$65.5 BILLION BUDGET OUTLINED

Despite 7.5 Per Cent Cut, Govm't Will Still Be In Red

By FRANK O'BRIEN WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower laid a $65.5-billion-dollar budget before Congress today. He said a "new concept" of reliance upon air power and new weapons justifies a $4-billion-dollar spending slash, mostly from national security outlays.

Throughout the massive document Eisenhower who has spent most of his life in the Army, emphasized that his administration has made air power its chosen instrument of free world defense, with other services playing lesser roles.

In the national security section of the message, Eisenhower declared: "This budget is based on a new concept for planning and financing our national security program. . . . Our military planning in previous years has been based on several successive assumed fixed dates of maximum danger. . . . This budget is aimed instead at providing a strong military position which can be maintained over the extended period of uneasy peace."

"With the shift in emphasis to the full exploitation of air power and modern weapons, we are in a position to support strong national security programs over an indefinite period . . . within a lower level of total expenditures for national security."

Personal income tax deadline from March 15 to April 15; liberalize deductions for family medical costs; allow limited deductions for child care; give farmers a deduction for soil conservation; extend corporation income and excise tax rates rather than permit them to decline April 1 to pre-Korea levels; and enact a series of revisions aimed at lightening and adjusting the tax load on business.

This, she said, does not compare favorably with the per capita receipts of some surrounding counties.

President Puts Budgetary, Defense Emphasis On Air Force Army Bears Brunt Of Cuts

By ELTON C. FAY WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower recommended today a $37,575,000,000 military outlay for the next fiscal year with a shift in emphasis from foot soldiery to a "full exploitation of air power and modern weapons."

and three divisions would be dropped from the present 20. Against the cutback in strength of the Army, in which Eisenhower was a five-star general, there was the President's emphatic advocacy of greater power in the air.

We continued: "Last summer I told the American people that the Soviets now have the capability of atomic attack upon us, and such capability will increase with the passage of time."

Since there was very little business to claim the attention of the club, Mrs. Kittrell, program chairman, presented Mrs. L. W. Gaylord, who had the program for the afternoon, Mrs. Gaylord had as her subject, "Hobbies of Our Presidents." With her usual happy faculty of making interesting whatever subject she presents, Mrs. Gaylord had a splendid program and gave her hearers an insight into a part of the lives of these well-known figures about which few people know. She confined her paper for the most part to the earlier presidents, and it was interesting to notice that before golf became popular, and before the day of the automobile, busy men, who must have recreation and exercise, were able to find it in horseback riding, fox hunting, fishing and swimming.

Books for the afternoon were distributed, after which Mrs. Sugg served a delicious salad course with coffee.

Pardoned For Murder That Never Happened

By ED OLSEN

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP)—Dark-haired Emma Jo Johnson is "not angry at anyone" for sending her to prison for murder — a murder which the Nevada Board of Pardons now says never was committed.

Emma Jo, 35, was ordered freed yesterday after 2 years, 8 months and 28 days behind bars as a result of a year-long, $15,000 investigation by mystery story author Erle Stanley Gardner and others.

The board accepted doctor's findings that Mrs. Jane Jones, 72, of Las Vegas died of a brain tumor — not as a result of an asserted attack by Emma Jo.

Emma Jo's troubles started in early May 1951 when she called at the home of her former landlady, Mrs. Jones, for mail.

At the trial, the state said the two women got into a fight and Emma Jo beat Mrs. Jones so severely that a resulting blood clot caused the older woman's death two weeks later.

Emma Jo testified she only grabbed Mrs. Jones by her braids in self-defense and Mrs. Jones slumped to the floor unconscious.

The jury convicted Emma Jo of second degree murder; sentence, 10 to 12 years.

Author Gardner, who also is a successful attorney, went to work on the case about a year ago as a result of a letter from Jack Wengert, 44, Emma Jo's fiancée.

Gardner, pathologist Le Moyne Snyder of Michigan and Dr. R. B. H. Gradwohl of St. Louis became convinced that Mrs. Jones was not murdered, but died of a brain tumor.

In the long, expensive investigation, they found Dr. T. V. Nendick, Las Vegas physiotherapist, to whom Mrs. Jones had gone the day before the alteration.

Dr. Nendick said Mrs. Jones was dying of the brain tumor and needed immediate surgery. He was not called to testify at Emma Jo's trial, although he said he sent the defense attorney an anonymous letter. The lawyer said the letter came on the final day of the trial and he was unable to substantiate it. The case was not appealed.

In ordering Mrs. Johnson's sentence commuted to time served, the pardons board made no observation on whether she should have been charged with a lesser crime.

Emma Jo was philosophical: "I'm not angry at anyone — I'm just so grateful that somebody came to my rescue. I'm not bitter. The district attorney, the judge and the jury did their job as they felt it should be done."

Although free, Emma Jo stayed at the prison last night waiting for Wengert, who has waited for her for almost three years.

Wengert, a Las Vegas chef, and Emma Jo were to have been married in 1951 after she divorced Navy man Russell Johnson.

"Just as soon as I can I'm going to marry Jack," the emotion-choked Mrs. Johnson told reporters.

"Jack is the most faithful and loyal human that God ever put breath into. He has worked hard all this time and contributed every dime he made to help me."

S. Korea Editor To Hang As Spy

SEOUL (AP)—South Korean editor Chung Kook Gun, 38, convicted as a Communist spy, will be executed publicly by an Army firing squad Saturday the Defense Ministry announced today.

Chung, former editor of the newspaper Yun-Hap Shinmoon, was sentenced to death last month by a military court.

Dr. Keister To Present Recital On January 26

Dr. Elwood Keister, tenor and violinist and faculty member of the East Carolina College department of music, will be presented in a recital Tuesday, January 26, at 8 p.m. in the Austin auditorium. He will be accompanied at the piano by his wife, Gloria Keister.

The program will be sponsored by the college department of music as one of a series of recitals by faculty members given during the present school year. The public is invited to attend.

Dr. Keister joined the East Carolina department of music last fall and since then has appeared in a number of programs on the campus and in the city of Greenville.

In December he directed a performance of Handel's "The Messiah," which attracted to the campus an audience of approximately 3,000 people from many towns in eastern North Carolina.

He is a graduate of the Eastman School of Music and of Teachers College, Columbia University, and a former member of the Robert Shaw Chorale and the Columbus, Ohio, Philharmonic Symphony. He and Mrs. Keister were formerly on the faculty of Iowa State Teachers College.

The program next Tuesday will include a group of Brahms songs, "If With All Your Hearts" from Mendelssohn's "Elijah," the aria "E Lucevan Le Stelle" from "Tosca" by Puccini, and several contemporary songs. The last portion of the evening will be devoted to the "Sonata in A Major" for violin and piano by Cesar Franck.

Recreation Move Offers Advantages

Proposals from Greenville's recreation commission for the development of Guy Smith Stadium area into a usable recreation area is a move which long has been needed in Greenville.

A Big Part For Drivers In Highway Safety

The appeal of Motor Vehicle Commissioner Ed Scheidt for public support of the campaign for highway safety now being undertaken in the state should not go unheeded.

There are few other programs in North Carolina which potentially could mean more to the citizens of the state than safer highways, and safer driving. The highway safety program of North Carolina—just like the highway safety program of any other state—depends heavily upon cooperation from motorists for success.

