'Trouble' Faces Proposed Budget

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST WASHINGTON (AP) — Portions of President Eisenhower's unbalanced $5 1/2-billion-dollar spending budget for the next fiscal year today appeared to face some stiff bipartisan congressional trouble.

"Too much," said Chairman Taber (R-N.Y.) of the House Appropriations Committee. "Rather risky, commented House Democratic Leader Rayburn of Texas, referring to the cut in planned national security spending. Many Congressmen, however, praised the emphasis on air power and new weapons. Rayburn agreed it was proper to put emphasis on both.

Some Republicans and Democrats joined in commenting that the President's stand against cuts in corporation and excise tax rates was likely to face severe fire from a Congress anxious to cut taxes in a year when many members face re-election campaigns. There was some criticism of plans for continued heavy foreign aid spending and, from a few Democrats, of proposed cutbacks in Army and Navy manpower.

And there was bipartisan unhappiness over the fact that the budget projects a federal deficit through the 1955 fiscal year starting July 1. The reduced spending estimates came in for general praise, although there was some criticism of specific cuts.

The bulky document picturing the government's financial plans for the new year headed for the House Appropriations Committee, the first step toward congressional approval or revision. Taber who always has insisted "there never was a budget that couldn't be cut," said his committee ought to be able to trim at least three billion dollars from the $5 1/2 billion in new appropriations requested for the coming year.

That, Taber told newsmen might "get rid of the deficit," which the President estimated would be $2,928,000,000 for the year ending in mid-1955. Told that Budget Director Joseph M. Dodge, the President's chief fiscal aide had said such a cut would have to be made "at the expense of essential activities of the government," Taber replied: "The proof of the pudding is in the eating."

Sen. Douglas (D-Ill) meanwhile predicted a federal deficit of "at least five billion dollars" for the current fiscal year and chided the administration for an "altogether too optimistic" estimate. Eisenhower estimated a year-end deficit next June 30 of $3,300,000,000.

Douglas said the Treasury Department reported a deficit earlier this month of $9,822,000,000, and added: "They now say they are going to pull that figure down to $3,300,000,000 in the next 5 1/2 months."

"High corporation profits in 1953 are a major factor in reducing the size of the prospective deficit," Douglas said in an interview. "Nevertheless, this estimate is much too optimistic. It is simply incredible that they can cut the deficit down by 6 1/2-billion dollars in less than six months."

Douglas, a former economics professor also took issue with Eisenhower's statement that estimates of receipts for the next fiscal year "are based upon the continuation of business conditions, personal income and corporation profits at substantially the present high levels."

Douglas said the budget contains no hint of any administration program should the forecast prove wrong. "If there should be a serious drop in business conditions," he said, "not only will that increase the deficit at existing rates of taxation but it will raise the further question as to whether we should not give a stimulus to employment by increasing the personal exemption for income tax purposes and by some positive program of public work."

Republicans generally went along with the President's endorsement of a tax revision plan to remove alleged inequities at an eventual cost of about two billion dollars in revenue. Some Democrats claimed the plan favored corporations and big stockholders, and talked about broadening the reduction to include all taxpayers.

Word was that the administration would delay pressing the President's renewed request that the legal limit on the debt be boosted from the present $75 billion. The house last year voted to hike the ceiling 200 billion, but the Senate failed to act. There is still strong opposition there.

Secrecy Law Left To N.C. Assembly

RALEIGH (AP)—Whether the so-called secrecy law passed by the last Legislature should be repealed is a question for the General Assembly to decide, Gov. Umstead told newsmen yesterday. The governor was asked for his views at his regular Thursday afternoon news conference. The governor said: "The General Assembly passes its own rules. I assume the General Assembly, being a separate unit of government, will follow its own views."

Last week at a statewide freedom of information conference in Raleigh the governor asserted: "We all agree, of course, that public business should be conducted in the open. A citizen has the recognized and legitimate right to know the results of deliberations, decisions and official actions of those entrusted with the responsibility, duty and power of public office."

Meanwhile the governor's brother, State Rep. John W. Umstead of Orange, announced he is a candidate for re-election and stated one of his first legislative actions would be to join in introducing a measure repealing the secrecy law. The secrecy law permits legislative committees to hold closed sessions while considering the state's budget.

The governor told newsmen the president of Turkey and his wife plan to visit Raleigh and eastern North Carolina Feb. 18-19. The couple, President Celal Bayar and Mrs. Bayar, will be escorted by a special committee.

Their tentative schedule calls for them to visit Durham, where they will tour Duke University and a tobacco factory, Chapel Hill, and N. C. State College. The itinerary may also include a visit to Rocky Mount.

Escaped Convict Recaptured Here

An escaped convict from the Hertford County prison camp was recaptured here last night by Pitt County Deputy Sheriff Arthur Andrews.

The man was identified as John Taylor of Greenville who escaped yesterday from the Hertford camp. Taylor was sentenced to time on the roads from Greene County.

He was recaptured last night by the deputy sheriff at a house in the Meadowbrook section of the city.

Griffin on his hands and knees and using his braces, caught the girl and beat out the flames with his hands. The girl's condition is critical. (AP Wirephoto)

Cold, Ice, Snow Is Still Unabated

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Cold, icy and wet weather continued to plague wide areas in the eastern two-thirds of the country today.

The frigid cold that has numbed northern Midwest areas for nearly a week continued, but temperatures were not as low as yesterday. It was 21 degrees below zero in International Falls, Minn., compared to a bone chilling -41 yesterday in the city on the Minnesota-Canada border.

Snow pelted the area from northern Virginia and to New York state and the Weather Bureau forecast a fall of four to eight inches there today.

Snow and cold hit areas in the Southwest with a fall of seven inches of snow on the ground in Walnut Ridge, Arkansas. A similar amount was reported in Joplin, Mo. The snow belt extended over sections of eastern Oklahoma, southeastern Kansas, southern Missouri and northern Arkansas.

Rain and thunderstorms were general over the Lower Mississippi Valley eastward into Georgia and northward into Tennessee, the Carolinas and Virginia. There was a belt of freezing rain further in the Ohio Valley.

Snow or snow flurries continued in the northern Rockies and in the Great Lakes region, while there was more rain along the coastal areas of Washington, Oregon and northern California. Heaviest falls were along the Washington coast.

The cold air in the Mid-Continent sent temperatures from 10 to 20 below zero in the northern areas to near or slightly above zero in Kansas and to the 30s deep in southern Texas. The zero line also pushed southwest across northern New England ranging upward to the 20s in the Ohio Valley and generally in the mid 60s in the South Atlantic states. One of the cold spots in New England was Caribou, Maine, with 7 below.

Girl Pages For Congress Talked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The idea that some girls might be appointed pages for Congress produced this kind of reaction today:

From members: "Well . . ." From the present pages — all boys: "Wow!"

Margaret S. Alden, a 16-year-old high school sophomore of Rochester, N. Y., put lawmakers on the spot by asking for a page job, "although I know no girl has ever been appointed to such position."

Pages are the youngsters who scurry about on the floor of the House and Senate running errands. There are about 50 of them in the House.

At the page desk, Barrie Williams of Buffalo hazarded the opinion that "it sure would raise the morale of the page school" to have a girl around.

Miss Alden applied for a job in a letter to her congressman, Rep. Keating (R-N.Y.). She said she had attended the 1952 Republican convention in Chicago, and that "politics and government have been a major interest for several years."

Keating said he didn't know why girls wouldn't make just as good pages as boys — maybe even better.

Soldier Is Among Inchon Missing

INCHON, Korea (AP)—An American soldier is missing and presumed in the bone-chilling waters of Inchon harbor—where 29 Marines lost their lives yesterday.

The soldier was aboard a small landing craft carrying fuel oil from a ship in the outer harbor. The craft was later found on the mud flats, but helicopters that flew overhead found no sign of the soldier.

Pro-Communist POWs Freed But Refuse Leave Indian Stockade Stay In Prisoner Compound

PANMUNJOM, Saturday (AP) — The Korean War prisoners who stirred world wide controversy by their refusal to go home were turned loose today.

Twenty-one Americans, 1 Briton and 327 South Koreans who chose communism were abandoned by Indian guards in a flimsy neutral zone compound at 12:01 a. m. (10:01 a. m. Friday, EST).

The pro-Red POWs said they would stay until their food runs out, echoing the demand of the Communist command that Indian troops stay on.

The U. N. Command liberated as civilians the nearly 22,000 anti-Red captives returned to it Wednesday by the Indian Command—a course the Allies assert was required by the armistice.

When official freedom came, more than 14,000 Chinese anti-Red POWs already were aboard American ships en route to Chinese Nationalist Formosa. More than 7,500 anti-Communist North Koreans were in South Korean army reception centers. An Indian officer said the pro-Communist north camp was "absolutely quiet." There was no celebration among the Koreans. A ROK official said most were asleep.

Some of the freed prisoners had been in stockades almost from the start of the Korean War 3 1/2 years ago.

Allied insistence that no prisoners be forced to go home against their will was a major stumbling block in the prolonged armistice talks.

The pro-Red American British and South Korean POWs staged a sitdown strike in their compound. The purpose was to back the Communist position that they should be held until their fate is decided by a Korean peace conference. But it was considered in vain today.

Several key Democrats planned a floor fight in the almost evenly divided House for a plan to slice 2 1/2 billion dollars a year off personal income taxes relieving seven million taxpayers from any payment at all.

And some Republicans and Democrats alike predicted Congress would permit at least slight reductions in both corporation income and excise tax rates.

Eisenhower in his annual budget message yesterday, strongly endorsed a project for rewriting almost all the nation's tax laws. His proposals would reduce revenue two billion dollars annually when they reach full effect, but this would be done through many changes in various deductions, allowances and other technical points—not through major rate changes. Republicans generally applauded this program, but Rep. McCormack of Massachusetts, the assistant Democratic leader, accused the President of "political insincerity."

"Instead of appealing to the people to make sacrifices for greater national defense," McCormack said, "the President is appealing to their hopes for tax reductions."

"But apparently the only ones being considered in the President's program are corporations and large stockholders. If President Eisenhower thinks we can have tax reductions, the people generally should benefit."

Eisenhower said the program he proposed, in its first year, would relieve individuals of 685 million dollars in taxes and corporations of 630 million.

McCormack added his "present inclination" is not to vote to extend present rates on corporations and excises. Eisenhower urged Congress to cancel three billion dollars in cuts in these fields, now set automatically for April 1, and to prevent losses in revenue from other excises not involved in the April 1 changes.

Rep. Kean (R-N.J.) fourth-ranking Ways and Means Committee Republican and usually an administration supporter, predicted there would be "at least slight reductions in corporation income taxes and considerable reductions in some of the higher excises."

Rep. Jenkins (R-Ohio), second ranking GOP committee member, said in a separate interview, "I think we'll cut corporation taxes some and I think we'll cut excises."

