FIRE! FIRE!

"Oh, Miss Hansinger Please let's stop and see the fire!" pleaded eleven future homemakers of America on their way home from the N.C. FHA convention in Raleigh Saturday. Miss Hansinger recalled that they drove 2 blocks in 20 minutes. (Quite a record!) to see that fire.

Ginger Ross, Betsy Reid, Annette Dunn, Mary Banks Hummings, Norma Barnhill, Marjorie DeSavigny, Anna Stokes, Carolyn Tripp, Mrs. R.R. Ross, Miss Mary Scott Daniel, and Miss Betty Hansinger numbered eleven in the 3,000 attending.

After leaving Greenville at 7 in the morning and breakfasting in Wilson, the 11 reached the Raleigh Memorial Auditorium where they heard a story-teller from Kansas City and saw the state officers installed. The girls also got a thrill from driving through State college, shopping in the city, and eating at Roy's Drive-in.

Peel Asks Help In New Registration Of Voters

Gilbert Peel, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Elections, last night appealed to the Greenville Rotary club for aid in getting the people of the county registered for the coming Democratic primary.

Peel explained that because of the change in voting precincts of the county, an entire new registration is required this year, and unless citizens register between May 1 and May 15, they will not be eligible to vote in the primary May 29.

"It was not an easy task for me to sign a paper which wiped the name of every registered voter off the books of Pitt County," Peel said; but he explained that such an act was necessary because of the change in townships and voting precincts of the county.

"I would like to see 15,000 to 16,000 people registered in Pitt County this year," Peel continued, "and that is going to be a difficult task in the two-week registration period." He urged Rotarians to take part on the task of getting people registered.

The Rev. W.M. Howard, member of the Rotary Club, discussed for the club an article, "Dynamics of Free Enterprise", which appeared in the Rotary Magazine, written by Paul Hoffman, chairman of the board of the Studebaker Corporation.

American capitalism is a mutual capitalism through which every one shares in the benefits, Rev. Howard said. Through the system of freedom of workers, wide use of mechanical power and technological developments, a wide distribution of wealth has been produced in the American economy, he said. A portion of the success of American free enterprise, he added, is due to its ability to produce, and its ability to change to meet changing conditions.

Guests of the club last night were Frank Steward of Indianapolis, Ind., and Elmer Johnson of Greenville.

The N. C. Coast Is Now Big Business

The day is coming—and indeed is already here in some degree—when coastal North Carolina is going to be one of the choice vacation and tourist spots along the East Coast.

The big new national park which is to be developed along the outer banks in the Hatteras and Ocracoke sections will bring many thousands of tourists to the outer banks which in the past have been relatively out of the way places.

Highway Safety Was Week-End Byword

Safety-consciousness apparently was the byword on Pitt County highways this past week-end. For the first week-end in a long time, not a single automobile accident was investigated by the Highway Patrol from Friday through midnight Sunday.

Perhaps the reason was that people of the county had been warned that the patrol officers were making a "saturation" operation in the county during the week-end. Perhaps the 59 people who were arrested for violation of motor vehicle laws during the period had an effect on the drivers. Or perhaps it was just the presence of an unusually large number of highway patrolmen on Pitt's highways which brought about the better safety record for the period.

Whatever the cause, the "saturation" operation of the patrol seemed to result in greater safety consciousness on the part of the people of the county during the past week-end. Even though the number of people indicted by patrol officers during the three-day saturation was not as high in Pitt as it has been in other counties where similar operations have taken place, the operation was a success.

What the patrol wanted to do was save the loss of life and limb, and prevent accidents by its actions. It is obvious the desired results were achieved.

It would be a fine thing for Pitt County if the apparent degree of safety which was practiced by motorists in the county during the past week-end could be carried out for the remainder of the year.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

WRESTLING WITH THE INEXPRESSIBLE
Many people demur over accepting the Doctrine of the Trinity.

What is this doctrine? The word "Trinity" does not, of course, occur in the Bible. The Doctrine of the Trinity is man's awkward attempt to try to relate certain apparently irreconcilable facts which the Bible presents.

We believe in the unity of God. "The Lord our God is one God." Yet at our Lord's baptism the Heavenly Father spoke, calling Jesus his Son, and the Holy Spirit descended in the form of a dove. The theological paradox which the human mind has never been able satisfactorily to understand—and which we try to explain in the Doctrine of the Trinity—is that although God is one, He is set forth in the Bible as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. These three are persons—that is, endowed with personality—separate, yet united.

Here are apparently irreconcilable facts. They appear contradictory, but we believe they appear so because of our lack of knowledge. We try to resolve the difficulty by the Doctrine of the Trinity—one God in three persons, equal in power and glory.

In the Doctrine of the Trinity man tries to express infinite truth by the use of finite terms.

Another Intra-Party Battle

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON—President Eisenhower has laid the groundwork for another intense intra-party squabble with his demand for further trade and tariff concessions to foreign nations.

Even loyal Republican leaders begin to wonder whether their party can hold Congress and the White House in 1954 and 1956, in view of the many major disagreements between the executive and legislative arms. They have clashed on tax cuts and reform, farm support prices, foreign affairs and on the McCarthy problem. Now they are heading for a fight on such a fundamental issue as the protection of American labor and industry.

OPPOSITION IN SMALLER CITIES—Eisenhower recognizes the latent hostility by asking authority to reduce duties by only 15 per cent over a three-year period, and for softening the buy-American provisions of the Tariff Act. He had been expected to suggest discretionary power to make a 50 per cent reduction.

Principal opposition comes from Republican members in smaller cities and towns, where factory closings and layoffs have produced severe setbacks already. The will probably get major support from Democrats from the South, who seek expanded exports of cotton, tobacco, etc.

The tariff controversy, basically, will be a struggle between Eastern internationalists and the economic isolationists of the Middle West and other sections. It will also pit the heads of the two great labor organizations, the AFL and CIO, against their local units.

According to their complaint, Eastern banking, shipping and industrial interests want freer trade for selfish reasons. Manufacturers of autos and trucks, heavy machinery, utility equipment and other durable goods anticipate a rich foreign market, if only we let overseas customers and countries earn dollars by selling more to us.

THOSE WHO WILL PROFIT—The Ford Company, General Motors, U.S. Steel, Westinghouse and General Electric, it is charged, will profit from deep Development at Atlantic Beach, Nags Head, Kitty Hawk, Topsail and other beaches along the North Carolina coast has been booming since the end of World War II, and continues to boom. Just last week one of the biggest land sales in the history of the state's outer banks was completed when a group of businessmen from Red Springs and Smithfield planked down $350,000 for the western half of Bogue Island on which Atlantic Beach is also located.

Their plans reportedly call for a swanky beach resort development.

All these factors add support to a project the people along the coast have been working on for a long time. That is a coastal highway through North Carolina which actually travels along the coast.

The present "coastal highway" through North Carolina is actually many miles inland, and actually gets to the coast about the time it gets to South Carolina. Tourists traveling the "coastal highway" through North Carolina have to detour many miles off the beaten North-South path to get to the seashore in this state.

U. S. highway 70 now comes to a dead-end at Atlantic, which is commonly referred to as the "jumping off place" of the N. C. mainland. Highway U. S. 158 comes to a dead-end at Hatteras, which, as the sea gull flies is less than 20 miles from Atlantic. But to get from Hatteras to Atlantic by car now, a motorist must drive approximately 300 miles around through the inland part of the state.

