Pilots Jet At 91

James W. (Dad) Monte, 91, of Los Angeles, steps into an Air Force P38 jet trainer which he piloted at a 500-mile an hour speed at San Diego, Calif. An Air Force officer was at check controls. Monte, a licensed pilot since he was 16, piloted two other planes but said the jet was the easiest to fly. The occasion was a program in observance of the 50th anniversary of powered flight. Republicans Glum After Tuesday's Vote

By DONALD SANDERS And WILLIAM T. PEACOCK WASHINGTON (AP)—Tuesday's elections—particularly the election of a Democratic governor and Congress member in New Jersey—cast a pall of gloom on the Republican political high command today and brought jubilation to the Democrats.

As in any election, there was wide room for conjecture and debate as to the extent to which the results turned on purely local issues and how much voters were influenced by their attitude toward the national administration.

New Jersey Republicans, however, had sought votes with the argument that the prestige of President Eisenhower's administration was involved. And the President had given a blanket endorsement to all Republican candidates.

With the election of Williams, the party division in the House of Representatives now stands at 218 Republicans, 215 Democrats, 1 Independent and 1 vacancy. The vacancy is in a California district which has been represented by a Republican. A special election is to be held in the district next Tuesday. Two Republicans are running against two Democrats. The outcome of this one will also be watched for signs of national significance.

democratic in last year's presidential election. In New York City, Democrat Robert F. Wagner Jr. rolled up the highest plurality since 1945 to win the mayoralty. He defeated a Republican, a Liberal and one other candidate.

In mayoral elections elsewhere, the results were spotty. The Democrats made gains in New Haven, Akron, Buffalo, Davenport, Iowa, and Columbus, Ohio. The Republicans picked up mayors in Syracuse and some smaller New York cities. There was no party turnover in such places as Pittsburgh, Albany, Cleveland, Louisville and Little Rock.

Shot Their Way To Western Zone

BERLIN (AP)—Three Czech youths who shot their way out of Red police nets across the Soviet Zone of Germany waited hopefully for word today the West would grant them asylum. One of them is in serious condition from East German police bullets.

The three told police authorities here a hair-raising tale of four weeks as the objects of a vast manhunt, and of gun-blasting clashes with Red police. They left two companions behind in the West—one believed captured and the other badly wounded by machinegun fire and either dead or taken prisoner.

The youths, who left their Communist-ruled homeland Oct. 2, said they opened fire at a police patrol that stopped them at a small railway station near Luckau, about 50 miles south of Berlin. Four policemen were killed and the rest fled.

The Communist press last week reported the shooting of the four policemen and announced rewards of 1,000 marks each ($240) had been placed on the heads of the three as hundreds of police searched for them through the suburbs of East Berlin. The Reds claimed the youths were part of a "Fascist underground."

The three who escaped are Carl-ard Maczin, 22, and his brother, Josef, 20, who were described as sons of a Czech general executed by the Nazis in 1942, and Milan Baumer, 21, who had been a student at the Prague Military Academy.

The three said they left Prague Oct. 3 after Red authorities arbitrarily refused to let them study

Student Pilot Is Unhurt In Plane Accident Today

An Air Force T-6 "Texan" trainer crashed at the Pitt-Greenville Airport this morning at approximately 11:30, when the student attempted to recover from a bad landing.

The plane was turned "bottom-upwards" about 150 feet to the left of Runway 35, but the pilot escaped without serious injury.

There was no fire, but firemen had covered the craft with chemicals to prevent any chance of it burning. The pilot, a student at Stallings Air Base of Kinston, attempted to recover from a rough landing that had made one wing droop. When he added the power to make a go-around to try for another landing, the plane pulled to the left and ran off the highway flipping over in a small ravine near the runway.

Robert Ramsey, 26, the pilot, was examined at Pitt Memorial Hospital following the accident, but was then released to return to the Kinston base.

Tax Savings If Ransom Unfound

WASHINGTON (AP)—Robert C. Greenlease may be able to deduct on his income tax return the approximately $300,000 still missing from the ransom money he paid to his son's kidnap-murderers.

That seems to be the outlook if the lost money does not turn up by Dec. 31. Tax technicians at Internal Revenue Bureau headquarters emphasized in reply to a query last night, that an official decision on the case has not been determined.

These informants said the circumstances would decide how the Tax Bureau would rule. If, for example, Greenlease had insurance covering his loss, the missing money would not be deductible for tax purposes.

Informants said it appeared from published reports of the Kansas City kidnap case that a section of the revenue code providing for losses by casualty or theft would cover the lost Greenlease ransom money.

The tax saving to Greenlease if the money is not recovered and is ruled deductible, would depend on the amount of his income and his other deductions.

If Greenlease's income, after making all family allowances (including a joint return with Mrs. Greenlease), and after deductions for expenses, was $300,000 he would save about $252,000 in taxes by deducting the lost ransom money. This is on the basis of standard tax tables.

Some Observers Walk Out On Red Brainwashing Harangues Protest Tactics In POW Persuasion

PANMUNJOM (AP)—U.S. and neutral observers protested angrily today as Communist persuaders harangued balky Chinese prisoners for as long as four hours. Only 205 of 403 prisoners scheduled to appear for explanations were interviewed. And of the 205 only three elected to return to Communism.

over long interviews were overruled by Indian chairmen. Red persuaders dragged out interviews, as long as possible, wheedling and threatening prisoners who have refused to go home. Allied officers called the Red tactics brainwashing.

There were charges that the Communists were deliberately stalling, perhaps in an attempt to wreck the repatriation program which has won them only about 3 per cent of the prisoners interviewed to date.

Both protests were overruled by the Indian chairman. In at least two other cases Chinese persuaders, working in repatriation of about 450 Chinese Thursday, plus the 198 from Compound 28 who were skipped Wednesday. Unless the Reds speed up the explanations an even greater logjam is inevitable.

Red Negotiators See No Parley Progress

By SAM SUMMERLIN PANMUNJOM (AP)—The Communists today bluntly told American envoy Arthur Dean they feel he has failed to "advance anything useful" in efforts to get the Korean peace conference underway.

Dean called the Red statement "the same old propaganda potboiler."

The diplomats got nowhere in their meeting. They will meet for the 10th time at 11 a.m. Thursday (9 p.m. EST Wednesday).

Dean told newsmen he felt the time, place and composition of the peace parley could be handed out to subcommittees for simultaneous discussions. But he has not given this plan to the Communists.

Police Officer Halted Suicide Jump From Roof

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Two men stood on a hotel roof, 11 stories above the ground, one a disheartened widower and the other a policeman.

"Don't jump and hurt somebody," pleaded Officer W. H. Giles. "If you want to kill yourself, I'll let you use my pistol and you can go down in the basement and do it."

Giles proffered the service revolver. Charles T. Akens, 40, perched on the edge of the parapet, reached for it. Giles grabbed him. At the same moment two other officers grabbed him from behind and pulled him back to safety.

Giles had unloaded the gun before offering it.

Hallowe'en Carnival Given By P.T.A. Successful Event

ROBERSONVILLE—Another successful Hallowe'en Carnival was held Saturday, October 31, in the Planters Warehouse. This big event sponsored annually by the P.T.A. was well-attended by people from the adjoining communities. To Mrs. James H. Highsmith, chairman of the program and the finance committee, belongs much of the credit for an enjoyable and profitable event. The teachers and the parents were generous with their cooperation.

At 3:30 cars, men, women and children lined every street where the parade could be seen. While the crowd was waiting, a make-shift fire truck equipped with a siren and manned by several teen-age comic firemen cleared Main Street, hurriedly stopped at Roberson's Store, rushed into the building where smoke was pouring from a second story window. After a few puffs, a light flashed to simulate an inside fire, then a heroic fireman ran, out with the rescued victim. They then took pails with cut paper and pretended to throw water on the on-lookers. Several teen-age boys ridiculously attired in women's dresses and hats amused the spectators.

The festivities began at 4 o'clock with a parade starting at the school. This was led by the Robersonville High School band followed by the grade band ahead of the toy orchestra. Next came the small children representing cats, clowns, witches, goblins, fishermen, etc. The Future Farmers of America, the Future Homemakers of the 4-H Club, the Scouts, the Beta Club and the Legionnaires were in line. The queens from each grade rode in automobiles instead of floats which were formerly used.

After reaching the warehouse the carnival was in full swing with the coronation being one of the highlights of the evening. The grade representatives were introduced to the audience before the queens were crowned. The most popular contestant was little Candy Coe who led by a large margin. Miss Ann Keel was the High School Queen.

The concessions were well-patronized. There were sidshows, Hall of History, Hall of Fame, Teachers' Cemetery, bingo stands, grab bags, apron sales, comic books for sale, fishing ponds, apple-bobbing and a playground with swings and rides. Food was on sale throughout the gala event.

Major Carr and his band played for the Harvest Dance which was enjoyed from 9 until 11:30 when the 1953 Hallowe'en Carnival became a pleasant memory.

Mrs. MacKenzie Presents Program For Lector Club

Mrs. Tom Wilson, club president, opened the meeting with a welcome to the guests for the afternoon. Mrs. V. E. Wells Sr. and Mrs. W. Hill Horne Sr. After the roll and minutes of the last meeting were read, the meeting was then turned over to Mrs. Ray MacKenzie, program leader for the afternoon. Mrs. MacKenzie chose for her paper "The Growth of Education in North Carolina."

Beginning with the first permanent settlements in the state and the following of the Episcopal Missionary serving as minister, counselor and schoolmaster, Mrs. MacKenzie told of the many influences that finally resulted in an irresistible force which produced the popular education that this state is now enjoying. "The History of Education in North Carolina reads like a romance. It represents the constant strivings of a people reaching out after knowledge. A determined effort has been made to adequately meet the need of higher education for women in state supported institutions. Our state recognizes the obligation to provide comparable educational opportunity for all its people and hence the public schools and colleges for the Negroes are open the same length terms as those provided for the white race, and with competent instructors and facilities for educational advantages. From the very first appropriation for public schools out of the public treasury, our progress has been gradual, but the increased efficiency of the schools, the broadened educational program, the development of vocational courses and training, the raising of standards in teaching, the transportation of children to school, the furnishing of basal textbooks for the elementary grades and the addition of the twelfth grade, all have combined to make the North Carolina public school system serve the needs of its people and guarantee uniform educational opportuni-

Mrs. Barrett Reviews Book For Service Guild

A very interesting meeting of the Wesleyan Service Guild was held Monday night at the home of Mrs. Charles Blanchard. After recognizing the guests, Miss Jane Hadley, president, called on Mrs. Sally Klingenschmidt to lead in the devotion-al. In keeping with Thanksgiving Mrs. Klingenschmidt read the 100th Psalm and gave several very lovely and appropriate quotations.

Miss Annie Turner, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting and Mrs. Charles Blanchard gave the treasurer's report.

Mrs. Margaret Farley reported that 13 Guilders had received credit for the study course recently held, entitled "Within These Borders." She announced that another study course, entitled "The Book of Jeremiah," a series of four lessons, will begin shortly and that Miss Mamie J. Chiles will be the instructor. Members were asked to participate. Since one lesson is scheduled for December 7—first Monday—it was decided that the Guild would have a short session immediately after the study course session.

Miss Annie Laurie Askew was appointed chairman of a committee to select a Christmas gift for Billy Braswell at the Methodist Orphanage.

