30 Years Ago Today

The Senate and Foreign Relations Committee devoted two hours general discussion yesterday to the World Court proposals but adjourned until today without reaching a decision on any important point. Efforts to obtain the committee's immediate endorsement of proposals of President Harding and Coolidge for membership in the present court with reservations resulted in failure. None of those present mentioned more than a "hope" of early action on any of the plans now pending.

The End of the Century Club was delightfully entertained by Mrs. R. H. Wright Tuesday afternoon. The program consisted of a very interesting history of Pitt County, read by Mrs. E. B. Ficklen. President Averts Clash Inside GOP On Tariff Issues

By CHARLES F. BARRETT
WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower appeared today to have averted a threatened election-year clash, with some key congressmen in his own party over the tender topic of tariff walls.

He did so by putting off—until next year—his request for a three-year renewal of the Reciprocal Trade Act with power to lower tariffs an additional 5 per cent each year.

In a letter released late yesterday, Eisenhower said he still regarded this holy controversial program as "indispensable" in the national interest. But he suggested that Congress only hold through hearings on it this year, and take it up for action early in 1955.

Meanwhile, he said, Congress could renew the act as it stands for one more year. The present law expires June 12.

Several high-ranking Republicans in Congress who have been ready to fight for higher instead of lower tariffs indicated they would be happy to postpone the threatened battle for another year and simply renew the present act.

One of the leading advocates of higher tariff protection for some American industries is Rep. Daniel A. Reed (R-N.Y.), chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and oldest Republican in continuous service in the House. Reed's committee handles tariff bills—and also such matters as taxes and social security which have an important place in Eisenhower's legislative program.

Reed said today he was "gratified" at the President's new stand, expressed in a letter to Charles H. Percy, president of the Bell and Howell Co. of Chicago.

Reed promised full hearings by his committee and termed it "especially important" that his group hear testimony from industries and labor groups who say they are being hurt by imports.

Another leading advocate of higher tariffs is Rep. Richard M. Simpson (R-Pa.). A veteran Ways and Means member, Simpson also heads the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, which must work closely with Eisenhower in its drive to boost or at least retain the now-slim GOP margin in the House.

On the Senate side, Chairman Millikin (R-Colo.) of the Senate Finance Committee has also been a critic of some administration "low tariff" policies. His group handles tariffs, taxes and other legislation similar to that of the Ways and Means Committee, and in addition Millikin heads the Conference of All Republican Senators.

He said he would support a one-year extension of the Reciprocal Trade Act and there were indications Reed and Simpson would do likewise.

An as-is renewal of the statute is regarded as little more than a free trade gesture from a foreign policy standpoint, since most of the

Convict Free To Die On Outside

CHESTER, Ill. (AP)—Lyman W. Hall, at 81 the oldest prisoner in the state of Illinois, is free to fulfill his wish to "die on the outside."

Hall, sentenced to life imprisonment for killing a constable in 1897, was released from Menard State Prison here on parole yesterday after serving more than 55 years in three state prisons.

He has a job working with the Salvation Army in Chicago.

During his half century of imprisonment, Hall said, the type of men entering prison has changed. Prisons now, he said are filling with "young punks."

Not One Serious Reaction Results In Vaccine Tests

CHICAGO (AP)—Not a single case of serious reaction or death has been reported from among more than 400,000 of the nation's school children given inoculations of the Salk polio vaccine.

Dr. Robert F. Korns, a member of the national polio vaccine evaluation team made the first official report on the mass experiment yesterday to the annual convention of the Illinois State Medical Society.

At the same time, Dr. Hart E. Van Riper, medical director of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, said in New York that the first phase of the nationwide polio tests is completed and is a success. He said 644,138 children in 44 states have now received the first of a series of three injections.

Since the trials started, Dr. Korns said, polio has broken out in Florida, Texas and Michigan and three polio cases have occurred among the 644,000 children in the study group.

One of the polio cases is that of a first-grade pupil in Florida who is included in the study but who did not receive shots of the vaccine.

The other two cases, one in Michigan and one in Texas, received either the vaccine or an injection of a blank substance of no medical value. Half of the children in those two states got vaccine and half get the blank substance, and which substance was given will not be disclosed until the final stages of the study.

Dr. Korns said a final evaluation of the effectiveness of the Salk vaccine, probably will not be possible until next year. Dr. Korns, an Albany (N.Y.) Medical College associate professor, is on leave to the Poliomyelitis Vaccine Evaluation Center at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, Mich. The evaluation team is now in its fourth week of observation.

Dr. Van Riper said more than half the children already have received their second shots and the final third inoculation will begin the week of May 31.

Preliminary surveys showed, he said "an almost complete return of children" who took first shots, to get the second. Checks in many areas showed only 5 per cent failed to continue the series.

"This is an unusually fine show of cooperation for such a vast project," Dr. Van Riper said.

About five weeks more remain before the last group of children will have completed their series

New Irish Premier To Give Agriculture Full Attention

By TOM OCHILTREE
DUBLIN, Ireland (AP)—Associates of John A. Costello said today the coalition leader will give top priority to improvement and modernization of Irish agriculture when he takes over as premier.

Costello's control of the government was assured last night when final returns from Tuesday's general elections gave the group of parties headed by him a majority in the new Dail (Parliament). Outgoing Premier Eamon de Valera conceded that his Fianna Fail (Men of Destiny) party had been defeated and the opposition could form a new government.

The Dail is scheduled to convene June 2 to launch the new regime.

While plans for formation of the government still were in an early stage, a friend of Costello said the Fine Gael (Unitary Ireland) party of only six seats, but it had held only a two-vote control in Parliament.

De Valera, 71 and nearly blind, has been a dominant figure in Irish politics for more than a score of years. In that time Costello has been the only man to beat him and now Costello has done it twice.

From 1948 to 1951, Costello was premier of a coalition government that eventually was ousted by the Fianna Fail.

In conceding defeat, De Valera stated his party "faced the unpopularity of the measures necessary to set the country's finances right."

Ireland's economic ills were largely responsible for the popular old leader's downfall as government chief.

The cost of food essentials has jumped since the government withdrew the bulk of its food subsidies in 1952. Taxes have been increased in the face of opposition protests that they were stifling the country's economy. Unemployment has mounted.

Costello, a 62-year-old Dublin attorney, is a neat dresser with a full head of white hair. His years at the bar have given him a vigorous debating style. Golf is his one hobby.

He is a devoted family man with three sons and two daughters. One son, Declan, also is a member of the Dail.

Look In The Back Yard For A Moment

The communist octopus is trying to stretch one of its tentacles into the Western Hemisphere through the back door.

The Red cancer has succeeded in getting a base of operation in practically every section of the world except the Western Hemisphere. Now it appears that Guatemala has been designated as the communist beachhead on the American continents.