Sen. George (D-Ga.), senior Democrat on the Senate Finance Committee and others have suggested a 50 per cent rate, which would reduce revenue by almost a billion dollars annually.

Robbers Enter 2 Rural Stores In Pitt Last Night

Thieves struck again in Pitt County last night, breaking into and robbing two general stores in rural sections of the county.

The Andrews and Whitehurst store was a victim of robbers last night for the second time in slightly more than two weeks, and for the third time in less than three months. The store is located on the Greenville-Bethel highway about five miles from Greenville.

Under the cover of darkness and rain, robbers also struck in Simpson, breaking into the H. H. Porter store there.

Investigating officers said cigarettes, rather than safes, apparently were the prime target of the thieves who broke into the stores last night. They reported about 25 cartons of cigarettes were taken from the Andrews and Whitehurst store, and that an estimated $75 worth of overall work pants were taken from the Porter store in Simpson.

Robbers broke into the side door of the Andrews and Whitehurst store, and broke into the front door of the Porter store. Officers said this morning they did not know whether there was any connection between the two robberies; or any connection between the robberies last night and the recent safe robberies which are still under investigation.

Members of the sheriff's department were continuing their investigation of the robberies today, and were also pushing their investigation of the robbery of the Grimesland ABC store early Thursday morning which netted thieves 30 cases of liquor.

DENVER (AP)—Louis E. Spohn, 69, argued in Municipal Court yesterday the light was green when he drove into the intersection.

Then Patrolman George Ebe played his trump—a photograph he had made at the time with colored film. The picture showed Spohn's car and also showed the light, bright red.

Judge Gerald McAuliffe decreed a $15 fine.

Godfrey Grins, Grounded Or Not

Radio and TV star Arthur Godfrey manages a big grin as he leaves broadcasting studios in New York despite the fact that Civil Aeronautics Administration has recommended that he be grounded as a reckless flier. CAA also said Godfrey's medical clearance to fly was not in order. Action was taken and the CAB was asked to suspend his license as long as necessary in punishment for the manner of his takeoff from Teterboro, N. J., airport on January 7. Godfrey is still using crutches as he convalesces from his joint surgery. (AP Wirephoto)

Eisenhower Plea Runs Into Strong Opposition Plan Tax Cut House Battle

By CHARLES F. BARRETT WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower's plea to Congress to hold the line against any further cuts in major tax rates smashed into strong opposition today.

Several key Democrats planned a floor fight in the almost evenly divided House for a plan to slice 2 1/2 billion dollars a year off personal income taxes relieving seven million taxpayers from any payment at all.

And some Republicans and Democrats alike predicted Congress would permit at least slight reductions in both corporation income and excise tax rates.

Other Big Four Representatives Due Later Today Sec. Dulles Arrives In Berlin

By TOM REEDY BERLIN (AP) — U. S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles flew into Berlin today for the Big Four foreign ministers conference, which opens Monday.

French Foreign Minister Bidault, coming by train, and British Secretary Eden, flying from London, were due later today. Usual Communist secrecy cloaked the movements of Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov but he was expected in East Berlin by train tomorrow.

Dulles arrived at Tempelhof Airport in President Eisenhower's plane Columbine. A large delegation of U. S., British and French officials greeted him. An American tank unit fired a 19-gun salute. Departing from Washington, Dulles had been cautious about the parity's prospects.

He told reporters: "If the Soviet leaders come to Berlin with a genuine desire to create conditions of peace, they will find us openminded and cooperative, and we can together do much good for Germany and Austria and indeed for Europe and the whole world."

But he queried: "Will Germany and indeed all Europe be unified in peace? Or will divisions be imposed which will make Europe again the breeder of war?"

There was no matching statement from Molotov. Arriving in Berlin, Dulles in a prepared statement said the Western Powers "hope to unite Germany by giving the German people as a whole the rights which our civilization treats as fundamental, including especially the right of a people by free elections to choose for themselves their own sovereign government."

From the conference sidelines, West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer was more optimistic than anyone else. He told the foreign affairs committee of the Bonn Parliament that there existed a real chance for unification of West and East Germany in the Berlin talks.

This was an about-face from the previous view in the West German capital, where most German officials have felt that nobody really wanted the parity and it was therefore doomed to failure.

It appeared the foreign ministers would wrangle about three basic questions:

1. Reunification of East and West Germany — and how to do it. 2. An independence treaty for Austria. 3. A further conference on world tensions — and whether Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists or Mao Tse-tung's Communists should represent the Far East in such a meeting.

Neither West nor East so far has shown any willingness to give ground on these issues.

NEW YORK —There was no cry of "Get a horse" or "Put a nickel in it" when the battered, homemade tank broke down and couldn't make it from the Bronx to lower Manhattan.

That same clattering, lurching contraption had crashed the Iron Curtain six months ago and carried a Czech family to freedom. So there was no bantering, only friendly concern over the plight of the five-ton monster.

An ungainly sight, yet. But consider how it was made: From stolen scraps of metal and a war-wrecked gun carrier. With its builder, 32-year-old Vaclav Uhlik, and Walter Hora, 25, another Czech escapee at the helm, the tank set out on its trip yesterday as part of the Crusade for Freedom campaign.

Just as the 15-mile trip was about to begin, the tank's radiator started to leak. That was fixed. Then the retractable wheels wouldn't lower because of a broken clutch. Since this meant the old battlewagon had to be run on its caterpillar tracks a special official okay had to be obtained before it could run that way along city streets. More delay.

Finally, with a motorcade escort of police, newsmen and photographers, the tank clipped off at a 10-mile-an-hour clip. It rumbled over a Harlem River bridge and reached 88th street before the engine quit.

Uhlik, who had chauffeured himself and seven fellow Czechs through a 40-mile cordon of Communist police and border guards, again went to work on it.

The ignition system was fouled and the carburetor began flooding. More work, more crowds, and plenty of friendly advice. A taxi-cab driver stopped to lend Uhlik some tools.

It was no go. 80 police got a tow car and pulled the tank to Times Square. There was no time left to get to its planned destination—City Hall—because it was nearly dark.

So the stouthearted vehicle hulks temporarily on the Great White Way, broken in mechanical spirit but radiating a pathetic heroism.

Embattled Twins Back In Jail After Trying Citizens Arrest

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The embattled Irish twins, George and Charles Finn, are back in jail today after another flamboyant brush with the federal government during which they handcuffed the United States attorney and threw officialdom into an uproar.

The "Flying Finns," former Air Force pilots, have been having legal trouble with the government for more than a year in connection with their claims to ownership of a $70,000 war surplus C46 transport plane.

The unpredictable 38-year-old twins yesterday handcuffed U. S. Atty. Laughlin E. Waters in an attempted "citizens arrest" as he came out of the Biltmore Hotel, where he had addressed the Los Angeles Bar Assn.

They accused him of "conspiracy against the rights of citizens and deprivation of rights under cover of the law." They said he had been giving them the "brushoff" and refused to discuss with them the government's seizure of the plane they purchased a year ago from the Bakersfield, Calif., school district which had used it for a mechanical training course.

Events that followed read like the script of a comic opera. "Before I knew what was happening they had snapped a handcuff on my right wrist," Waters said, George Finn then snapped the other handcuff to his own right wrist, while Charles called police.

James Lawrence demanded that the Finns release Waters. "We know our rights," the Finns answered. "We've been ignored long enough. We're starting to fight back now."

Police Chief William H. Parker shrugged: "This beats anything I ever saw. I don't know what it's all about."

"People can't go around arresting the U. S. attorney in our city," said Jack Irwin, acting mayor. The Finns and Waters, trailed by officials, reporters and photographers, went to the offices of Dist. Atty. S. Ernest Rohl and discussed the situation in detail. Waters went free, of course, and the twin brothers were taken before the U. S. commissioner and arraigned on a charge of assaulting a federal officer, then jailed in lieu of $10,000 felony bail.

The following correlative citation will be among selections read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"The spiritual sense of truth must be gained before Truth can be understood. This sense is assimilated only as we are honest, unselfish, loving, and meek. In the soil of an 'honest and good heart' the seed must be sown; else it beareth not much fruit, for the spurious element in human nature uproots it." (72: 3-8)

Miss Silvers Is Guest Speaker For Junior Woman's Club

The Junior Woman's Club held its regular meeting on Wednesday night, Jan. 20, at the Club House. Miss Marion Perry, chairman of the Youth Conservation Department, introduced Miss Margaret Silvers, Assistant Director of Recreation, Caswell Training School, Kinston, N. C. Miss Silvers gave a very interesting and informative talk about the school. She stated that there are about 1500 pupils, ranging in age from 6 to 78 years. Caswell Training School is a State institution for the mentally retarded, and each person is entered through the County Welfare Department's throughout North Carolina.

"The school has a staff of about 400," stated Miss Silvers. The pupils attend school, have their own Sunday School, learn crafts, dance, play ball, attend movies, and, according to Miss Silvers, a well planned and enjoyable program is provided. Miss Silvers seemed very enthusiastic about her work. She thanked the Junior Woman's Club throughout her talk for aiding in the support of their Recreation Department. A letter was read from Mr. Jesse Lamb, Recreation Director, thanking the club for the Christmas gifts that were sent to the school.

After a short business meeting, refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Carl Abee and Mrs. Bill Williams.

Betty Jane Bunch Is Complimented By Joint Hostesses

Miss Betty Jane Bunch, whose marriage to J. James Taylor Jr. will be an event of January 24, was entertained on Wednesday evening by Mrs. Arthur Crawford and Mrs. W. J. Lewis at the home of Mrs. Lewis. The home was decorated with white snapdragons, ivy and candles. The dining room table from which refreshments of lime punch, ham biscuits, cheese straws, and bridal cakes were served was covered with an imported lace cloth and centered with a bride and groom surrounded by ivy and candles in silver candelabra.

Upon the arrival of the honoree the hostesses presented her with a bridal corsage and a piece of crystal. Delightful games such as the bride's suit case were enjoyed by the guests. Each guest was asked to give the bride-elect a favorite recipe for her cookbook. Prizes were awarded to guests and Mabel Lewis was presented the door prize.

'Books and Stuff'

DR. ED. HIRSHBERG

Interesting to southern readers is the literary battle that has been waging in the last couple of issues of The Saturday Evening Post, in which a Southerner and a Yankee square off and give each other a good, sound cudgeling. We regret to have to say that the Southerner comes off second best, chiefly because the Northerner has the last word—except for a very brief rebuttal—and because he writes with a sledge-hammer instead of a pen.