Mrs. Dorothy Johnson, program chairman, then introduced Mrs. Agnes Barrett, who enthusiastically reviewed Norman Vincent Peil's book, "The Power of Positive Thinking." She stated that people are turning to faith, hope and prayer more and more, that positive thinking is being substituted for negative thinking, and that the only cause for defeat is defeat itself. She quoted several worthwhile statements from the book, such as "As a man thinketh, so is he," "If you have the faith of a mustard seed, all things are possible to you;" and "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me." She stressed the fact that originally plays a big part in the success of human lives, that people are being original and practical. She gave a beautiful illustration of how Maurice Flint, losing all confidence in himself, had gone to Norman Vincent Peil for advice. Mr. Peil reminded him of the scripture, "If you have the faith of a mustard seed all things are possible to you." Through Mr. Peil's encouragement Flint regained confidence in himself and began selling mustard seed enclosed in decorative plastic charm emblems with the words of the scripture printed thereon. These charm emblems became very popular and sold faster than the emblems could be made. Thus, through faith, hope and prayer Flint became a well-adjusted man again.

At the conclusion the hostesses, Mrs. Charles Blanchard, Mrs. A. R. House, Mrs. Kemp Baldwin, and Mrs. Margaret Farley served ice cream, hot coffee, and salted nuts.

Newcomers' Luncheon Club To Hold First Meeting On Tuesday

The Greenville Woman's Club is sponsoring the Newcomers' Luncheon Club, recently organized to extend a welcome to those who come to the Pitt county metropolis to make their home.

The first luncheon meeting will be held at the Woman's Club, Third and Greene streets, at 12:30, Thursday, November 12. Newcomers of the last several years and others who come here to live are invited to join the club. One does not have to be a member of the Woman's Club to join. Newcomers should make their reservations with Mrs. Mary Horton for luncheon tickets.

The Woman's Club's Hospitality Committee, at a meeting at Mrs. Fred Hall's home elected Cora E. Powell and Mrs. Hall co-chairmen. Other members of the committee are Mrs. Howard Fuller and Mrs. Willard T. Kyzar.

Mrs. Richard P. Rogers, president of the Woman's Club, and Mrs. Mary Horton, Woman's Club hostess, approved the project of welcoming newcomers to Greenville.

Mrs. Donna E. Tabar, who came here in 1949 with her husband, Joseph G. Tabar, connected with the National Carbon plant, was appointed public relations chairman.

"It can be very confusing to a newcomer in any town, including Greenville, especially if the newcomer came from a large city and is not accustomed to the customs of a small town," Mrs. Tabar said. "One can be mighty lonesome in a crowd."

"The purpose of the Newcomer's Club is two-fold. First, to offer a social outlet to newcomers to Greenville, and second, to help newcomers to become better acquainted with each other, as well as with Greenville. This is strictly a social club, with no dues or duties except to make newcomers to Greenville feel welcome, contented and happy to be here. And by doing that, it is the committee's hope that all of Greenville will benefit, because unless the newcomer to our town is made to feel that it really is 'yours if you come,' he or she is not going to be much interested in working for the town's enterprises.

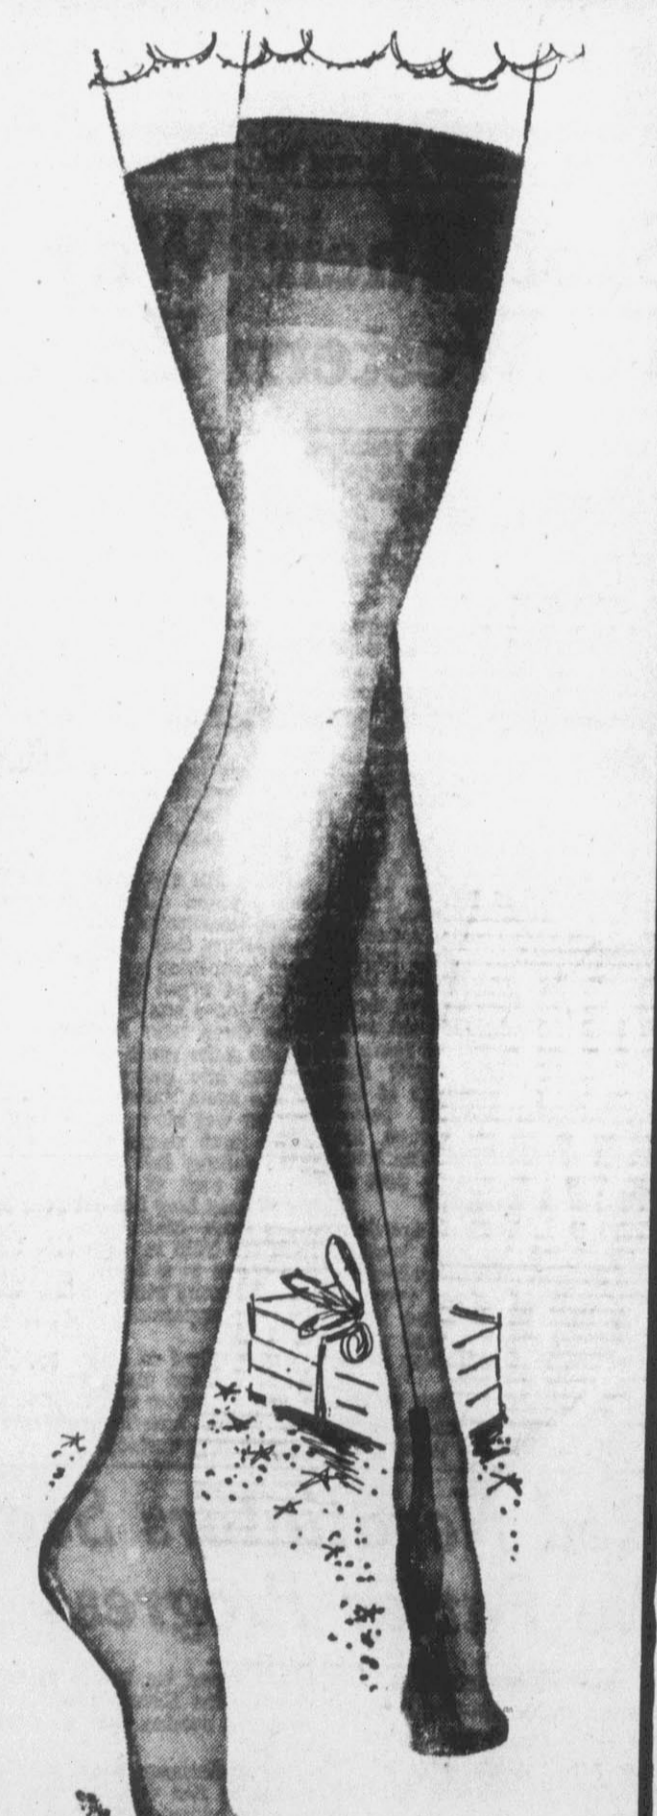

"Unless one has been a newcomer this may be hard to realize, but it is not only the young people away from home for the first time who experience the pangs of home sickness," Mrs. Tabar declared. "It is the earnest wish that the Newcomers' Club can inspire newcomers to love Greenville as much as they did their own home town."

The Greenville Newcomers' Club will hold luncheon meetings the second and fourth Thursdays in each month at the Woman's Club at 12:30. A program will follow the luncheon at the second Thursday meetings. Bridge and canasta will follow the fourth Thursday meetings.

Grifton Board Sets Up Water Service Fees

GRIFTON—The Grifton Board of Commissioners decided in its regular meeting Monday night to charge $15 for the installation of water meters which are to be put by the Town of Grifton as rapidly as possible.

The $15 will be payable in three installments of $5 a month. The board also voted to charge a tap-fee of $40 a month for all future cut-ins of 3/4 inch lines to include the cost of the meter. If a larger meter is required then the amount of tap-on fee will be increased on a pro rata scale.

The Commissioners also unanimously passed a motion by G.G. Suggs that the town manager Robert Wheeler, be authorized to purchase necessary administrative equipment for the billing of water meters in Grifton.

Thinks Squirrels Tired Of People

YORK P.A. (AP)—Earl E. Geesman, York county game protector, thinks the squirrels in his county are getting tired of people. He said one squirrel ran wild in Spring Garden Twp. and managed to frighten a couple of humans.

"The squirrel would attack humans for no apparent reason. It bit three persons before it was finally shot by a police officer," Geesman said.

The animal was checked for rabies but the report was negative.

"Just a mean individual, I guess Geesman said.

Wednesday, the North Carolina home demonstration group will continue their educational tour to Beltsville, Maryland, a U.S. Department of Agriculture experiment station. While there they will observe the new trend in food and nutrition and home management and home furnishing.

Thursday, the party in making the return trip, will travel the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia route. They will stop at Roanoke and Martinsville, Va., and thence proceed by way of Greensboro to Raleigh, their home destination, Mrs. Amelia S. Caphart, Pitt County Negro Home Demonstration agent, stated.

Mrs. Strong will make her report of the National Capital educational tour at Negro "Achievement Day" exercises at the National Guard armory in Greenville next Tuesday, November 1. Attorney Richard Powell will be the principal speaker. Miss Hazel Jordan, supervisor of Pitt county negro schools, will present the awards.

No Compensation For Torn Pants

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—City Detective D. M. Fulle won't get the $15 he asked from the city for the loss of the seat of his pants.

Fulle was thrown from a police car in a June 19 accident, striking the pavement with the rear, lower portion of his body.

In ruling on the request for the $15 reimbursement, City Atty. Will Sears yesterday said "the city does not insure the clothing of its detectives against accident, even those portions where more than ordinary wear and tear can be expected."

DROWNED FILM GOOD

KALMAR, Sweden (AP)—A German film, which had been lying on the bottom of the Baltic sea for 12 years, has been shown at a local theater. In spite of the long exposure to salt water the film was flawless with the exception of the first few yards. It was recovered from the wreck of the German ship Tannenberg, which was sunk during the war.

Four Diverse Problems Interrelated

Justice Robert H. Jackson offered the American public four diverse, and yet related problems to mull over between the multitudinous worries in their everyday lives.

He criticized first the administration of criminal law, noted the rising rate of juvenile delinquency and crime in general, remarked on the staggering armaments race and the internal struggle for power between classes, creeds and races of the nations.

All these seeming unrelated thoughts were woven together into one great over-

If They Know The Guards Will Shoot...

Regrettable as it may be, the action of guards firing on prisoner escapees should have a beneficial effect in the long run.

The story of how two such fugitives were wounded, one seriously, will be retold in the local prison camp and in others throughout the state. With the near-fatal outcome of Monday's break as an example of what might lie in store, the incident should be a deterrent to further escapes in the near future.

Of course, there have been occasional prison camp escapes before. There will be more in the future. Sometimes the guards used their guns and sometimes not. Circumstances seem to largely dictate the outcome.

But when a guard will not shoot, or fires his gun harmlessly into the air, he opens the door to thoughts of escape for uncounted convicts who would have little to lose by making a break.

Realizing that their guards will shoot, and with a man seriously wounded in the hospital to prove it, even hardened convicts will think twice before chancing the consequences of fleeing.

A guard with a gun he will not use is no guard.

A guard with a gun he will use, is not only a physical deterrent to escape, but a psychological block as well.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
COST OF MORAL VICTORY
Moral character is something that must be sought after. Nature bestows it upon no one. It is true that nature does sometimes bestow upon some people more of a disposition to do good than to do evil. This may be the result of a splendid ancestry. Even more often it is the result of a good home environment.