Communists already have succeeded in stirring up unrest in that little Central American nation. Now there are reports of a major shipment of arms from communist orbit in Europe to that country.

Obviously Russia will not permit arms to be shipped to Guatemala unless she feels they will bring returns in the form of a communist base of operations for the Western Hemisphere.

Bringing Youngsters Into Local Government

Greenville's municipal government ran smoothly yesterday under the direction of student officials appointed to fill the city's administrative offices for one day.

There can be little doubt in anyone's mind that the students taking part in operating the city government for one day learned a great deal from the experience. We are also of the opinion the city stands to gain a great deal from the one-day administration by the high school seniors.

The students who participated in the administration of the city's business will have a great interest in municipal affairs as a result. Their report to other high school students will stimulate interest in municipal business on the part of many other youngsters.

As a result of the experiment, Greenville's youngsters will be better informed on the problems which face city officials. They will have first hand information on methods used to cope with many matters of business which come to local government officials.

In the long run, if this experiment is continued as an annual event, it will pay huge dividends to the city. The greater interest the younger generation takes in local government, the better local government we will have in the future.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
Cicero in one of his writings warns men against giving themselves over to sensuality; for if you do, he says, you will find yourself unable to think of anything else. But Jesus said, "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God."

Cicero advocated morality; Jesus set forth religion. The great Roman statesman told men what they should not do; Jesus told men what they should do, and he promised this reward, that if purity characterized their thoughts and acts, they would see God.

Sin is and always has been bondage. The people who sin think they are free, but they are slaves. No matter what the sin may be, once it gets into our lives it begins exercising over us a real and persistent domination. People who love money seem never able to get away from this love. People of bad temper are constantly making fools of themselves and raising up enemies because they cannot control their tongues. The drinker gets to the place where he cannot control his appetite, and he then is an alcoholic. When we see a man lying in the gutter, or read of a man's going berserk and killing someone, we can see that sin is bondage.

But all that may begin in lives as normal as our own. Morality is not strong enough to break that bondage; only religion can do it.

Labor Unions Losing Power

By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON—Growing unemployment and possible loss of bargaining power in new contract negotiations lie behind the tight alliance which the labor rulers of the steel, coal and trucking industries have organized in defiance of the old and major unions—the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Although the three leaders condemned the Eisenhower Administration for not inaugurating an emergency reconstruction program, their difficulties are economic rather than political. Their members are being laid off by the thousands, and the flow of dues into union treasuries is slowing down.

These conditions have reduced their organizations to their weakest state since the mid-thirties, when F.D.R. sponsored legislation that gave them a dominant position in politics and the nation's economy.

UNEMPLOYED UNION WORKERS—According to their own records, there are almost 500,000 unemployed in their three unions, which have a total membership of about 3,000,000.

More than 100,000 of John L. Lewis' coal miners are jobless, and 300,000 are working only part time. David J. McDonald's CIO steel workers report 190,000 out of work and 250,000 working only part time. Dave Beck's AFL truckers cannot find employment for about 150,000. Both the state and union benefit payments will soon be unable to feed and finance them.

The coal operators are so concerned over the industry's decline that they are holding an emergency meeting in Chicago today. They will probably resort to the unusual step of asking Government action to check rival competition from oil and gas interests, especially imports. So far the State Department has refused to accede to this plea.

CONTRACT RENEGIATION SUGGESTED BY COMPANIES—Indeed, some mine owners suggest that the only remedy is to repudiate their contracts with

A communist controlled government in any one of the Latin American nations would be a serious threat to all the nations of this hemisphere. The traditionally unstable national governments in South America and Central America would quickly become primary targets for the creeping tide of Red enslavement.

The free nations of the world have watched governments of countries in Europe and Asia topple time and again to subversion and armed revolution or communists. Unless we are on our toes, the same thing could happen in this section of the globe.

This is no time for the United States to sit back and watch. If far-flung places like Korea and Indochina are important to the free world, how much more important the nations of the Western Hemisphere are.

The free world is not yet convinced it must strike a death blow at the head of the octopus called communism. But surely if nations of the Americas are to be withheld from communist grasp, we must cut off the tentacle of the octopus which stretch into this hemisphere.

It is folly for the United States to strengthen governments in far-flung corners of the world against communism, and leave its closest neighbors vulnerable to communism through lack of assistance.

Strategic Advance To The Rear

It looks as if McCarthy will escape taking the witness stand in the row he precipitated. We interpret this as a maneuver by McCarthy to get off the hook in this hearing which has backfired against him.

By cross examination, McCarthy and his cohorts have dragged the Secretary of Army and other Army witnesses over the coals. Through this type of action, he has tried to prove his point with implications rather than with facts.

In short, we think Senator McCarthy has the bull by the tail and is looking for a somewhat graceful way of letting go without getting gored by the bull.

There is little question in our minds that McCarthy has lost a great deal of popularity by these hearings. To be sure, he may have gained some new supporters since the row with the Army began. But by and large, we guess he has lost many more supporters than he has gained.

In our opinion, McCarthy realizes he is coming out on the short end in these hearings, and is anxious to get out from under them.

Selected Shorts

Some seem to think that when a business becomes big, it has things all its own way—and that it can adopt a "like it or lump it" policy toward consumers and the rest of the business community.

A Brookings Institution report tells a very different story. Of the nation's 100 largest industrial corporations in 1909, only 36 were on that select list in 1948. The report observes that our economic system "has its own actions and reactions and its own methods of punishing the company that ceases to be competitive."

There's plenty of room at the top for concerns which give good service and please the public—and plenty of room at the bottom for those which fail to do that.—(Industrial News Review)

Somebody Told Me

New Adventures, Then Home

Today's column is the final in a series about the experiences of the principal of Greenville's Brookgreen school, James A. Vinci's birth in Sicily, first eight years there, then ten years in America and a trip back there, is colorful enough to be material for a biography.

As of yesterday, Jim was released from prison in Italy. The tour back to Naples was scenic, even if it was from the small window of a police wagon, horse drawn. You wouldn't believe it to see him now, but Jim weighed only 120 then and was small enough to wiggle out of his handcuffs and light cigarettes for the other passengers on the wagon.

Back at headquarters the Italian government officials were very apologetic for putting an American citizen in prison. "They even bought me a new suit and sent me home with a pat on the back. "My mother was working in the orange groves when I arrived there. It was just like a dream for me. I had been waiting for 10 years to get the chance to get back to see her."

Jim's home town, he recalls, is something like the population of Greenville packed into Hillsdale. "People live very close over there," he says. "We could talk in a normal tone and be heard by three families in our neighborhood."

His visit lasted three days before the Italian officials informed him that he was drafted. This was done by the in-person visit of a soldier, complete with scroll and two stooges. After his draft notice Jim had two days, so he checked with American consul to see what could be done about their efforts to draft an American citizen. "You are also an Italian citizen," they said. "The only thing we can tell you is to go along with them for the time being and we'll see what we can do."