It is obvious that the vigorous enforcement which has been adopted by the highway patrol in the past year, plus the new regulations governing penalties for speeding, are bringing results in slowing down traffic.

While the methods of enforcement now being used—the employment of speed checking devices, unmarked patrol cars, and concentrated patrols of particular areas—may not meet the approval of some drivers, it appears a sound program pointed toward cutting the state's accident rate. They have proven an inconvenience only to those drivers who have shown disregard for the motor vehicle laws of the state.

Highway safety should be every driver's business in North Carolina. Unless drivers individually and collectively take a greater interest in making the state's highways safer for themselves and others, no program adopted by any state agency will bring about the degree of highway safety which is sought for North Carolina.

Strength for the Day

HANDLE WITH CARE

Yesterday in a doctor's office I saw a cardboard carton on which the words were printed in large letters: "Heart-testing Apparatus—Value $750.00—Handle with Care."

The human heart is a delicate mechanism when the term refers to the actual physical organ which pumps the blood through the veins or to the disposition, moods, and purposes which constitute our moral life. We speak of a man's heart, meaning not just the physical organ, but the moral and emotional disposition of his whole life.

Watch out how you treat the hearts that are round about you. Everything you say and do tests the life and patience and ideals of those with whom you come in contact. You may utter a word, and someone may take your bad advice and fall into evil. You may say a harsh word, and a wound is inflicted which will probably never heal, or if it does, will leave a dreadful scar.

There are probably no more despicable people in the world than those who play with another's affections. Some people flatter to gain their ends. Men very often allow women to fall in love with them, encourage them to do so, and then turn away from them with sneering laughs. Women are guilty of this devastating form of selfish evil also. They play fast and loose with the deepest of human affections, and something dies on the inside of their victim's life.

"Heart-testing Apparatus—Handle with Care."

That 'New' Defense Concept

WASHINGTON—Diplomatic and military considerations lie behind President Eisenhower's new bold program for bracing the Western world and Asian allies against a possible Russian offensive tomorrow or ten years hence. It represents a long-range, realistic buildup of anti-Communist forces rather than what Secretary Dulles calls an "agonizing reappraisal."

It marks White House recognition of the birth of the era of atomic warfare. Save for our present and anticipated atomic weapons, Eisenhower would not dare to withdraw two divisions from Korea or to curtail other overseas units. Nor would he and Sir Winston Churchill presume to warn France of a separate rearming of Germany, if the weak and indecisive politicians at Paris fail to ratify the European Army Treaty.

Both moves are calculated risks, based on circumstances beyond calculation. Both represent the outline of an alternative worldwide defense structure, to be built in any event, but to be hastened, if the French refuse to enlist out of fear of a remilitarized Germany.

Eisenhower still demands a European force to check a frontal Russian attack on the great German plains and swamps. As a military man, he knows there can be no successful resistance without German contingents. He advocates expansion of NATO through German adherence.

Otherwise, the rejected and sullen Germans might join the Reds. Then the defense—again—would have to stand West of the Rhine instead of on the Elbe River. There is also the chance that a rapidly re-equipping Germany will rearm on its own, and follow Hitler's mad path.

years been little utilized as a recreation area. During the days when Greenville had its professional baseball team, the stadium itself was used during the ball season; but none of the other facilities at the stadium ever have been utilized to any appreciable extent.

For the most part in recent years, the area has suffered from neglect and lack of use.

If farsighted planning is used in developing new recreation facilities on the property, it will bolster the city's recreation program, and add greatly to the utilization of the area. It will cost the city money, it is true; but if careful planning is used, it will be money well spent. It offers the potential of a good recreation area for the city.

At the same time, it seems to us, the recreation commission and the city officials should be careful in their planning for the area. It was only last spring when the commission decided the lighting from Guy Smith Stadium should be moved to the playground built on the Third Street School property which was being made into softball fields. The work was done at a cost of something over $2,000.

Now the recreation commission has proposed that the lights be moved from the Third Street school site back to the stadium site, which will mean another expenditure equally as large as the first one.

Before any more moving of facilities is done, it is obvious that careful planning should be carried out, and a definite, long range plan decided upon. It is obvious that such moving of facilities is unnecessarily costly to the city, the recreation commission and the taxpayers, and for that reason should be carefully guarded against.

THE STOCHASTICS
(Knoxville News-Sentinel)

In Washington, members of several economic societies, meeting jointly, have been indulging in thoughts about the future.

The informal consensus seems to run about the same as what we have been hearing from many businessmen, economic experts and politicians who take fliers into the conjunctural stratosphere.

The word these economic technicians use is "stochastic," which seems to refer to making an "educated guess."

The consensus predicts a "recession" for the country in 1954—not a "depression" nor yet the milder alteration in the economy which the experts call a "rolling adjustment," but still such a slight shake-down that it would bring the 1954 business level to about what it was in 1952.

We point out, then, with emphasis, two other items of news from this same convention of economists.

One is the opinion, expressed by several speakers, that while business, as a whole, may not be riding as high, wide and handsomely as it has been, the consumer very well may get a break in prices. Is that bad?

The other point, made by Under-secretary of Commerce Walter Williams and mentioned by others, is that a dip in the economy will require manufacturers to develop new and better products, use more advertising and sales promotion, reduce distribution costs and do a better job in marketing and distribution; the sellers will have to get off their hunkers. In other words, if we get more of a buyers' and do some selling. Is that bad?

As a careful commander, however, Eisenhower has alternative plans to NATO for a possible struggle. Indeed, he wants a broader and more dispersed defense line, even if France signs up. Its outlines have been revealed already in recent decisions outside the realm of European politics and diplomacy. It also promises to be less expensive in the long run.

The alternative structure will be an immense wall of atomic fire power extending from Iceland to Korea, hemming the Russian, Chinese and satellite empires. It will be fortified with atomic cannons and bombs, guided missiles and other strange devices, together with airplane fleets to haul them to danger points. It will be discharged from bases in Iceland, Britain, the Low Countries, France (?), Spain, Italy, Greece, Yugoslavia, Turkey, Iran, Japan, the Philippines, Formosa, Okinawa and Southern Korea. We now seek similar support in strategic Pakistan, thus closing an existing gap in the wall.

Eisenhower does not subscribe to the "heartland" idea, which holds that any great military power occupying and operating in Central Europe, Russia and sections of China—or any vast central area—is invulnerable to defeat. The destruction of Napoleon and Hitler, in the President's opinion, disproved that once popular theory.

In an atomic age, Ike believes that such a power can be crushed by military pressures applied at all points on its periphery. Moreover, Russian armies must break out from behind the Iron Curtain through many narrow passes and across wide rivers. Atomic bombs or cannon fire can destroy masses of troops and supplies huddled into these mountainous exits or converted before bridges. Both Pentagon and NATO advisers agree to this viewpoint on the basis of their studies.

It is believed that Malenkov's General Staff recognize this new threat. Indeed, Russian troops helped to demonstrate the falseness of the "heartland" conception by conquering the Little Corporal and Der Fuehrer. Their awareness, in Washington's belief, will deter them from aggression for at least ten years, thus giving time to build that alternative circumferential wall of atomic fire power.

Somebody Told Me

Keeping Up With The Past

Are you the type who cherishes memories of the past, or are you like me, inclined to let water run under the dam without many recollections?

Yesterday I was talking to Dave Moore of the J. A. Collins Company and he proved to me that he's one who keeps up with the past.