But nature gives us nothing more than a predisposition toward moral character. We all get our chance to live the right kind of life; if we do not live it, that is our fault. The predisposition toward the doing of good atrophies as last if it is not developed.

Real victory over our evil tendencies is something never attained without the discipline of struggle. Read the Journal of John Wesley, who was one of the great saints of all time, and you will be amazed to find in the life of that most godly of men evidence of a continual struggle against the very weaknesses which assail all of us every day. Ignatius Loyola and St. Francis of Assisi both turned from worldly lives to find high moral perfection in Christian faith and service.

Jesus Christ makes good his promise to transform human life; but we must cooperate. Religious faith and moral character are attained only as the result of struggle.

Deterrent To Parity Demands

WASHINGTON—Figures as formidable as current meat prices at the butcher's counter deter Secretary Ezra Taft Benson from acceding to angry cattlemen's demand for application of 90 per cent Government supports (subsidies) to their product.

Every phase of the proposed solution has been studied by Administration experts in the frantic attempt to still the growls of the Midwest interests, who threaten to raise something besides steers, if their parity program is not included in any agricultural plan which the White House submits to the next Congress.

On their face, the meat producers' suggestions seem reasonable. Uncle Sam has extended parity partially to live other so-called "basic" crops, including the corn and wheat which cattlemen must buy for feed. On several occasions, with respect to potatoes and hogs, he has taken other commodities under his protection.

But, aside from the fact that President Eisenhower and Secretary Benson would like to liquidate this costly and embarrassing system of Federal subsidization, certain elementary considerations close this avenue of escape. It is amazing that White House publicity agents have not publicized this data nationally in capsule form.

A STAGGERING FIGURE—Secretary Benson's statisticians estimate that almost 15 billion pounds of beef would have to be lifted from the market to raise prices of this product to the 90 per cent parity level. And it is probable that the same amount would have to be taken over under loan or purchase by the Government every year, if the innovation was made permanent.

Although the figure may have no meaning to the average consumer, it amounts to enough beef to feed about 20,000,000 people for ten months or the total population of New York State and New England, if Massachusetts is omitted for calculating purposes.

Unless this meat were tossed into the ocean, possibly upsetting the eating habits, prices and markets for fish, the storage problems become staggering and seemingly insoluble.

FREEZING SPACE NEEDED—Freezing the car-

all theme: the need for recognition of the necessity for rule by law.

"And if a peaceful and stable international order is reached," he said, "it will result from the acceptance by the professions of all nations of an international rule of law as a curb on lawless power in control of great states. I do not expect that in my time."

He might have added, too, that a real, vibrant respect for living under the code of conduct called "law" is as necessary for individual citizens as it is for governments of all levels.

It would be too much to ask for all conduct of society to be delineated by laws; there is a limit to the red tape of such a code that could be applied without hopeless entanglements.

Hence, a great portion of human conduct must be guided by a moral conscience taught from the early days of childhood and held up as the rule of life for later years.

If individuals can be so taught, then there is reason to hope all components of society can be similarly indoctrinated.

That is the dawn of a new day Justice Jackson does not expect to see in his lifetime.

Their Collective Views Offer Guideposts

What do Governors talk about when they get together?

Just about everything.

And the exchange of views at the annual Southern Governors Conference in Virginia should prove to be of immense value to these elected spokesmen for thirteen states. In turn, millions of Americans also benefit.

One theme on which they all agree, the South is solidly Democratic today, will be tomorrow and the day after tomorrow. No signs yet of a two-party system in Dixie despite suspicious signs during the last presidential elections.

Their attitude toward possible Supreme Court ending of segregation in education is less unanimous; but barring Georgia's overly-concerned young governor, there not seem on the surface to be an atmosphere of crisis.

Concern over the future of their agricultural interests is an item they all seem to have in common.

The import of these collective heads of states voicing considered thoughts on the problems of the day lies in the generalized and objective view open to Southerners. On this, voters can find a basis for forming intelligent conclusions of their own.

Somebody Told Me

A Real Bargain For A Dime

When you can buy a bargain for a dime these days it's news! In describing this bargain to you let me take you back to last spring. Remember the lot on the northeast corner of East Fifth and Maple Streets? It was covered with beautiful poppies that changed a naked, weedy lot into a sight that slowed down almost every motorist that passed.

The Greenville Garden Club is selling small packages of poppy seed for a dime each in order to encourage the expansion of this idea all around town. The inspiration for this work came from the results obtained by Mrs. R. V. Keel on the East Fifth Street lot.

Just take a look at what your dime will bring you in poppies: The original purchase is only about one-fourth of a teaspoon full of poppies. To help in sowing this quantity may be mixed with about a pint of sand. If you want to cultivate them in a bed, this quantity will produce three rows about five yards long. But if you like you can simply sow anywhere in the yard or in an open field, for that matter.

In the spring the poppies will bloom, almost regardless of the weather. Afterwards the pod is formed and each poppy will reseed itself many times. Just let alone, the poppies will strew themselves to some extent. But it's a simple matter to gather them in, being careful to keep them upright so the seeds will not spill out.

In keeping the seeds until planting time, you simply be sure they are dry before covering them up.

This project to help beautify

Greenville should appeal to even the most ambitious soul. The cost is practically nil, and even at that the profit made by the Garden Club will go for further beautification of the city! The work is likewise practically nil. With weather as a small factor, the survival chances for the poppies are almost 100 per cent.

To give the ideal additional appeal, the Garden Club offers a special price to large-volume buyers. In case you have a big lot, see Mrs. R. V. Keel or Mrs. H. R. Rogers for a special price.

If you are civic minded and want to contribute a dime to Greenville's improvement here's a chance that will require almost no effort.

And I thank you.

What Other Editors Are Thinking

'U. S. STAY HERE'
(Rocky Mount Telegram)

Growing talk about the possibility of reducing the size of U.S. ground troops in Europe has greatly disturbed the French government. According to reports, cautious Frenchmen were alarmed enough to quit indulging in the fatuous luxury of hating America.

The French, who like to regard Americans as cultural barbarians and refer to America as a "civilized desert," are now coming around to admit that they may not be so anxious after all for the U. S. to "go home." Now, it seems the cry is: "U. S. stay here." Frenchmen regard U. S. troops not only as a safeguard against Russia, but also as a safeguard against the revival of threatening German military power.

For years now, France has been dragging its feet in the North Atlantic Council. That nation has not been willing to raise her quota of troops, nor to train them as necessary. Whereas American boys are serving two years in the draft, French youth serve at random a much less length of time. Moreover, France has steadfastly refused to act on the European Defense Community which would permit the integration of German military strength in the defense of Europe against Russian attack.

In other words, the French—so long as Uncle Sam is on hand—don't want to bother with defending themselves, nor do they want the Germans across the Rhine to do anything, either to defend themselves or the French from the current menace which looms over the horizon from Soviet Russia. The French like to have their cake and eat it too, apparently.

The French government called on Washington "to give assurances" that it's not so, it just can't be true, that America is planning to reduce the number of troops in Europe. Secretary of State Dulles has hastened to reassure France that America doesn't plan to withdraw any troops. After this, no doubt the French can relax, go back to their sidewalk cafes and watch the Communists riot along the Champs or read without worrying the numerous "U. S. Go Home" signs that are smeared everywhere.

We wish Washington had taken this occasion to ask for some "assurances" from France, instead of rushing forward to announce that we are as dedicated as ever to protecting France from outside attack and from internal economic collapse.

Business Today Patent Tax Drive

By ELMER ROESSNER
The National Patent Council is conducting a campaign to persuade Congress to tax income from patents at capital gains rates instead of ordinary income rates.

A patent itself, of course, has a capital value. But it is good for only 17 years. Unlike a piece of real property or a security, patent loses part of its potential every year until it eventually becomes valueless. Hence the income is in part at least, the result of the consumption of capital.

John W. Anderson, president of the Council, pointed out that Congress has granted owners of oil wells a depletion allowance of 27.5 per cent of income because oil wells eventually run dry. Owners of patents, he held, should get the same kind of consideration: either treatment of income as capital gains or allowance for depletion.

The public would benefit, Mr. Anderson said, because "sums allowed would be available, tax free, to the inventor or his assignees for the financing of further invention and production."

While the Council is an organization of smaller manufacturers, it may get vigorous support for this proposal from the large corporations that maintain huge research and development staffs, some of which turn out hundreds of inventions a year. The fact that any change in the law would benefit corporate interests, however, might discourage some Congressmen from supporting the change.

It shouldn't. The giants invest millions a year in research, not for the royalties new patents will bring, but to improve and multiply their own products. The chief beneficiaries of a change in the law would be inventors who are paid royalties for use of their patents.

And if a change in the law would encourage large companies (1) to offer their patents on a royalty basis more freely or (2) to step up their research and development work in hope of tax-sheltered gains, the entire economy would benefit.

NEW WONDER COMPOUND MAY FLARE IN HEAVENS

Advertising fanfare similar to those for ammoniated toothpastes, anti-histamines, chlorophyll, lanolin and anti-enzymes may be around the bend.

The Food and Drug Administration has approved the sale of a "multibiotic" for external use without prescription, Dr. Clifford W. Price, Baltimore researcher, told the New York Academy of Science. This is the first time the FDA has approved the nonprescription sale of any preparation containing an antibiotic. The multibiotic is said to kill a wide range of bacteria and to have possible uses in soaps, bandages, deodorants and many other medical and cosmetic preparations.

DEFENSE CUTBACKS HIT ONLY A FEW PLANTS

The cutbacks in defense production since the Korean truce have been light, judging from a survey of 326 plants by Mill & Factor. Of those firms working on defense contracts, only 17 per cent reported cutbacks or modification of contracts, only 7 per cent had been forced to reduce employment as a consequence, and only 16 per cent anticipated any long-range ill effects in their own operations.

Almost half said they had been able to offset reduced defense production with increased civilian output.

THE MORE YOU BUY, THE BIGGER THE DISCOUNT

A "progressive discount plan" is helping a Flushing, N.Y., furniture and appliance dealer make sales.

Deaf To Marriage Broker Plan

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Should Uncle Sam become a love broker?

Should the government bolster its income by entering the business of arranging marriages, which up until now has been strictly a free enterprise field?

George Durst of Jamaica, N.Y., has been conducting a one-man campaign for some years for the creation of a federal matrimonial bureau "to inspire mature girls and older women to own and operate husbands."

So far Congress and the White House have turned a deaf ear to his proposal, and for the life of him George can't understand why a government so deep in red ink passes up this chance to pick up some easy money and at the same time please the voters.

His idea is simple and painless. Anybody wanting a mate would pay a $10 registration fee to the federal matrimonial bureau, which would then rate the prospects—possibly in a giant catalogue—and arrange introductions. If only 25 million Americans registered each year, this would pour a painlessly raised quarter billion dollars annually into the treasury.

George is convinced there are millions of well-to-do women in the "fond forties, fascinating fifties, lovable sixties and sensible seventies" who could use a could man as an income tax deduction, dog walker, or what have you?

"Husbands make novel Christmas presents," he writes, and wants to know what is keeping the government from playing the role of Santa Claus in this respect, come Noel.

"I honestly believe what this country needs is a good federal matrimonial bureau to start an epidemic of romance and inspire older women to realize that they can't take it with them, so we let income taxes grab it!"

This year George has popped up his campaign with a theme song, which goes:

"I'd like to be some older woman's darling.
"I don't seek to be a young lady's slave."
"For companionship, security, contentment.
"Are the only things a man should really crave."
"So far no statesman has made any serious opposition to E. Durst's program for federal help for wealthy women, who need a husband but perhaps don't like it. The trouble is that no politician yet has realized what a vote-getting issue it is. None has picked up the ball and run with it."