So in a matter of not too many months Jim was a Captain in the King's Army, flying in North Africa. A crash almost resulted in his losing his jaw, but "they did a pretty good job on me," he recalls.

After the crash he managed to get a passport with the help of the American underground.

Two weeks after he landed in New York, Italy was in World War II. Jim joined the Marine Corps and during his tour of duty was stationed at Cherry Point. He met and married Doris Haskins of New Bern and they now have two daughters, ages seven and four.

After discharge from the Marines he attended East Carolina, received his B.S. degree in 1949 and his M. A. in late 1950.

And I thank you.

What Other Editors Are Thinking

HOW ABOUT IT, YOU BUSINESSMEN? (Rocky Mount Telegram)

Because a North Carolina businessman loyally insists that all his shipments come through the State ports at Wilmington or Morehead City those ports will now get more business. The job of building North Carolina's ocean ports is just that simple.

E. Nelson Beard of Greensboro, president of the Beard Lumber Company specifies that all his lumber shipments enter North Carolina ports. Because of this loyalty, the Japanese freighter Kyouyu Maru will call at Wilmington tomorrow with 111,000 board feet of milled mahogany, most of it destined for North Carolina's furniture manufacture. A second shipment of Philippine mahogany—almost 200,000 board feet—will arrive in Wilmington in five or six weeks.

Whenever a ship calls at a North Carolina port it means extra revenue from ship rentals, warehouse storage, sale of fuel and other ship supplies, the money spent by ship crews ashore, and the employment of people to handle the ports. Obviously, if enough ships called at our seaports, this additional volume of business would become another major state "industry" just as Norfolk's shipping is a major "industry" of Virginia.

If North Carolina is to retain its industrial lead in the South it must develop its ports or take a back seat to other Southern states which have made major assets of their seaports. These include: Virginia (Norfolk); South Carolina (Charleston); Georgia (Savannah); Florida (Miami); Alabama (Mobile); and Louisiana (New Orleans).

So long as North Carolina industrialists and businessmen who control big tonnage shipments remain indifferent to the State's ports, North Carolina business will go to swell the commerce of Charleston, Norfolk, Baltimore and New York. The railroads which haul North Carolina tonnage out of the state could just as well haul it to our ports. Moreover, the development of Wilmington and Morehead City might bring increased railroad business into this state.

Let us begin at home by considering the shipment of tobacco from Rocky Mount. Last year, 20,500,000 pounds of tobacco were exported abroad from the Rocky Mount market, total of some 58,327,000 pounds. Most, if not all, of this tobacco was shipped from the seaports of other states. To that extent, North Carolina's economy suffered. If Rocky Mount tobaccoists and other big tonnage shippers in this area would make the same use of N.C. ports (insofar as possible) which Mr. Beard made, Morehead City and Wilmington would soon be doing a booming business. This in turn would help boost the economy of North Carolina, particularly here in the East.

We hope that Mr. Beard may become an apostle in the advancement of North Carolina's ports among his fellow industrialists and businessmen. He can speak with authority from his own personal experience and he can command more attention than eleven different port solicitors. Even if Mr. Beard does nothing more than maintain his present policy of requiring his tonnage to come through our ports, he serves as an example which should challenge other North Carolina businessmen.

Business Today

Formula All Wrong

F. ELMER ROESSNER
There is a lot of talk going around now to the effect that the government ought to step up its spending and cut taxes. The idea is that by spending more money, the government will increase payrolls and profits, and by cutting taxes it will give consumers more money to spend, and everybody will have unbounded prosperity, a color television set, a summer camp and self-supporting in-laws.

The formula of more government spending and less taxation has a built-in persuasiveness in that it sounds so pleasant. How can anyone be against more government spending and lower taxes? Who would shoot Santa Claus?

The fact of the matter is that the government cannot create prosperity any more than a farmer can create a watermelon. Government action can create circumstances in which prosperity can grow, just as a farmer can till the soil. But if you ever see a farmer with a watermelon growing out of his ear, call the medics.

The Federal budget is not yet in balance and more spending and less taxation would create a greater deficit that would have to be met by borrowing. And that borrowing would be directly inflationary. And inflation is just as much of a tax as income levies or excises on snuff.

It is a tax on those who have bonds, savings, pensions and money owed them; it is a tax in that part of the purchasing power in that money is taken away by government action. In effect, more government spending and less taxation would produce a spread to be paid for by those who had vulnerable assets.

If a person has any money coming to him, in effect part will be taken away; if a person owes any money the size of the debt, in purchasing power, will be reduced.

When we had other shots of inflation, in the thirties and the forties, a lot of people said at the time that it was good because everybody was in debt. Few siller remarks have ever been made, and this department, having made so many of them, is an expert on silly remarks. There can never be a situation in which everybody is in debt or one in which everyone is on the credit side. For every dollar owed by someone, there is a dollar owed to someone. Catch?

There have been times in the country's history, such as during the big depression and World War II, when the situation was so grave that taxing the thrifty and the pensioners through inflation was necessary. But before a similar levy is made again, we ought to make sure that those people ought not to pick up the check for the next time.

NEWS PERMISSION FIRST
Every once in a while a business executive becomes so delighted with an article in a magazine that he wants to send reprints to all his friends, customers and prospects. The recent Time-New York Central case shows how expensive that can be; the railroad paid $7,000 for circulating a copyrighted reprint from Fortune magazine.

While it might not have been a greater deficit that would have to be met by borrowing, and that borrowing would be directly inflationary. And inflation is just as much of a tax as income levies or excises on snuff.

Fool-Proof Retirement Plans

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Do you have a simple, fool-proof retirement plan?

If not, I think I have one that may interest you. Wait: Don't run away. This won't cost you anything.

Here is what is wrong with most retirement plans:

1. A man retires and discovers his pension is really only peanut money. He then has the problem of convincing his wife that peanuts not only taste good but are even more nutritious than steak.
2. Or a man skimps all his life, figuring he will save enough money so that he can retire and do all the fine careless things he dreamed of doing when young. Then he makes the sad discovery that the dreams of youth lose their glamour and become nightmares in old age.

A man nearing 60 put his situation to me this way the other day:

"Retirement looks wonderful to a man in his 30's or 40's, but as you actually get nearer to it you begin to see it as a pitfall."

"Take my case. They tell you to prepare for retirement by developing a hobby. Well, I've tried conscientiously to build an interest in gardening. But-ugh-it simply isn't in me to be a wet nurse for a pansy bed. The only growing things I have a respect for are weeds and poison ivy."

"For years I have been putting away dough so that my wife and I could take a trip around the world when I retire. But lately I've been thinking what a nuisance it would be going through European museums gawking at pictures I don't like being explained to me by a guide who learned his English by reading old copies of the National Geographic."

