diary and parts of Sarah Kimball Knight's Journal giving an account of her trip from Boston to New York were also read. These vividly portrayed life in the colonies.

Dr. Utterback read two poems by Ann Bradstreet, the first American poet, and several lines from Michael Wigglesworth's poem on Sin.

A copy of the "New England Primer," which was printed in 1647, was shown and its contents explained. It was interesting to note that the unusually small book contained the alphabet, prayers, hymns, phonic drills, poems and numerous catechisms for children. There are only ten copies left in the United States today, Mrs. Amy Vanderbilt has recently purchased a copy for $1,200.

In conclusion, Dr. Utterback brought out the fact that we are greatly indebted to these early writers for our democracy, our freedoms and our religion, and quoted these lines from "America the Beautiful":

"O Beautiful for Pilgrim's feet,
Whose stern impassioned stress
A thorough-fare for freedom beat, across the wilderness!
America! America! God mend
this ev'ry flaw,
Confirm this soul in self control,
thy liberty in law!"

Bishop Plans To Raze $2 Million Church Shrine

CLEVELAND, Tenn. — Bishop Homer Tomlinson says he will take a 12-pound sledge hammer, a wrecking bar and other tools on a bus and hitch-hiking trip to North Carolina today to destroy a Church of God shrine he estimates cost two million dollars.

The 61-year-old bishop, head of the Church of God with New York headquarters, has announced plans to raze the fields of the Wood Shrine near Murphy, N. C., about 50 miles from here.

The shrine is on Burger Mountain and is owned by the Church of God of Prophecy, headed by Tomlinson's younger brother, the Rev. Milton Tomlinson. Set in the side of the mountain are the 10 Commandments in stone letters five feet high.

This is the site where the brothers' father, A. J. Tomlinson, said he saw a vision leading him to found the original Church of God in 1903.

Homer Tomlinson says his father appointed him to lead all branches of the church and that in addition to destroying the shrine, he will unseat his brother, who he claims is "making idolatry of fields of the woods."

"I cannot let (him) do it any more than Moses could let a younger brother, Aaron, make a golden calf, even if I have to break the two-million-dollar shrine into powder," the bishop said.

He said he would "use every equipment necessary" and that the job may take three weeks, unless authorities intervene.

The bishop used a paint brush last month in an effort to change the name of the Church of God of Prophecy to "The Church of God." He was restrained and kept in protective custody by police for a short time.

Will Quiz Atomic Spies On Radar Lab Espionage

NEW YORK (UP)—Three investigators for Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy fly to Lewisburg, Pa., today to question two imprisoned atomic spies about possible espionage at the Army's top radar laboratory.

Roy Cohn, Frank Carr and G. David Schine of the McCarthy staff were to travel to the federal penitentiary where David Greenglass and Harry Gold are serving time for their part in the Rosenberg espionage ring.

McCarthy said evidence had been given his permanent investigating subcommittee that Julius Rosenberg, who was executed last summer with his wife, Ethel, set up an espionage ring at the Fort Monmouth, N.J., radar installation during World War II.

At least 27 civilian employees of the Army Signal Corps have been suspended for "security reasons" in recent weeks. McCarthy said he had not determined whether the security "leaks" at the laboratory were cases of espionage.

McCarthy, who is in Wisconsin, told his staff here by telephone Tuesday to try to arrange for Greenglass to be brought before the subcommittee at a hearing in New York.

Greenglass, a brother of Ethel Rosenberg, is serving a 15-year term for passing along atomic secrets to the Rosenbergs. He was the chief witness against them at their trial.

McCarthy said he also hoped the subcommittee could question William Perl, another figure in the Rosenberg case, at a New York hearing. Perl, a former Columbia University physics professor, is serving a five-year term in a federal prison at Terre Haute, Ind., for lying when he swore before a grand jury that he did not know Julius Rosenberg.

Perl, according to McCarthy aides, was employed at Fort Monmouth as an expert in aerodynamics in 1942.

The McCarthy subcommittee plans to resume its hearings in New York on Friday, and will continue the closed-door sessions next week.

Convinced Reds Hold 2 Americans

WASHINGTON (UP)—State Department officials are convinced that two long-missing Americans are being held in a Russian prison camp and a sharp protest may be sent to Moscow soon, it was learned today.

The Americans are Pvt. Homer H. Cox, 33, of Oklahoma City and Leland Towers, 29, of San Francisco.

Returning Austrian World War II prisoners reported two weeks ago that the two men were being held in a Soviet camp about 150 miles northeast of Moscow. The State and Defense departments immediately began an investigation to determine whether the reports were true.

Last week Dutch prisoners freed by the Russians confirmed the reports.