Dave read in the Reflector that the Honorable Grover A. Martin of Smithfield was presiding over the Superior Court here in Greenville. Dave and the Judge were classmates at the University of North Carolina in the Class of 1915. At several class reunions they have seen each other during the years.

Dave has an interesting program of the Sophomore Class banquet that was held March 14, 1913 where the Carolina Inn now stands. Most members of the class signed the program, but for some strange reason not the Judge. So yesterday he signed it. "Grover A. Martin, January 20, effective March 13, 1913."

On that program was the name of another Greenville citizen, Colonel Owen M. Marshall. The Colonel made the response to the address made at the banquet.

Also on the program was W. P. Fuller, whom Dave had highest praise for. "Fuller made a touch-down against the University of Virginia in 1915. Virginia beat us 20 to 7, but it was news for us to score on them that year. They had beat us badly several years running. But the next year we beat them 7-0."

Dave played baseball with Fuller. "My baseball," he says, "was to make the Carolina varsity but I didn't go back for the Junior year, when I might have made it. At the time I was up there I had a uniform that was given me and the strange thing about it was that it originally came from the College, then called East Carolina Teachers Training School.

"Back in those days," Dave continued, "East Carolina played Winterville high school in baseball. One year Winterville had a pitcher with a wooden leg and the College beat him with bunts."

The way Dave remembers all of those incidents from years ago is by enough to show that some people get a big kick out of keeping up with the past. Maybe in the process of looking forward it's also a good idea to look backward at the pleasant memories of time gone by.

And I thank Dave.

What Other Editors Are Thinking

RETIREMENT AGE
(The Chicago Tribune)

The Parker Pen Co. at Janesville, Wis., has junked the policy of automatic retirement at 65, adopting the sensible rule that employees may continue to work beyond that age if they wish and the company agrees. The president Bruce Jeffris, said that 65 was popularly accepted as an appropriate age for retirement, but that there was no sound reason for arbitrarily decreasing inactivity at the age or any other. Men vary in physical endurance and in mental resilience. Mr. Jeffris says that arbitrary retirement has proved harmful and costly to his firm, depriving it of the rich experience and maturity of judgment of many seasoned and valuable employees.

The trend toward employment beyond 65 has risen steadily. Thirty-three years ago only one man of 65 or over was employed for every eight below that age. Now the ratio is one to five, and by 1980 it is expected to be one to three. Improved health care has lengthened the average life span and men remain active and fit at ages which, in the past, would have consigned them to the easy chair. Americans have a peculiar pride and satisfaction in work, and to condemn many mature men to enforced idleness would quickly rob them of interest in life. We believe that enlightened management will recognize the advantages of retaining men who are willing and capable, and that retirement standards will become progressively more elastic.

Nevertheless, it is a wise provision that the decision to continue rests neither on management alone, nor on the employee alone, but requires mutual agreement. Some men fail to recognize the deterioration of powers or a developing inability to escape established ruts in thinking or performance. For these the pension and disability provisions are desirable. A change of scene and new interests may be the stimuli that will make later life more interesting than the familiar routine in office or plant.

Around-Capitol Square

By LYNN NISBET

JUDICIAL — Further activity in judiciary politics throughout the State is indicated by developments in the seventh judicial district embracing Wake and Franklin counties. Because the laws provide for many cases involving State agencies to be originated and tried in Wake county, of which Raleigh is the county seat as well as the State capital, this has been termed the "cathedral district" of North Carolina.

Some time ago William Y. Bickett announced he would retire as solicitor at end of his present term after 20 years on the job. Speculation immediately developed about a contest between Lester Chalmers, Wake county assistant solicitor, and J. Melville Broughton Jr., prosecutor in the Raleigh Municipal court. While they were toying with the idea and making up their minds, Bruce McDonald announced his candidacy.

The situation has been further complicated during the past few days by reports that Judge W.C. Harris, senior resident judge in the State's Superior Court system, would retire this spring. The term to which he was elected in 1950 has four years to run. If he does retire, either on age and tenure or on disability grounds, that will leave the judgeship in this district open. There are probably more than a dozen lawyers in Raleigh and Lenoir who would like to have the judgeship. To date there are two outstanding prospective candidates.

Retiring Solicitor Bickett has made no bones about his desire to go up to the bench. It has been said that he would have gratefully accepted one of the special judge appointments at the hands of Governor Umstead. It is equally well known that Judge William T. Hatch, who served four years as special judge under appointment of past Governor Kerr Scott, covets the elective resident judgeship.

If Judge Harris does retire before the primary there may be other candidates in the primary, but opinion is general that the real race will be between Bickett and Hatch.

APPOINTMENTS — Chief Justice William A. Devin has confirmed reports first published in this correspondence nearly a year ago that he will retire this spring. That imposes upon Governor Umstead responsibility for appointing a chief justice. Opinion among capitol square newspaper men and most lawyers contacted is that the Governor will elevate Associate Justice M.V. Barnhill to the chief justiceship and put Frank Taylor of Goldsboro on the Supreme Court. That would open up the fields of the chief justice and the associate justice for the primary.

If Judge Harris takes retirement status this spring, the Governor will have to appoint somebody in his place, subject to election next fall. Already there are two districts with appointive resident judges. Judge Joseph Parker in the third district has announced opposition on part of Frank Banzet of Warrenton. Judge Clifford Moore in the eighth district may have to make a run to keep his judgeship. In the fifth district Solicitor W.J. Bundy has announced his purpose to try for the judgeship now held by Judge Paul Fritzel of Snow Hill.

The whole state is interested in any Superior Court judicial race because Judges are voted upon state-wide, although nominated within their own districts. It is logical that more state-wide interest is manifested in the Supreme Court than in any district race, and more is manifested in the Raleigh district than in any of the other 20, because of the impact of State departmental cases on the Wake-Franklin district.

Business Today Furnishings Outlook

The American Furniture Mart's summary of the winter furniture market is a bit more optimistic than most other trade views. Some observers thought that ordering was light, price resistance high and retailers extremely cautious. The official review, however, concludes that the industry expects sales this year will be no more than 2 or 3 per cent below sales in 1953, which was an all-time peachy year.

The sole exception, the Mart observes, may be in television. TV faces a year of transition because of color, and 1954 may not be as good as 1953, which was not as good as 1952.

The winter market was pretty much excited because T.H. Robsjohn-Gibbins said that modern is dying. About 10 years ago, Robsjohn-Gibbins wrote a book, "Good-bye Mr. Chippendale," in which he said traditional furniture was on the skids. Thereafter, modern skyrocketed in popularity.

There are good reasons for believing that modern would have shot up even if Mr. Robsjohn-Gibbins hadn't written a book. One of them is that traditional furniture didn't go with ranch-type houses; another is that traditional overfilled the smaller and smaller rooms in apartments and mass-produced houses. But as soon as Mr. R-G's book came out, sales switched and now that he has another book coming, a lot of dealers are worried. (His new book, incidentally, will say that furniture created by great designers to match the personality of the user is the coming thing. Or perhaps that's too much of a capulated review.)

Despite worries, the Mart finds dealers are interested still in modern, especially in "warm, functional, colorful" designs. It is talking about new upholstered furniture, not TV commedieners, when it adds that "designs could be divided into types—the lean, long types and the massive, weighty, buxom types." Big changes are coming in the kitchen, the summary says: "Gone is the sterile look of the hospital and in its place is color in appliances or appliance trim—turquoise, pink and a range of feminine, easy colors that make this room a focal spot for many pleasant hours each day."