The Southerner's story appears in the Post of January 9, and is called "They Don't Tell the Truth About the South!" The author is Herbert Ravenel Sass, a historian of Charleston, South Carolina. The main point of his complaint is that most of the histories of the United States written since the War Between the States have concentrated on the brave deeds of Northerners in exploring, settling, developing and conquering our country, and have almost completely neglected the part that Southerners have played. He documents his claim with several accounts of important things that Southerners have done, which the historians have failed to mention or simply have glossed over. For particular criticism he singles out Bernard De Voto's recent book, called "The Course of Empire," from which, he feels, the South is "excluded."

De Voto writes his reply to Sass's accusations in the January 16 issue of The Post, which he calls "That Southern Inferiority Complex!" and a very energetic and capable reply it is. We happen to have known Mr. De Voto personally, and can report that he is a tough hombre, both mentally and physically. He writes, among other things, "The Easy Chair" department of Harper's Magazine, where he appears nearly every month. His answer to Sass's article is not simply a defense of his "The Course of Empire," though he does mention that the "core" of the book is the last three chapters, which, oddly enough, revolve around the accomplishments of three Virginians, Thomas Jefferson, Meriwether Lewis and William Clark. Thus he may "exclude" Charleston, South Carolina, but he certainly doesn't exclude the South. There is much more of interest in De Voto's article, as there is in Sass's and they both are well worth reading.

We'd like to quote what we think is a pertinent passage from William T. Polk's recent book, "Southern Accent," which we mentioned last week. Perhaps it might go a little way in explaining why patriotic Southerners like Mr. Sass sometimes think the way they do. Discussing southern politics, Polk writes, "But from 1850 the South became engrossed in defending its 'peculiar institution,' slavery. It ceased thinking nationally; it ceased thinking sectionally; it ceased thinking creatively; it stopped thinking with its head and started thinking with its nerves." We are convinced that there is much that can be said in favor of the viewpoint expressed by Mr. Sass; on the other hand, we wonder whether he might have been thinking with his nerves a little too much. The main issue, it seems to us, is that we're all Americans, not that some of us are Northerners and some of us are Southerners. . . .

Items on the local scene: Speaking of magazine articles, we note that James A. Walker, art consultant for the Greenville city schools, had an interesting piece in the December issue of School Arts, called "Let's Scribble a Mural." . . . And we saw Dr. Rodney W. Everhart's article in the December issue of The Journal of Speech and Hearing Disorders, on "The Relationship Between Articulation and Other Developmental Factors in Children." Dr. Everhart is a new member of the faculty at East Carolina College, and is an expert in the field of Special Education. His article is a bit technical, and deals with the correlation between speech troubles and low intelligence in young children. The magazines containing the articles by both Mr. Walker and Dr. Everhart are available at the College Library. . . .

Next Sunday evening Dr. E.D. Johnson, Associate Librarian at the College, broadcasts another of his weekly book chats over Station WGTG. He's on from 9:00 to 9:15 P.M., and will talk about three books concerning the treaty-making powers of the President of the U.S., relating them to the current controversy in Congress over the proposed Bricker Amendment. . . .

Today's reviewer is John Gordon of the College Art Department, who incidentally is having a one-man show of his pictures at the University Art Gallery on the women's campus at Duke University during this month. He proves his versatility by writing a very readable review of a new book by a southern author, Robie Macaulay, who teaches English at W.C.U.N.C. We note that the book is an original paper-back, published at twenty-five cents by Signet Books, and probably available at your local drugstore. . . .

'HERE OUGHTA BE A LAW!

By FAGALY and SHORTEN

The Disguises of Love is probably one of the best short novels published since World War II. It is a first novel, yet the author's style seems mature, economical and extremely effective.

This is a story told by three voices. The story develops across the repeated interruptions of one voice upon another, each voice speaking independently in successive chapters. In each chapter the narrator gives us a self portrait in depth as we are allowed to see, through the uniquely tinted glass of his or her subjectivity, the unfolding of personalities and events.

The central action of the story is provided by the pathetic love affair between Howard Graeme, Professor of Psychology in a mid-western University, and one of his students, an extraordinarily sophisticated young woman, Frances Mitchell.

Howard and his wife, Helen, are mismatched personalities. Twenty years of marriage have left them isolated and unfulfilled. Their precocious 17 year old son, Gordon, is resentful of his parents' unhappiness and personal sterility and is withdrawn and secretive in his relationship with them. Their lives are merely tangential; Howard lives in his hermetic academic world until the advent of Frances, Helen is mainly preoccupied with social ambitions. Gordon reveals himself only to the literate among the townspeople and faculty members of the University.

Howard reveals himself, early in the novel, as such a fuddy-duddy that Frances' interest in him strains the reader's credibility. On the other hand, her fascination for him is easy to understand; she is young, she is pretty, she offers the escape Howard unconsciously craves and, most important of all, she is far more aggressive and tough-minded than Howard.

Howard is rescued out of himself and brought back to life by the strength of Frances' affection for him. Her discretion and self-confidence dispel his fears and his feelings of guilt. A room is rented and furnished on the outskirts of town. In the following months the lovers frantically devour every possible moment together, their inner loneliness dispelled in each other's arms.

Despite their precautions against discovery, a rumor involving Howard with an unidentified woman begins to circulate in the University community. Helen is informed by a trusted friend, Howard's positions at home and in the community becomes untenable. The lovers attempt to save themselves by flight but the circumstances of their failure to do so results in crushing consequences for both.

In the end some hope seems to be left that Howard, Helen and Gordon may be able to build a more satisfactory family relationship. The wounds and grievances of the past are cauterized in the searing and tragic moment of Howard and Frances' final separation, witnessed by both Helen and Gordon. The remaining question is whether Howard has the will to go on living. Helen, as the final chapters of the novel reveal, has grown in self-understanding and personal direct-ness through forced reassessment of herself and her marriage.

Rangers Helped To Quell Blazes

Pitt County Forest Ranger N.S. (Kid) Tyson reported that the Pitt County rangers and their equipment recently assisted Wilson county forest rangers in extinguishing a series of woods fires beyond the Pitt county line.

The Wilson county blaze, evidently started in five or six places, spread over an area of between 75 and 90 acres before being brought under control. Tyson said forest rangers from Rocky Mount assisted in controlling the woods fire. Authorities are continuing their investigation.

The Pitt county forest ranger said his department had not had a woods fire since Christmas, and that farmers and other rural residents are cooperating effectively with the forest rangers.

Tyson said the Pitt county forest rangers had bulldozed a six-foot lane through woods on two farms as forest fire protection for the owners. They cut paths through the Harris farm for J. D. Hies and the Joe Sutton farm near Bell Arthur. This lane, Tyson stated, will provide a place for the owners to burn brush without danger of the fire breaking into the woods.

The state forestry law provides that a landowner in the country must obtain a permit from a forest ranger to burn brush before 4 p. m. Those who plan to burn brush between 4 p. m. and midnight may do so without permits.

A special section of the state forestry law provides that persons planning to burn brush are required to notify their neighbors in advance for the mutual protection of all, Tyson stated.

'Worst Dressed' In U. S. Movie Capital

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Women's Editor

Some of the world's worst-dressed women are to be found among Hollywood stars, says Don Loper, designer of clothes, houses and movie sets and once an internationally known dancer.

"They go around in trousers and sweaters, or off-shoulder gowns," says this outspoken critic. "They haven't heard about the daytime dress."

There are, of course, exceptions, Loper hastens to add. Among these he lists Irene Dunne, Arlene Dahl, Claudette Colbert, Joan Crawford, Greer Garson, Lana Turner and Eleanor Parker. These stars, he concedes, always look like ladies, on or off the screen. Quite naturally, some are his customers.

In New York for a breather before journeying to London to open a men's and a women's branch of his California fashion salons, Loper was in a mood to get a few things off his chest.

"Here in the East nobody would think of going down town in a swim suit and shirt, but in Hollywood it's common practice. When the stars get out to the Coast they start going native in dress. "Take Hedy Lamarr, for instance. After being known as one of the most glamorous women in Vienna, as soon as she arrived in Hollywood she took to peasant blouses and dirndls."

Loper began his designing career creating costumes for his dancing partner, Maxine Barrat, during their appearance in various Broadway hit musicals. From there he went to Hollywood to dance with Ginger Rogers in "Lady in the Dark," after which he was given a five-way contract as dance director, costume designer, coiffure designer set designer and straight director. Then he opened his own salon.

Loper decries the current lack of glamor in the off-screen activities of Hollywood stars. He says:

"What made the movie business? Glamor, that's what. The public wants to see its favorite stars looking like stars on or off the screen. But everybody's so 'gingham' today that there's no glamor left. That's why we have no big new stars today. No glamor."

Loper feels that any woman who devotes a little planning to a wardrobe can be well-dressed, even on a budget. He advises:

"If you have only a limited amount to spend, stick to one color, preferably black. Thus you need only one set of accessories, that go with everything."

Didn't Approve Monkey's Art

LOS ANGELES (AP)—It was a hard test but Edward J. Currier passed with flying colors an examination to determine his fitness as municipal art commissioner.

City Councilman Harold Harby, a foe of modernistic and impressionistic art, says he showed Currier two pictures from a magazine and asked his opinion.

Currier said he considered them poor examples of art. That satisfied Harby.

The pictures, Harby admitted, were drawn by two monkeys.

Neither Economical Nor Indispensible

All the arguments of its most enthusiastic proponents do not make the proposed St. Lawrence Seaway an all-important factor in America's future.

The lack of such a seaway today, or yesterday, has reflected no such importance in the scheme of things as to make it immediately necessary.

Could it be that the prospect of spending another billion and a half dollars has set certain imaginations afire?

We find it hard to conceive of any responsible group of citizens faced with a national debt nearing $275 billions, and with a coastline of 7,000 miles . . . many of whose ports are on starvation rations . . .

Well Kept Secret On West Coast

People across the nation this week marveled at the well-kept secret of the kidnaping of a San Francisco businessman until he was rescued and his captors taken into custody.

No news of the kidnaping leaked out through the press or other news media, even though many newsmen in California knew of the happening. When Moskowitz was released and his captors were placed behind bars, newsmen rushed to get their papers on the street; but not before.

The secret was probably the best kept big news secret by the press since the days of World War II when all news censorship even from the battlefronts was on a voluntary basis.

The voluntary cloak which newsmen put about the news of the kidnaping from Saturday until the man was freed early Monday was doubtlessly a great factor in helping the law enforcement officers get the kidnapers and also their victim.

It goes to show, we think, that when the chips are down and an emergency exists where law enforcement may be hampered by publication of a particular item of news, reporters can keep a secret—for a reasonable length of time anyway.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
THERE ARE MORAL STANDARDS
An alleged authority on young people's problems in a discussion of certain of the grosser forms of love making asks the question as to how a young person—especially a girl—may know whether she and her date have gone too far. The advice given is that if a young person on awaking the following morning feels embarrassed about what went on the evening before, then they probably had gone too far; but if one awakens with a feeling of happiness and satisfaction, then what they did was probably all right.