The State Department, as part of its investigation, has been canvassing diplomatic missions abroad to get all facts on the cases before drafting a note to the Kremlin. Presumably, the department also checked the returning Austrian and Dutch POWs.

Cox has been listed by the Army as absent without leave from his West Berlin post since 1949. The Austrian war prisoners said Cox was arrested by the Soviets in East Berlin on June 8 of that year and sentenced to 53 years in a Red prison. They said the sentence was later reduced to 25 years.

Towers' mother, Mrs. Irene Towers, said her son went to Europe in 1948 to "work his way around and see the countries." She said he wrote faithfully once a month but his letters stopped arriving in 1951.

The returning Austrians said he had been seized near the Soviet-Finnish border.

Plaintiffs Given Additional Time

A judgement was rendered by Judge J. Paul Frizzelle in the Harold Johnson-G. K. Heath Jr. case in Pitt County Civil Superior Court yesterday.

The demurrer, which was issued Monday for a lack of cause of action still stands in the case; but the plaintiffs are allowed 30 days to file an amended complaint and the defendants are allowed 30 days after the filing of the amended complaint to file an amended answer or other pleadings as they may be advised is proper.

A divorce was granted Herschel M. Tyson and Ruth M. Tyson on the grounds of two years separation.

The case in which Charles Ray Harris is suing White Construction Company for $35,000 for injuries sustained in a wreck was continued. Court recessed at four o'clock yesterday.

Air Academy Awaits Only Congress' OK

By VERN HAUGLAND

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UP)—The Air Force is ready to set up a West Point of the air as soon as Congress says yes.

There is even a possibility it may not be necessary to await congressional authorization before starting an experimental air academy on a small scale.

These possibilities were discussed at a briefing by Lt. Gen. Lawrence S. Kuter, commanding general of the Air University, for visiting aviation writers.

The university, at nearby Maxwell Air Force Base, is not an academy but a military graduate school for officers.

Kuter said officers on the Air University staff "hope that legislation now before Congress to establish an air academy will pass."

"We would expect to provide much of the staff for such an academy," he said. "We have drafted a curriculum and other details, and are ready to put them into operation."

Brig. Gen. Dale Smith, the Air University's director of education, added that plans are to enroll 250 students in the first class, "and we are prepared to start with the freshman class at any time."

A bill now before Congress, sponsored by Rep. Vinson (D-Ga.) and supported by the Defense Department, would authorize an air academy of 2,500 students, an enrollment equal to that of the military academy at West Point.

The bill also would authorize establishment of a smaller interim academy. It is such a temporary academy which some experts believe the Air Force already has the authority to set up.

Sun Is Factor In Regulating Tides

WASHINGTON (U.P.)—The moon is usually cited as the cause of ocean tides, but there also are "sun tides."

Gen. Adm. Leo O. Colbert, former chief of the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, explained this and other complicating factors in tide prediction in the latest annual report of the Smithsonian Institution.

If the earth were uniformly covered with water, Colbert said, tides could be predicted with fair accuracy by the position of the moon at any time.

However, earth masses, the contour of the ocean, and the sun's attraction complicate the prediction of the basic pull of the moon.

Because of these factors Colbert divided the Atlantic into two basins for purposes of tide prediction.

The larger basin extends across the North and South Atlantic, with the eastern coast of North America at one end and the Antarctic Ocean at the other. The smaller basin is bounded by the northern coast of Brazil and the North Atlantic shores of Europe.

Sun's Role

In the first basin high tide occurs 12 hours after the moon passes over the Greenwich meridian, and low tide about six hours later. In the smaller basin high tide occurs eight hours after the moon passes Greenwich.

In the same manner, the Indian Ocean is divided into three such basins and the Pacific into two.

The sun's pull also has its effect on tides though far less than does the moon.

However, in a few places the arrangement of land and water is such that the sun is the most important tide-producing force. This is the case on the shores of Tahiti. High tide there come at noon and midnight, low tide at six in the morning and six in the evening, regardless of the moon's position. A larger solar tide occurs on Tuesday Island in Torres Strait off the northern coast of Australia.

Ayden Rotary Hears Auditor

AYDEN—At the last meeting of the Ayden Rotary Club, Pitt County Auditor Reginald Gray, guest speaker said the county's financial affairs are in excellent condition.

He said the county commissioners are handling the county's affairs in an economical way. He quoted some figures to show that 95 per cent of the 1952 taxes had been collected, and that for the last four years 98 per cent had been collected. He said the revaluation program will prove to be profitable. Revaluation should be made every four years, he stated.

The speaker, in concluding, said "the county commissioners are making every effort to provide an efficient county government at no increase in the present tax rate."

Rotarian S.M. Edwards won the "on time" prize, and Rotarian Gilbert Davison the "fellowship" prize. Dr. Fred Irons of Greenville, Dr. Paul Jones and Ed Coates of Farmville and Dr. Travis White were guests of the club.