Unfinished furniture, the Mart declares, is still riding the do-it-yourself boom; retail sales last year were $75,000,000 and buying is still strong.

SHOPPERS, IN SURVEY CHILL NIGHT OPENINGS
Ninety-eight per cent of all shoppers have never been asked whether they want department stores open at night and only 3.7 per cent prefer to shop at night, according to a survey of 3,000 families in 187 trading areas by Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborne, Inc. Of those queried, 78.1 per cent said they would stop no more often if stores were open more evenings.

The survey also indicated that 9.8 per cent visit stores twice a week; 25.6 per cent once every two weeks; 21.7 per cent once a month and 7.1 per cent less frequently.

B.B.D.O. is open nights, but it's an advertising agency.

Notes By A Washington Visitor

By HAL BOYLE
WASHINGTON (AP)—Leaves from a Capital visitor's diary: The Republicans took power politically in the nation's Capital a year ago, but socially they haven't been able to knock the Democrats off the ramparts.

The Democrats refused to don sackcloth and ashes after their defeat. This has led to some grumbling that under the Eisenhower regime the minority party members, gay as jaybirds, still rule the social scene. Certainly it is true that few have retired to hermitages.

One disgruntled lady, who obviously regards Democrats as irresponsible grasshoppers and Republicans as earnest ants, wrote to a local newspaper: "Why aren't they (the Republicans) throwing more and better shindigs with gin, orchids, mink and caviar? They have taken over the serious side of running our government and are not so concerned over entertainment and the social whirl."

"Let the Democrats dominate the scene; that's one of the reasons they were relieved of power."

Another lady, perhaps more neutral in her politics, told me: "This should be one of the most active seasons socially since before the war. The biggest difference I have noticed under the present administration is that the parties are smaller and more formal."

But nobody in a responsible post foresees an early doom to that famous institution—the Washington cocktail party.

The recipe for one of these is: Take 50 assorted politicians, military leaders, diplomats and their wives; garnish well with bourbon, scotch, gin and sherry; season with assorted canapes. Let stand in one foot for two hours in crowded, smoke-filled living room while airing political views and exchanging inside information on government; host then opens front door, pours the whole group into the night, takes aspirin and goes to bed.

If all has gone well, the host later should receive at least five invitations to attend similar parties. The main thing is not to vary the recipe by introducing ribald old party games such as post-office or pin-the-tail-on-the-donkey.

The exodus of Democrats and the reduction in the number of federal employees here is solving the Washington housing shortage.

You no longer have to trade a landlord a key to Ft. Knox in order to get a key to an apartment.

One lady told me there were five vacancies in her building. Before he could even move into an apartment he had leased, a new-comer here was given a new lease by his landlord cutting his rent $13 a month.

The falling federal payroll has many businessmen worried. An organization of 100 small firms has started a campaign to lure new industries here in an attempt to make the Washington area less dependent on Uncle Sam's paychecks.

Furdies to be cleared are the lack of trained factory labor here and antiquated zoning laws. Naturally, many of the older residents don't want the Washington Monument to be mistaken for a smoke-stack.

Best anecdote I heard in Washington: An elderly public servant here retired after 40 years on the same government payroll.

But soon his wife complained she found him underfoot whenever she tried to do a household chore.

"I told my husband he should have rounded out a full 50 years before 'quitting,'" she confided to a neighbor. "But you know him—always so impetuous."

Dimes Helped Young Pitt Victim Of Polio

Six-year-old Truman Hadley Mills is healthy once again today after spending four months in the hospital in 1952 with polio. All Truman's expenses were paid by the March of Dimes. The youngster is now a first grade student in school. (Reflector photo by Alvin Taylor)

During the Summer of 1952 polio struck in a frame farm house about one mile from Black Jack. It's victim was 5-year-old Truman Hadley Mills, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stonewall Mills.

Truman was taken to the Central Carolina Convalescent Hospital in Greensboro during July of 1952 and he stayed there until November—over four months.

During that time over $2500 was spent by the polio foundation in nursing little Truman back to health according to his mother. The Mills family did not have to pay anything towards this.

Elizabeth City Minister Talks To Circle K Club On 'Five Heritages'

Five heritages in our lives are "not for sale," the Rev. William W. Finlator, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Elizabeth City, told members of the Circle K Club of East Carolina College at a meeting Tuesday night.

Mr. Finlator is a member of a visiting team of five North Carolinas prominent in religious and educational activities in the state who are now on the campus for the observance of Spiritual Emphasis Week. He is also a member of Kiwanis International, a civic group with which Circle K is affiliated.

Following the week's theme of "Our Moral and Spiritual Heritage" Mr. Finlator referred to Biblical times, when persons did not sell property inherited from their forefathers. "Today there are several heritages that we have which are not for sale," he said.

These heritages, he said, are health, a good name, freedom, marriage, and religion.

Seek Grounding Of Godfrey For Reckless Flying

NEW YORK (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Administration (CAA) has recommended suspension of Arthur Godfrey's pilot's license based on a charge of reckless flying.

Another CAA allegation, that the radio-TV star's medical clearance to fly was not in order, was withdrawn provisionally yesterday in statements here by the federal bureau and its regional administrator, Ora W. Young.

Earlier yesterday in Washington the CAA said Godfrey lacked a valid medical certificate, good for two years in the case of private pilots.

Later, in New York the CAA said Godfrey had a medical okay dated last Dec. 15 and another from October 1952.

To which Young added: "Apparently, there is nothing wrong with his medical qualifications. He had the certificates but had not properly reported them to Washington nor had he requested that a CAA certificate be issued to him."

It was reported that the red-haired celebrity forwarded the latest certificate to Washington yesterday.

The CAA has accused Godfrey of operating his DC3 twin-engine, 21-passenger plane "in a careless manner" while taking off last Jan. 7 from Teterboro, N. J., airport.

Godfrey, who admits he was displeased by takeoff instructions, says his plane was forced close to the control tower by a strong crosswind.

The CAA, which enforces regulations by the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB), has asked the board only to suspend Godfrey's license for "as long as necessary."

Maximum penalty for reckless flying is revocation of a pilot's license or a $1,000 fine.

Pirates Play Appalachian In NS Conference Contest

Buccaneers Seek Eighth Win Of Season Tonight In Memorial Gymnasium Against Mountaineers

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Sports Writer

East Carolina College's Pirates are not thinking of being bad hosts but they are still hoping that Appalachian's Mountaineers don't have a good time in Memorial Gym tonight. Coach Howard Porter's Pirates are still smarting from the 68-65 defeat handed them Monday night by Western Carolina. The defeat dropped the Pirates from the unbeaten ranks and spoiled their hopes for an undefeated season against North State Conference opposition.

Getting back on the winning bandwagon will be the number one idea in the minds of the Pirates tonight. Appalachian, too, has similar ideas because they were dumped 96-75 by Atlantic Christian last night in Wilson.

Coach Francis Hoover's Mountaineers, have been bolstered most of the season by center John Pyscha, their leading scorer. Pyscha is averaging almost 19 points per game despite the fact that he has been hampered considerably by a bad knee.

To combat the threat offered by Pyscha and the other Mountaineers Coach Porter is expected to start his regular line-up of Charlie Huffman and Paul Jones at forwards, Bobby Hodges at center, and Cecil Heath and J. C. Thomas at the guards.