A coastal highway which is truly a coastal or seashore highway would be a great boon to the coastal section of North Carolina. It is bound to come sooner or later; and the sooner it does, the greater benefit it will be to North Carolina.

Clean Campaigns Are Needed This Year

In the past in North Carolina, there have been rough campaigns in which the more ardent supporters of various candidates went too far in their attacks in the opposition. On occasions mudslinging has become rampant, and slanderous material has been distributed making unfounded attacks on candidates.

This year, in which races promise to be as hot as in past years, we sincerely hope that candidates and their campaign managers will avoid the vicious, underhanded sort of campaign tactics which have been evidenced in the past. Such tactics may get a few votes, but in the long run they do more harm than good.

Everyone—except possibly some of the candidates involved—likes to see a hard-fought campaign. At the same time, a hard campaign which is also a clean campaign is certainly to be desired.

Candidates and their managers and supporters should keep that in mind as the political temperature in North Carolina counties begins to rise.

and widespread reductions because foreign competitors cannot match their production excellence. The two big unions, which dominate heavy industry, naturally share management's views on this question. George L. Meany and Walter P. Reuther block their local bosses' proposals.

But there are scores of relatively small industries and local unions which will be affected adversely. Their areas, in many instances, have been classified as "depressed" already, with large labor surpluses. They extend all across the country, including such products as textiles, carpets, shoes, paper, wool, wines, metals, rubber, coal mining, fishing and shipping.

Lacking the resources of the great corporations, more than 50 organizations have combined into a united front known as the Nationwide Committee of Industry, Agriculture and Labor on Import-Export Policy. They testified on behalf of innumerable small centers of employment in opposition to the manufacturers, bankers, exporters and shippers, who have enjoyed profitable years during and since World War II.

EMOTIONAL FACTORS INVOLVED—As in several other differences between the White House and Congress, emotional factors are involved in this "trade versus aid" dispute. These anti-tariff groups begin to suspect that the Administration shows excessive partiality to financial and corporate interests along the Atlantic seaboard, or to the "eggheads" of the GOP.

It is this area which clamors for tariff reductions, greater aid to Europe, possible involvement in Indo-China, lower farm supports, private versus public power, condemnation of Senator McCarthy and other White House moves not too popular west of the Hudson River. It is, in a sense, a revival of the Dewey-Taft convention tactic.

F.D.R. and Cordell Hull thought that they had buried the tariff issue with their system of negotiated and reciprocal agreements. Instead, they have split the Grand Old Party more violently on this question than in many a year.

Somebody Told Me

Underwater Aquatic Show

CLEARWATER, Fla.—No doubt a Florida vacation isn't the greatest thing in the world, but at times it certainly seems that way.

Thursday we visited Weekie Wachee Springs, truly one of the most impressive miracles of nature I've ever seen. Around this spring is built an aquatic show that would impress anybody.

The audience is six feet under water, very comfortably located behind a one-inch glass that shows well the origin of the spring some 90-odd feet down. The spring flows into a river that eventually empties into the Gulf of Mexico.

The audience sees all types of fish swimming around, turtles, ducks on the top (naturally you only see the bottom view of a duck in motion, which is a very interesting sight), plus the aquatic show performed by two talented girls. All of this for $1.75, children under six free.

On one bank of the spring's bottom is located an underwater stage, where the "mermaids" may go for air. With special compressors the stage has a breathing chamber, where the girls are in water up to their waists only, with air available for previous breaths. This is located about 20 feet under water.

On various maneuvers the girls take a life line, a hose that gives them a source of air as they perform underwater ballet. The girls also eat grapes and drink a Tru-Ade orange drink while six feet under. One of the two takes about a 90-foot dive to the bottom of the spring, with the life line of air, lets the air line up, and then does a ballet on the way up. Weekie Wachee is something you should not miss if you're ever on the West Coast of Florida. The shows are continuous and they operate the year around.

The Philadelphia Phillies' major league baseball team completed their spring training cycle before I got around to seeing them play. But that's another attraction for Clearwater in case you're a baseball fan.

Never have I seen so many well-kept, old model cars in any one place as are in Clearwater. Also, there are many old, well-kept people. No doubt many of the retired are the conservative type, who keep themselves very well and their cars.

And I thank you.

What Other Editors Are Thinking

STEVENSON'S CHARLOTTE ADDRESS

(Rocky Mount Telegram)
Adlai Stevenson's address in Charlotte Friday evening did not rank in importance or significance with his previous speech in Miami. The now-famous Miami address made world headlines and so shook the Republican administration that Vice President Nixon was designated to make a defense by nationalizing the "new look" in military affairs and by denouncing McCarthy's methods (for the first time). Stevenson's Charlotte speech in a sense was a noteworthy postscript to the Miami speech.

Mr. Stevenson is the most articulate and gifted public speaker on the American political scene today. Not since Woodrow Wilson has there been, as the British observe, a speaker who could turn so lofty and inspired a phrase. Not since the silver-tongued Franklin Roosevelt has there been a speaker who could so employ wit to entertain or devastate. Stevenson, indeed, seems to combine the inspiration and erudition of Wilson with the almost theatrical stage presence and oratory of Roosevelt.

The Republican record, or lack of it recently during the continuing McCarthy crisis, was made to order for a speaker like Stevenson. This is readily apparent in the tone and heart of Stevenson's demolishing attack as summed up in this paragraph:

"It is not just the success of the Eisenhower administration that is at stake. It is not just the fate of the Republican party that is at stake. It is the fate of all of us. A year ago tonight I was in Indochina and every day the peril increases there. Every month more Americans lose their jobs. The ghastly explosions in the Pacific have pointed up the imperative necessity for new and desperate international efforts to control the unknown demons that lurk in the atom. And yet for weeks and weeks our national life is preoccupied with Republicans quarreling over the discharge of a dentist by the Army. And now the investigators are investigating the moon. The moon is as dry as the WCTU.

The Pilgrims were the first group to practice communism in America. They agreed that all crops belonged to the colony as a whole, not to the individuals who planted them. The result was hunger. In 1623 they changed systems, let each individual grow his own corn, trade or sell his surplus. And just look how the country has grown. When the Pilgrims gave up communism, nobody lost out but the Indians. If you are looking for a wedding anniversary present for your wife, an English firm is offering fine hairbrushes at $650 each, guaranteed to last a lifetime—yours or hers. It isn't the satin-wood backing or 22-carat gold screws that make such a brush so costly. It's the bristles. They

N. C. Liked Stevenson During Elections And Today, Too

By LYNN NISBET

STEVENSON — Official election returns show that Adlai Stevenson was defeated for the presidency of the United States on a national basis, but that North Carolina gave him the biggest popular vote and the largest number of electoral votes of any State in the Union. North Carolinians are using the recent visit of Mr. Stevenson to re-emphasize their faith in him and to confirm the ballot box verdict of 18 months ago.

From the time of his arrival at Raleigh-Durham airport ten days ago, through participation in a local rally at Carriage and a session with doctors and nurses at Duke Hospital, to the climactic affair in Charlotte, North Carolina Democrats have done honor to the top Democrat in the country. And it has been quite obvious that Stevenson's appreciative reaction has been sincere and spontaneous.