High Figures

CLEVELAND, O. (UP) — John Carroll University's freshman class really went "over the top" this fall. Total number of students topped the 2,400 mark—the school's all-time high. And 17-year-old William F. McIntyre, Cleveland, at six feet, eight inches, is the tallest student ever enrolled at the school.

CONFESSION
LINCOLN, Neb. (UP) — A local woman passed her driver's license test with flying colors and then "confessed" to Lancaster County Attorney Frederick Wagener. She was charged she had changed into his parked car while trying to park her own vehicle on arrival at the court house to take the test.

Cattlemen Determined To Build Political Pressures

By PATRICIA WIGGINS
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—A caravan of 350 cattlemen rolled westward toward the plain states today, determined to build up enough political pressure to force the administration to order price supports for beef on the hoof.

The 33-state delegation sponsored by the National Farmers Union, tried for two days to sell the idea to Agriculture Secretary Ezra T. Benson but got nowhere. Benson said firmly Tuesday that he doesn't see "any practical way to support live cattle." What's more, he doubted "very much" that the caravan was a "fair sample" of the thinking of stockmen. He pointed out that 18 out of 23 groups polled on price supports were opposed to them.

Farmers Union President James Patton announced that the fight for supports is "just beginning" and called on the cattlemen to demand that their congressmen take steps to get them.

Dennis Driscoll of Colorado Springs, Colo., spokesman for the caravan, called for a "grass roots" campaign for supports and said it also might be a good idea to demand a special session of congress.

The caravan ended its talks with Benson and packed up for home amid these other developments on the cattle front:

1. Harold F. Breimyer, Agriculture Department economist, told the department's 1954 outlook conference that the "most hopeful indication for cattlemen is a probable to the persistent declines of 1952 and 1953." He does not foresee a "really substantial improvement" in cattle prices next year, although good returns in feeding could produce a firmer demand for feeder cattle.

2. Sen. Robert S. Kerr (D-Okla.), a sharp Benson critic, told the 350 cattlemen that the cattle price and drought situation has "developed from a national problem into a national scandal" with Benson maintaining an "open mind" that no one can put anything into.

3. The American National Cattlemen's Association said in Denver that it is against direct cattle price supports and that the Farmer's Union caravan did not reflect the industry's attitude.

The caravan Tuesday presented Benson with a formal resolution calling for cattle supports at 90 per cent of parity. It recommended that all methods authorized by law be used—direct purchases, support loans, and purchase agreements.

"They didn't present a plan," said Benson. "They just said put supports on cattle... If anyone can show me a workable plan, I'll be glad to look at it."

Grand Jury To Be Told Story Of Kidnap Case

KANSAS CITY (AP)—A federal grand jury today awaited testimony from a veteran officer who broke the Greenlease kidnaping case and later quit his force in anger over a police board inquiry.

The officer, Louis Shoulters, arrested Carl Austin Hall, who confessed the kidnaping-slitting of 6-year-old Bobby Greenlease.

A top-level St. Louis police inquiry into Shoulters' handling of the case brought his resignation. He claimed the investigation destroyed his reputation as an officer after 27 years on the force.

Another witness waiting to testify was John Hager, St. Louis taxi cab driver. He gave Shoulters a tip that helped bring the arrest in St. Louis of Hall and Mrs. Bonnie Brown Heady, 41-year-old divorcee who aided Hall in the kidnaping.

The grand jury was expected to return indictments against both Hall and Mrs. Heady. The hearing was opened yesterday.

Robert C. Greenlease, 71-year-old multimillionaire father of Bobby, was among yesterday's witnesses before the jury. He told newsmen only that he "had identified some things."

Greenlease paid a record $800,000 ransom, approximately half of which was recovered. Hall claimed he lost the remaining $300,000 during a drinking spree in St. Louis.

Hager, who picked up Hall as a fare, told newsmen last night he didn't think the missing $300,000 ever got to St. Louis.

"Whenever I was around Hall he never seemed to be in the condition where he could be rolled (money taken from him) without his knowledge," Hager said. He said Hall had two suitcases in the motel room in which he was arrested.

"When we took the money out of the room I carried one suitcase down to Shoulters' car and put it in there and Shoulters carried the other one," he said.

Hager said he then drove to the police station in his cab and waited there until Shoulters appeared with Hall and the suitcases.

The police inquiry in St. Louis was called following reports the FBI had found discrepancies in officers' accounts of the arrests of Hall and Mrs. Heady.

Responding Well To Tax Notices

City Clerk H.H. Duncan reported today that people are responding well to letters sent by City Attorney R.B. Lee for delinquent tax payments.