Hodges is the number one scorer in the conference with an average of 26.4 points per game. Huffman is the number five man in the loop scoring with an average of 16.8 points per game.

Whether or not Heath will be able to operate at top efficiency is something that remains to be seen. He was cut above the left eye Monday night in Cullowhee and has five stitches in the wound. The cut is bandaged and the little playmaker may not be able to operate at top speed. If he doesn't come through in his usual manner, then Coach Porter is expected to move Jones to one of the guard posts and send Don Harris in at forward.

Tip-off time for the conference game will be at 8 o'clock. A large crowd is expected in Memorial Gym for the contest.

East Carolina now has a record of five victories and one defeat in conference play. They have an overall mark of seven wins in eight games.

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics have purchased the brother of southpaw pitcher Bobby Shantz from Ottawa of the International League. He's Wilmer Shantz, a catcher, who hit .227 in the IL last year while showing up as a good receiver with a strong arm.

The A's sold four players to their Ottawa farm club—pitcher Len Matarazzo, catcher Neil Watlington and infielders Hal Bevan and Charley Wilhelm.

Reflector Writer Is Resting Well

Reflector Sportswriter Wayne Bishop spent a restful night at Pitt Memorial Hospital where he is being treated for a head injury. Bishop slept well last night and was still asleep this morning when hospital officials first checked on him. He has been resting comfortably since being admitted to the hospital late Tuesday night after being found unconscious on the front walk of his home on Woodlawn Avenue.

The young writer was conscious all of yesterday but he was still unable to recognize members of his family and other close friends. He is suffering from a rather severe concussion caused by the fall from his front steps to the walk.

X-rays taken yesterday morning showed that Bishop does not have any fracture as was first feared. He will have to remain in the hospital, however, until he is able to snap out of his present condition. Physicians are hoping that he will be able to go home either today or tomorrow.

Phants Edge Jacket Team 70-66, Howell Scores 26

Greenies Take Fourth Conference Win Against No Defeats; Play Jacksonville Tomorrow Night

Greenville's Phantoms had to go all out in the final three minutes to take out a 70-66 win over Roanoke Rapids Yellow Jackets last night.

Leading 65-60 with three minutes remaining in the final period, the G-Men saw their lead vanish before their eyes as the Jackets scored six points to their one to deadlock the score at 66-66 with one minute to go in the game.

With forty seconds left Forward Bob Howell was fouled and made both of his charity tosses to send Greenville back in front, 68-66. A moment later Tiny Tommy Saeed connected on a field goal to wrap the game up for the Phants. The Phants got off to a slow start and trailed at the end of the first quarter by three points, 15-12. During the second period, however, the Phantom reserves gave the regulars a much needed rest and while the regulars were resting they pulled the score even 30-30. The score at the end of the first half was 34-30 in favor of the G-Men.

Fancy Forward Bob Howell led the scoring for both teams with 26 points. Hal Edwards was runner-up with 10. Guards George Sideris and Pat Sawyer led the floor play for the Farley Five plus contributing 9 and 8 points respectively. Forwards Edgar Moore and Tommy Saeed kept the Greenville cagers in the game during the first half, they each turned in their good consistent playing for the Phants.

Greenville had some difficulty in connecting while Roanoke Rapids hit on 50 percent of the field goal attempts. The final score was determined mainly by the number of points scored from the free throw line.

The next game for the Greenville squad will be played on the Phantoms' home court against Jacksonville tomorrow night at 8:00 o'clock.

N. C. State Still Looks For Coach

RALEIGH — A subcommittee searching for a new head football coach at North Carolina State College plans to confer with Sid Gillman, head coach of the University of Cincinnati.

Gillman, who has compiled an enviable record at Cincinnati, is said to be a top contender for the post to succeed Horace Hendrickson, who resigned last month. In the last three years Gillman's teams have won 27 games and lost only three.

Dean J. Bryant Kirkland, chairman of the State College Athletic Council subcommittee, said Gillman "had not applied" for the State post.

"We invited him to come down for a talk," Kirkland said. "No date has been set for the interview. It depends on when he can make arrangements to come here." He indicated it will be "within the next few days."

Wide Variety Of Food-Use In Eggs

By Mrs. Lillie B. Little
Asst. Home Demonstration Agent

When planning breakfast, lunch or dinner, if a trip to the ice box revealed only a carton of fresh eggs one should have a good start toward a delicious meal that would be satisfying and nutritious. They may be served as is, either fried, poached, shirred or baked, cooked in the shell scrambled or as an omelet. They may be used in the preparation of breads, cakes, desserts, beverages, salads, salad dressing, sandwiches, soups and cereals. They combine easily with cereal, cheese, fish, meat and vegetable dishes and thus enhance the health value of foods which include them.

January is egg month throughout America — and we as homemakers would do well to take time out to consider just what the egg has to offer. It contains all the amino acids necessary to growth, vigor and body maintenance. In addition, the egg contains indispensable minerals such as phosphorus, sodium, chlorine, iron and sulphur. It is a good source of vitamin A, and is second only to cod liver oil as a source of vitamin D. Nutrition studies have demonstrated that the daily addition of eggs to a diet adequate for all health needs will accelerate growth and improve health. It is no wonder then a good dietary plan recommends at least 3 or 4 eggs a week. And one a day if possible is better whether you are reducing, gaining or just maintaining good health.

The United States government has set standards of grading eggs that are based on the interior quality. For the finest flavor and appearance the two first grades — AA — Special and A-Extra are the most desirable. For economy the two lower grades, B — Standard and C-Grade may also be purchased for many cooking needs. It is the wise shopper who watches the seasonal price difference in the sizes.

Since fresh eggs not only look better but are more nutritious than cold storage eggs the consumer should insist on and demand fresh eggs. When buying eggs, the housewife should remember the cost per pound is to be considered when making price comparison with other protein foods. A dozen of large eggs will weigh 1½ pounds and if the price is 60 cents per dozen the cost is only 40 cents per pound. Nine eggs are equal in protein value to two quarts of milk, or about three-fourths pound of lean meat.

Since there are no sugars or starches, their energy value is not high. One egg furnishes about 70 calories. For this reason and because of their protective values, eggs are often recommended in reducing diets. Because of the compactness and thoroughness with which their food values are digested and completely absorbed and the low cost per pound, eggs are bargains in food value. Relatively few eggs were dried in this country until World War II presented its gigantic feeding problem. This concentrated form of egg helped to supply the military forces as well as the peoples of the allied nations with the dietary benefits of eggs using a minimum of shipping and storage space. However, for many years dried eggs have been used commercially in candy, ice cream, bakery products and other foods.

With increasing availability of frozen foods storage, the use of frozen eggs is steadily increasing. They can be stored several months with no deterioration. They need only to be thawed to be ready for use.

Only one basic principle applies to all kinds of egg cookery — cook at low temperatures. Whole eggs coagulate or cook to firmness when they reach 149 degrees to 158 degrees F. which is considerably below the boiling temperature. A properly cooked egg is delicate, tender and easily digested whether it is soft cooked, hard cooked, fried, poached, scrambled or baked. An egg cooked at too high a temperature will be rubbery and tough, less appetizing and slower to digest than one cooked at the proper temperature.

In addition to the variety of dishes in which eggs are used we find them also performing many functions in these dishes. Eggs may be used as leavening agents. Whole eggs can be whipped to increase their volume about 6 times, egg whites will increase 7 or 8 times, and egg yolks about twice. Once eggs are whipped to their maximum volume their power to expand is spent and further whipping only reduces the volume.

