Hearing Group May Rewrite Order On Seizure Of Records Point Of Legality Studied

By JACK BELL WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Mundt (R-SD) said today the Senate investigating subcommittee may have to rewrite what he called its "fuzzy" order for seizure of records on telephone calls in the McCarthy-Army officials' dispute.

Issues this committee is now considering. The unanimous vote came after McCarthy threw the hearing into an uproar with a charge that the transcribing of a Nov. 7, 1953 telephone conversation he had with Secretary of the Army Stevens was "completely improper... indecent and illegal under the laws" because he knew nothing of the action at the time.

He told newsmen the second part of the motion, relating to the introduction of the records subpoenaed was "kind of fussy." Mundt said it is his opinion the committee has only the consent, "without qualification," of Stevens, E. Struve Hensel, assistant secretary of defense and John Adams, Army counselor, to the admission of such evidence.

French Counter - Attack Forced Back From Newly - Won Fortress Outpost

French-Laotian troops were reported to have reached the curve of the Nam Ou river about 18 miles south of beleaguered Dien Bien Phu. But the French Army sources here would not disclose the objective of this northward movement from the Laotian royal capital at Luang Prabang.

The French counterattack inside the fortress came after the Vietminh took time out to consolidate their newly won positions in the north corner.

Corporation Profits Show Dip Of Nearly 12 Percent From '53

By WAYNE OLIVER NEW YORK (AP) — A dip of nearly 12 per cent in profits from a year ago is shown for 150 corporations that already have made financial reports for the first three months of this year.

While the profit decline of nearly 12 per cent is substantial it still could be described as mild, as it's axiomatic in economics that profits usually drop at a faster rate than sales or business volume.

When broken down into categories, the reports show a contrasting pattern with some industries making substantial gains over a year ago, with others down rather sharply.

Hearing Lags In Viewer Interest

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Prison officials watched a young Negro make an incredible comeback from the electric chair last night before they put an end to his gasping struggle with a second charge of 2,300 volts.

Grimes, a tall, husky Negro jerked violently against the straps that bound him to the chair and then quickly lost consciousness after the first charge of current entered his body at the top of his head and came out the left leg.

CHAPTER THIRTY

MISS PRYOR eased herself down on her bed with a groan. "I hand it to you, Taber. I give you the brass star with palms and stuff. You've got grit. I couldn't have done it—no, my own sister, I suppose. Old Crampus was muddling around, snorting through his mask, and Baird yelling, and all the while P.S. was showing them where to cut and how to splice the nerves and reminding them to get the sponges out and fibrin and sulfis and all that?"

"It was that way at first. Then they saw that he knew more than all five of them—so he finished—and Dr. Baird put on the cast and Johnny gave the transfusion—"

"Who's Johnny? The big guy who rode in on the ambulance?"

"Yes, that's Johnny. He lives across the road. He'll marry Ravel ultimately—I hope. She's terribly in love with him—that's why she did such a mad thing, trying to make an untrained horse jump a gate."

"Lover's quarrel eh? You never know. Some of them drink vanilla remover and some eat a whole bottle of pills—this is the first one we ever had who used a horse. Sorry, Taber—I forgot I was talking about your family. You can take it, anyway. Aren't you slightly green and sickish inside, with rockets going off in your stomach?"

"No, I'm all right." But she wasn't. She wanted to cry, she wanted to break down and sob and howl, but grief needed a shoulder, and there were too many people that she had to sustain and encourage.

Downstairs in that quiet room was Gale, her face chalk-white and her hands still uncertain, and outside tramping up and down corridors, John-Mark, with such a woe-begone aspect that the young probationers who passed him sighed. The grapevine was working and he was believed to be a tormented lover waiting for his adored one to come out of the ether and give him a wan smile. Thelma was somewhere, parked on a bench having ridden in with Gale in the car and shrewdly provided herself with two corn pone and a cold sweet potato.

Now Julia was thinking numbly, she would have to change and go down and take Gale out somewhere to supper, and then persuade John-Mark to take Gale and Thelma home. There was nothing more any of them could do. All that could be done for Ravel had been finished, and Pete Marshall had done it. Her shattered vertebrae were aligned and anchored, her nerves cleverly repaired. Pete had come out of the operating room drained and sweat-soaked, but as the stretcher went into the elevator he had squeezed Julia's shoulder in a hard grip and given her a triumph and grin.

"What you need," stated Pryor maternally, "is to sleep around the clock. Put on some more rouge, for heaven's sake."

"It's the back of my neck," Julia said. "It's tied in a hard knot." Gale was sitting in a corner of the dim room, looking small and wan and pitiful.

"I think I won't go down, Dooley," she whispered. "I can't get out from under yet, and I want to be here."

"She'll be quite all right," insisted the prim Reg. N. who was on special. "You should go and get some coffee at least, Mrs. Taber. And then you should go home and get a good night's sleep."

"Oh I couldn't! I don't think I could swallow. You go, Dooley, John-Mark must be still around somewhere. Go and find John-Mark."

She did not want to find John-Mark. She did not want to meet his eyes, share with him again the burden of responsibility for Ravel's wild, tragic escapade. He had been heavy with remorse all the way into town. For some reason he had seemed to think that she should feel guilty too. Perhaps some of the guilt was hers.

But I wasn't sure—I didn't know—She had told herself over and over. She had had to know, she had had to be sure, she had

More Souped-Up Cars For Patrol

LANDING THE BIG ONE

What a thrill to land that old "granddaddy" of all fish... to feel his vicious tug at the line... to see his silver side gleaming in the sun as he rolls and breaks the surface. Then the big moment... out of the water with a final great splash and into the landing net. He is yours!

The catch of a lifetime. You tell about it a hundred times over—about your new fly-rod, that special lure, the deep hole in the lake, the big rock where "granddaddy" used to lie. But somehow you can't put it all in words. It was your own personal experience with old "granddaddy."

In a way, religion and fishing are alike. You can't put religion all in words either. It's not just rules for living, or doctrines, or spiritual values. Religion is a personal experience with God. It's your struggle with God until you surrender your rebellious spirit and become His.

Come to church. There you will learn to know and love God. It's the one great experience of a lifetime—an eternal lifetime.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For the sake of his community and nation. (3) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to Bible daily.

Sheppard Memorial Library Is Serving Multitude Of Purposes

ANOTHER CORNER of the main reading room in the library is a favorite of many of the high school students who use the facilities. This second contains, among other things, the newspaper files, a file of pamphlets, and many of the library's reference books.

SHEPPARD MEMORIAL Library was first opened in April of 1930. The building, which faces Evans Street, is a gift from Harper Donelson Sheppard. It is a memorial to Sheppard's father, William Henry Haywood Sheppard. (Reflector Staff photos by Jimmy Ellis)

Services Expanded

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Staff Writer
Perhaps the most outstanding single institution in the cultural life of Greenville and Pitt County is one which has expanded far beyond its original purpose.

The Public Library was just that 50 years ago. It was a central agency through which people borrowed books for purely recreational reading. Other than that, the activity of the library didn't amount to much.

Today, Greenville's Sheppard Memorial Library is at once a book-lending agency, an art gallery, a social center, a sponsor for at least one civic group and a clearing house for various matters of intellectual nature.

Of course, the expansion of the activities of the library is due a great deal to the expansion of the facilities available.

Only One Room
Fifty years ago, when Greenville's first public library was born, there was only one room available. That was on the third floor of the Old Masonic Temple and workers came from the ranks of the End-of-the-Century Book Club.

Today, the library centers its activities in the huge building on South Evans Street but it isn't by any means confined to that building. There is the bookmobile. There are cooperating libraries in five other Pitt County towns. There is a separate library for negroes in Greenville. Workers are members of a paid staff of trained personnel. The library has obviously come a long way since its rather modest beginnings in 1904.

The End of the Century club members directed the library activities for at least 16 years before they were joined in their efforts by the Woman's Club. In 1928, the city administration took over the work and has kept it since.

City administration of the library is not without assistance from several quarters. One of those quarters is the Sheppard family which furnished the building and land the library now occupies.

Memorial Building
The building was donated by Harper Donelson Sheppard in 1930 as a memorial to his father, William Henry Haywood Sheppard. The elder Sheppard was a native of Pitt County who went to Pennsylvania and became financially independent through the manufacture of shoes. The building, with the first of its many services, was opened in April of 1930. The library was supported at that time almost completely by the city.

In 1934, the county administration made its first contribution to the library. The first county appropriation came as a result of lending books to small libraries in five Pitt County towns (Farmville, Ayden, Winterville, Bethel, and, at a later date, Fountain). That policy, which continues today, was simply a process of having books carried from the Sheppard Library to the smaller libraries for various periods of time. The system has been expanded today through expansion of facilities in the individual towns and through the bookmobile.