Perhaps one reason is they are afraid to get into the explosive arena of matrimonial relief. If the government can't solve the problem of cattle, corn or bean crops, how could it deal with the problem of a crop of surplus husbands?

How long would it be before the cry "parity for potential husbands as well as potatoes" went up? How long before the crop of spinsters would demand government aid, too, to help tide them through a husband-drought?

A government-arranged wedding might or might not win politician votes if it turned out okay, but if it curdled it would be bound to cost him votes.

Another objection is the fact a lot of men just wouldn't undergo the regimentation necessary in a federal matrimonial bureau.

How would you yourself like to start a courtship wearing two blue-lined stamp marks on your forehead saying: "Passed by the U.S. Bureau of Standards," and "Guaranteed Prime by the U.S. Bureau of Agriculture?"

Let George do it.

Not Much Benefit For N. C. Farmers In Drought Relief

By LYNN NISBET

HAY — Prospects are very dim for Tarheel cattlemen to get much benefit from the drought relief hay. Ten million dollars is a sizeable sum of money, but it must be spread mighty thin to reach drought sufferers all over the country. That is the amount allocated by President Eisenhower for the purchase of hay.

Grain feeds have been available from surplus stocks held by Commodore Cited Corporation, and while there are numerous restrictions governing distribution the yardage of red tape is much greater with respect to the purchased hay.

Several conclusions are deduced from facts (?) which have developed in the numerous steps for setting up machinery to handle hay. These steps include a conference of Governors from drought-affected States, another conference of Commissioners of Agriculture from the same States, both held at Kansas City, and many smaller conferences among Federal and State officials. Latest of these affecting North Carolina was held at Raleigh Monday.

Participating were head men in the State Department of Agriculture, two representatives from the U.S. Department of Agriculture at Washington and all members of the State Drought Committee. Names of individuals are not important but for the record they were: L. Y. Ballentine, commissioner of agriculture; John Reitzel, assistant commissioner; Howard Campbell of the Washington PMA office; Charles M. Cox, of the USDA solicitor's office; and David S. Weaver, director of agriculture extension at State College; J. B. Slack, state PMA director; G. Tom Scott, State PMA chairman; Gordon Hunter of Roxboro and Cary Watkins of Yanceyville. The five last named constitute the State Drought Committee.

BUCK-PASSING — The most obvious fact developed at this session was that there is more red-tape involved in giving away something than in selling the same thing, and even more red tape when it is a combination of gift and sale.

The next obvious conclusion is that Federal and State agencies are desperately trying to pass the buck of major responsibility for administering the hay relief program to each other.

The Drought Committee was in the middle. Spokesmen for that group want hay, lots of hay and now. The Washington folks insist that when they put up part of the money for the purchase price of hay and half the freight, the State ought to carry the rest of the load. The State Department folks said that since they had no county organizations that certify eligible recipients and processing applications ought to be done by some of the Federal agencies with county units—PMA, FHA or Extension Service.

DETAILS — There is a mass of detail involved, such as proper forms for farmers to apply for relief hay, for dealers to qualify as distributors, and how claims for reduced freight rates should be made. It was admitted that a lot of paper work is necessary. The State has no money to pay for clerical help and if the cost comes from the $10 million allocation it means that less hay can be bought. The Federal folks inclined toward designating a few dealers and restricting hay areas; the State folks want general certification of qualified dealers with permission for them to buy where they can in order to maintain competition at both ends.

BIG ITEM — Major conclusion is that the $10 million will not afford really adequate relief anywhere and that most of it will go to the big cattlemen of the southwest. The relatively small amount available for North Carolina and the restrictive limitations necessary to be placed around use of that small amount means that Tarheel cattle raisers can expect very little benefit from the hay program. In that connection the comment of one farmer is pertinent. He said: "When you are hungry a little piece of bread is a lot better than none at all."

REVENUE — State general fund revenue swung upward again in October, after a September slump. Receipts last month topped those of October, 1952, by more than a million and half dollars. The September report showed a drop of nearly a million below last year.

In an explanatory statement accompanying the report Commissioner Eugene Shaw notes that figures for both months were distorted by difference in time of payments of large franchise tax levies. The September report showed a million dollar drop in that bracket and the October report a million and a quarter increase.

Both months showed increases in sales tax collections, including the beverage tax—which is essentially a tax on sales. These items have shown a steady increase, reflecting both the higher prices for merchandise and the fact that North Carolinians have more money to spend for the things they want to buy.

SPENDING — In considering the increase in general fund revenue—amounting to $1,846,944 of

4.48 per cent for the first four months of the current fiscal year—

It is necessary to keep in mind the increased appropriations made by the General Assembly. The fact that more money is coming in this year than last does not mean the State treasury is in better condition.

The Legislature anticipated increased receipts when appropriations were made and authorized spending of general fund money is ahead of increased receipts for the first four months. The pay-off comes next March when individual and corporate income taxes are due.

ABOVE WATER — Considering all the factors of increased spending and higher living costs, reflected in income and sales tax receipts, in the light of explanations of monthly variances due to a few days difference in time of big payments, it would seem that the State has nothing to worry about and not much to brag about with respect to a fair balance in receipts and expenditures for this year.

Democrat Bob Wagner Is N. Y. Mayoralty Winner

By ARTHUR EVERETT
 NEW YORK —(AP)—Robert F. Wagner Jr. was elected mayor of New York yesterday in a Democratic landslide that sent ecstasy through the party.

His victory had been widely forecast. But the size of it and the New Deal-Fair Deal stamp he bore set his backers to dreaming of capturing the state next year and nominating their type of presidential candidate in the 1956 Democratic convention.

Wagner won a four-year term by a plurality of 360,078 and nipped the political careers of his two major opponents, Republican Harold Riegelman and Liberal party candidate Rudolph W. Hall.

Son of the late U.S. Sen. Robert F. Wagner of New York, the mayor-elect carried four of the city's five boroughs with ease. In Queens, where GOP strength is greatest, he fought Riegelman to a virtual tie-off.

Impeller tried to run as an independent after his primary defeat, but a court ruled his nominating petition did not have enough valid signatures.

Virtually unknown to the nation at large except through his father, Young Wagner will step up from his present $29,000-a-year post as Manhattan borough president. He has been in politics since 1941 when he went to the state Assembly from the same Yorkville district that sent his father there 33 years earlier.

"Sure my father helped me get started in politics and his name still helps," conceded Wagner, who at 44 is one of the youngest mayors in recent New York history.

Riegelman's political aspirations died aborning with Wagner's victory. The 61-year-old veteran adviser in civic affairs went into the campaign pretty much unknown to the general public. New York hasn't elected a Republican mayor without fusion support in more than 50 years.

Nevertheless, Riegelman's showing was the best on the straight GOP ticket in years. He had the blessing of President Eisenhower.

GOP Candidate Shows Strength In Va. Voting

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Virginia stuck by its custom and named another Democratic governor in a general election yesterday that ound the political organization of Sen. Harry F. Byrd well able to handle its most serious Republican challenge.

Thomas B. Stanley, 63, a furniture manufacturer and former congressman who campaigned ardently on the organization record, defeated Ted Dalton, 52, a state Senator and GOP national committee man.

But in losing to Stanley by a vote of 219,633 to 175,506, on the basis of nearly complete returns from the state's 1815 polling places, Dalton ran up the best vote and the biggest percentage ever scored by a Republican in a Virginia race for governor.

Dalton, given a boost by the Eisenhower victory of last year, the election of three Republican congressmen and the disenchantment of some Democrats who put part of the blame for last year on Byrd, got a shade better than 44 per cent of the vote to Stanley's 55-plus. Independent Howard Curwile, a third candidate with 07 of the vote, was no factor.

The best previous effort of the Republicans was 37 per cent in the election for governor in 1929—a year, as was this one, following a Virginia vote for a Republican president.

Stanley takes over from Gov. John S. Battle on Jan. 20. Virginia governors, elected for four-year terms, may not succeed themselves in office.

Dalton, like the Democratic campaign chiefs, knew it was Byrd's all-out attack in the final two weeks of the campaign that kept him from possibly scoring a big upset, or at least making it closer.

"I think I was touching them pretty keen until the Senator got into it with all his force," said Dalton in his easy drawl when he conceded the race.

Stanley's campaign didn't seem to be catching on until a few weeks ago and apparently he was "touching them." Then Dalton proposed a 100 million dollar revenue bond issue for road improvements. And Byrd proud of Virginia's debt-free record and parent of the state's pay-as-you-go system, came out swinging.

He was followed by ex-Gov. William M. Tuck, now a congressman, Sen. A. Willis Robertson and Battle. The big guns of the party went to work and Stanley's headquarters began to offer brighter estimates of the situation.

"From his home at Berryville, Byrd's comment on the outcome was:

"The returns speak for themselves."

Chairman Named For 1953 Buddy Poppy Campaign

Mrs. E.K. Forrest has been named chairman of the Buddy Poppy campaign and the sale will take place on Saturday, November 7, according to Commander Elvy Forrest of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Post 7032.

"We hope that this year everyone residing in Greenville and Pitt County will wear a V.F.W. Buddy Poppy," said Commander Forrest. "Wearing the Buddy Poppy will be their evidence of regard for the welfare of others." The chairman, with the aid of her committee, has made plans to give everyone a chance to obtain a Buddy Poppy on November 7.

It is proposed to attract the active cooperation of scores of residents of the community in working side by side with members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and its Ladies' Auxiliary unit in selling the replica of flowers that grow so profusely on Flanders' fields.

Proceeds of Poppy sales are used to help maintain the V.F.W. national home at Eaton Rapids, Mich., to operate the national V.F.W. rehabilitation and welfare department and to minister locally to needy veterans and their dependents.

Presidential Study Panels, For Many Reasons, Have Difficulty

By JAMES MARLOW
 WASHINGTON (AP)—In less than a year President Eisenhower has set up a dozen or so committees, commissions, a advisory groups, boards and panels to help his administration fix policies and programs.

Outstanding men have been appointed to study such national and international problems as agriculture and foreign trade and then suggest what to do for the best interest of the country.

That's the theory, but Eisenhower may be in as much of a dilemma after one of these groups finishes its task as before. That's because of a couple of questions that were there before he called in these advisers:

1. Can any man who considered a problem for years and probably formed pretty positive opinions now look at it with an open mind just because the President asked him to?
2. And what is the "best interest of the United States?" Granting that all members of a commission are sincere, there can still be a wide difference among them on what's good for the country.

Such a difference appears in one of the most important advisory groups—the 17-man commission on foreign economic policy—long before it has finished its job.

Its main job is studying the Reciprocal Trade Act, which means telling Eisenhower and Congress whether tariffs on foreign goods coming here to compete with American products should be higher or lower. This 1934 act gives the President authority to lower tariffs brought here in exchange for lower tariffs on American goods exported to countries sending products here.

The chairman of this tariff study commission—Clarence B. Randall, chairman of the board of the Inland Steel Co.—has been quoted as telling his commission colleagues he was attempting to preserve an open mind and is urging them to do the same.

In a book, "Freedom's Faith," published Oct. 27, Randall said America's traditionally high tariff policy "must steadily yield to the imperative new necessity for broadened world trade."

The word "bias" was flung at him almost instantly by a committee representing a number of industries, trade associations and farm and labor groups which want higher tariffs because, they say, they're being hurt by imports made more cheaply.

