Gas Main Check Favorable, Says Swartz; Water Tank Tests Soon

Utilities Commissioners Hear General Report Of Progress At Monthly Meet

By BOB BOYETTE
Reflector Staff Writer

Superintendent Martin Swartz told the Greenville Utilities Commissioners last night that a check of the gas mains here would be completed this week.

Swartz explained at the regular monthly meeting of the commissioners that this "is the annual survey of leaks in the gas lines. Twenty-one miles of gas lines are checked by a professional engineer."

"The engineer commented," Swartz added, "that this is one of the best systems he has checked. We should be proud of the condition of our mains."

The Utilities Superintendent asserted that only one major leak has been detected.

Tank To Be Tested

In his report to the Commissioners Swartz also said that the new 300,000 gallon water tank "across the river" should be ready for testing this week.

"The company that is installing that tank is one of the smoothest operating organizations we have ever had," he stated.

After the testing this week the tank will be emptied of its water and dried. Upon completing the drying stage it will then be painted. Swartz concluded his remarks about the new tank by saying it "should be in operation in June."

Lift Station Near Completion

In Swartz's report he also said that the lift station on Third Street should be in operation within three weeks, and "we hope to begin working on the sewer outfall at Green Mill Run with hopes for completion of the project by October 1, 1954."

He concluded his report by saying it is hoped that the new 33,000 volt substation will be working by the week end.

Likes Greenville

At the end of the report by Swartz the new superintendent, L. P. Bloxam, told the Commissioners, "I am sure I will like Greenville; I am at your service 24 hours per day, and I want the people of Greenville to know I want to serve them as well as Mr. Swartz has done."

Wants Approximately Same

Mayor W. L. Whebee, who attended last night's meeting, explained to the Commissioners that the city had not made up its budget in detail for the coming year; but "We will be back for approximately the same amount of money as we got last year."

Last year the Utilities Commission turned $142,500 over to the City of Greenville.

The Mayor told the Commissioners he came to express appreciation for the help last year and would like to hear any criticism of the way the city spent the money this year.

He also said he realized last year's turn over to the city was $60,000 above what was normally given, but according to information gathered so far the new tax revaluation here would not give enough extra money in taxes to run the city and therefore, again the Council would be asking for approximately the same amount.

Commissioner W. H. Woolard said he understood last year's extra money was a one-year request. He explained that the pressure is on to reduce the electric rates and it was hoped that could be done.

The whole question was discussed by both members of the Council and the Utilities Commissioners. Through the discussion both the reducing of rates and the rising of taxes was discussed.

Finally, Utilities Commission Chairman Roy Martin told Whedbee and members of the City Council that he was sure "our board will give your request every consideration possible."

Martin then appointed a committee composed of Commissioners W. H. Woolard, Dr. K. B. Pace, and John G. Clark to look into the tentative Utilities budget for the next fiscal year to see what the requirements would be, so the matter of giving the Council extra money again could be considered.

The usual amount turned over to the City by the Commission has been

Snow Storm In May

Will Not Give Up Indochinese States

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower said today that of course we aren't giving up on saving the Indochinese states. He said he doesn't think the free world ought to write off Indochina.

The President told his news conference, however, that no nation can be saved to the free world unless it wants to be saved.

Therefore the President said, any alliance of Southeast Asian nations would have no right to interfere in Indochina unless they were asked to do so.

Eisenhower told reporters, too, that any differences between himself and Secretary of State Dulles on the Indochinese question are differences in utterances and not in opinion.

The President was questioned about the Southeast Asia situation while Dulles met in closed session with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to go over the same ground.

Earlier Rep. Vorys (R-Ohio) said he thinks the administration is working on collective security plans for the area which do not call for immediate use of U. S. armed forces or large expenditures of money. Vorys said in an interview he believes Congress would support a security program along the lines now being worked out.

The Ohioan is senior member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee which Dulles briefed yesterday.

Chairman Chiperfield (R-Ill) and other members of the House group declined to be quoted publicly about yesterday's session.

It was learned, however, that no specific mention was made of using American forces of any type in the beginning to bulwark attempts to weld Southeast Asian countries and Western Powers into a defense coalition. Dulles earlier told a news conference the go is to create an alliance prepared to fight if openly challenged by Communist aggression.

Informed House sources said Dulles suggested that the administration be given flexibility to use elsewhere in Southeast Asia the $1,133,000,000 earmarked specifically for Indochina in the foreign aid bill now before the House committee.

They said he advanced the reason that the funds might be frozen in what the secretary called an outside chance that Indochina fell.

Without specific reference to yesterday's session, Vorys said he was sufficiently familiar with the steps being taken by President Eisenhower and Dulles "to feel that they won't bring a plan to Congress until they have one that will be acceptable."

He said that in any such blueprint, "I don't think that either the immediate involvement of troops in Southeast Asia or heavy expense will be characteristics."

Prisoner Given His Freedom For Assisting Guard

RALEIGH (AP) — Because he went to the aid of a prison camp superintendent when he was atacked by a berserk prisoner, James Marto 12 months, which meant that his freedom.

The State Paroles Board yesterday reported that Marler's sentence had been cut from 18 months to 12 months, which meant tha he went free. He was sentenced in Johnston County on a liquor charge.

Asst. Prisons Director Robert A. Allen called Marler's case to the attention of the Paroles Board. Ronald G. Lane, superintendent of the Johnston County Prison Camp, was attacked by a prisoner armed with a broken bottle. Marler jumped the prisoner and disarmed him, Allen reported, adding that he saved Lane from injury and "possibly loss of sight or even life."

Baby-Sitting Bill Expensive When Sitter Is Shot

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Julius Shabus have received the bill for baby-sitting services rendered them the night of Jan. 15, 1953—more than $6,250.

What made the bill so high was that the Shabus' 5-year-old son Barry shot the baby siter accidentally with his father's 30-30 deer rifle. The sitter, Mrs. Lulu Mae Williams, spent 10 weeks in a hospital.

Justice Howard A. Zeller of State Supreme Court yesterday approved settlement of a $6,250 damage suit brought by the 20-year-old Mrs. Williams and her father, Glenn D. Shapley, of Smithville Flats.

Mrs. Williams contended that Barry got up suddenly and left the living room of the Shabus home in nearby Greene and returned holding the rifle. It discharged, wounding Mrs. Williams in the thigh.

Hasn't Heard Any Endorsers

WASHINGTON (AP)—Chairman Leonard W. Hall of the Republican National Committee says he hasn't heard of anyone who thinks the McCarthy-Army hearings "are doing anybody any good."

Hall talked with reporters at the White House yesterday after visiting President Eisenhower in company with members of a special GOP veterans committee.

Hall, asked whether he favors ending the investigation quickly, replied:

"Well, I agree with everybody—I haven't heard anybody yet who thinks they (the hearings) are doing anybody any good."

Knowland Pleads For Halting Of Harsh Criticism

WASHINGTON (AP)—Republican Leader Knowland of California, in a plea for an end to "carping party criticism," told his Senate colleagues yesterday that only the Communists can be properly called "the party of treason."

"Neither of our great political parties has a monopoy on patriotism," Knowland said.

The day before former President Truman had urged President Eisenhower to take action against forces which Truman said are "destroying our national unity and the nation's position before the world."

Truman had applied his remarks to a series of speeches in which Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis) had called the Roosevelt and Truman administrations "20 years of treason."

In both the Truman speech and the Knowland rejoinder the discussion of party attacks came as a sidelight on the issue of bipartisan foreign policy. Truman said attacks from the GOP side are destroying the basis for such cooperation in a period of extreme national danger, and said he would not want to work shoulder - to shoulder wih a man he would call a traitor.

Knowland was conciliatory on that point, telling his colleagues: "Republicans and Democrats alike should, and do, resent any reflection upon the patriotism and devotion to public service of our two great political paries."

But he contended the Eisenhower administration has gone much farther in keeping Congress advised on foreign policy than Truman did at the start of the Korean war.

He read into the record an account of Truman's June, 1950, decision to send American air and naval forces to the aid of South Korea. At the meeting where that decision was made, Knowland said, there was no representative of either house of Congress. He called that a "sharp contrast ... to the type of consultation which has constantly gone on during the entire Eisenhower administration."

Announce New Rocket Missile For Airplanes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A rocket-powered supersonic guided missile system, designed to be used from airplanes against airplanes, was announced by the Defense Department last night.

The weapon, known as the Sperry Sparrow I, is "fully maneuverable at supersonic speeds, yet light and compact enough to be carried in multiple units by fighter-type jet aircraft," the announcement said.

The Defense Department called the Sparrow a "guided missile system" rather than a guided missile, apparently implying that it is more than a missile.

The Navy disclosed it is training ship and shore personnel for use of the Sparrow by carrier-based jet aircraft both in the Atlantic and the Pacific fleets.

The Navy described the missile types as "systems capable of accurate control when the missile is fired from a speeding jet plane."

Puts Stress On Aid To Business

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey says helping business is more important to the economy right now than helping consumers.

"You can stimulate consumer buying until the cows come home but that won't stimulate the heavy goods industries," he told a CIO "full employment" meeting yesterday. He contended the nation cannot be prosperous unless heavy industry thrives.

He said that helping business and investors buy capital goods will provide more tools and thus more jobs.

French Put Red River Delta At Top Of Indochina Danger List; May Need Help

By LARRY ALLEN

HANOI, Indochina (AP) — France put Indochina's vital Red River delta on top of the Indochina danger list today. A top French commander warned that his forces may need foreign help if the Communist-led Vietminh unleash all their power against the defense perimeter.

Gen. Pierre Louis Bodet chief aide to the French commander in chief in Indochina, Gen. Henri Navarre, told a news conference last night:

"The situation in the delta is serious but far from hopeless or desperate. We may need help from outside if the Vietminh attack the delta with all their means and with their forces from Dien Bien Phu."

Bodet specified no country in his mention of additional foreign aid. The United States reportedly refused a French request for Air Force help to Dien Bien Phu after Britain's government said it could not consider joint military intervention until the outcome of the Geneva conference was known.

Bodet's description of the situation in the delta as "serious" was the first such estimate from any member of the French high command in Indochina.

Seeking to exploit their victory last week at Dien Bien Phu, the rebels throughout the rich rice lands stepped up their attacks on thinly manned French and Vietnamese defense posts.

The French retaliated with massive bombing assaults yesterday on key centers of Vietminh activity in the region. They reported 50 bombers wiped out three villages in the southeast part of the delta From these, the French claimed, the rebels had staged big raids on the highway and railway linking Hanoi and Haiphong.

Though the Vietminh have an estimated 70,000 regular, regional and guerrilla forces throughout the delta, their activity so far was still confined to the usual scattered attacks on French communications and isolated posts.

Denounces Supplying Of Confidential FBI Data To McCarthy

Eisenhower Raps Leak Of Secrets

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower today called it reprehensible for any Army Intelligence officer to supply confidential FBI data without authorization. He was asked specifically about an incident related by Sen. McCarthy, but Eisenhower said he would only discuss the principle involved.

At the outset of the conference, a reporter told the President that Sen. McCarthy had testified last week that an Army intelligence officer supplied him with classified FBI material.

That newsman went on to say that Atty. Gen. Brownell later said the material should not be made public. Eisenhower then was asked to comment on the "propriety" of the Army intelligence officer's delivery of such data to McCarthy without authorization.

The President recalled that he said at his news conference last week he was thinking of taking a vacation from replies to questions dealing with McCarthy.

He added he was not going to comment on the aspect of the question as it related to McCarthy.

The President then went on to discuss the principle of the situation raised by the reporter's question.

He said that in a case where an individual officer gives away classified information, it is so reprehensible.

Eisenhower said that was especially so in the case of security mtterial which must be kept secret.

The President said that when enlisted men enter the armed forces they take an oath to obey the regulations and their superiors.

Eisenhower then asked whether we are to assume that an enlisted man can adopt one kind of loyalty and an officer another kind.

Answering his own question, the President called that perfectly ridiculous.

He added that whenever we get to that kind of a situation in the armed services, we had better disband them.

Later in the news conference, the President said in reply to another question he did not know whether any investigation was being made to try to locate the intelligence officer who McCarthy said provided him with the FBI data. The Army has said it is conduecting such an investigation.

The FBI data dealt with an investigation for possible subversives at Ft. Monmouth, N. J. McCarthy has contended the Army was lax in prosecuting its own probe there and produced a "letter" in the Army-McCarthy hearings, based on an FBI inquiry at Ft. Monmouth. FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover sent word he did not write such a letter as McCarthy first described, but that the document McCarthy produced contained some of the identical language in a confidential FBI memorandum of the same date, sent to the Army's intelligence chief.

Hoover said the attorney general should pass on whether the letter or the memo could be made public; Brownell held that, in the public interest, neither should be.

McCarthy refused to name the officer he said gave him the document and said he never would disclose the name of anyone who gave him information on a confidential basis.

Eisenhower, in his discussion today, did not mention McCarthy by name.

The President also discussed these other matters:

Bipartisan Foreign Policy—Eisenhower recalled that in the past he has ridiculed the idea that he would go along with charges by some Republicans that the Democratic party is the party of traitors.

He made that remark in response to a request for comment on former President Truman's statement that achievement of a true bipartisan foreign policy is impossible unless the President first disavows those who call the Democrats traitors. Truman had applied the statement to a series of speeches in which McCarthy had called the Roosvelt and Truman administrations "20 years of treason."

He first said, in replying to the request for comment on what Truman said, that he was not going to answer anyone who found it proper to criticise his actions. The President then went on, however, to say he feels he has made it clear that he does not endorse charges of treason from within the Republican ranks.

Eisenhower also said that so far as possible he always has striven to keep foreign policy on a bipartisan basis.

Security and Loyalty Investigations—Eisenhower said he is confident that in the long run the Defense Department and the armed services themselves are fully capable of conducting any necessary investigations regarding loyaly and security.

Those remarks were in response to a question whether he agreed with Secretary of Defense Wilson, who said last night the Army and the Defense Department generally are entirely capable of handling such investigations.

Eisenhower said that on the basis of his personal experience in the Army, he always found the situation most heart-warming from the standpoint of dedication and loyalty.

Army Counselor Takes Witness Chair To Back Threat Charges

Verifies Account Of Cohn Outburst

WASHINGTON (AP)—Army counselor John G. Adams swore today Roy M. Cohn exploded "This is war" when Cohn was barred from a secret radar laboratory at Ft. Monmouth, N.J. last Oct. 20.

Telling of the incident from the witness chair of the McCarthy-Army hearings, Adams said:

"He became extremely upset. He said 'This is war,' and 'We'll really investigate this place now.'

"He said 'They let Communists into this place but they keep me out—I've got security clearance to go any place in the world.'"

Adams was supporting the Army's contention that Cohn, 27-year-old counsel to Sen. McCarthy's investigations subcommittee, made threats against the Army.

The Army charges also that Cohn used the subcommittee's power in seeking preferential Army treatment for Pvt. G. David Schine, wealthy New Yorker who was an unpaid consultant to the subcommittee before he was drafted last fall.

Ray H. Jenkins, special counsel for the inquiry into the row, asked whether Cohn had said at Ft. Monmouth that he had access to FBI files.

"He didn't say that to me but he said that to other persons," Adams replied.

Leading up to his story of the Monmouth incident, Adams testified:

1. He was under instructions from Secretary Stevens to cooperate "completely and wholeheartedly" with the McCarthy subcommittee's investigation of alleged subversion at Ft. Monmouth. The McCarthy camp contends Secretary Stevens gave Adams the assignment of trying to halt the Monmouth inquiry.