The letters are asking payment of delinquent taxes on both real and personal property. If the people do not pay as requested by these letters then legal action will be taken, according to the city clerk.

Letters are being sent out daily and will continue to be sent until everyone who owes the city for delinquent taxes has received one.

According to the city officials, all white delinquent tax payers whose name begins with any letter from A to H should have received the letters; however, no letters have been mailed to the Negroes prior to today due to lack of addresses.

All of the local tobacco markets have received garnishments for payment of taxes by their employees, but the money from these factories have not been received by the city tax officials.

City Manager James S. Hughes said that some people have responded to letters requesting payment of delinquent paving contracts, but not as many as hoped for.

Frankie And Ava To Talk Troubles

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (UP)—Spindly crooner Frank Sinatra arrives today for what his friends described as a conference with his actress wife, Ava Gardner, over their rocky marital situation.

Sinatra would not comment on the scheduled meeting with the darkhaired beauty Tuesday night as he closed a singing engagement at a Las Vegas, Nev., hotel.

"I can't say anything because I don't know anything," he said.

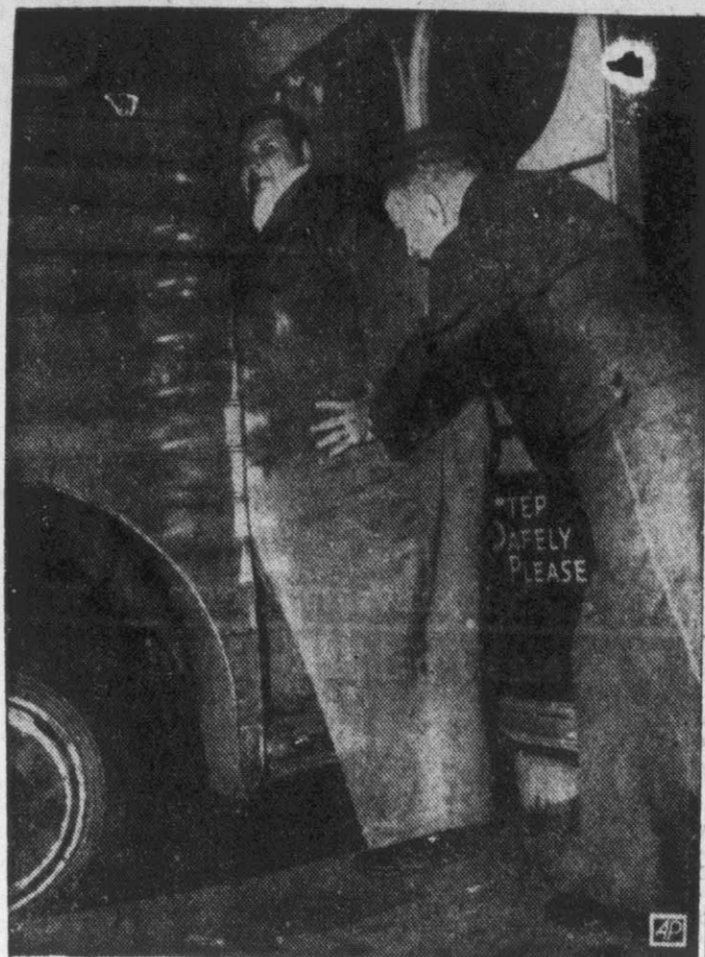

However, a spokesman for Metro Goldwyn-Mayer studios disclosed Tuesday that Ava has consulted with her attorney, Neil McCarthy.

The spokesman hinted the famous couple may be undergoing one of the separations that have been frequently reported since their marriage Nov. 7, 1951. But he would not say if Miss Gardner's talk with her lawyer laid the groundwork to filing of a divorce suit.

The spokesman added that "No decision will be made until the matter has been discussed with Sinatra." He said it is too early to say whether the "decision" would deal with the filing of a divorce.

There have been frequent reports of separations and reconciliations during the Sinatra-Gardner marriage. Friends reported they had patched up their latest spat following Miss Gardner's recent return from Europe. She and the singer at first stayed in separate hotels following her return.

Ava is Sinatra's second wife. Her former husbands were Mickey Rooney and Artie Shaw.

Emotional Health Has Its Start Before Birth

By DELOS SMITH
United Press Science Editor
NEW YORK (UP)—Life begins long before birth and the time to start work on the emotional well-being of the child is when its mother first learns she is going to become a mother.

We'd all be surprised if we knew how many women secretly rebel against prospective motherhood. Dr. Dorothy W. Baruch, psychologist, told the annual scientific assembly of the New York State Academy of General Practice.

"Severe or prolonged emotional disturbances during pregnancy may bring on changes in the mother's blood chemistry that increase the heart-rate in the fetus and, generally, the irritability in the infant which makes him more problem-prone," she said.