This organization passed a resolution calling on Eisenhower to fire Randall from the trade commission. About the same time, another member of Randall's group, Rep. Richard M. Simpson (R-Pa), gave his views.

Simpson said: "certainly we are not going to enact any proposal which will admit a flood of imports. On the other hand, in my opinion, we are going to give the protection to our own hard-pressed domestic industries."

Ten of the 17 men on Randall's commission are from Congress, five senators and five House members. Their views on tariffs were known before they were named to the commission. Some want higher tariffs, some lower ones.

Simpson for instance, fought hard this year to put through a bill making it tougher for the President to lower tariffs. Another member of the commission, who supported him, is Rep. Daniel A. Reed (R-N.Y.), chairman of the ways and means committee which handles tariff legislation.

There is some question whether Eisenhower himself can be said to have an open mind on tariffs. He has repeatedly advocated more world trade. Higher tariffs would cut down this country's part in such trade, not increase it.

Eisenhower will probably get two reports from the Randall commission, one urging tougher tariffs, the other wanting tariffs cut. Then he'll have to decide which one to recommend to Congress. In the end, no matter what he says, Congress will give the final answer.

TURKEY GROWS FAST
 ANKARA, Turkey (AP)—Turkey now has a population of 24,000,000 and is growing at the rate of 500,000 annually, the statistics bureau has announced.

Final returns from the city's 4,317 election districts gave Wagner 1,021,488 votes, to 661,410 for Riegelman and 469,322 for Hall.

A fourth candidate, Clifford T. McAvoy of the dying left-wing American Labor Party, polled only $4,372 votes.

Among those elected on Wagner's ticket was Hulan E. Jack, who succeeds him as Manhattan borough president and becomes the first Negro ever to hold so high an office in New York's history.

Jack's regular opponents also were Negroes.

A total of 2,205,662 persons out of 2,396,099 registered went to the polls.

Wagner drew 46.3 per cent of the mayoral vote, Riegelman 30.6, Hall 21.5 and McAvoy 2.5.

It was the lightest turnout since 1945, but Wagner's plurality was the greatest since William O'Dwyer's 693,754 in the same year.

Wagner succeeds Mayor Vincent R. Impelleri Jan. 1 in the $40,000-a-year mayoralty—the second biggest political job in the nation. Impelleri, elected as an independent in 1950 after O'Dwyer resigned to become ambassador to Mexico, led Wagner 2-1 in the Democratic primary last Sept.

Sacrifice Fly Will Be Returned For '54 Season

By BEN PHEGAR
NEW YORK (AP)—The sacrifice fly, which should help long ball hitters improve their batting averages, will be back in the baseball rule book in 1954.

Except for 1939 it's been missing for 22 seasons.
The revised rule says that any fly ball which permits a runner to score after the catch will not count as a time at bat against the hitter.
Some experts figure this can add as much as seven to 10 points to the batting averages of power hitters. The overall figures for the major leagues in 1939 when the rule was in effect didn't show any marked changes. The National League average was up five points over the year before; the American League dropped two points.
The sacrifice fly rule was the major change announced yesterday at the end of a two-day meeting of the Playing Rules Committee headed by James C. Gallagher of the Chicago Cubs. The committee includes three members from the National League, three from the American and three from the minors.

The committee also favored the hitters on two other points. It turned down a proposal to bring back the spitball and it approved the use of "harder" and "softer" bats.

The "harder" bats are laminated strips of wood glued together. The "softer" bats, made of soft wood, are said to be useful for bunting.

The committee, meeting for the first time in more than two years, tightened a number of other rules and wrote a new one requiring players to bring their gloves to the dugout at the end of each inning.
Among the changes were:
Official recognition of suspended games—games halted by curfew or light failure. These games may be completed at a later date. Several leagues already have such rules although the national committee never before had recognized them.

Addition of a footnote to the rule on "tagging up" after a fly. The note says the base runner must start from a standing position in contact with the bag. Some players, including Bob Thompson and Al Dark of the New York Giants had been taking a running start from short left field.

Insertion of the word "fair" in rule 7.08F, which says a runner is out if hit by a batted ball.
Removal of the mandatory 90-day suspension against a manager who orders his team off the field and forfeits a game. Dixie Walker did this several years ago while managing Atlanta. The punishment now will be up to the league president.

Revision of the rules on a live ball touched by "equipment detached from its proper position." The old rules automatically gave a batsman three bases on a batted ball and a runner two bases on a live thrown ball. The change limits the rules so that they will apply only if the action is intentional and the ball is in fair territory.
Ruled it unportsmanlike conduct for a fielder to take a position in the line of vision of the batter and purposely attempt to distract the batter. This was an old trick of Eddie Stanky, now manager of the St. Louis Cardinals.

College Officials Agree On Need For Grid Cleanup

NEW YORK (AP)—College football officials agreed today for the most part that there are certain abuses in the gridiron sport but none so serious as to abolish the game "unless it is cleansed of hypocrisy, skulduggery and cheating."
Dr. A. B. Moore, president of the National Collegiate Athletic Association and faculty chairman of athletics at Alabama, said the blame for current evils in the sport is shared by alumni, parents of athletes, coaches and college officials. He made the charge in a speech at Talladega, Ala.

Matty Bell, veteran Southern Methodist University athletic director agreed that there are some evils in some places in college football.
"And we should have the courage to admit it, and make every effort to eliminate it," he said. "But I don't know of any violations now in the Southwest Conference. In my 23 years in the conference I've never known of less suspicion and criticism among the schools."
Moore, who also is dean of the Graduate School at Alabama, said he has seen "many of the benefits from intercollegiate athletics" and he was advocating "operating on the patient and not killing him."
"I expect there always will be some abuses in intercollegiate athletics because of its highly competitive nature," said Ike Armstrong, Minnesota's athletic director. "Colleges and universities should promote only the type of intercollegiate programs that administrators, faculties and governing boards feel to be honest, constructive and worthwhile."

"The alumni," Moore also said, "would rather go on cheating than expose others who are cheating. You may read that the NCAA has caught 10 or 12 schools but not nearly enough is being done."
"We are 100 per cent behind any movement that will help athletics," commented Ed Krause, Notre Dame's athletic director.

From Dr. J. Ellis Miller, president of the University of Florida and president of the Southeastern Conference, came this reaction: "I suspect if you looked far enough you would find some of that in certain quarters. But I am a little surprised to hear Dr. Moore say that. He is a fine, responsible person and must have some basis for it."

Post-Season Ban May Be Dropped

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Southern Conference may change its rule which bars members from post-season football games, and thus clear West Virginia for a near-certain bowl bid, perhaps to the Sugar Bowl.
Max Farrington, the conference commissioner, said last night a five-man committee now is trying to decide whether the ban on post-season games should be dropped.
The conference doesn't have a meeting scheduled until the second week in December. That means if the rule is to be changed in time for this year's games, it would have to be done by a poll of the 10 colleges or by a special meeting.
"There is a possibility of this," Farrington said. "If not the committee wouldn't be in existence. There certainly is support in the conference for playing in bowl games."

Newcomers Rise In Offensive Race

NEW YORK (AP)—Two newcomers moved up to challenge Joe Mastrogiovanni, Wyoming's Cowboy from Brooklyn for college football's individual offense leader this week.
Mastrogiovanni, the leader all year, remained on top in figures released today by the NCAA Service Bureau, but Lamar McHan of Arkansas and Bob Garrett of Stanford were gaining rapidly.

The Wyoming sophomore has picked up 1,075 yards in seven games. Paul Larsen of California is second with 856 yards, also in seven games.
McHan jumped from 11th to third place with a 272-yard performance against Texas A&M and has a total of 937 yards. His average of 156.2 yards per game is ahead of Mastrogiovanni's 153.6.

Garrett is running fifth this week, an advance of five places, and has a total of 925 yards in seven games. He's right behind Zeke Bratkowski of Georgia whose passing skill keeps him with the leaders. Bratkowski's total is 934. Illinois sophomore J. C. Caroline extended his lead as the nation's No. 1 ball carrier. He has gained 891 yards on the ground, 200 plus more than his closest rival, Ken Cardella of Arizona, who has 680.

earned this spot at the big time, and big money, by outpointing Davey in a one-sided 10-rounder in Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 14. He floored Davey for an eight-count, winning unanimously.

Final Word Is Expected Today From Richmond

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Sports Editor
Arrangements are expected to be completed today for a Thanksgiving Day football game at East Carolina College.

No formal announcement had been made this morning by the college but it was believed that the University of Richmond would be the foe if minor details can be ironed out. Other teams being considered include Clarion State Teachers College, the Pennsylvania team which defeated the Pirates 13-7 in the Lions Bowl last year.

Final negotiations with Richmond reportedly started yesterday. The College Athletic Department was given the green light on the project at a noon meeting of the Intercollegiate Athletic Committee. A final word is expected this morning. Richmond will make the decision as to whether they will come here or not. Coach Jack Boone of the Pirates has already publicly stated that his Pirates are ready to play "anybody, any time, and any place."

The game with Richmond, if it is settled, is in line with recent athletic policies at the college which are aimed at strengthening the football schedule. Efforts have been made in the past to schedule Southern Conference teams but prohibitive guarantees and scheduling difficulties have always kept the Pirates on the outside looking in.

Efforts have already been made to get Furman and Washington and Lee here for a Thanksgiving Day game. The guarantees demanded by both teams, however, practically turned East Carolina officials cold. Offers of a home and home series with the teams was refused for the time being.

The Pirates have won all seven of their games this year. They are also riding a streak of 14 regular season games without a defeat. They have not been defeated since Lenoir-Rhyne turned the trick a year ago in the third game of their season. They have been tied twice, however, once by Catawba and once by Stetson. The post-season game with Clarion last year is not counted as a regular season game by the Pirates.

East Carolina's winning streak has been led for the most part by a sophomore quarterback from Washington, N. C., who is presently out with an injury. He is Dick Cherry, an All-Conference choice last year and virtually a shoo-in for the same honors this year. He has tossed 16 touchdown passes already this year.
It is understood that should a Thanksgiving Day game be arranged, Pirates Club members would be given an option of buying a ticket for the same seat they now have. They will be given first general admission seats on the South side of the field.

Parker Promoted As Tar Heels Work Hard

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
A jet-like passer and a glue-fingered end may spell the difference in the Atlantic Coast Conference's Battle of the Carolinas this Saturday.

South Carolina's Johnny Gramling and Clyde Bennett have helped make the Gamecocks one of the toughest teams in the conference. Gramling is the top passer in the loop and Bennett the leading pass receiver. The two have made South Carolina the conference leader in pass offense with an average of 125.5 yards per game.

North Carolina, which meets the Gamecocks in Columbia, has shown little ability in stopping opponents' passes, and currently is on the bottom of the conference heap in that respect. It was passed by Zeke Bratkowski that gave Georgia a 27-14 win over the Tar Heels. South Carolina Coach Rex Enright hopes Gramling can do the same thing.