The egg yolk is one of the most efficient emulsifying agents. One egg yolk can emulsify from 1 to 1½ cups of oil or from 19 to 27 times its own weight. Eggs can be used as a thickening agent in gravies, soups, sauces, fillings and custards. One whole egg or two yolks will thicken 1 cup of milk and lightly beaten ones thicken better than those well beaten.

In meat loaves, cakes etc. eggs are thoroughly mixed with other ingredients. During the cooking the eggs become firm and help bind the mixture together and hold the desired shape, thus serving as a binding agent.

Beaten egg is slightly sticky so when croquettes, chops etc. are dipped in egg and then in crumbs, the egg holds crumbs tightly and keeps them in place during cooking and thus is an adhesive agent.

Eggs, hard-cooked and sliced, quartered, halved, chopped or sieved, whipped or baked are used by clever cooks to not only beautify but to add to the nutritious value and texture of a variety of dishes.

We can even use them as clarifying agents. A slightly beaten egg added to soup or coffee will make it sparkling and clear.

January — egg month is a good season to concentrate on serving eggs — for tasty egg dishes will put zest in mid-winter meals. Eggs are enjoyed universally and they can be prepared in hundreds of ways to satisfy individual and family tastes. Truer words were never spoken than in the January Egg Month slogan: "Eggs — Password to Good Eating."

Despite Budget Cuts, Red Ink Remains In U. S. Future

movement to shift to state and local governments and to private enterprise federal activities which can be more appropriately and more efficiently carried on in that way.

He said the budget is based on assumptions that business conditions in general, personal income and corporation profits would continue "at substantially the present high levels."

Previous year figures for receipts and expenditures were each about $60 billion dollars lower than figures heretofore used, due to bookkeeping change. Receipts and expenditures for the railroad retirement trust were eliminated from the receipt and expenditure totals. Since they are trust collections and expenditures, Eisenhower said, they should be kept apart from the government's own income and spending. This is the practice with social security money.

Here are the highlights of Eisenhower's tax program:

1. The big surprise was a proposal to give taxpayers an extra month to file their returns—up to April 15. A Treasury source said there was no thought of making this effective this spring.
2. Present law allows deductions for medical costs above 5 per cent of income and up to $1,250 for a single person or $5,000 for a family. Eisenhower proposed to lower the point at which deductions begin to 3 per cent of income and double the dollar limits.
3. Present law disqualifies a child as a dependent if he earns more than $600. Eisenhower proposed that this limit be abolished for children up to 18 years of age, or older if away at school, so long as the taxpayer still furnishes

4. Eisenhower proposed that widows or widowers who work away from home be allowed a new deduction for "actual costs of providing care for small children." Working mothers whose husbands are disabled would also get the deduction. Eisenhower mentioned no dollar amounts.
5. Eisenhower proposed that individuals receiving dividends be allowed to reduce their taxes this year by 5 per cent of their dividend income, 10 per cent next year and 15 per cent the third year. Also, this year the first $50 of income from dividends, would be excused from taxation, and in years after that, the first $100. The House Ways and Means Committee has already approved this.
6. The President proposed that farmers be allowed to deduct up to 25 per cent of their gross income for soil conservation expenses.

7. Corporation tax payments, under a speed-up plan, by next year will be paid entirely in the first six months of the year. Eisenhower proposed they be gradually worked back again to four equal installments in the four quarters of the year.
8. The corporation income tax rate of 52 per cent, scheduled to drop to 47 per cent in April, should be continued for a year, Eisenhower said. And excise (sales) tax rates scheduled to drop in April should be continued. This includes taxes on cigarette whiskey, wine, beer, sports goods, automobiles and gasoline. Eisenhower has made the same request twice previously.
9. Eisenhower also proposed to liberalize business depreciation allowances and deductions for research; let small corporations be taxed as partnerships, or some partnerships be taxed as corporations if that is more advantageous to them; simplify and define tax laws on corporate reorganizations and taxation of partnerships; and let business men offset losses against taxes paid on profits two years back instead of one.
10. In addition, the President called for a general rewriting and simplification of the vast, complex federal tax code. The House Ways and Means Committee is at work on that task.

Eisenhower's fiscal 1955 budget predicted that spending would decline $5,332,000,000 under the current year's level. Of this $3,860,000 or 72 per cent, was from national security programs. These programs include direct military costs, foreign military aid, atomic energy and stockpiling of strategic or shortage materials.

Direct military costs were cut by $3,975,000,000 from the $41,550,000,000 estimated for this year to $37,575,000,000 estimated for fiscal 1955. Other national security programs meanwhile, were budgeted at $7,285,000,000 for fiscal 1955, compared with $7,170,000,000 for fiscal 1954, a rise of 115 million dollars. This reflected a rise of 225 million for atomic energy and of 75 million for military aid and a decrease of 185 million for stockpiling.

The Army absorbed the brunt of the defense economizing. Its budget sank from $14,200,000,000 for this year to $10,190,000,000 next year—a cut of nearly 30 per cent. The Navy's spending budget shrank from $11,300,000,000 this year to $10,493,000,000 next year—a cut of 7 per cent.

The Air Force was the gainer. Its spending budget went up from $15,600,000,000 this year to an estimate of $16,209,000,000 for the year starting July 10. This was an increase of about 4 per cent.

Eisenhower predicted that agricultural price supports would cost $1,165,000,000 in fiscal 1955, some $239,000,000 less than estimated for this year, because, he said his agricultural program would halt excess production.

He proposed that foreign economic aid costs be cut next year to $1,028,000,000, compared with $1,555,000,000 this year, and that the aid be concentrated in the Orient, Africa and Latin America.

The President predicted that social security receipts would increase 100 million dollars in fiscal 1955 and that disbursements would go up 400 million.

Defense housing spending was cut from $1 billion this year to one million. Civil defense spending was cut from 74 million to 68 million. The President called for 48 million dollars for slum clearance and relocation of slum dwellers, compared with 38 million this year.

He proposed to spend 366 million dollars for flood control and multiple purpose dams next year compared with 416 million this year, but hiked TVA's budget to 212 million from this year's 195 million.

Urges Newsmen Drive Carefully

HOBBS, N. M. (AP) — Candidate Leroy Wise today urged New Mexico newsmen to be careful while driving to their winter press convention in Carlsbad over the weekend.

"Our state's newspapermen have been so much help to me in my campaign," said the candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, "that I don't want to take a chance of losing any of them through highway accidents."

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

THE brownstone house was silent and dark, save for one dim amber light burning in the downstairs hall, when Dale went up to her room that night. The drive home, with Don awkwardly trying to explain away something he didn't quite understand himself, had heightened her tensions. Once in her room, a compulsion to act or her resolve without delay drove her to start packing her bags.

She did not hear the door open, nor see Agatha Galbraith—pin-curl-ed and shiny-faced from her bed-time soap and water ablutions—until a satin slipper hit one of the bags with a disdainful kick.

"What's all this?" Aggie demanded, in her best top-sergeant voice. "What do you think you're up to?"

Dale looked up defiantly. "You're supposed to be asleep."

"I'd have to be stone-deaf to sleep through the racket in here!" "I'm sorry, Aggie."

"And you haven't answered my question. What does this, and she gave the leather bag another kick, "mean?"

"Stop thundering at me," Dale said wearily. "And stop pushing me around. Doesn't anyone give me credit for having a mind of my own? I know where I'm going this time, and why."