In 1939, the George Washington Carver Library was opened to serve the Negro citizens of Greenville. The Carver library is located at 508 Sheppard Street and much of the primary construction was done through the W.F.A.

State Funds
The State of North Carolina came into the library's picture in 1941 with a fund for purchasing books. That assistance has continued through the years and today amounts to $3600 per year. All of the state money is used for purchasing new books.

One of the newest features of the library is its Bookmobile service. That started in 1948 when the citizens of Greenville contributed to a fund to provide the truck for county residents. The Bookmobile service naturally operates from Sheppard Memorial Library and has a regular schedule that includes 130 stops throughout the county. The entire Pitt County area is covered every three weeks with service to schools, communities, and to individual families.

In the nine months that have been completed in the present fiscal year, there have been 120,296 volumes borrowed from the Bookmobile. That is a large percentage of the total of 196,363 volumes that have been borrowed through all of the facilities of the Sheppard Memorial Library.

A break-down of the total number of volumes borrowed shows that 49,342 volumes were borrowed from the main library. The town libraries loaned 13,063 volumes and Carver Library loaned 13,662 volumes.

The total represents a gain of 35,079 over the same period of time in the previous fiscal year.

7,563 Borrowers
In the same nine months, the library has registered 853 people who desire to borrow the books. There are now 7,563 people registered to use the library books and that total does not include the bookmobile's list.

The increase in the number of borrowers has affected the number of volumes available for use. Last year, 4,487 new books were added to library shelves which now hold a total of 42,217 volumes.

Circulation of the many books shows rather curious trends in public reading habits. Mrs. Bessie W. Scott, the head librarian, said the records show that grown-ups read mostly for recreation while younger borrowers prefer non-fiction. The adult readers like problem novels, mysteries, and love stories while the youngsters go more for factual works. The most popular volume in that line at the present time concerns the atomic submarine.

Circulation in the library has been affected by television only once. That was during the month of February but March more than changed the tide when circulation rose more than 4,000 over the previous March. As a general rule, television or radio mention of particular works increases the demand for the volume.

Library Support
Support for the library program comes from city and county funds and some state funds. The library is controlled by a Board of Directors who prepare the budget and supervise the administration of available funds. During the present fiscal year, the library has a budget of $31,921.

Among the facilities available at the library are approximately 1,000 reference volumes, 50 magazines which are received regularly (10 of which come as gift subscriptions from library patrons), six newspapers (four of which are gift subscriptions), and indexes to the magazines.

The physical facilities of the library are used in a variety of ways. High School and college students are the most frequent users of the reference works. The local book clubs use the library materials for working up programs. The local garden club has taken the project of beautifying the library grounds through a long-range program. There is a 100-seat auditorium that is available for use by any civic group. The library furnishes space for an art gallery and there is always exhibit from October through May. The gallery has a person on duty from two until five each afternoon when the works are on display.

For the last two years, the library has sponsored the American Heritage Discussion Group which held its final meeting of the present period last night.

Staff
All of the library activities are under the direction of a staff of six persons. The staff is headed by Mrs. Bessie W. Scott, a former resident of Greensboro with a world of library experience behind her. Mrs. Scott is a graduate of Randolph-Macon Women's College and the Library School at U.N.C. She came here from Knoxville, Tennessee, where she was head of the Reader's Service Department at Lawson-McGhee Library. Before that, she was librarian at Alexandria, Virginia, and before that a reference librarian at Greensboro. Mrs. Scott has been in Greenville since February, 1951.

Mrs. Pat N. Byrd is the assistant librarian. She also graduated from the U.N.C. Library School and has been at Sheppard since April, 1953.

A PORTION of the permanent art works that hang in the Sheppard Memorial Library include these ink sketches of North Carolina scenes by Louis Orr. The sketches are on the second floor around the balcony which overlooks the entrance hall of the library.

CHECK-IN desk at Sheppard Memorial Library is tended by Miss Doris Wingate of the Library staff. Doris is a high school student who works afternoons and Saturdays at the library. She is one of six employees of the library.

THE MAIN reading room in the library includes large tables, comfortable chairs, plenty of light, and many of the library's reference volumes. The room is on the North end of the main floor.

TWO OF the library's regular patrons are Trillis House (left) and Brenda McLawhon. Trillis, 8, and Brenda, 12, are in the children's section of the reading room on the southern end of the main floor. The furniture in this section is especially designed for use by the younger visitors to the library.

Mrs. Lela S. Forbes, a graduate of Meredith, is a general assistant the summer programs and reading clubs for children. One of the unique features of the library service is a telephone-reference service. Particular questions will be answered by the library staff if a call is placed during the hours of 2-8 p.m. Monday through Friday or 9-6 p.m. on Saturdays.

The prize question answered so far came from a gentleman who wanted to know if Cincinnati would be South of the Mason-Dixon Line if the line were extended Westward far enough. The question can be answered again by calling 4305.

The staff is enjoying a mild breather at the present time after a record circulation of books during March. Mrs. Scott says that March, curiously enough, is always the busiest of the circulation periods. Circulation always slumps after the March rush and doesn't

Federal Control Follows Federal Money

Money and taxes, government collections and government expenditures have long been items of major concern with the American people. In the past two decades, federal government services to states and to the people also have been matters of major concern.

For the most part the citizens, particularly in this area, are prone to the states-rights philosophies which contend there is a well defined line where federal government should cease to govern and state and local government takes over. To be sure there are varying opinions as to where this

A Step Toward Meeting A Need

A new men's dormitory at East Carolina College will be another tremendous asset to the college which for several years has been fairly bursting at the seams for lack of dormitory facilities to take care of the students who want to come to school here.

Bids on the new dormitory were opened this week and there now remains only the matter of having the low bids approved by the State Budget Bureau before contracts for the building can be let.

When the new men's dormitory is completed it will mean an additional 302 men students can be housed on the college campus, and it should result in an increase in the enrollment of men students at East Carolina.

Each year for the past few years, both men and women students have been turned away by the college because of the lack of housing facilities on the college campus, and because enough rooms for students could not be secured in private homes in Greenville.

The completion of this new men's dormitory will go a long way toward alleviating the acute housing condition for men students at East Carolina. Now, if an additional dormitory or two for women students can be assured, it will put East Carolina College in a position to take care of a much higher percentage of women students who apply for admission here.

Strength for the Day

EXTENDING THE VISION
Every now and again we hear of a person who for many years suffered from impaired vision, and then one day putting on a pair of eyeglasses, discovered a whole new world. Just the other day I was reading about a little girl who was brought out of the darkness by someone who suspected her trouble and guided her toward a clinic, where she was given a new lease on life and a new world in which to live.

A very inspiring thing about life is its limitless capacity to rise into new areas of satisfaction. The half-blind person getting a pair of spectacles is symbolic of something vastly greater. A little boy, Francis Drake, loafing about the docks some centuries ago and hearing the sailors tell of their adventures, found a new world of fantasy opening to him, which, as Sir Francis, he laid hold on in the name of his Queen. Another Francis, this time the Saint of Assisi, was one type of person as he started through the streets of Florence one evening with his gay convivial comrades, and another person a few moments later; for the finger of God had touched him. Saul of Tarsus, the persecutor, transformed into St. Paul the Apostle, was caught up into the third heaven and heard things which are not lawful for a man to utter.

Spectacles make a difference, but faith makes a greater difference. Miraculous extension of vision can occur in the field of the spirit.

National Whirligig

Secrecy Or Greater Candor

By RAY TUCKER
Every Saturday, Mr. Tucker answers readers' questions of general interest on national and international policies and personalities. Questions may be sent to him at 6308 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON—"Are the American people being given too much or too little information about the A and H-bombs?" asks MR. of Oklahoma City, Okla. and numerous other readers.

Answer: This is an extremely difficult question to answer. Admiral Lewis L. Strauss, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, and an extremely able one, in Washington's opinion, is largely responsible for the fact that we are getting a minimum of news about this question. But he has the support of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy in his stand.

OPPOSE SECRECY—There is another group, consisting of members of the Administration, Congress and scientific bodies, which opposes this system of secrecy. They point out that we publicize detailed data about our conventional military strength and forces—the number of men in the Armed Services, the size of our Navy and Air Force, and even their disposition at home and abroad.

Knowing these facts, a possible enemy has no trouble in ascertaining our orthodox military power. For we also let him in on the development of our latest planes, rifles, machine guns, guided missiles, etc. The newspapers and magazines are full of special articles on these.

OUR ADVANTAGE OVER RUSSIA—Obviously, we cannot reveal new designs or manufacturing advances in the production of nuclear weapons. But the anti-Strauss group believes that it would contribute to peace, if we told the Russians how many A and H-bombs we have in stock, as well as the rate of production. We might also let them know that we intend to increase output so that we shall always have an edge on them.