He made a hit with his several impromptu talks. The main address delivered in the Charlotte auditorium, widely carried on radio and TV, was carefully prepared. In it Adlai Stevenson gave further evidence that he is a master of the English language and has a knowledge of human nature unexcelled by anybody and equaled possibly only by Winston Churchill. It is submitted that the famous "sweat blood and tears" passage in Churchill's speech has the same concept and was no more eloquently phrased than these sentences in Stevenson's Charlotte address:

"The dream of an age of abundance is as old as the fact of hunger. We have moved ever toward realization of that dream; sometimes through an awakening when breadlines and soup kitchens were the penalties for stumbling; sometimes convinced that the dream was only a worthy ambition, the tantalizing fruit of a great hope which we could not reach.

"Now we must reach; now we must grasp. For the overpowering fact is that this is, in America, the age of abundance. And the world, where men are still masters of their fate, looks to us expectantly, prayerfully, for guidance into the harbor of our common safety. Let the world understand the resources of our democratic faith, the power of free men under God, and the clear-eyed, clear-headed resolution of Americans.

"In this spirit we can march into the future, not fearful and frightened, but serene and tranquil, humbly confident in our strength, invincible in our freedom."

OVATIONS — Stevenson and his party were given a standing ovation when they came into the auditorium, but a much more impressive demonstration when he concluded his speech. The fact is the 3,000-odd members of the audience were in an applauding mood.

Reporters at the press table noted that some passages in the speech which they thought were good were greeted with silence, while other less significant statements were given loud acclamation. Every time a prominent Democrat was presented, or reference was made to Democratic victory this fall, the hand clapping was noisy.

METERED — The unofficial applause meter of the press table rated most enthusiasm, except for the official party, when prediction was made that the Democrats will recapture the 10th congressional district, now represented by Republican Charles Raper Jonas. Next in volume of applause was the reception accorded former Governor Kerr Scott. Third place rating goes to Senator Alton Lennon, and there were variations in recognition of all the lesser lights introduced.

Maybe some of the applause was organized or "planted." Even so, it was there and everybody had an equal chance to plant cheer leaders throughout the audience.

POTPOURRI — Scott for Senate headquarters at the Selwyn and Lennon for Senate headquarters at the Charlotte Hotel were crowded all day and night with well-wishers—several of whom paid equal respect to both.

A bevy of good looking young women were handing out literature for Josh James for State Treasurer in the hotel lobby. A sign board in the Selwyn lobby proclaimed that "Josh Jones" as candidate for treasurer was in such and such room. Just before the party broke up the sign was corrected to indicate Josh James was the man running.

Worth Noting

SYNTHETICS HOLD BACK HIDES, RUBBER, SILK

The whole price index has risen approximately 150 per cent since 1913. But, as statistics maintained by the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York show, some have actually declined.

Hides, 17 cents a pound then, are 10 1/2 cents now. Rubber, 97 cents a pound in April, 1913, is 20 1-4 cents now. Silk's increase has been moderate, from $3.49 to $5.35 per pound.

Overtime Pay Idea

By ELMER ROESSNER

Overtime rates, which for two decades have served to fatten pay envelopes, may now be the means of flattening them a bit. Time-and-a-half for overtime is a strange thing—sometimes sensible, sometimes screwy. Normally, it doesn't make economic sense. After 40 hours or so of work, a worker's performance usually falls off and the employer pays more for less.

Overtime has its roots in the idea that when an employee is asked to give up fishing, drinking or gardening time for his employer, he is entitled to extra compensation. During the depression, it became something else again. The government and organized labor crystallized the idea of time-and-a-half-for-overtime with double time for Sundays and holidays, etc.) as a method of sharing available work. But the principle became riveted into the economy and persisted even after there were more jobs than men.

It also became a tool for labor piracy. "Plenty of overtime!" was a familiar line in advertisements until late last year. Because the idea became fixed and permanent, it entered into all employer calculations. A company with a normal 48-hour-a-week operation and a labor contract calling for $2 an hour with T&1/2, thought in terms of labor costs of $2.16 2-3rds an hour. In actual practice, because of fringe benefits, it was more likely to be around $2.24 an hour. And where overtime was a regular thing, employees got thinking of their hourly pay at $2.16 2-3rds, less with holdings.

Now it's not disclosing any secrets to let on that demand for a lot of manufactured goods has fallen off in the last few months. Quite a few manufacturers have been quite frantic to find ways to cut costs. Some of them have discovered that by cutting the work week from 48 to 40 hours, they are reducing the average hourly cost of labor by 7 1/2 per cent. And since labor bulks large in the cost of goods and services, this is an important economy. The worker, however, takes a licking; when he is cut from 48 hours, with T&1/2, to 40 hours, his pay—before fringes and withholdings—is cut 23 1/2 per cent. Most of this must come out of the employee's disposable income which in turn tends to reduce other companies' sales.

There is some talk in union meetings these days about further shortening of the work week, cutting it back from 35-40 hours to 30 hours or even less. This is supposed to have the double benefits of sharing the work and increasing the pay of those who work when business dips; it will increase pay envelopes when the boom comes. But when another dip comes, it will cut wages even more sharply than overtime regulations are cutting them today.

A DIVIDED VERDICT ON PROFESSOR SLICHTER

Congress used good judgment in cutting excise taxes but should not have stopped where it did. Sumner H. Slichter, of Harvard School of Business Administration, told a New York trade meeting.

This coincides with opinions expressed in this department and is very flattering because Dr. Slichter is regarded as one of the foremost economists of the country.

The economists sharply criticized the government's lack of action to offset the business decline, and said this had resulted in 1,000,000 more unemployed than necessary. While Dr. Slichter may be right, he appears to skirt the fact that the Administration's first line of attack has been to call upon business to assume responsibility for its health and that business, through expansion and other aggressive action has maintained employment a probable 1,000,000 higher than it might have been.

Scraps Of Knowledge And You

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—It may be old stuff to you, but nobody ever told me before that—

In this one world of ours there are still more than 1,000 separate languages or dialects. So no wonder it's hard to understand what the other fellow is trying to say.

The number of blind people in the United States has risen from 225,000 in 1948 to more than 308,000. And two-thirds of them are elderly.

A lady named Mrs. Rita Schable, in the General Electric plant at Schenectady, turns out mirrors so tiny it takes half a dozen to cover the head of a pin. They are used in scientific laboratory work. Guess what her hobby is? Fine sewing.

Lovers who are moonstruck on a summer night would be ever more dazzled if they were actually on the moon looking down at the earth. For the earth would look 80 times as bright to them as the moon does to us here.

No, Wilbur, they don't peddle cheap bottled earthshine on the moon. The moon is as dry as the WCTU.

The Pilgrims were the first group to practice communism in America. They agreed that all crops belonged to the colony as a whole, not to the individuals who planted them. The result was hunger. In 1623 they changed systems, let each individual grow his own corn, trade or sell his surplus. And just look how the country has grown. When the Pilgrims gave up communism, nobody lost out but the Indians.

If you are looking for a wedding anniversary present for your wife, an English firm is offering fine hairbrushes at $650 each, guaranteed to last a lifetime—yours or hers. It isn't the satin-wood backing or 22-carat gold screws that make such a brush so costly. It's the bristles. They come from wild boars in the Siberian tundra, and the boars must be at least 10 years old. As Siberians get hungry and eat most boars before they even are big enough to run very fast, the bristles are so scarce that—well, why not buy your wife a pocket comb anyway?

It is estimated an American family with a $300 a month income spends about $1,000 a year for food. Back in 1900 housewives baked 95 per cent of the nation's bread, now they bake only 5 per cent. But don't jeer at mother; how can she bake bread when she's busy repairing the vacuum cleaner?