It would be hard to imagine advice given to young people which is more monstrous and mistaken than that. For a Christian, the Bible is the Word or Message of God. It has a lot to say about lasciviousness, (anything which tends to arouse lewd or lustful emotions) and lasciviousness is wrong no matter how those who practice it feel about it afterwards. Do some of these leaders of youth mean to imply that there are no set standards of right and wrong? If so, they need to be taken in hand by indignant parents and wise teachers. Advice like this is morally menacing.

Let any young person in doubt about the evil of gross physical love-making read the following Bible passages and make up his mind or hers as to what is and what is not right: Ex. 20:14; Matt. 5:8; Matt. 5: 27-30; Mark 7:21; 2 Cor. 12:21; Gal. 5:19-21; Eph. 4:19; 1 Peter 2:11; 1 Peter 4:3-5.

National Whirligig

'Friendlier' View Toward Ike

By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON—Now that President Eisenhower has submitted almost all of his major program to Congress, Republican members facing re-election next fall feel far more friendly to the man in the White House. Despite differences over farm and tax matters, they believe that the health and social welfare benefits he promises will effect their return to Capitol Hill.

In order to give an additional ballot box boost to his proposals, the leaders on both sides have agreed to delay the effective date for inauguration of the welfare state's expansion until the eve of the November voting. By holding prolonged hearings and providing for liberal discussion on the floor, it will not be difficult to stall legislative passage.

The present strategy contemplates fixing October 1, the beginning of the third quarter, as the date for passing out politico-economic favors. Thus, only a month before the voters go to the polls, they will, according to this theory, be grateful to the GOP for increased social security payments, minimum wages, unemployment compensation and a partially government financed medical insurance system.

MAY INSIST ON EXCISE TAX CUTS — In addition to these vote getting grants, and despite President Eisenhower's opposition, both Republicans and Democrats will probably insist on some reduction of excise taxes when they expire a few months hence. They will also maintain farm support prices at their present levels, or only slightly below that figure. They will take no chance on losing the farm vote.

Recent polls have indicated that the Republicans would lose at least 40 house seats, if the election were held today, which would give the opposition a working majority in the lower chamber. They also suggest that a similar turnover in the Senate might be possible. In view of these warnings, there was no difficulty in obtaining general agreement to the plan for strategic delay.

SHARE DISAGREEMENT ON BUSINESS CONDITIONS—President Eisenhower's economic advisers and their collegiate colleagues disagree sharply and angrily over present and prospective business conditions. Ike's group foresees a moderate downturn—would undertake to create additional and artificial part-time seaports 2,000 miles inland.

The "part-time" aspect of using this supplementary shipping system is no joke, as anyone knows who has wintered near the Canadian border. There are months when inland water travel is impracticable.

Too, what of the railroads? Would they be able (or willing) to maintain their systems to the point where they could carry full cargo burden on a part-time basis? No matter how you look at it, the cost of such a standby transportation system would be extremely high.

Sufficient and adequate transportation to meet present standards of need are now available and are being utilized. Needless and expensive duplication does not fit in with announced intentions of economy standard-bearers.

The St. Lawrence Seaway is not now indispensable to the nation's well-being. Let the Congress proceed to the truly necessary items of business confronting Americans.

A Moment Of History To Be Remembered

History is made every day around the world, in every phase of life. Some of it seats itself in the memory of men, and an even smaller portion is set down in books. The vast majority is quickly forgotten.

This week history was made which will long be remembered and read.

The first atomic-powered warship was launched. The submarine, the Nautilus, was launched at Groton, Conn. It will be many months before the new undersea craft sets out on its first journey, but what it will do potentially to naval warfare and sea travel and transportation is sure to be a volume of history within itself.

Billions upon billions of dollars have been spent by men since the days of Alexander the Great on the research and developments which go into the construction of the Nautilus. Billions more have been spent on the development of the new atomic machine which will power the vessel. The number of man-hours of work and the number of lives which it has cost to bring the development of submarines to the stage it reaches with the launching of the Nautilus are immeasurable.

For a while at least, the Nautilus will reign as the queen of the sea, but in time she will become old fashioned, outmoded by future developments.

The launching of the Nautilus is truly another great milestone in the campaign of man to develop craft to use in the sea. Probably more important is its significance as a milestone in the quest of man to harness and put to controlled use atomic energy.

which they regard as healthy and corrective—and then a rebound. Associated with them in this belief are politicians generally and such industrialists as Henry Ford II.

The classical students maintain that the United States is heading for a serious and dangerous decline, and that the signs are unmistakable. They demand more immediate safeguards than the administration has erected. The principal spokesmen for this school are Senator Paul H. Douglas of Illinois, former professor of economics at the University of Chicago, and Walter Reuther, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

All these groups have a political rather than a definite bread-and-butter interest in the problem of depression or prosperity. If they turn out to be wrong, they will lose only their reputations or possibly their positions at Washington. The Republicans would lose Congress and Ike might be defeated in 1956, if they "miss the boat."

TYCOONS CANT AGREE ON OUTLOOK—But there are two organizations which cannot afford to be wrong, for they would lose their shirts. They are the nation's leading mail order houses—Sears, Roebuck Company and Montgomery Ward and Company. Their analysis is especially significant, since they have such large rural markets. But their conclusions offer no sure guide, for they differ more completely than the public and private economists.

Sewell Avery, Montgomery Ward head, has anticipated a depression for almost five years. He has cut property investment by about 18 per cent and inventories by 15 per cent. Sales fell about $70,000,000 in that period. But he has increased cash and government security holdings from 50 to 250 millions. He owes nothing to banks. He has kept liquid.

Sears, Roebuck has pursued an opposite course. Robert E. Wood has increased plant and equipment by almost 50 per cent, and inventories by one-third. Sales have gone up by more than $1 billion in the five years under study. Sears' holdings of cash and Federal bonds rose from $120,000,000 to $179,000,000. But on January 1, 1953, Sears owed $200,000,000 to the banks. Wood has expanded.

When two such tycoons disagree, what is the average man to do?

Somebody Told Me

Jury Duty Offers Education

The Pitt County Grand Jury is through until the next term of court, March 15th. Although it interferes with our routine of making a living, every member had to admit that he had thoroughly enjoyed the first session.

Serving on the Grand Jury is educational, to put it mildly. As you sit and hear cases you become aware of our ability to forgive our fellow man. For example, a woman testified in a case against her husband. He had been indicted for assault.

"I've decided," she told us, "not to prosecute."

"OK," we said, "but tell us what happened."

"Oh, he just got drunk and beat me up."

That very thing had happened

before on several occasions, but she didn't want to prosecute.

Another case proved man's ability to forgive. One man had filled another with buckshot; one witness said about 50. But after doing it he had agreed to pay his victim's hospital bill and immediately proceeded to take care of his family until he could work again. It's possible that there was no case there in the first place, but by the time that one got to court there definitely was not.

Highway Patrolmen testified in cases of driving drunk and speeding. In each case of driving drunk I was surprised at how drunk the drivers were, according to the patrolmen's testimonies. It's hard to conceive of a man having little enough judgment to drive a car when he's unable to keep it on the road. Patrolmen in every case told of the drivers running off the road several times or weaving so far to the left side of the road that they ran other motorists off the road.

What it boils down to is this: The defendant gets every possible break in our system. In other countries, you're guilty until proven innocent. Here, you've got every opportunity in the world to prove your side of the case.

And then, after you've proven guilty you usually get a light sentence. It almost is enough to convince you that we're too easy in America.

And I thank you.

What Other Editors Are Thinking

THERE IS AN EXCUSE FOR ERRORS, IT SEEMS (Columbus (Ga.) Ledger-Enquirer)
Newspaper editors sometimes wake up screaming from dreams of pied type and typographical errors. Many an editor and publisher has been verbally beaten—and sometimes actually, physically horsewhipped—because of those errors which inadvertently slip into the news columns.

The publication, The Inland Printer, recently had something to say on behalf of newspapers in this connection. It reported the case of the editor of a small town weekly who was severely criticized because of a typographical error appearing in his newspaper, who in the next issue published this rebuttal:

"Yes, we know there were some errors in last week's paper. We will further agree that there were some errors in the issue of the week before, but before bawling us out too unmercifully about it, we want to call your attention to these facts:

"In an ordinary newspaper column, there are about 10,000 letters, and there are seven possible wrong positions for each letter, making 70,000 chances to make errors and several million chances for transpositions.

"Did you know that in the sentence, 'To be or not to be,' by transpositions alone 2,729,022 errors can be made. Now aren't you sorry you got mad about that little mistake last week?"

That very thing had happened

McLendon's Views On Advertising Of North Carolina

By LYNN NISBET
IMPRESSIONS—Some days ago your reporter overheard a conversation in the hotel lobby, in which Major L.P. McLendon expressed emphatic opinions about the bad impression made upon visitors to North Carolina because of lack of attention to highway appearances at the State line. Other people have voiced similar ideas, but they lacked the prestige of the Greensboro attorney, who has long been a recognized leader in legal and political circles in North Carolina. Major McLendon graciously accepted the invitation to pass his thinking along to our readers, and he takes over here, on the subject of "Advertising North Carolina."

During recent years, we have become increasingly conscious of the value of the tourist business and of new industrial plants to our State. I believe it has been demonstrated that North Carolina has many appealing advantages to offer the tourist, as well as the business man who is looking for a place to operate and grow.

It seems to me we have long neglected one outstanding opportunity to advertise our State and its attractions for both tourists and business. I have particular reference to our failure to use our main inter-state highways to the best advantage.

To illustrate the point—take a look at Highway No. 29 at the North Carolina-Virginia line near Danville. To be sure, there is an ugly sign marking the State Line and giving some information about speed limits and that's all. The same is true on Highway No. 17 between Wilmington and Myrtle Beach. At both of these points, the landscape is unattractive and there is nothing to indicate that better things are ahead for the traveler.

My suggestion is that at such points on the main through highways, the State Highway & Public Works Commission acquire about five or ten acres of land and erect thereon a pretty colonial structure containing a commodious rest room with a large pictorial map of the State showing resorts, historical points, universities and colleges, and other points of interest. It should contain an office for the State Highway Patrol with telephone connections, radar, and other necessary equipment for quick communication to all parts of the state. The area should be

Worth Noting

KEY WEST'S ECONOMIC ISOLATIONISM CHALLENGED

Key West's economic isolationism is coming up for a court test.

The Florida town enacted an ordinance levying a $2,500 license fee on out-of-town stores making deliveries within the city limits, which is another way of prohibiting all but local merchants doing business in Key West.

Burdine's, famous Miami department store, has challenged the legality of the ordinance in Florida courts. One argument is that if one city keeps out-of-town merchants from doing business inside its limits, other cities will retaliate and soon retailing will be back to where it was in the time of the city-states of the Middle Ages.