Since general practitioners are the doctors who most often "diagnose pregnancy," Dr. Baruch urged them to give each prospective mother a chance to let go with her secret rebellion — if she has one — at the moment she heard the news.

The way to do it, she continued, was to make some such remark as, "Having a baby is not always too easy. The news comes, I guess, as a kind of bombshell."

Some seemingly assured and delighted young women break down and weep and weep. Dr. Baruch cited a young woman whom she called "Jane" who wept for half an hour, "draining her resentments." When she had cried herself out, she exclaimed: "Why, doctor! You don't seem to think I'm a bad girl to feel bothered instead of happy about having a baby. I guess I can be a good mother after all."

Jane's "self condemnation could so readily have destroyed peace of mind for herself and security for her child," Dr. Baruch said.

"Recognize that people these days are seldom unequivocally glad about having a baby. It is much more normal to have mixed feelings. Many a parent has wanted a child more after having had the chance to confess to wanting it less."

After the baby arrives, all attitudes of the parents influence whether its emotional development is healthy or otherwise. Father shouldn't be allowed to become the "forgotten man," but watch out for the mother's mother — she can be the unknown source of emotional trouble for the mother and, indirectly, for her babe.

The general practitioner has "a strategic position" and should be alert for this sort of thing. He can mix some "mental hygiene" with "the obstetrical part" of his practice.

'Little Brain Strokes' Said To Be Very Common

NEW YORK (AP)—Little brain strokes are very common and perhaps the most important disease of the aged, Dr. Walter C. Alvarez writes in an editorial in Geriatrics magazine. And they're often overlooked by doctors, he warns.

"Obviously whenever a person past 50 who always was well before comes in complaining of not feeling fit, of having trouble forcing himself to work, or of having spells when there is a little uncertainty as to body balanced, a really careful history should be taken to see if the trouble came suddenly on a certain day. Often, if asked, the patient will say, 'Yes, I thought then I was having a little stroke.'"

And the patient's husband or wife may report a change in character coming on suddenly — irascibility, over-emotionalism, loss of memory, or decided and sudden aging.

Accord Recognition To VFW Auxiliary

At the Second District Meeting of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Ladies Auxiliary held in LaGrange, N.C. on October 25, the Greenville Auxiliary received special recognition from Department President, Mrs. Elvin Reinhardt, of Hickory, who awarded the District Membership Plaque for 1953 to Mrs. B.T. Joyner, President of the local Auxiliary. The Greenville auxiliary was further recognized for sending to State Headquarters the first membership report for 1954, and for organizing the first Junior Auxiliary in the state.

At the joint meeting, State Senior Vice-Commander, Jack Dunsbury, of Charlotte reported the state goal for 1954 is 25,000 members in the non-sectarian, non-political VFW organization. He reminded the group of our land of opportunity in comparison with other countries of the world. Mrs. Reinhardt urged the group to keep up the service to others, avoid selfishness and to make the ideals of the organization a reality. Second District Commander Sid Myers, of LaGrange and District President Mrs. J.B. Bass, of Greenville presided at the joint session. Special guests from the First, Third and Fourth Districts were recognized.

In the separate meeting of the auxiliaries, Mrs. Reinhardt asked each member to do her part in securing members, as "without members, we would have no auxiliary." She gave a report on the hospital work, rehabilitation services to those in need, the N.C. Cottage at the VFW National Home in Eaton Rapids, Michigan, legislative work, youth activities, Civil Defense, and efforts to combat the spread of communism, on her official visit to the Second District.

Mr. Jesse Lamm, Recreation Director of Caswell Training School spoke to the delegates on the services rendered to the school in the State Auxiliary project to aid the children there. He reported that a library would be opened soon and welcomed usable library books. Mrs. Reinhardt reminded the group that in connection with the Caswell project of the old adage, that "no man never stands so straight as when he stoops to help a child".

After the opening ceremony a roll call of auxiliaries present was heard, with each giving a report on the past quarter's activities. Delegates were present from Second District Auxiliaries in Greenville, Washington, Kingston, Goldsboro, LaGrange and Pink Hill. A joint supper served by the LaGrange Auxiliary closed the meeting.

About Half Of Griffon's Taxes Are Collected

GRIFFON—Between 40 and 50 per cent of Griffon's city taxes have been collected so far for 1953. City Clerk Robert Wheeler announced today.

The town has also begun sending out delinquent tax notices for unpaid taxes for 1952 and prior years. Tax delinquents will have until November 15 to pay up their delinquent taxes, Wheeler said.

Wheeler urged anyone who receives a notice of delinquency who has paid the bill to bring in the receipt for it to the Town Hall so that the proper adjustments can be made on the tax books.