"Work has always been the real hobby of sensible men. The closer I get to retirement the less my daily routine looks like a rut, and the more it looks like a friendly bomb shelter. I even hate to tear the page of my desk calendar anymore. It depresses me."

"This man, it seems to me, has made the mistake of many men who plan for retirement by postponing small present pleasures in order to achieve some greater and more expensive luxury in the distant future.

My modified pay-as-you-go retirement program simply calls for a reversal of these tactics. Instead of squirreling away dough so you can see Africa from a wheel chair at 66, you take a coach plane to Florida while you are still young enough to enjoy a swim and a sunburn. After all, you can always see lions and tigers at the nearest zoo.

The thing to do is to achieve a large fragment of your dreams as you can while you are young and active, before your dreams turn into wistful regrets. Why not retire your dreams by living them up along the way?

But every sound retirement program requires that you postpone something. My plan is very sound on this point. But instead of postponing your pleasures, you go ahead and do as much of what you want to do as you can—and you postpone doing until retirement all the unpleasant things you feel you ought to do, or the things a well-meaning wife tells you that you ought to do.

I know I ought to get some other hobby besides cigar smoking. I realize I ought to learn to drive an automobile, and, to please my wife, learn some dance step newer than "the turkey trot."

I realize also I will never leave an imperishable name in literature until I finish the book I'm working on so far I've only gotten as far as the title, which is, "The Industrial Uses of the Monarch Butterfly in War and Peace."

But these things seem to me to be ideal retirement goals. And I know that at 65 they will still look so utterly repulsive that I will tell my wife:

"Honey, most fellows at our age do quit at 65, but in my case the boss said that 10 years more of putting my nose to the grindstone would give my face the polished look it now lacks. But, word of honor, the day I'm 75 I'll start taking dancing lessons."

If the boss does make me quit at 65, forcing me to face the task of making good on all my postponed repulsive promises, my retirement program will solve that, too. I intend to run away from home.

Around Capitol Square

Democrats' Gathering Sobered By Two Recent Deaths

By LYNN NISBET
SOBERED — Democrats assembling in Raleigh for the biennial convention, already saddened by the death of Senator Clyde Hoey, were put in more sober mood by the death of Forrest Shuford, commissioner of labor. These events coming within less than a week of each other emphasized the burdens of public office and the responsibility of delegates to the convention.

The necessity for nominating candidates for these offices for the general election ballot gave the pre-convention caucus the appearance of older times when all nominations were made by convention instead of in the primary.

North Carolinians like to get together, and North Carolina Democrats just love party conventions. When there are no national convention delegates to be chosen, and no nominations to make, there is really not much point in having a convention. Except there would be a revolution in the party if it were not held.

Among oldtimers there is a sort of nostalgia longing for the emotional demonstrations of the nominating conventions, and the "roustments" of soul-stirring speeches. These have gone out of style. During the past year the last two of the old-time campaign orators died. Cameron Morrison and Clyde Hoey. Latest survivors of the group that included Will Claude Kitchin, Walter Bickett and others who had followed such fire-eaters as Zeb Vance.

Although there may be less resounding oratory the Democrats enjoy just talking with each other and "working politics" among themselves. Early arrivals at the convention were enthusiastic about prospects for recapturing the Congress this year and the national administration in 1956. They were much more concerned about who Governor Umstead and State Committee will name in Senator Hoey's place and in the outcome of the Lennon-Scott primary contest.

ALIGNMENTS — There are many cross-lines in the support of the several candidates. Obviously a good deal of trading was going on. More Lennon folks were in evidence. That is explained by the fact that convention attendants are mostly leaders in the party organization back home, and a majority of the local organization leaders are Lennon partisans. But no Scott supporters had occasion to feel lonesome. The fact is in a number of places the Scott folks wrested control of party machinery from the Lennon group at the county conventions last Saturday.

Anyhow, the Lennon-Scott race took second place in convention interest to the matter of a successor to Senator Hoey. That happens to be something the convention, through its creature that State executive committee, can do something about besides talk.

Governor Umstead's announcement that he will not appoint a Senator until after May 31 made it certain that the committee will consider nominations for Senator and Commissioner of Labor at an early meeting.

VANGUARD — Party leaders began arriving Tuesday evening and by noon Wednesday the Sir Walker Hotel lobby was crowded. By five o'clock it was difficult to work passage through the lobby to the elevators.

County and district caucuses scheduled for Wednesday night were more significant than usual, because of the greatly enhanced prestige of membership on the executive committee and the desire of supporters of the several candidates to make a good demonstration for their man.

POWERFUL — The executive committees are no more important this year than they have been for a long time. The long-standing importance is more acutely appreciated now that the State committee has the opportunity to name the next United States Senator from the west and the commissioner of labor.

That fact, plus memories of four years ago when the committee named Jeff Johnson as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court and two years ago when it named Charles F. Carroll as Superintendent of Public Instruction.

tion, justifies recognition of membership on the committee as more than an empty honor. It is a

The service will be held as part of the Forty-fifth Annual Commencement at the college and will take place at 7:30 in the College Theatre.

FTA Chapter At College Is Winner Of National Citation

The Robert H. Wright Chapter of the Future Teachers of America at East Carolina College has just been notified that it is the recipient of the 1953-1954 Banner Chapter Award of the national FTA, an annual citation to the outstanding chapter in this country.

Wilda F. Faust, national FTA secretary, this week informed Carolyn Brothers of South Mills, president of the East Carolina chapter, that this honor had been given the college organization.

"Credit for this splendid professional achievement," the FTA secretary states, "is due to Miss Emma L. Hooper, pioneer chapter sponsor; the officers and members; and the challenging leadership given by the North Carolina Education Association."

The award, a National Education Association citation, is engraved in black and gold and decorated with the national FTA colors of black, white and red. It is presented to the chapter selected for the honor on such bases as continuity of service over a period of years, growth in enrollment, maturity and value of projects, and leadership of alumni members in educational activities. The Robert H. Wright Chapter, chartered May 10, 1939, is the oldest active chapter in North Carolina and the seventh oldest in the United States. It is named for East Carolina's first president.

Miss Hooper, a faculty member of the East Carolina English department, is founder of the chapter and has been associated with it since its beginning. This spring she was appointed chairman of the Advisory Committee to the College Chapters of FTA affiliated with the North Carolina Education Association.

Recent achievements and activities of the East Carolina chapter include earning a place on the National Victory Honor Roll for increase in membership, aiding in the organization of FTA high school clubs in Eastern North Carolina, and sending delegates to a number of educational meetings.

Officers, in addition to Miss Brothers, are: Lena Taylor, Sea Level, and Barbara Etheridge, Nashville, vice presidents; Helen Adams, Angier, corresponding secretary; Betty Huffman, Salisbury, recording secretary; Joyce Gurley, Mt.