"And where, may I ask, is that?"

me once that you were the only person in the world he'd let boss him around."

"That," said Aggie dryly, "was before he fell in love with you."

She walked from the room without giving Dale a chance to reply.

There were only a few hours left for sleeping, and toward dawn Dale dreamed. In a globe of grayness she spun, and upon her closed eyelids whirling galaxies of brightness beat and throbbed. She was in a play, a cloud, a dream, and breath was gray mist, and the moon was faded, and dim star-dust pointed to the day's pale beginning. . . . Dale opened her eyes. Light streamed through the slats of the Venetian blinds, and topaz dust motes careened up and down, up and down in a frenzy of delight in the sun.

But a weight like sand, lingering from the dream, lay on her body. It was moments before she got out of bed and showered and dressed.

The taxi was outside, waiting to take her to the station, when a messenger boy arrived with a square, brown-paper-wrapped parcel. "For Mrs. Kelland Fraser," he said.

Dale saw the letterhead on the address label. Scott and Carruthers, Publishers. Kelly's book! She was not returning home alone, after all. Something of Kelly, touchable and real, was her companion. From the taxi window, she gave Agatha a last wave, then she sat back quietly against the upholstery, holding the bulky package very tightly in the curve of her two arms.

At the cottage, unpacking the book first of all Dale found it incredible that other voices had for a time drowned Kelly's out; that other features had overlaid his, dimming them. She thought the dead are so defenseless against the eager, pressuring cries of "Forget, forget!"

She unknotted a handkerchief which she was wearing ascoot fashion at the collar of her linen suit, and wiped a space clean on the mantel. There was a crackle of static electricity in the silk square of material. Dust rose in a flurry and settled gently. Five of the books she left undisturbed in the corrugated carton. The sixth she lifted and placed in the solid oak mantel, opening the stiff covers and spreading the crisp new pages so that the book stood alone.

The ceiling-high mirror over the mantel held the dim shadow of Kelly's image, its substance the photograph on Trumpet of Nooit's jacket cover. Dale snatched up the bright square of silk and polished an oblong of the mirror, and now the reflection was clear-cut, staring back at her gravely. A shadow of a shadow.

Dale wished regretfully that she had a smiling photograph to give Steven Carruthers, but this, taken as a farewell gift the year his father went abroad, was the only one she'd had. Kelly would have liked it. "I'd hate an eternal grin for publicity, darling!"

The artist who had designed the jacket had caught the quality of sunlight so purely that the two who stood in the open doorway were drenched in radiance and flowing warmth. Kelly would have liked that, too.

Dale pressed back sudden tears and turned away from the mirror. Nothing in the room had been touched since the day she had fled to the big house with her grief. Grandmother's housewifely soul had rebelled at locking the doors before the cottage had been given a thorough house cleaning, but Dale had said stubbornly, "Don't touch anything at all. I don't care if it's spic-and-span or not. Just lock the doors."

A brown turtle-necked sweater lay across a chair arm. Kelly's battered old thesaurus—At this rate, I'll wear out one a year!—was on a low table, his favorite meerschaum beside it. Dale's fingerprints were on the rounded pipe's bowl when she set it down, and she wiped smudges of dust absently off her hands as she walked toward the window.

The boxed-in room had a musty smell. But as she lifted her hands to open a window, Dale realized that the storm window hadn't been taken off. Grandmother had, indeed, followed her instructions and touched nothing! A frail gray cobweb hung like a miniature hammock between the outer and inner pane of glass; it broke as Dale flung the window up and pushed back the hinged flap over the three round slots in the outer frame. The sweet outer air surged in. Then she opened all the doors.

Last night, Grandmother had said, "If you are going to live in the cottage, it'll need a thorough cleaning. We'll get someone from the village to help us."

"No. I'll do it myself, Grandmother."

Grandy rooked to and fro in his creaky old chair, before he said mildly, "Let the girl set her own house in order, my dear."

Dale flung him an angry glance, aware of something enigmatic in his tone. But he had only stuffed a handful of tobacco into his pipe, tamped it down firmly and gone on watching the clouds creep silently over the moon across the lake.

Dale carried her bags in from the porch and started unpacking. A sizable and heterogeneous wardrobe she thought, strewing garments indifferently on the bed as they came out of the bag. The green plumed dress, her "badge of courage" at Agatha Galbraith's first dinner. The strapless evening gown and wrap and slippers she had worn for her first date with Don. The hat whose rakish feather had perked her up for the interview with Steven Carruthers. The tailored business suits for the bookstore, the cotton dress that Andrea had blithely said was, "Just perfect for a day in the country!"

movement to shift to state and local governments and to private enterprise federal activities which can be more appropriately and more efficiently carried on in that way.

He said the budget is based on assumptions that business conditions in general, personal income and corporation profits would continue "at substantially the present high levels."

Previous year figures for receipts and expenditures were each about $60 billion dollars lower than figures heretofore used, due to a bookkeeping change. Receipts and expenditures for the railroad retirement trust were eliminated from the receipt and expenditure totals. Since they are trust collections and expenditures, Eisenhower said, they should be kept apart from the government's own income and spending. This is the practice with social security money.

Here are the highlights of Eisenhower's tax program:

1. The big surprise was a proposal to give taxpayers an extra month to file their returns—up to April 15. A Treasury source said there was no thought of making this effective this spring.
2. Present law allows deductions for medical costs above 3 per cent of income and up to $1,250 for a single person or $5,000 for a family. Eisenhower proposed to lower the point at which deductions begin to 3 per cent of income and double the dollar limits.
3. Present law disqualifies a child as a dependent if he earns more than $600. Eisenhower proposed that this limit be abolished for children up to 18 years of age, or older if away at school, so long as the taxpayer still furnishes

4. Eisenhower proposed that widows or widowers who work away from home be allowed a new deduction for "actual costs of providing care for small children." Working mothers whose husbands are disabled would also get the deduction. Eisenhower mentioned no dollar amounts.
5. Eisenhower proposed that individuals receiving dividends be allowed to reduce their taxes this year by 5 per cent of their dividend income, 10 per cent next year and 15 per cent the third year. Also, this year the first $50 of income from dividends, would be excused from taxation, and in years after that, the first $100. The House Ways and Means Committee has already approved this.
6. The President proposed that farmers be allowed to deduct up to 25 per cent of their gross income for soil conservation expenses,

7. Corporation tax payments, under a speed-up plan, by next year will be paid entirely in the first six months of the year. Eisenhower proposed they be gradually worked back again to four equal installments in the four quarters of the year.
8. The corporation income tax rate of 52 per cent, scheduled to drop to 47 per cent in April, should be continued for a year, Eisenhower said. And excise (sales) tax rates scheduled to drop in April should be continued. This includes taxes on cigarettes, whiskey, wine, beer, sports goods, automobiles and gasoline. Eisenhower has made the same request twice previously.
9. Eisenhower also proposed to liberalize business depreciation allowances and deductions for research; let small corporations be taxed as partnerships, or some partnerships be taxed as corporations if that is more advantageous to them; simplify and define tax laws on corporate reorganizations and taxation of partnerships; and let business men offset losses against taxes paid on profits two years back instead of one.
10. In addition, the President called for a general rewriting and simplification of the vast, complex federal tax code. The House Ways and Means Committee is at work on that task.

