The Quest

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX

OVER coffee at the kitchen table, Grandy told them about Arnie. They had found her crouching in the shadows of the roadside, arms outstretched, her face pale, the empty kerseene can beside her. "She confessed to starting the fire," Grandy said heavily, and seeing Dale's distress, he folded his hand over hers. "They've taken her into town. Later, she'll be in a sanitarium, under professional care."

"Will she ever?" Dale began. "Infinite sadness was in Grandy's headshake. "Who knows? But if she never comes back to our world, she'll be happy in her own."

"Wonder!" Dale whispered. Grandy's hand tightened. "Believe it, girl," he said gruffly. "Believe it."

Dale thought of the charred embers and twisted, blackened ruins down town. You look like a Delamater! It's a shame to see the widows... something... new? ... Twitgrass, crowding out my wife's cabbage, Grandy! What is she?

Saltiness stung Dale's throat. But Grandy would grow where a house had stood. Perhaps the purple bloom of fireweed, which had grown so sturdily and profusely over London's blighted metropolis a decade ago, would grow here, too. Wounds are healed, and hidden scars forgotten...

She finally turned back into the room. "Who turned in the alarm? Do you know?"

"Your Phil Parrish," Grandy said.

Dale's eyes widened. The thought of Phil's coming had been driven from her mind entirely, but now she remembered the car she had heard coming down the road. In sudden alarm, she grasped Grandy's arm. "Where is Phil?"

"Up at the doctor's, getting himself bandaged up," Grandy said. "He's hurt!"

"Not badly," he said reassuringly. "His hands, mostly. Think he'd have more sense than to try to put out a fire by himself, wouldn't you? Saw the flames from the road, on his way down, he did. Thought you were in the house... When he went in and found it empty, he called Central and put in the alarm. While he was waiting for help to come he tried to beat out the flames himself. Phil bunched his mouth thoughtfully. "Said a funny thing to me, Phil did just before he went off with the doctor."

"Yes?"

"He said, 'Ghosts don't burn, Grandy. They're indestructible.'"

Dale shook her head. "They're like old soldiers, Grandy. They just fade away." Her heartbeats quickened as she glanced up at the clock. "He's an awfully long time getting bandaged!"

"You waiting up for him?"

"Oh, yes." To tell him I love him. It's been here all the time, she thought, my love for Phil...

Grandy put a satisfied arm around Grandmother. "I reckon, then, that you and I might just as well be off to bed, my dear."

Dale went outside, into the starred and stately October night. It was there Phil found her when he came, her shoulders pressed against the smooth white porch pillar, her face lifted eagerly to his. The doctor's car rattled off back to the village, and stillness returned to the night before either of them spoke. And then Dale said, "Your hands, Oh, your hands!"

He looked down at the white bandages and grimaced. "I look pretty funny without eyelashes, too," he said.

It was that—triviality, his armor against the world—that brought tears stingingly into Dale's eyes. Phil, the gambler, Phil, the fool, Phil, who had said once that a man could make a major talent of living...

"Phil," she said softly, "why did you try to save my house? You didn't approve of my living in it, why didn't you just let it burn down?"

"A problem is never solved until it's worked out," he said slowly. "Having a fire end it for me just leaves me with an even bigger problem."

Her eyes widened up at him. "Oh," she whispered. All along she had had her mind only on her future, her life. Even when she realized that she loved Phil, she hadn't admitted, hadn't even remotely thought that he might have a problem too. The wraithlike figure creeping around the rosebushes; the ghost that wouldn't burn. "Phil," she said softly. "Yes?"

"Do you know where I was when the fire broke out?"

"I know where I thought you were—and I nearly went out of my mind," he said harshly.

"I was here. In bed, in my old room. I left the cottage yesterday afternoon, and I wasn't going back there to live, Phil. Oh, do I have to take you every step of the way to make it clear to you? I'm here, on Grandy's porch, saying that I—I love you."

"I'm not going to pull up my real-estate roots and set up shop here in your village, Dale," he said sternly. "Nor can I make any rash promises about keeping you safe. If that's still what you're after. No man can, these days, no matter how much he loves a woman." He drew in his breath deeply. "So get it straight, Dale what you're letting yourself in for. It mightn't be what you want. And get this too: once you marry me, it's for the rest of your life. I've never believed in marriages with a clause for an 'out'."

She stamped her foot. "Stop talking, will you!" She lifted her chin. "What makes you think you're the only person in the world who can face up to things and deal with them? You dropped that book in the river—that makes you think I can't toss out that obsession you dragged up out of my subconscious? Did I ask you to set up shop here? Did I ask you to keep me safe? Did I—"

"I love you, Phil," she said. "Isn't that enough to start on?"

Now he moved to her. Even in the darkness, she could see the transfiguration of his face as he took her in his arms. I must have been crazy, she thought, to have rejected this, to have doubted and questioned this feeling generated so strongly between us. To have needed proof that Phil was not like the others.

"Proof? But she had it, in Phil's burned and bandaged hands. He had tried to save what he thought was her happiness, at the risk of losing his own. She ran her fingers up over his face and forehead earnestly. "Oh, darling," she cried, "no eyebrows, either!"

"They'll grow in," he said cheerfully. "If not, I'll paint some on for our wedding photographs. Stop talking, will you? You kissed me a minute ago. Would you like to do it again?"

Dale closed her eyes. Against her lids a host of purple flowers swayed and danced in the sunlight.

Pitt County's Bus Fleet Serves 8,000 School Students

By BOB BOYETTE

The largest transportation fleet in Pitt County, the public school buses, numbering 130, travel 4,200 approved mileage per day, and transport 8,000 students to 30 schools in the county.

Lelan C. Forlines, supervisor of Pitt County school bus transportation said about 1,200 extra miles are driven each month, due to bus overloads, break-downs and other reasons.

That is a total of 127,200 miles per month put by Pitt County roads which total in all including dirt roads a little less than 1,100.

Only Three Extra Buses
When asked how many extra buses there are in the event that one bus should break down or for some reason was out of order Forlines said, "Three."

With every bus going at least 26 miles a day, and with some going as much as 61 miles a day, there are only three extras in case they are needed. That must mean there is a good service department.

"What keeps these buses in such good running order that there are few times you have to use your replacements," Forlines was asked. "Well, we have daily mechanical service to various schools. Should a driver have a complaint, he will make a note of it on the complaint board so that one of our three road mechanics can check it," Forlines answered.

Gas service is furnished buses every other day, it was stated. It takes 830 gallons per day to keep the fleet of 130 buses operating. They consume about five and one-half gallons per day.

Not only do the three road mechanics check the buses daily, but the State Highway Patrol inspects every bus every month. "We have had very good cooperation with the Patrol," Forlines added.

Only Seven People Work
To do all mechanical repairs required on the buses there are only seven men working with the Pitt County Garage, located in Winterville.

Other than the three traveling mechanics, there are two gas men, one bookkeeper, one shop mechanic and one supervisor.

The shop mechanic also drives the wrecker in the event a bus has to be towed into the shop. There, he is busy overhauling engines during the winter months. While he is overhauling a bus one of the three extra buses is out doing that bus' job. Not only does this shop mechanic overhaul buses that begin to "use oil," but also is there to make repairs needed that cannot be made at the schools by the three road mechanics.

The bookkeeper keeps the many records required by the state on their school bus system. His records show that it took $655.40 per bus to operate last year. That includes gas, bus repair, license, garage equipment and driver's salary to only mention a few.

The supervisor at the garage, Forlines, is the seventh person. To operate 130 buses every day for that number is quite an efficient record and Forlines is naturally proud of it.

Not only do the buses get a daily mechanical check and Highway Patrol inspection, but they also get a monthly mechanical fitness check.

During the summer months the buses are given a complete general overhaul that includes such things as running gear, steering mechanism, seats and others. As mentioned above, the motor overhaul comes usually during the school year or when needed.

Most of the buses have a seating capacity ranging from 36 to 54 students. There is a 25 percent overload allowed however.

Very Few Accidents
With this many buses operating on almost every county road five days in the week, one would expect many accidents, but accidents are few and far between.

There has been only one accident this year that put a school bus out of commission. That involved two school buses. One bus was following too close and collided with the rear of another bus.

It has been two years since a student has been hurt in a school bus accident in Pitt County. That mishap was due to a person falling out the door and it did not involve another vehicle.

Forlines attributes this good record to the safety conscious principals, drivers, and the help of public citizens and the Highway Patrol. "He said the public's and the Highway Patrol's help is always solicited to keep accidents down.

Most of the complaints about school bus drivers come in from these sources. This year, for instance, six drivers have been suspended because of reckless driving.

Bus Routes Around County
As mentioned earlier, almost every road is listed as a school bus route. Every student who lives more than one and one-half miles from a school can get on a school bus somewhere within one mile of his home. Should the bus route be farther than one mile, it is re-routed nearer to the students' home.

Prior to opening of school in the fall, the principals study and then suggest bus routes of their schools to the County Board of Education. If these routes are approved they are sent on the State Board of Education, which in turns approves them.

County Bought Buses
Forlines pointed out that the County buys the school buses and not the state, as many would think. "Once the County buys the bus it is turned over to the State Board of Education which in turns takes the title, keeps the bus operating, pays the operations costs, and replaces it when worn out and discarded," Forlines stated.

That brought on the question of how long does a school bus last? "The normal life of a school bus is ten years," Forlines answered, "and that is an improvement in as much as the normal life used to be only eight years."

When the State took over the operation of the public schools in 1933 the number of buses in operation then became the basis of replacement from State funds.

Population growth that necessitated additional buses forced counties to provide the needed additional buses. When consolidations were made and additional buses were needed these had to be purchased from local funds.

All buses added to the fleet from local funds were taken over by the State. The State then operated and replaced the buses when needed.

The consolidation of Negro schools under the present plan calls for five additional buses per year for the next four years.

Students Drive Buses
Students enrolled in the County high schools drive the school buses. These students, both boys and girls, must be 16 years-of-age and have a regular State driver's license.

Russel T. Rogerson, Field Representative of the North Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles, a Greenville resident, visits the various schools. At the schools he takes the prospective drivers and has classroom work on all safety regulations and regulations governing the school buses.

After this classroom session a test is given. If the students pass this test they take a road test under the supervision of Rogerson. Upon successful completion of the two tests the student is then given a school bus driver's certificate.

The driver's certificate is in two copies. One copy is about five inches by seven and the principal keeps it at the school and the other is a pocket card which the driver keeps in his wallet at all times.

According to Forlines there is an effort to have a regular driver, a substitute driver, and an alternate. "That is not possible in every case," he pointed out, "but usually we have at least a driver and a substitute." The driver's pay is $22 per month.

A Driver's Day
What goes on in the day of one of Pitt County School bus drivers? For the answer to that question Aaron Eastwood of Route 2, Farmville was contacted.

Eastwood drives a bus over a 22 mile route that terminates first at Bell Arthur School and then journeys on to Farmville with several high school pupils.

This is Eastwood's first year as a bus driver. He is 16 years old and enjoys the job. "The money ($22 monthly) comes in good," he says, "gives me some extra spending money."

He has not been driving all of this year. He took over the route when a girl, who was driving, began playing basketball and gave her bus up.

He really got off with a bang. The first day on the job his bus broke down. "It was only a flooded carburetor and the mechanic showed me how to fix it," he stated, "and since then I have had no more trouble with the carburetor."

His only other trouble has been one flat tire. He transports about 35 to 40 pupils a day, 23 of which get off at Bell Arthur. He makes 14 stops prior to getting to Bell Arthur and one more stop between that school and Farmville.

Young Eastwood leaves his home near Tyson Church each morning about seven o'clock. It takes about one hour and ten minutes to travel to Bell Arthur and about 20 minutes on to Farmville. He covers about 14 miles of dirt roads on his route each morning and evening.

He gets home in the afternoon about 4:30 or 4:45, depending on the condition of the roads.

Eastwood took the classroom and driver's road test this year prior to beginning driving. He drives a 1948 model bus that "won't run until it is warmed up" on the cold mornings, he says.