A report owner estimates that 1 of every 20 girls vacationing in the Catskills will meet and fall in love with a man she will eventually marry. But couldn't a girl do better than that by taking a cruise on a Navy submarine?

For some reason, the biggest sales of retail jewelry are made in the fall of the year. Now wouldn't you have guessed June?

The average house in America is 29 years old, proving that the ordinary home really does outwear the mortgage on it.

The first modern high class hotel in America was the Tremont House in Boston, opened in 1829. It was the first to have a lobby—and the first to have clerks who did not also have to act as bartenders. The old Everett Hotel here was the first to put in electric lights, back in 1882. But no hotel will claim the honor of being the first to originate the idea of charging $10 for a $2 room.

A recent survey showed the American woman now takes twice as long to do her shopping as she did in 1940. And that's life for you—the more money a man makes the longer he has to stand around waiting for his wife to get rid of it.

Track Operators Plan File Appeal

CURRITUCK, N. C. (AP) — The North Carolina Racing Assn., owners of the Moyock dog racing track here, today was readying an appeal from a judge's ruling yesterday that the track be closed permanently and the property sold at auction.

Judge Malcolm Paul, in chambers, upheld an injunction closing the track and ordered Currituck Sheriff K. L. Dozier to sell the property at auction within a year and to deny the owners the use of the land for the same period.

A 1949 General Assembly act following pari-mutuel betting at the track recently was declared unconstitutional by the State Supreme Court. A temporary restraining order was then signed against the track which Judge Paul made permanent yesterday.

Lawyers for the track announced they will appeal the ruling to the State Supreme Court in an effort to get an appeal before the United States Supreme Court.

Judge Paul also ordered that Frank Aycock, the lawyer who prosecuted the case for J. A. Sumrell, Currituck farmer who instigated the proceedings, be paid $7,500 from the sale money.

Judge Paul said a state law allows this fee to the lawyer who

Pierre duPont Dies; Former Board Head

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP)—Pierre Samuel du Pont, dean of the famed chemical family and a major figure in the development of two of the world's largest industries, died last night. He was 84.

Du Pont, who took an active part in the Du Pont empire even after his announced retirement in 1940, was stricken with a severe abdominal pain shortly after dinner at Longwood, his estate at nearby Kennett Square, Pa.

Rushed to the Wilmington Memorial Hospital, Du Pont died of what physicians described as an aortic aneurysm (rupture of a main blood vessel).

A younger brother, Irene, and his sister, Mrs. R. R. M. Carpenter, were at his bedside. They are Du Pont's only immediate survivors.

Du Pont, who shunned publicity and seldom made public appearances, was a former president and board chairman of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. He also served as president of General Motors Corp. for three years.

Pierre was the great great grandson and namesake of a political refugee who fled to America from France in 1799. His father, Lamont du Pont was a noted inventor and authority on explosives who founded one of the nation's first dynamite plants, the Repauno Chemical Co. near Gibbstown, N. J. He was killed by an explosion of nitroglycerin when Pierre was 14. Pierre then took over the leadership of the family as the eldest of 11 children.

A noted philanthropist who once built an $800,000 hospital in memory of his chauffeur, Du Pont was a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Shortly after his graduation in 1890 he collaborated with a cousin in developing the first successful Du Pont smokeless powder.

As the century-old powder company was about to pass into outside hands in 1902, Pierre du Pont and two cousins purchased the firm and organized the present corporation.

Under Pierre du Pont the company expanded from powder into a varied field of chemical products. It developed nylon, which revolutionized women's hosiery, cellophane and some 1,000 other products. Du Pont's sales exceeded a billion dollars a year.

Du Pont lived alone with servants at his Longwood estate after the death of his wife, the former Alice Bellin of Scranton, Pa., in 1944. They had no children.

Funeral arrangements have not been announced.

Color Blind Man Covers Event

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — When station WKY-TV presented its first public television in color, the Daily Oklahoman sent reporter Jim Reid to cover the proceedings.

Reid looked at the television for a while and then asked WKY public relations man Wally Kinnan if the color really was good. Kinnan assured Reid the color was the best and asked why he questioned it.

"I'm color blind," Reid replied.

Monkey Assists In Making Arrest

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—Officers Jim Harp and Johnny Coles arrested M. L. Sharp last night for illegal possession of whisky but they had to have an assist from Sharp's monkey.

The officers, unable to find evidence of whisky in Sharp's house, took a look in his back yard. There they found a monkey in a chicken coop playing with a half pint of whisky. A further search revealed 16 more pints.

"That damned monkey," said Sharp. "Last week he broke 12 bottles."

Mile For Mile, Motoring Safer In 36 Other States Than N. C.

NEW YORK. Mile for mile, motoring was safer last year in 36 other states than it was in North Carolina, where 7.9 persons were killed in traffic accidents for every 100 million vehicle miles of travel for a total of 1,111 dead.

The state's standing in traffic death rates was brought out in a special study conducted by Universal C.I.T. Credit Corporation, the nation's largest sales finance company.

Nationally, seven persons were killed per 100 million vehicle miles, the lowest mileage death rate the nation has ever had, according to the National Safety Council. A total of 38,300 persons were killed in traffic accidents during 1953, a 1 per cent increase over 1952.

Many of the drivers involved in fatal accidents, said L.M. van Noppen, a safety expert with Universal C.I.T. Credit Corporation, could have avoided the tragedy by keeping their vehicles free of mechanical defects.

As operations vice president for the automobile financing company, van Noppen supervises C.I.T.'s own fleet of cars, one of the nation's largest.

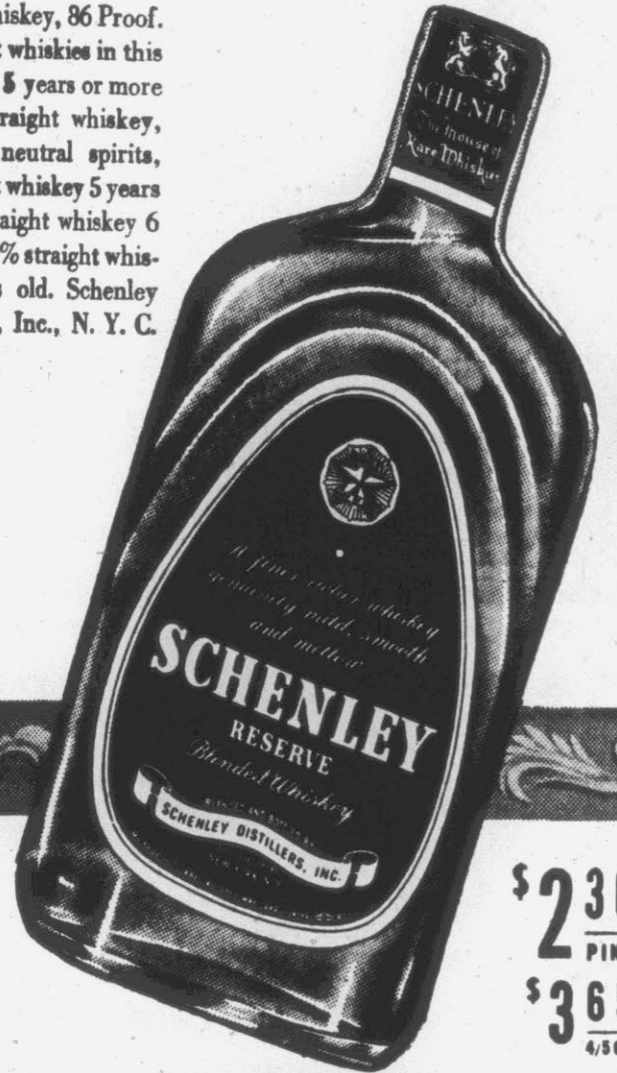

"Even in states where owners are required by law to keep their cars in good mechanical condition," van Noppen said, "about one in every three has a defect which might cause an accident."

should take their cars to a good mechanic at the first hint of trouble.