2. McCarthy once told him G. David Schine was "not much use" to the McCarthy subcommittee and McCarthy hoped Schine would be drafted. Adams said as he recalled this conversation with McCarthy took place about Oct. 14 during a subway ride in New York City. He said Mrs. McCarthy also was present.

Thwarted in their efforts to trim down the public hearings, the seven senators investigating the controversy between Sen. McCarthy and Pentagon officials decided to add an hour and a half to the regular day hearings. They voted against night sessions at this time.

Chairman Mundt (R-SD) announced it had been decided in a closed meeting that in the future morning hearings would begin at 9 a.m. (EST) instead of 9:30 and would continue to run until 11:30 a.m. (EST) The afternoon sessions will begin at 1 p.m. (EST) instead of 1:30 and will run until 4 p.m. (EST) instead of only 3:30 p.m.

Mundt said the subcommittee will consider again next week whether to resort to night and Saturday meetings.

To speed the hearings Mundt asked that senators refrain from making speeches at the opening of the sessions or during their 10-minute period of questioning witnesses.

The chairman also politely urged all parties to put their questions as precisely as possible and refrain from making statements. He urged witnesses to answer as directly as possible, "yes or no" if they could, and not to make speeches with their answers.

Mundt also announced that the regular McCarthy investigating subcommittee staff would be transferred to some other appropriate committee to work on an investigation of alleged corruption on some government projects in Alaska.

Sen. Dirksen (R-Ill) had told reporters the Banking Committee would be asked to take over the Alaska investigation.

Vote To Revise Allegiance Pledge

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate has passed and sent to the House a bill adding the words "under God" to the pledge of allegiance to the flag.

The revised pledge would read: "I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America and to the republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

Just Laughs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. McClellan (D-Ark), a member of the McCarthy-Army investigating subcommittee, has received the following letter from Cincinnati:

"Mr. Sen. McClellan:

"Just when do you think you could stop these hearings. My husband has given up his job, just sets and watches those hearings all day, doesn't work any more. Being a Democrat he has laughed so much that he has become ill and I don't think he able to go back even if it was over. He claims this is the biggest mess he has ever seen in Washington. The only time my husband stops laughing is when McCarthy starts to grunt and hold up his hand and asks for a point of order. My husband just isn't sure just what McCarthy wants. Can you explain.

"A Taxpayer."

Kids Found Gold Hoard, But Threw Some Away

CLEVELAND (AP)—A group of youngsters, hunting their ball in a Cleveland sewer, yesterday stumbled upon a treasure of gold coins.

John Schott, 11, Billy Dembie, 8, and John Cooper 12, weren't dismayed when their ball rolled through a grating and into a catch basin. They crawled right down after it.

On top of a layer of mud in the bottom of the basin they found 13 gold coins. Under six inches of mud were many more.

The youngsters started digging excitedly but before they could get away with their find, bigger boys heard their shouts, pushed them away and grabbed the coins—all but the four John Schott clutched in his hands.

Last night, John's mother showed the coins—all $20 pieces—to Dr. John Gluck, a collector. They were dated 1860, 1880 and 1889. Gluck paid Johnny $36 each for them.

Police had no idea how the coins got in the sewer. The last gold coins were minted in 1933, the year they were withdrawn from circulation.

Reports along the West Side grapevine have it that the bigger boys didn't fare as well as Johnny. Some reportedly sold their coins, but most gave them away as cuiros or presented them to their girl friends.

One lad, thinking they were phony, amused himself by tossing his coins off a bridge.

New Farmville Public Library Is Dream That Came True For Donor Elizabeth Davis

Pictured above is Miss Elizabeth Davis who gave the new library building, which was dedicated in ceremonies yesterday, to the Town of Farmville. Miss Davis said that in seeing the library completed she was "seeing a dream come true."

FARMVILLE—Formal dedication services for Farmville's new library were held yesterday morning in the Farmville Methodist Church.

The new library, which has a capacity of 20,000 volumes was presented to the Town of Farmville by Miss Elizabeth Davis.

Those who attended the dedication services heard Dr. Edward M. Gwathmey, president of Converse College, pay tribute to Miss Davis. He noted that she is an alumnus of Converse College.

Dr. Gwathmey noted that a public library is one thing to some people and to others it is something else. He said that to people who do no read a great deal it is still a beautiful building.

"Architects have striven through the ages to make libraries works of art," he said. "On our college campuses the libraries are the most beautiful buildings."

The president noted that other people think of libraries as a collection of books. However, he said, they are not read as they should be.

Gwathmey stated that a college president recently predicted that in a short while only five per cent of the public will be reading books.

He said that he hoped that this would not happen.

The speaker said that through books the author has put into the life of the reader things that could never have been gotten otherwise.

Gwathmey was the principal speaker at the dedication services yesterday.

Miss Davis in presenting the key and deed for the new building to Charles S. Edwards, mayor pro tem of Farmville, who acted for Mayor O.G. Spell, expressed appreciation to all who participated in the program and who expressed kind words about her. Mayor Spell was unable to attend because of illness.

"This morning I'm seeing a dream come true," she said.

She said that when she graduated from Converse College she felt that she owed a debt to the institution. After some thought, Miss Davis said, she decided that a gift to her own home town would be appropriate.

Miss Davis stated that after visiting several other libraries and consulting with the architects final plans for the new building were decided upon.

She stated she wanted the home town people to feel that the library is their very own and that she hoped that the new building would add to the business as well as the cultural aspect of the town.

"We shall dedicate this building to the glory of God and the service of man," Miss Davis concluded.

She then handed the key and deed to Edwards who accepted on behalf of Mayor Spell.

"From the bottom of our hearts we thank you again, again and again," Edwards said, in accepting the key and deed.

Miss Davis was accorded a standing ovation by those in attendance when she was introduced by Robert Rouse, Jr., chairman of the Library Board of Trustees, who presided over the ceremonies.

The program was opened yesterday with an organ prelude, "Grand Jeu" by Dr. George Perry of the East Carolina College faculty. The invocation was given by The Rev. LaFon C. Vereen. Those present then sang "America the Beautiful" followed by a few words of greeting by Dr. Paul E. Jones. Dr. Perry then played "Finlandia" on the organ.

J.B. Lewis next recognized Miss Annie Perkins and Miss Tabitha DeVisconti for their work in behalf of Farmville's library. Lewis said that it would be impossible to recognize everyone who contributed to the library but, he noted, Miss Perkins and Miss DeVisconti's work had been particularly outstanding.

Next on the program Elbert Holmes rendered a solo, "Bless this House". This was followed by Dr. Gwathmey's address and the pre-

Has Advice For Girl Job-Hunters

By SANDRA NEMSER
AP Newsfeatures

Today's women college graduates head for the big city full of ambition and bright ideas—but often they don't know what they want to do, says Alice Gore King, executive director of the Alumnae Advisory Center in New York, an employment service for 21 colleges.

Miss King, who has advised almost 2,000 girls in their vocations, gives these tips on the do's and don't of getting a job:

1. Your letter to an employer is you. Carelessness, misspellings, crossed-out words all help to give a future boss the wrong impression.

Letters have come into the Advisory Center unsigned, without stamps, addressed 'Dear Alice', at the wrong address or sometimes with no address at all.

2. When you get to the interview stage, make an appointment first and don't be late. Wear appropriate, clean, neat clothes, straight stocking seams, and a hat. Employers always seem to like a hat. And don't smoke unless invited. An interview is the only demonstration an employer has of the way you do a job. And it demonstrates quite a lot if you wear the wrong clothes, chew gum, or make mistakes on your application form.

3. College graduates who want a job in New York or some other large city should learn shorthand and typing. This will come in handy, especially in crowded fields.

Most popular jobs now are in publishing, international relations, radio, television and advertising. Miss King points out, however, that the greatest needs are in fields of teaching, merchandising, mathematics, and secretarial work. She says:

"Too many girls come here for the glamor of the city and go home discouraged. They are misled by articles about $5,000-a-year jobs. What they don't realize is that while there may be 10 million jobs, there are 10 million persons working in them and 10 million more job hunting.'

High Lights Of Belvoir

The social circle has been twirling steadily at Belvoir during the past two weeks. Clubs have been busy electing officers for next year and having their last social programs.

The Monogram Club began this beat by having their annual Monogram banquet at the Farmville Country Club on May 7, 1954. Letters were given to various members. Edna Randolph, president of the Monogram Club acted as Mistress of ceremonies. Coach Forrest and Coach Warren made short talks concerning the improvements of the teams. The school colors were carried out by the centerpieces being blue and gold. The banquet was supervised by Mrs. O. H. Forrest. The main dish of the menu consisted of southern fried chicken.

Twirling later came the Beta Club party for the departure of the old members and introducing the club to the new members on May 10. colors—black and gold. New officers were elected after which the Refreshments carried out the Beta program committee led the group in lively games. A small gift was presented to their advisor, Mrs. Dorothy Hardy.

The next morning the Seniors were served punch and cake by Peggy Lewis, a member of the class. The centerpiece carried out the Senior's colors and flower. Surrounded by blue and white ivy, a red carnation and white candles adorned the center. The carnation was presented to Mrs. Lou Nelson, senior advisor, later.

The social circle will continue to twirl. On Friday evening the Seniors will be entertained at a semi-formal dance. Several other social programs have been planned for the following weeks.

Burket's Paintings And Drawings Shown On College Campus

Oil paintings and drawings by the contemporary American artist Le Roy K. Burket are now on display in the Alumni House at East Carolina College.

The exhibit, sponsored here by the college department of art, includes ten oil paintings and eleven drawings. It will be shown through June 11 and is open to the public. Hours for visitors are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. except on Sundays.

Burket, whose works reveal an "agreeable synthesis between realism and abstraction in art," has exhibited extensively since 1946 both in this country and in France. He is represented in the permanent collections of galleries and museums of St. Louis, Minneapolis, Iowa City, and elsewhere.

A native of Iowa, he was educated at the state university there and later studied under a Fulbright scholarship in France. At present he is assistant professor of art at the University of Nebraska.

Young 'Rustlers' Took Elephants

WILLIAMSPORT Pa. (AP) — City police rounded up a band of 12-year-old "rustlers" yesterday.

Detective Lt. F. Larue Horner said the youngsters had rustled a herd of 500 elephants from the garage of Mrs. Nathan B. Bubb Jr.

The eelphants were returned to their owner.

The only damage reported was one ear broken off a five-inch china elephant. The rest of the collection was intact.

Methodist Men Hold Organizational Meet And Elect Officers

On Tuesday, May 4, a group of men from Jarvis Memorial Church met for the organization of a Methodist Men's Fellowship. Circle number ten of the Woman's Society of Christian Service served a most appetizing supper.

Dr. Leo Jenkins, the featured speaker, gave some pertinent thoughts on "Faith." Johnnie Overton had charge of singing and some special music.

Officers for the Fellowship were elected as follows: president, Fred Hall; vice-president, Jack Foley II; secretary, J. T. Starling; and treasurer, James W. Joyner.

The next meeting will be held in June. All the men of Jarvis Memorial Church are cordially invited to share in this fellowship. This is not another meeting: it is designed to get the men of the church together for fellowship and instruction. A high standard was set by the meeting in May, but it is the intention of the officers to maintain that standard.

Eyes On Parade, Robbed Theater

HARTFORD, Conn (AP)—As blaring bands marched by in the Armed Forces Day parade, a man slipped up to the cashier's window of a movie theater yesterday and handed Miss Muriel DePrey, 18, this note:

"This is a stickup. Do not make a sound. If you do I'll kill you. No alarms. The money or your life. Put in bag."

The bandit dashed past the backs of the crowd and ran down an alley with $100 in cash.

H. D. Agent Discusses Labor Saving

ROBERSONVILLE—A very profitable afternoon was spent when the Home Demonstration Club met with Mrs. Ben Manning Tuesday, May 4. After the usual business session, Mrs. Thad Harrison, Home Demonstration Agent, discussed labor-saving devices. When this interesting program was finished, the hostess showed an improved ironing board which can be used while the housewife is sitting or standing. She also displayed an iron that can't scorch. Many useful suggestions were given to ease the burdens of the busy housekeepers.

During the social hour, homemade strawberry ice cream and delicious layer cake were served to a large group.

The June meeting will be held with Mrs. George James of Parmele.

Woman's Club Hears Reports Before Summer Adjournment

The Greenville Woman's Club held its last general meeting for the summer months Friday at the club house, with the president, Mrs. R. P. Rogers, presiding.

The club house was beautifully decorated throughout with a variety of roses and greenery, where the club members enjoyed a delicious luncheon and a delightful program.

It was very gratifying to hear the excellent reports which were given by the department and committee chairmen. The president praised club members for their loyalty, support and many fine accomplishments during the past year and urged them to continue their fine club spirit that greater things may be done in the future.

New projects which received special recognition were: "Help a Home," with Mrs. Alton Barrett as chairman, "Americanism," which raised their quota for restoration of Independence Hall fund with Mrs. Fred Hall as chairman; "House Committee," with Mrs. Hugh Ragsdale as chairman, for their fine job of renovating the apartment and serving as resident hostess. The "Hospitality Committee" with Mrs. Cora Powell and Mrs. Fred Hall co-chairmen for organizing the "Newcomers Club."

The steering committee of the "Fine Arts Festival" was highly praised for the best festival ever given. Mrs. J. C. Galloway Jr. was thanked for acting as chairman of the cancer drive for the club. The reports of Mrs. L. W. Topping, chairman of American Home department, Mrs. S. H. Mitchell, Garden Club, and Mrs. Jesse Moye, literature department, were most inspiring as they told of their activities. The club scored 120 points on rating sheet this year.

Mrs. Rogers urged members to register and vote. She also reminded them of the district meeting which will convene here in September.

At the conclusion of local reports, Mrs. J.H.B. Moore, who was a delegate to the annual convention in Asheville, gave a very full informative and inspiring report, after which club members said good-bye for the summer.

Presenting Two One-Act Plays

Two one-act plays by students at East Carolina College will be presented tonight in the College Theatre at 8 o'clock as the final production this spring of the Workshop Series presented by the Teachers Playhouse.

James L. Thompson's "Who Wears the Pants," a folk comedy, and Sabra Nunalee's "One Too Many," comedy about a marital mixup, are the plays chosen for production. The public is invited to be present.

Thompson, a sophomore from Durham, spent four years in the Air Force prior to entering East Carolina. He has been a member of the Teachers Playhouse for two years.

Earlier this year he had the role of a playwright in the musical "Banana Moon," and he became a playwright in real life with the completion of "Who Wears the Pants." Since this first effort, he has written two television skits and is now at work on another one-act play.

Miss Nunalee, a senior from Curry, has been interested in writing since high school, when she was editor of the school paper. "One Too Many" is her first play for the stage, but she has also written a television skit, which was recently produced.

Mrs. Riggs Is Honored On Mother's Day

A picnic dinner was given in honor of Mrs. A. P. Riggs Sunday at the home of H. E. Hill in Grimesland.

John Dee Riggs was home from California with his bride for the happy occasion. After the dinner her children gave their mother many lovely gifts.

John Dee gave each brother a lovely china tea set. It was the first time in over 18 years that they had all been together. There were around 45 present for the occasion, including Mrs. Riggs' eight sons, their wives, 14 of her grandchildren and two great grandchildren, also a few special friends.

Following dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Berchelle of Raleigh and Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Miller of Alliance joined the happy gathering.

Miss Virginia Worthington played several songs on the piano after dinner.

One of the most difficult jobs of housekeeping is to keep linoleum and asphalt tile floors waxed and gleaming. Now, thanks to Glaxo, it is no longer necessary to wax and scrub. All you do is apply Glaxo with a brush about twice a year. It maintains a high lustre, non slip coating that seals out dirt. Glaxo dries in one hour and is water clear. It's cheaper than wax in the long run, besides saving a terrific amount of work, plus truly a beautiful floor. Glaxo is available at Belk-Tyler's on the third floor.