Frank Richardson is gassing up one of the school buses at a county school. Gas service is provided by he and Jessie Hooks who visit every school every other day to gas the buses. The average bus consumes about a gallon for five and one-half miles of travel. It takes about 830 gallons a day to keep the 130 buses operating.

Aaron Eastwood's bus just arrived at Bell Arthur in the morning and students are shown getting out for their day of school work. As soon as the elementary students are unloaded the high school students will ride on to Farmville.

The school buses shown above are parked at Bell Arthur School. A few minutes after this picture was taken the bell rang and students began to get into the buses for their trip home in the afternoon. Two of the buses shown here stop at Bell Arthur and remain there during the day while the other takes pupils on to Farmville. One other bus, from Winterville High School, also picks up pupils at Bell Arthur. It had not arrived at the time the picture was taken. (Reflector photos by Bob Boyette)

Pitt County School Bus Transportation Supervisor Lelan C. Forlines, left, looks on as Connie Smith, shop mechanic at the Pitt County Garage, makes a carburetor adjustment. Only seven men are employed for work with the Pitt County School Bus Transportation system that has a fleet of 130 buses taking 8,000 pupils to 30 different schools every day over an approved mileage route of 4,200 miles. The seven men include three traveling mechanics, two gas men, one bookkeeper and supervisor. Students drive the buses.

Pittman Hines, one of the three traveling mechanics, checks anti-freeze in a school bus. Each of the three traveling mechanics has a different section of the county. They visit each school every day to check complaints about the buses made by the drivers. Unless it takes a major repair it is made at the school by them.

Connie Smith, shop mechanic and wrecker operator for the Pitt County Garage, is shown with a bus that he had just brought to the garage for repairs. He remains at the garage to overhaul the buses and make repairs that cannot be made at the school by one of the three traveling mechanics. He also operates the wrecker when a bus needs towing to the garage.

In Good Health, And Staying Alert

The nation is "marvelously prosperous," reported the president in his economic message to Congress; and with that finding most of us can thankfully agree.

After decades of deficit spending, terrible depletion of national resources, exports of raw materials and finished products in vast quantities to stricken nations, the amazing American economy shows great resilience.

Politically conscious leaders are optimistic in assaying conditions over which they have nominal "control." Understandably enough, they are reluctant to report unfavorable findings.

President Eisenhower's analysis gives a very bright picture and a hopeful one, an evaluation that the average citizen can best weigh by looking about himself . . .

Infamous 21 Play The Regular Futile Game

The pro-Red prisoners who stayed behind their buddies in Korea and turned their backs on homeland have finally been accepted by their new-found communist friends.

But they did not officially go behind the iron curtain until they staged a news conference to hurl nasty charges at the United States. So far, the 21 Americans who chose communism in preference to their native land have served their Red masters well. They have provided valuable—though untruthful—propaganda which the communists have used and will continue to use against the United States.

For some time to come, the infamous 21 will continue to serve that purpose for the communists. After they are no longer of sufficient use to communist masters, they will suddenly gain a real understanding of communism they have not yet attained.

They will go the way of Beria and countless thousands of others who have sought to play the communist game in hopes of personal gain.

In our opinion, the 21 will deserve the bitter reward they finally receive from their communist masters.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
THE LIVELY ORACLES

Those who watched the coronation over TV or later saw the motion picture record of this great event may recall the presentation of a Bible to the Queen by the Moderator of the Church of Scotland. This is what the great church official said as he handed the Bible to the Queen: "Here is the most valuable thing that this world affords. Here is wisdom; this is the royal law; these are the lively Oracles of God. . . . Here above your own Majesty is the highest touch of greatness."

Some time ago I mentioned in this column the immeasurable beauty and moral loftiness of the Bible. Before me lies the letter of a man who disagrees with all this, saying that the Bible is a book of violence; that it was written by hypocrites and monsters; that it has been the handbook of those who would forge chains with which to bind their fellows.

We may well feel sorry for anyone who has stood face to face with the word of God and has been unaware of its beauty; who has felt its power and thought it was tyrannical; who has read the record of a primitive people and thought it was a chronicle of violence.

In the Bible one finds wisdom. Here is the royal law. Here are the lively Oracles of God.

National Whirligig

Extremist Groups Unwanted

By RAY TUCKER

Every Saturday this veteran Washington columnist devotes his column to answering readers' questions of general interest on national and international politics and personalities. Questions may be sent direct to Ray Tucker at 6308 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON—"The suggestion has been made," writes C.V.L. of Lexington, Va., "that people of conservative beliefs should form an organization like the Americans for Democratic Action (A.D.A.) except that it should be conservative rather than liberal. Can Willford King's Committee for Constitutional Government be regarded as such an organization? What is the nature of the membership and the financial support of this committee?"

Answer: I do not wish to disparage the King Committee. It performs an excellent work in its distribution of the conservative body of political philosophy. Its membership consists of many eminent businessmen, professional men and industrialists, who contribute generously to its publicity efforts.

AN EXAMPLE—However, the experience of groups which set themselves up as organizations apart from the two major parties has not been too happy. The Liberty League, which was established with du Pont money to check the New Deal, is evidence, F.D.R. and his wife crucified it as a "rich man's club," designed to block his humanitarian reforms. It made votes for the Democrats.

The A.D.A. furnishes current proof. Rightly or wrongly, it is regarded as a smug group which believes that it has a monopoly of political and economic wisdom. It generates more heat than light. It causes confusion with its hybrid professions. The Democratic politician wish it would disband.

TOO SELF-CENTERED—Separatist movements of this kind, it seems to me, tend to become too inflexible, too anxious to prove themselves right in the face of changing conditions and circumstances, and too self-centered. Politically, they are faceless men. It seems better to me to participate in the activities of one of the two major parties, which must and do react to the nation's needs and demands. Otherwise, they lose out, which is as it should be.

Appropriately enough, in this connection, I quote from Professor Raymond Moley's syndicated column on this subject of separatism. As a prominent member of the original "Roosevelt brain trust," he should be an authority.

"But the unpopularity of A.D.A.," he says, "is rooted in something even more serious than fear of radicalism. Americans simply do not like people who call themselves 'intellectuals.'"

"It smacks of snobbishness. It assumes that college degrees and professorships are necessarily marks of superior intelligence and authority. It reeks of elitism. And the A.D.A. has from the beginning been heavily loaded with professors."

RECOUNTS EXPERIENCE—Columnist Moley then grows autobiographical.

"An answer may be made by some of the brethren who will not agree with this that the professors in the original Roosevelt brain trust were useful and permanent parts of the Administration. I can with some right answer that in two ways.

"Those professors 20 years ago were associated with a great victory, not a great defeat. Even then, when the name of 'brain trust' was applied, those of us who were directly involved felt the cold, clammy kiss of death. Professors were not popular with the boys in the clubhouses, and only the patronage of Roosevelt saved them from a fate worse than Job's."

The A.D.A.-ers helped to give Adlai E. Stevenson the "kiss of death," as the Liberty League did to Alf Landon, although poor Alf needed no caress of doom.

at standards with which he is familiar. For after all, our ties with one another the country over are so close that what affects one segment can usually be seen in the whole.

Here in Pitt County we are generally prosperous. Here and there are evidences this is no longer a "boom" period, but there are no signs either that the bottom is falling out of our economy. The same general evaluation could be applied to the state or to the nation.

The most significant points in the president's economic report, as we see them, were in proclaiming a readiness—whenever necessary to avert a depression—to cut taxes, liberalize credit and launch large-scale public works even at the cost of new deficit financing.

This reassurance that his administration was prepared to act, when necessary, should be heartening to all who have felt concern over possible depression symptoms.

Explaining his party's policy of trying to avoid juggling of the national economy, the president put it succinctly in one brief paragraph of his 35,000-word message:

"The need for constant vigilance and preparedness by government does not, however, justify constant stirring or meddling. Minor variations in activity are bound to occur in a free economy, or for that matter in any type of economy."

It all sounds very reasonable and logical; especially his reference to minor variations being natural in a free economy. But the "need for constant vigilance and preparedness" really rings a bell. Seemingly it is as necessary in economic safety at home as in national security from dangers without.

The "Big Four" conference in Berlin appears foredoomed to failure even before the statesmen involved take up the topics which brought them together.

Conflict over the entry of Communist China on the global stage, a subject not even included in original planning of the discussions, has keynoted all of the early meetings.

Soviet insistence and persistence, in the face of equally adamant refusal to include the voice of Peiping in world diplomacy, is unbelievable.

One would think Foreign Minister Molotov does not know the meaning of the word "no," though he has used it often enough in the past.

Yet, at every available opportunity we hear Russia demanding Red China be given a responsible voice in the conduct of world affairs . . . recognition as a partner in shaping the future. Is there no end to the blind-and-deaf role Russia assumes in facing down the opinions of other nations?

We may well expect the identical unswerving course of action by Communist China if ever admitted to world councils: a blind, deaf and by no means mute adherence to selfish aspirations.

The "Atom" Of Its Day

Somebody Told Me

The Same Plot By 2 Parents

Last night I sat in the kitchen and enjoyed watching Wife Rachel wash the dishes. Occasionally, in fact, almost once a week, I forget about the superiority of the male and wash them myself. That helps me enjoy watching her the rest of the time.

As she was clanking the dishes last night I said, "Rachel, whoever said honest confession was good for the soul was really speaking words of wisdom." (Pause)

"Yes, go on," she said.

"It just does the heart good to confess when you've done wrong." (Pause)

"Yes, yes, go on."

"Frankly, I don't see how anybody could be wrong and then go on living without a confession of his sin." (Pause)

"Yes, yes, yes, go on!"

"No matter what the consequences might be, I think it's better to face the music and get it over with." (Pause)

"Yes, yes, yes, go on!"

"It might be rough at first, but there's a chance of being forgiven. We can always hope for the chance to be forgiven." (Pause)

"Go on! Go on! Go on!"

"Rachel, you know very well that I love our children as well as any father could."

This time, when I glanced up, instead of seeing me on, I could see steam rising and the hot water faucet wasn't on!

"Well," I continued, "you know that in spite of how much you might love your children there are times when they get on your nerves. During the past several months they have often pounced on me when I've been doing something that made them a bother, like writing a column, for example. You know how they both try to type when I'm typing."

"Well—when they start doing something like that I immediately tell them to go wherever you might be and find out what you're doing."

"Is that all you wanted to tell me? Why, I've been sending them to you for months!"

And I thank you.

What Other Editors Are Thinking

THE BERLIN SCENE, OLD AND FAMILIAR (Charlotte Observer)

The farce in Berlin has begun, and the opening scene was an old familiar one. Mr. Molotov, being forewarned by public statements that Mr. Dulles intended to take the initiative, did not wait. He took it himself. Thus he put the West on the defensive right at the start. It is a familiar position for our side. We ought to be used to it by this time.

He threw the West completely off balance by bringing up almost every subject except those that Messrs. Dulles, Eden, and Bidault thought they were going to discuss at Berlin. So Mr. Dulles then had to delay his opening speech another day to think up some answer to Molotov. In doing so, he explained that the problem now was to get the conference back to its main purpose.

What he overlooks is that it never had any main purpose. The West made its old, old mistake of not pinning Russia down to a fixed agenda before the first session. That omission, as everyone who has watched such conferences in the past expected, left the field wide open for Molotov to drag in any red herring he could think of. Naturally he took the fullest advantage of the opening the Allies freely gave him.

Mr. Dulles' answer to Molotov was skillful argumentation couched in impressive language. He was especially effective in explaining why the United States could not sit down at the conference table with Red China. We recognize that government's power, he said, and the unwelcome necessity of dealing with it from time to time, but, "It is one thing, however, to recognize evil as a fact. It is another thing to take evil to one's breast and call it good."

That short sentence says almost all that can be said about the United States' refusal to recognize Red China. If the Europeans cannot understand it, further explanation seems futile.