MEMO TO ADVERTISERS

Oh, WHERE is my wandering ad for night?

That's a fair question and deserves a factual answer. When you buy newspaper advertising you have an investment in every copy of the paper that carries your sales message because the circulation of the newspaper is also the circulation of your advertising. So, what you get in return for your advertising dollars depends on the newspaper's circulation. In order that you may buy space in this newspaper as you would make any sound business investment, we hold membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations,* well known to advertisers and publishers as A.B.C. Only publications with paid circulation—evidence that people want the paper—are eligible for membership.

At regular intervals one of the Bureau's large staff of experienced circulation auditors comes to our office to make a thorough audit of our circulation records. The FACTS that he obtains as a result of the audit are published in A.B.C. reports which tell you: How much circulation we have; Where it goes; How obtained; How much people pay for our paper, and many other FACTS that you need in order to KNOW what you get for your advertising money.

It's never necessary for our advertisers to ask, "Oh, where is my wandering ad?" They get the FACTS from our A.B.C. report and KNOW. Ask for a copy today.

*The Audit Bureau of Circulations is a cooperative, nonprofit association of 3,450 advertisers, advertising agencies and publishers. Organized in 1914, A.B.C. established a definition for paid circulation, rules and standards for measuring circulations and methods for auditing and reporting circulation FACTS.

Red Heads Don't Cry

By ROY L. FOLEY

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN THE NEXT morning the trio again met in Linda's apartment. Sam produced his copy of the previous and damaging agreement which J.G. Stanley, president of the Stanley Construction Company, in a moment of indiscretion had entered into to defeat business competition. It was the copy which Nancy Kelly, also in a moment of indiscretion had taken out of the office of Spencer and Charles.

It was the crux of the whole, long drawn out lawsuit against his company. Under the heading of "confidential information" between lawyer and client it had been held unattainable by the court.

Spike snatched the papers from Sam's hand. He read the agreement through twice, rubbed his jaws half a dozen times before speaking.

"It looks pretty good. It ought to be worth $10,000. We'll try it anyway."

Sam moistened his lips. "Who'll try it? What I mean, Spike, how're you going to do it? Suppose old J.G. would call—"

Spike laughed. The laugh expressed more of a sneer than mirth. He knew what Sam was thinking. Sam was thinking whom Spike might delegate to do the shaking down.

"Don't worry, Sam. This is a job I'll enjoy doing myself. It's going to be slick and clean. The best deal I've made in a long time. Let's see, 10,000 bucks—half for me, 2,500 for Linda and 2,500 for you."

Sam started to say something, changed his mind. He wanted to ask how Spike figured Linda should get as much as he. When Spike made a decision on the spots nobody questioned it. That's the way it always had been. If Spike was the brains, Spike got the biggest cut. That was Stanley's reasoning.

John G. Stanley, head of the Stanley Construction Company was an individualist. He was hard headed independent, with a streak of arrogance that sometimes had made him conscienceless in his dealings with others even those closely allied to him in business and other pursuits.

He had a twist in his character that made him the despair of his attorneys, and especially Humphrey Charles. John G. Stanley had to be credited for one thing. Almost single-handed he had built up a great organization and a great fortune.

His great fault, as Humphrey Charles saw it, was his unwillingness to take counsel of anyone. He had won his way up through hard fighting. He refused to accept changing ethics in business. He was of the school of driving men whose lust for success in business and undertaking made him scornful of danger.

He was in the habit of thinking of himself as a lone wolf, and he had engaged in more than one hot battle with Humphrey Charles about taking single-handed risks. He sometimes sought the counsel of his attorneys and then disregarded it as soon as given.

His hardheaded arrogance cost him many a dollar in his day, but on the other hand, he had come through with profit where others had failed. Unknown to his attorneys, at the time of its writing, he had entered an illegal, unethical contract with men of shady character to defeat competition.

It was this contract, which if introduced into trial of the suit against him, might send him to jail, or at least result in a fine and unsavory publicity. Not that J.G. Stanley cared about a fine or publicity. He did care about being beaten at his own high handed game. He had never been beaten yet. He would fight to his last dollar to remain unbeaten. Pinned down to the full story of his illegal maneuvers by Humphrey Charles, he said he guessed he knew more than any lawyer, anyway. Nevertheless it was these dealings that had tested every legal trick known to Humphrey Charles and his half dozen associates who were assisting him in keeping their unruly client's act under cover.

It was a copy of papers of this deal that Nancy Kelly, a trusted, if tired stenographer, one night had taken home so that she might catch up on her work.

It was a copy of this deal which rested snugly in the inside pocket of Spike Adams the day he had arranged his time so as casually to meet J.G. Stanley.