Aries Club Hears Discussion Of City Government

The Aries Book Club met at the home of Mrs. Kenneth Hite on May 13. Following a brief business session, the president, Mrs. A. W. Bryan, gave the current events for the meeting.

The guest speaker, Mrs. Joe Dudley, was introduced by Mrs. Hite. Mrs. Dudley, who is secretary to Mr. Hughes, spoke on the City Manager Form of Government.

Mr. Hughes, City Manager, began his duties on last August 1st. The City Council is composed of five members: Mayor W. L. Whebede, Mayor pro-tem S. Eugene West, J. A. Collins Sr., C. W. Harvey Jr. and A. C. Ruffin. These men are in charge of all legislative meetings and also elect their mayor pro-tem. The majority of the Council constitutes a quorum. They receive a salary and select the City Manager who stays in office as long as the Council desires. The City Manager has the power to fire any city employee without consent of the Council.

The City Council is responsible for the administration of all departments, such as police, fire, street and recreation departments. Mr. Hughes keeps a record of all meetings. The city clerk also keeps records and writes the minutes.

The City Manager recommends to the Council what his findings show. The Council also has various miscellaneous duties. At present Mr. Hughes is working on a budget for the next fiscal year.

Following this most interesting and instructive program the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Stephen Bartlett, served cookies, nuts and cakes. Books were exchanged and the meeting adjourned to meet on May 27th with Mrs. John Reynolds.

Thursday Bridge Club Meets

BETHEL—On Thursday Mrs. F. P. Pollard entertained her bridge club. The home was decorated with mixed vases of spring flowers.

Between progressions the hostess served delicious home-made pineapple cake, nuts and mints to the guests. At the end of three progressions, high score prize was awarded to Mrs. Earl Andrews.

Others who attended were Mesdames Ralph Carson, William Andrews, James Crandall, Dennis Hardy, Clara Roberson, Harvey Manning and Miss Camille Staton.

Mrs. Andrews Hostess To Bridge Club

BETHEL—Mrs. Tom Andrews Jr. was hostess to her bridge club on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Flowers used for the party were lovely pink roses and ragged robins.

Between progressions the hostess served a hostess plate, centered with an attractive triple layer sandwich loaf and Coca-Colas.

The high score prize was awarded to Mrs. Dave Speir and consolation prize went to Mrs. Bill Whitehurst. Others who were present were Mesdames Leighton Blount, J. C. Wynne Jr., Bob Young, Don Carson Jr., Lee Whitehurst Jr. and Robert Weeks.

'Books and Stuff'

DR. ED. HIRSHBERG

If you want some objective information about segregation, read "The Negro and the Schools," by Harry S. Ashmore, just issued by the University of North Carolina Press. The author has no axe to grind, but simply presents the facts about just where the Negro stands in relation to the public schools. The book is based on a survey made by forty-five interested scholars, most of whom were Southerners, and financed by the Fund for the Advancement of Education. Concerning that very pertinent issue, the influence of court decisions on the Negro's status, Ashmore's book implies that even the Supreme Court cannot settle the question of segregation. Quoting the New York Times reviewer, "The social and economic forces that have worked for and against segregation will keep on working as they have in the past. One side or the other has been bolstered by court rulings, but none,"—concludes the author—"has been wholly nullified." An interesting conclusion, we think, in view of the recent developments.

Good vacation reading—if a little premature—is "Mr. Hobbs' Vacation," by Edward Streeter, the same author who wrote "Dere Mabel," in 1918, the "See Here, Private Hargrove" of World War I. He also wrote "Father of the Bride," some years back, if you will remember. In nearly four decades, Mr. Streeter has changed a lot—from a private in the 27th Division to vice president of the Bank of New York, but he's still the same guy, just a little older.

Mystery enthusiasts will be interested in this year's Edgar Allan Poe Award for the best first mystery written by an American author. It was given to Ira Levin for "A Kiss Before Dying," published by Simon and Schuster, and available—we hope—at your local library.

Published yesterday: "Eight Weeks to Live," about the last days of the late Senator from Ohio, Robert A. Taft, whom we have always respected. The book gives a heart-stirring account of the Senator's struggle with cancer, and his efforts to finish his important government business before he died.

There's also a brief appreciation of Taft written by President Eisenhower. It was published by Doubleday, and will be selling for a dollar.

For the teen-agers, a new project being launched by Hanover House, publishers: a series of adaptations of popular adult novels especially re-written for the high-schoolers, to be called "Hanover House Headliners." The historical backgrounds and excitement will be preserved, but, we gather, some of the sex will be omitted. First four titles, coming out June 7, are "Immortal Wife," "The Iron Mistress," "The Velvet Doublet," and "Woman With a Sword." As a distraction from bad TV we heartily approve, but we reserve judgment on any adaptations or condensations until we've seen them.

Creating considerable stir is Marianne Moore's translation of the "Fables" of Jean de la Fontaine, just published by Viking. An outstanding American poetess in her own right, Miss Moore's "Collected Poems" (1952) won both the Bollingen and Pulitzer poetry prizes and the National Book Award. La Fontaine wrote the Fables in the 17th century and is considered a great classical writer in France, though he's been neglected here, more or less. Miss Moore's translation presents an interesting combination of American modern and French classic—which should be worth reading.

On the local scene: We've received some vital statistics about the activities going on at the Sheppard Memorial Library and its agile partner, the Bookmobile. The information is direct from Mrs. Scott, head librarian, who, we very much regret, will be leaving us in June—which will be a great loss, but we know she'll be happy and successful in her new post. Here's the stuff on local book-reading: In the ten months that have been recorded so far this year, library circulation in Pitt County has increased 20 per cent over last year—a grand total of 203,459 books have been borrowed from Sheppard, the Bookmobile and the various town libraries. . . . And 944 new borrowings registered at Sheppard. . . . Most phenomenal increase has been in the use of the Bookmobile, which has issued nearly 500,000 books since it started operating in 1948. . . . And for all this orchids to Mrs. Scott and her fellow-workers.

Among the celebrities speaking at the annual East Carolina Commencement ceremonies will be a nationally known author, Dr. Daniel A. Poling, who will preach the Baccalaureate sermon on Sunday morning in Wright Auditorium. . . . He's editor of The Christian Herald and author of many magazine articles, the most recent in the Saturday Evening Post for April 24, called "Clergymen Are Citizens Too," a discussion of communism in the pulpit. He also wrote "Faith Is Power—for You," in 1950, and edited "A Treasury of Great Sermons," issued in 1944. . . .

Dr. E.D. Johnson's weekly book chat over WGTC at 7:45 on Sunday evening will be on the subject of Great North Carolinians. . . . And our reviewer this year is John Gordon, who teaches in the Art Department at the College and who has an exhibition of his works on display at the Sheppard Library—one of those versatile fellows. . . .