The whole argument now going on at Berlin, however, is over agenda—the very issue that should have been settled in preliminary discussions before the conference met. In all well-managed conferences the agenda are decided beforehand. But now "to save time" the West has again surrendered and accepted Molotov's agenda. The same reason was given for yielding to Russian demands for sessions in East Berlin.

Why is saving time so urgent in conferences that never get anywhere anyway? And how is time saved by yielding to a negotiator whose prime purpose is to play for time?

Getting the conference back on what Mr. Dulles calls "the tracks of its main purpose" will take some doing, for when Molotov does a wrecking job he does a good one. Having demoralized the Western front, he will now move in and offer France peace in Indochina and a guarantee against a rearmament Germany if France will reject the EDC treaty. This offer will probably be made behind the scenes rather than in open session. But, if France begins to waver, we'll know it has been made.

Treasurer's Office And Announcement By Josh James

By LYNN NISBET

TREASURER — Josh James has announced his candidacy for State Treasurer opposing Edwin Gill, who holds the position by appointment of Governor Umstead and has said he will seek election for remainder of the term from which Brandon P. Hodges resigned last summer.

Prospect of a heated contest for his office will serve to bring its statutory importance to attention of the people. The constitutional office of State Treasurer has lost a great deal of its one-time prestige because of changing conditions and the development of governmental accounting practices. Whatever may have been lost for these reasons has been more than offset by gains in ex-officio duties imposed upon the office by successive statutes.

Many students of governmental procedure in North Carolina contend that these added responsibilities make the Treasurer's office second only to that of the Governor. The constitution designates the Treasurer as a member of the State Board of Education. By statute he is also ex-officio chairman of the State Banking Commission, and both the Teachers-State Employees Retirement System and the Local Government Employees Retirement Board; and is director and chairman of the Local Government Commission. He is a member of the Board of Public Building and Grounds, of the State Board of Tax Assessments, and of the newly created and highly important Board of Tax Review.

Membership on these several boards and commissions is coveted by public spirited citizens and each one of them is an important position. Every elective State official has ex-officio duties imposed by statutes, but none of the other assignments compare in aggregate importance to those held by the Treasurer. The election of a Treasurer means the filling of half a dozen offices, some of them actually more important than the base position set up in the constitution.

WIDE RANGE — He also said he expected to discuss during the campaign various matters of state-wide interest. "Irrespective of whether they directly concern the office I seek," since the office he seeks, which is also being sought by Edwin Gill on elective basis, has a lot to do with the operation of banks, the conduct of the public school system, all phases of local government and taxes, it is difficult to find an activity which does concern the office.

POLITICAL — Purely political aspects of the James entry into the primary contest for Treasurer have intrigued capitol square folks. He served four years as a Utilities Commissioner by appointment of Governor Scott, and was replaced when Governor Umstead came into office. In some quarters his announcement is regarded as the first in an expected series of Scott-affiliated candidates for every State and major district or county office, in opposition to those presumed to favor the Umstead administration and Senator Lennon. In other quarters the James statement is accepted at face value, to the effect that he is acting wholly on his own and is running for Treasurer solely because he wants the

Data On Auto Sales

By ELMER ROESSNER

The National Automobile Dealers Association has sent out a curious press release. It is the text of a talk by a dealer at a truck clinic at the recent NADA convention in Miami Beach.

Some excerpts:

"Our standard answer to the guarantee question is 'none.' Naturally, we train our salesmen not to bring up the guarantee unless asked, but if it does come up the salesman is taught to sell the customer that he is buying the unit at approximately wholesale and therefore no guarantee is in order."

"After he signs the order, we stamp 'as is' on both his and our copy."

"We dunk the engine and clean under the hood including washing the battery and painting the radiator. We believe this one item, which costs $4 per unit, pays off more than anything else we do proportionate to money spent. There is absolutely nothing that impresses a customer more than a clean engine and engine compartment. Our salesmen are taught to lift the hood on each unit in which the prospect shows interest."

"We believe in putting the price on the windshield of all trucks on the front line. Prices in large print . . . tend to look like a special sale. . . . On all front line units we paint (prices ending in 88's, 77's, 66's and 55's. That series tends to look and sound like special event prices. They sound like reduced prices while $695, $695, $795 series do not."

"We also advertise for used stake and flat bodies. . . . They make a plain cab and chassis look like so much more truck. Also these bodies tend to de-emphasize tires, which may not be the best in the world, and also de-emphasize frame-splicing which some buyers find objectionable."

There was a lot more, some of it highly commendable, such as speeding up turnover by keeping prices low, analyzing local markets, giving prospects names of

Today's Youngsters Miss A Lot

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Sometimes I feel sorry for the younger generation.

They have so many things to entertain them they often don't know how to enjoy themselves. It is so frighteningly easy for them to get lost today in a wilderness of pleasures that can harm them as much as help them.

To grow up in any period of the earth's past has always been a stern and lonely task. Many people who manage to grow up physically never do so emotionally. And mentally they merely gradually merge from first childhood into second childhood. All they have learned from living they could write on a postcard.

A child should walk the road in wonder. Maybe I am getting to be a middle-aged fuddy-duddy, but it seems to me that our complex civilization today does as much to blunt a child's natural sense of wonder as it does to perpetuate it.

Many children today learn from television the proper way to hold a cat before they learn the alphabet. Isn't it too fast a step to go directly from "MOTHER GOOSE" to "DRAGNET"? Shouldn't there be something in between?

Many a person at 40 can still remember the tremendous thrill of finding an orange in his stocking on Christmas morning. A whole orange for himself! And what a terrible problem it brought: Would the delicious ecstasy of eating it balance the sadness of knowing it was all gone?

Naturally a child today could hardly be expected to show awe over the gift of an orange. Oranges are commonplace. They are taken for granted. But what would awe many of today's pre-teenage sophisticates, so used to miracles they don't know what a miracle is? If Santa Claus left them a slice of moon cheese, wouldn't they take that for granted, too?

Children used to entertain themselves. Many modern mothers complain to their husbands at nightfall: "I'm all worn out trying to think up things to keep the children entertained." But why should any healthy child ever have to be entertained by his parents, except perhaps on rainy days or periods of illness?

Simple joys are better for young minds than complex pleasures—and for older minds, too, for that matter. In the present jukebox age how many of our children still know the delight of simple things, how many lose the path in a mechanical jungle? Isn't it more fun for a kid to throw a rock at a tin can on a fence than to mow down dear old grandma with a toy atom ray gun?

But the thing I pity the youngsters most for now is their dwindling interest in reading. A book is the opening portal to the vast hall of the human spirit; libraries are the shrines of the mind. No canned music, no flickering pictures on a movie or video screen can truly stir the imagination of a child as well as a book.

Somerset Maugham, who turned 80 this week, once wrote: "Intelligent people, after the age of 30, read nothing at all." It isn't quite that bad. But it certainly is true that most people do most of their reading when young, and gain the ideas they spend the rest of their lives exploring.

Many a high school boy now can discuss the atmosphere on Mars or the problems of tailoring a space suit. But has he walked the streets of old London with David Copperfield, or floated down the Mississippi with Huckleberry Finn? Probably not, unless his teacher led him on a conducted tour.

There is no doubt children today are smarter in many ways, know more facts about more things, than any previous kid crop, but they are an old-young generation. I think they mature too fast, dull the edge of wonder too soon, and miss the job of being young in a simpler time.

Aren't you glad you were born when you were?

Series of Sermons at St. Paul's Beginning Sunday, January 31st, Dr. Wallace I. Wolverton, Rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, will preach a series of four sermons on the Kingdom of Heaven. They will be based upon the proper Gospel for each Sunday and are entitled "Election to the Kingdom," "Judgment in the Kingdom," "Reward in the Kingdom," and "The King's Harvest."

Dr. Wolverton will speak on four New Testament parables in an effort to answer the question: "What is the nature of the spiritual in man?"

This series of sermons will deal with basic problems of human existence, such as the sense of belonging, the problem of evil in human institutions, spiritual versus material rewards, and human responsiveness to divine promptings. The insights of the new theology which goes under the name "Christian Existentialism" will be brought to bear upon these problems.

Taylor-Bunch Vows Spoken In Formal Double Ring Ceremony

In a setting of white gladioli, snapdragons, palms and cathedral candelabra flanked with fern and ivy, Miss Betty Jane Bunch, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Bunch of Greenville, and Mr. Jessie James Taylor Jr. son of Mr. and Mrs. Jessie James Taylor of Neuse, were united in holy matrimony in a formal double-ring ceremony in the Greenville Pentecostal Holiness Church Sunday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock, January 24th. The Rev. Harvey E. Johnson, pastor of the bride, officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an original gown of white satin fashioned with a V-neck line and long tapering sleeves ending in points over the hands. The snug basque bodice, sprayed with designs of seed pearls buttoned up the back with tiny self-covered buttons. It was accented by the bouffant skirt forming into a long, sweeping cathedral train. Her fingertip veil of delicate imported illusion was arranged from a crown effect sprayed with seed pearls. She carried a white orchid on a prayer book with Fleur de Mours and showered with hacinth bells.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Ronald B. Palmer of Raleigh, wearing a bronze velvet and taffeta gown fashioned with fitted bodice, full flowing skirt, matching original hat and carrying a nosegay of yellow snapdragons, pom poms and yellow rose buds with green ribbon, was matron of honor.

The bridesmaids were Misses Elsie Briley, Shelby Williams, Mrs. John W. Bunch Jr., sister-in-law of the bride, and Mrs. Arthur Crawford Jr., all of Greenville. Their green taffeta and velvet gowns and hats were fashioned after the matron of honor. They carried nosegays of bronze pom poms and talisman roses with matching ribbons.

The junior bridesmaid, Miss Sandra Palmer, niece of the bride, wore a green gown like those of the other attendants. She carried a nosegay identical to the bridesmaid's.

The flower girl, Joyce Ann Bunch of Greenville, niece of the bride, wore a yellow gown of net over taffeta. The skirt was tiered with ruffles. She carried a yellow basket of yellow rose petals and flowers, and wore a matching yellow bonnet.

Mrs. Frank Hudson of Roanoke Rapids, Misses Lona Nell Warrall of Colerain, Frances Ann Alderman of Rosehill, Mrs. Tommy Moore, Misses

Misses Nora, Novella and Bruce Exum were hostesses at an after-rehearsal party on Saturday evening at their home on Washington St. Guests were members of the Taylor-Bunch wedding party and out-of-town guests.

The bride's table was spread with a Chinese cut-work linen cloth and centered with an arrangement of white snapdragons flanked by crystal candelabra holding tall white candles.

A three tiered wedding cake, decorated with tiny pink rose buds, was placed at one end of the table. After the bride and groom had cut the first slice the cake was served by Mrs. Ronald Palmer. Favors were drawn by members of the wedding party. Mrs. Henry Andrews poured coffee and nuts and stuffed dates were served.

Topics of importance were, the sending of a request to Mr. Wright asking that the Pitt County Chapter be allowed to suggest names for the different buildings at the college, Robert H. Wright, Fleming, Wilson and others being considered desirable. Acting upon the suggestion of Mrs. Roy Davenport, it was decided to have a Pitt Co. news letter similar to the college news letter. After the business meeting was adjourned ice cream and cake was served by Miss Pattie S. Dowell.

V.F.W. Auxiliary Plans Benefit Supper Little League Team

Final plans for the benefit supper to be held Friday, February 5, at the clubhouse from 5:30 to 8:00 p. m. to be served by the VFW Auxiliary sponsored by the local post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars with proceeds to be used in financing a Little League baseball team in the coming season, were made at the regular monthly meeting of the auxiliary on Thursday evening.