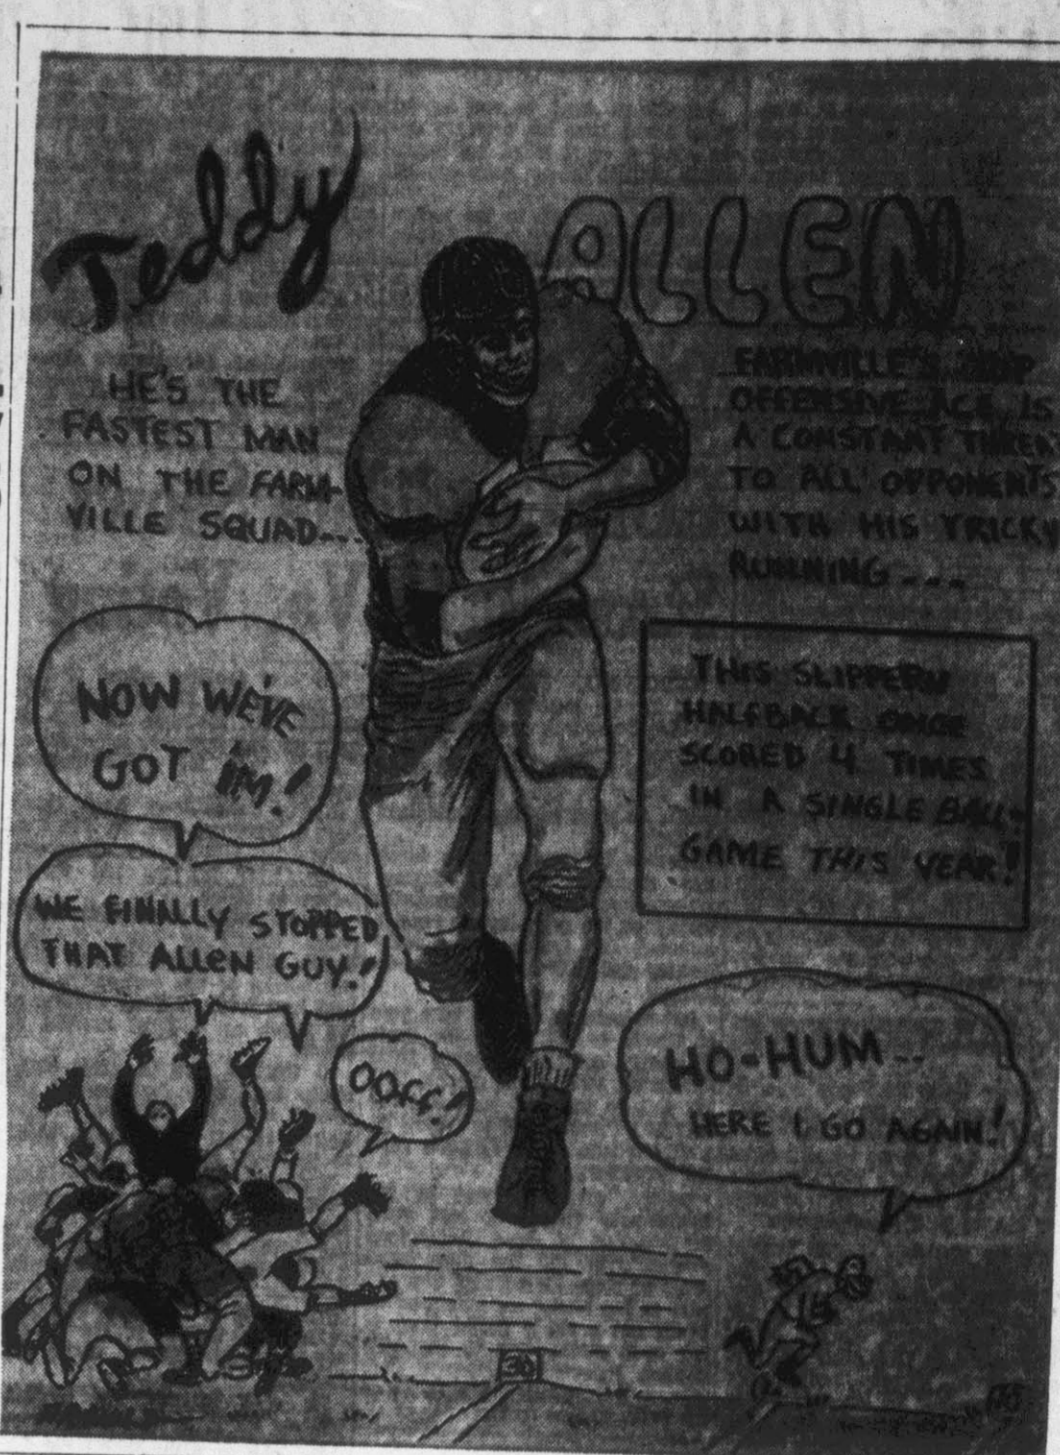

Coach George Barclay made some changes in his top lineup yesterday, hoping to land on a winning combination after three straight defeats. The North Carolina coach switched Will Fry to left end, upped Bill Koman at center, and elevated Larry Parker to a first string fullback post. The team concentrated on defense against South Carolina plays.

Meanwhile at Columbia, the Gamecocks sharpened up their aerial games with Gramling and Harold Lewis doing the throwing. There was some joy in the Duke camp yesterday to offset the loss of James (Red) Smith, injured in the Virginia game last Saturday. Byrd Looper, the Blue Devils' top fullback who broke a bone in his foot three weeks ago, returned to practice. Looper leads Duke fullbacks in ground gaining despite missing three games.

Nick McKelthan, Junior McRoy and Bill Conner worked at Smith's halfback post as the Dukes went through an offensive and defensive practice. They meet Navy at Baltimore Saturday.

Faced with the prospect of tangleing with Georgia Tech at Atlanta Saturday, Coach Frank Howard sent his Clemson charges through a rough scrimmage. Mark Kane was moved up to a first string guard position.

North Carolina State spent yesterday setting its defenses against powerful Army's ground and air offense. The Wolfpack which apparently pleased its coaches during the scrimmage.
Two hard running fullbacks sparked Wake Forest's practice yesterday. Jim Bland and Nick Maravic showed up well in a scrimmage against freshmen.

Phantoms Scrimmage Again; Speight Out With Injury

By WAYNE BISHOP
Reflector Sports Writer
Coach Bill Kittrell worked his Greenville High School football squad in a long scrimmage yesterday.

The Phantoms are preparing for their Friday night trip to Elizabeth City where they will meet the Yellow Jackets in a Northeastern Conference game.
Halfback James Speight didn't show up for the drill yesterday. He is under orders from Kittrell to rest his injured ankles as much as possible. Speight is the workhorse in the Phantoms' ground attack and the times he has been slowed up this year have been the times when the Greenville attack all but stalled.

Kittrell's backfield yesterday showed Mitchell Johnson and Joe Tatt working at the halfbacks with Jerry Drum and George Siders alternating at quarterback. Bob Howell and Bobby Langston were dividing the fullbacking.
Captain and end Bobby Conway is expected to be back in action this week but it will take a doctor's final approval before he will be permitted to play Friday night. Conway has been out of action for two weeks with an injured shoulder. He has been working out in light equipment this week.

Conway's running mate at the end, Harold Edwards, is also expected to return to action this week. He missed last week's game with Rocky Mount because of illness.
The Phantoms will be accompanied on their trip to Elizabeth City by a busload of students from the high school.

The Gold marched quickly down the field and to the one where Bilbro pulled out a jump pass play to Saled for the final even points.
The White had scored first in the game. Lynn Jorgensen, carrying on an end around, scored in the first quarter and then watched Peanut Nunn pass to Bobby Edwards for a quick 7-0 lead.

The Gold began their long uphill battle in the second period. Billy Cox plunged over from the three and Saled added the point after a 40-yard march. The score at halftime was 7-7.
A 40-yard pass play, from Nunn to Edwards, accounted for the second White touchdown. The try for the extra point fizzled, however, and the Gold had the stage set for their game-winning TD.
The victory gave the Gold the regular season championship in the League and entitles them to number one ranking when the post-season playoff starts Thursday at Elm Street Park. The Gold will meet the last-place Red in the series opener. The White and Blue teams will meet in the other first-round game Saturday night at 7:30 in the Third Street Park. The championship game will be played next Tuesday night at Third Street Park.

Final standings:

Latin America Population Grows At Explosive Rate

By DELOS SMITH
United Press Science Editor
NEW YORK (U.P.) — According to the human population scientists, Latin America is the world's "most explosive" area. It is growing so fast, it is likely to burst some day not too far off.

Latin America's population is increasing 2.5 per cent every year, but the annual population increase of the world is a little over one per cent and that of the United States is 1.7 per cent.

Right now the population of Latin America, including the West Indies, is about 173,000,000, which approximates the population of the United States and Canada. At present increase rates, Latin America will have a population of 550,000,000 in 2000 while the U.S.—Canada population will be 280,000,000.

These figures come from the Population Reference Bureau which is maintained by scientists who fear man is reproducing at such a clip he'll outstrip his food supply, and unless he takes steps, will commit racial suicide by starvation.

The bureau said death rates in Latin America are declining but "there is considerable latitude for further decline in most countries because modern medicine and technology could reduce these (death rates) drastically. The traditionally high birth rates are expected to remain for some time to come."

Urban Growth
"If high fertility persists and mortality sharply declines present rates of growth will skyrocket in many countries," the bureau continued. "To illustrate, should death rates fall to the level of the United States' rate and birth rates remain at present levels, the area's rate of growth would increase to 3.3 per cent annually. At that rate, the population would pass the billion mark soon after the year 2000."

The bureau saw only "one ray of hope" for an eventual check on population growth—and that is a general trend in all Latin America for people to live in cities and towns—"urban fertility rates are lower than rural rates." However, a switch from high to low fertility is not "sudden" in populations.

Furthermore, the bureau continued, since "large numbers of Latin Americans are undernourished" now, how will the myriad millions of Latin Americans several generations hence fare?

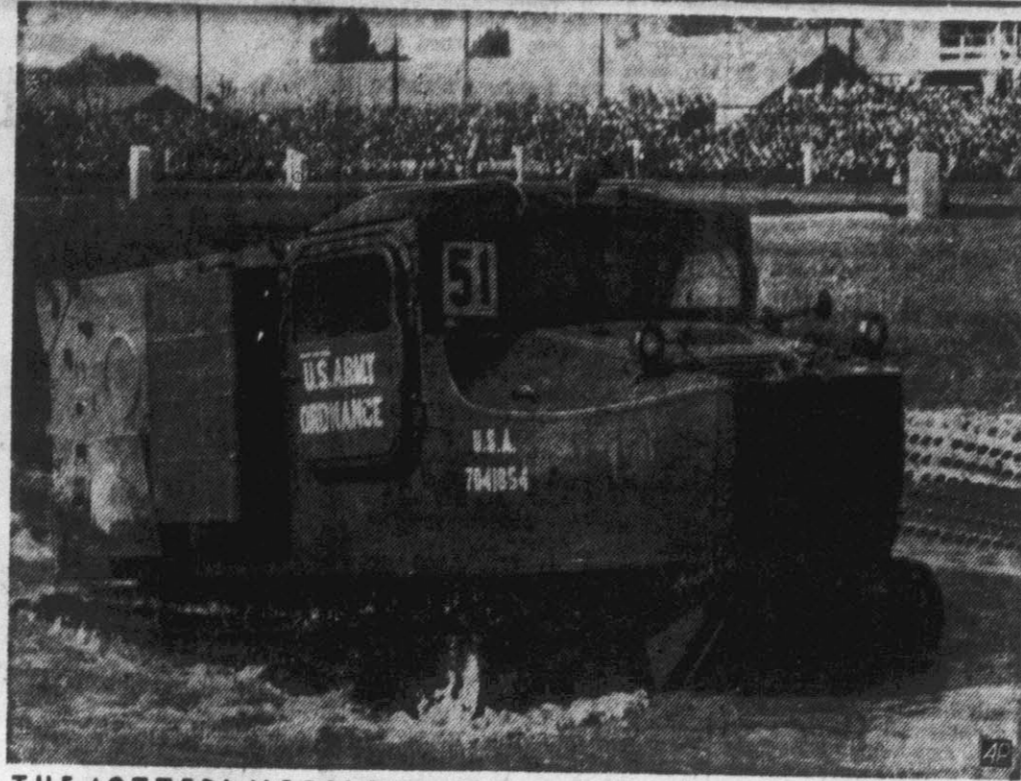

"There are no indications that the land can support two or three times the present population," it said. "Most of the terrain is unstable, highly subject to erosion, and is now extensively exposed to destructive agricultural and forestry practices."