280 COLLEGES TEACH INDUSTRIAL PURCHASING

A total of 280 schools of higher education teach industrial purchasing in some form, the National Association of Purchasing Agents announces after a survey. Of these, 138 schools give separate courses in industrial purchasing. The Illinois Institute of Technology, Chicago, gives a four-year course in the subject.

We do not vouch for the arithmetic used in the editor's report. But if the figure of 2,759,022 possible errors in one sentence is anywhere near being correct, then there were about 27 billion possibilities for errors in this article up to the period you find now.

We have no way of knowing in advance whether there will be typographical errors in this column. But by now the chances for them to occur have been increased by more than five million. Even if there are a few, we'll feel mighty good after considering that it was possible, through the period at the end of this sentence, for 27,827,066,000 errors to be made.

Business Today

Actors And Business

By ELMER ROESSNER
Because sales are a little harder to make, a lot of actors will have jobs this year. There is likely to be a large increase in the number of professionally performed shows at conventions, sales meetings and special events for consumers.

Allen Keith, former stage and TV actor turned business-show producer, estimates that business will spend $12,000,000 this year for live shows, double the amount spent in 1953.

Mixing entertainment with business is, of course, old. The first cave-man merchant of war clubs probably did a buck-and-wing to attract crowds when business was dull; the medicine man with his minstrel banjoist and Indian chief is the ancestor of the modern television show. And performances at sales meetings and conventions has been going on for years.

But a little more attention has been paid to it recently. The hiring of a few dancers and singers or a six-girl chorus to brighten up meetings has been overworked. Sales managers want professionally staged performances integrated with their sales messages.

During the last year many companies put on shows that, while they might not have made a hit on Broadway, wowed dealers in East St. Louis and conventioneers in Atlantic City. General Electric put a Broadway type show on in 13 cities to stir interest in industrial products and power distribution equipment. Serval spent $1,000,000 and put two companies on the road to introduce its new refrigerators. Each company, recruited on Broadway, included 10 dancers, 6 showgirls, 12 dramatic actors, 5 singers, 2 pages, a comedian, a narrator, 4 key musicians, 4 stagehands, a sound man, wardrobe mistress, projectionist, company manager, unit manager and assistant director. CBS-Columbia chartered a showboat to take its 1953 TV line and a show to dealers and consumers along the lower Mississippi. Many other companies hit the road with professional talent in plays and shows with double purposes: to attract attention and to dramatize selling points.

Many companies are in the business of putting on such shows; they will handle everything from writing a script with integrated sales points to booking places to show it. In addition to the Keith organization, the Music Corp. of America and the William Morris Agency, two of the largest talent agencies in the world, have departments for business shows, the latter selling through Cappel, MacDonald & Co. The Jim Handy Organization and several other companies are also active in the field.

Guess there is no business like business shows.

SALES EXECUTIVES AVERAGED $22,286 IN '53

The Sales Executives Club of New York polled its members and found that the average man made $22,286 last year. The poll also showed that the average was 46.4 years old, had a college or special business education and spent $728,802 of his firm's money last year.

Odd Problems In USS Nautilus

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—If you were fitting out a new submarine, what kind of pictures would you hang on the walls?

This was one of the problems faced by a commercial designing firm called in by the U.S. Navy to make the Nautilus, the world's first atom-powered submarine a comfortable underwater home to the sailors who man her.

"We thought pictures of peaceful country scenes would be more restful," said Walter P. Margulies, partner in the firm of Lippincott and Margulies. "But some Navy men figured pictures of famous fighting ships would be more inspiring."

"No final decision has been made."

Margulies previously had designed everything from motor cars to cocktail lounges, from vacuum cleaners to soup and beer can labels, and one of his firm's beer can labels won first prize in a national contest.

But he found his two-year job of making the new submarine more habitable one of the most challenging of his career. And the result would amaze the shade of John Paul Jones. It is a submarine's dream.

The Nautilus is able to stay submerged for two months and sail around the world in that time. But men in close quarters often get on each other's nerves, and fighting efficiency falls off with lowered morale.

"Our task was to use color and design to fight monotony, improve living conditions, and provide as much privacy and variety as was possible," said Margulies. Jesus and the Samaritans

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—John 4:1-42.

By Alfred J. Buescher

On His way from Judea to Galilee, Jesus and the disciples went through Samaria. Jesus rested at Jacob's well, while His companions went to the city to buy food. Jesus asked a woman at the well to give Him a drink.

Surprised that a Jew would ask a favor of a Samaritan, the woman questioned Jesus and He told her of the "living water" that He, the Christ, could give which would "be a well of water, springing up into everlasting life."

When the disciples returned they were surprised to see Jesus talking to the woman, but none questioned Him. The woman left her waterpot and hastened to the city to tell people that she had found the Messiah, the world's Saviour.

Many Samaritans believed on the Lord, saying to the woman, "Now we believe, not because of thy saying; for we have heard Him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour." MEMORY VERSE—John 4:42.

JESUS AND THE SAMARITANS

THEY BELIEVED BECAUSE THEY HAD HEARD HIM THEMSELVES

Scripture—John 4:1-42.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

THIS LESSON has to do with a conversation and the remarkable consequences thereof. What do people converse about these days? Many things, of course, much in these tense times we should be talking about worthwhile things, things that lift the spirit and give one faith to go on cheerfully and courageously, sure that no matter what it is God will be with us.

band, but the woman said she had no husband, and Jesus said: "Thou hast well said, I have no husband; for thou hast had five husbands; and he whom thou hast is not thy husband."

"Sir, I perceive that Thou art a prophet," the woman answered, awestruck, probably, that He knew her history.

Turning the subject away from her personal history, she said: "Our fathers worshipped in this mountain; and ye say, that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship."

Jesus' answer then was: "Woman, believe Me, the hour cometh when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet in Jerusalem, worship the Father. God is a Spirit; and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth."

"The woman saith unto Him, I know that Messiah cometh, which is called the Christ; when He is come, He will tell us all things." Jesus said: "I that speak unto thee am He."

The disciples came then, and they were surprised that Jesus was talking to this Samaritan woman, but they did not ask any questions. As for the woman, she left her waterpot and went into asked her for a drink of water. She was amazed because no Jew would ordinarily ask a favor of a Samaritan.

"How is it that thou, being a Jew, askedst drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria?" she asked. Jesus' answer must have surprised her even more, for He said, "If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give Me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of Him and He would have given thee living water."

"Sir, Thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep; from whence then hast Thou that living water?"

"Art Thou greater than our father Jacob, which gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his children, and his cattle?" "Whoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again; but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

Still not understanding that it was spiritual refreshment that Christ meant, the woman answered: "Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw." Tax Dodgers To Face Searching

LITTLE ROCK A.R. (AP)—Arkansans who buy from liquor stores across-the-state line in Missouri, Louisiana or Tennessee may face searches by State Troopers. State Beverage Department Director Bill Collins said he's had enough of folks dodging Arkansas taxes by buying in neighboring states.

"Much of it is being bought in case lots by what we call our best citizens," Collins said in announcing he is stationing agents at out of state loading points to radio ahead to other agents waiting at the state line to catch the tax dodgers.

Built Resistance To Malaria Drug

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP)—Malaria control experts are worried about the increasing resistance of malaria germs to the new drug, paludrine. In its report, the Malaria Advisory Board said resistance was first detected about the end of 1948 when a large number of cases failed to respond to treatment. By 1950 many more cases failed to respond and by 1952 resistance was reported all over Malaysia.

Leaf Allotments In Mail 'Soon'

James P. Meredith, secretary of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation office for Pitt County, said today that tobacco allotment notices will be mailed out to tobacco growers soon.

"Shortly after these allotment notices are mailed," he said, "anybody desiring to make a change because of the sale of part of their farm can come in after they get their allotment notices to have the division of the tobacco allotments made."

He emphasized that if such a change is desired the persons desiring the change should come in before May 1.

If a tobacco grower believes that a mistake has been made in his allotment, he has the right to appeal within 15 days after receipt of the notice, Meredith said.

"As a rule," he stated, "allotments will be practically the same as last year except for some adjustments."

Begins Practice Teaching Period

One Pitt County student is included in a list of students majoring in agricultural education in the School of Agriculture at North Carolina A. and T. College who began their student teaching January 15, according to an announcement by C.E. Dean, teacher-trainer. William R. Hardy of Winterville began the eight and a half week period of practice teaching during which he will teach young farmers and adult classes. He will also assist the supervising teachers with the NFA work, farmer's clubs and other community organizations.

Less Suicide In Wedded Couples

OMAHA (AP)—Married people in this area are the least likely to commit suicide. Widows, widowers and divorced persons head the list. Single persons are next.

A study by Florence Isenstat, sociology student at the University of Omaha shows more than half the 1,000 suicides in 22 years were recorded during the depression years, 1931 to 1938. Aged persons were the most likely to take their own lives. Most of the self-inflicted deaths were among those in the middle and upper-income brackets.

It must not have been the same team of East Carolina Pirates that took the floor last night against Appalachian as dropped a 68-55 decision to Western Carolina Monday night.

Whatever the case up at Cullowhee, the Bucs played an inspired brand of ball last night in marching to their convincing win over the Mountaineers.

But if it hadn't been for senior guard and captain O. D. Wallace the score doubtlessly would have been much larger. The 6'2" senior from Carthage put on one of the most outstanding displays of set shot shooting ever seen in Memorial Gym. Time and again when the Apps were in danger of falling too far behind Wallace came through with a long, straight-as-an-arrow set shot.

What made the performance all the more amazing was the manner in which Wallace shot. The ball seldom seemed to have a single degree of arch to it as it headed for the basket but the "swish" that invariably followed lent plenty of proof that Wallace knew what he was doing.

The Pirates had their scoring moments too. Bobby Hodges, who was averaging 26 points per contest, hit for 34 markers and continued his amazing free throw shooting. Hodges, who last year could be counted on to miss 75 percent of the time from the free throw line, now is making 'em at almost the same rate. Coach Howard Porter, assisted by two of his star players, forward Paul Jones and guard Cecil Heath, on the bench with injuries, surprised everyone by starting Bob Moye at guard. Moye however, turned in a very creditable game. Charlie Huffman played his usual outstanding contest both under the backboards and in the scoring department. After watching Huffman last night we'd almost want to say that his right and left hand hooks are as polished as anyone's in the state.

Freshman Don Harris too, turned in one of his best games of the year. Several times last night Harris turned in plays that had the fans muttering, "Shades of Sonny Russell." At times the likeness between Harris' play and that of the ex-East Carolina great is amazing.

Following the start of the second half Porter, who had been holding Heath to the bench due to a severe eye cut suffered in the Western Carolina game, sent the popular Pirate guard into the contest and Buc partisans let out with a regular war whoop.

The diminutive Wilmington junior didn't disappoint his fans either. Despite the still bandaged place over his left eye, Heath turned in his usual brilliant floor game and hit on several timely shots as well.