Careful and periodic maintenance, he added, will keep mechanical troubles from starting.

The Greenvies started the day off on the right foot as Bill Taft won the first race of the day in the 100 with Speight coming in third. Bill Taft also took first in the 220 with Speight coming in a close third. Speight took first place in the 440 with freshman Billy Sermons coming in second. Sermons was one of the biggest surprises of the day as he turned in a pleasing performance to Coach Bill Kittrell.

In the half-mile the G-men were not rated much of a chance to get over one point but Edwin Wilkerson turned in one of the best half-mile runs a Greenville player has done in the past several years as he tied Raleigh's Reggie Ponder for first in a roaring finish.

In the mile event the Greenvies rated way down the list with Benny Perry coming in a poor third to two Raleigh boys.

Mitchell Johnson took first in the broad jump for Greenville and Captain Cledith Oakley took first in the discus. Tommy Smith took first place in the shot put and a second in the discus to gather eight points for a fine day's efforts.

Harold Edwards took first in the high jump with Pete West taking second. West also took third in the pole vault for a total of four points. Bob Shackelford took second in the pole vault behind John Upchurch, the state champion.

In the relays the G-men took first in the 440 relay and the second mile relay. Raleigh took first in the first mile relay.

The Greenvies showed surprising strength for a team that was supposed to be wrecked by the graduation of Bobby Perry, a sure 20 points in every meet. The Greenvies have made up for the loss of an individual star by all-around balance.

The next meet for the Phantom harriers will be in Guy Smith Stadium tomorrow when they meet the Fayetteville Bulldogs. Fayetteville was defeated by Raleigh last week 63-50.

Bucs Cut Six

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates have cut six players, including infielder George Freese who batted .500 in the Grapefruit League.

Freese and these players were optioned to New Orleans of the Southern Assn.: pitchers Elroy Face, Larry Lassalle, Bob Schultz and Bob Garber. The Pirates sent catcher Pete Naton to their Huntsville, Tex., minor league camp for assignment later.

Pirate officials decided that Freese didn't measure up to major league standards defensively.

Phillies Bonus Shortstop Learning To Hit In Majors

SPARTANBURG (AP)—"All I know is I'm 1-a and hitting the ball," says Ted Kazanski, the good field, no hit shortstop of his Philadelphia Phillies who currently is chipping the ball at a 417 pace.

The 20-year-old Kazanski has 20 hits for 48 times at bat. He has had at least one safety in each of his last 14 games. It's mighty strange carryings on for a 217 hit-renowned for hitting one hop grounders at infielders. Kazanski hit .217 in 96 games last year.

What's the answer? Is Kazanski merely a spring camp hitter? Will he be a weak stick again once the regular season starts? Or has he learned something about the art of hitting major league pitching?

Manager Steve O'Neill and Coach Eddie Mayo believe Kazanski has learned to hit; that he'll add at least 50 points to his 1953 batting average, maybe more.

"It's all a matter of his left foot," said O'Neill. "It was too far from the plate. We got him to put that foot up closer to the plate and stop his right foot back a little. I don't believe in changing player's styles providing they are successful doing things their own way. But when a big strong fellow like Ted can't do more than dribble the ball to infielders something had to be done."

Coach Mayo took Kazanski under his personal wing this spring. A baseball analyst of considerable ability, Mayo pointed out to Kazanski that there are about two linear inches of bat surface that produce power. That important area is six inches from the end of the bat. A ball hit on that spot, said Mayo, has got to travel no matter whether a 200-pounder or a little guy is swinging.

"Power doesn't come from the shoulders or from 200 pounds of batter. It comes from forearms, wrists and hands and from hitting the ball on some part of that two-inch area," Mayo told Kazanski. "All you have to do to be a good hitter is to move closer to the plate and take a level swing."

Kazanski followed instructions. He adopted a Del Ennis bat and wrapped the handle with surgical tape.

"I merely did what they told me to do," Ted said. "I've been in organized ball for two years. If men like the Skipper (O'Neill) and Mayo tell me to do something, I do it. I'm learning this business and they're the teachers. I not only feel better at the plant now but I can see the ball better. And I'm getting base hits. That's what counts."

Kazanski's draft status is in the hands of his Detroit draft board. He expected to go last October but wasn't called. "I haven't heard from the draft board since last October," he said.

Doug Ford Wins Ike Is Having Tough Time With Traditional Pitching

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP)—Doug Ford, playing out of Kiamesha Lake, N. Y., raced around the 6,723-yard Starmount Forest Country Club course in 2 hours 50 minutes and 72 strokes yesterday to trim Marty Furgol by three shots in his playoff for the $2,000 top money in the Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

Off form and apparently thinking ahead to the Augusta Masters Tournament opening Thursday, they didn't burn up the course. Ford posted 37-35-72 and Furgol 39-36-75. Par is 35-36.

Ford birdied the second hole with a 12-foot putt while Furgol had a bogie five and Doug never lost the lead, although Marty dug in to make it a contest before he finally had to yield and settle for runner-up money of $1,400. The two had tied over 72 holes with 283.

Three fewer putts told the story. Ford had 27 to 30 for Furgol. Doug took only 13 going out, six times getting down in one as he offset Furgol's superior driving with sharper chipping and putting.

Furgol who now has won $4,148 this year to rank ninth, had five pars and four bogies on the front nine to turn two down only on the sixth did he pick up a stroke, posting a par four. He lost a golden opportunity on the 600-yard seventh but three-putted to match Ford's bogie six.

Marty birdied the short 10th with a 20-foot putt, but bogied No. 11, and again was two down. He fell to three when he bogied No. 13. Then he made his last stand, picking up two shots on No. 14 with a birdie while Ford had a bogie six after being trapped with his second and missing a five-footer for a par.

Doug's par on 15 pushed him back to two up and matched pars with the Lemont, Ill., veteran on the next two. Each found a trap on 18 and when Doug came out less than three feet from the hole and Marty was unable to get down from 12, he conceded with a hand shake.

Ford, playing on his 10th wedding anniversary with his wife, their two sons and his father in the gallery of 1,000, was in his second successive playoff here, having lost out to Earl Stewart in a four-man affair last spring. The match was marked by grim silence as the principals, not on the best of terms, rarely spoke.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—The Las Vegas line has installed Brooklyn as the 7-10 favorite to repeat its championship in the National League, but the New York Yankees are only an even money choice to repeat in the American.

Ike Is Having Tough Time With Traditional Pitching

By BEN PHEGAR
AP Sports Writer

President Eisenhower is having a tough time with the traditional presidential job of throwing out the first pitch of the baseball season.

Last year he begged off to play golf only to wind up pitching anyway when the Washington opener was delayed by rain until late in the first week of the season.

This year he agreed to make the first pitch April 13. But it will be the first pitch only in Washington. Weather permitting, the rest of the major league teams will be off and running before then.