Grademother's Honor Bridal Couple-Elect

BETHEL—The seventh grade grademother's entertained Mr. William Berry and Miss Nancy Edmondson of Oak City in the Elementary School lunchroom on Thursday at 2:30. The students showered the couple with many nice and useful gifts.

The grademother's were Mesdames Henry Rogerson, Franklin Whitehurst, Dennis Hardy, J. R. Cullifer, R. N. Simmons, Winfred Thigpen and Walter Gray.

The refreshments for the party were ribbon and open-faced sandwiches, bridal cakes, cheese straws, nuts and Coca-Colas. There were approximately 35 present for the occasion.

"PURE" INVENTION LONDON (AP)—Moscow's Pravda today denounced as "pure invention and the imagination of a primitive mind" U.S. assertions that 6,000 to 12,000 Russians took part in the Communist war effort in Korea.

The information was made public by the Pentagon in Washington Saturday. It was attributed to intelligence data and analysis of information from other sources.

H.G. Wells wrote more than a dozen books after he was 70 years old.

Alumni Day Participants

James L. Whitfield of Raleigh, president of the East Carolina College Alumni Association, and James W. Butler, alumni secretary at the college, will be among principal participants in events of Alumni Day on the campus tomorrow. Mr. Whitfield will preside at a business meeting of the Association at 10 a.m. in the Austin building and will take part in the program given at the annual luncheon for visitors at the college at 12:30 in the North Dining Hall. Mr. Butler has been instrumental in planning the entertainment of those who return to the campus for the annual alumni business session and "get-together" Mr. Whitfield is a graduate of the Greenville High School and of the college.

One of the seductions of determinism seems to be that it offers the individual absolution from his sins and guilt. The surrender of responsibility in exchange for this absolution seems an attractive swap. "As the individual becomes, either in theory or in fact, less capable of doing anything for himself the question what may be done to him comes to seem more and more interesting." This gives rise to a "Science of Man" which seeks to condition and control man as a machine.

Hosts Entertain Bridal Couple At Dinner Party

Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Ficklen complimented Miss Elizabeth Kittrell and Mr. Knott Proctor Jr. at a dinner party Wednesday evening at their home on West Fifth Street. Guests were greeted at the door by the hosts, Miss Kittrell and Mr. Proctor. Spring flowers were used to decorate the home.

Thirty-six guests were invited into the dining room and enjoyed a buffet dinner. Miss Kittrell was presented a corsage and a boutonniere was given to Mr. Proctor.

Red China Building Up Air Power On Formosa Strait

By ELTON C. FAY
WASHINGTON (AP)—Red China's air command is reported to have concentrated a substantial force of jet fighters and light bombers along the mainland coast opposite Formosa, seat of Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist government.

That buildup apparently has been made since the Korean War's end allowed diversion of air power from Manchuria.

The Red buildup in Chekiang province consists almost entirely of MIG15 fighters and IL28 twin-jet bombers, information reaching Washington indicates.

Although the shift is receiving attention here, there was no indication today that officials were unduly alarmed over prospects of an immediate move against Formosa. The redeployment appears to have been gradual, a part of a broader program which has sent even larger numbers of aircraft to fields in southern China, close to the Indo-China border.

The United States still is holding fast to its policy of promising sea and air aid to head off any invasion attempt by the Reds against Formosa.

Dispatches from the far east report Red air sorties over islands off the China mainland which have been seized and held by amphibious forces of Generalissimo Chiang with Nationalist planes challenging these Red air movements. But there has been nothing suggesting direct invasion attempts against the island of Formosa.

While Washington officials were reluctant to discuss details of the policy for the Formosa-China mainland area, the indications are that strikes against the small offshore islands currently held by Chiang's troops would not be considered a reason for involving U.S. ships or aircraft. Most of the island positions held by Nationalist troops now were taken after the United States enunciated its Formosa protection policy in 1950, at the start of the Korean War.

Former President Truman at that time ordered the 7th Fleet to stand guard against aggressive attack on Formosa by the Reds — and at the same time to restrain Chiang's forces from operations against the mainland. When President Eisenhower took office, one of his first acts was to strike out the second part of that order. He ordered that the "7th fleet no longer be employed to shield Communist China."

The 7th Fleet, at approximately the full strength of Korean War days, is still on station in the Far East, maintaining with part of its force patrol over the Korean Straits. The United States also has numerous planes within easy flying distance of Formosa.

Notes Discipline Badly Lacking In Education Today

THE DORSET, Neb. (AP)—Educator Dale D. Welch told the Nebraska Sandhills Cattle Assn. meeting he viewed "with alarm" what he termed the lack of discipline in modern education.

"We spend so much time trying to understand the rising generation, when above all they need firm discipline," Dr. Welch, president of Hastings (Neb.) College, said.

"Genuine teaching takes place when you have great teaching in an atmosphere conducive to learning," he said. "I find myself unable to believe that the best atmosphere is one in which the students vote each day on what they shall do on that particular day."

Talmadge Would Be Overmatched

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP)—When it comes time to step into the ring with the United States Supreme Court, Herman Talmadge, dark-haired governor of Georgia, may find he's overmatched.

He's itching, he says, for a knock-down-drag-out fight with the court which on Monday outlawed segregation in public schools. He says Georgia will defy the decision if it's the only Southern state which does.

Georgia defied the court in President Andrew Jackson's time. Jackson winked and let Georgia get away with it. No president nowadays is likely to follow suit.

Defiance would put Talmadge in the position of defying the nation and even undermining it since there can be no democratic society unless its members abide by the lawful processes, including the court, which they created.

Talmadge's determination to fight the court may be in direct proportion to the willingness of other Southern states to go along with him when the showdown comes. That's still months away.

On Monday the court said only segregation must end. It invited the attorneys general from the states with segregation to argue here in October on terms of a decree which will fix a deadline.

What the government can do to make Georgia comply, if Talmadge balks, would depend on how he tried to frustrate the court order. What the government might do is neither clear nor predictable. A few steps, however, appear obvious.

Talmadge could say the ruling did not apply to Georgia because Georgia was not one of the states involved in the cases on which the court ruled, although its ruling does apply to all states.

If Talmadge took this stand, nothing would happen until some Negro parents in Georgia asked a federal court to make Talmadge end segregation.

Told by a federal court, as he would be, that the Supreme Court decision applied to Georgia, Talmadge could be jailed for contempt if he then disobeyed. He could be jailed indefinitely, or until he ordered segregation in Georgia ended. This would take months.

If, then, individual school superintendents in Georgia refused to follow the decision, they could be brought into federal court on contempt charges. More time. Or Georgia's disobedience might take some other turn.

In President Jackson's day the federal government, because of treaties with the Cherokee Indians, claimed exclusive jurisdiction over territory they occupied. Then Georgia claimed it.