Mrs. B. F. Joyner, president, announced that the Second District Meeting would be held in Pink Hill, N. C. on February 14. Delegates to represent the local auxiliary are Mesdames Leslie Lewis, Bill Angle, Roy Briley, Fenner Allen and Joe Joyner. The group voted to contribute $25.00 to the current March of Dimes Drive. A request from Caswell Training School for three pieces of embroidery material and thread was authorized. Clothing has been given to three needy families and also to a local school which requested clothing for some children. A request for assistance from a family was referred to the committee. The quota for the National Home Fund at Eaton Rapids, Mich. of $1.00 per member was heard. The shipping sets were sent to Oteen Veterans Hospital for Christmas. Remembrances were also sent to members of the auxiliary and thank you notes from the veterans and members were read. Mrs. J. B. Bass, chairman of the Junior Girls Unit, reported that the Unit had made 100 tray favors for the Veterans Hospital and had also contributed to the March of Dimes. The Unit now has 22 members. The annual Valentine Party given by the auxiliary to entertain their husbands will be held Friday night, February 19.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses of the evening at the close of the business session.

Mrs. Bissette Hostess To Griffon Book Club
GRIFTON—The Griffon Book Club met on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. I. Bissette. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Robert McEborn conducted the business hour. Barbara Chrisman Becomes Bride Of Pfc. Carter Parks
BATH—In a wedding of simplicity and beauty at the home of the Rev. William Waters, Miss Barbara Dean Chrisman and Pfc. Carter Parks were united in marriage Wednesday, January 20, at 7:30 in the evening with the Rev. Waters officiating.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Al Chrisman of Bath. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Parks of Briceville, Tenn.

For the ceremony the bride wore a powder blue dress with three-quarter length sleeves trimmed with collar and cuffs of white angora. Her accessories were black with a white angora hat.

Mrs. Nathan Hill of Chocowinity was her sister's matron of honor. She wore a navy blue suit with black accessories.

The bridegroom was attired in his dress uniform. Mr. Nathan Hill, brother-in-law of the bride, was best man.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple left for a short wedding trip.

The bride is a popular member of the younger set and is now a senior at Bath High School. She will continue making her home with her brother, Wade Chrisman of Bath, until after graduation.

The bridegroom has recently returned from a tour of duty in Korea and is now stationed at Cherry Point where the couple later will make their home.

Concert Comedienne Will Be At ECC February 2

Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, will appear at East Carolina College Tuesday, February 2, at 8 p. m. in the Wright auditorium. The concert is sponsored by the college Entertainment Committee as one of its series of attractions for the current season.

Miss Russell began her serious music training on a scholarship to the Royal College of Music in London, England. Today she uses her exacting training and background of experience in the world of serious music as a basis for spoofing the various facets of the long-haired music world.

"No one in the world of music is safe from the satire of Anna Russell," orchestra leader Fred Waring said once. "She tears them apart—from Brunnhilde's meaty bellows to the lacey coloratura. She is the authority on what not to do on the concert stage—unless you want to risk the Russell barbs."

Miss Russell has appeared in the major concert series in such cities as Chicago, Boston, Detroit, Toronto, etc. Her European successes have taken her to Paris and she has appeared in programs throughout the British Isles.

She has an explanation for her comedy, relating that when she began she was a singer and was not meant to be funny. And she expected to remain a concert artist when she and her mother moved from England to Canada.

She joined a Junior League Show in Toronto, a society show that had a very prissy director. "About the fourth day of rehearsal," she said, "I realized I was getting on his nerves. And I knew it when he said I may be wrong, but you look funny to me."

So, instead of being a serious concert artist, Miss Russell is now a hilarious concert artist. She has just taken off from Broadway on a tour of 35 American cities, all of which will undoubtedly feel that a lamppost typhoon has struck them when Miss Russell proceeds on her way.

N.C. Cotton Farmer Saw Profits Cut Heavily By Weevil, Weather, In '53

RALEIGH — It was a bad year for the cotton farmer in North Carolina during 1953. Entomologists estimate the boll weevil alone cut profits $25 million dollars. It was one of the five worst cotton years since 1938. And 1954 could even be worse.

The Tar Heel cotton farmer is used to insects and bad weather, but 1953 hit him hard. Only in 1950, when the boll weevil cut profits an estimated $50 million, was he harder hit.

A summary of the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service Cotton Insect Control Program last year, just completed, hints that unless farmers tackle the boll weevil problem more earnestly this year, losses could multiply. With the reduced cotton acreage and approximately the same number of overwintering weevils to combat, the problem is expected to be at least as serious.

George D. Jones, in charge of entomology extension work, N.C. State College, suggests farmers with color allotment concentrate on a sound boll weevil control program from the very beginning until the last of the season's bolls are hard. Jones outlined this four-point weevil control program:

1. Start looking for overwintering weevils in young bolls in early June.
2. When squaring starts begin checking fields for weevil infestation rate. If infestation is 10 per cent or higher, begin weekly (more often if it rains) applications of insecticide.
3. Be prepared to continue applications all during the growing season if necessary to keep infestation rate down to 10 per cent.
4. Make applications until last of season's young bolls are three weeks old.

There is only one thing that could appreciably reduce the number of boll weevils coming out of hibernation next year. That is extremely cold weather. Already this winter much of the state has been blanketed with temperatures as low as 13 degrees. Jones says that when the temperature drops to 20 degrees cotton farmers have a right to smile broadly; when it drops below 15 degrees large numbers of weevils are usually killed. But just how much cold weather the state will have this winter, and its effect on weevil numbers next summer is a matter of speculation.

At any rate, Jones suggests farmers "have at least enough insecticide on hand to make three applications." This will save both time and cotton.

Reviewing the Cotton Insect Control Program last year, Jones says most farmers of the state started the season with a determination to fight it out with the boll weevil. More growers in all counties than ever before began to make insecticide applications. Growers were able to find weevils setting in the tops of their cotton plants by early June. Several days of high temperature in last May had brought the destructive pests out of hibernation in large numbers. Rainfall during May and June was spotted throughout the cotton areas of the state. High temperatures were prevalent. The cotton plant grew slowly and by mid-July plants in the worst drought areas were shedding squares and young bolls up to half an inch in diameter.

The weather conditions failed to halt weevil activity and by August and September many farmers who started out with a good control program became disgusted. They saw their cotton wilt under the dry heat and the squares and bolls fall to the ground. "Why spend money on insecticides?" they asked themselves. Jones says this attitude undoubtedly accounted for a greater loss for weevils than would have been suffered if farmers had followed through with their insecticide applications.

The toll of the insects and weather was high. Severe drought conditions and the weevils teamed up to reduce the state's average yield to 290 pounds per acre; in 1950 (the year of the $50 million loss) the boll weevil left the state average at only 149 pounds per acre.

Aphids and thrips were not especially numerous last year. Mites were a problem in a few fields in the east-central portion of the state. A few growers applied materials to combat these pests but damage generally did not become serious until late in the season.

It takes more than a sound insect control program to grow cotton, however, says Jones. He lists seven steps to efficient cotton production:

1. Plant recommended seed.
2. Lime and fertilize as needed.
3. Distribute fertilizer properly.
4. Mechanize planting and cultivation.
5. Apply side-dressing according to needs.
6. Follow complete insect control program.
7. Sell on grade and staple value only.

Specialists To Conduct Extension Classes Here

Pitt County farmers will have a chance to attend discussions on entomology, tobacco, dairying and livestock in the County Office Building next Tuesday and Wednesday, February 2 and 3.

The meetings will be conducted by specialists from the North Carolina State College Extension Service.

The opening discussion of the two day meet will be conducted by George D. Jones, entomology extension specialist from State College. Jones, along with H.E. Scott, also an extension specialist, will discuss insect control, including all livestock and crop insects. Also the specialists will discuss the use of insecticides, particularly the newer types and the adaptation of specific insecticides to particular crops.

The specialists will discuss the use of both power and hand-drawn dusters and sprayers and the use of airplanes for applying insecticides. Farmers attending the meet will be given the latest experiment station recommendations for controlling all farm insects.

The entomology meeting will be held from 10 to 12 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Tuesday afternoon from 1:30 to 3:30 Tobacco Specialists R.R. Bennett and Howard R. Garris will discuss the latest information on tobacco varieties fertilization practices, insect and disease control and they will place special emphasis on nematode control.

Wednesday morning from 10 to 12 o'clock Dairying and Livestock Specialists J.P. George will discuss discussions on dairying for interested farmers in this area.

To wind up the two-day meet Animal Husbandry Specialists Jim K. Butler, Jr. and J. Sam Buchanan will discuss feeding, breeding and management of beef cattle, swine and sheep. Wednesday afternoon from 1:30 to 3:30.

In a letter to Pitt County farmers County Agent Sam Winchester urged them to make a special effort to attend one, or all, of the schools.

"This is the first time such a series of schools has been held in Pitt County," he said. "We are hoping you will find this one of the best means of securing latest agricultural information, and are counting on your being present."

No Harakiri At Shrine Honoring Famed Samurai

TOKYO (AP)—A startled priest of the Sengakuji Buddhist Temple recently restrained a despondent man about to commit harakiri at the grave of the famed 47 samurai who disemboweled themselves there in 1702 after killing the mortal enemy of their dead lord.

The unsuccessful imitator told police he had come up to Tokyo to start a new business with $1,550. But he spent it all on Tokyo girls.

The temple is famous throughout Japan for the memory of the 47 heroes who defied incredible hardships to carry their dead master's feud to a bloody conclusion. Condemned to death for breaking the peace, they were allowed to commit suicide as a mark of honor to their feudal devotion. Kneeling in the temple grounds, they stoically killed themselves one after the other in order of rank.

Charcoal at very low temperatures will absorb 10 times as much gas as charcoal at barely freezing temperature.

Roadside Market Can Be Source Of Extra Money

RALEIGH — Thousands of Tar Heel farmers looking for additional enterprises to boost farm income this year might well consider the roadside market.

George Absher, marketing specialist for the State College Extension Service, says the importance of making extra income this year is becoming apparent to farmers all over the state. An efficient operated roadside market will attract customers from considerable distances away, says Absher. And in many sections of the state these outlets from fresh farm products bring in a sizeable portion of the farm income.

The principal point to be considered in establishing a roadside market, says Absher, is the volume of traffic. It is necessary to have a certain volume, although if the produce is fresh and the price right, people will drive "out of their way" to buy your product. Also, there should be adequate parking space around the roadside market; it should be attractive and well kept; and courteous service should be the byword.

Roadside selling of farm-grown produce is becoming more popular with North Carolina farmers every year, says Absher. And the consuming public seems to like the products offered. There are several advantages: they offer fresher produce; it is usually of higher quality; and it is almost always less expensive.

There is opportunity also, according to Absher, for farmers to plant a few of the acres lost in the cotton acreage reduction to sweet potatoes since the labor requirements are similar. Sweet potato acreage has been declining recently and the price has been favorable, offering a very satisfactory profit per acre for efficient growers.

Bees Help Hike Arizona Cotton

RALEIGH — Tar Heel cotton farmers can learn something from their Arizona counterparts, according to W.A. Stephen, bee specialist for the State College Extension Service.

Stephen says Arizona farmers have boosted cotton production 10 per cent by placing a few bee hives in the cotton fields. The bees do an excellent job of pollinating the cotton, says Stephen.

A whale when first born may sometimes exceed a third the length of the mother.

It's Time To Think Of Home Gardens For 1954

RALEIGH — It's time to start thinking about that home garden for 1954.

Back yard gardeners and truck farmers throughout the state will want a copy of the latest publication of the State College Agricultural Extension Service, "1954 Recommended Vegetable Varieties." Prepared by staff members of the Department of Horticulture at State College, the publication lists 30 recommended fruits and vegetables for the three sections of the state — Coastal Plain, Piedmont, and Mountains.

The list includes asparagus, bush snap beans, pole snap beans, bush lima beans, pole lima beans, beets, sprouting broccol (heading), cabbage, cantaloupes, carrots, cauliflower, collards, sweet corn, pickling type cucumbers, slicing type cucumbers, eggplant, lettuce, mustard, okra, onions, garden peas, bell pepper, Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, radish, spinach, summer squash, tomatoes, turnips and watermelons.

A breakdown of recommendations also lists vegetables for the home garden, commercial crops, and for trial on a limited commercial scale.

Free copies of the pamphlet are now available through local county farm agents or by writing Department of Agricultural Information, N.C. State College, Raleigh, N.C.