The meeting occurred at the bar of a hotel, Spike had a way of learning people's habits. He learned that J.G. Stanley's two-fisted individualism was fortified each afternoon about five o'clock by a stop at the bar frequented by men of importance.

The afternoon that Spike chose to engage in conversation with J.G. Stanley at the bar, there were only a few persons in the oak-paneled barroom cafe. Spike appraised them all before he sidled up to

J.G. Stanley. "Mr. Stanley, I believe?" "Yes, sir, who are you?" Spike rubbed his hand across his chin. "My name is Regan. You don't know me, Mr. Stanley. Nevertheless I have something to say to you that you will consider quite important. Shall we be seated?" Spike motioned toward a booth at the far end of the room. A half hour later Spike Adams leaned back against the wall. "You can take it or leave it, Mr. Stanley. Take it and it's a closed book. Leave it, and there's no telling whose hands this little matter we've been talking over might drop into."

The color of J.G. Stanley's face was bordering on the purple. He started to sputter. "Why, why—"

Spike continued calmly. "I know Mr. Stanley, you're going to say this is extortion. A crime. That you could step right over to the telephone and call police headquarters, even yell police and that would be all there is to it. "You're a man of experience, Mr. Stanley, and a very rich man. You've climbed pretty high. It's no secret you've used some rough methods. You've been a little shady in your day now haven't you, Mr. Stanley? Don't tell me you've never paid for a little secrecy."

Spike Adams said he could assure Mr. Stanley that the little matter spoken of was just between themselves, and added, "Of course you wouldn't care to have your lawyers know of our conversation."

Spike by some piercing intuition, had touched J.G. Stanley's most vulnerable spot. J.G. had always said he knew more than those lawyers and he'd get out without them.

One day within a week the train of Linda Van Vleet's sapphire velvet house gown went whipping and twisting over the rugs of her apartment. She was pacing like a caged animal. Two shorts, a long and a short. Would that bell never ring!

Like so many men who have battled their way to material success without the benefit of much academic education, J.G. Stanley had one blind spot. This was his family, his wife, Edith Glendenning Stanley, and his son, Phil.

It was to Phil, and Phil only, that J.G. confided the story of his purchase of silence from Spike Adams, whom he only knew as Regan. Phil listened to his father's confession half amazed, half amused at the knowledge that a down deep in the character of this strange iron man who was his father, there was a weak spot.

Phil asked to see a copy of the damaging papers that were supposed to have been locked in the files of Spencer and Charles away from all eyes, and yet were seen by someone who knew their value as means of extortion. He examined the papers, asked his father a few questions. The whole business, somehow, struck him as more of a farce than a tragedy. He couldn't account for his feeling.

He asked his father if it was possible someone among his own employes might have gotten on the inside of the whole affair without his father's suspecting it.

"Absolutely not." "Then there must have been a leak some other way. How else?" "Those lawyers. I wouldn't trust any of 'em."

"Now, Dad, don't be ridiculous. Certainly you trust your own lawyers, don't you?"

J.G. declared that a man couldn't trust anyone these days, and then modified his statement by saying that Humphrey Charles was an exception. Humphrey Charles had gotten J.G. Stanley out of some tight situations before. "Then you are being ridiculous. It's preposterous." (To Be Continued)

Military Aid Arrangement With Japan Will Soon Be Completed

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON P.—State Department officials hope to conclude this week a military aid arrangement providing U. S. support for the development of a relatively modest Japanese defense force.

Information available on the progress of negotiations so far indicates that in the end neither side will get all its wants: (1) Japan will not get a large-scale, long-term economic aid program; (2) the United States will not get assurance of as large a defense force as it would like to see in Japan.

Nevertheless, informants said today the talks have basically been satisfactory and should result in substantially increasing Far Eastern security and eventually taking some of the load there off the United States.

The talks opened here Oct. 2 with Hayato Ikeda, personal representative of Premier Shigeru Yoshida, as the chief Japanese negotiator. Meanwhile, discussions toward a formal mutual security pact have been going on in Tokyo. The Tokyo talks were described as being concerned with technical provisions of the pact; those in Washington with major policy decisions.

Secretary of State Dulles, chief architect of the Japanese Peace Treaty, who has long contended Japan should arm in its own defense, said some time ago he thought the Japanese defense force could run around 300,000 to 350,000 men.

Persons familiar with the talks between Ikeda and Asst. Secretary of State Walter S. Robertson said Ikeda has indicated that with the scale of aid offered by Washington his government will be able to do substantially less than Dulles indicated.

One speculation is that the negotiations may end with an agreement roughly to double the present national security force of 110,000 men, apart from small air and naval forces. Ikeda is reported to have come seeking U. S. commitments of extensive economic as well as military aid. The United States has not had an economic aid program for Japan for several years. Informants said privately this policy would continue.