Perhaps the only outstanding shoddy play by a Pirate came from guard J. C. Thomas. The Raleigh soph spent the better part of the first half trying every conceivable shot but missed them all. On several occasions he chose to keep the ball and drive through the entire Mountaineer club rather than pass off to a teammate.

On the whole however, the Pirates turned in an outstanding game. It looks like therefore, that Western Carolina is in for a rough night come next Friday.

Heath Sparks Second Half Drive As Pirates Blast Appalachian; Hodges Contributes 34 Markers

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Sports Writer
East Carolina College's Pirates poured on the points in the last half last night to pull away from Appalachian's Mountaineers and win their sixth North State Conference game 91-66.

Center Bobby Hodges led the scoring for the Pirates with 34 points. The points ran his total for the year to 245 points in nine ball games. The 34 points last night represented Hodges' high for the year.

The Pirates went into the second half with only six points on Coach Francis Hoover's Mountaineers. Appalachian narrowed the margin to a pair of points several times in the early minutes of the third period before Pirate Coach Howard Porter sent Cecil Heath in for the first time. With Heath directing the play, the Bucs pulled into a commanding lead in the late minutes of the quarter and by the time the fourth quarter started, East Carolina had a 68-50 lead. They never were seriously threatened in the fourth quarter.

Little Heath, benched in the entire first half because of a rather severe cut over his left eye, had more than just a little bit to do with the East Carolina rally. He stepped up the pace of the Pirate attack and contributed 13 points in an outstanding personal show.

Charlie Huffman was second in the Pirate scoring, however, despite Heath's sensational play in the last half. The senior forward from Thomasville scored 16 points and teamed with Hodges in controlling the rebound play.

Appalachian stayed in the ball game in the first half mainly on the strength of some sensational outside shooting by guards O. D. Wallace and Martin Banner. Both guards scored 17 points, most of them on long push shots from well behind the foul circle.

Despite the outstanding shooting of Wallace and Banner, East Carolina never trailed in the game except in the early minutes. Appalachian started quickly but the Pirates caught up to tie the score 7-7 and then ran the score up to 12-7 before Appalachian started climbing again. The Pirates were never able to get more than eight points ahead in the first half, however.

About the only thing adverse about Heath's performance is that it would tend to minimize the performance of his sub, Bob Moye. Moye started the game, the first time he has done such in two years with the Pirates. Moye played a surprisingly steady ball game but the Pirates were never able to move as they did when Heath came into the contest.

Hodges got his points from all sorts of angles. He took some wild shots in the first half but he settled down considerably in the second half and though he didn't get as many points his performance was much smoother.

The victory pushed the Pirates well ahead of the field again in the North State Conference. The victory was the sixth in seven games and shoved them well ahead of Western Carolina who has a second-place record of four wins and one loss.

East Carolina's next game will be Saturday night at Guilford. After that, they'll take off for Catawba on Monday night and then return home next Wednesday night to meet High Point College.

No Change

No change has been reported in the condition of Wayne Bishop, Reflector sports writer who is a patient in Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Young Bishop is receiving treatment for head injuries suffered in a fall at his home Tuesday night. He has a rather severe concussion which has resulted in a loss of memory. He is fully conscious but still unable to recognize members of his family or other friends except those who have been to see him since he regained consciousness. He does not have any memory of incidents preceding the, Tuesday night fall.

Further x-rays yesterday showed that his condition is still the same. There is no fracture of the skull but the concussion condition has not lessened a great deal according to latest reports from physicians who are attending him. He did have a restful night again last night, however.

Wayne is a junior at Greenville High School and has been handling the high school athletic publicity for the Daily Reflector. He is also one of North Carolina's most outstanding high school mile runners.

Only members of the family and other close friends are permitted to visit Wayne. There has been no indication as to when he would be permitted to return to his home on Woodlawn Avenue.

Bethel Cagers Have Outstanding Record

At this stage of the basketball season the Bethel High School cagers have the most outstanding record in Pitt County. They have won 29 games while losing only three this year.

The boys team has won 15 out of 16 games this season and eight of them have been in the Pitt County Conference. The Indians have been voted the number one team by county coaches every week this season.

The girls, on the other hand, have won 14 games while dropping two. They too, have been voted the number one girls team several times this year. In county play only the Winterville girls have defeated them, that by three points. Their other losses were to Bear Grass by one point.

Before the boys at Bethel were beaten this year they won ten straight games. When they were defeated it was by Robersonville by a 59-44 score. Since that loss they have won five more games in a row.

Coach Walter Latham has three starters from last year's quint that lost to Stokes in the quarter finals of the Pitt County tournament. One of the two men who graduated was an All-Conference player who left quite a gap to be filled.

Michael House has been leading the Bethel scoring this season with a 14.8 average. He has scored 226 points. So far this season the Indians have averaged 56.5 points a game while holding the opposition to a 44.5 average per game.

Rounding out Coach Latham's first five are Larry Tetterton, a 6-3 rebounder and second highest scorer with a 7.8 per game average; B. B. Tetterton and Bill Latham at the guard slots; and Carolton Keel at the other forward slot prior to breaking his hand. Now Bryan Latham is starting instead of Keel.

Bill Latham seems to be the ball club's quarterback as he and B. B. Tetterton have been the ball handlers and feeders to the scoring leaders.

Building For Future
Although Bethel High School has an enrollment of only 52 boys there is quite a rebuilding program for the basketball team.

S. S. Dewar, Vocational-Agricultural teacher is also coaching a junior varsity quint that has won nine games and lost none.

The Bethel junior varsity has beaten Stokes three times, Chicod twice and holds single victories over Farmville, Jamesville, Robersonville, and Ayden.

The junior varsity is composed of mostly ninth grade boys including Willard White, Vance Bunting, Danny Martin, Charles Ward, Ramon

Latham, Garlan Briley, Joe Lassiter, Manly Badesaugh, Larry Anderson, Tommy Cooper, Gene Johnson and Ruel Whitehurst.

The prime need of the Bethel teams, as voiced by both Coach Latham and his players, is a modern health and physical education plant located on the high school campus. Their present gym, definitely not of the modern caliber, is located on the grade school campus.

Wynne Leading Girls
Mary Jo Wynne has been leading the Bethel girls this season. She has scored 404 points for a 25.3 average per game.

Carrie Ayers has been right along with Mary Jo as she has a 20 point per game average. Against Grifton earlier this season she scored 62 points in one game.

Coach William Berry lost only one first stringer from last year's squad that lost to Winterville in the semifinals.

With seven lettermen back Coach Berry has had little trouble building a winning team. Ann Riddick, a junior, and Edith Doughtie, a senior, has been leading the defensive play for the Bethel girls.

In posting their 14 wins in 16 games Bethel has scored as high as 118 points in a single game. They have won their last seven straight games.

Coach Berry has been pleased with the play of a sophomore, Jenny Whitehurst, who he says shows a great deal of promise. Mary Frances Whitehurst, a utility player, has helped the team greatly. She can play either forward or guard, whichever the coach chooses.

So far this year the Bethel girls have beaten Belvoir 51-41, Stokes 65-30, Oak City 68-52, Bear Grass 77-70, Jamesville 70-54, Grifton 118-70, Chicod 69-48, Ayden 64-43, Robersonville 78-67, Beaulieu 56-37, Farmville 42-37, Jamesville 52-42, Stokes 57-35, and Grifton 63-43. They have lost to Bear Grass 61-60 and to Winterville 64-61.

The boys so far this season have beaten Belvoir 57-55, Bear Grass 69-56, Stokes 40-36, Oak City 71-21, Bear Grass 57-40, Jamesville 69-42, Grifton 83-66, Chicod 82-51, Winterville 56-53, Ayden 50-48, Beaulieu 53-38, Farmville 37-35, Jamesville 39-32, Stokes 42-38, and Grifton 66-43. They have lost only to Robersonville 59-44.

Jacksonville Squad Here For Contest; Greenville Holds Top Position In Northeastern Conference

Plenty of fire works are expected in the Greenville High School gymnasium tonight when Greenville's Phantoms play host to Jacksonville's equally high-flying Cardinals.

Coach Bo Farley's Phants are rolling along in first place in the conference standings with a record of four victories in four games. Coach Lou Savini's Jacksonville squad has a record of three wins and one loss.

Greenville's latest victory came Wednesday night when they put on a last minute rally to defeat Roanoke Rapids 70-66. It was the first time the Phantoms have defeated the Yellow Jackets since the 1951-1952 season.

The Jacksonville team has rolled up victories over New Bern, Elizabeth City, and Roanoke Rapids. The loss was at the hands of the Kinston team, one of the powerhouses in the strong Northeastern Conference.

Just who will start tonight for the Phantoms is something that possibly won't be decided until game time. Farley hasn't been too pleased with the team performances since Christmas although some of the individual players have come through nicely.

Forward Bob Howell is expected to be at his usual post and center Harold Edwards is expected to start along with guard George Sideris. After that, it's anybody's guess as to who might start.

Howell has been one of the Phantoms' big guns all year long. His best performance of the year came Wednesday night when he pumped in 28 points against the Yellow Jackets to lead the Phantom victory. Edwards started slowly but has come around fast to move up in the scoring column and in rebounding as well. Sideris is the quarterback of the squad and the playmaker.

Senior Walter Perkins has been starting at the forward post opposite Howell but he may have to take a back seat to Edgar Moore tonight. Perkins started fast this year but he has been in a rather serious slump lately while Moore moved up to the forward post from one of the guard positions where he had been a starter.

Sideris is expected to team with either Pat Sawyer or Tommy Saleed at the guards. Sawyer has been hampered lately by a broken blood vessel in his arm but he played much of the Wednesday game and scored eight points plus turning in a good floor game. Saleed is a set-shot artist who has been used mostly as a spot player by the Phantoms.

Center Clark Noble and Bobby Conway and guard Dixie Hobgood figure to see considerable action for the Phantoms as reserves. Noble was especially valuable in pre-Christmas games but he has been forced out of action recently by Edwards' performances.

In a preliminary game scheduled for 6:30, Coach Bill Kittrell's Junior Phantoms will take on the Jacksonville Jayvees. The Junior G-men wrapped up their seventh win in a row Wednesday night in Roanoke Rapids. They have lost once this year.

their heads down, quit talking and waited tensely. Then the lookout reported disgustedly: "Aw, it's a gull!"