Just ask for "1954 Recommended Vegetable Varieties."

Egypt Plans For Costly Program Of Development

CAIRO (AP) — The fabulous wealth of Egypt's former dynastic family may finance a program of development which will change the economic face of Egypt. Fortunes of more than 400 members of the Mohamed Aly family has been confiscated by the Egyptian government. Preliminary estimates value this wealth at between 143 to 287 million dollars.

Economic development projects planned by the revolutionary government of soldier-president Mohamed Naguib will cost an estimated 225 million dollars. (This does not include the project new High Dam on the Nile.)

Originally, the government assumed that foreign loans would be needed to finance these projects. With the Mohamed Aly wealth now in government hands, however, it is believed that these projects can be financed without foreign aid.

Says Disease Control Program Has Meant Profits In Poultry

RALEIGH — North Carolina farmers can thank a highly successful disease control program for a good part of the $87 million in cash income they receive annually from poultry.

L.J. Fourie, poultry expert for the N.C. Department of Agriculture, declares that without a successful cooperative Pullorum disease control program, many of the 70 million baby chicks produced by hatcheries in 1953 would be liabilities rather than assets.

Pullorum disease, Fourie explains, is an infection that often causes serious losses among young birds. Chicks that have Pullorum disease and recover develop into "carriers." These carriers are capable of laying eggs containing the Pullorum germ that may infect the developing chicks. Should the chick hatch, according to Fourie it could spread the disease to other chicks.

The Pullorum control program began in 1927 when the State Department of Agriculture began regulating chicken and turkey hatcheries. The first year, four men tested only a few thousand birds. Last year, 16 inspectors and 85 testing agents tested 1.6 million birds. The reduction in Pullorum infected birds has been in direct ratio to the intensity of the inspecting program according to Fourie.

The program involves the testing and culling of breeding flocks, Fourie says. "As the industry expands, the continued cooperation of producers is a vital necessity."

"The fine cooperation we have

One of the most dangerous of all poultry diseases has been dramatically reduced, as can be seen in the above chart, by a cooperative testing program to discover and eliminate Pullorum-infected birds in North Carolina hatchery flocks.

received from flock owners, hatcherymen, and State College has made it possible to reduce the disease to a safe minimum... and make North Carolina chicks a safe investment."

Describes Camera Role In Soil Work

Arch Flanagan, representing Pitt County at the annual meeting of the Soil Conservation District Supervisors in Statesville last week, demonstrated photographic equipment purchased for use by Soil Conservation offices to the more than 200 supervisors in attendance.

As a part of the model district supervisors meeting held before the group by supervisors from this district, Flanagan demonstrated 35 millimeter cameras purchased for each conservationist in this district.

This camera, Flanagan told the assembled supervisors, is for taking pictures of problem areas before, during and after soil conservation treatment. These pictures are in color he said, and usually show the farmer putting in use the soil conservation practices, as, for instance laying of drainage tile with the tile trenching machine.

Flanagan then explained the light meters purchased along with each camera and the necessity of its use for obtaining good results.

The supervisor next demonstrated the use of a table viewer purchased for the soil conservation offices for showing the color slides to individual farmers demonstrating the results obtained.

Flanagan then demonstrated a large slide projector using a thousand watt bulb which is used for projecting the slides at farm meetings.

He then demonstrated a recently purchased press camera which is used for newspaper work. He said that with this camera pictures of soil conservation work can be taken and used for newspaper publication almost immediately.

Flanagan then showed the supervisors pictures that had been taken in Pitt County.

He showed pictures of the tile laying machine purchased by a number of farmers in this area as it was laying the tile.

Attending the meet from Pitt County were Flanagan, Area Conservationist S. L. Daughtridge and Pitt County Soil Conservationist Connor Eagles.

Other representatives from the Coastal Plain District included: from Greens County, Alonza Edwards, Joe Edmondson and Fred Darden; Edgecombe, Jim Satterthwaite; Martin County, C. A. Robertson, J. L. Knowles and U. Ben Rogers.

During the two-day meet the conservationists heard speeches by Dave Weaver, head of the State College Extension Service and L. Y. Ballentyne North Carolina Commissioner of Agriculture.

On the opening night of the meet the conservationists attended a supper given by the people of Statesville at which Ballentyne was the principal speaker.

He urged the creating and keeping strong of a soil and water conservation program so our soils may be productive in the future to produce ample food and fiber for a growing population.

Over 9 Million Layers Kept On Tar Heel Farms

RALEIGH — North Carolina poultrymen are keeping about 9.25 million layers, according to recent statistical reports. Of this number, approximately 10 per cent, or nearly 1,000,000, are not even "paying for their keep."

C.F. Parrish, poultry specialist for the State College Extension Service, says Tar Heel poultry should make money this year, but adds that "the margin of profit will be closer than in 1953."

This means, according to Parrish that the farmer who maintains a flock that needs culling will find himself with less money than last year. "Naturally if a flock has a millstone of 10 per cent unprofitable producers hanging around its neck the thing to do is to cull out the non-producers. And the sooner the job is done the more profitable the flock will become."

The price of heavy hens is reasonably good at this time of the year, says Parrish, and poultrymen would be wise to remove these low producers from the flock and place them on the market now.

It is not necessary that each bird in the flock be handled. It is very practical to use a flashlight and cull the flock at night. In most instances non-producers are easily recognized by the appearance of the color of their comb or beak. When a suspicious bird is spotted, it should be handled. Culling at night does not disturb the flock and is certainly preferable to daytime culling, according to Parrish. A clean chicken coop can be placed in the laying pen and as the unprofitable birds are located, they can be placed in the coop and carried to market the following day. Where one unprofitable or nonproducing hen is retained in the flock, it requires two other extremely good producers to pay for the "loafers' feed."

J.J. NeSmith told the Arkansas Oil Dealers Association that no war or panic can so completely destroy a business as can a new and better product in the hands of a competitor. He said many new and better products are in the offing.

Smithy Rebuilds Antique Autos

CLARKSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — George Smith, blacksmith, isn't shoeing many horses these days but he manages to live in the "golden age" anyhow. He's rebuilding antique autos. # Bucs Defeat Catamounts, 81 - 67

J. C. Thomas Collects 27 Points To Spark Win; Pirates Strengthen Hold On Conference Lead With 10-1 Mark

By Jimmy Ellis
Reflector Sports Writer

East Carolina's College of the Pirates turned loose a pair of high-scoring scorers last night to gain an 81-67 revenge win over Western Carolina's Catamounts. A crowd of 2,000 fans saw the game in ECC's Memorial Gymnasium.

Guard J.C. Thomas ran and shot his way to his best performance in two years with the Pirates and wound up with high-scoring honors with 27 points, Center Bobby Hodges, the club's scoring leader as well as the North State Conference's top point producer, was second in the scoring column with 24 points.

The victory gave the Pirates solid revenge for their only defeat of the season, Western Carolina had dumped the Pirates off the unbeaten bandwagon less than two weeks ago with a 68-65 upset win over the Bucs of Coach Howard Porter. With last night's victory safely tucked in their record books, the Pirates now own a 10-1 record in the North State Conference and an overall mark of 12-1. Western Carolina has a conference record of five wins and two defeats and is tied with Lenoir-Rhyne for second place in the conference standings.

Not Easy Win

The victory wasn't an easy one for the Pirates. The Cats started just as fast as East Carolina did and stayed right with Porter's team for much of the first three quarters. They never managed to get a lead after the second quarter but there were times when they were less than five points away from the front running Pirates.

East Carolina looked at times as if it were going to make a runaway of the game. After a 3-3 tie in the early minutes of the game the Pirates broke away to run the score to 11-3. Western Carolina started hauling back, however, and by the time the quarter ended the Buc's lead had been cut to 19-15.

As the second quarter started, the visiting Cats went on a little scoring spree of their own and tied the score at 20-20. East Carolina, with Hodges and Thomas working together well, then ran up a 32-25 margin and stayed in the lead from that point on.

After a half-time lead of 39-35 the Pirates went to work in the third quarter building up what amounted to a lead of 13 points at a couple of intervals. Western Carolina pulled up on both occasions, however, and ECC had only a nine-point lead at the beginning of the fourth quarter.

Thomas Hits

Western Carolina went on another scoring rampage right at the opening of the last period and pulled within four points of Porter's Pirates, East Carolina, or more correctly, Thomas. Starting hitting again and moved back in front by a 69-61 margin with six minutes remaining. Some solid defensive work to go with Thomas' offensive work then started shoving the Cats into submission.

Western Carolina only got six points in the last six minutes and all six of these points came with less than a minute left to play, that means East Carolina held their visitors scoreless for almost five minutes during that crucial period in the game.

About the only man on the Western Carolina team the Pirates couldn't stop was forward Bob Ray. The slender senior tied Thomas for high-scoring honors with 27 points and played an outstanding game in all respects, Jimmy Jordan, Western Carolina's high-scoring sophomore center, got only nine points with Hodges guarding him.

The Pirates' next game will be Monday night when they travel to Boone to meet Appalachian. They will be back home Wednesday night to take on Atlantic Christian. Both games are North State Conference games.

Phants Bow To New Bern In League Clash By 59-54

Sideris And Edwards Pace Greenville Scoring As Locals Sustain Second Consecutive Conference Defeat

By BOBBY STARKEY
Greenville's Phantoms saw their halftime lead of five points blasted to bits in a torrid 22 point production by the New Bern Bears in the third quarter of the Phants seventh Northeastern Conference game played in New Bern last night. The Bears won, 59-54.

After the halftime intermission the Bears began to hit from all angles. The Phants' defense collapsed for the moment and the Bears quickly erased the 30-25 lead enjoyed by the G-Men at the half. Sparking the New Bern team to the front were Robbie Kennel, the team's leading scorer, and Jack Wells, who scored 4 quick field goals during the drive. New Bern rang up 22 points to 10 for the Phants and took the lead at the end of the third quarter, 47-40.

The last stanza was marked by numerous bad passes and neither team could gain an advantage, although the Greenies did outscore the Bears by 14-12. At one time in the final stanza the Phants pulled to within 3 points of New Bern, but Kennel was fouled, made bad tries, and a moment later added a field goal to clinch the game.

High scorer for the night was Kennel with 20 points. Next came the Greenville players, George Sideris and Hal Edwards with 15 points each.

The game was marked by bad passes and wild attempts to score by each team. Greenville's fast break failed to work and the Bears converted numerous bad passes into easy field goals. The Phantom defense was ragged throughout the entire contest.

The loss lessened the chances of the Phants winning the regular season championship. Their record is now five wins and two losses, good enough for second place only.

Next game for the Greenville squad will be against Washington on Tuesday night in the Greenville gym. Greenville defeated Washington earlier in the season by a close margin.

Nation's Undeclared Risk Marks Tonight

Greenie Juniors Take 50-33 Win

Using subs throughout the entire game, the Baby Phants defeated the New Bern J.V.'s by a score of 50 to 33 last night in New Bern.

The game was a contest only in the initial moments when the New Bern squad managed to stay even with the Baby Spooks until the end of the first quarter. The press was then applied to the Little Bears and the Phants ran away with the game.

High scorer for the Junior Varsity was Gene Hudson with 15 points. Hudson also turned in a good game in all other departments. Ike Riddick was second high with 12 points followed by Larry Powell with 11.

The victory was the sixth in seven conference affairs for the Baby Phants and gives them a strangle hold on the league's second position. Next game is Tuesday night with Washington's Junior Pam Pack.

By BEN PHLEGAR

NEW YORK (AP)—Three of the last six all-winning basketball teams in the nation risk their perfect records tonight and Seattle tackles Portland in a bid for its 19th straight triumph after stumbling in the first game of the season.

Top ranking Kentucky, shaken during the week by disclosures that its three leading stars won't be eligible for the post season tournaments seeks victory No. 13 against Vanderbilt.

Duquesne, runner-up to the Wildcats in the Associated Press poll, tries for No. 17 against St. Bonaventure at Buffalo. And Erskine College of Due West, S. C., puts its 11-0 mark on the line against Belmont Abbey.