According to all available data, as published abroad but not in the United States, we have at least a 10 to 1 advantage over Moscow in the actual number of nuclear weapons now in stock. We can maintain that lead because of our industrial supremacy. Why not line is located, but most agree there is such a demarcation.

While many people protest overstepping of bounds by the federal government in the realms of taxes, law enforcement and other areas, these same people at times are prone to demand the federal government accept more of the responsibility of public service on the community level.

There is hardly a phase of life now in which the federal government does not have a hand and play a part. Realizing it or not, increasing demands for federal help and federal finance in local projects is leading us not too gradually to a more centralized federal government than many people would like to see.

Stop to consider for a minute, Pitt County's new hospital was partially built with federal funds, the new health department clinic will be financed partially by federal funds; federal funds partially support the county's welfare program, the agricultural program, the health program. There probably are other areas of operation which we consider local government responsibility which are at least partially financed by the federal government.

Wherever federal government funds go into a project or program, federal government regulations also follow. To that extent the federal government sets out controlling points which govern many programs which normally are considered under the jurisdiction of local and state government.

The more we depend upon federal funds for local programs, the more we are going to accept federal government controls of those programs.

For every group of dollars local governments accept from the federal government, the local government surrenders a portion of its jurisdiction over local programs.

Difficult Job Ahead

Local law enforcement officers have been confronted with a tough job in investigating the mysterious deaths of two Greenville men in the past two months.

The two belated autopsy reports on the deaths of the two men did not make the investigations any easier. Whether foul play contributed to either of the deaths or whether other unfortunate circumstances were the sole cause still remains a question in the minds of many local citizens.

Certainly by no stretch of the imagination can it be considered that the officers have had any good breaks in the cases. They have met obstacles at almost every turn in their investigations. The Reflector hopes the investigations will be continued until every thread of information which could have a bearing on either of the deaths has been uncovered.

If the officers stop short of that point, their job, in our opinion will not have been completed. Yet it may take many more months of careful investigation to turn up anything new relative to either of the cases.

scare them out of making war by telling them? PEOPLE NEED MORE INFORMATION—The present system of rigid secrecy has another disadvantage. It prevents the American people from taking seriously the awful destruction from an atomic or hydrogenic drenching, and it keeps them from making any real preparations for such a catastrophe. It explains why Val Peterson, Federal Civil Defense Administrator, says that "We are utterly unprepared for an atomic attack."

Every recent development, in my opinion, emphasizes the need for a door-to-door campaign, if necessary, to inform and inflame our people on this question. The late General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, as Chief of the Air Force, said that 70 per cent of an invading aerial fleet could get through our defenses. The warning time for many of our most vulnerable cities is now only 15 minutes.

Under present plans and appropriations, it will be several years before maximum warning time will be two hours. Russia has both the bombs and the planes to deliver them, according to our military intelligence, and Admiral Strauss says that a single H-bomb could destroy New York City.

OUGH TO HAVE "OPERATION CANDOR"—Few of our people know these facts. Worse still, they will not face them. Of all the poor publicity jobs which the Eisenhower Administration has done, the failure to publicize every nonsecurity detail about atomic warfare is the most lamentable. We need an "Operation Candor" now more than ever before instead of a fireside talk on fears we need not fear.

"What are the chances that the Veep will return to Washington as a mere member of the Senate?" inquires T. S. of Lexington, Ky. "Do you think the people will vote for a man of his age?"

Answer: The Republicans are extremely worried over holding the Blue Grass state against the distinguished Democrat. He is popular and likable. He enjoys tremendous prestige. He is an excellent campaigner. Moreover, his knowledge and background make him invaluable to any state, not alone Kentucky.

It seems a shame that he should run, for Kentucky's present Republican Senator and Barkley's opponent, John Sherman Cooper, is one of the most able members of the upper chamber.

Somebody Told Me

A Queen For Our Baby-Sitter

Wife Rachel and I have an opportunity to engage Miss Greenville of 1954 as a baby sitter! Barbara Speight of Roanoke Rapids, who won the title last night, has offered her services. The strange thing about the situation is that Barbara, better known as Doodle, did it before she had ever seen us.

Her father, Ted Speight, is a radio amateur operator in Roanoke Rapids and I had talked to him on the air many times prior to seeing him last night for the first time. On occasion, I would relay a message over to Cotten Hall, to Doodle, on the telephone.

During the process of one of the messages Doodle said she would be glad to baby sit for us. If that offer would materialize, that would be news. A girl with Doodle's popularity simply doesn't have time for baby sitting.

It's always strange to meet another ham operator that you've talked to many times and never have seen. When Ted and Irma walked into the house I was amazed at their youth. "I was a child bridegroom," he said.

According to the judges, the three finalists went into the last round on equal footing. Their challenge was then to answer three questions which were popped to them without their having the opportunity to prepare an answer: (1) Do you think college students should be required to attend classes after the freshman year? (2) Do you think children should be seen and not heard? (3) Do you favor air conditioning in churches to increase attendance? The manner in which the girls answered the questions was the determining factor of the top three contestants of 14 entries.

Second place went to Bea Burnette of near Tarboro, an East Carolina student, who calls herself a country girl. Third place winner was Jo Ann Hales of Greenville, a high school senior.

All three girls were indeed thrilled at the honor bestowed upon them. The queen had a rooting section among her girl friends at Cotten Hall. Bea Burnette said, "It's the surprise of my life. I was getting ready to go back to the dorm when they announced I was one of the finalists."

Jo Ann Hales, the only Greenville girl among the finalists, said, "I'm thrilled and very much surprised."

Last night was the first time that the Little Miss Greenville feature was added to the contest. Among nineteen entries, Catherine Grey Joyner was winner and declared Greenville's first Little Miss Greenville.

TRUMAN AND BOGEYMEN

(Wilson Times)
It's much easier for former President Truman to be a statesman today than it was when he was President. For now he's responsible to no one but himself. And we agree with him when he said "there is even one among us whose torrent of wild charges is calculated to damage the faith of Americans in the integrity of their government, army, schools, churches, their labor unions and the press. Most of all, he is threatening to undermine the respect and confidence Americans must have in one another." Of course, Truman had reference to Senator McCarthy, although he didn't mention him by name.

Highway System Survey Hailed As Looking To Future

By LYNN NISBET
HIGHWAY SURVEY — Decision of the State Highway and Public Works Commission to employ a competent engineering firm to make an over-all survey of the condition and needs of the highway system, including all phases of financing construction and maintenance, has been hailed as a forward-looking act on part of the commission.

The 14-member commission approved the project upon request of Chairman A.H. Graham some weeks ago and authorized the chairman to employ the engineers. A few days ago he announced that the internationally famed firm of Parsons, Brinkerhoff, Hall & McDonald would do the job. That is the same firm which has been engaged in the waterways survey for the Department of Conservation and Development.

One of the partners, Lawrence S. Waterbury, will be in personal charge of the highway survey. It is hoped to have a report in time for approval by the road group for submission to the next Legislature as basis for a long range financing program.

The trend has been so pronounced in recent years that in actual practice we have had each highway division operating almost independently of State headquarters and of each other.

UNIFORMITY — This lack of centralized direction has resulted in lack of uniformity in construction and maintenance methods throughout the State. That condition was especially true in the $200 million secondary road bond program. Approximately 71 per cent of this money was spent by State force account. In many instances the roads were built without adequate surveys or plans. The aim was to build them as cheaply as quickly as possible.

Result was that many of these paved roads were left with dangerous blind curves, sharp vertical grades and narrow bridges, which may prove to be death traps. Constructors have complained about these slipshod methods on State force account jobs, while those let to contract were required to have complete advance surveys, approved plans and specifications and adequate engineering supervision throughout the construction period.

WASTEFUL — Another item which a spokesman for the contractors hopes will be corrected as a result of the survey is the alleged wasteful practices in maintenance. Maintenance work is largely seasonal, during the spring and summer, yet crews are maintained the year round and during off seasons are kept busy at unproductive work.

They work through cells rather than through large organizations. In that way Communists don't know Communists. When, however, a man hides behind the Fifth Amendment to avoid incrimination, we're inclined to agree with McCarthy that he's suspect. That's what a great many have been doing of late and it naturally gives rise to the belief that they're trying to conceal something. To outlaw the organization would simply drive its members underground. To try them in court would serve only to confuse the situation. Nevertheless, we should afford our citizens the protection the law guarantees. If they're given that, no one needs to fear McCarthy.

Locating Communists is hard.

Greenville population has jumped 11 per cent since 1952, it was revealed today.

Consumer Markets, annual market data sourcebook, estimates current city population to be 18,800. In 1952, the city population was only 16,900.

The sourcebook is used by national advertisers, advertising agencies, and manufacturers in estimating market size, market potential, and sales experience. It will be published by Standard Rate & Data Service on May first and information was released to

A consumer unit is any family or individual not living with relatives.