A little later, a hunter in a neighboring blind yelled: "Why don't you kill that crazy goose right in front of your blind?" So, one of the flabbergasted gunners jumped up and shot the snow goose. His two companions kept

The Bethel Indians, shown above, have the most impressive record of any Pitt County high school quint. They are unbeaten in eight county games and have won 15 out of 16 for the season. These Bethel girls have won 14 out of 16 games this year and seven out of eight in the Pitt Conference. Coach William Berry thinks his team is improving as the season progresses. Shown here, front row, left to right: Corrine Briley, Mary Frances Whitehurst, Mary Jo Wynne, Edith Doughtie, Anna Lou Manning. Second row, left to right: Ann Riddick, Carrie Ayers, Essie Whitehurst, Jenny Whitehurst, Shirley Anne Hardy, and Coach Berry. (Reflector photo by Bob Boyette)

Kansas College Has Good Cagers

By BEN OLAN
NEW YORK (AP)—This was the year they said the University of Wichita would have to make the big splash in the Missouri Valley Conference. And Wichita's cagers are doing just that.

True, last night's 102-96 whipping of little Fort Hays State didn't add much stature to Wichita's No. 11 ranking in the latest Associated Press poll. But, it unshook the threat the Shockers are making to the Oklahoma Aggies and St. Louis, the conference big dogs.

Up to this season, it was a case of the Aggies winning the conference crown most of the time and the Billikens the rest.

But boasting a 4-0 record in league play and an over-all 16-1 mark, the surprising Shockers are making a run for national recognition. A victory over St. Louis Saturday would put them right up there.

Last night's victory was Wichita's 14th straight. Its only loss came at the hands of Seattle Dec. 4 after having defeated the West Coast club the previous evening.

George Washington's 10th-ranked Colonials ran into unexpected trouble last night before finally subduing eight-times-beaten Virginia 73-71.

The Colonials, playing without star guard Elliott Karver, won their 12th game against one loss (to Maryland) on the contributions Talbert, non-playing captain of the losing U. S. Davis Cup team, fell before Bill Gilmour, the Australian junior champion, 6-3, 8-6, 6-1.

In other matches defending Champion Rosewall of Australia beat Reg Cawthorn, 6-2, 6-3, 6-1. Rex Hartwig, second seeded, whipped Michael Davis, of Wales, 7-5, 6-3, 6-4; Ian Ayre beat Doug Reid, 6-3, 6-2, 6-1; Mervyn Rose beat Kevin Meyer, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3, and John Bromwich beat Ross Sherriff, 6-2, 6-2.

Even Bevo Francis had his troubles. The much-heralded high scorer tallied 32 points as Rio Grande edged Findlay 74-71. But the big man relinquished high-scoring honors for a change. Ronnie Marquette, a Findlay guard, had 36.

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

DALE carried an armful of dresses and suits to the clothes closet, and pulled the door open. The row of hangers held other garments, from another life. Tailored shirts, slacks, the red velvet negligee. . . You look like a cardinal in that!

Dale kicked the door shut, feeling tensions mounting in her as memories swept over her.

She looked down at her armful of silks and woollens and cottons, and suddenly let everything drop to the floor. From a hanger she took a pair of gabardine slacks and a white silk shirt. Her fingers were not quite steady, buttoning the shirt down the front, zipping the slacks' side fastener. The dressing-table mirror was so dusty that she could not see herself in it, but she did not stop to dust it off. The suit she had just taken off was tossed on the floor with the other things. There was one way of discarding them finally and forever. Grandmother would wringe at the wickedness of wanton destruction, but Dale was in no mood to consider the needy poor or church missionary barrels.

She scooped up everything and went outside. Two more armfuls added the rest of the dresses and hats and lingerie to the pyramid on the lawn, and then, stooping, she touched a match to it. A flame like sudden sunlight rushed up, only to be lost in the brighter dazzle of reality. Dale stepped back a pace or two as the heat scorched her face. The smell of burning cloth was sharp and acrid, but she stood watching the curl of smoke, unwilling to move away until she was sure that nothing but ash was left.

Was it possible to consume four months of one's life in a bonfire? She glanced around and saw Grandy coming toward her along the path used so seldom, now that the raspberry canes had almost taken it over entirely. The old man stopped beside her, hands thrust into his gray flannel trouser pockets, his eyes fixed on the rolling smoke.

"What's this you're burning up?" he asked. "Bridges, or barriers?"

"Does it matter?"

"Maybe not," he agreed. "If you're burning your bridges behind you, there's nowhere else to go but forward, and that's good. If it's barriers you're burning away—that means a forward movement, too, doesn't it?"

"No," Dale said. "I'm going back, Grandy." Almost desperately, she begged, "I know your prediction for wise sayings, but just let me alone, will you, please?"

He took out his pipe, but he did not light it. He cupped the smooth bowl in his palm and she saw the whiteness of his knuckles. "What happened to you in the city, Dale? What sent you running back here?"

"I'm safe here, Grandy," she said. "That's all."

"Your rock," he said slowly. He kicked a pebble and sent it flying across the grass. "Your island, Dale, answer me this. Who lives it safely, anywhere?"

She pressed her feet hard into the resilient grass and shoved her hands to the very bottom of her slacks pockets. "I can try!"

He shook his head at her. "There are no islands a ny more."

"You quoted Browning to me, too!"

He pinched a fold of her silk shirt between his thumb and forefinger. "It's gone yellow, hanging in that closet," he said. Then, with some secret knowledge of her in his eyes and voice "When are you going to realize that it's a long time since Kelly died?"

"I know exactly how long a time it was," she said. "I know every endless day and hour of it. Who better?"

The old man sighed. "You'd better pour a bucket of water on this dead bonfire of yours. If a wind comes up, the sparks'll start flying. You don't want to burn your house

Her defiance dropped from her. "Don't worry about me," she said, laying her hand for a moment on his arm. "I'll be all right, now that I've come home."

She went back into the house. Only a few things remained now in her bags, among them—still in its wax paper wrapping—Grandmother's fruitcake. On only one occasion had Dale cut it; on that June night, for Lora Thornton. She thought of Lora, who had been her own judge and jury and executioner. No islands? Grandy had forgotten that one. Or had he known that she Dale, would never seek the far and final retreat of Lora's island?

Dale stood on a chair and put the square of fruitcake on a top shelf of the kitchen cupboard. One of Grandmother's favorite reminiscences was the one about her mother, Dale's great-grandmother, who had kept the top layer of her wedding cake for her silver anniversary. "Didn't it," Dale asked her once "go moldy?" And Grandmother replied proudly, "No indeed. Made right and kept right, fruitcake'll last a lifetime."

The shelf paper was yellowed, and brittle as thin glass. I'll put on fresh papers, Dale decided. I'll scrub and polish from attic to cellar, until the whole house shines the way it did when we lived here. Buoyancy at the prospect of physical work lightened her heart as she climbed down off the chair. She was about to close the cupboard when she saw the slip of paper protruding from the blue Wedgewood pitcher.

Only one person in the world could have put it there. Only one person in Dale's life had written messages for her and stuck them whimsically into the toes of shoes, in dresser drawers, in mirror frames, under the clock. To remind you, if I forget to say I love you. For Kelly had often lived in a world apart. During his most intensive writing, Dale realized that for days on end she was less real to Kelly than the people he created and shaped and controlled. It had never occurred to her to be jealous of them, or resentful of his work. All writers should have sensible wives like you!

She held his note with both hands against her. Even before she unfolded and read it, it had banished the present and plunged her deeply and passionately into the past.

Kelly was no artist, but he had drawn a flower resembling a half-open tulip, its pistils tiny hearts. And he had written: I wear you on my heart.

Some men could say things like that without sounding sickly sentimental. . . She stared at the words until tears swam in her eyes, blurring them. Finally, she buttoned the note in her breast pocket and walked over to the window.

The concrete L of the dock was a sun-white protrusion into the blueness of water bluer than the sky. A green tendril of the rambler rose swayed gently against the windowpane. Near the buoy a solitary fisherman sat in a rowboat. Farther out, plummy smoke rose from the funnels of the twice-a-week lake steamer, carrying its summer's end cargo of vacationists.

A carload of young people rode out on the dock, and the morning's stillness was suddenly shattered by their shouts and squeals as they raced about in a violent game of tag and then plunged single file into the water, slashing it to foamy whiteness.

Dale's hand reached up to her blouse pocket. Kelly, where are you? Help me out of this! I belong out there on the dock with those blithe, ardent youngsters not here in the shadows. Where, in all this grayness, are you?

She found the second note when she was brushing her teeth after the lunch she had almost forgotten to eat. It was rolled around her toothbrush glass and fastened with an elastic band, and at first—using the clean glass she had carried into the bathroom—she did not see it. Then, spluttering mouthwash in the delight of her discovery, she slid the elastic band off. The message said only, Clean and sweet as a summer sky! Sleep well, my lovely. Evidently he had intended her to discover this one at bedtime. Dale buttoned it carefully into her pocket with the other one, knowing now that Kelly had left the notes for her to read while he was in New York, seeing the publishers.

On the following day, while she was taking down the living-room draperies Dale came on the third note under the little ornate Dulcinea. Die Jahre kommen und gehen, he had written. Dale crossed eagerly to the bookcase and took down Untermyer's translation of Heinrich Heine. Kelly had ticked off the first stanza of the poem with a pencil.

"The years keep coming and going
 Men will arise and depart;
 Only one thing is immortal;
 The love that is in my heart."

Tears stung her eyelids. Had Kelly known death had awaited him in that November blizzard, he could have left her no more enduring comfort than this. "I have found you, Kelly," she whispered. "I shall never lose you again."

Peace Preferable To Breakfast Struggle

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, M.D.
 AP Newsfeatures

Every child does not have to have hot cereal and bacon and eggs for breakfast.

The human race is divided into the bacon-and-eggs-for-breakfast and the coffee-and-toast-for-breakfast varieties.

This is just as true of children as of grown-ups. Some children are just not hungry the first thing in the morning. If you try to force hot cereal down them you are going to have trouble. If a child eats his other meals well, I would certainly let him off with a glass of fruit juice for breakfast if that's all he wants.

There is so much talk about the necessity of getting a good breakfast into children that many a youngster goes off to school a nervous wreck after this daily breakfast storm.

I am not denying the value of a good breakfast. Other things being equal, it is of course good physiology to start the day with an adequate supply of fuel under the belt. It is only when other things are NOT equal that skipping the breakfast seems the best thing to do.

Just consider the case of Mary Lou. Mary Lou is 7 years old. She is a slender, jumpy little girl. Mary Lou dawdles over her dressing. Almost every morning mother rushes into her room at 5 minutes to 8, yanks on the rest of her clothes against protests, combs her hair in a great hurry, often pulling at the snarls, and almost pushes the child to the breakfast table.

Pretty often Mary Lou is crying by the time she gets there. Daddy is already eating. Mother puts a big bowl of hot cereal in front of Mary Lou. She whines she doesn't want it. Daddy looks over his newspaper. "Eat that cereal, Mary Lou," he demands and goes back to his paper.

The child whimpers, stirs the cereal with her spoon, and takes one bite—it's sickening—she can hardly swallow it.

"Hurry up, Mary Lou," chides mother.