Instead of scheduling a separate opener in the nation's capital a day ahead of the rest, the majors this season designed a full round of activity for the first day. And in Washington the game with the New York Yankees won't start until 3 p.m.—a full 30 minutes later than any of the other seven games.

The first action in a major league park comes tomorrow in Washington when the Senators play host to the Brooklyn Dodgers in a night exhibition.

Bobby Shantz of the Philadelphia Athletics was the shining light of yesterday's nine exhibition games. Although he was beaten, 1-0 by the Pittsburgh Pirates on a home run by Frank Thomas, the little left-hander gave up just three hits and struck out nine as he went nine innings for the first time this spring.

Bob Purkey, a 24-year-old right-hander from New Orleans, went the distance for the Pirates. He scattered six hits and didn't walk anybody.

There were two other shutouts. Clem Labine, Jim Hughes and Erv Palica combined to hold Milwaukee scoreless as the Dodgers whipped the Braves 6-0.

The Chicago Cubs edged Baltimore 2-0 on the four-hit pitching of Johnny Klippstein and Jim Brosnan.

Robin Roberts continued to take a spring pounding as the Detroit Tigers jumped on him for seven hits and five runs in five innings. The Tiger's beat the Philadelphia Phillies 8-2.

Cincinnati hit five home runs in whipping Washington 9-4. Lloyd Merriman got two and Jim Green grass, Wally Post and Ted Kluszewski one apiece. A three-run homer by Jim Hegan with one out in the ninth gave Cleveland a 10-8 decision over the New York Giants.

The Chicago White Sox pounded Gerry Staley and Joe Presko for 10 hits in six innings in defeating the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2.

Memphis of the Southern Assn. tripped the Boston Red Sox 6-5 and the Yankees trounced Charlotte of the South Atlantic League 12-3.

Marciano Signs To Defend Crown

NEW YORK (AP)—Rocky Marciano signed yesterday to defend his heavyweight title against Ezzard Charles, the former titleholder, at Yankee Stadium June 17.

Jim Norris, president of the International Boxing Club estimated a gate of $600,000 and up for the match. Marciano gets 40 per cent and Charles 20 per cent.

No decision has been made yet on television but it is believed likely that there will be theater-TV but no home television.

Somebody asked Charles if he was more confident about winning back the title this time than when he tried—and lost—to Walcott.

"It wasn't a lack of confidence against Walcott," he said. "I didn't sense its importance at the time. It was just another fight. Now I know how much that title can mean."

Elizabeth City Beats Phants, 2-0

Russ Hastings Hurls Jackets To Victory

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Sports Editor

Elizabeth City's Yellow Jackets cashed in on a pair of unearned runs and three-hit pitching by Russ Hastings to defeat Greenville's Phantoms 2-0 in a Northeastern Conference baseball game yesterday. The game was played in Guy Smith Stadium.

The Yellow Jackets got their runs in the second and fourth innings when the Phantoms let their guard down for just long enough to let the runners scamper across home plate. Hastings took care of the rest of the work.

Elizabeth City's first run came after a walk by lefthander Bill Hendrix. Pete Ashton was the receiver of the walk and he went all the way around on three successive wild pitches by Hendrix. The second tally came in the fourth when Robert Gildea drove a two-base hit into leftfield and scored two outs later when the Phantoms' Harold Edwards dropped Pete Smoak's long fly to rightfield.

No Other Chances
The Yellow Jackets never got another chance to score and the Phants went without a single chance in the pitcher's duel. Hastings permitted only one Greenville runner to get as far as third base and that was in the ninth inning with two outs.

Lefthander Jerry McGee led the Elizabeth City batting with two hits, both singles, off Hendrix who gave up only six. The Greenville hits went to Jerry Phillips, Doug Morgan, and Charles Ray Joyner.

The game was one that had been postponed twice. The game had originally been scheduled for Friday but was moved back to Thursday at the request of Elizabeth City officials. When bad weather prevented its play then the date was moved to Friday again. That date was out of question and the game resched-

"I make it to please folks' lighter tastes," says Mrs. Filbert. She uses the gentlest vinegar, and real lemon juice for sparkle. Even the spices are soft-flavored! Truly delicious—Mrs. Filbert's LIGHT Mayonnaise. Eat some today.

uled for yesterday. The loss was the second of the year for the Phantoms and their first in Northeastern play. The Phantoms victories include a conference win over Washington and a non-conference victory over Farmville. The other loss was to Rocky Mount of the Eastern AAA Conference.

Little Trouble
Except for the innings in which the Yellow Jackets scored their runs, Hendrix had little trouble. He struck out eight batters and gave up only three walks as he consistently tightened in the rougher spots.

Hastings pitched almost as well although he didn't have as good personal record as did Hendrix. The Elizabeth City righthander struck out five and walked two but his mates committed four errors behind him. He, too, tightened in the rough spots, however, to leave nine Greenville runners stranded.

The Phantoms will play again tomorrow night when they travel to New Bern to meet the Bears in a game originally scheduled for March 26. A mix-up in playing sites kept that contest from being played the first time.

New Challenger For Olson's Title

BROOKLYN, N. Y. (AP)—Bobo Olson had another challenger after his middleweight title today. Latest in the long line is Ralph (Tiger) Jones, the No. 4 contender, who freshened his credentials with a fast punching 10-round televised triumph over young Billy McNeece last night.

Jones looked rugged and sharp against the durable paratroop veteran but still several notches short of championship caliber. McNeece, beaten only once before in 11 pro bouts, rocked Jones in the fourth and was still strong at the finish although blood flowed from a 1½-inch cut over his left eye.

The victory was No. 32 for Jones in 39 fights. He won eight rounds on one scorecard, seven on another and six in the opinion of Referee Barney Felix. The AP gave him the fight 8-2.

A crowd of 2,100 paid $4,624 to watch the bout at the Eastern Parkway Arena.

Clemson Hurler Leads ACC Race

CLEMSON, S. C. (AP)—Clemson's ace southpaw pitcher, Billy O'Dell, is the top hurler in the Atlantic Coast Conference, according to the league statistical office here.

Clemson players dominated the individual statistics released yesterday with only one Duke player and one Wake Forest player edging into the picture.

Frank McRae, Wake's slugging outfielder, leads the hitters in the two-week-old ACC race with .467. He's followed by Roy Coker, Clemson's second baseman, with .388, and Duke's catcher, Jake Tarr, with .391.

Coker leads in total hits, 17; two-base hits, three, and is tied with Bobby Morris of Clemson for the three-base hit lead with two. Clemson's Wyman Morris leads in runs scored with 11, home runs with four, and runs-batted-in with 11.

Tied for the stolen base lead is Clemson's Doug Kingsmore and Duke's Al Spangler each with six. O'Dell, All-Southern last year, leads in strike outs with 27 in 24 innings.

The other leading pitchers are Joe Morgan of North Carolina, Gene Molnar of South Carolina and Len Humphries of Clemson with 2-0 records. Lowell Davis of Wake Forest rounds out the top five with a 1-0 mark.

Clemson has not been defeated in two ACC games while Wake Forest has a 1-0 record in conference play.

Cards Not Worrying About '53's Big Operating Deficit

ST. LOUIS (AP)—St. Louis Cardinal General Manager Dick Meyer, satisfied that money spent will improve the organization says club officials aren't worried about a $700,000 operating deficit last season.