Greenville has 6750 such consumer units. Of these, 790 have net incomes exceeding $6000; 970 have net incomes between $4000 and $5999; 1720 have net incomes between $2000 and $3999, and 3270 have net incomes below $2000.

Devaluation Results

By ELMER ROESSNER
Prices are edging up in Mexico today. It has been quite a while since the last clear-cut case of currency devaluation and Americans may gain some lessons from what happened when the Mexican Government changed the value of the peso from 8.65 to 12.50 per $1.

This is how it is affecting Americans:

U.S. exports to Mexico are falling off. Since a Mexican must now put up 12.50 pesos to get $1 worth of American auto or radio, instead of a little over 8.50, he is going to be reluctant to buy Yanki goods. It was planned that way: the Mexican Government wants to encourage its people to buy Mexican-made products.

American firms having pesos due them are taking terrific losses. A company that has 865 pesos owing to it could get $100 for that money last week; this week it can't get quite $70. Only those firms who specified balances must be paid in dollars will escape that loss. However, their Mexican customers will be hard hit, since they will have to put up more than 40 per cent more pesos to pay dollar debts.

Mexican buyers are canceling American orders at a great rate; some will be reinstated, of course, as the situation works itself out. Vacations in Mexico, always reasonable, will be an even greater bargain this year. Travelers' dollars will get around 40 per cent more pesos. But this may hold true only for this year, since many prices will tend to climb to old levels. This, in fact, has already started.

Some—but only some—companies will be tempted to establish branch factories there, and this applies to Canadians, Europeans and other Latin Americans. Foreign money can now buy around 40 per cent more Mexican labor and materials. However, those materials that have to be imported from the United States or other countries will cost about the same in dollars, francs, pounds or bolivars as they did before.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER
This what is happening in Mexico:

Prices are going up. Those for imported goods have shot up 40 per cent; others are meandering higher, except for those under strict government controls. The merchant who wants an American TV set or the worker who wants some U.S. nylons will insist on getting a little more for his goods or his labor. This may lead to unrest.

America is becoming a more wonderful market for Mexican goods, and will continue so until wages and prices creep up to old levels.

American jobs will have an even greater premium than in the past, since a laborer can get many more pesos for his dollars earned here. There probably will be another sharp rise in the number "wetbacks."

VENEZUELA CHOOSING BETWEEN GOATS, SOIL
Venezuela is out to get rid of the goat, according to reports to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The purpose is to conserve soil and to advance reforestation.

On the Island of Margarita, all but 5,000 of 45,000 goats have been eliminated and now the campaign is being directed to the State of Lara, where a census showed 383,507 goats, but where the actual number may be five times as large.

Because goats nibble down to the soil line, they destroy vegetation and erosion sets in. Some authorities think the dependence on the goat may be involved in the decline of ancient Greece.

DECORATOR COLORS' POPULARITY RISING
Beige, tan, brown grey, pumpkin, copper, gold and coral are rising in popularity in pile upholstery fabrics, according to Joan Fabrics' first-quarter survey. It reported a decline in dark greens, light greens, red and rose. Turquoise, chartreuse, black and other colors were in about the same demand in January to March as they were in the last 1953 quarter.

SIGNIFICANT NOTES ON NATIONAL ECONOMY
More credit unions were organized in March than in any other month in the history of the Credit Union National Association. . . . Wool and blended carpet and rug production peaked up in February, with the Carpet Institute reporting 7 per cent more made than in January. . . . In January and February, direct shipments of finished steel to the construction industry were higher than in the same months last year, the American Iron and Steel Institute calculates.

Bits Of Old Knowledge For You

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Items from an oddity almanac:

Ladies will always have problems, but one problem the 20th century took from them was the task of lacing up the old-fashioned corset.

Robert E. Heyn, a brassiere manufacturer, who has been doing some research on this topic, estimates that since the two-way stretch undergarment replaced the corset some 117,263 whales have been spared. He also figures enough structural steel has been salvaged to erect another Empire State Building and provide every 8-year-old child in America with a roller skate.

The brassiere, incidentally, preceded the corset. It was developed by the ladies of Crete and Minoa about 5,000 B.C. . . . As if Marilyn Monroe cared. . . .

The country store really has grown up in America. A wife now can get in an airplane and fly to the scene of her marketing. The cross-country shopping center, a 30-million-dollar development by Sol G. Atlas in Yonkers, has landing facilities for customers who wish to come by helicopter. . . . "Junior, fly down to the supermarket and get mother a loaf of bread."

Almanac Science Department: visitors to the Egyptian pyramids often wonder how these enormous stone blocks could be put into place without the use of modern engineering equipment. Scientists now believe the stones were hauled on rollers up huge ramps of sun-dried brick by swarms of slaves. No one knows the toll in lives it took to build these tombs for pharaohs.

Sophisticated people don't always have sophisticated palates. . . . The Ritz Restaurant, now in the Carlton House, has been a rendezvous point for gourmets for decades. . . . But Charles Silvani, the maitre de hotel, says that of its hundreds of menu items these are the most popular. . . . roast beef, boiled lobster, corn beef hash, chicken hash, apple pie and vanilla ice cream. . . . They also were the most popular back before the First World War.

Do you let a minor handicap get you down? Then think of Ludwig van Beethoven and quit feeling sorry for yourself. Most people know that Beethoven composed much of his immortal music after he was deaf, but do you know how he did it? He held a wooden stick in his teeth and pressed it against the keyboard of his piano. The sound vibrations carried through his teeth to the bones of his skull and thence to his inner ear. . . .

Almanac long-range weather forecast: A hot air wave, centering in Washington, will extend over the rest of the country for the next few months, abating with the adjournment of Congress.

Sinatra In New Dramatic Role

By BOB THOMAS HOLLYWOOD (U) — Frank Sinatra, the Oscar winner is playing his most dramatic role to date, but he says he won't give up crooning. The wartime flutter of teenage hearts is portraying a would-be presidential assassin in a thriller called "Suddenly." He plays a war hero who has learned to kill by winging out 27 Germans in battle. He is hired by unknown parties to kill an unidentified United States president for the sum of a half-million dollars.