Argentina's Rates Low
It pointed out that "population pressure" in many parts of Latin America already was intense, particularly in El Salvador the highlands of Colombia and Venezuela, parts of Mexico, and some Caribbean islands.

The bureau saw some hope in the declining death rate "because the social and economic changes which would make possible a lasting decline in the death rate, would be expected also to produce eventually a decline in the birth rate."

"In the south, Argentina's low birth and low death rate pattern stands out among all the nations of the area as similar to the pattern of Western Europe and the United States," it said. "Chile seem to be in transition between the high fertility pattern typical of the area and the new low fertility pattern. It is noteworthy that there is only a slight difference in the rate of natural increase of the two countries. Chile's higher death rate acts as a brake on rapid multiplication."

The "most hopeful prospect," the bureau said, was in "the accelerating shift from rural areas to cities. If this trend could be supplemented by measures which would even more directly reduce birth rates, a low fertility pattern quickly than was the case of northern Europe and the United States. . . How long it will take Latin American birth rates to decline is the crux of the dilemma."

His personal doctor, Dr. O.C. Sundstrom, patches him up for free, explaining it's his civic duty. George was hit by vehicles several times when he was younger and sayer. During a month-long hospitalization he howled until he was brought mail sacks to lie on.

Uninformed dogcatchers picked him up twice and were nearly subjected to mob violence by citizens, who freed George on bail.

There's a feeling that when George has barked greetings to his

The famed Barter Theatre of Virginia will appear here Thursday of this week in Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness!" and so will give theatre-goers the double treat of seeing a production by America's largest theatrical company outside of New York City and a tender and delightful comedy by one of America's leading playwrights.

The play will be presented as the second number on the 1953-1954 Entertainment Series at East Carolina College. A large audience both from the city and out of town is expected to attend.

Owen Phillips will take the part of Nat Miller, a newspaper owner in a small Connecticut town, around whose family the plot of "Ah, Wilderness!" is built. A former native of Cincinnati, where he was managing director of the Actors Guild and head of the drama department, Phillips was a member of the legendary Stuart Walker Repertory Theatre and has been seen in many Warner Bros. movies.

His son Richard will be played by Frank Lowe, a young Barter actor, who recently won high praise from critics for his performance in an adaptation of James Thurber's "The 13 Clocks". This production opened August 17 and played to packed houses. Richard of the O'Neill comedy has been said to be a portrait of the playwright as a dreamy, idealistic youth.

The cast of twelve includes other experienced actors and actresses who have been successful with the Barter Theatre and elsewhere.

James W. Butler, chairman of the college Entertainment Committee, has announced that tickets for "Ah, Wilderness!" and season tickets for the Entertainment Series will be available through Thursday. They may be obtained either at the Alumni Office of the college or, on Thursday evening, in the lobby of the Wright building.

Red Heads Don't Cry

By ROY L. FOLEY

CHAPTER THIRTY THREE
 NOW PHIL had asked her to marry him.
 Nancy could sit on the chair and close her eyes and feel the crush of his lips against hers, the very throb of his heart as he held her so close and said, "You will marry me—say you will."

 She could close her eyes and hear then say, "I know everything about you and your kind of people—I love you—there's nothing else in the world that matters."

 He said that, but was there? Nancy hadn't told anyone of her engagement to Phil Stanley. It happened such a little time ago. She had told Phil that she would marry him, and still she must be so very sure before she could go through with it. She must be sure that her pounding heart wasn't driving her away from her own people.

What a fool she had been to allow herself to get into the mood she had been in.
 She had Phil Stanley's diamond ring, didn't she? She could wait until news of Phil's intention to marry Nancy Kelly came out and then she could threaten him with the sensation of a breach of promise action, couldn't she? She could make such a row that he would be glad to buy her off, wouldn't he? There were other means, if the worst came to the worst. Men were such fools. They could be made to believe anything. Especially after they had much too much champagne.

Linda Van Vliet's determination to thwart the infatuation of Phil for Nancy grew to a point of frenzy as the days passed.

She stayed close to her apartment, planning, scheming, pacing, lighting cigarettes and crushing them out after hardly more than a puff or two, trying to fix on some means of preventing Phil's marriage to Nancy.

One fantastic plan after another came to her mind and each plan crumbled with fear that if she carried it out she would expose herself.

If only Spike Adams were here. If only Lil Langdon were here. Well, they weren't here. Spike was gone either a double crosser or else in some hideout because things might be too hot for him at the moment. Lil was on the other side of the world. Linda paced back and forth and tiraded against herself for coming to this town in the first place.

Scant satisfaction, that.

It wasn't the town's fault it was her fault, she answered herself. Something had happened to her. She began to suspect that she couldn't work alone as well as she thought she could. She considered packing up and getting out as fast as the next train would carry her.

But where? With what?

Linda, the cool-eyed Linda, the actress crook who lived by her wits and had managed pretty well so far, today was experiencing something that resembled fear or defeat. She paused in front of a mirror, touched her sleek hair. The reflection of Phil's diamond ring glinted back at her.

She had put on her act and had kept the ring, intending to use it as a weapon over Phil. She twisted it around and around her finger. Should she pawn it, get out of town?

She stamped her foot as though she was trying to stamp out whatever streak of yellow that seemed to be twisting itself into her mind that day.

Sam Sykes had come to this town and the same thing had happened to him. He had gone completely soft, turned over a new leaf. At least, that's what he called it. Sam, now that he had turned out completely yellow, could be a menace to her as long as she stayed in this town and she knew it.

Linda battled with herself, with a dozen schemes that day and finally came to the conclusion that she had worked herself into a state of jitters by staying too close to herself, thinking too much.

She guessed she would call on Chad Claybourne.

Chad could be an easy winner—a good loser. She could lead him around to his taking her to a gambling place somewhere. She sneered at the comparison of the places the natives around here regarded as gambling places to those she had known.

Well, if that was the best they had around here she might as well make the most of it. She might win a couple of hundred dollars. It would take a hundred to pay the apartment rent for another month. And in another month she might be in greener fields with a purse full of Phil Stanley's money.

She might even be married to Phil. The game wasn't up yet. The thought of spinning roulette wheels made Linda feel better.

Phil Stanley had a lot of money and his mother was a notoriously proud old dame who wouldn't relish having the Stanley name scandalized. Phil would buy her off before it ever reached his mother's ears.

Of course these plans would have to be used as a last resort. It would be better to demean Nancy, disgrace her, publicize her and her shop in such a way that Phil—But there was Chad Claybourne ringing the doorbell.

She would think about the whole thing tomorrow. She would feel more like thinking it all out if she was lucky tonight at roulette—and she intended to be.

When Linda walked down Wisconsin Avenue the following afternoon and came to Milwaukee street she was not quite decided whether she should pass the shop of Nancy Kelly, Inc., or not. It hadn't been her intent to go near the shop until she had more fully completed plans for her campaign against Nancy. Curiosity got the best of her.

She would just walk by and see what was in the window.

She didn't walk by. She walked in. Almost at the door of the shop she had met Mrs. Eustis. Mrs. Eustis had engaged her in a moment's conversation and then inquired if Linda wasn't coming in. Mrs. Eustis said she would like to show Linda a new gown that had arrived that very day. She said that the moment it had been unpacked she had said to herself—"That's the gown for Miss Van Vliet."

Mrs. Eustis was schooled in salesmanship. Linda had had those very words said to her before by the proprietors of other shops in other cities. Her purse was quite filled again. She had been luckier last night than she had dared to hope. There were times when she couldn't lose anything. Her luck at the wheel had told her that this was such a time.

In the shop Linda quickly observed that Nancy was busily engaged in conversation with customers and that Moira was modeling clothes for the particular edification of a large and eccentric woman whom Linda had often met at affairs and in cafes around town. Her name was Daisy Merriweather. She was a widow who had more money than taste, more jewels and bangles than brains.

Phil had once laughingly warned Linda against her. At the moment Moira was modeling an evening gown for the woman. It was an extreme affair certainly not meant for any woman of the age and proportions of Mrs. Merriweather, yet she was ecstatically declaring that it was just the thing she had been looking for.

Linda was amused by jealously contemptuous of Mrs. Merriweather. Amused at her looks and contemptuous of the fact that anyone so coarse in appearance should have managed to marry a man who had a fortune to leave.

Admiral In Mufti Running Work On Atomic Sub, Nuclear Power Plant

By ELTON CL FAY

WASHINGTON (AP)—Hymen O. Rickover, the admiral in mufti, is keeping busy at his job, directing construction of the world's first nuclear driven submarine, while starting the equally imposing task of setting up the nation's first atomic industrial power plant.

An Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) spokesman said today the AEC intends to keep Rickover as chief of its naval reactors branch while he serves also as director of the project, recently announced, build a 60,000-kilowatt electric plant run by a nuclear fission furnace.

Selection of Rickover for the new job was based primarily on the wide experience in atomic power development he gained in his work with the nuclear engine designs for the submarines Nautilus and Sea Wolf.

But another factor of apparent importance was the fact that Rickover is widely known in industry, particularly the power industry.

The 63-year old Rickover, attained his present rank of rear admiral only after one of the hottest family rows in recent Navy history. "Rick" was saved from being retired from the Navy as a captain only after some Congress members and Secretary Robert Anderson intervened.

Navy promotion boards had twice passed him over in selecting captains to become rear admirals. That meant he would be forced into retirement last June 30.

Anderson then gave the Navy an unmistakable nudge by directing it to convene a selection board to promote one engineering captain experienced in the field of atomic propulsion.

But Rickover has worn his admiral's uniform and insignia only once since promotion—agreeing to that only because it was essential to the ceremony of pinning the two-star insignia on him. Indeed, that probably is the only time he has donned a uniform since 1949, when the Atomic Energy Commission appointed him chief of the naval reactors branch.

He says his job requires dealing mostly with civilians and that a rank and uniform doesn't mean much to them.

But there are Navy officers who say Rickover also doesn't have too much concern for rank, procedure and "channels" in the Navy. Admirals sometimes were surprised, while Rickover still was a captain, to find decisions all completed in the nuclear submarine project without their knowledge.

Things like that shock the regular Navy—and its promotion selection boards.

Rickover is a little, grey-haired, driving sort of fellow—intent, something of a zealot. If he has any hobbies or recreation he keeps them carefully concealed from those who know him. He takes work home with him—and also along to meals and on plane and train trips.

He expects his staff to work the same way. Navy associates say he "runs a tight ship." But "Rick" claims he wants his own burning interest in making nuclear power, for Navy craft or factory, a reality.

Rickover jumps around the country on business trips as other people would go from one room to the next. There is no surprise when he decides at the end of a Washington workday to be at the AEC's Idaho Falls laboratory the next evening. And when he gets there, he insists on conferring most of the night, catching a plane in the morning to bring him back to his Washington office for an evening of business.