Daddy puts his paper down. "Now young lady, eat," and he puts a spoonful in her mouth. The child gulps and swallows and Daddy spoons in the whole bowlful.

Mary Lou is stuffed and uncomfortable and unhappy.

She is packed off to school. No wonder there are school problems. Everyone will agree this is not a good start for the day. What is the answer? Something needs to be

Husband Wrong A Second Time

DENVER (U) — A Polish immigrant called at the Internal Revenue Service office here yesterday for advice on filing her income tax.

An agent labored over the return with the woman, then informed her she owed Uncle Sam $4.

"But my husband figured it all out last night," the woman pleasantly objected. "and the way he had it, you owe us $55."

So the agent reworked the form. He still came up with uncle lacking $4. Without further ado, the woman paid, explaining with a smile:

"That's all right. My husband was wrong last year too."

your children have as much of both as possible.

Camera News

REALISM can be achieved by shooting in the work space of a waist-high model train layout with the camera nearer the ground level. Crop the finished picture above the white line for final effective presentation.

TRAIN TRICK. To bring out intricate details in any of your favorite models, hold a magnifying glass in front of it. Place light at an angle to avoid reflected light glare in glass.

By IRVING DESFOR

AP Newsfeatures
There are more model railroad fans this year than last year — which anyone still recovering from the recent Christmas season should know. We can safely predict, then, that there will be an upsurge of model train pictures taken in the near future. How can a camera fan, with a new photogenic toy in the house, resist taking pictures of it? Or how can the rabid, long-time model railroader resist learning enough about photography to shoot pictures of his hobby? Good composition, dramatic lighting, realistic subject matter and a sense of home achievement are all possible through successful pictures of model railroad setups.

Novices and experts alike will find technical help and information in most aspects of the hobby in Bantam Books' newly revised and recently reissued 50 cent manual, "Model Railroading". One chapter is devoted to photographing model trains. Here are a few hints:

Bear in mind proportional relationship. For instance, in an 0 gauge model the scale is 1-4 inch to the foot. If you hold your camera five feet above the model it is like making an aerial shot from a height of 240 feet. On the other hand, a six-foot man would only be 1 1/2 inches tall, model-size. Thus, to achieve the realism of a normal eye-level view of trains, the camera lens center would have to be 1 1/2 inches from the ground level of the trains. Most model layouts are built waist high off the floor.

Realism in lighting would have to duplicate the sun's position for daylight effects. For a bright day effect, with flash or flood lights, one lamp would be directed at the train set-up; another would be "bounced" from the walls or ceiling to simulate the diffuse light normally coming from all over the sky. "Bounce" light alone would give the impression of an overcast day.

Shooting a mirror image of your trains may sometimes be an advantage in tight corners or to gain a little depth of field. The focusing distance is equal to the distance from the lens to the mirror plus the distance from the mirror to the subject. The extra footage makes for sharper over-all pictures.

Here's how the illusion of a picture shot from an airplane can be done. Get high above the subject with a light shining directly on the train but slightly beneath you. Then suspend a model airplane below the light but over the train. In this set-up, you will not create a shadow but the plane's shadow can fall across the train or nearby terrain in a realistic fashion.

Dramatic night lighting is accomplished by putting the lights inside tunnels or stations and shooting time exposures. Sometimes you can change a daylight shot to a night scene by the way you expose your printing paper in the enlarging process. Expose the focal point of your subject matter normally; then shield this area while you over-expose the rest of the picture. The result can make a more interesting night scene with the soft shadows of moonlight.

What's new? A move to honor America's photographic inventor, George Eastman, is gathering momentum. The hundredth anniversary of his birth in Waterville, N.Y., July 12, 1854 may be the occasion for a commemorative stamp as part of the "Famous American Series" issued by the Post Office Department.

Gen. Oscar N. Solbert, Director of the George Eastman House in Rochester, summed up some of his achievements thusly:
"George Eastman was a self-made inventor who progressively simplified photography. For glass he substituted film, for heavy plate holders a roll film holder; for burdensome cameras a small, light, hand held box which was simple to operate. He founded the practice of photo-finishing. These inventions and innovations made it easy for anyone, without scientific knowledge or professional skill, to take pictures with no more trouble than pressing a button. Modern photography and what it means to the world was launched."

Beyond photography, Eastman had human qualities which added significant contributions to America's progress and welfare. He was a pioneer in industrial relations by which his employees had a proportionate share in the company's success. He was a philanthropist and distributed all his wealth — over 100 million dollars — during his lifetime to foster education, medicine, science, music and art.

A tribute to George Eastman is a tribute to all of photography and to the people it serves throughout the world.

Seek Return Of Fund Envelopes

Local March of Dimes officials made an appeal today for the return of 1,000 March of Dimes envelopes which were mailed to citizens of this area the first week of January.

Some 3,000 of the little envelopes appealing for contributions for the fight against polio were mailed in Greenville and so far approximately 200 have been returned with contributions ranging from $1 to $25. Miss Gloria Blanton, campaign chairman for Greenville, pointed out that Pitt County's goal in the current March of Dimes drive is approximately $18,000, and added that Greenville's part of the total should amount to about $7,500. "In order to do this, the per capita contribution in Pitt County will have to be raised from 19 cents to 29 cents," Miss Blanton stated. "If surrounding counties can raise amounts ranging from 26 cents to $1.01 per capita, surely Pitt can increase its giving by 10 cents per person."

She asserted that money is needed for the March of Dimes this year as never before. Many patients from prior years still need medical care, but the greatest need is for funds for research.

Gamma globulin has been successfully used and the national foundation has made plans for the inoculation of thousands of school children this year in an attempt to cut down the number who become victims of polio. To do the job adequately, approximately $75 million will be needed by the national organization.

Promotion Cost Him Salary Cut

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—Charles B. Keats former Bridgeport newspaperman, took a $2,260 annual cut in pay when Governor John Lodge recently promoted him from deputy secretary of state to secretary.

Keats became secretary as successor to Mrs. Alice Leopold, who resigned to head the women's division of the federal labor department. Keats' salary as Mrs. Leopold's deputy, fixed by the state personnel department, was $10,260 a year. The secretary's salary, fixed by statute, is $8,000.
Keats called his promotion "a significant honor and opportunity which comes rarely to anybody," and said it was a situation where "monetary considerations are secondary."

Fire was almost universally believed to be an element during the Middle Ages, although studies disproving such theories had been made as early as the Fourth Century B.C.

Nat'l Seashore Museum Is Planned At Hatteras

BUXTON, N. C. — A building originally built to house the keeper's Cape Hatteras is scheduled to become a maritime museum of the National Seashore Recreational area which is now being created between Nags Head and Ocracoke Inlet.

Clark Stratton, land acquisition officer of the National Park Service has indicated that the museum would be ready for dedication by early summer of 1954.

Located near the base of famous Cape Hatteras Lighthouse the museum will be within sight of Diamond Shoals, once the most dreaded bodies of water, by masters of sailing vessels. Diamond Shoals was long known as the "graveyard of the Atlantic," because so many ships were lost in the area. A more modern name to the general area off Diamond Shoals during World War II was "Torpedo Junction," because so many merchant and war craft were attacked and sunk there by enemy submarines. The term "torpedo junction" was first coined by the skippers of Coast Guard patrol craft operating from Ocracoke and Morehead City Section Bases in the submarine-infested waters off Cape Hatteras.

In addition to the museum which will contain many maritime objects and relics Cape Hatteras Lighthouse will be open to the public for supervised tours under the supervision of the National Park Service.

The museum site is adjacent to the new all-paved highway which branches from the Nags Head-Hatteras highway as it approaches Buxton village. The museum area has long been noted for its maritime history and also for its excellent surf fishing.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—Railroads and aircraft provided almost the sole prop under the stock market today. Gains ran to between 1 and 3 points in those two divisions while elsewhere in the list changes were mostly in the smaller fractions.

Trading was at a good rate equal to or a little less than yesterday's 1,700,000 shares.

Douglas aircraft was by far the best performer with a gain of between 3 and 4 points at times. It was up 3 points yesterday.

Railroads, which were neglected yesterday, staged a comeback today with the gains well distributed. There were no major divisions of the market unduly depressed. Most were steady or narrowly mixed, with the exception of the firm aircrafts and railroads.

Among higher stocks were Boeing, United Aircraft, Santa Fe, New York Central, Southern Railway, General Dynamics, and Pacific Western Oil.

Lower were National Distillers, American Telephone and Du Pont.

Ten-Cent Coffee Declared Unfair

HOUSTON (AP)—Ten-cent coffee is unfair to jurors, says the woman who operates the Criminal Courts Building cigar stand.

Mrs. Grace Taylor thinks she has worked out a plan to maintain her 5-cent coffee prices. "It looks like I will lose money on every cup at 5 cents. But I recently raised the price of cigarettes a penny a pack and think that will make up the coffee losses."

She said many of her customers lose wages while on juries and "it wouldn't be fair to stick them a dime for a cup of coffee."

RALEIGH (AP)—(NCDA)—Hog prices mostly steady to 25 higher. Tops of 25.25 at Enfield, Tarboro, Laurel Hill, Elizabethtown, Freeman, Micro, Siler City, Whiteville, Weldon, Scotland Neck, Rocky Mount, Lumberton and Clinton; 25.00 at Warsaw, Kenly, Beulaville, Newton Grove, Mount Olive, Goldsboro, Hamilton, Bailey, Wilson, Burgaw, Clarkton, Fair Bluff, Colerain, Wilmington, Greenville, Rose Hill, Farmville, Robersonville, Kinston, New Bern, Benson, Smithfield, Fayetteville and Woodland; 24.75 at Rich Square; Richmond market not established.

Require Report In One-Car Wreck

RALEIGH (AP)—You must file a financial responsibility report in a one-car accident — if there is a death, an injury or more than $100 in property damage.

Asst. Motor Vehicles Commissioner oe Garrett said the law demands that a report be filed even if a driver wrecks his own car by crashing down an embankment, if one of the above conditions applies. He said this holds true even if there is no question of liability to a second party.

The filing of a report in such circumstances ends the matter under the responsibility act, Garrett added.

Despondent Man Bishop To Visit Leaps To Death Here On Sunday

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Some 300 onlookers watched in awe yesterday as a despondent man leaped to his death from the roof of a three-story hotel building in downtown Phoenix.

The victim was identified as William Walter Failey, about 50, of Washington, D. C. He died a few minutes later before his arrival at a hospital.

Failey walked around on the ledge for several minutes before making his fatal dive. Police and firemen were summoned to the scene as pedestrians gathered below.

Firemen spread a net but Failey made a running jump and landed on the alley pavement.

Failey, a World War II veteran, was reported to be suffering from asthma. "I'm a sick man," he wrote in a note addressed to a brother, George Failey, Waverly, N. Y.

As officers and firemen went to the roof, Failey retorted, "I'm sick. You know how sick I am." Then he made his dive.