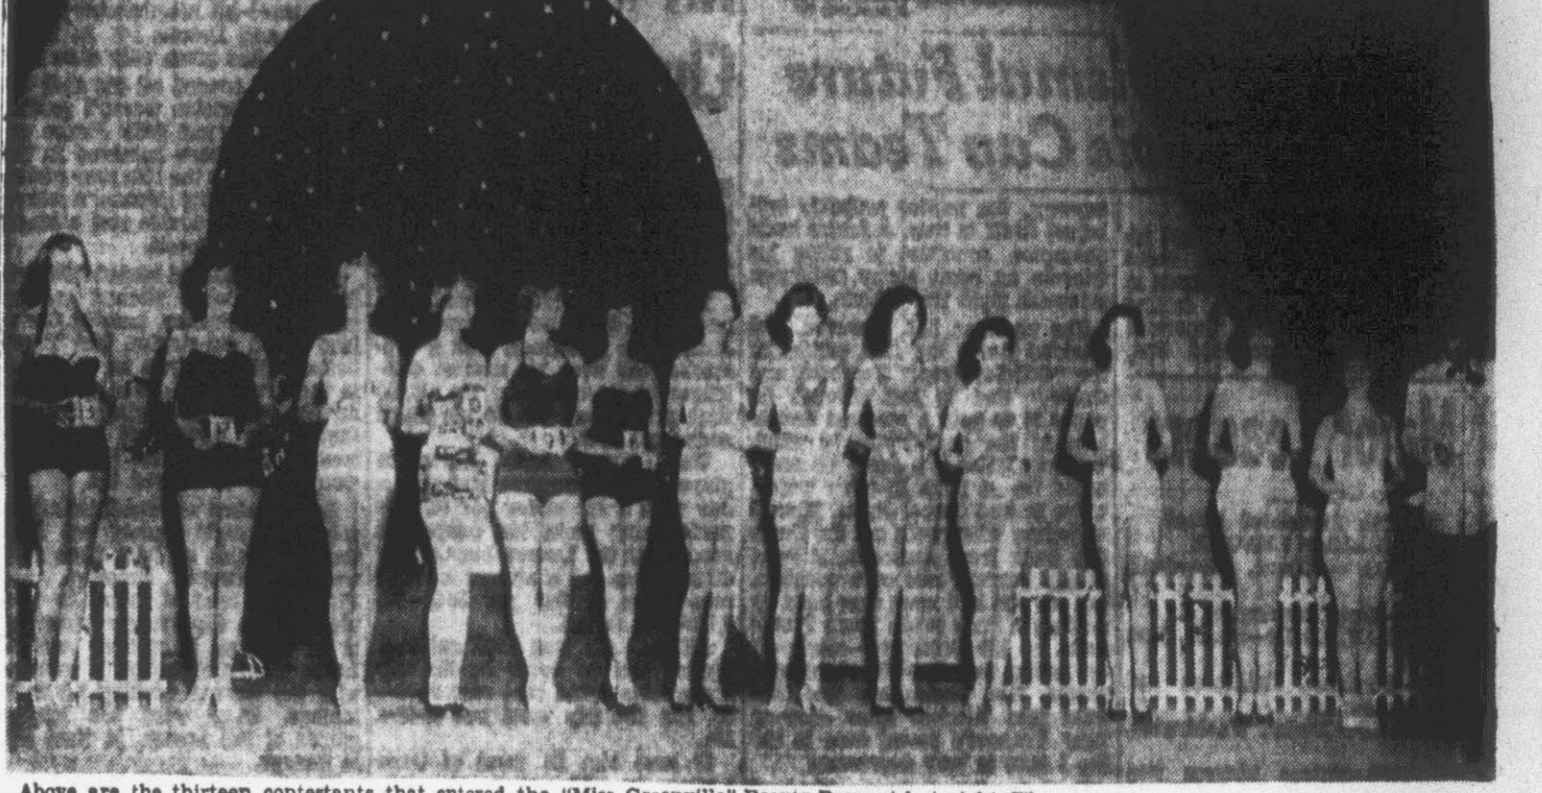

That sounds like a heavy hunk of acting for a guy who used to sit on a bandstand all night. But Sinatra is approaching it with the same confidence that netted him an Academy Award for his Maggio in "From Here to Eternity."

"I don't aim to give up singing," he said. "From Here to Eternity" was the best thing in the world for me because it opened up a whole new field. I never would have been offered this role if it hadn't been for 'Eternity.' And I never would have been considered for 'Not as a Stranger,' which I will do in the fall. "But before that, I hope to do a musical with Gene Kelly I'd love to work with that man again; he's such a great talent. They're sending me a script this week, and I hope we can do it. Comden and Green did the story, which concerns two wartime pals who meet 10 years later and find they have nothing in common. "The main thing is to have a change of pace. A fellow I admire greatly is Alec Guinness. This man can do anything. I've never met him, but I think he must have a great zest for his work. The reason must be because he does something different every time. "I feel that is the way to make a career last for 20 years or more. At least that's the way I'm happiest."

Star-Studded Private Wedding

NEW YORK (U) — Actor Peter Lawford, a British nobleman's son who worked his way up from movie usher to star, and Patricia Kennedy, member of a noted American family, will be wed today in a ceremony attended only by relatives and friends. The private rites will be in marked contrast to the socially brilliant weddings of the bride's brother and sister the past year. Nevertheless, it will be a star-studded event. Giving away the bride will be her father, Joseph P. Kennedy, banker, industrialist, philanthropist and former United States ambassador to Britain. Her brother, U. S. Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.), will be an usher. The Rev. John J. Cavanaugh, former president of Notre Dame University, is to officiate. Among the attendants will be socially prominent individuals from cities across the country. The wedding is set for 4 p.m. EST today in the Church of St. Thomas More (Roman Catholic), Park Ave. and 86th St. A reception will be held in the Plaza Hotel.

Belvoir H. D. Club To Enter Fashion Show

The Belvoir Home Demonstration Club met April 1 at the home of Mrs. Earl C. Lewis. The president, Mrs. D. M. Hollowell, presided. Mrs. Wiley Clark gave the devotions. There were ten members and one visitor present. The clothing leader, Mrs. J. T. Dupree, gave a report on clothing and reminded the club of the Fashion Show to be held Saturday, May 8, and asked that as many as could do so, model garments. Several members wore the new garments which they made to the meeting. Mrs. D. M. Hollowell, citizenship leader, gave a most inspiring report. The garden leader, Mrs. Earl C. Lewis, gave a very interesting report on home gardens. Mrs. Little, assistant home agent, gave a demonstration on "It's Nice to Know How." Many things about Etiquette were learned that the club members had not been sure of. After the meeting was adjourned a game was played. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Earl C. Lewis and Mrs. H. L. Lewis.

Miss Kennedy is the second of the Kennedy daughters to wed an Englishman. The other, Kathleen, married Britain's Lord Hartington. Kathleen and her husband both were killed in wartime plane crashes. Lawford is the son of the late Lt. Gen. Sir Sidney Lawford and Lady Lawford of London. Sir Sidney was a captain in the Boer War, commanded the Royal Fusiliers and was a general in World War I. The actor got his first film role, a bit in an English film, as a child of 7, but he had to win stardom the hard way. He came to the United States in 1938 and eventually got to Hollywood, where he worked as a parking lot attendant and then as a movie house usher. But finally he caught on as an actor in the same frenzied bobbo-sox era that swept Frank Sinatra and Van Johnson to fame. MGM Pictures signed him and for 10 years he made many films. It was at the start of his film career that he told an interviewer that he wouldn't marry until he was 30. This is now his age. The bride-to-be is 26. Lawford and Miss Kennedy reportedly first met in Boston, the Kennedy family home, in 1940. They saw each other from time to time but there was no hint of wedding plans until recent months. The couple will go to Hawaii on their honeymoon and then live in California.

Savitt Vs Seixas For Finals Berth In Texas Tourney

HOUSTON (AP)—Dick Savitt, who comes out of retirement once a year, met Vic Seixas, the nation's No. 2 player, today for a chance to play young Hamilton Richardson for the River Oaks tennis championship. Richardson opened the semifinal round of the 20th annual tournament yesterday with an upset, a straight set sweep against Tony Trabert the national champion from Cincinnati, 6-6, 6-4, 6-2. The top-seeded Trabert jumped into a 4-1 first set lead but Richardson caught him at 4-4 and fashioned his surprising upset with effective backhand passing shots. Seixas, the handsome Philadelphia, entered the semifinals for a third straight year by taking only eight minutes to complete his victory over sixth-seeded Bernard Barzen of Dallas, 6-7, 7-5, 6-1, 6-4. Darkness had halted the fourth set Thursday at 4-4.

Blazing Duels

DES MOINES (AP)—Blazing duels were the prospect today in the windup of the Drake Relays. Major attention was focused on Wes Santee, the running perfectionist. The Kansas speedster was down for appearances in the distance medley relay and the two mile relay. Given the proper weather conditions, Wes and his mates were considered a certainty to wipe out the Drake mark of 10:01.8 Santee helped Kansas establish in 1952. The Bucket is currently in the possession of the Bulldogs. They gained control last week with a 3-2 victory over the Pirates in Wilson. Righthander Ken Hall is expected to start for the Bucs. He has had some trouble with his pitching arm but has apparently cleared up since his last start on April 2. The Pirates will play again Monday night when they travel to Edenton to meet Wake Forest in a charity game. Proceeds from the contest, the third between the teams, will go to the Edenton swimming pool fund.

Art Wall Leads Champs' Tourney

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Golfers in the $35,000 Tournament of Champions faced another windy day and the task of overhauling the surprise leader, Art Wall Jr., today as play swung into the third round. Wall, 30-year-old pro from Pocomo Manor, Pa., and a comparative stranger to headlines, held a two-stroke lead over his nearest challenger in the quest for the $10,000 first prize when the 72-hole affair ends tomorrow. Wall, former Duke University player, took command late yesterday with a six under par 66. The performance broke the competitive record for the Desert Inn Country Club course and shattered the back nine holes of the par 36-36-72, 7,102-yard layout. All Wall did was bank out four birds and an eagle on the trip home for a round that read 36-30-66. His two day total was 69-66-135. It kept him in front of Gene Littler, the 1953 National Amateur champion, whose 68 put him at 137 for the midway mark, and four shots ahead of Lloyd Mangrum, the co-leader in the first round. Mangrum fired a 71 for 139. Doug Ford remained in contention with his second straight-70 for 140. And while only six strokes separated the leaders from the tailenders on the first round, the spread today was greater. The last in the field of 19 was Dick Mayer, at 152. The young St. Petersburg, Fla., player had a 79 yesterday, one stroke more than the 78 for 181 registered by Ed Oliver. Ted Kroll, who shared the lead in the initial round at 68, dropped back with a 73 for 141. He was tied with Al Besselink, winner of this event a year ago, and Cary Middlecoff, both of whom had 71s.

New Network For NCAA Television

NEW YORK (AP)—Televising of college football games this fall will be about the same as 1953 except that the games will come to the viewer over a different network. The television committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association announced yesterday that the American Broadcasting Co. had replaced the National Broadcasting System as the TV medium. ABC will telecast 12 Saturday afternoon games and the Thanks giving Day game or games which will come under the NCAA code. ABC also will carry an extensive series of supporting radio programs beginning July 24.