The other unbeaten are Western Kentucky, which won its 19th game last night—an 87-72 romp over Regis of Denver; Connecticut (14-0) and Norwich (12-0), both idle with exams until next week.

Lawrence Tech of Detroit bowed out of the select group after winning 17 in a row. Findlay College of Ohio pulled the upset 85-84 on a foul shot by Leroy Marquette in the closing seconds.

Talented Tom Marshall led Western Kentucky's assault on Regis with 30 points as he played every position—guard, forward and center.

Frank Selvy of Furman, the nation's leading major scorer, had one of the worst nights of his career in an 85-67 victory over winless Newberry State, who had been averaging 39.5 points per game, was held to a mere 23 points and only five field goals.

But Togo Palazzi, Holy Cross' big scorer, returned to form with a vengeance scoring 41 points in a 93-85 overtime verdict over Niagara. Togo's performance equaled the Boston Garden individual scoring record shared by Bevo Francis and Johnny O'Brien.

It was a high scoring night in Boston. The first game of the Garden doubleheader found Rhode Island upsetting Boston College 102-101, also in overtime.

Oregon State stopped improving Oregon 52-41 and gained half interest in the Pacific Coast Conference. Oregon then held it all alone with a 5-1 record before bowing to 7 foot 3 inch Swede Halbrook and Co. The two clubs meet again tonight.

In other games on the West Coast California whipped Utah 70-59. Washington State surprised Idaho 71-61 and Brigham Young defeated Washington 89-79 in overtime.

Texas Western pulled into fourth place in the Border Conference with an 83-69 decision over Arizona State of Tempe.

Butler University scored its third success in eight starts against Big Ten foes, 78-69 over an ice cold Northwestern quintet.

Ayden Triumphs Over Vanceboro

AYDEN—Ayden's Tornados racked up a pair of Coastal Conference victories here last night at the expense of the Vanceboro Pirates.

In the first game of the conference doubleheader, forwards Wilma Stocks and Gwen McLawhorn combined their talents to account for all of Ayden's points in a 33-31 victory. In the nightcap, three Ayden players cracked double figures in a 60-51 win.

Miss Stocks scored 27 of her team's points and Miss McLawhorn got the other six in the girls' game. Through their efforts, Ayden led throughout the contest and though they were seriously threatened at times they were never tied or headed in the contest.

Some top-notch defensive work by a substitute guard also went a long way in accounting for the Ayden victory. Doris Whaley sparked the Ayden defense which kept Vanceboro at least arm's length from the Tornados.

The victory was the girls' first in Coastal Conference play. They had lost six consecutive Coastal league games before the win last night.

In the boys game, Ham Lang, Thomas Heath, and Bobby Harris all hit the double figures to give the Tornados their fourth Coastal Conference win in seven games. Heath was the scoring leader with 15 points but Lang accounted for 11 and Harris 10.

Ayden trailed at only one point in the game and that was by a single marker in the third period when the Vanceboro rallied momentarily. The Tornados bounced back quickly, however, to sew up the contest.

Center Douglas Worthington played an important role in the victory with some top-notch rebounding off both guards. He also turned in some top defensive work against the Vanceboro squad.

Winiger, Harrison Pacing Thunderbird Golf Tourney

By BOB MYERS

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)—Young Bob Winiger and an ailing E. J. (Dutch) Harrison led the way into the third round of the $15,000 Thunderbird Invitational golf tournament today but the going promised to be rough for the two final rounds.

Pressing close behind were 10 crack players, including Ben Hogan, as the field of 36 selected professionals went into the final laps of the 72-hole event which winds up Sunday.

Harrison, 43-year-old veteran from Ardmore, Okla., had rounds of 63-68. Winiger, 31, from Oklahoma City, had 61-70, and they were tied at 131 at the halfway mark.

Harrison had personal troubles—the recurrence of the pain of two unseparated vertebrae which have been rubbing against each other since he was a kid in his native Arkansas.

Hogan, after a first round 65, fell back to a conservative 70 for 135, where he was tied with Johnny Palmer, Ted Kroell and Vic Chezzi. Sandwiched in and closer to the pace were Fred Haas Jr., Chandler Harper and Jim Ferrier, the latter with a 66 yesterday. Ahead of Hogan and Co. were Lloyd Mangrum, Australian champion Peter Thomson and Marty Purgol. Mangrum, out of the money in the Los Angeles and San Diego Opens added a 68 to his first round 66.

Key figures were still Hogan, the biggest name in golf despite his infrequent tournament appearances; Harrison, and Winiger, rated a comer in pro circles in his second year on the tournament circuit.

Not far out of the picture was Gene Littler of San Diego and Palm Springs, the 23-year-old youngster who abdicated the National Amateur crown and made his pro debut here. Littler shot his second successive 68 for 138 yesterday.

Johnson's Win Being Disputed

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP)—Jimmy Slade and 1,484 fans at St. Nicholas Arena don't think Harold Johnson is quite ready for Archie Moore. The TV audience hasn't been heard from—yet.

"He fought like he was scared," said Slade last night, after losing a split decision to the No. 1 light heavyweight contender in 10 rounds. "He fought less this time than before."

Johnson beat Slade easily in the same arena Jan. 16, 1953. He barely squeaked home this time on the official card.

Judge Harold Barnes even gave it to Slade 5-4-1. Judge Joe Eppy voted 7-3 and Referee Al Berl 5-4-1, both for Johnson. The AP card had Johnson on top 6-4.

"I was slow," said Johnson. "Maybe it was the extra weight. I fight best at 175 pounds (Johnson weighed 178½, heaviest of his career and Slade 182). He's a hard fellow to look good against. But I figure I won."

Tommy Loughery, his manager, was disturbed about the boos his fighter drew while Referee Berl pleaded with both men to fight harder.

"He gave him (Slade) a boxing exhibition," said Loughery. "They (fans) want him to step in there and get hit."

Slade was outspoken in his views because he thought he deserved the decision. But he fought only in spurts until the final rounds.

Johnson's next fight will be with Billy Gilliam, Feb. 23 at Troy, Ohio.

Philadelphia promoter Herman Taylor hopes to match Johnson the home town boy against Moore outdoors next June.

Pros Seeking To End 'Injuries'

By RALPH BERNSTEIN

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Football is threatening to replace tennis as the sport of gentlemen.

The National Football League yesterday joined its amateur brethren, the National Collegiate Athletic Assn., in appealing to the better nature of its mayhem-minded behemoths.

The appeal was in connection with players faking injuries in the late minutes of the first or second half or of the game in order to stop the clock and save valuable time for possible scoring maneuvers. Commissioner Bert Bell, a new half million, 12-year contract in his pocket, introduced a measure aimed at regulating such histrionics.

Forty Mr. Bell would have his officials run off 15 seconds on the clock in the last two minutes of a half or of the game whenever a player injury or disqualification crops up. The officials would act only when the game is tied or the offensive team is behind. But despite their vote of confidence in the commissioner—the 12 year contract—the owners proved the NFL operation isn't a one man dictatorship. They disagreed with Bell.

After slight debate the owners voted to "remind coaches to remind their players of the gentlemen's agreement pertaining to no faking of injuries in the last two minutes of the half or of the game." The NCAA, in convention at Cincinnati recently did the same thing. In fact they wrote the reminder as a foreword in the rule book.

Adelphi College Drops Athletics

NEW YORK (AP)—The increasing difficulties and lessening rewards of fielding a small college football team were emphasized today as Adelphi College of Garden City, N. Y., became the third school in less than a month to drop the sport from its intercollegiate athletic program.

Quincy, Ill., on Jan. 25 and Case Institute of Cleveland, O. were the other colleges which have suspended football since the first of the year.

Adelphi which had a 2-3 record in collegiate competition last year, threw in the sponge yesterday following a meeting of its board of trustees. "Lack of interest on the part of the student body," was the reason given for the suspension.

Discuss Rules

DURHAM (AP)—Commissioner Wallace Wade met with head football coaches of the Atlantic Coast and Southern Conferences today to discuss rule changes for 1954.

M.P. Knight of Durham secretary of the officials' booking office for the two conferences, joined the group.

The medalist from Wilson, N.C., the 1952 North Carolina State Amateur champion, scored his second straight 67 over the par 71 Ocala Municipal Course yesterday for 134.

Ruffin Leading Golf Tournament

OCALA, Fla. (AP)—Art Ruffin carried a three-stroke lead into today's third round of the Henry N. Camp Invitational Amateur golf tournament.

The medalist from Wilson, N.C., the 1952 North Carolina State Amateur champion, scored his second straight 67 over the par 71 Ocala Municipal Course yesterday for 134.

Fight Tonight On West Coast

RICHMOND, Calif. (AP)—Joe Micelli, a heavy puncher from New York City, makes his Pacific Coast ring debut tonight in a 10-round, nationally televised fight with up and coming middleweight Wes Echols of San Francisco.

A near capacity crowd is expected at Richmond Auditorium, seating 3,808. The California scoring system of 11 points to the round will be used with two judges and a referee officiating.

Showdown Ahead In Golf Tourney

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Defending champion Mary Lena Faulk and British Amateur champion Marlene Stewart today appeared headed for a showdown in the Helen Lee Doherty Amateur golf championship.

Miss Faulk, U. S. Amateur women's champion from Thomasville, Ga., plays Grace DeMoss Smith of Coral Gables, Fla., in an 18-hole semifinal match today while Miss Stewart, from Fonthill, Ont., meets Ronnie Colby of Hollywood, Fla.

Winners of today's 18-hole semifinals meet for the championship tomorrow in a 36-hole match, over the 6,190-yard Miami Shores Country Club course where women's par is 37-38-75.

Silver dollars are in common use only in a few western states like Montana and Nevada.

Doubles Champs Advance Again

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Rex Hartwig and Mervyn Rose, who on Friday won the Australian National doubles title, today advanced to the final in the singles.

Hartwig ended the winning run of veteran 35-year-old John Bromwich by beating him, 8-6 6-4, 9-7 in their semifinal. Bromwich's victory over Tony Trabert of the U.S. several days ago led to controversy in Aussie tennis circles.

Rose upset Ken Rosewall in the other semifinal.

Rosewall, who won the fifth and deciding match in the recent Davis Cup challenge round by whipping Vic Seixas of the United States, was beaten in a five-set struggle by Rose, 6-2, 6-3, 3-6, 1-6, 7-5.

PITT — SUNDAY and MONDAY!

Pitt Principals Stage Regular Meetings Here

Pitt County white and Negro principals held their regular monthly meetings yesterday and Thursday. It was reported this morning by County Superintendent D. H. Conley.

At the meeting of the white principals the Big Change, a speaking contest open to high school students, was discussed. The contest opened January 1 and the first prize will be $1,000.

Frank Redman, commander of the local National Guard unit, discussed briefly the enlistment requirements of the National Guard. He explained to the principals that a young man could get his military requirements off by serving in the National Guard.

There was a report made regarding nutrition practices in the schools. Principals were urged to make available through their snackers only food high in nutritional value, and not conflict with their lunch rooms.

An announcement was made concerning the diploma orders. The principals were asked to send in information regarding the diplomas.

Paul J. Clark announced that the County Teachers meeting would be held in Ayden February 10 at 7:30. The program at this meeting will be presented by the home economic teachers.

The forthcoming high school basketball tournament was discussed. Fodie H. Hodges, chairman of the Athletic committee, who is handling the details, said that the tournament will open in Farmville on February 18. It shifts to the East Carolina Gymnasium for the final night.

The program was presented by Grimesland Principal Garlan Bailey. He discussed the relations of school administrator and the student. He suggested that the schools have student-parent forums to discuss the student problems.

Prior to the adjournment of the meeting E. F. Johnson announced that the State N.C.E.A. meeting will be held in Raleigh March 19.

At the Negro meeting Thursday

Musical Program For Club Meet

At the Greenville Exchange Club's weekly last night, Miss Jean Frickard of the music department of East Carolina College, sang several songs. Pianist Jack Willford and Bugler Jerry Patterson were on the program.