At the same time there was speculation that the United States, in addition to supplying the arms and equipment necessary for the Japanese force of the future, might undertake the development of an armament industry. Japan presently has no such industry, having been disarmed after World War II.

Music Supervisors' Visit Featured In New Booklet

The visit of two state area music supervisors highlight the second edition of "Pickin' From Pitt," a monthly booklet edited and published by the two Pitt County School Supervisors, Miss Annie Lee Jones and Mrs. Edna Earle Baker.

One of the state supervisors, Miss Pauline Bell, a Greenville native, will be here the complete school week of November 2-6, but Mrs. Ruth C. Parker will be in the county only until Wednesday.

Plans for the supervisors will include demonstration work in classrooms of different schools and meetings with elementary and music teachers in West Greenville School Cafeteria.

During the week of October 12-16 a representative of the Rand McNally Company assisted Miss Jones in a map and globe survey which needed minor repairs were Experts say Japan is taking in dollars from U. S. Far Eastern military activities at the rate of about 800 million dollars a year and is selling goods commercially to the United States for an income of about 250 million dollars.

What Japan faces in rearming, however, is the launching of a costly defense program which presumably could lead some years hence to drastic cutbacks in American forces in the Far East.

The Japanese thus see their defense program at long range as resulting in increased cost and decreased income. American negotiators have reportedly replied with assurances that the United States will do everything it can to help Japan expand its international trade and build up its economy.

The School Council met recently to discuss fostering better public relations in the schools. Mrs. Mary Mayo, Falkland, chairman of public relations in the Pitt County NCEA unit, stated that "public relations is nothing more than human relations," in her talk to the Council.

Charts on the planets, the distance of the planets from the sun, the number of moons each planet has, and the length of a day compared with the earth are shown in an unit prepared Mrs. Eloise Moring's sixth grade at Stokes.

Found on page seven of the second edition of "Pickin' From Pitt" is an article on school discipline taken from the State Magazine. The Stokes County Academy in 1848 listed the following rules for discipline: For boys and girls playing together—four lashes, fighting—five lashes, wrestling—four lashes, for not making a bow when meeting a person—four lashes, for not saying yes sir and no sir and yes marm and no marm—two lashes, for hollering and hooping going to and from school—three lashes, for playing about a mill or a pond—six lashes, and for playing cards—ten lashes.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Shelley Winters is being sued by a press agent, Russell Birdwell, for $4,750 which he claims is due him as 5 per cent of her earnings since June 1.

In connection with the suit Miss Winters' $15,000 weekly salary at the Flamingo Hotel here was attached. Birdwell's complaint filed yesterday said the actress paid him $1,000 when the contract was signed but nothing since.

Second Time He Survived Crash

TOPEKA, Kan. — Escaping from plane crashes is getting to be old stuff for Capt. John E. Roche, Washington, D. C.

Roche was a member of a 15-man crew which yesterday escaped serious injury when an reconnaissance bomber Roche was piloting crash-landed at nearby Forbes Air Force Base.

Last July he was pulled out of the Sea of Japan, the only known survivor after a similar reconnaissance plane was shot down by a MIG15. The shooting resulted in an American protest to Russia.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (UP) — Specialty issues continued to feature an easier and quiet stock market today.

Changes in the general body of stocks amounted to 1-8 or 1-4 point, with a large number of issues unchanged at last night's close.

Among the specials, however, changes ranged to a gain of 2 points in Texas Pacific Land Trust at 109 and a drop of 11 points to 230 in International Business Machines.

The latter reacted to halving of the company's usual 5 per cent year-end stock dividend because of a New York Stock Exchange regulation which provides that no stock dividend can be paid which, when added to cash dividends, would make total disbursements for a year greater than share earnings.

Only other decline of any size was a 3-4 drop in Allied Chemical when directors declared the usual dividend despite sharply higher earnings.

Missouri Pacific preferred, up 1-8 points yesterday, added another 1-2, responding to news that the road is seeking permission to pay $12,769,525 back interest on its bonds.

United States Steel, which yesterday reported near-record third quarter earnings and announced that it expects operations to continue at capacity through 1953, was unchanged at 37 3-4. Bethlehem Steel dipped 1-8 to 50 3-4.

ROK Repatriates Returning Home

SEUL — Another 205 South Koreans, repatriated last summer, in Operation Big Switch, arrived this morning on their way home after three years of war and captivity.

The group had been "re-educated" on Yoncho Island, west of Pusan, after their return from the Communists.

Of 7,000 South Korean repatriates taken to the island since Big Switch ended early in September, 1,000 were sent home last month in Operation Homecoming. A total of 848 sick and wounded repatriates are being held for medical treatment.