By JACK HAND NEW YORK (AP)—The Army holds the key to the future of welterweight Jed Black, a pug-nosed college grad from Michigan State. Black graduated Dec. 16 and most of his class already has been called to ROTC duty. He still is waiting word. New York saw Black for the first time last night as he won a split decision over Joey Klein, a hometown boy, in a 10-round televised feature at St. Nicholas Arena before an estimated 2,000 paying $3.50. Referee Harry Kessler scored it 7-2-1 and Judge Harold Barnes 6-2-2, both for Black. Judge Charley Shortell came up with a surprising 5-1 ballot for Klein. The AP had it 6-4 for Black. If Black isn't called to duty as a lieutenant in the Reserves Manager Heck Knowles has a May 17 date for him in Detroit. Danny Martinez, Carmine Fiore or Vince Giovannelli are possible opponents. There is no Kid Gavilan talk in the camp of this young welter who is a stablemate of Chuck Davey's. After what happened to Davey, they want to be sure next time. Black, 23, has a brilliant 27-1-1 record with an unbeaten streak of 26 fights. In that string he was held to a draw by Chico Vejar at Chicago Feb. 10 in his only other network TV appearance.

New England is blacked out starting time is 9 p. m. EST. Six months ago, Tony DeMarco defeated Paddy (no relation) while Chavez lost a decision to the newly-crowned champion. It's slated as a battle of youth against experience with both men willing and aggressive punchers. Tony is 21 while Carlos is 31.

Phantom Track Squad Holds Rigid Practice

By WAYNE BISHOP Reflector Sports Writer With the big meet of the year only two weeks away the Greenville High School track team buckled down to a strenuous workout at Guy Smith Stadium yesterday afternoon. Coach Bill Kirtrell worked his dash men and sprinters at the Stadium on repeated 440-yard runs and 50-yard dashes. The distance runners were taken to the outskirts of Winterville for some cross-country conditioning exercise. The jaunt was about 4 1/2 miles for the Phantom distance men. The Greentees have two more dual meets this year before the big State Meet on May 6. Both of the meets are out-of-town affairs, with the 6-men going to Raleigh and Fayetteville. The State Meet will be in Chapel Hill on the University of North Carolina track. Arthur Looks Good The Greenville coaches were impressed with the showing of several of the runners yesterday in the cross-country jog. Sophomore Fick Arthur and freshman Edwin Wilkerson led the parade over the highway of struggling G-men. Wilkerson's showing was no surprise as the young half-miler has established himself in meets so far this year. Arthur's performance gave hope to the Greenville coaches in that they may have someone who can run the mile. Arthur came in second in a mile race with the college Thursday afternoon and seems to be finally living up to his potential. In the meet with Fayetteville Arthur will have the chance to prove himself enough to enter the State Meet. Among the sprinters, Coach Kirtrell had dash ace Bill Taft and Mitchell Johnson working hard on their specialties. Sophomore Larry Powell worked out on the shot put and worked on the dashes to get his legs in condition. Captain Cleith Oakley looked particularly good throwing the discus again yesterday. Oakley's performances of late have put hope in Greenville officials that he may take a first place in the State Meet. Oakley is throwing the discus as a second choice this year. Last season he was undefeated in the javelin and was rated one of the best javelin throwers in the state. When the North Carolina High School Athletic Association ruled the javelin out this season for safety purposes, it cost Oakley a possible first-place in the State Meet in his favorite event. Oakley has worked on the discus

Fisherman Leads At Jamaica Track

NEW YORK (AP)—The $100,000 added Wood Memorial is down for decision at Jamaica today with Fisherman seeking to prove that a good little horse can whip a good big horse and head for Louisville as the favorite to win the May 1 running of the Kentucky Derby. Fisherman, who carried C. V. Whitney's light blue silks to an easy victory in the sloppy Gotham Stakes last Saturday, is the 7 to 5 choice to measure R. S. Lytle's lanky, long striding Correlation over the milk and an eighth route of the Wood. The California-owned Correlation, future book favorite for the Derby in which the Whitney colt is the co-second choice with Determine at 5 to 2, is held at 2 to 1 for today's rich final Eastern preview of Churchill Downs' 3-year old turf classic. Weather permitting, Jamaica officials expect some 50,000 to sit in the proceedings with thousands of others watching the race via television (CBS) or hearing it on radio (ABC). Post time is shortly after 4 p. m. EST.

Makes History

SAN MATEO, Calif. (AP)—A 22-year-old apprentice jockey—Willie Harmatz—made track history at Bay Meadows yesterday when he equalled the American track record for consecutive winners. The top jockey at the Bay Meadows meet won six in a row, starting with Miss Fir in the second race and winding up his streak aboard Bright Abbey in the seventh. According to the American Racing Manual, three jockeys have won all six races on a six-race card. They were Jimmy Lee, July 5, 1907, at Churchill Downs; H. Phillips July 5, 1916 at Reno; and Albert Adams 1930, at Marlboro.

Harpichord Player First Took Over And Managed Family's Lumber Yard

By W.G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor
NEW YORK, Jan 23 (AP)—What is so rare as a harpichordist? Practically nobody and nothing, not even a harpichord.
But the rarest harpichordist of all, to whom I've just had the pleasure of talking is a woman who came to the concert platform from the lumber yard.
It doesn't sound possible, but it is. The artist is Sylvia Marlowe, whom you've often heard over the radio, who has played regularly with the major symphonies, whose music you know on records, whom you will hear in person again next season according to present plans for a big tour.
Attractive Miss Marlowe, wife of the painter Leonid, was the daughter of a man who had prospered in the lumber business. When he died, while she was 16 and in high school, she took over the lumber yard and employees.
"I'll run this," she promised her mother, "if in a couple of years you'll let me go to Paris to study music."
Never dreaming the girl really wanted to go to Paris, the mother said yes, of course. While Miss Marlowe was still in her teens, off she went to Paris to study with the teacher of about 99 per cent, or so it sometimes seems, of all Americans who ever study there: Nadia Boulanger.
"When I went over," Miss Marlowe remembers, "I was sure I was an accomplished pianist. The moment I began to study there, I discovered I knew nothing."
"The terrible thing about American music education then," she continued, "and I wouldn't say the situation has changed much, is that the great things were not taught. You weren't taught theory, for instance, and harmony, and analysis. You weren't solidly grounded."

Canned Salmon, Once A Staple Budget Item Now Near-Luxury

By SAM DAWSON
SEATTLE (AP)—A can of salmon used to be a staple "budget food" item on American pantry shelves. Now it's in the luxury class.
And unhappy salmon canners admit today they've been pricing themselves out of the market.
Reasons given: sharply declining runs of salmon, soaring inflation in Alaska because of defense program spending, and an overcrowded industry.
As economists of the Seattle First National Bank put it: "Too many fishermen, too many boats, and too many canneries seeking support from a resource that is not only limited but declining."
This is the said story of the salmon industry—which up to now has

Which year means the most to a marriage?
The first year — is the answer in this moving story of the joys and trials of young love struggling toward maturity — taken some two billion dollars out of Alaskan waters, much more than gold miners ever got from the rivers and mountains.

Monday, in The Daily Reflector

The salmon pack — declining steadily for some time—probably will be even smaller than this year in Alaska, the principal source.
The U. S. Fish & Wildlife Service plans to close some fishing areas entirely this year, and cut allowed fishing time by half in other waters, in the hope of restoring the depleted salmon population.
Prices paid fishermen may be cut this year too in an effort to bring the cost of a can back into the range of the average American family's budget.
The Federal Trade Commission has just announced a consent decree banning the practice by which the canners and fishermen's unions negotiate fish prices. In the free-for-all which this presumably opens up, some canneries are reported planning to offer less for fish in the season which opens late next month.
Union leaders are on the way to Seattle to discuss the reported cuts. They say the fish price must be maintained to meet the high costs of living in Alaska and the risks of the catch.
Other cost-slashing plans include consolidation of some Alaskan canneries. These are scattered all along the southern and western coasts. They have a short season, since fishing is limited—in some instances to 16 days—and the canneries must get the fish into cans within 48 hours of the catch.
The salmon itself sets many of the rules. It must be caught as it heads for the stream of its birth, where it spawns and dies. The trick is to let enough pass the fishermen to assure a new crop.
W. C. Arnold, managing director of Alaska Salmon Industry, Inc., with headquarters here says that in several years recently, after the young salmon have gone to sea, their enemies and some still mysterious disease have been laying them low. Often the returning salmon are few and far between.
Salmon also are finicky about their spawning grounds, Arnold says. Man his livestock, his lumbermills, his industries, have spoiled for them some of their once favorite streams. He cites as examples the decline of the once flourishing salmon industries in the Sacramento and Columbia rivers and in Puget Sound.
But T. F. Sandoz, president of the Columbia River Packers Assn. of Astoria, Ore., says that this year

Fire Drill Turns Overly Realistic

KEYPORT, N.J. (AP)—Firemen held a drill at the Raritan Inn recently with smoke pots to make things more realistic.
Result: Three firemen had to be treated for smoke poisoning and a bystander received a black eye when a hose was turned on him accidentally.
"Extremely realistic," was the comment of Mayor Herbert Rothenberg.