Eisenhower's fiscal 1955 budget predicted that spending would decline $5,382,000,000 under the current year's level. Of this $3,860,000 or 72 per cent, was from national security programs. These programs include direct military costs, foreign military aid, atomic energy and stockpiling of strategic or shortage materials.

Direct military costs were cut by $2,975,000,000 from the $41,550,000,000 estimated for this year to $37,575,000,000 estimated for fiscal 1955. Other national security programs meanwhile, were budgeted at $7,285,000,000 for fiscal 1955, compared with $7,170,000,000 for fiscal 1954, a rise of 115 million dollars. This reflected a rise of 225 million for atomic energy and of 75 million for military aid and a decrease of 185 million for stockpiling.

The Army absorbed the brunt of the defense economizing. Its budget sank from $14,200,000,000 for this year to $10,198,000,000 next year—a cut of nearly 30 per cent. The Navy's spending budget shrank from $11,300,000,000 this year to $10,493,000,000 next year—a cut of 7 per cent.

The Air Force was the gainer. Its spending budget went up from $15,600,000,000 this year to an estimate of $16,209,000,000 for the year starting July 10. This was an increase of about 4 per cent.

Eisenhower predicted that agricultural price supports would cost $1,165,000,000 in fiscal 1955, some $239,000,000 less than estimated for this year, because, he said his agricultural program would halt excess production.

He proposed that foreign economic aid costs be cut next year to $1,028,000,000, compared with $1,555,000,000 this year, and that the aid be concentrated in the Orient, Africa and Latin America.

The President predicted that social security receipts would increase 100 million dollars in fiscal 1955 and that disbursements would go up 400 million.

Defense housing spending was cut from 31 million this year to one million. Civil defense spending was cut from 74 million to 68 million. The President called for 48 million dollars for slum clearance and relocation of slum dwellers, compared with 38 million this year.

He proposed to spend 366 million dollars for flood control and multiple purpose dams next year compared with 416 million this year, but hiked TVA's budget to 212 million from this year's 195 million.

Urges Newsmen Drive Carefully

HOBBS, N. M. (AP) — Candidate Leroy Wise today urged New Mexico newsmen to be careful while driving to their winter press convention in Carlsbad over the weekend.

"Our state's newspapermen have been so much help to me in my campaign," said the candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, "that I don't want to take a chance of losing any of them through highway accidents."

ELSIE MACK

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

THE brownstone house was silent and dark, save for one dim amber light burning in the downstairs hall, when Dale went up to her room that night. The drive home, with Don awkwardly trying to explain away something he didn't quite understand himself, had heightened her tensions. Once in her room, a compulsion to act or her resolve without delay drove her to start packing her bags. She did not hear the door open, nor see Agatha Galbraith—pin-curl-ed and shiny-faced from her bedtime soap and water ablutions—until a satin slipper hit one of the bags with a disdainful kick.

"What's all this?" Aggie demanded, in her best top-sergeant voice. "What do you think you're up to?"

Dale looked up defiantly. "You're supposed to be asleep."

"I'd have to be stone-deaf to sleep through the racket in here!" "I'm sorry, Aggie."

"And you haven't answered my question. What does this," and she gave the leather bag another kick, "mean?"

"Stop thundering at me," Dale said wearily. "And stop pushing me around. Doesn't anyone give me credit for having a mind of my own? I know where I'm going this time, and why."

"And where, may I ask, is that?"

"Home," Dale said.

me once that you were the only person in the world he'd let boss him around."

"That," said Aggie dryly, "was before he fell in love with you."

She walked from the room without giving Dale a chance to reply. There were only a few hours left for sleeping, and toward dawn Dale dreamed. In a globe of grayness she spun, and upon her closed eyelids whirling galaxies of brightness beat and throbbed. She was in a play, a cloud, a dream, and breath was gray mist, and the moon was faded, and dim star-disks pointed to the day's pale beginning.

Dale opened her eyes. Light streamed through the slats of the Venetian blinds, and topaz dust motes careened up and down, up and down in a frenzy of delight in the sun.

But a weight like sand, lingering from the dream, lay on her body. It was moments before she got out of bed and showered and dressed.

The taxi was outside, waiting to take her to the station, when a messenger boy arrived with a square, brown-paper-wrapped parcel. "For Mrs. Kelland Fraser," he said.

Dale saw the letterhead on the address label. Scott and Carruthers, Publishers, Kelly's book! She was not returning home alone, after all. Something of Kelly, touchable and real, was her companion. From the taxi window, she gave Agatha a last wave, then she sat back quietly against the upholstery, holding the bulky package very tightly in the curve of her two arms.

At the cottage, unpacking the book first of all Dale found it incredible that other voices had for a time drowned Kelly's out; that other features had overlaid his, dimming them. She thought the dead are so defenseless against the eager, pressuring cries of "Forget, forget!"

She unknotted a handkerchief which she was wearing ascot fashion at the collar of her linen suit, and wiped a space clean on the mantel. There was a crackle of static electricity in the silk square of material. Dust rose in a flurry and settled gently. Five of the books she left undisturbed in the corrugated carton. The sixth she lifted and placed in the solid oak mantel, opening the stiff covers and spreading the crisp new pages so that the book stood alone.

The ceiling-high mirror over the mantel held the dim shadow of Kelly's image, its substance the photograph on Trumpet of Noah's jacket cover. Dale snatched up the bright square of silk and polished an oblong of the mirror, and now the reflection was clear-cut, staring back at her gravely. A shadow of a shadow.

Dale wished regretfully that she'd had a smiling photograph to give Steven Carruthers, but this, taken as a farewell gift the year his father went abroad, was the only one she'd had. Kelly would have liked it. "I'd hate an eternal grin for publicity, darling!"

The artist who had designed the

the boxed-in room had a musty smell. But as she lifted her hands to open a window, Dale realized that the storm windows hadn't been taken off. Grandmother had, indeed, followed her instructions and touched nothing! A frail gray cobweb hung like a miniature hammock between the outer and inner pane of glass; it broke as Dale flung the window up and pushed back the hinged flap over the three round slots in the outer frame. The sweet outer air surged in. Then she opened all the doors.

Last night, Grandmother had said, "If you are going to live in the cottage, it'll need a thorough cleaning. We'll get someone from the village to help us."

"No. I'll do it myself, Grandmother."

Grandy rooked to and fro in his creaky old chair, before he said mildly, "Let the girl set her own house in order, my dear."

Dale flung him an angry glance, aware of something enigmatic in his tone. But he had only stuffed a handful of tobacco into his pipe, stamped it down firmly and gone on watching the clouds creep silently over the moon across the lake.

Dale carried her bags in from the porch and started unpacking. A sizable and heterogeneous wardrobe she thought, strewing garments indifferently on the bed as they came out of the bag. The green and blue-colored dress, her "badge of courage" at Agatha Galbraith's first dinner. The strapless evening gown and wrap and slippers she had worn for her first date with Don. The hat whose rakish feather had perked her up for the interview with Steven Carruthers. The tailored business suits for the bookstore, the cotton dress that Andrea had blithely said was, "Just perfect for a day in the country!"

Actress Swings At Style From France

By BOB THOMAS. HOLLYWOOD (AP) — American women should give the heave-ho to the mannish styles that France is trying to foist on them, Elizabeth Scott counseled today. "Oh, they're awful!" she exclaimed in her foggy voice. She had seen some pictures of the late Paris styles. The models had boyish haircuts and their outfits lacked the curves that are customary with most females.