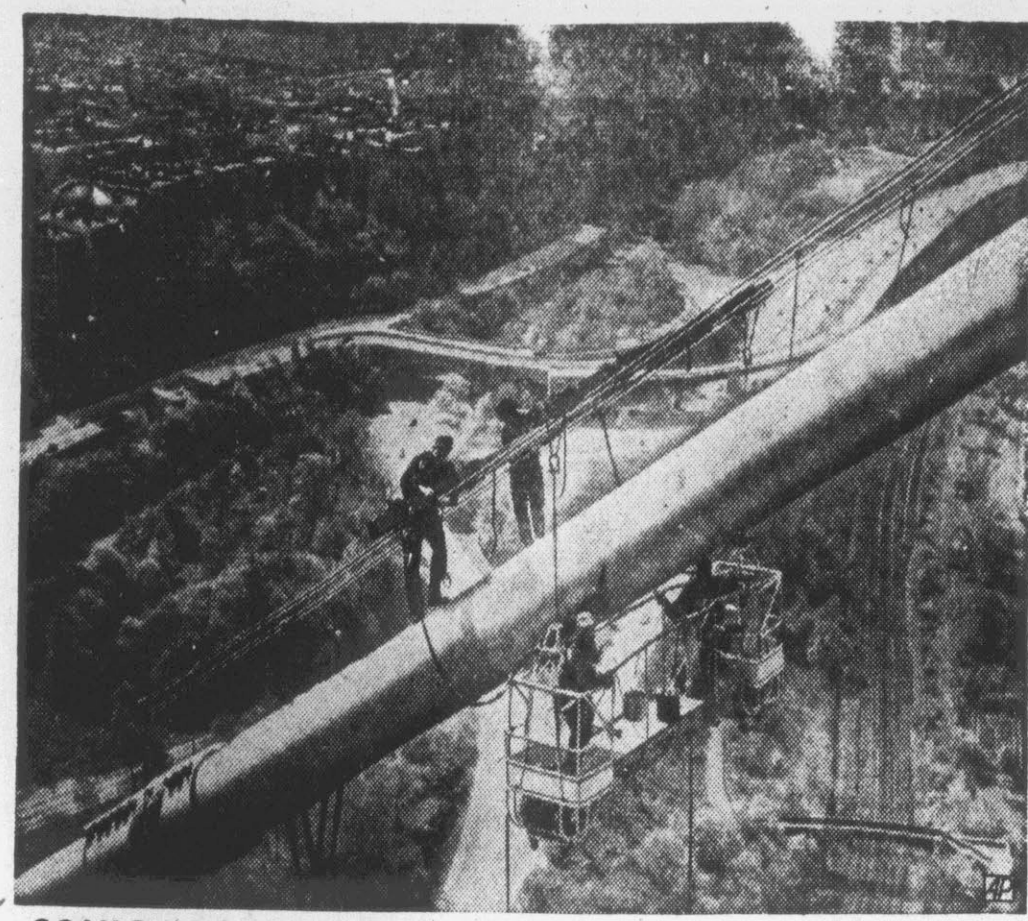

When a Cherokee Indian named Corn Tassel killed another Indian, inside Cherokee territory, a Georgia state court, claiming jurisdiction, tried him and sentenced him to be hanged.

On an appeal, the Supreme Court ordered the execution stopped and told Georgia to explain why it had infringed on Cherokee territory. The Georgia State Legislature ordered local officers to ignore the Supreme Court.

Corn Tassel was hanged. Then Georgia ordered two New England missionaries, living in the Indian territory, to swear allegiance to Georgia. The missionaries refused on the grounds they were in Cherokee territory, not in Georgia.

They were tried in a Georgia court and jailed. The Supreme Court ruled the federal government had jurisdiction and ordered the missionaries released. Georgia refused.

Jackson is reported to have stood back and said, "John Marshall (the chief justice) has made his decision; now let him enforce it."

Quiet Primary In Oregon Today

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—A lackluster primary election today in Oregon is expected to draw only about half of the state's voters into the booths.

There are only two contests for top offices to pull interest. Both involve Republicans. The Republicans have dominated elections here for years.

One is for the GOP nomination for governor. Earl Newberry, secretary of state, is challenging the incumbent, Paul Patterson, who took office 17 months ago when Douglas McKay resigned to become secretary of interior.

They ran a campaign without heat, although Newberry tried to liven things up the last two weeks by favoring federal construction of big power dams in this region.

The other contest finds Rep. Homer Angell facing two Republican challengers in the metropolitan Portland area. Some observers give 42-year-old Tom Lawson a chance to unseat Angell, who has served in the House since 1939. The third man in the race is A. W. Lafferty.

The Democrats also have three candidates in that congressional district, but there is expected to be no contest as Mrs. Edith Green, a proven vote getter, runs against two unknowns C. S. Johnston and H. H. Stallard.

Put Money They Found In Lottery And Hit Jackpot

NAPLES, Italy (AP)—Walking to work with three companions, Giacomo Pennarolo found a 100-lire note (15 cents) on the street.

"We will buy a lottery ticket with it," said Giacomo. His friends agreed. They decided on a number and left it up to Pennarolo to buy the ticket. Came the day of the lottery drawing. The number the four picked won 450,000 lire (more than $700)—a fortune for a Neapolitan workman.

The court heard the sad ending after Pennarolo's three companions charged him with pocketing the prize.

Pennarolo dolefully told the court he had decided not to push his luck any further. He never bought the winning lottery ticket.

"The fates have punished you enough," the judge said. "Case dismissed."

Kidnap Charges Confronting Man Following Arrest

CHICAGO (AP)—A 34-year-old man was summoned before a U. S. commissioner today on a charge of kidnapping a 7-year-old girl and her 3-year-old brother in Beloit, Wis., 10 days ago and taking them to Illinois.

Joseph McElroy, identified by the FBI as having a police record in Michigan and Indiana for molesting children and young girls, was seized by FBI agents and two Beloit policemen yesterday at a farm near Elwood, Ill., about 50 miles southwest of Chicago.

Guy Banister, special agent in charge of the Chicago FBI office, said McElroy would be arraigned on a charge of violating the Lindbergh law, which carries a maximum penalty of $50,000.

Banister said McElroy lured the girl and her brother into his pickup truck on May 11 by offering them chewing gum. The FBI agent said McElroy stopped the truck several times en route from Beloit to Rockford, Ill., and molested the girl sexually.

The children, who were not identified by Banister, were freed early the next morning in Rockford and were returned to their parents.

Beloit police said the girl had told them she and her brother were playing in a parking lot about half a block from their home when a man approached them and asked if they wanted to go for a ride around the block. The FBI said the children got into the truck and were driven to Rockford 20 miles away.