More Than 700 Garages To Help Auto Inspections

RALEIGH (AP)—More than 700 garages will participate in a free, statewide auto safety inspection program starting Monday.
The program, which has the backing of Gov. Umstead and Motor Vehicles Commissioner Edward Scheidt, is sponsored by the Carolina Safety League.
The voluntary inspection will line cover brakes, steering, lights, tires, windshields, wipers and horns. O. J. green stickers which can be Scheidt has authorized the issuing of windshielders for cars passing the inspection.
The 1949 Legislature made motor vehicle inspection compulsory. But the 1951 Legislature voted it out and the 1953 General Assembly refused to revive it.
T. A. Williams of Greensboro, safety league chairman, said that although no law requires he league's inspection, it will prove valuable in "peace of mind" to the automobile owner.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—Remember Phez, the dog aided by a hearing aid made by his master, Dr. R.M. Erwin Jr.? Phez got his name and picture in the papers all over the country.
His master took him duck hunting recently. His shoulders were lamed by rheumatism or arthritis. Doctor Erwin tried a heat lamp treatment, but it didn't do much good. Then he got two hand warmers that are activated by chemicals. He sewed pockets in Phez's canvas coat and buttoned in the hand warmers.
The shoulder stiffness disappeared quickly.

Crippled Jays Cooperative

MOBERT, Ont. (AP)—Two crippled Canadian jay birds have teamed up to get around. District Forester R.H. Hambly of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests observed two birds leaning against each other outside his headquarters. Investigation showed each had lost a leg.
"Both birds gave a surprising display of cooperation and maneuvered about extremely well," Hambly said. "Canada jays frequently are caught in traps, and perhaps these lost their legs that way."

Special 'Switch' Explains How Train Does It

HONG KONG (AP)—The Communist news agency carried a succession of stories about a new Moscow-Peking Express, a luxury limited which went into service between the two communist capitals. The stories told everything about the train except how it managed to run on two different track gauges. Russia has wide gauge track, Manchuria and China medium gauge.
A telephone query to the Communist newspaper Ta Kung Pao in Hong Kong (which published these stories) brought the following reply:
"We have wondered about this ourselves. We don't know how they do it. But we know that the Communists are able to surmount such difficulties. They do it with a special switch or something."

Leadership Value Ranked High In HD Women's Work

Benefits Evaluated By Women Who Take Part

RALEIGH—More than 600 home demonstration women have taken time recently to evaluate their own program — to tell in their own words why home demonstration plays such a big part in their day-to-day living.

Leadership was a value of club work which ranked high. Women explained that they enjoyed taking part in home demonstration because it gave them an opportunity to become a leader; it gave them self-confidence.

Home demonstration club work has helped in setting a higher pattern of living in the homes of both farm and non-farm families in the rural areas of North Carolina simply because the people have been given an opportunity to help themselves. And, of course, the program will continue to help people, to reach more persons, as long as the people themselves are given a hand in planning their own program.

"Volunteer" home demonstration leaders today are many and active. The Smith-Lever Act of 1914 states that the function of Extension is "to aid in diffusing among the people of the United States useful and practical information on subjects relating to agriculture and home economics and to encourage the application of the same."

The leader program in home demonstration offers an effective means for achieving these objectives. It is through leaders that it becomes possible for the extension program to serve the community in all of its phases of activity.

Mrs. Charles Graham of Linwood, president of the North Carolina Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs says she thinks of leaders as "topsoil." "As the rain and the sun must filter through this topsoil before reaching the subsoil, so it must be through volunteer leaders that many thus far unreached families will be reached," says Mrs. Graham.

What is a volunteer leader? What does she do? First of all, home demonstration leaders are women who give voluntarily of their time and abilities to further the effects of home demonstration. There are subject matter leaders in each of the some 7,500 clubs in the state — foods and nutrition leaders, clothing leaders, food conservation leaders, home management, poultry, gardening, family relations leaders. These women are more than "title" leaders, they are functioning because they are cognizant of the good that can be accomplished. They realize that being a leader is a two-way position — that they, as leaders, are growing and becoming stronger persons as they assume their duties of leadership in helping others. These leaders keep up with the latest developments in their particular subject matter fields and they report at monthly meetings to the club women.

And then there are leaders who help in the furtherance of "extra curricular" home demonstration projects like music education, health and safety, citizenship, international relations, and rural reading. These leaders, too, report to members of their clubs bringing to them decisions of their state committee. On a state level there are committees for the Jane S. McKimmon Loan Fund, for international relations, publicity, music, health and safety, education and citizenship. There is also a legislative committee.

The purpose of the Jane S. McKimmon Loan Fund Committee, headed by Mrs. J.R. Powell of Horse Shoe, is to assist worthy rural North Carolina girls to obtain a college education in any field. Heading up international relations J.P. Turlington of Salemburg, whose committee helps to further international friendship and understanding through letter friends programs, CARE packages, Penny for Friendship, and UNESCO projects.

The publicity committee, headed by Mrs. John L. Geer of Rutherfordton, stimulates interest in club publicity by contributing news articles of home demonstration work to local newspapers and to the state home demonstration publication.

Mrs. R. A. McCullen of Clinton, chairman of the legislative committee, guides her group in creating and crystallizing public opinion on local and state levels in support of needed legislation approved by the State Council.

Duties of the finance committee, headed by Mrs. J.B. Wooten of Princeton, include preparing a budget based on expected receipts which shall provide expenses for the state federation.

The music committee, headed by Mrs. Vernon James of Elizabeth City is one of the newer state committees. Its responsibilities are to teach appreciation of good music, to form the habit of listening to good music, and to create interest in music history and interpretation among club women.

Mrs. W.K. Cuyler of Durham, Route 1, is chairman of the health and safety committee which endeavors to interest all rural people in improving and maintaining a higher standard of health for their families and to cooperate with all agencies in furthering their programs for the improvement of community health.

Heading the education committee is Mrs. J.W. Halstead of South Mills. The purpose of this committee is to support all worthwhile educational programs affecting the lives of rural people, and to further strengthen home demonstration club work by educating its membership and others as to the real aims, purposes and scope of the organization.

One of the very active state committees is the citizenship committee, headed by Mrs. L.B. Pate of New Bern, Route 2. The objective of this committee is to teach rural persons to realize that the responsibilities of leadership lie with them to know their rights and privileges and to share with the community its responsibilities and privileges.

Home demonstration women feel that it is an opportunity for them to serve as leaders, to be trained as leaders. When a leader begins to assume responsibility, she begins to grow. People learn by three methods: by seeing, by hearing, by doing.

Extension teaching is simply the arranging of situations in order that people may see, hear or do that which will help most in elevating their day-to-day living. Leaders choose to learn on the basis of their particular needs and interests.

Leaders can identify the needs and interests of the people — hence volunteer trained leaders have helped both materially and intangibly in "extending extension" in building real persons out of people.

Says Folks Used To Pay Quicker

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Dr. George R. Smith of Duncan, honored by state dentists yesterday for his 50 years in the profession, says there's one reason he would like to go back to the good old days.

He wants no more of traveling from town to town, carrying his folding dentist's chair or pumping a foot-powered drill. But he adds: "Folks paid their bills a darn sight better then than they do now."

Pasture Profits Surpass Corn

BREVARD — Elmo McCall of the Pisgah Forest community says his eight acres of bottom land has returned more net profit in pasture than in corn.

He seeded his pasture in 1951, following Extension Service recommended practices. In 1952 he cut 20 tons of hay and grazed 20 head of cattle until late in the fall. Last year he grazed 26 head of cattle and still cut 15 tons of hay, according to County Agent J.A. Glasener.

Wheat Profits Greater When It Can Be Stored

RALEIGH — Tar Heel wheat farmers stand to lose up to 75 cents per bushel if they are forced to sell their wheat during the height of harvest, says F.R. Keith, chairman of the State ASC Committee.

If North Carolina farmers have approved storage on the farm or if there is available commercial storage, the CCC Price Support Program administered by ASC county committees will enable farmers to place their wheat under CCC loan at the support rate. If storage is not available, this 75-cent loss is inevitable, says Keith.

While attending a national grain storage meeting in Omaha, Neb., Keith heard experts predict a 1954 grain crop 300 to 500 million bushels larger than the 1953 crop.

North Carolina will furnish its share of this 300 to 500 million bushel increase in grain stocks in 1954. The storage problem, of course, is not as great to North Carolina farmers as it is to big grain farmers of the Midwest.

"However, we do not now have near the storage space that is available to farmers in the big grain producing areas," Keith writes in a letter.