The operating loss for the Cardinal organization—including farm clubs—was made public yesterday. "We're hopeful of reducing that loss somewhat this year," Meyer said. "We're not complaining. It's that we're going to try to operate on a businesslike basis."

Meyer said the club wasn't expecting a large loss this season "if we can improve our position in the standings." The Cards tied for third last season with the Philadelphia Phillies.

Emphasizing that the $700,000 deficit covered all phases of the organization, including farm clubs and teams with which the Cardinals have working agreements, Meyers said:

"That's the entire operating cost, and although some minor league players are included, they're not the cause of the loss."

There was no breakdown in losses in the brief announcement, but it was noted that the deficit did not include the cost of remodeling Busch Stadium, Cardinals' home field, which was reported at more than one million dollars.

The cost of $100,000 rookies Tom Alston and Alex Grammas and the estimated $75,000 paid the New York Yankees for pitcher Vic Raschi also were not included since they were bought after the close of the club's fiscal year.

Meyer, noting that only Houston and Rochester made money in the club's farm system last season,

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

PETE pulled over to the curb. "So you do have a heart, Miss Taber?" he said dryly.

She buried herself at him, clutching his shoulders, pulling him toward her. "So that's what you wanted to find out? All right, I do have a heart! Does that please your smug, scientific mind? All right, I'll tell you something else. I'm in love with you and you know it too damn well—and now I suppose you're laughing inside that horrible frozen shell of yours, but I don't care—I don't care!"

His arm went around her. His breath came quicker, and his hand went tight on her shoulder.

"Why did you do this to me?" he demanded.

She laughed aloud. "I do believe you love me," she cried. "You're fighting it—but it's no use at all, Peter Percy. Can't you see it's no use? Why don't you kiss me, and make it final!"

He kissed her once, his mouth hot against hers. She locked her arms around his neck and felt him quiver, then with an abrupt movement he sat straight and pushed her away.

"No," he was harshly brusque. "No—forget that happened, Ravel."

Her laughter rippled. "Darling, I shan't forget it and neither will you."

Gale had a brief set-to with Ravel over the matter of Christmas eggnog.

"We won't have any," Gale stated, with firmness that surprised herself. "I'm inviting Pierce Albright and Sally. Pierce is leaving for Texas the day after New Year's, Sewell said."

Ravel went over to see the way John-Mark was having his house renovated. He was upstairs shaving. When he came down she was in the smaller of the two parlors where the heavy furniture was covered with canvas and a man on a trestle was painting the ceiling. Ravel Taber sat on a shrouded sofa, eating an apple.

John-Mark ducked under a step-ladder and followed her gaze upward to where smoky grime was giving way to brightness under smooth strokes of the brush. "Better move before you get spattered," he suggested.

"Troy!" Ravel snorted. "Of all the tiresome colors! You don't have any originality at all, do you Johnny?"

He shrugged, grinned, put on his new hat. "I'm on my way to do my Christmas shopping. What would you like to find in your stocking? A pair of brass knuckles or a pretty pink bottle of vitriol?"

"From you?" she snapped, "nothing!"

Ducking under the ladder she whirled out the door, crashing it shut behind her.

"A spiteful, ain't she?" He steadied himself on his perch. "I married one, too. Learned to duck mighty early. You'd better learn, too."

"Much obliged. I don't think I'll bother."

"You'd better if you're getting married to her."

"I'm not marrying her. She's just a girl across the road."

He bought Dooley a gold-topped set of bottles and jars, some filled with fragrant essences and a huge hand mirror with a gold rim and painted back suggestive of the boudoir of Fountainsbleau. For Ravel he decided on a rich plain stock of heavy white silk with a gold pin shaped like a hunting crop to fasten it, and for a gag he added a toy brass hunting horn.

Gale was easy. A pair of exquisitely filigreed silver birds for her table would please her. He bought a bright pink scarf for Thelma and a leather jacket for Tony, and was through. Then passing a florist's display he saw a lush fern growing in a Chinese jar and on an impulse went in and bought the thing, another "posy-plant" for old Tony to take care of lovingly and reverentially.

As he stood waiting for the plant to be wrapped to protect it from the outer chill, a tall gray-haired woman with a beaky nose, cool gray eyes and a serenely haughty manner walked up to him and stood studying his face. He was trying to remember where he had seen her before when she said, "Where have I seen you? I ought to remember. I'm Mrs. Martin Ravel."

He shifted his bundles to the floor, held out his hand. "Of course, I too, was trying to remember. I'm John-Mark Williamson."

"Yes—'Retta's boy. You went off to the war, didn't you? You've grown so huge I didn't know you."

"I've been back for some time. You haven't been down for a visit with the Tabers in a long time, have you?"

She shrugged her thin shoulders, elegantly draped in a smart black suit and fur cape. "Loathe the country, Gale pops in now and then when she comes to town. Occasional Dooley comes to see me, and they put me in that stupid hospital for a couple of days—not a thing wrong with me not a thing. But I got a little ill seeing a grand-daughter of mine waiting on a lot of repulsive sick people. Why don't you come home with me and have a drink? Your mother was one of my favorite people. I live just three blocks from this place."

"I'm pretty well loaded—and I have this thing," he remarked as the florist appeared from the rear with the enormous plant swathed in green paper.

"My heavens, I didn't know people had those things any more! Only hotel lobbies. What do you want with it?"

"My mother had one. My old Negro houseman misses it. My car's outside. May I drive you home?"

"Of course. If you'll wait till I have a plant sent out. It's for a woman I hate, so I'm sending a poinsettia. I hate them, too big, brash, jointy things. You can pop in for a drink, anyway."

She followed him to the car, stooped holding her fur collar about her ears while he stowed his purchases.

"Santa Claus loot," he explained. "I haven't any family of my own so I adopted the Tabers."

"Heavens, I suppose I should send something to those girls. I never know what to buy when they outgrow dolls. I suppose Harriet is still as horse-crazy as ever?"

"Harriet?" he repeated, confused.

"Oh, I suppose you, too, call her Ravel. She was named after me. When she's 70 she'll look like me. And probably be a tough old individualist like me."

Yes she would look like her grandmother John-Mark decided. Already Ravel had the same imperious, falcon-like profile, the same arrogant cant of the head, the same half-contemptuous, terse way of speaking.

"She didn't get that silly horse-mania from me," the old lady went on. "She got that from her merry old devil of a grandfather—and I married him, heaven forgive me!—and from Pierce Taber. If Pierce hadn't spent all he had on horses Gale wouldn't be living in a cold, old ruin like that house. Here's where I live. Lock up your stuff and come in."

John-Mark went in. The apartment was too warm, too opulently furnished with the cluttered memorabilia of a long, selfish life. But he did not see the French cabinets, the oversize portraits, the gently fading Oriental rugs. He saw one chair. It had gilded legs and Dooley Taber was sitting in it.

She jumped when they came in and John-Mark saw the lavender shadows of weariness under her eyes. She exclaimed, "For goodness' sake!"

"Exactly," retorted the grandmother. "To what chance do I owe the honor of this visit? Not that I'm not delighted to see you, even in that rig."

"Oh the uniform." Julia ran a hand over her skirt, absently seeming somehow confused. "I just dashed out. I have only 40 minutes, then I have to go back on duty. Where did you pick up Johnny, 'Mama Harriet?"

"He picked me up." Mrs. Martin Ravel laughed in a short bark, gave the girl's arm a dab of a pat, said, "Sit down boy. I'll get my hat off and fix us all a drink."