He operates in the same manner in dealing with contracting companies. Executives of the companies admire his zeal and like to deal with him—but would prefer hours other than midnight.

Rickover himself is not a scientist by profession, but he has a deep and abiding respect for scientists with whom he works closely.

He says the nuclear physicists, engineers and designers who are working on the atomic submarine project—civilian and military alike—really have the creative spirit of an artist.

They are making something entirely new, Rickover says, and the consuming urge to create is so great they even forget it is a weapon they are welding.

The Navy at no time said flatly that Rickover shouldn't be a rear admiral or that he didn't know his job. On the contrary, it has stated officially he was assigned by the Navy to the project "because of his drive, enthusiasm and ability to get things done." Yet the promotion boards omitted his name from the list of recommendations for advancement to flag rank.

In hearings dealing with the nuclear submarine project, admirals from the Pentagon pointedly noted that the Navy long had been interested in nuclear power for ships—and cited the names of a number of other officers who had pioneered in early studies.

Tires Slick One Day Service Recapping Goodyear Blue Rubber AMMON Supply

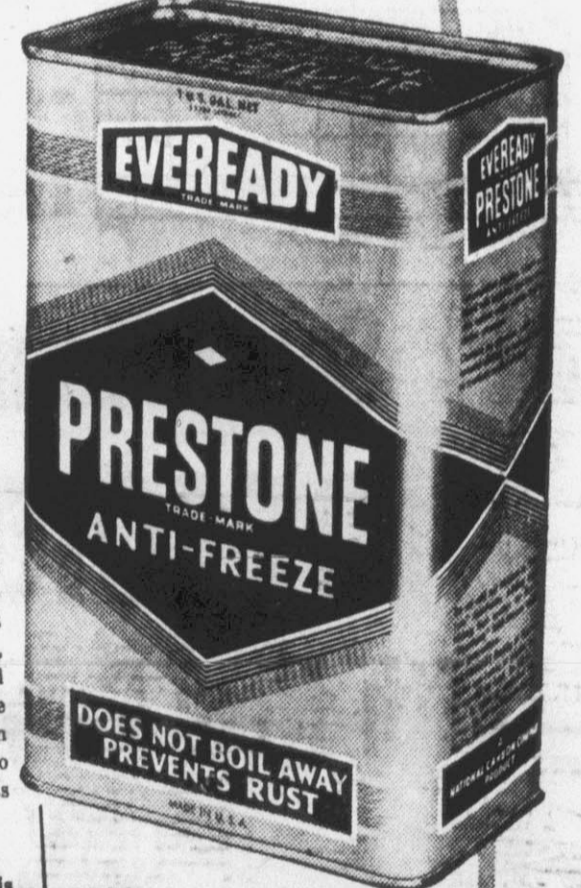

"PRESTONE" ANTI-FREEZE GIVES YOUR CAR

FULL 4-WAY PROTECTION

- 1 AGAINST freeze-ups in cold weather, boil-offs on warm days. One shot lasts all winter. 2 AGAINST rubber decay, radiator clogging, and pin-hole leaks developing from rust spots. 3 AGAINST corrosion of the cooling-system metals. 4 AGAINST foaming off and resulting loss of solution.

MECHANICALLY-MINDED CAR OWNERS... SERVICE MEN...ENGINEERS... Save Trouble, Money...and Your Cars with these Simple Facts from the World's Largest Anti-freeze Laboratory

Most all-winter anti-freezes are made of glycols...high boiling-point, low freezing-point compounds. These properties are fine: they prevent boil-off when the weather turns warm; they prevent freeze-ups when the temperature drops. Thus, they do what alcohol can never do. However, to make an ideal anti-freeze suitable for modern engines, glycols need 3 special treatments, or additives, as follows:

Glycols need a specially compounded oil inhibitor, the function of which is: (a) to form a microscopically-thin film over small rust spots which otherwise might break through and result in pin-hole leaks, with consequent loss of solution; (b) to lay any loose rust that may be in the cooling system, and keep it from circulating and thus plugging up the tubes of the radiator; and (c) to plate out on rubber hose and seals, and thus to prevent the rotting of these parts by water penetration.

"PRESTONE" anti-freeze has this special oil inhibitor. It is not pretty in a test tube or a bottle, but it does a marvelous job of making rust stay put and of preventing pin-hole leaks. No anti-freeze without such an inhibitor can perform these functions.

2. Glycols need a chemical inhibitor, the function of which is to prevent corrosion of the cooling-system metals. Seven metals are commonly used in automobile cooling systems—cast iron, steel, copper, aluminum, brass, lead and tin (solder).

"PRESTONE" anti-freeze has this chemical inhibitor. It gives more protection over the full range of cooling-system metals than any other anti-freeze on the market.

3. Glycols need an anti-foam, the function of which is to prevent the solution from foaming up under conditions of fast driving, and thus spilling out through the over-flow pipe.

"PRESTONE" anti-freeze contains an anti-foam which is unsurpassed by that of any other anti-freeze.

The additives contained in "PRESTONE" anti-freeze are the result of tens of thousands of tests by scores of the world's leading cooling-system engineers and research scientists in the laboratories of Union Carbide and Carbon Corporation at Tonawanda, N. Y. These laboratories are world-headquarters for anti-freeze facts and cooling-system data. These laboratories are the authority for our statement that no other anti-freeze gives the same complete protection as "PRESTONE" anti-freeze. There are no substitutes of equal value. There is nothing else like it.

Judge Regrets Unable To Order Longer Term

Judge J. Paul Frizzelle stopped James Streeter's wife's testimony, and said he wished that he had more charges to place against the defendant in yesterday's session of Pitt County Superior Court.

Streeter was charged with assault twice and the presiding judge was disappointed that he could not sentence the man to more than two years for each case after hearing the wife's testimony. He stopped the testimony with "I've heard enough to put him away for a long time" but could only give the defendant a total of four years for the two charges.

Frank S. Reid was found not guilty of driving drunk.

After pleading guilty to driving drunk, Oscar Ellwood Cochran was fined $100 and cost.

Herman E. Hughes, charged with driving drunk and other charges, entered a plea of nolo contendere. He was sentenced to three months for one charge and 90 days for another.

Heber Suttons pleaded guilty of driving drunk and another charge. He was sentenced to 18 months on the roads for one charge and three months for another.

Ed Smith pleaded guilty of driving drunk and was fined $100 and costs. George Lee Elks, on a liquor charge, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to two years on the roads but the sentence was suspended upon the condition that defendant pay a fine of $100 and cost and remain a law abiding citizen for five years.

Milton Taft pleaded guilty of forgery. His 12 months road sentence was suspended upon payment of $50 and cost and remain on good behavior for three years.

W. L. Whitley, charged with assault with a deadly weapon with the intent to kill, pleaded guilty of assault with a deadly weapon which was accepted by the State. He was sentenced to 12 months in jail suspended upon payment of costs and $10 a week to his daughter until she becomes 14 years old and $15 a week thereafter until she is 18 years old.

James Jones Jr. pleaded not guilty to attempted rape. The case was pending when court recessed for the day.

Fought 4 Fires In Pitt Woods

Pitt County Forest Ranger N.S. (Kid) Tyson reported today that four fires resulting from carelessness of hunters and persons burning brush did considerable damage yesterday.

The rangers fought a woods fire in the Sever Pine section from shortly after noon until 9 o'clock last night. Another woods fire about a mile from Ayden about 3:30 did much damage. The forest firefighters late yesterday were called to a woods fire in Gum Swamp between Winterville and Ayden.

The Pitt county forest rangers later had a report that a woods fire in Greene county was doing much damage.

"Practically all of the woods fires this time of year result from carelessness on the part of people smoking in woods or burning brush," Tyson said. "We are asking people to be more careful. Forest fires not only damage timber and buildings, but they also destroy lots of game and birds," he added.

Mrs. Margaret E. Smith, who "mans" the big fire tower near Greenville said she had not received a report on the extent of the fire damage.

Organ Recital In Church Tonight

The pipe organ at Pentecostal Holiness Church has been moved into the new room built especially for it.

E. C. White and Claxton Standell did the technical work. One new stop and an oboe were added.

George E. Perry of East Carolina College music faculty, will give a recital at the church tonight at 8 o'clock. Music lovers of Greenville and vicinity are invited to attend.

The organist will open the concert with the Angelic Salutation by Arcadelt-Liszt. He will play four of Bach's numbers, God's Time Is Best, Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring, Sheep May Safely Graze and Toccata in D-Minor.

The following numbers are: The Musical Clocks by Haydn, Minuet (The Quail), march, Andantino, Minuet (Allegretto) and Minuet (Presto); Sonata in C-Minor, Opus 56, Adagio (Gullmunt); Choral Prelude, Saving Victim by Walton, Lord Jesus Walking on the Sea (Bible poem No. 3) by Weinberger; The Bells of Saint Anne de Beaupre by Russell, and Toccata in D-Minor by Nevin.

Dry Forests Are 'Ripe' For Spark

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina's dry forests, hit by at least 26 fires yesterday, will be the scene of more blazes "unless everybody takes extreme care with fire in or near woodland areas."

This warning was issued by State Forester Fred H. Claridge who pointed out yesterday that recent rains apparently did little to relieve the parched woodlands.

Claridge said 16 fires were reported burning yesterday in the Fayetteville District, six in the Asheville District, five in the Rocky Mount District, and one in District 3. He added that none was regarded as serious.

Pitt Grand Jury Returns 17 True Bills In Session

Pitt County's Grand Jury passes on all bills presented finding 17 True Bills, according to the report to Judge J. Paul Frizzelle, presiding judge of the 5th Judicial District.

The report commended Pitt County Superintendent of Schools D.H. Conley for the work he has done in effort to improve school attendance in Pitt County schools, especially the Negro schools. The Grand Jury urged everyone to help alleviate the problem.

It was recommended by the Grand Jury that the property on the north side of the Court House, adjacent to the Edwards Office Building, be developed into a parking area for county officers and employees to help alleviate the present parking situation around the Court House.

The report, signed by Foreman C.W. Harvey, Jr., concluded by expressing appreciation to Judge Frizzelle, Solicitor William J. Bundy, and all State and County officers for cooperation and assistance during this term of Court.

The report was dated November 3.

Bars' Liquor To Be Given Tests

DENVER (AP)—When you walk into a bar and order to drink, you're going to get what you pay for, says the State of Colorado.

All state liquor inspectors are being equipped with special pocket size sets for testing liquors. Secretary of State Homer F. Bruce disclosed yesterday.

An inspector can enter a tavern and test all the liquor on the bar. The simple test, on the premises in front of the proprietor, will show whether the liquor is straight whisky, a blend of straight whiskeys, blended whisky or bootleg which has been colored artificially.

"We're starting the tests to protect the public," Bruce said.

Roaring Lions Kept Her Awake

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—A frantic call was received by the night police sergeant.

"I can't sleep," the woman complained. "There are lions roaring in the neighborhood."

A check was made and the lady wasn't having nightmares.

The lions are with a show at the nearby Arizona State Fairgrounds.

By Installments

Some people might think it's "cheaper by the dozen," but a defendant asked for time to pay his fine after pleading guilty to a drunken driving charge in Pitt County Superior Court this morning.

The defendant's attorney told the court that the man had 14 months to feed family after a sorry crop this year and was working in a bus station to help feed his family of 12 children.

Feeling a little sorry for the defendant the judge allowed the man to pay his $200 fine and costs by paying a down payment of $50 and $10 in weekly installments.