Amendment Will Force 28 Judges Into Retirement

By JOE HALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty-eight of the 347 federal judges holding lifetime posts would be forced to retire, because they are 75 or over, under a proposed constitutional amendment passed yesterday by the Senate.

But since it may be years before there is final action presumably few if any of these same judges would be affected.

Besides the mandatory retirement provision, the proposal would fix the size of the Supreme Court at nine justices, thus preventing any future attempt to enlarge it.

Senate approval, sending the measure to the House, came on a vote of 58-19, comfortably more than the required two thirds. All 43 Republicans present voted for it. So did 15 Democrats. Eighteen Democrats and the lone independent opposed it.

The administrative office of the U.S. courts said today in response to a query that 28 federal judges now are 75 or older. None of the nine Supreme Court justices is that old, however: Justice Frankfurter, the oldest, is 71.

Federal judges now may retire at 72, but there is no provision forcing them to retire at any age. They draw full pay for life.

Sen. Hennings (D-Mo) who opposed the proposal, suggested in the debate that one motive for it might be a desire to force some of them off the bench. Most of the present jurists were appointed during the 20 years of Democratic national rule.

But Sen. John M. Butler (R-Md), author of the proposed change in the Constitution, said the reason for the age provision was his conviction that most judges have slowed down considerably by the time they reach 75.

Before passage, the Senate eliminated another section by Butler which had political overtones.

It would have barred any Supreme Court member from running for president or vice president until five years after he left the court.

If the House approves the Butler amendment by a two-thirds vote, it would go to the state legislatures. Thirty-six of them would have to approve it within seven years for the provisions to go into the Constitution.

Butler said it was designed to forestall any repetition of the 1937 plan of President Franklin D. Roosevelt for adding members to the Supreme Court, widely denounced as "court packing" and rejected by Congress.

The weight of all insects on the earth probably is greater than that of all other animals combined, entomologists say.

Increased Fines Add To Woes Of Dock Union In Fight To Survive

NEW YORK (AP)—Fines totaling $92,500 have been added to the woes of the old International Longshoremen's Assn., now locked in a life struggle for control of dock workers in the Port of New York.

The fines, plus jail sentences for three ILA local officials, stem from March 5 to April 2.

They were imposed last night by Federal Judge Harold P. Burke shortly after a jury decided the union had violated a no-strike injunction and was guilty of criminal contempt.

The penalties were far less than those asked by the National Labor Relations Board, which brought court action against the Union. The board asked a $25,000 fine for the parent ILA for each day of the month-long strike and $100,000 fines against eight of its locals.

Defense attorneys announced they would appeal the case today.

The strike flared up in the midst of tense rivalry between the old union, which had long held firm control over dock workers, and a new ILA set up by the AFL. Overthrow of the old ILA was sought by the AFL after it kicked out the union and revoked its AFL charter last September on grounds that it was dominated by racketeers.

An NLRB bargaining election last December between the two unions was voided because of strong-arm tactics by the old ILA, and a second vote had been set for May 26.

The strike, which hit the port during the uneasy period after the first election, brought a fine of $50,000 against the parent ILA and $5,000 each against seven of its locals.

The judge set a heavier penalty of $7,500 on an eighth local, No 824, which ruled the uptown Hudson River docks of luxury passenger liners and had been dubbed the "Pistol Local" because of its reputation for violence.

A six-month jail sentence was ordered for Harold Bowers, secretary of Local 824. Three-month terms were given to William P. Lynch, secretary-treasurer of Local 791, and William Ackalitis, secretary of Loral 874.

The ILA specifically was found guilty of violating a March 4 court injunction against interfering with unloading of trucks driven by members of the AFL Teamsters Union, which had been backing the ILA-AFL.

The dispute with the teamsters was set off by dismissal of an AFL-ILA shop steward at Pier 32 on the Hudson River. Charging this resulted from ILA pressures, the teamsters refused to deliver goods to ILA workers on that pier.

In turn the ILA declared a boycott against teamster-delivered cargo at all other piers. The ILA officially declared the strike illegal at first but later endorsed it.

In the December NLRB election the ILA polled the most votes but the count was close enough to be in doubt when the AFL challenged some 4,000 ballots.

When the strike began, the NLRB had not issued a final decision on the election. It later ordered a new election, and declared the ILA would be ruled off the ballot unless the strike was ended immediately. The ILA quickly complied.

Jumper Learned River Was Dry

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Now Merle C. Christian, 45, knows that "river" doesn't necessarily mean water in central Arizona.

He left his hotel yesterday, telling the manager he might not be back. At a pawnbroker's, he sold his clothing, including Army discharge papers, with the comment: "I won't need them any more."

Then he walked to the highest point of the bridge over the Salt River and went over the railing.

He hit the sandy river bed, where water had not flowed for years, and slightly hurt his head.

COLUMBUS Ohio (AP) — Joseph Deluca, 44, of Columbus crashed into the rear of a police ambulance cruiser at a stop light yesterday.

When the jarred patrolmen ran back to talk to Deluca, he greeted them with a polite nod and inquired sociably, "What street am I on, please?"

He was charged with drunken driving.

Last Chance To Register Is At Hand

Pitt County citizens have three more days in which to register if they are to vote in the May 29 primary.

Unless the registration picture changes between now and sundown Saturday, there are going to be a good many mad folk in Pitt on election day. And they will have no one to blame but themselves.

At the close of the second week for registration there were almost 10,800 people registered in the county. That means an average of slightly more than 5,000 people have registered in each of the first two weeks of the special registration period. If the same rate of registration has continued in the last week, it is reasonable to expect some 15,000 registered voters in Pitt by Saturday night.

In some counties, 15,000 registered voters may seem a big number. In Pitt County, it is not enough.

Look at the situation this way. Pitt County has more than 63,000 people. If there are only 15,000 registered voters in the county, less than one-fourth of the citizens are eligible to vote in elections. Even if all the registered voters were to cast a ballot in any given election on that basis, it would mean approximately one-eighth of the population of the county could determine who would be elected to office or any other issue which was to be decided at the polls.

There is no getting around the fact that good government is dependent upon the participation of a high percentage of the people in elections. If the matter of electing officials is left to a relatively small segment of the population of any community, the quality of government will gradually deteriorate.

Every eligible citizen of Pitt County who neglects his obligation to register to be a qualified voter is forfeiting his privilege of participating in the coming election, and leaving to his fellow citizen the responsibility of deciding the issues at stake.

The Damage Has Already Been Done

Suspension of the Army-McCarthy hearings now, it seems to us, would be a greater mistake than beginning the hearings in the first place has proven.

Admittedly there is little likelihood of anything ever coming from the hearing. Surely most people—including the committee which is doing the "hearing"—are extremely tired of the whole mess.

McCarthy has had his field day with Stevenson and other witnesses of the Army on the stand. We doubt that McCarthy can play the role of witness for himself as well as he has played the role of prosecutor thus far, but should be given the opportunity.

There is certainly no logical reason for postponing the remainder of the hearing or trying to sandwich it in with other committee work. Either the matter should be followed through to its completion now and set aside; or it should be dropped for good.

Frankly, we think McCarthy is finding himself in deep water in this hearing so far, and would welcome an opportunity to get out before any more so-called evidence he presents backfires in his face as have the much-talked-of letters which were discounted.

We do not believe it is possible for the hearing, if it is continued, to do any more damage to this nation on the international scene or on the domestic level than it has already done. Since the damage already has been done, we may as well get along with the airing of the dirty linen and get it all on the line in public view rather than leaving part of it stuffed back into a committee closet somewhere to be brought out later.

N.C. State Is Making A Notable Contribution

It is significant that the first man to receive doctorate in nuclear engineering has received his degree from North Carolina State College.

It was not so many years ago that State College was referred to as "Cow College" here in North Carolina almost as frequently as it was referred to by its proper name.

But for the most part those days of the degrading nick-name are gone. State has gained the position of one of the foremost textile engineering schools in the nation. It's agricultural program has become recognized as among the best in the nation.

In the past few years it has pioneered in the field of training nuclear physcists and its prestige in this field is recognized not only in this country, but in other parts of the world as witnessed by the fact that the first man in the world to receive a doctorate in nuslear engineering is a Brazilian.

The contribution which State College makes to the development of atomic energy through its own research work and the training of nuclear physicists is destined to carry the institution to even greater heights in this relatively new field.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

Theodore Roosevelt remarked many years ago that to educate a man's mind without educating his conscience is to make him a public menace. William James also remarked that an abundance of accomplishments in an unsanctified heart only makes one a more accomplished devil.

Something of catastrophic proportions is going to happen in the modern world unless we realize that we cannot educate the mind of man and make him a happy being and a social asset unless we also educate his spirit. And the spirit can be educated precisely the same as the mind. We have the Bible and the ministry of the Church at our disposal. How we could have allowed secularism to creep into modern education to the extent it has is beyond understanding. We are cutting the ground out from under our feet by this pernicious policy. A few branches of the Christian Church have long recognized this and have taken determined steps to meet the menace. The others who falter and dally are opening themselves and their loved ones to the menace of disaster.

Moral conditions today are bad. Let no one tell you that they are not. We cannot correct these evil conditions with secular education. We must have religious education, and we must be earnest in our efforts.

What we face is catastrophe—nothing less. Let's get going.

Somebody Told Me

Covering World By Ham Radio

(Special reminder: If you haven't already eaten supper, you'll be in for a treat if you come out to Elm Street Park tonight and eat chicken for $1 The profits go to Little League operation and the meal will be worth $1 plus.)

Got a cousin in Germany, Italy or England you want to relay a message to? Or maybe just a friend in the U. S.? My long-distance short-wave antenna has been in operation two weeks and already I have relayed some far-distant messages while making complete flops of some attempts.

For example, I have contacted Albuquerque, N. M. twice in an effort to get Mrs. Ruth Carter in contact with her daughter Mary Ruth, Mrs. G. R. McAllister. On one occasion Mary Ruth wasn't home and on the other Mrs. Carter wasn't available.

However, last night I relayed messages between Mrs. Joseph Bruington (Rosalie Taylor) in Kansas City and her mother here in Greenville, Mrs. Walter Taylor. Previously, I hooked Kansas City but couldn't find Mrs. Taylor.

Two nights in a row I talked to the Hawaiian Islands, but haven't heard them since. After finding out that Alice Wooten of Greenville is visiting over there I haven't been lucky enough to hit.

My efforts in Germany have been the biggest flop; that is, to come so close to success. Charlie Howard of Greenville Tobacco Co. is over there and I have talked to seven different amateur stations in Germany, but the closest I could get to Charlie's location, Hamburg, has been 150 miles. On the last contact I found out that Hamburg is in the English zone, so evidently the British occupational troops do not go in for ham radio as much as American GIs. One of the Germany contacts (all were GIs) was from Wilmington and I was able to relay a Mother's Day message for him.

Joyce Hockaday, who lives in Mesa, Arizona, was relayed a message through a Phoenix station, but I am still hoping to hit Mesa for a more direct contact.

Mrs. Verlin Gripp (Hennie Ruth Whichard) of Sioux City, Iowa, received a message yesterday through my station from her mother here in Greenville, Mrs. Ruth Whichard.

My efforts to hit Oakland, California, have been a flop, although I have been as close as 30 miles away. L. D. Page has been visiting his daughter, Ruth Allen, in Oakland but is now on the way back to Greenville.

Short wave radio is like television from Norfolk—unpredictable. Sometimes the bands are in excellent shape and other times they are almost dead. So it would be impractical to depend on contact. But I have a file of people's names and addresses that local people want messages relayed to, and when conditions are good and I hit the various locations it's real fun to be a messenger boy.

And I thank you.

What Other Editors Are Thinking

THAT FICTION AGAIN
(Wall Street Journal)

There are several causes which this page supports but so far as we can see our words have no effect whatever. Thus Mr. Bevan in Great Britain, along with Mr. John L. Lewis and Harry S. Truman right here at home have never changed their course of conduct despite all the advice we offered or protestations that we have voiced.

Also from time to time we have tried to disillusion people who persistently believe that in the northern part of these United States there is a season called spring. That has had just the same effect as our preachments to Messrs. Bevan, Lewis and Truman—which is none at all. However, with a cold drizzling rain outdoors we shall try again.

It was two years ago that we pointed out the fallacy of believing in spring. The next two days were warm and gentle and by correspondence and telephone several people treated us with some derision. However, we refused to retract and felt we were completely justified when on the next day there was a sizeable snow storm.

Despite these experiences people still believe in spring. Even in our own household we have no influence. Right now "spring cleaning" is under way. The house is kept what seems to us sufficiently immaculate by a woman who scrubs and vacuum cleans two or three days a week. Yet at this season something extra must be done.

The next step will be the purchase of garden seeds. They will be stored away for a considerable period after their purchase for the very good reason that the ground remains too wet and cold to risk planting them.

Well there, we have done our bit to bring to our readers a sense of reality about this spring business. It will have no effect. But our conscience is clear—at least on that point.

New Discount Angle

By ELMER ROESSNER

The fight over price maintenance has been taking a new turn in recent weeks as a number of retailers have swung from conventional to discount selling. In Washington, D.C., a seven store chain converted its largest outlet into a discount operation and indications are that it will change some if not all of its other outlets. In a number of other cities a few old-line retailers have either openly switched to discount selling or have quietly begun granting discounts.

Several merchants are reported to be working on plans to play both sides of the street. They now operate full-price establishments and they are said to be considering opening up discount stores in other cities or other neighborhoods. With such a setup, a merchant coud cater to both bargain hunters and to those who prefer to have full service, and slow-moving merchandise could be transferred to the discount store without weakening the price structure in the original shop.

When the lead store in the Washington chain switched, it used full-page newspaper ads headlined, "Everything on sale for less than retail," which caused many competitors to complain that, while a store can sell at sell at less than regular prices it can't retail goods at less than retail.

A merchant tempted to switch to discount selling faces a number of important considerations. To sel at less than regular prices requires sources of goods at less than regular wholesale prices, the elimination of a lot of services and other expenses, or a mixture of both.

At present, there are quite a few sources: distress stocks of other retailers, excess inventories of manufacturers and distributor, unsold 1953 models in many lines. And while there will always be some cut-price goods available, it remains to be seen whether there will be enough after manufacturers cut back production to current demand.

Cutting operating costs sufficiently may be another matter. Some discount sellers eliminate (or charge for) deliveries, refuse to accept returns or to give service and cut sales forces to a few order-takers on a take-it-or-leave-it basis. But many retailers will find that they have commitments—rent, union contracts, etc.—that can't be cut.

An even more important consideration for many retailers is whether they can continue to get well-advertised and presold goods if they turn to discount selling. This may be especially important if the retailer is compelled to return to regular price selling later on.

SEEKS JOB FOR GENIUS WHO DOESN'T KNOW IT

A friend is looking for a job for a genius, but the genius doesn't know it yet. The Wall Street Journal carried an ad reading, "I know a mechanical-engineer genius (or near genius) who has done top-secret work for the U.S. Armed Forces since 1940—maintaining his own staff and acting as inventor as well as independent contractor—and who has never made any money at it."

Then after eight lines tell how full of genius the man is, it goes on, "He does not know this ad is being run. But I know that a fair offer for his brilliant talents from a creditable U.S. manufacturer. . .would persuade him to drop his role of profitless entrepreneur. . .I am not an employment agent. My intervention is prompted by a sense of justice and high regard." It is signed with a box number.

Facts, Fancies In Oddity Files

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — The oddity almanac-facts and fancies from a world of wonders:

What feature of American civilization do you think would most startle a visitor from darkest Africa?. . .Our skyscrapers, movie palaces, traffic jams, or supermarkets?