John-Mark found a chair that seemed fairly substantial, folded his topcoat and laid it beside him on the floor. Then he said gently, "Hello, Dooley."

"Hello, Johnny." She managed a smile that verged on the wan. "You surprised me coming in here. I didn't know you knew my grandmother."

"I have lived across the road from you since we were both born," he reminded her. "I've seen her over there at times but I never happened to meet her socially till I encountered her tonight in a florist's place. I brought her home and she insisted on my coming in."

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

JOHN-MARK drove Dooley back to the hospital.

"I'll go in with you," he said. "I haven't seen Albright since his accident. I'll go up. What's the number?"

She told him and said: "I have to return this cape. I'll be up in just a minute."

Sewell said, "Oh, hello I thought it was Dooley. He's been gone a long time. How are you, John-Mark?"

"Rotten. About as rotten as you'd be if you were chained to a hunk of rock. Body has sort of collapsed on me, nerves, everything. See Dooley anywhere as you came up?"

"She's coming. She stepped out for a breath of air. Dooley's pretty tired, Mr. Albright. How about letting her go home for Christmas for a few days? You could get another nurse for a day or two, couldn't you?"

"I suppose I could endure one of these cold-blooded creatures they've got here for a day or two," he said grudgingly. "That's up to the staff, you know—superintendent of nurses or somebody. I guess Dooley is tired of me. I'm tired of myself. How is Gale?"

"She's fine. I got rid of a few of her nags, so she's less worried."

"You could do something for me, John-Mark," Sewell said. "There's a girl here, a good steady honest girl who worked for me for years. Like my right hand really. She took some stuff—maybe you heard about it?"

"I read the papers," John-Mark was brief.

"She's downstairs somewhere. You can find out. Go and see her for me, will you? See how she looks and just how sick she is and come back and tell me. They all clam up in this place. Hand you that as well as can be expected guff. I'd appreciate it, boy."

John-Mark went out. He got the room number at the office but a girl at the desk on the second floor told him Mrs. Rhodes could not have visitors.

"We're even keeping her family out," she said.

John-Mark wandered down the corridor, anyway. No one paid any attention to him. As he found the number, the door came open and Pete Marshall stepped out. "No visitors," he said brusquely, then added, "Oh, hello. Didn't recognize you, Williamson."

They shook hands. "Albright sent me down. Give me a look at her, will you, so I can calm his mind? I won't say a word."

"She can't talk, and she's not pretty," Pete said but he pushed open the door.

A nurse was working on the other side of the high bed, and she looked at them questioning. The girl on the bed turned a stark, white face with sunken, shadowed eyes.

"Don't move, Mrs. Rhodes!" warned the nurse.

A tube affair went into one of Farrell Rhodes' nostrils and there was a gadget fastened over her lips with a bandage. But John-Mark saw that her eyes were terribly alive, and that tears were running down her face. Pete closed the door.

"She burned herself with the stuff she drank," he explained in the corridor. "We're trying to keep the passages from adhering and closing."

John-Mark went back to Sewell's room to find Dooley there.

"I saw Mrs. Rhodes," John-Mark reported. "She isn't able to talk yet, but Marshall says she's doing all right."

"He probably gave you the same old brush-off he gives me," grumbled Sewell.

Mrs. Martin Ravel sat in the big chair before the fireplace, her feet primly flat on the floor, though the absurdly high heels she wore rather offset the effect of Victorian decorum. There was in the air a fragrance of spicy things being cooked, along with a faintly gassy smell from the old furnace that was being desperately prodded to extra activity to warm the bleak upper room where Mrs. Ravel had reluctantly agreed to sleep on Christmas Eve.

Ravel came bursting into the room. "I'm going to town as soon as I dress. I'll take the little car."

"Mrs. Ravel turned her head. "On Christmas Eve? Your sister can't tear herself away from the abominable hospital till tomorrow and now you're going to desert your mother, too?"

"Yes, mama Harriet I'm going to desert her, too," Ravel was crisp.

"At 5 o'clock with dinner being prepared in the kitchen? Thelma made an oyster loaf, she tells me. Did you remember that that was my favorite dish, Gale?"

"Yes, mama, I remembered. Do you think you should go, Ravel?"

It's already foggy in the low places."

"Fog doesn't bother me."

"I seem to remember that it was fog that put Sewell in the hospital."

"It was whiskey he couldn't handle that put him in the hospital. If he had let me drive, it wouldn't have happened."

"You'd have been in the hospital, I suppose." Her grandmother sniffed. "There's a man mixed up in this, no doubt! Anyone I know?"

"Dr. Marshall, Mama." Gale told her, catching the dangerous smolder in Ravel's eyes. "He's the resident at Dooley's hospital."

"Since when did she become interested in doctors? Do they ever have any money? They ought to, though the Lord knows the way they charge. Thirty-five dollars to rap me on the knee and look at my eyeballs and throat and tell me there was nothing wrong with me."

But Ravel was not listening. She had dashed out, and Gale looked apologetically at the proud old woman sitting so erect in her chair. "Youth," she said. "At least it's a malady they're soon cured of!"

"What do you know about this man? I thought that any man she'd be interested in had to smell of horses and go staking around in boots with mud on his heels. You should have moved away from this dreary place after Pierce died."

"It was too late then to make changes. Ravel and I liked this place, and Dooley wanted a career of her own."

Ravel drove a car badly. Thin gray tresses of fog moved softly before her lights in the low places. Mist thickened inside the windshield and she rubbed it away with her bare hand. This would be a mild Christmas with rain likely and the grass in the meadows turning green. Fog meant more to her, she remembered and then realized that in the last few days she had done strange things to the pattern of her life, and all of it slightly feverish and vague, nothing entirely clear. That was why she had to see Pete Marshall now, hear his voice again, and not in the clipped, professional brush-off she got over the telephone. She had to look into his eyes again and discover what lay there, and see perhaps that crooked, half-scornful and half-indulgent smile.

Her mother had stumped her a little flinging the truth at her, but Ravel was thankful that she had been alert enough not to let Gale see that she had struck through Ravel's guard, when she had said that Ravel did not have the answers that she was unsure.

"Well tonight I'll know!" she said aloud grimly. Tonight she would make certain of Pete's state of mind, and also she would be sure of herself, which was more important. At this moment she felt oddly a stranger to that girl who had flung herself into Pete Marshall's arms.

Now that Ravel Taber seemed in retrospect like some remembered figure from a lurid movie, or the whole interlude like something snatched from a book and become confused in her conscious mind.

If it had happened as her uneasy recollection arranged it, if this was love, why wasn't she feeling something now, something beautiful and dedicated? She worried this thought as she crawled behind a truck while home-going traffic streamed past in the other lane. Love was supposed to change people, make them all new and palpitant and dreamy, but today it had occurred to her that she couldn't even remember what Pete looked like. With her grandmother's shrewd eyes watching her, she had tried to call up his face, his slow, sardonic eyes and the smile that was so startlingly different, changing his whole expression, giving him a sudden disarming boyish charm but with little success.

McCarthy had asked Murrow's sponsor, the Aluminum Co. of America, who would pay the production costs involved. That company referred him to CBS, explaining the network was paid a fixed fee every week and production arrangements were up to it.

The Aluminum Co. said there would be a commercial at the beginning of the program, but there would be no interruption of McCarthy's address by commercials.