President Ed Parkinson, who presided, announced that several members will attend the Exchange State Board of Control meeting in Sanford February 6-7.

James S. Ficklen and Rev. Robert Crawford were guests of the club.

Funeral Sunday For Miss Rosanne Fusani

Funeral services for Rosanne Fusani, seven year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Treno Fusani, who died in the Navy hospital at Chicopee Falls, Mass., Wednesday night, will be held from Ballard's Presbyterian Church Sunday at 3 p.m. Rev. Herbert Dail, pastor, assisted by Rev. Edward S. Coates of Farmville, will officiate. Burial will be in the Elks family cemetery.

Surviving are her parents and a sister, of Chicopee Falls, Mass.; her maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Elks of Ballard's Crossroads, and her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Rosetta Fusani of Buffalo, N.Y.

afternoon the principals also discussed the nutrition program in the schools. Several principals said they are going to apply to the State for milk under the child feeding program.

Also there was an announcement made regarding the speaking contest for Negro high school students sponsored by the bankers.

The principals are making plans for improving the attendance in the schools. A committee has been appointed to confer with proper officials regarding the matter.

Keeping school records up to date was also discussed by the principals and the preliminary report on the March of Dimes was given. The complete report is expected next week.

Plans for the county-wide teachers meeting next Wednesday night in the Court House at 7 p.m. have been made. It was reported.

Mrs. E. W. Braxton Funeral On Sunday

BETHEL—Mrs. E. W. Braxton, 67, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. R. Hunnicutt, in Bethel at 3 a.m. Saturday after several months of illness.

Funeral services will be held at Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church near Winterville Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Henry Melvin, pastor, and Rev. E. G. Cole, Baptist minister of Winterville, and Rev. H. B. Lewis, Methodist minister of Bethel, will officiate. Burial will be in the church cemetery.

The body will remain at Ayres' Funeral Home until one hour before the funeral.

Mrs. Braxton was the daughter of the late Henry and Susan Smith Harris of Bethel. She was married to E. W. Braxton in 1923. He died in 1950.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. W. R. Hunnicutt of Bethel; one son, Tarleton G. Braxton of Godwin; two sisters, Mrs. W. J. McLawhorn of Winterville and Mrs. W. L. Cherry of Greenville; two brothers, J. L. and W. S. Harris of Greenville; and four grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Jet Bombers To Fly Non-Stop To Base In Africa

WASHINGTON (AP)—A force of American jet bombers flies next month to a North African base within striking range of vital targets inside Russia. The B47's are fitted for atomic warfare.

The Air Force announced last night that about 45 Boeing Stratofortresses will fly nonstop from Barksdale Air Force Base, La., to a forward base in French Morocco. The trip will cover about 4,775 miles.

B47s have made training flights to North Africa from British bases, but this is the first regular assignment of a wing to Morocco where the Air Force now has three air fields operating and a fourth under construction.

The Air Force said the 301st Medium Bombardment Wing will spend 60 days in Morocco. It will be relieved after that time by another wing from the United States.

The 301st will cross the Atlantic in small groups and will be refueled by tanker planes while in flight.

In seasonal migration, Robins often fly from Newfoundland or northern Quebec to the Midwestern United States.

Joel McCrea and Yvonne De Carlo are the stars in the Technicolor hit "BORDER RIVER."

School Menu

School menus for the coming week, as released by the supervisor of city school cafeterias, Mrs. Louise Rush, are as follows:

Monday—steak beef with potatoes and onions, steamed cabbage, pickle strips, corn bread, butter, cookie and milk;

Tuesday—hot dog in roll with chili sauce, creamed potatoes, slaw, cheese sticks, gingerbread and milk;

Wednesday—vegetable soup (beef), crackers, ham salad and pimento cheese sandwich, cherry cobbler and milk;

Thursday—Italian spaghetti, string beans, carrot strips, biscuit and butter, jello, milk;

Friday—macaroni and cheese, buttered green peas, sliced beets, rolls, butterscotch pudding and milk.

Church Group Is Host At Supper

GRIFTON—The Grifton Christian Men's Fellowship was host last Thursday at supper to the Christian Men's Fellowship of the Hookerton Union. Ninety-one persons attended.

Rev. Horace Quigley, pastor of Grifton Christian Church, presided. M. E. Cavendish, president of the District Fellowship, presided. Rev. Horace Quigley, pastor of Grifton Christian Church, and H. E. Ricks of Kinston and Lindley Pate had parts on the program.

In addition to President Cavendish, the other officers for the current year are: A. J. Craft, John R. Coward and M. A. Cox, vice-presidents; Lindley Pate, secretary and treasurer and Charlie Jackson, assistant secretary and treasurer.

The next meeting will be held at Eighth Street Christian Church in Greenville April 8.

Dr. W. E. Marshall, professor of political science at East Carolina Teachers College, spoke on Fellowship and Its Values.

Rev. Clinton Bradshaw led the group singing. A moment of silence was observed in memory of W. K. Bunch, a layman in the Walstonburg Christian Church.

Colored News

The many friends of Mr. Lenwood Woodard will be glad to know that he has recovered from two weeks of illness.

The Pastor's Aid Club of Sycamore Hill Baptist Church will meet at the home of Mrs. Rosa Hinton, 103 Cotanche Street, Monday night.

Mrs. Willie Mae Tyson, wife of Joe Willie Tyson, is recuperating at her home, 807-B Vandivilt Lane, after being a patient in Pitt Memorial Hospital for six weeks. She underwent three operations and had several blood transfusions.

Mrs. May Jane Graham died suddenly at her home, 803 Vance St., Tuesday morning. She was a member of York Memorial Methodist Church and the Morning Light Tent Lodge No. 458.

Funeral services will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. at York Memorial Church with Rev. P. H. Munford officiating. Burial will follow in Brown Hill Cemetery.

Surviving are her husband, Mr. John Graham; two nieces, Mrs. Carrie Glover of Greenville and Mrs. Henrietta Daniels of Richmond, Va.; one nephew, James W. Daniels; a sister-in-law, Mrs. Helen Graham of Atlantic City, N.J.

The United Daughters Club of Mt. Calvary will meet Sunday at 5:30 p.m. at the church.

Gas Heater Left On, Flared Up

Firemen were called to the John Flanagan Euggy Company at 6:45 last night when a gas heater which had been left burning flared up. The building was locked at the time and firemen had to break a glass door to gain entrance to the building.

No damage from the fire resulted.

ARRESTED FOR FAILURE YIELD RIGHT OF WAY
Greenville police arrested Alton Tucker, Negro, 1211 Battle street, and charged him with failure to yield right of way to another vehicle.

Police records show that Tucker's car was involved in a collision with a car driven by Mary Porter Cooper of Grimesland Friday.

Speaker Believes Strife Prolonged

By ALVIN TAYLOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Major Malcolm Rosholt, speaker before the Pitt County Executive Club, said last night that it would have been possible to win the Korean war in one year "if we had declared war against the North Koreans" at the time of the attack rather than fight a police action.

"Why didn't your congressman, and my congressman, get on his feet and vote for a declaration of war against the enemy?" Rosholt asked, referring to the days immediately following the North Korean attack across the thirty-eighth parallel.

"I dare say that if we had done that we could have won that war in one year," said the former air force major.

He said that the National Security Council met in two days after the attack and decided that this nation would take action on Korea. He noted Congress applauded this decision but they did not vote for war.

Rosholt said that only 16 out of 64 nations in the United Nations came to America's aid when it decided to fight back in Korea.

In Oklahoma, he said, a Negro woman married to a Mexican claimed her rights under the U.S. charter in a court action. He said this is not as silly as it sounds and it is possible that it may have legal implications some day.

In New Jersey, he said children in one school are now pleading allegiance as future citizens of the world rather than reciting the pledge of allegiance to the flag.

"Do you think this one-world stuff is getting into the schools on the other side of the iron curtain?" the major asked.

Turning to the prisoner of war question in Korea Rosholt said: "There's strong reason to believe that there are 800 or 900 American men and officers still being held in Manchuria."

In answer to a question following the speech, Rosholt said that the Americans that failed to return with the other prisoners would probably fare very badly now. He said that they will be paraded all over China and be the center of attention at rallies at which they would denounce the United States.

China, itself does not represent power, the major said. He admitted that China has a lot of manpower but said that it is not limitless.

"They've got more 4-F's over there than any country in the world," he stated.

He said that China had no industrial know-how and that all they produce in the way of arms now is

Friday's Cases In Police Court

By CHESTER WALSH
In Police Court Friday, Judge Charles H. Whedbee found Jackson Atkinson, Negro, 216 Boyd Avenue, not guilty of possession of lottery tickets and operating a lottery.

The court found Atkinson guilty of aiding and abetting and promoting a lottery. Judge Whedbee gave him six months on the roads, sentence suspended on payment of $50, costs deducted. The judgment also provides that Atkinson must not have in his possession lottery tickets, certificates or slips of paper bearing any numbers. Atkinson is to remain of good behavior and seek gainful employment, the judgment provides.

John Earl Carrington, Negro, charged with forgery of W. S. Shine's name to a check for $10, was bound over under probable cause to Superior Court.

Tommye Stocks, charged with driving drunk, was given three months on the roads, sentence suspended on payment of $100 and costs and the judgment also provides that he is not to operate a motor vehicle for a year. Stocks gave notice of appeal to Superior Court, posted $200 bond and was released.

Matthew Aris, Negro, allowing a non-licensed person to drive his car, judgment continued on payment of $15. In the case of Estella Evans, charged with not having an operator's license, the court continued prayer for judgment on payment of $15.

George B. Jackman, 408 West Fourth street, driving drunk, case transferred to Superior Court for jury trial.

Reynold Wooten, Walstonburg, driving drunk, three months on the roads, suspended on payment of $100 and costs. The judgment also provides that he is not to operate a motor vehicle for a year and the court recommended that his driver's license be revoked for a year.

Otis Hawkins, Negro, drunk, $25 fine, costs deducted.

ADMIRAL DIES

NEW YORK (AP)—Adm. Henry Braid Wilson, 92, the nation's oldest admiral, died today in St. Vincent's Hospital. He retired in 1925.

Girl Scout News

Dear Mother and Daddy,

The Girl Scout Council is having a party on Sunday afternoon at the Rotary Club—a real grown-up tea. You are invited, and we are too.

Please go with us so you can meet our leaders. You will like them, we know. They work so hard to give us a good time and help us to learn our badges and learn things that will help us all our lives.

We want you to meet Mrs. Proctor (she directs Camp Hardee, you know) and Mrs. White, who is president of the Council, and lots of other nice people who come to our meetings sometimes.

Last week at our troop meeting we shelled nuts for the party, and some of the girls helped to salt them. Some of the older Scouts, who are working on their cooking badge, made candy. We have been practicing songs to sing, too, and Mary is going to play a piano solo.

Have you missed the waste basket in our room? Our leader wanted to use it in the craft exhibit. You will see lots of things that were made at troop meetings and at Camp Hardee.

Mrs. Proctor said that everyone who goes to the tea will be given something called an "annual report." She said it would show you what the Council has done during the whole year for all the Scouts and Brownies in Greenville.

Now, don't forget the date and the place. We can go any time between 3:30 and 5:30.

Your daughters,
Susie Scout and Betty Brownie

ECC Student To Give Recital In Elizabeth City

Donald Roebuck of Stokes, pianist and graduate student at East Carolina College, will give a recital Saturday, February 6, in Elizabeth City. The program will be presented at 8 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Irving K. Midgette.

Mr. Roebuck, a pupil of George E. Perry of the college faculty, is a graduate of East Carolina and is now working at the college toward the master's degree in music education. He was one of a small group of talented students chosen during the 1952-1953 term by the faculty of the department of music to give honors recitals preceding graduation.

As a student at East Carolina, Mr. Roebuck has participated in the activities of a number of music organizations on the campus. He belongs to the Music Education Club and has been a member of the East Carolina Orchestra and the College Choir.