Well, none of these impressed James Ngaiyaye, a native African minister en route through Denver to a church conference in San Francisco, as much as America's ornate cemeteries and its restaurants.

"Burial in South Africa is such a simple thing it is difficult to comprehend the lavishness put upon it in the outside world," he said. "And eating in Africa is a personal or clan affair. The many, many eating places here are most surprising. It is difficult for me to get used to the custom."

Tell that to your wife and next time she wants to eat out. . . . But this African minister would have been even more amazed if he had visited the Wall Street section here a few years ago, when financial clerks used to eat their lunch while perched on the crumbling tombstones in the old Trinity Church Cemetery.

Woman's — place — is — in — the-home note: When Mrs. Edith Friedman, mother of five children, decided to build a housing development in the Philadelphia area, a big real estate broker told her, "Forget it. You don't even know how to climb a step ladder." But Mrs. Friedman didn't take the brushoff. She has finished one 108-home community, now has started another of 138 homes. Her secret? The problem of building many homes is the same faced by any wife in building a single home: "Coordinating manpower and materials". . .She found workmen willing to do things for a woman contractor they wouldn't do for a male boss.

Almanac editorial: The Russians have come up with a couple of new home-made perfumes called "Spirit of Red Moscow" and "Jubilee of the Red Army."

Why can't America come to its own scents, too, and quit leaning on the French for our perfume nomenclature? It's time we put some patriotic, star-spangled allure in our own bottled smell merchandise.

Just to get the ball rolling we suggest: "Rebel Delight," "Reno Remorse," "Yankee Bliss," "Moment in Pittsburgh," 'Potomac Passion," 'Seattle Mist," "Washington Whiff," "Tennessee Throb,' "Montana Madness," "Kansas City Caper," 'Mistake in Milwaukee," "Madcap Memphis Mama," "Aroma Keokuk," "Eau de Chicago," and "Erie Canal No. 5."

Know-your-America department: You can win wagers by betting your friends they can't name the two American states that have no official motto. Oregon has never had one. . .In 1866 Ohio adopted as its motto, "Imperium in imperio-a government within a government," but repealed it in 1867 . . .Little Rhode Island has the shortest motto: "Hope" m m m Texas got both its motto — "Friendship" — and its own name from an Indian word, Tejas, meaning friends. . .Washington state has the most restful motto: "Bye and Bye" . . . The motto of the District of Columbia is "Justitia Omnibus," which some politicians believe means "just always stay on the right bus." Actually, of course, it is Latin for "Justice for All." Contest Still Lacks Popular Interest, But Is Tighter

By LYNN NISBET

TIGHTENING UP — The race for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator is tightening up as it moves into the final 15 days before the primary. It still lacks the popular interest which had been expected at this stage, but the people are now aware that a contest is going on. They are looking for a lively wind-up; perhaps not as heated as originally expected, but more interesting than appeared probable a month ago.

Most observers concede that ex-Governor Kerr Scott retains the leading position which he has held from the beginning, but that Senator Alton Lennon has greatly narrowed the margin during the past two weeks. The Scott folks claim their man will win easily on May 2, and insist that he has widened the difference and deny that Lennon has made appreciable gains by his campaign methods.

The Lennon folks claim that if the rate of gains made since May 1 is continued, their candidate will pass Scott before voting day. In fact, a substantial number of Lennon supporters insist that he is already in the lead and by May 29 will get more votes than all the others combined, thus obtaining the nomination.

Alvin Wingfield Jr., has been most active among the minor candidates and has aroused considerable interest. Your reporter has found no evidence of appreciable voting strength for Wingfield, although many people who say they cannot support him estim'te his probable vote at 20,000 to 25,000.

The only other candidate who has made any campaign is A.E. Turner. He has not been able to arouse any interest in his efforts. Olla Ray Boyd, W.M. Bostick and H.L. Sprinkle are not heard of except when it is necessary to give the full list of candidates.

The race is, as it has been all along, been Lennon and Scott with the prospect it may be close enough to require a run-off primary on June 26.

INCOME — The liveliest "issue" injected so far is the matter of how much money the candidates made during the past few years and how much income taxes they paid. Lennon first suggested publicity of tax returns, citing the example of candidates in the 1952 Presidential election. Wingfield was first to publish his returns, followed in a few days by Lennon. Scott has to date declined to make his report public.

Lennon managers chide him for not keeping faith with his statement that his record both public and private is an open book, and imply that he obviously has something to hide. Terry Sanford, Scott state manager, said the other day that his candidate would lay it on the line in a radio speech. When the speech was made the "laying it on the line" consisted of a further statement that checking income taxes was the duty of the revenue agents, not the public, and that the matter was irrelevant and had been injected to muddy the waters and prevent discussion of real issues.

Opinion is almost unanimous among those whom your reporter had interviewed that Scott should publish his tax returns. Many of those same people agree that it is irrelevant and should not have been brought into the campaign, but since it has been, the continued delay on Scott's part justifies the suspicion that his income was so large as to make his claim of being the "little man's candidate" rediculous, or that his tax payments were small enough to indicate excessive claims for exemptions.

The $5,000 to $6,000 income reported by Lennon occasioned some comment that his success record as a lawyer does not qualify him to fill the job as Senator. That accusation is being made chiefly by those who are supporting Scott as the poor man's candidate, and who opposed Willis Smith four years ago because he had made too much money as a lawyer.

UNDECIDED — With 15 work days to go, the outcome is still undecided and betting odds are about even. That doesn't necessarily mean the vote difference will be small. The campaign can take a quick turn either way resulting in substantial margin for either Lennon or Scott, though not of landslide proportions. It is apparent that Lennon stock has risen rapidly during the past 10 days and that his workers are more enthusiastic and optimistic. Scott gains have been less noticeable, but there is no evidence that he has lost any support. That leaves the question whether he had enough lead at the start to make Lennon's efforts futile. He thought so then and still believes it.

In that respect the current situation is similar to conditions in 1948 and 1950. In those campaigns Charlie Johnson and Frank Graham maintained dominant leads and the cases of Kerr Scott and Willis Smith appeared hopeless two weeks before the primary, when judged by all the traditional standards of politics. The final 10 days of the first primary period and all of the second brougnt a complete change in positions.

There is further similarity in that many people now who predict victory for Scott say at the same time they expect to vote for Lennon. Oldtimers will recall that in 1928 there were few people who thought Al Smith would lose North Carolina, even though a great many of them said at the same time they could not vote for him. Numerous other campaigns including that for President in 1948, have proven that elections are won by individual votes, not by pre-election forecasts.

As of now, the evidence seems conclusive that Scott has more votes; that Lennon is increasing his voting strength; but, that unless some spark and zip can be put into his campaign he cannot overtake the leader by primary day. As noted here some days ago, the Scott strategy is to shoot the works for clear nomination on May 29; the Lennon strategy is to shoot for the nomination or a run-off, with a feeling of assurance that a second primary will result in victory.

Benson Has A New Selling Job

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON—Secretary Ezra Taft Benson, whose home and foreign activities as a Mormon Elder did not prevent him from becoming a successful farm and marketing specialist, has turned himself into a world salesman in order to chip away at Uncle Sam's huge agricultural surpluses. It is an entirely new approach to this vexing problem.

In recent appearances before Congressional Committees, Benson revealed his exasperation and desperation over the surplus burden, which grows heavier, more costly and more unwieldy every hour. Together with the Administration's legislative proposals and his new overseas sales plan, he believes that he can reduce the accumulation of commodities by 50 or 75 per cent.

The result would be lower consumer prices, reduced taxes and a steady, though slightly smaller, return to the farmer. It would restore our farm plant to a normal peacetime basis in the same way that President Eisenhower seeks to do with other segments of the Government and the national economy.

PAINFUL, BUT REALISTIC—The Eisenhower-Benson approach, now completely unveiled, is admittedly painful but realistic. But they feel that they must face realities in an attempt to terminate an artificial system and place American agriculture on a self-sufficient and self-sustaining basis. It cannot live forever on subsidies financed by high taxes and peak retail prices.

The Government now owns about $6.5 billion of farm goods through loans or outright purchases. The figure will hit $10 billion in another year at the current rate of acquisitions. In fear of reduction of price supports from 90 to 75 per cent, farmers have doubled and quadrupled their unloadings on Uncle Sam within the past year.

And yet, despite, or because of the surplus-producing parity temptations, the American people pay record peacetime prices for bread and butter, milk and cheese, steaks and hams, fruits and vegetables. Farmers both, Ike and Ezra mean to try to clean up this situation, and here are the main provisions of their planning:

THE PLAN—(1) They would immobilize from $2 billion to $3 billion of the most recently stored surpluses as a permanent stock pile, like our war reserves of tin, rubber and manganese. They would be removed from the market, and frozen for use in event of hostilities, national disasters or other emergencies.

(2) Lower price supports, they believe, would reduce retail prices and thus stimulate customer demand. Experts estimate that only a slightly larger consumption of bread, butter, milk, cheese, tobacco, rice, soybeans, etc., would skim off and prevent huge pileups. The same consideration would apply to wool and cotton. This is the key, the controversial, the politically unpopular part of the program.

(3) The newest phase is Benson's world-selling scheme. It is not to be confused with Washington's efforts to dispose of farm stuff to Russia, her satellites or other countries. Although the disposables belong to Uncle Sam, they would be handled on a regular, commercial basis.

SELLING FORCE NEEDED—It means starting at scratch. We have not had to push foreign sales for 15 years during the war and reconstruction period. We lack a selling force, modern techniques, a knowledge of foreign needs, tastes and eccentricities in food —in short, a smart, go-getting organization, like any private corporation's. Benson is building such a force slowly, because he insists on recognized experts, not politicians or their pals or internationally minded pinkos.

Although in partial operation only a few months, they have sold millions of pounds of tobacco to Spain, France and Korea; wheat, corn and barley to Spain, Mexico, Brazil and Korea. The National Millers' Federation is sharing the cost of sending grain specialists to Asia and the Middle East. Benson expects other national trade organizations to co-operate in the same way.

Cotton has been shipped to such textile-scarce countries as France, Italy, India and Japan, displacing the Egyptian product. Fresh and canned fruits are going well in lands which never heard of or tasted the citrus delights of Florida, Texas and California.

Benson anticipates annual foreign sales of at least $1 billion. With the stock-piling plan, and even if Congress fails to lower price supports, this experiment could cut the current surplus from $6.5 billion to $3 billion or less.

Worth Noting

FIRED? NOW YOU MAY FIND YOUR LIFE'S REAL JOB

There used to be a president of a national corporation who had such a knack in firing people that his victims would often leave his office and say to fellow workers, "Good-bye, bums. I am going places."

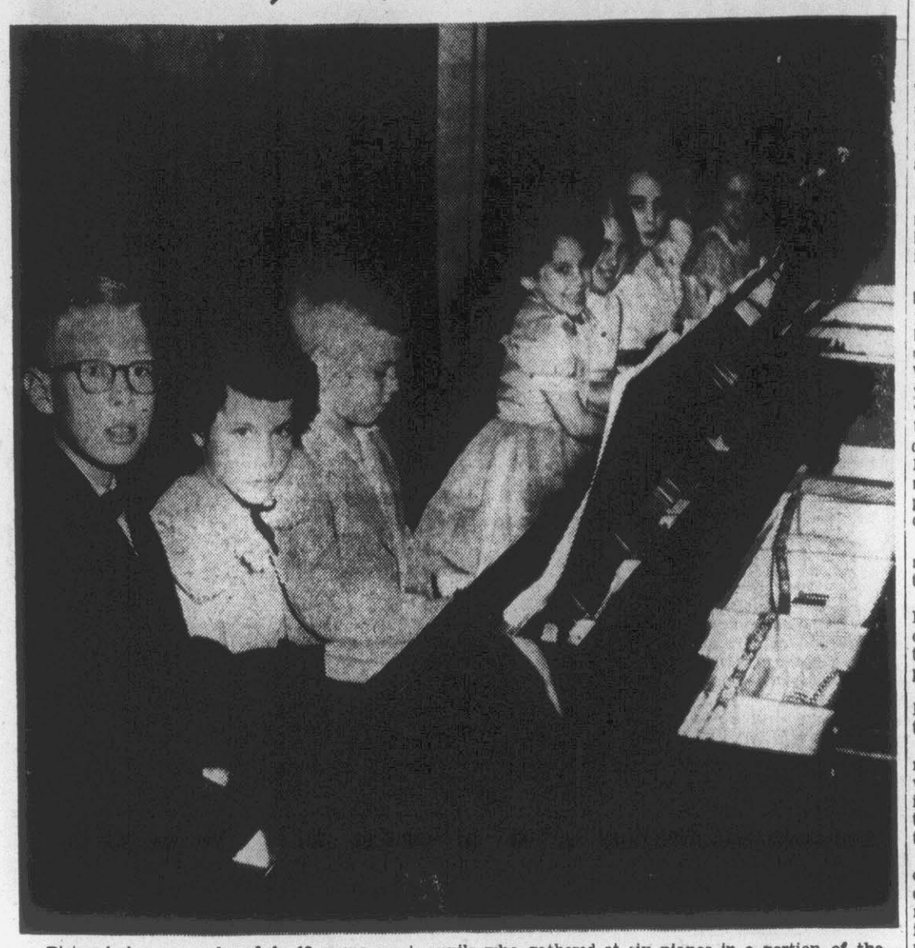
Music Club Holds Final Meet Of Season, New Officers Named



Pictured above are nine of the 18 young music pupils who gathered at six pianos in a portion of the young artists recital in Austin auditorium last night. The program was presented by the Greenville Music Club and included pupils of various music teachers in Greenville. (Reflector photo by Alvin Taylor)

The Greenville Music Club held its final meeting of this season on Tuesday evening in Austin Auditorium. During the short business meeting, Mr. Dan Vornholt was elected first vice president and Mr. Edmund Durham second vice president. The president, Mrs. Kenneth Cuthbert, announced that the executive board at a meeting on Friday night decided to change the meeting night of the Music Club to the fourth Monday of each month. This date will be in effect in September.

Following the business meeting, Mrs. Howard Bodkin, program chairman, presented the younger artists of Greenville in a delightful and varied program which consisted of several piano solos, piano ensembles, vocal solos, a vocal trio, and a clarinet quartet. The gifted artists were enthusiastically received by the large audience which attended the performance. The students exhibited poise and ability well beyond their years.

This program led to the announcement by Mrs. Bruce Trible that the Senior Music Club was going to sponsor a Junior Division of the North Carolina Federation of Music Clubs for all interested music students of grammar school and high school age. Membership in this club will enable all Greenville music students to compete in the annual Festival which is held on the East Carolina College campus in the spring, and to compete for scholarships and various awards in performance and composition. In addition to the state scholarships and awards, several national awards are available for these young striving North Carolina musicians. These prizes include the Stillman-Kelly scholarship which this year goes to the Southeastern Region. Young composers throughout the nation will compete for two scholarships, one offered by John W. Haussermann Jr. for $500 and the other by Charles Ives for $600.

The purpose of the Junior Division is to bring together young musicians for regular group study, for performance before others, and social enjoyment; to cultivate courteous and appreciative audiences; to cultivate interest in creative music; to provide high standards of performance through festivals; to encourage service to others through music; and to broaden vision and the ability of members through understanding of and cooperation with State and National goals.

The Senior Division of the Music Club is very eager and happy to promote this Junior division. It was made possible through the cooperation of the private and public school music teachers of Greenville. Mrs. Bruce Trible will act as counselor of the group which will be divided into two separate units, one for grammar grade school children and the other for high school age. Mrs. Paul Toll will lead the grammar group and Miss Eva Hodges will lead the high school group.