The first problem, Keith said, is for the farmer to know whether or not he has sufficient storage space on his farm or if there is commercial storage available. If not, then he should immediately see his ASC County Committee or go by the county office to get prices on metal bins that can be set up on his farm.

While there, he can also get details on CCC loans for the construction of farm storage and on special income tax provisions permitting the amortization of new farm grain storage erection costs over a period of five years.

Oversized Crow In Bird Explained

RALEIGH — Once in awhile when poultrymen inspect their flocks they notice a bird with such a large crop, or craw, that they wonder what's wrong. Has a disease occurred? Will it spread to the other chickens?

R.S. Dearstyne, head of the department of poultry science at N.C. State College and dean of the North Carolina poultry industry, says the condition is not uncommon in flocks of either chickens or turkeys. It may be a result of several things.

The chief cause of enlarged crop in chickens, says Dearstyne, is impaction, usually brought about by the bird eating large quantities of highly fibrous material. In this case the crop is unable to force the material into the gizzard and impaction occurs.

A second condition is that of pendulous crop. Inheritance may enter into this condition, says Dearstyne, especially in the case of turkeys. The crop becomes pendulous and loses its ability to contract. In either case it is uneconomical to attempt to correct the condition by using medicine, says Dearstyne. Some poultrymen try to operate and remove the impacted material. But birds seldom make an economical recovery. Unless the condition has existed for a long time, the birds are entirely safe for food. Little can be done to prevent the occurrence of such crop troubles, says Dearstyne. They are not the result of a contagious disease, nor will the condition spread.

Farmers' Interest Rising In Marketing Techniques

RALEIGH — Marketing terms are fast becoming everyday words down on the farm.

Farmers who used to be content to sell cotton on the basis of staple length now also want to know the grade.

Livestock producers are no longer willing to sell for "so much per head." They're asking, "How much per pound?" and are interested in carcass weight and grade.

Agricultural economists at N.C. State College report that marketing is one of the fastest growing areas of farmer interest. The figures bear them out.

Approximately 45 per cent of North Carolina's cotton production was classed under the Smith-Doxey system in the fall of 1953 — the highest percentage ever classed in the state.

Meat packing plants in North Carolina are now buying animals on a carcass weight and grade basis. Market agencies have adopted improved practices such as selling in pen lots, better handling practices to reduce bruising of livestock, holding special sales for fat cattle, and better weighing practices.

With an increase in the production of slaughter cattle extension and State Department of Agriculture marketing specialists say producers are interested in the development of a marketing program that will insure them a fair market price for the grade of animals they have to sell. Some farmers are now able to determine the grade of their cattle and market them on the carcass grade and yield basis without the assistance of a marketing specialist to advise them as to when their cattle are ready for market.

Tar Heel farmers are learning to market their grain in a more orderly manner. They have discovered that certain techniques of storage and storage structure requirements are necessary. About three times as much storage space was added on North Carolina farms in 1953 as was added in 1952.

Farmers are also learning to take advantage of the government loan program. In 1952, 1,181 on-farm and warehouse loans were issued to North Carolina farmers for stored grain. Last year 3,222 farmers requested loans.

Egg marketing on the basis of size and quality is becoming more common throughout North Carolina. More attention is also being paid to the amount of fat on hogs going to market, and among fruit and vegetable growers marketing has become the No. 1 discussion topic in recent years.

But the marketing picture in North Carolina is not altogether a rosy one. According to the State College specialists, the marketing system in North Carolina for many agricultural products operates at a sub-optimum level. In many cases the marketing system itself reflects very little relationship between quality and price for the product. Inefficient practices are characteristic in many markets. Facilities to properly store, process, and transport products are often times lacking.

However, there is plenty of evidence that Tar Heel farmers are looking ahead and attempting to solve many of their marketing problems — with big dividends.

North Carolina peach growers put on an extensive program of advertising, promotion and merchandising during the past market season. Growers contributed to an advertising fund used to inform possible buyers of varieties and ripening dates. A folder showing orchard locations was distributed to truckers and buyers.

As a result record breaking crowds came to the area to buy peaches. In addition to the merchandising program, three stericoolers to pre-cool peaches added 50 cents to $1 to the value of each bushel sold from these orchards.

Cotton farmers seeking extra income through poultry in a Cleveland County township organized an egg marketing association in 1953. The organization provides a market through which its members can sell their eggs on a quality and weight basis. The result has been increased labor income by permitting farmers to perform many of the marketing functions for eggs right on the farm.

Favorable Start For Cotton Crop

RALEIGH — This year looks like a favorable one for cotton farmers, insofar as the boll weevil is concerned, but don't assume that the winter's low temperatures killed all the weevils, warns George Jones, in charge of entomology for the State College Extension Service.

"It should be the kind of year that will let you prove anything," according to Jones. One farmer might not have to treat his cotton, while his neighbor will.

Jones says the situation is similar to 1951. Following the bad weevil year of 1950, came a cold winter and a reduction in weevil population.

"The low temperatures this winter have helped us but we have no way of knowing the degree nor the area helped. I am confident that we can expect a great deal of variation from farm to farm and from county to county because of the effect of low temperatures on hibernating weevils."

Jones says one thing is sure: Growers who have a weevil problem each year should not be caught without some materials on hand and their equipment ready in June. The important thing is to check your fields carefully beginning in early June when squaring begins. If you find one adult weevil for each 100 plants, begin treatments.

Put His Clover Pasture To Test

KINSTON — Henry Herring, Kinston, Route 2, swine producer, is convinced he can raise good, cheap hogs on Ladino clover pasture, but this year he plans to determine just how cheap and how good.

Bruce H. Woodard, assistant county agent, says Herring has 90 feeder pigs on four acres of Ladino. Herring feels he can save 15 per cent in grain and 30 per cent in protein supplement by fattening the animals on the clover. He has agreed to keep records and let the extension agents use his enterprise as a demonstration to other farmers.

In early English history, criminals and suicides often were buried at a cross-road and executions often took place at such points.

Built Six Ponds For Fish Farm

ROBBINSVILLE — Luther Millsaps, who lives near Santeeclah Lake, has gone into fish-farming. County Agent W.H. Flake says Millsaps has constructed six ponds, 40 by 10 feet and 3 feet deep, in which he is raising minnows for sale. His construction costs were $60. He stocked the ponds earlier this month for $15.

Friday's Cases In Police Court

By CHESTER WOLSH

In Police Court Friday, Judge Charles H. Wheeler sent the case of Richard H. Joyner, Negro, charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, up to Superior Court for grand jury consideration.

Joyner waived preliminary hearing. The police report states that Joyner went to the police station Tuesday night and admitted shooting William Barrett, 29-year-old Negro. The shooting occurred at 1100 South Pitt street. Barrett was wounded in his left leg above the knee. He is at Pitt Memorial Hospital. Police recovered a shotgun alleged to have been used in the shooting at a rural point six miles from Greenville. Police Detective Raymond T. Rogerson investigated the case. Joyner is in the County Jail and held under $1,000 bail.

In the case against Charlie Womack, Negro, charged with assault on a female, was dismissed. The prosecuting witness, Virginia Belle Randolph, Negro, was taxed with court costs for malicious and frivolous prosecution.

The court gave John W. Stancil 30 days in jail for speeding at 80 miles an hour. Sentence was suspended on payment of $25, costs deducted. The judgment also provides that Stancil is not to drive any motor vehicle for 30 days and is not to violate any motor vehicle law for six months.

John M. Harris, failure to stop at a stop light, prayer for judgment, continued on payment of $10.

Herman L. Norris, breaking and entering and larceny, preliminary hearing waived, and he was bound over to Superior Court for grand jury action under $1,000 bail.

Dr. Stokes Talks At Kiwanis Meet

At the Greenville Kiwanis Club's weekly supper meeting last night, Dr. Kathleen E. Stokes, instructor in government at East Carolina College, gave an outline of Canadian history.

Dr. John O. Reynolds of the college faculty, who introduced the speaker, said Dr. Stokes, an American citizen, is a native of Canada. She was educated in Canada and England at Yale University at New Haven, Connecticut.

She said Canada is the second largest country in the world and enumerated some of its mineral resources and described many races there as an effective blending of good citizenship. Many Americans helped to settle Canada and the American influence is apparent in many phases of the life of the dominion. She gave an impressive description of Canada as an important outpost of the United States and commented on the cooperation of Canada and the United States for national defense.

President John T. Barnhill, who presided, said Dr. Stokes will be invited to speak to the Kiwanians again.

Past President Eli Bloom announced that Kiwanians Jimmy Brewer and Hunter Keck had been honored during the week. Brewer was appointed to an important high office in the Grand Lodge of North Carolina masons. Keck was named delegate to the Generaly from Alabamie Presbytery.

Kiwanians Ken Beatty, Fred Webb and Charles Blair had birthdays and they donated a dime for each year of their age. Bill Drum