In some sections of France, two-thirds of the houses are more than a century old.

AND BACK AT THE TREE— A PERFECTLY BUILT CACHE?

A BAT OF BUILDERS' INSULATION KEEPS THE COLD OUT. THE DOORS INSULATED TOO, AND EVEN WEATHER-STRIPPED.

THESE SMALL HOLES, CHIEF, ON EITHER SIDE ARE DRILLED WITH AN UPWARD SLANT TO PROVIDE VENTILATION WITHOUT ADMITTING RAIN.

IT LOOKS TO ME LIKE THIS HAD BEEN USED FOR SOME TIME.

YOU MEAN TO SAY THE CHILD WAS LEFT HERE MORE THAN ONCE?

YES, AND THERE ARE MARKS ON THE DOOR THAT CAN BE USED FOR TOOL IDENTIFICATION.

ALSO, WE'LL WANT TO REMOVE THAT FELT WEATHER-STRIPPING TO USE FOR MATCHING PURPOSES, PROVIDED WE RECOVER THE ORIGINAL ROLL.

WHY WOULD ANYONE WANT TO LEAVE A BABY IN A TREE?

HEY— LOOK HERE, FELLOWS—

WHAT HAVE YOU DONE WITH MY BABY?

YOUR BABY? YOU'RE THE MOTHER?

YES, WHAT DID YOU DO WITH MY BABY?

THE BOSS GAVE ME THE AFTERNOON OFF FOR PUTTING OVER THE MURPHY DEAL

HOW CAN WE SHOW DAGWOOD THE OFFICE FORCE APPRECIATES HIS GOOD WORK?

LET'S GIVE HIM A BIG SURPRISE PARTY AT HIS HOUSE!

WE'LL BE OVER AT SEVEN, BLONDIE, BUT DON'T TELL DAGWOOD

DON'T WORRY MR. DITHERS, I'LL KEEP IT A SECRET SO IT WILL BE A COMPLETE SURPRISE

WE HEARD MR. DITHERS TELL MRS. BUMSTEAD THAT HE'S GOING TO GIVE YOU A SURPRISE PARTY TONIGHT

TEE-HEE

I WON'T SPOIL THE SURPRISE—I'LL ACT AS IF I DON'T KNOW ANYTHING ABOUT IT

BLONDIE, LET'S GO OUT TO DINNER TONIGHT AND THEN DANCING

OH—UH—ER— NO, DEAR—NOT TONIGHT— OH—ER—NO

BUT YOU'RE ALWAYS ASKING ME TO TAKE YOU DANCING— WHY NOT TONIGHT?

PLEASE, DEAR, NOT TONIGHT— PERHAPS TOMORROW

HA-HA, THIS IS FUN—I'M ENJOYING IT—I'LL BE ALL READY FOR THEM WHEN THEY ARRIVE

MR. DITHERS—THE MURPHY DEAL FELL THRU AND THEY'RE SUING US INSTEAD

OH-NO!

THE SURPRISE PARTY FOR DAGWOOD IS OFF!

BLONDIE, HERE COMES MR. DITHERS—I WONDER WHAT HE WANTS

TEE-HEE

YOU'RE FIRED

CRASH

IT TURNED OUT TO BE A SURPRISE AFTER ALL

THE SUPERB SKILLS WHICH HAVE CARRIED HIM TO THE CHAMPIONSHIP HAVE DESERTED THE AMNESIA-RIDDEN BEN BOLT... HE IS FLOORED BY THE WILD SWING OF FARMER MACE PETERS...

IN A FLOOD OF RETURNING MEMORIES, BEN BEGINS TO RELIVE THE DREAFFUL EXPERIENCE OF HIS ACCIDENT...

LIKE THE MISSING PIECES OF A JIG-SAW PUZZLE, THE FORGOTTEN SEGMENTS OF BEN'S PAST BEGIN TO FALL INTO PLACE...

GET THE NEXT COMBO READY... THIS WALTZ IS OVER... BUT GOOD!

THE MAN WHO CLIMBS TO HIS FEET IS A SWIFT-MOVING, ALERT FIGHTER... AN EXPERT AT HIS BUSINESS...

THIS IS BEN BOLT, PROFESSIONAL... HIS OBJECTIVE - TO WIN FAST AND CONCLUSIVELY, AS A CHAMPION SHOULD.

LATER... I'D CONSIDER IT A GREAT FAVOR IF YOU'D TAKE THE WINNER'S PURSE, MACE. YOU... WELL... YOU TAUGHT ME A LOT IN THAT FIGHT.

YOU MUST BE JOSHI, BEN... ANYBODY WHO CAN HIT LIKE YOU DON'T NEED NO TEACHIN' FROM A CLOHOPPER THE LIKES O' ME!

GETTING MY MEMORY BACK IS SORT OF LIKE... WELL, LIVING ALL OVER AGAIN!

YEAH... SO AM I LIVING! BECAUSE IF THAT BOY HAD LICKED YOU HE'D HAVE BEEN THE NEW HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMP! TO THE BOXING COMMISSION A FIGHT IS A FIGHT, NO MATTER IF YOU GOT A MEMORY OR NOT!

D-DON'T LOOK NOW, SAL, B-BUT A WHOLE SCHOOL OF SHARKS IS RIGHT B-BEHIND US!

H-HOPE THIS AIN'T THEIR L-LUNCH TIME, DINAH!

GENTLEMEN, YOU WILL SOON BE COMPLETELY CONVINCED THAT THE GIRLS' BATHING SUITS ARE SHARK-PROOF!

SO WATCH CLOSELY AS THOSE MAN-EATERS APPROACH AND---

HEY! WHAT'S THAT UP IN TH' SKY?

WOW! -LOOK AT IT TRAVEL!

BUT WHAT IS IT?

ALMOST TOO FAST FOR TH' EYE TO FOLLOW!

GONE ALREADY!

NO! -IT'S COMING BACK!

IF THIS AIN'T A FLYING SAUCER I'LL EAT MY PRESS CARD!

WHAT A STORY!

QUICK! -SET UP TH' CAMERAS!

TOO LATE, BOYS... IT'S ALREADY OUT OF SIGHT!

WHAT SPEED... ALMOST AS SOON AS IT APPEARED IT WAS GONE!

G-GONE IS RIGHT! -AN' SO ARE (CHOKE*) DINAH AN' SAL!!

FLASH GORDON

by Mac Raboy

IN PURSUIT OF DALE, FLASH LOCATES DR. SARK'S EXPEDITION IN THE LIBYAN DESERT.

THERE'S THE CAMP. C'MON, BABY! WE'RE GOING DOWN!

LOOK! WE'VE STRUCK IT! DR. SARK, THE FOOL, EH? DR. SARK, THE FANATIC, THEY SAID! WELL, NOW THEY WILL SAY DR. SARK, THE GENIUS! YES, SARK, THE GENIUS!

AHA! YOUNG MAN! COME HERE! YOU ARE JUST IN TIME TO WITNESS THE MOST MONUMENTAL DISCOVERY IN THE ANNALS OF ARCHEOLOGY!

DR. SARK! I CAME HERE ONLY TO FIND DALE ARDEN! WHERE IS SHE?

OHO! YOU MUST BE HER FRIEND, FLASH GORDON! AHA, YES! DALE IS WITH ANOTHER DIGGING PARTY! THEY WILL BE BACK AT SUNDOWN! BUT NOW, LET US CELEBRATE THIS DISCOVERY, EH?

WHAT IS IT? LOOKS LIKE A STRATA OF GLASS BURIED DEEP UNDER THE SAND!

YES! GLASS! TONS OF SAND FUSED INTO GLASS! HOW? BY AN ATOMIC EXPLOSION IN PREHISTORY! AN EXPLOSION THAT GAVE BIRTH TO THE LEGEND OF THE SUN CHARIOT!

WHAT?-- AN ATOMIC BLAST IN PREHISTORIC TIMES?!

NEXT WEEK-- THE PREHISTORIC VISITOR 1-31

I'M GLAD I'M TAKING CONLEY TO THE CITY TODAY, SO HE'LL HAVE REAL PLAY-MATES.

HMM-HIS "IMAGINARY" PLAYMATE SAVED HIS LIFE, AND MINE. I'D GIVE ANYTHING TO SEE HIM. SAY, WHERE IS CONLEY?

I WASN'T PAYING MUCH ATTENTION. HE SAID HE WAS GOING TO THE GARDEN TO-OH-SAY GOOD-BYE TO MISTER MAN!

WHAT! IN THE GARDEN-NOW?

MEANWHILE, OUTSIDE THE GARDEN--

BUT I DON'T WANT TO GO AWAY. I'LL NEVER SEE HERO OR DEVIL-OR YOU-AGAIN--

YOU HAVE TO START SCHOOL SOON, CONLEY, AND YOU SHOULD HAVE BOYS AND GIRLS TO PLAY WITH.

--AND IF YOU'RE A GOOD BOY, AND DO JUST AS YOUR MOTHER AND FATHER SAY, WE'LL SEE YOU AGAIN SOMEDAY.

WILL YOU, OH, WILL YOU? GOODY, GOODY!

WHERE IS HE? WHERE IS HE?

OH, DADDY, MISTER MAN WAS HERE. YOU JUST MISSED HIM!

IN THE DISTANCE, THE SOUND OF HORSES' HOOVES--

NO SIGN OF HIM. GONE. DID I DREAM ALL THIS, OR DOES HE REALLY EXIST? CONLEY, TELL ME EXACTLY WHAT HE LOOKED LIKE.

OH-HE'S AS TALL AS A TREE AND STRONG AS TEN LIONS AND HE HAS A BIG WOLF-AND-

HMM-I GUESS I'LL NEVER REALLY KNOW.

NEXT WEEK: NEW ADVENTURE.

SOME STUPID JASPER HAS STARTED A BRUSH FIRE, AND THE WINDS GOT IT OUT O' CONTROL!

IT'S TURNED THE YEARLINGS, TEX! THEY'RE COMING BACK!

BACK TO THE GATE, RUSTY! QUICK! WE'LL HEAD 'EM BACK INTO THE NORTHWEST FORTY... THEN WE'VE GOTTA DO SOMETHING ABOUT THAT FIRE!

JEEPERS, TEX, THE WIND'S BLOWING THE FLAMES RIGHT TOWARD MRS. CASTLE'S HOUSE!

MEANWHILE, IN MRS. CASTLE'S LIVING ROOM... GREAT HEAVENS! WHERE ARE YOUR BRAINS? DON'T YOU REALIZE THERE'S A HIGH WIND BLOWING? WE'RE IN DANGER!

MISSION ACCOMPLISHED, MA'AM... THE KIDS FROM THE ORPHANAGE ARE HAVING A SHINDIG OVER AT MILESTONE... I LET ALL THE YEARLINGS OUT AND THE KIDS'LL GET BLAMED... THE NAGS STARTED TO COME IN HERE, BUT I SCARED 'EM BACK WITH A GRASS FIRE!

IT AIN'T NOTHING BUT GRASS, MA'AM.

HAVE YOU EVER TRIED TO PUT OUT A GRASS FIRE IN A WIND?

AND IN THE NORTH PASTURE WHERE RUSTY LEFT THE ORPHANS WITH PATTY... KIDS! LISTEN! THAT FIRE IS BLOWING TOWARD MRS. CASTLE'S HOUSE... WE'LL HAVE TO HELP PUT IT OUT... FOLLOW ME!

SURE, PATTY! HOW DO WE DO IT?

HURRY, KIDS!...WE'LL GET BROOMS AND SHOVELS AND WET BURLAP SACKS AT THE BARN!

OKAY RUSTY... ALL THE YEARLINGS ARE BACK IN THE FIELD... NOW BACK TO MRS. CASTLE'S... THE WIND IS GETTING HIGHER BY THE MINUTE!

GIDDAP, DAWN!

THE FIRE HAS SURROUNDED THE HOUSE... WE'RE TRAPPED!

WHY DON'T THE FIRE ENGINES GET HERE?

11-31--TO BE CONTINUED