All who auditioned to play on Tuesday night's program are eligible for membership in the club. All interested music students who have not auditioned will have the opportunity to audition for entrance on May 18 from 2:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. at the Training School auditorium.

The club wishes to thank Mr. Howard Bodkin for the pianos used in the piano ensembles, Mrs. J. D. Messick and Mrs. M. L. Wright for the stage decorations.

The guests were invited to the newly redecorated Alumni House immediately after the program. They were greeted there by Mr. and Mrs. James Butler amidst most attractive surroundings. Punch and cookies were served to the large number of guests from a beautifully appointed table by Mrs. Ed Parkinson and Mrs. Roy Cox. Mrs. John Karsnak was chairman of the hostess committee, and she was assisted by Mrs. J. D. McGlohon.

Lost, Couldn't Speak Language

DETROIT A(P)—Seventy-three-year-old Mrs. Eva Bundardiene wandered Detroit's streets for 30 hours without food or water after she became lost. The Lithuanian grandmother, who speaks no English, started by going to an early mass at a church seven blocks from her home. Losing her way, she walked all day and night before boarding a bus.

All she could say to the driver was, "Lithunian." The driver found a passenger who spoke the language. Police took Mrs. Bundardiene home.

It was just like the eight years she wandered around Germany, homeless and destitute after she lost her husband and home in a bombing, she said.

Extra Provision With Probation

MUSKEGON Mich. (AP)—A 25-year-old foundry worker was placed on four years probation on a felonious assault charge. When he was brought before Circuit Judge Henry L. Beers to sign the probation stipulation, he said:

"I can't judge. I always wanted to learn to read and write but I never had the chance."

The judge ordered the papers redrafted to include a proviso that he learn to read and write, and assigned a probation officer to help him.

"Thank you, judge," he said.

New Prosecutor Ready To Tackle Subversives

By FRANCES LEWINE

NEWARK, N. J. (AP)—William F. Tompkins, a man with the lean and hawklike look of a Sherlock Holmes, is ready to "hit hard" as the nation's new prosecutor of spies and subversives.

He thinks the government should "expedite" action against Communists and subversives on the old legal theory that "Justice delayed is justice denied."

Tompkins, 41, a hard-working, hard-smoking Newark lawyer, jumped into the New Jersey political scene fresh from law school and a stint in the Army during World War II. He served three years as a state assemblyman and was rounding out his first year as U. S. attorney for the New Jersey district, when he was named May 10 to head the new Internal Security Division of the Justice Department. He will hold the rank of assistant U. S. attorney general.

He made it clear today that the new job doesn't involve any investigating on his part.

The FBI will do that while the Internal Security Division gets the cases before grand juries and into the courts for prosecution, he explained.

Tompkins' nomination by the President must be approved by the U. S. Senate.

He said he suspects his appointment came as a result of the good work of his office here in cracking down on gangsters and racketeers and "some successful income tax evasion" cases.

"And what a time for it to come," he said, "right in the middle of the Zwillman thing." He referred to an income tax case involving prohibition era rumrunner Abner (Longie) Zwillman of Newark, which his office now is presenting to a federal grand jury. Zwillman was linked with big-time rackets during the Senate Crime Investigating Committee hearings in 1951.

Tompkins, a Republican said he wants to clear up the Zwillman matter before he goes to Washington, which he expects will be about June 1.

Leaning back in a swivel chair with his feet propped up on a desk in his impressive Federal Building office here, he viewed the assignment as "a really great challenge." It will involve "analysis of cases, evaluating information and making policy decisions," he said.

"I'll give it everything I have."

Tompkins, known as "Tommy" to his friends, has an engaging sort of dimple in his cheek when he laughs, which he does often. He has dark, wavy hair receding a bit at the temples, and bushy eyebrows. He took a look at his driver's license to confirm that his eyes are blue.

A descendent of one of the men who helped found Newark, he lives in an old farmhouse in suburban Maplewood with his wife Jane and 10-year-old son William Jr.

As U. S. attorney, he says he worked 10 to 12 hours a day, many nights and weekends but "I was so interested in the work in this office that I honestly haven't considered it work."

He gives much of the credit for his success in handling important federal cases to his hand-picked staff of "young men on their way up."

During his term in the State Assembly, Tompkins sponsored legislation to bolster New Jersey's war on narcotics peddlers and users. He also sponsored court integration bills, a law to put the appointment of jury commissioners into the hands of the Supreme Court rather than the governor and co-sponsored a bill creating a waterfront commission to look into widespread racketeering on the New Jersey docks.

In addition to his legal duties as U. S. attorney, he was the guiding force behind an "educational program" to wipe out rackets and gambling in New Jersey's network of big industrial plants.

Pondering the question of how he spends his leisure time, he said he had to admit he spent all his free time with his family. Like any other father, he gets his exercise romping with young Bill, he said. A carry-over from his college days, he still plays sandlot baseball.

Many Scouters Attend Session

Some 81 scout leaders attended the second session of the Pitt District Training courses which was held in Greenville last night, according to Russ Peterson, leadership training chairman.

Peterson noted that this was a particularly large group and he said that 54 attend the first session last week. A total of six sessions are to be held, Peterson said.

Ercel Webb, Pitt District chairman, said he was very well pleased with the turn out. He pointed out the importance of training and said that only through a sound training program could a good quality program be obtained for the boys.

Peterson noted that every possible effort is being made to get those few persons who are not attending the meetings to come to future meetings.

The cub scout group last night discussed program planning. The boy scout group talked on patrol and troop organization and leadership stressing the importance of the patrol methods. The explorer group discussed explorer leadership.

TEEN TALK

Dear Judy

AP Newsfeatures

There has been a lot of talk about gourmet soda fountains. Students are no longer satisfied with "hot fudge," "banana split," "black-and-white soda" and a "double malt." Pretty tame fare for the rugged. They order "atomic punch" (seven delicious flavors and three icecreams), "whirlpool whizzes" (five fruits crushed in a blender with soda and cream) and a number of other death-defying gastronomic delights.

At Stillwater, Oklahoma, the exotic in soda fountain fair is commonplace. It all began at the Oklahoma A & M Student Union fountain. Now the kids are likely to revolutionize the nation's soda fountain fare, according to reporter Bill Harmon. Says he:

Wild Combinations

"Vie Shiever and Eve Richardson, who manage the student soft drinks bar, can even keep their aplomb at such orders as bean soup milkshakes and peanut butter malteds.

Only once have they refused a customer's order.

The unorthodox Aggies are a hardy crew, and apparently even enjoy the gastronomic nightmares. They eat them with a sigh of delight and keep coming back for more, says Mrs. Richardson. There are no visible ill effects.

The soda jerks think nothing of whipping up a lime sherbert milkshake, or an egg cream. They throw together peanut butter and mustard and grilled tuna without batting an eye, and other combinations that the Earl of Sandwich never dreamed of when he first wrapped a couple of slices of bread around a chunk of meat.

The bean soup milkshake and peanut butter malted seem to be catching on the most. In case anybody's interested in the recipe, you use milk, vanilla ice cream and a scoop of canned bean soup or peanut butter, as the case may be. Stir at your own risk.

Taste? You Guess!

"I really couldn't say how they taste," says Mrs. Richardson. "The smell of onions in the soup when it's mixed with ice cream is too much for me. The kids who drink those things must be trying to prove something."

The egg cream calls for a shot of cream, vanilla flavor and carbonated water. No egg. And don't ask where the name came from.

What about the fellow who didn't get what he ordered?

He asked for macaroni soup. The customer, a foreign exchange student, really meant chicken noodle.

Gary Burned In Filming Scene

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Gary Cooper has braved the terrors of movieland bad men for several decades, but today he nursed painful powder burns from a blank charge fired close to him during a filming near here.

The musket charge singed Cooper yesterday as some 500 extras rushed a fortress during the filming of "Vera Cruz." The lanky star was taken to the French Hospital to have the unburned powder grains picked out of his shoulder and to receive tetanus shots.

CAP Squadron Activated Here

Five Civil Air Patrol officers from Group III Headquarters of the North Carolina CAP Wing were on hand last night at the formal activation of the local CAP Squadron.

Major Dan T. Lilley, Group III Commanding Officer, was here for the activation of the local unit at their regular weekly meeting last night. With him from Group Headquarters in Kinston was 1st Lt. Harold Hardy, operations officer; 1st Lt. John A. King, communications officers; 1st Lt. C. W. Massey, personnel officer; and 1st Lt. John M. Feik, engineering officer.

The meeting was held at the Civil Air Patrol Squadron Headquarters Building at the local Pitt-Greenville Airport. Approximately 25 local CAP members were present for the ceremony.

1st Lt. Ray Mood, local unit commanding officer, is giving a "commander's party," for the local members and their guests next Tuesday night following the regular weekly meeting.

Extend Season On Shad, Herring

The Wildlife Resources Commission of North Carolina has extended the time for taking shad and herring in nets in District 2 (this includes this part of the state) until June 1.

The season usually ends May 15, Game and Fish Protector J. O. Teel stated.

The regulations provide that shad and herring may be taken with gill nets or skim nets and dip nets. Gill nets shall have a bar of not less than one and one-half inches; skim nets and dip nets shall have a bar of not less than one and one-fourth inches. All such nets must be licensed as provided by state law. Striped bass (rockfish) taken incidental to shad and herring fishing may be retained by any one person up to one day's creel limit, striped bass (rockfish) so taken may not be sold or possessed for sale.

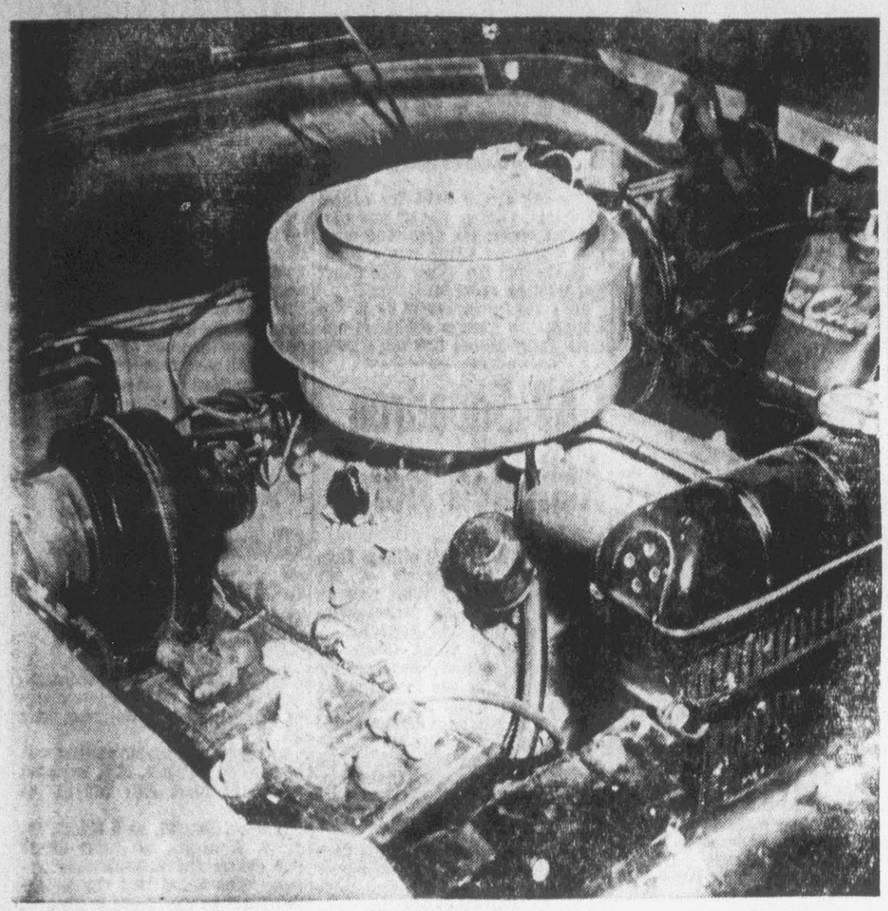
'Interceptor' For Highway Patrol



Above is an under-the-hood view of the new interceptor patrol car which was recently issued to Patrolman D. E. Perry who is assigned to the Bethel area. The car is equipped with a 160-horsepower eight cylinder engine. In addition the cars come equipped with overdrive and a four-barreled carburetor.

Patrolman Delton E. Perry stands beside one of the new interceptor patrol cars which are now being issued to Highway Patrolmen. The above car is the first such vehicle assigned to Pitt County. The interceptors are capable of speeds up to 120 miles per hour. However, Perry says, they are designed primarily for quick pick-up. (Reflector photos by Alvin Taylor)

Boy Unemotionally Admits Fatally Beating Young Girl

DETROIT (AP) — An unemotional high school student told police today he fatally beat and slashed a 14-year-old girl, but didn't know why he did it.

Marion Jo Zobrovitz was found yesterday by three playmates in a garage behind her home, her body torn and bleeding. She died in a hospital after doctors fought 4½ hours to save her.

Police Lt. Edward Jocques said 15-year-old Terrence De Moss told him he had struck the girl with a 2-by-4 beam, then slashed her.

Jocques said the boy gave no reason for the attack.

De Moss is a juvenile under Michigan law and cannot be charged with a major crime in Criminal Court unless Probate Court waives its jurisdiction.

Mrs. Doris De Moss, his mother, told police that she knew her son was the murderer, but police arrived before she could call them.

In a formal statement to police, she said that Terry was fascinated by a newspaper account of the crime. She said that he left for school yesterday morning and came home about 2:50 p.m.

She told police that he went to the bathroom and then to the kitchen, where he tried to clean brown spots off his grey flannel trousers. He told her that a girl had spilled something at school and he had gotten splashed.

Later, she told police, he went to a show with her and his brother.

When they got back home, she said, Terry grabbed their newspaper and began to read the story of the attack.

Mrs. De Moss said he told her he had been at school, but she threatened to call his teacher.

It was then, Mrs. De Moss told police, that he broke down and said:

"I don't know why I did it."

Meanwhile, police, acting on a tip from a policeman neighbor, had already headed for the home.

Police said Terry had been treated three times at the Wayne County Child Study Clinic and had been arrested once for breaking and entering.

His mother told police he had suffered pneumonia when he was 5 and the result was abnormal height and weight. She said the pneumonia had led to what she described as "brain fever."

Marion Jo was one of four children of Morris and Julie Zobrovitz.

Zobrovitz, a truck driver, hurried home at the telephone message from his wife: "Come on home—Marion's been hurt." He called his daughter "Cookie."

"We moved to this address in January," he said, "because the house we were living in had rats. With Cookie and the new baby coming on, we were afraid to stay —my God, I wish we had."

Grimesland Pupils Stage An International Luncheon

A seventh grade curriculum includes "American History" and "The United States in the Western World", and Grimesland School's Seventh Grade has completed these studies along with their other subjects.

In science and health the students have completed units on food and digestion; in language they have studied letter writing, punctuation and parts of speech. Also there have been many lessons in "Human Relations."

Bringing of these subjects together it was decided to bring together one important unit of work which was entitled "Our Western World Unit." Through this unit the Seventh Grade has learned that all the nations and all facts of life are closely related.

As a climax of the unit the students planned an activity which was called "International Relations Luncheon." All parents and a few special friends were invited. For the program the guests were taken on an imaginary trip through the Western Hemisphere. Each part tied in closely with the one before and after it, so the guests were asked to follow each thought carefully; therefore, when the southern tip of South America was reached the group was still together.

The trip started at the top of the map of the Americas and traveled south, stopping off along the way to see the different and interested things about the way Americans live.

The introduction to the program was given by Janice Tripp. There were 21 speakers which included James Edwards, Patricia Edwards, Janice Hudson, Mary Nanney, Linda Haddock, Jean Marsh, Lois Hardee, Myrtle Baker, Mavis Padgett, Bobby Beddard, Ray Ange, Barbara Mills, Dennis Elks, Hugh Tucker, Barbara Buck, Ronald Hollowell, Margaret May, Margie Haddock, Peggy Arnold, and the concluding remarks were made by Billy Buck.

The program began by the singing of "America" and then the pledge to the flag. Next the group sang "The Star Spangled Banner. Further in the program the group sang "Down in Mexico," "Time for Dancing" and "Fiesta."

There were 17 guests at the program, which included 13 parents.

The Seventh Grade at Grimesland feels that this experience meant much to each pupil. The purpose of the unit and the luncheon was to show how the close relationship between countries of the Western World, and also the close relationship and great importance of each activity of school life.

The students also have learned that the unity of the Western World countries has developed a strong power that nothing can destroy. According to one student, "We realize also that we, as Americans, and future citizens of Grimesland are a part of that unity, because we help make up the greatest of all countries, 'The United States of America.' No Politics, And They Get Along

SALISBURY, Md. (AP)—L. Thomas Parker Sr., an enthusiastic Democrat, completed his 61st year of employment today for a firm bossed by Fred P. Adkins, an equally enthusiastic Republican.

Unhurt In Wild Auto Accident

MILFORD, Conn. (AP)—Police said this is what happened when Mrs. Phyllis White moved over yesterday to let her husband drive the car:

She accidentally stepped on the accelerator.

Her husband was thrown out, injuring his leg.

The car roared across the street, narrowly missing other cars, bounded up on Joseph Benedoso's lawn, smashed through his concrete-block garage, tearing a 10 by 10-foot hole in it, and tore down two doors before stopping.

Mrs. White wasn't scratched.

Peonage Trial Is Again Resumed

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Trial of three white brothers on charges of holding Negro farm hands in slavery resumed today after similar peonage indictments of three others were dismissed by a federal court.

Those against whom the charges still are pending are Oscar Edwin Dial, 34; Fred N. Dia, 25; and Grady Dial, 28, brothers who operate a large farm west of Livingston, Ala., near the Mississippi line.

U. S. Dist. Judge Seybourn H. Lynne dismissed cases against Robert Dial 44, brother of the other three; and two cousins, Arthur Arnold Dial, 27, and Lindsay Winyard Dial, 43.

The court took the action on recommendation of U. S. Dist. Atty. Frank Johnson Jr., who said he felt the evidence insufficient to convict the three.

All were indicted by a federal grand jury last fall on charges of paying fines of Negro prisoners in nearby jails in Alabama and Mississippi holding the Negroes in servitude on their farms and beating them if they attempted to escape.

The 1952 Democratic presidential nominee's physicial, however, said his "health is excellent and his recovery ahead of schedule."

Stevenson is expected to remain in the hospital two or three days. He is due to make a speech May 28 at Meridian, Miss

Yesterday he visited campaign headquarters of Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D-Ill) and told Douglas' supporters, "I've enlisted to serve in any way I possibly can to assure the return of Sen. Douglas to Washington."

McCarthy-Army Feud Faces Fight To Finish

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—Ugly.

It's probably the best word to describe what to expect now in the Senate hearing on Sen. McCarthy's row with Pentagon officials. Secretary of the Army Stevens by a cold decision has made this a finish fight.

McCarthy has tried to minimize the importance of the hearing, calling it a burlesque and a circus. Now that it's due to go on to the bitter end his political life may be at stake.

Stevens was willing to put his public career on the block. He refused to agree to shorten the hearing by letting the whole business disappear from public view once McCarthy had testified.

If he had agreed, witnesses who testified after McCarthy would have done so behind closed doors, with the public, the press and television cameras excluded although a transcript of what they said would have been given out.

Stevens on the receiving end of McCarthy's questions for most of his 14 days on the stand, chose to let the hearings run their full course out in the open.

He took the position that not only McCarthy but the senators' two aides in the case, Roy M. Cohn and Francis P Carr, should have to face the same kind of cross-examination he did.

This meant, of course, the same treatment for the other two principals on his side of the case, Army Counselor John G. Adams and H. Struve Hensel, assistant secretary of defense.

So far the cards have all been in McCarthy's hands. It's Stevens who had to answer questions from the seven senators making the investigation, Ray H. Jenkins, their special counsel, and from McCarthy and Cohn.

McCarthy, simply because Stevens was the witness, nailed him to the chair day after day with questions. Yet, more and more as the days passed, McCarthy has been acting like a man who thought he was surrounded by enemies.

He accused two of the senators—Democrats Symington of Missouri and Jackson of Washington—of trying to obstruct his hunt for communists.

He turned on a fellow Republican on the committee a man he himself had nominated to be there, Sen. Dworshak of Idaho, and told him he was sorry he had chosen him.

him.

He repeatedly insinuated Stevens was lying and belittled the secretary's intelligence. Twice he accused Joseph N. Welch, counsel to Stevens and Adams, of breaking agreements which Welch said never existed

And he tried to humiliate Hensel, who hadn't said a word by suggesting that Army officers sitting near him were lending him a dignity he didn't deserve and should move away.

His tactics have become rougher as the days pass. If he has reached this point while the cards were still all in his hands, what's his mood going to be when he and Cohn and Carr have to stand up, maybe for weeks, under Army cross-examination?

Did Stevens himself make the decision to go on with the hearings? His boss, Secretary of Defense Wilson, said late yesterday Stevens did. It is not known whether Stevens had President Eisenhower's okay or asked for it.

One thing the administration can be sure of: so long as McCarthy is forced to spend all his time at the hearing, he won't have time to bang away at the administration from other directions, as he did in the past.

Yet Stevens had to consider, before rejecting them some good reasons for bringing the televised hearings to a halt:

He and his aides could have gone back to their appointed tasks in the Army. McCarthy and the other seven senators could have gone on to other work.

And the Republican party, which faces the congressional elections in the fall, might have been benefited by a quick end to the inquiry. This prolonged spectacle of a strictly Republican family fight can hardly be helping the party.

Candidates For Senate Talk U.S. Foreign Trade Policies

RALEIGH (AP) — Three speeches were on the campaign schedule today of U. S. Sen. Alton Lennon, while his major opponent, former Gov. W. Kerr Scott, campaigned in Guilford County.

Lennon was scheduled to address the convention of the North Carolina Independent Oil Dealers Assn. in Winston-Salem. He also planned to participate in a luncheon and a parade celebrating Armed Forces Day at Winston-Salem. He was slated to speak briefly at the luncheon.

Tonight at 8:30 Lennon will deliver a talk at North Carolina State College under the auspices of the college's Union Forum Committee and the State College Young Democrat Club.

Lennon and his wife spent yesterday in Henderson and other Vance County communities. He will be in Durham tomorrow for a handshaking tour.

Scott toured Nash and Edgecombe counties yesterday.

Lennon, Scott and four other Senate candidates participated in a discussion last night at the convention of the North Carolina League of Women Voters. Other candidates included Democrats Alvin Wingfield Jr., W. M. Bostick and A. E. Turner and Republican Paul C. West.

Each candidate spoke briefly on "What Trade and Tariff Policies Do You Favor for Increasing Unity Within the Free World?" Then the audience posed questions at the candidates.

Scott told the audience he favored immediate extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act "for at least three and preferably for five years."

He charged that Republican failure to act immediately in extending the act is a threat to unity in the free world. The reciprocal act provides for a system of reducing tariffs on various items of world commerce through agreements between this nation and other countries.

Lennon also lauded the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, asserting it is needed more now than ever before. The economy of North Carolina and the nation depends on foreign trade, he said.

Wingfield told the group that protective tariffs are "utter nonsense." He said he was a free-trader, adding that goods should be produced where they can be made cheapest and exchanged without government restriction.

In answer to other questions, Wingfield reiterated that the government should turn highways and schools over to private enterprise. Declaring the United Sates should never have joined the United Nations, Wingfield said "it was a trap and sprung on us."

Scott and Lennon strongly endorsed basic farm prices at 90 per cent of parity. Bostic and Turner also said they were in support of 90 per cent of parity. Wingfield asserted this was "national socialism" and "exactly the same thing was practiced in Germany by Adolf Hitler."

Scott was asked what he thought of the George amendment to limit the treaty-making power of presidents. He said the state and nation had been getting along pretty well with the Constitution as it is.

Scott told Mrs. M. W. Peterson of Charlotte, the League's moderator, that he would comment further on the George amendment if she would explain it.

Mrs. Peterson suggested that Sen. Lennon could explain it. Lennon did. He said it would give Congress the right to approve or reject an international agreement by the president which conflicted with the Constitution or law of a state.

West told the audience the tariff is an economic question. He added that American industry and labor should be protected from cheap foreign competition. He said he saw no way a change in trade policy could promote world unity.

Meanwhile, Scott issued a statement yesterday assailing efforts to reduce federal appropriations for "veterans service and benefits."

The administration, he said, is seeking to reduce the appropriations "down to only two-thirds the sum appropriated only four years ago." He said this "is a false economy move designed to make forgotten people out of our more than 20 million veterans, who, together with their families, make up 40 per cent of our entire population. These benefits are not handouts. They are part of the obligation promised these men by a grateful government."

Yvonne DeCarlo Is 'The Silent Type'

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Two glamor girls met on an airplane flying from Europe to America. One was Shelley Winters, the other Yvonne DeCarlo.

"I'm going to divorce Vittorio (Gassman)," Shelley said sadly.

"Oh, are you?" said Yvonne.

"Yes, and I've decided I'm not going to talk about it."

"Now you're using your head for the first time."

For Shelley to be silent on any topic is unusual in the extreme. But to Yvonne, it would be the most natural thing in the world. She is in demand as a film actress on two continents, and part of her success can be attributed to the fact that she refuses to tell all.

She is unique in an era when stars reveal everything, from their breakfast menus to their bedtime habits. She harks back to the time when the film famous had an aura of mystery, a la Garbo.

"I don't believe in telling everything about my life," says Yvonne. "I keep my personal matters to myself and let people guess what kind of life I lead."

The only time she broke this edict was when she made a picture with Carlos Thompson, the Argentine lover. Since she had some money in the film, she allowed a romance to be blown up between her and Carlos. But she confesses that the publicity got out of hand.

As for other and more authentic romances, it's anybody's guess. She has boy friends from here to Persia and does nothing to encourage or discourage reports of her love matches.

"The French have a lot of fun with it," she laughed. "They call me 'La Derniere des Femmes Fatales.' That means I am the last of the movie vamps along the lines of Theda Bara. When I was at the Cannes Film Festival, I had come down to the Riviera from Switzerland with some French friends. I didn't want them to be bothered, so I wouldn't tell people where I was staying. The French papers came out with the news that Yvonne DeCarlo was hiding out with her lover in a chateau!"

I saw Yvonne on her old home lot Universal-International, where she rose to fame as queen of the sagebrush and Scheherezade epics. Oddly enough, she was working in an RKO picture, "Where the Wind Dies," which was borrowing U-I's massive back lot for outdoor scenes.

She reported she had just returned from Paris, where she had made a film in French. She said she had liked the picture but hated the producer and told him so. Her return from France was her 16th crossing of the Atlantic.

KINSTON—Kinston's Red Devils spoiled the show last night as far as the Greenville Phantoms are concerned for the 1954 baseball season. The Red Devils roared from four runs behind to down the Green Phantoms 10-7 in Kinston last night.

The defeat knocked the Greenies out of any possibility of finishing first in the conference play. Kinston now has a 10-2 record with the Greenies now in third place with a 6-4 record. Roanoke Rapids is second with 7-3.

The Phantoms started off like they were going to make the Kinston team run for the showers, but fine relief hurling by Fred Rouse completely cooled off the red-hot hitters from Greenville and sparked his own teammates at the plate.

Fast Start

The G-men jumped off to a one run lead in the first inning on a pair of singles by Bobby Conway and Gene Hudson and a double off the first base bag by Dixie Hobgood.

In the second, Billy Bost doubled and scored on Bob Howell's single. In the third inning Gene Hudson reached first by an error on the Kinston second baseman. After one out Hobgood lined a single into right to drive Hudson around to third. Bobby Nunn lifted a long fly into deep centerfield to send Hudson in to score and Hobgood to second. Harold Edwards then slashed a solid single into left to score Hobgood. After that inning the G-men could score in only one more inning. They bounced three runs in the sixth but that was not enough to catch up with the hard-hitting Red Devils.

Kinston Rallies

Kinston's main damage came in the bottom of the fourth inning when they exploded for six runs off Dave Dickinson, the starting Greenville hurler. Four hits, a walk, a wild pitch, and two errors gave Kinston their six runs.

In the fifth the Red Devils jumped on Dickinson for two more runs before Coach Bo Farley took out his star righthander for lefty Bill Hendrix. Hendrix shut the door in the face of the Red Devils until the eighth when they touched him for two more runs, but they did not make any difference then. In the 3 1-3 innings Hendrix pitched he fanned five batters.

Conway Leads Hitting

Third baseman Bobby Conway led the hitting for the day for the G-men with three hits in five times to the plate. Conway drove in two runs. Centerfielder Harold Edwards slapped out two hits in four times up, while rightfielder Dixie Hobgood had two for two before being replaced in favor of the righthanded Doug Morgan when Kinston changed to a portsider. Shortstop Bob Howell smashed out two hits in five times up for the Green Phantoms.

The next and final Greenville game of the season will be this afternoon in Washington. The game will start at 3:45 in Kugler Field in Washington.

32 Survivors In CGA Playoff

B.Y KEN ALYTA

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Having battled par in yesterday's qualifying round, 32 survivors of an original field of 56 turned to man-to-man combat today as they opened championship match play in the 4th amateur tournament of the Carolinas Golf Assn.

One round today and two tomorrow will cut the field to semi final size for Friday The 36-hole finals will be played Saturday at the Myers Park Club course.

Wiley Fleenor, veteran Winston-Salem insurance man, who last year failed to qualify for the championship flight, was the surprise medalist with a five-under-par 34-33—67. He was one of six par breakers. Six others matched regulation figures for the 6,493-yard course.

Fleenor opened with a double bogie six but never went over par again. By the time he reached the turn he had bagged an eagle and two pars. Coming home he fired three birds and six pars.

Today he headed the lower bracket against Ed Gravely of Rocky Mount, who had an unusual 74 yesterday—37 putts.

Heading the upper bracket was defending champion Richard Chapman of Pinehurst, who drew Max Brittain, one of 16 Charlotte golfers in the top 32. Brittain shot 73 yesterday, Chapman posted a 71 in a practice round as he passed up medal competition.

Runnerup in the qualifying round with a fine 69 was John McCann Jr. Charlotte, who today met E.T. Hughes, Columbia S.C., in the upper bracket

The lower bracket listed former Walker Cupper Bobby Knowles of Aiken, S. C., who met Bill Belton of Cherryville, who got in with 76, the qualifying limit.

Miracle Miler Arrives In U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — Miracle miler Roger Bannister came to New York today for a series of television and radio appearances but ran into an immediate threat to his amateur status.

There were indications he may not be able to make any of his scheduled appearances.

Pirates Play

East Carolina College will close its 1954 baseball season here today against Atlantic Christian College.

The meeting will be the fourth of the year between the clubs and will offer the Pirates an opportunity to square the series. The Bulldogs have won two of the games and have possession of the Bohunk Bucket, the wooden water pail that is the symbol of athletic supremacy between the two schools.

No indication has been given as to who will pitch for the Pirates since almost all of the pitchers on the squad worked last weekend in losing a doubleheader against Elon. Righthander Ken Hall seems to be the most logical choice but any member of the pitching staff could get the nod.

Coach Jack McComas of the Bulldogs is expected to start his ace righthander, Jose Dominquez. Dominquez defeated the Pirates in the last meeting of the teams.

No Worries

NEW YORK (AP) — Four clubs in each league won't have to worry about paring players off their rosters tonight when the majors must trim their squads down to the 25 players limit, plus returned servicemen.

The New York Giants, Milwaukee Braves, Cincinnati Redlegs and Chicago Cubs in the National League and the Washington Senators, Philadelphia A's Chicago White Sox and Boston Red Sox in the American League all are within the player limit.

The Red Sox actually are carrying the most players — 28 — and will be able to carry 30 because pitchers Tom Brewer, Frank Sullivan and Leo Kiely along with outfielders Ted Williams and Karl Olson are on the returned servicemen's list.

When a player is released from the service, his club may carry him for a year without being forced to count him as one of the 25 players permitted during the main part of the season.

The two defending champions, the New York Yankees and the Brooklyn Dodgers, each have to shave their rosters. The Yanks must eliminate two players. They'll probably be outfielder Bob Cerv and pitcher Art Shallock. The Brooks must pare one. He could be outfielder Sandy Amoros or pitcher Joe Black.

Conley Throttles Dodgers In Superb Pitching Show

By BEN PHLEGAR
AP Sports Writer

If times get tough, Charlie Grimm may be able to sell his secrets on how to win in Ebbets Field.

The Brooklyn Dodger ball park, graveyard of many pennant hopes last season, proved surprisingly friendly territory to Grimm's Milwaukee Braves.

They won six of 11 games there. No other visting team won more than three. The St. Louis Cardinals didn't win any.

Now the 1954 edition of the Milwaukee wonders are trying to do the job even better.

They invaded Brooklyn last night for the first time this season and walked off with a 2-0 triumph. The pitching chores were handled superbly by Gene Conley, a king-sized rookie right-hander. In striking out seven while walking nobody, the 6-foot-8 side-arm specialist pinned the first shutout on the Dodgers since June 11 last year, when another rookie, Allan Worthington of the New York Giants, turned the trick.

The Braves won even though they lost one of the most prolonged arguments of the season A seventh-inning drive by Eddie Mathews bounced off a railing atop the center field fence and fell back in the field.

Umpire Bill Engelin ruled it a double since Mathews got only as far as second before the Dodgers tried to make a play on him. Umpire Bill Summers called it a home run and waved Mathews in. The Dodgers screamed. The four umpires huddled. The Braves screamed. But in the end Mathews was sent back to second. Despite the ruling, the drive scored Danny O'Connell from first base with Milwaukee's second run. The first came on Joe Adcock's home run.

Elsewhere in the National League the New York Giants defeated Cincinnati 5-4 and Philadelphia edged Chicago 8-7 in 10 innings. The St. Louis-Pirates game at Pittsburgh was rained out.

In the American League Joe Coleman of the Baltimore Orioles allowed his former Philadelphia teammates only two hits, both singles, as the Orioles beat the Athletics 2-0. New York defeated Cleveland 5-3, Chicago shaded Boston 2-1 and Washington beat Detroit 5-3.

The Giants beat Fred Baczewski for the first time in his career. The Cincinnati left-hander had whipped the New Yorkers five times running until Monte Irvin slammed a 400-foot triple in the eighth inning with Al Dark on first base Ted Kluszewski for Cincinnati and Whitey Lockman and Willie Mays for New York hit home runs.

After falling two runs behind in the eighth because of poor defensive play the Phils rallied to tie the Cubs in the eighth and won in the 10th as Del Ennis singled home Richie Ashburn. Ennis earlier blasted a bases-loaded double, good for three runs, and Ashburn drove in one in the eighth with a triple.

Coleman struck out four and walked only two in registering his second victory and the first shutout of his Baltimore comeback. The two hits off him were by Bill Renna and Forrest Jacobs.

A double by Yogi Berra with two on and two out drove home the runs the Yankees needed to beat Cleveland for the first time this season. The Indians had won three in a row from the world champions. Allie Reynolds pitched out of a jam in the eighth when the Indians tied the score and loaded the bases with none out only to hit into three easy force plays.

Bob Keegan won his fourth game against a single loss and scored the winning run for the White Sox against Boston. He tripled in the seventh and rode home on Nellie Fox's single. The victory was Keegan's fourth complete game.

Detroit used four innings against the Senators but Bob Porterfield slammed the door as he finished with 5 1-3 hitless innings. Porterfield homered in the ninth after Washington had scored the tie-breaking run in the eighth.

May And Massey Meet For 1954 Golf Title

Young Molt Massey and veteran Reynolds May will meet this weekend for the 1954 championship of the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

The two will play 18 hole rounds Saturday afternoon and Sunday afternoon. Starting time for both rounds will be 1:30 p.m.

Both Massey and May entered the finals with rather sensational play last weekend against a pair of the club's veteran players. Massey shot three-under-par golf on the par 72 Greenville course to defeat W. L. Allen 6 and 5 while May eliminated defending champion Simon Moye on the 36th hole of their match.

In the split 36-hole semi-final round, Massey had a 72 on Saturday afternoon in the first half of the match. Sunday, instead of weakening under the pressure he played the most superb golf of his career and some of the best that has ever been played on the local course. He climaxed his Sunday round with a sensational birdie on the 31st hole to defeat Allen, four times the club champion.

In the other semi-final round May and Moye went right down to the wire before ending their match. Both golfers played sub-par golf for the two days of the tournament and came to the final portion of their last nine holes even-up.

Moye had fought an uphill battle throughout most of the Sunday round and finally evened the match on the 31st hole. He made a sensational shot to the green and then dropped a 12-foot putt to even the match. May, however, went one-up on number 32 when Moye incurred a penalty stroke. Both golfers had pars on the 33rd and 34th holes when the real fireworks started popping.

The long 35th hole, Moye fired a two-iron shot 12 feet from the cup and sank his putt for a birdie two that evened the match back up. Both golfers then took long drives off the last tee but May got the better approach shot of the two with a 230-yard three wood shot that carried him to within 10 feet of the cup. Moye got a beautiful approach shot off, too, but his ball ended up 12 feet from the cup.

Moye took his putt first and missed to put May in position to win if he could drop his shot He did to take a birdie on the hole. The shot ended what many of the local golf followers termed the most spectacular tournament round ever played on the course.

A large gallery followed both teams in the Sunday matches. The public is invited to watch this weekend's rounds, also.

Trip To Tropics Saved Coleman

By LOUS PANOS

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jumbo Joe Coleman of the Orioles, once again a stingy guy with a run, credits a tip from Al (Chief) Bender and a trip to the tropics with salvaging him from the scrap heap for baseball pitchers.

It was Bender, Coleman said after shutting out his former Philadelphia Athletics teammates last night, who told him how to strengthen his failing right arm.

And it was while pitching winter ball in Cuba earlier this year that he developed what he now calls "my best pitch," the slider.

Back in 1951 Coleman was rounding out his 10th year in the A's organization. Three years earlier he had a 14-13 record with them and was named to the American League All-Star team.

Bender, one of the fabulous hurlers of the old Athletics, had been Coleman's first manager in the minors and, as pitching coach for the Athletics, was trying to help him become a winner again.

"He told me to go out into center field and keep trying to throw the ball over the plate from 'way out there. At first I thought he was kidding, but I tried it, anyway," said Coleman.

"And doggone if it didn't work. It strengthened my arm and improved my control."

But the improvement didn't become apparent early enough for the A's. They sent him back to the minors in 1952.

"I was ready to quit," said the 31-year-old righthander. "But Art Ehlers (then general manager of the A's and now with the Orioles) talked me into coming back last year."

Coleman said he was throwing well early that season but was knocked out of action by an appendectomy He wound up the season with a 3-4 record in nine starts and 21 appearances, and was reported on his way back down again when the Orioles got him in a trade during the off-season.

He was in Cuba, working on the slider, when he heard of the trade.

Joe faced only 29 men in his two-hit victory over the Athletics last night walked two and struck out four.

It was his second win in four starts with the Orioles, who grabbed their third straight triumph before 10,837 fans. One of Coleman's losses was a 1-0 three-hitter he dropped to Detroit's Ned Garver.

Heavyweights In Televised Bout

By HERB ALTSCHULL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tonight's nationally televised fight matches a pair of better than average heavyweights, Coley Wallace of New York and Bill Gilliam of Newark N. J.

Wallace is ranked 6th among the big boys, Gilliam is 10th

The 10-round fight will be televised (9 p.m. EST) by the Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS).

Both Wallace and Gilliam are hoping for a chance at Rocky Marciano's world title and the winner of tonight's bout figures to get into the scramble, should Marciano successfully defend his crown against Ezzard Charles.

Wallace, now 25, is the only boxer ever to defeat Marciano. He won a close decision in 1948 when both were amateurs.

Wallace's most recent claim to fame was his motion picture appearance portraying Joe Louis in the film version of the Brown Bomber's career.

Gilliam, 29, has won 26 lost 16 and drawn twice. His biggest victory was scored over Cuba's Nino Valdes, one of the leading challengers for the heavyweight title.

ROSE CHAMPIONS! THE 1955 ALL-AMERICA WINNERS

JIMINY CRICKET

TIFFANY

QUEEN ELIZABETH

Tops in roses! Rosedom's highest honor, the All-America Rose Award, goes to three brilliant newcomers which will reign as queens of the horticultural world in 1955. They are: Jiminy Cricket, a coral-orange Floribunda; Queen Elizabeth, a Grandiflora of delicate, pure pink; and Tiffany, a warm pink Hybrid Tea. These superior varieties were singled out for honors only after passing exhaustive tests carried on for two years at twenty-two special gardens located in different climatic sections of the United States. The "Oscar" winners are the best of many thousands of seedlings developed here and abroad.

Hybrid Teas are the most important single group of roses, and since their introduction in France in the 1860's, have been the principal element in all rose gardens. Floribundas were first introduced around 1935 and have become exceptionally popular. Their showy flower clusters and vigorous growth created new uses for roses as landscape elements. Tiffany and Jiminy Cricket represent the best progress made in these classes to date.

Queen Elizabeth is the first Grandiflora to win the award since the new class was created only this year. Grandifloras combine several essential characteristics of both Hybrid Teas and Floribundas. They are tall, free flowering, and produce clustered blooms on long stems. Flower size falls between the Floribunda and the Hybrid Tea; flower and bud form are similar to the Hybrid Tea class.

These masterpieces of the flower world are a long time in the creation. Development of a winner demands from six to eight years of work by expert hybridizers and researchers. Holders of the A.A.R.S. award can be grown with outstanding success in all parts of the country.

French Newspaperwoman Covers War By Parachute; Heroine To Visit U.S.

By JOHN RODERICK

SAIGON (AP)—At 30, petite, brown-haired Elizabeth (Brigitte) Friang has lived many lives.

When she was 20 she won the French Legion of Honor, the country's top decoration, for heroic work as an underground resistance leader.

Today she is a newspaperwoman who disdains ordinary means of covering a war. She doesn't ride, walk or sail into battle. She jumps in.

She has been one of the best known women in Indochina, but few of the thousands of French Union and Vietnamese troops at Dien Bien Phu and elsewhere knew her real name. To them she was simply "Madame Parachute."

In May 1952 she realized a girlhood dream. She made her first parachute jump. It was to cover a paratrooper operation at Xuyen Moc, on the border of Annam and Cambodia. Since then, pencil and pad in her hip pocket, she has jumped 10 times. Six of them were during military operations, including Dien Bien Phu.

Now she's about to realize another childhood dream. She's off to visit the United States where she is due in San Francisco late this week.

Americans who meet her will get a surprise. Despite the heroism which runs through most of her young life, she is no tomboy. She is as feminine as a Jacques Fath model. She weighs barely 98 pounds, and her pert little nose wrinkles with amusement when she recalls her hundred and one adventures.

Brigitte is the name she got while serving in the underground in France. She was barely past 15 when the Germans conquered her country. But even then her rebellious nature wouldn't stay still in face of the enemy. She was only 17 when the Germans arrested her the first time and jailed her for three days. Her crime was taking part in a student parade on Armistice Day, 1941, honoring France's dead at the Arch of Triumph.

At 19 she had become secretary of the underground resistance organization which operated throughout western France.

She and she alone held the keys to the code used to contact London and the Free French forces of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

"We were the Cook's Agency of the resistance," she said. "It was our job to bring paratroopers and agents in, dispatch them to various bases in the country. It was while doing this job, seeing so many people drop out of the air, that I got the desire to make a parachute jump."

There were many narrow escapes, but Brigittee managed to survive for months under the cover of her normal life as a medical student at the University of Paris. But one day, a fellowworker wracked by torture revealed her rendezvous with one of the underground. The Gestapo closed in on her March 21, 1944, in the gardens of the Trocadero, within view of the Eiffel Tower.

She bowled over one of the Nazi agents and started to run. A bullet in her back stopped her.

The next thing she knew she was staring into the eyes of a burly German, saying: "Madame, excusez moi. Si grand calibre. C'est la guerre." ("Excuse me, madame, for using such a large caliber bullet. That's war.")

The sentence and the situation were so incongruous Brigitte burst into hysterical laughter.

The Germans didn't wait long to quiz her. She was still on the operating table when the first face-slappings began. But she refused to talk. Later, they broke her jaw, but still there was nothing but silence.

Two attempts to help her escape fell through before she was shipped off to Ravensbruck concentration camp. From there she was dispatched to Czechoslovakia, still undergoing hospital treatment.

One day, her name appeared on a list of several hundred women being sent to the gas chambers of Dachau. It was a mistake, since hospital patients were not to be moved. But the mistake saved her life. She never reached Dachau. U.S. planes blew up the tracks, and the doomed women were forced to march. Meanwhile, the remaining hospital patients were taken into a quarry and blown to pieces with hand grenades.

The long walk to Dachau—450 miles in three weeks—saw her make three futile escape tries. But the fourth succeeded. Ironically, it was May 8, the day the war ended.

She weighed just 61 pounds.

Back in Paris and reunited with her family, she collapsed with excitement when she entered her old room and found the Croix de Guerre on her pillow.

Since then she has won the Croix de Guerre twice.

In the two years that followed she threw in her lot with her old hero Gen. de Gaulle and helped him form the Rally of the French People (RFP) which he headed. She served as his press officer until the 1951 elections. Embittered by the defeat of the RPF, she decided to go to Indochina.

"I felt I might find some real Frenchmen there," she said De Gaulle sent her off with his blessing.

In Indochina she became correspondent for the Paris publication Samedi Soir and the magazine Sud-Est Asiatique.

Her first jump was accomplished without prior training. And it nearly cost her her life. Instead of jumping straight out in the conventional manner she tumbled head first. When the chute opened she found herself twisted in the cords.

With quick presence of mind, she seized and stretched the strings, stopping the spinning motion of her body.

Her next jump also was operational. Then, carrying things out in reverse, she took four practice jumps and in between times submitted to a medical examination to determine if she was physically fit to parachute.

She says jumping is fun. Halfway to earth in her first attempt, she broke into shouts of exultation.

"C'est formidable, c'est formidable!" ("It's terrific, it's terrific!") she screamed.

She hasn't suffered a single serious injury so far, she says, reaching over to knock on wood.

One of her jumps—in November last year—was into Dien Bien Phu when it first was taken from the Vietminh. She returned to the jungle fortress in February of this year, waiting for the expected assault. It was there on Feb 23 that she celebrated her 30th birthday with Brig. Gen. Christian de Castries, then a colonel. There were champagne toasts and the troops lobbed a mortar shell bearing the word "Brigitte" into the Vietminh positions in honor of the event.

"They were our best," said Brigitte. "I'm so ashamed I was not there while they fought for their lives."

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Little Joe was spirited away from his customary stand on Philadelphia's busy Walnut Street.

His associates are worried—Little Joe is 98 years old and needs careful handling.

"This is the first time," sadly commented Kenneth H. Pope yesterday, "that Little Joe ever has been away from home."

Conveyer Belts Will Tackle Commuters

By SAM DAWSON

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Conveyor belts, which have been lugging coal and ore and the like for years, are going to tackle commuters two weeks from today.

New Jersey citizens who use the Erie Railroad and then the tubes under the Hudson River to get to work in Manhattan will be taking their first rides on a moving sidewalk in Jersey City.

The belt could care for almost 11,000 foot-sore commuters an hour. The greater part of it covers a 10 per cent grade. It's supposed to ease pedestrian traffic jams as well as weary muscles.

Workers in this city made the 460-foot continuous belt. And workers in Aurora, Ill., turned out the 30 tons of equipment on which the belt rides.

The Jersey City installation is called the world's first commercial passenger conveyor belt. Its builders hope it will be the first of many.

Some of the plans are pretty elaborate like the proposal to replace the trains in the shuttle between Times Square and Grand Central Station with little cabs to carry New York's hordes along on a rubber belt.

New York transit authorities like the idea of transporting up to 16,000 persons per hour each way through the busy shuttle, without any pileups while waiting for trains. But the conveyor would cost about four million dollars, and New York is having another of its financial crises this year.

Somewhat similar plans have been proposed for Cincinnati and Detroit. But there too, cost of installing the system are giving city fathers pause.

Jersey City's passenger conveyor belt will link the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad's tube station with the Erie Railroad's terminal. The plan is to operate it at a speed of 120 feet a minute.

Goodyear Tire & Rubber built the fabric-and-rubber belt here. It's five eighths of an inch thick and weighs 11,000 pounds.

Stephens-Adamson Manufacturing Co. made the conveyor equipment in Aurora. Lee Stephens, president of the Illinois firm, said in a telephone interview that his company and Goodyear are ready to go into commercial production any time some city will make a firm contract.

The conveyor belt business, meanwhile, is going right along in the industrial fields. Almost all the big rubber companies have been making them. Some are several miles long.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

JOAN groaned softly as she looked around at her living room. Oh, it was big enough. It was a fine large corner room And the great bay window on the east could be made into a charming nook sometime. And the huge closet was certainly a boon for hiding all the extras such as suitcases and that trunk and the box containing her wedding dress and her typewriter and their tennis rackets and skis, to say nothing of all their heavy winter clothing now draped over the rocker. Todd had to fix a long rod in the closet before she could put away the clothes.

"But this room—" Joan thought again, and stopped there.

The thing of it was, they simply hadn't enough furniture to make this any kind of a place at all. Only one easy chair—a black painted Dutch rocker—and two straight chairs with cracked cane seats on which they sat when they ate and that they had salvaged from the attic overhead. They had no table. They had no desk. (And how in the world could they get along without a desk when they both needed one, he for his studying and she for her writing?) They had no sofa or love seat. They had no bookcases, no china cabinet, and no storage space for linens.

Joan heard slow slippered steps coming up the back stairs from the kitchen below. She stood still, waiting, an unhappy premonition upon her, a soft "Oh! Oh!" escaping from her lips. A moment later Mrs. Hunter appeared in the doorway, breathing a little fast from her climb, but with her round sweet face wreathed in a radiant smile

"Good morning, Daughter!"

"Good morning, Mother Hunter." Joan's tone was bright and pleasant, yet holding also a note of reserve. This was the first time—except for once—since their arrival that Mrs. Hunter had ventured up here. Then she and the doctor had come for just a few moments to offer help and an invitation to join them for dinner and breakfast until the young couple could get started housekeeping for themselves.

But the doctor had drawn his wife away shortly, saying he knew Joan and Todd would prefer to be alone. "We won't bother you again," he had said cheerfully. "We just wanted you to know we were available, if you need us for anything. When you get settled—and invite us—we'll come," he had added, with a slight emphasis on the word invite.

"The doctor in his study," Mrs. Hunter was saying. "And I got lonesome. I thought, with Todd off for the day, I'd just come up and see what you were doing." She lifted an armful of clothes, dropped them on the half-open trunk, and sank into the empty rocker with a little grunt. "Mm! My ankles are bad this morning, Joanie. I warn you now, don't get rheumatism."

"I hope I don't. And I'm terribly sorry it troubles you so much. Perhaps you shouldn't have climbed those stairs. I was coming down pretty soon."

"Oh, mercy me, I couldn't stay away longer. You don't know what it means to me to have you here in the house with me. To know there's somebody to visit with. The doctor keeps in his study hours on end. And I never dare interrupt him. Either he's seeing people or preparing his sermons or reading—" Her voice trailed away. After a moment she went on. "Of course I have a lot to keep me busy. Church committees and circle meetings and things like that. But they mostly fill the afternoons. It's in the mornings that the house is so still and empty."

Joan nodded "Well," she said, after a moment "you rest now while I whisk my breakfast dishes out of the way."

"No, wait. I have a scheme. Tell me what you think of it." Mrs. Hunter's eyes, blue-gray like Todd's, were fixed on Joan's face in confident anticipation. "I've been thinking," she went on, "what's the sense of you doing your housework up here all alone and me doing mine downstairs all alone? I thought it would be nice if I came up and helped you with yours, then you could come down and help me with mine. Then we'd get ready and go shopping together. And on cleaning days and the days we wash and iron—well—the same thing. Many hands make light work, you know." And a pleased little laugh rippled from her, as if it were all settled.

Quickly Joan turned with the handful of plates she held and quickly moved toward the little kitchen.

"It's—quite an idea," she tossed back over her shoulder.

But unseen by her mother-in-law, she plunked the plates down fiercely in the sink, while an overwhelming protest gathered swiftly in her heart.

"No," she thought. "No No! No! I won't have her barging in here like that! Owning every moment of my time! Planning it! Planning all my work for me as if I couldn't plan it myself! Arranging my days as though I had no ideas—no wishes—of my own. Her pattern of living. Not mine! And all just because she can't bear to be alone in the morning. This was what I was afraid of. But—oh, no!"

She stood quite still, a little startled by the strength of her own resentment and forcing herself back to a measure of composure. Presently she was calm enough to return to the living room.

"It's sweet of you to offer to help me," she said quietly, "but I really don't need any help, Mother Hunter. This is such a tiny place and all I have to do all day is take care of it. I expect I'll just whiz through everything in no time flat. Besides, with your rheumatism I don't believe you should try to take on any extra work. More than your own, I mean, I'll be glad, though"—she hurried on, fearful lest she might have offended—"to come down and help you when I'm through up here. Whenever I can," she added quickly.

"Of course, I'll have my writing to do."

"Yes, I know. But you're not writing now, are you?"

"No. Not now. I just finished a book before our wedding. But I must start another one just as soon as I get our apartment settled."

Mrs. Hunter rocked comfortably, her small rotund body settled in the chair as if for the rest of her life. "Well then, as long as I'm up here today, I might as well stay. Don't worry about me, anyway." She waved a pudgy hand. "It's good just to look at you and talk to you, even if I only sit up here and don't do another thing." Her face sobered and grew sad for a moment. "All my life you know, I've wanted a daughter. I lost my little girl when she was three. And I could never have any more." She looked up and Joan saw tears glimmering in her eyes. "That's why I'm so happy about you," she concluded.

Protest rose up in Joan again, but it was a helpless protest this time, because Mrs. Hunter was at once so confident and so pathetic. She seemed so sure of her welcome here and against that what could Joan say? What could she do? Everything she thought of would only deal a hurt, so best not to answer at all. Best to change the subject until a later date when she might more easily establish her independence.

Thinking these things, she said only: "I hope I will always make you happy, Mother Hunter."

Plymouth

Is your "best buy" In the lowest-price field!

Recently a 1954 Plymouth and current models of the other two best-known low-price cars were taken apart by Plymouth engineers and compared, part by part. Standard "stock" models were used. We've listed some typical findings below.

Plymouth is "best buy" in many ways. Here are just a few!

	low-price Plymouth	low-price car "A"	low-price car "B"
Front Wheel Brakes Plymouth engineers provide two hydraulic brake cylinders in each front wheel brake to ensure smooth, controlled stops without "grabbing." The "other two" in the lowest-price field have only one.	2	1	1
Seat Springs Plymouth uses coil seat springs since they give longer-lasting support. The other two cars have a zigzag platform type. Also, Plymouth's front seat "springs-on-springs" design adds more comfort.
Piston Rings Plymouth engineers use four rings on each piston, resulting in decreased carbon deposit; more consistent power output. Top ring is chrome plated to give greater oil economy, allow faster "break-in" driving.	4	3	3
Body Mounts Plymouth's thick live-rubber body mounts prevent metal-to-metal contact and protect body from shock and vibration. Just look at the difference between Plymouth's mounts and the thin type used by the "other two"!		—	—
Micronic Oil Filter This unit, standard on most Plymouth models, keeps abrasive dirt out of the engine, thus reducing wear and achieving greater oil economy. This feature is available at extra cost on the other two low-price cars.

And dozens of other part-by-part comparisons prove Plymouth is your "best buy"! See us today... and get the facts!

Ask us for the big illustrated booklet that shows how Plymouth leads in frame construction... engine design... performance... economy... comfort... safety. Then...

Damaged Dental Plates At Issue

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP)—Legal eagles here are trying to figure out whether a woman's $230 suit for damage to her dental plate falls under "personal injury" or "property damage."

The woman is suing the village on the ground the sidewalk where she fell and broke her plate was of faulty construction. In reviewing the suit this week, village trustees discovered the village had no insurance to cover property damage suits.

Village Clerk Ralph Jackson said insurance men contended the woman had suffered "property damage." The trustees referred the problem to Donald Fuller, village attorney.

The source reported that talks between Rhee and U. S. envoy Arthur H. Dean reached a deadlock Sunday after Dean broached the new plan. He quoted Rhee: "As long as any Chinese remain in North Korea, it would be a Communist election."

Addresses Naval Reservists Here

Capt. R. G. Culbertson (left) is welcomed to last night's reserve meeting by Lt. Alton Buck, commanding officer of the local unit. Culbertson spoke to members of the reserve unit on the retirement plan for reservists. (Reflector photo by Alvin Taylor)

Capt. R. G. Culbertson, USNR, told members of the local Naval Reserve Composite Company 6-26 last night that the non-disability retirement law authorizes retirement pay after reaching 60 years of age to all who have completed 20 years of satisfactory Federal service.

He noted that a year of satisfactory Federal service is defined as any year of Reserve service prior to June 30, 1949 or any year of reserve service subsequent to June 30, 1949 during which 50 or more points were earned.

"Retirement points, sometimes called days, are accumulated on an annual basis," he said. "The sum of your total points is divided by 360 to ascertain retirement years, to be used when you apply for retirement, which is a multiplier used in determining retirement pay."

Capt. Culbertson demonstrated to the group the manner in which points are computed.

He noted that retired personnel cannot receive retired pay and continue to work for the government if the combined pay from the two exceeds $3000 annually.

Capt. Culbertson now lives in Greenville and is employed by DuPont. He is a native of Rowan County and served approximately 35 years in naval reserve including both World Wars I and II.

Lt. Alton Buck is commanding officer of the local group which meets every Tuesday night.

Says New Asiatic Plans In Making

WASHINGTON (AP — Rep. Vorys (R-Ohio) said today he thinks the administration is working on collective security plans for Southeast Asia that do not call for any immediate use of American forces or large expenditures of money.

He predicted in an interview that Congress would support a security blueprint following lines now being worked out.

Vorys is a senior member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, which heard Secretary of State Dulles outline his proposed Asian defense alignment in a closed session yesterday. Dulles had a date to give the Senate Foreign Relations Committee a similar briefing today.

Chairman Chiperfield (R-Ill) and other members of the House group declined to be quoted publicly about yesterday's session.

It was learned, however, that no specific mention was made of using American forces of any type in the beginning to bulwark attempts to weld Southeast Asian countries and Western Powers into a defense coalition. Dulles earlier told a news conference the goal is to create an alliance prepared to fight if openly challenged by Communist aggression.

Informed House sources said Dulles suggested that the administration be given flexibility to use elsewhere in Southeast Asia the $1,133,000,000 earmarked specifically for Indochina in the foreign aid bill now before the House committee.

They said he advanced the reason that the funds might be frozen in what the secretary called an outside chance that Indochina fell.

Without specific reference to yesterday's session, Vorys said he was sufficiently familiar with the steps being taken by President Eisenhower and Dulles "to feel that they won't bring a plan to Congress until they have one that will be acceptable."

He said that in any such blueprint, "I don't think that either the immediate involvement of troops in Southeast Asia or heavy expense will be characteristics."

Dulles was described as saying he could not predict whether the French would stay in Indochina because this depends upon the internal political situation in France and the outcome at Geneva, where Western nations and the Communists are due to talk over prospects for an end to the seven-year-old war.

Both Vorys and Rep. Judd (R-Minn) said after the session that "nobody is writing off Indochina." French and native forces have suffered serious reverses there.

Judd also said the loss of Indochina "would be vital but not fatal" for American security. Dulles had made a similar statement earlier, telling newsmen there was a difference between the loss of Indochina and of all Southeast Asia.

Secretary of Defense Wilson, leaving for the Pacific last night, said he agrees with Dulles. He also said, in response to a question, that "I know of nothing that could be done that hasn't been done" to help save Indochina from Communist conquest.

He said he does not plan to visit Indochina.

As for Dulles' plans for an anti-Red coalition, he was described as having told the House group that sufficient manpower for ground troops might be obtained from the nations of Southeast Asia and such Pacific powers as Australia, New Zealand and the Philippines.

April's Revenue For Utilities Reported

Greenville Utilities Commission's financial report for the month of April showed a net revenue of $33,424.43.

Income for the month amounted to $167,775.42 while expense totaled $134,350.99. Breaking this down it shows $17,515.38 income from the water department with an expense of $12,010.57 leaving a net revenue there of $5,504.81.

The city electric department showed an income of $93,746.60 with an expense of $78,793.62 giving a revenue net of $14,925.98.

The rural electric department showed an income of $41,031.24 with an expense of $32,294.08 giving a net revenue of $8,737.16. The gas department income totaled $15,482.20 and the expense amounted to $11,252.72 giving a revenue net of $4,229.48.

The treasurer balance at the first of the month of April amounted to $244,525.24. Receipts totaled $170,337.55; disbursements amounted to $215,723.54, giving a treasurer balance April 30 of $199,139.25.

The town of Ayden used 466,200 killowat hours of electricity which amounted to $5,408.06; the town of Winterville used 98,560 which sold for $1,426.39; and the town of Grimesland used 148,200 which totaled $2,018.12.

There were 24 rural customers added in April with 18 sewer taps and 31 water taps added.

Gas Main . . .

$82,500, but last year the City Council asked for an extra $67,500. Finally, the Commission granted an extra $60,000 with an agreement that the other $7,500 could be obtained if needed. This gave the city last year a total of $142,500, which again will be the approximate amount to be asked for by the city.

Whedbee told the Commissioners last night that the Council tried to run the city at a minimum and has cut three items off the budget rather than come back to ask for the other $7,500.

Other Business

City Manager James S. Hughes, making a committee report, said that the City Council has agreed to pay 40 percent of the cost involved in air conditioning parts of city hall.

Plans call for the Utilities to pay for 60 percent of the installation and operation costs while the city pays the other 40 percent of these costs.

In the financial report by Secretary Larry Brown it was shown that the net revenue of the Commission for the month of April amounted to $33,424.43. Income amounted to $167,775 while expense totaled $134,350. The report was approved.