Banister said McElroy has admitted being in Beloit May 11 and seeing the children. However, the FBI agent said, he has denied kidnapping the children.

McElroy had obtained employment at a farm near Elwood on Wednesday. On the same day a police officer at Plainfield, near Elwood, telephoned the FBI in Chicago to report seeing a truck which fitted the description of the one driven by the kidnapper at Beloit.

Nobody Seems To Like Armadillos

RIVERHEAD, N. Y. (AP)—Sidney Schwartz bought two armadillos from Comfort, Tex., in order to write a thesis on their birth habits for a New York University doctorate.

The armadillos, both females, gave birth to seven offspring, which makes nine armadillos. Armadillos sleep during the daytime and like to whoop it up at night. And they eat like mad.

For the sake of quiet and economy, Schwartz tried to get rid of at least the mama armadillos. But nobody seems to want them, including zoos and animal dealers. "I can't turn them loose, that would be cruel," Schwartz said yesterday. "There must be somebody who likes armadillos."

There are almost 95 million cattle on U.S. farms, the result of five consecutive years of increase. The compound eyes of some fossil trilobites had as many as 15,000 lenses.

JET AND ROCKET SHIPS top them all for high flying speeds—and searing engine temperatures!

Zooming through the air at speeds far faster than sound, their engines generate heat that would soften any ordinary steel.

Special alloy steels to withstand the terrific heat and pressure of the jet powered engines are made by adding such alloying metals as chromium, tungsten and vanadium. Not only in aviation but in almost every field alloy steels are on the job.

Our automobiles and ships are safer and stronger because of the alloy steels used in them. The gleaming, streamlined trains in which we ride get their combination of beauty, strength and lightness from steel made tough and stainless by the addition of chromium.

Furnishing steel makers with alloys essential to the manufacture of special steels is but one of the important jobs of the people of Union Carbide. They also provide the giant carbon and graphite electrodes for the electric arc furnaces which are used to make many of these fine steels.

Noted Religious Leader Talks At College Sunday

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, editor of the Christian Herald, pastor of the Baptist Temple and Chaplain of the Chapel of the Four Chaplains in Philadelphia, will preach the commencement sermon at East Carolina College Sunday. His topic will be "What Price Freedom Now?"

The service will take place at 11 a.m. in the Wright building. The public is invited to be present to hear the distinguished minister.

Dr. Poling was served as pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church in New York, and as a president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor and of the World's Christian Endeavor Union.

In addition to his fame as a religious leader, he is noted as an editor, novelist, radio speaker, and leader in civic movements. He is the author of twenty-three books, and his syndicated column "Americans All" appears in leading daily journals of the country.

"Clergymen Are Citizens, Too!" an article by Dr. Poling in the April 24 issue of the "Saturday Evening Post" discusses one of today's important problems. Communist aims as regards the church. It has caused widespread discussion, and received comment in the May 1 issue from noted religious leaders in this country.

Police Distribute Safety Booklets To City Pupils

Greenville police are distributing booklets to students in the local city schools in an effort to promote safety.

The booklet, entitled "Play Safe," is sponsored by the Greenville Automotive Association. It points out that America had 1,070,524 war casualties and 3,994,000 traffic casualties during World War II.

"Many a career has been cut short by injuries or by accidental death," the booklet says. "Fortunately, almost all accidents can be prevented. They don't just happen, there are reasons for them."

The booklet states that safety as well as all other important problems can be solved by education.

"Thus safety education should be entered into the class-room from the first grade until the day of graduation, it says.

The pamphlet notes that nearly 9,000,000 persons a year are injured in accidents at an annual cost of about $3,000,000,000.

Concerning the problem of pedestrian safety the booklet states: "The problem of the pedestrian in traffic has always been a serious one, but today it is acute. With more and faster cars appearing, pedestrians must adjust themselves to greater speeding safety principles."

The booklet lists the following rules for pedestrian safety:

A. Always cross at street in marked crosswalks or at intersections in line with side walks.

I. Walk only with the signal light or at the direction of a police officer or school patrol.

2. Before leaving the curb, stop and look both ways to be sure traffic is clear.

3. Walk fast, don't run—and be alert for cars which may suddenly turn into the street. Be especially careful of footing if the pavement is slippery or uneven.

4. Walk directly across the street—do not loiter in the middle, talking, etc.

B. Carry an umbrella in such a way as to have a clear view; keep alert and aware of traffic.

C. Always get into or out of a car on the curb side.

D. When boarding a bus or street car wait on the curb or in the safety zone for it to stop. When you must walk through traffic to get to the safety island, move cautiously.

E. When alighting from a street-car walk in the safety zone to the crosswalk and then directly to the curb. If crossing to the opposite side of the street wait until the vehicle has moved on; never dash around behind or in front of it and risk being caught in the flow of traffic.

F. At night cross where the lights are bright and visibility is good.

G. Always stand on the curb, not in the street, while waiting to cross. Student patrols, too, should always stand on the curb.

H. When walking along a road where there is no sidewalk, walk on the left side, facing oncoming traffic.

I. At night, wear or carry something white or light in color, or carry a light, so that the motorists' attention will be attracted to you.

J. Never play in streets or roadways, nor turn suddenly into the street after a ball, pet, etc.

K. Make use of subways or elevated crossings safety islands and other safeguards which are provided.

L. Be self-reliant and confident, not hesitant if you are within your rights and are observing safety laws.

M. Be just as alert and careful when walking in a group as when alone, and do not depend on others to watch out for your safety.

Falls

The booklet notes that falls have always been a leading cause of accidental deaths, and today are out-ranked only by motor vehicle accidents.

"Nearly one-fifth of all accidental deaths actually are due to falls," the safety pamphlet says. "The number of non-fatal injuries is estimated at more than a million."

The booklet particularly urges safety practices on school buses.

"Although school bus accidents occur relatively infrequently, each such accident is one too many," it says. "Because of the potential dangers to which school children are exposed on the way to and from school, every precaution must be taken to safeguard them."

The booklet says that all children should be taught to practice the rules of safe conduct on the school buses.

Bicycles

Concerning bicycle riding the booklet says that two-thirds of the injured bicycle riders are between the ages of 5 and 14.

The safety booklet concludes with the following safety rules:

1. Look both ways before crossing street or highway.

2. Obey traffic lights at all times.

3. Walk, do not run when crossing the street.

4. Walk on the left side of the highway facing oncoming traffic.

5. Do not play in the streets.

6. Do not step on to the road from behind or in front of parked cars.

7. Never chase a ball on to the road without first seeing that it is safe.

8. Be extra careful when it is dark, in bad weather or on slippery streets.

9. Watch out for vehicles making turns at intersections.

10. Never hitch on to the rear of a moving vehicle.

The booklet is being distributed to the school students along with a safety talk which city police are giving at each school.

The talks are being made by Sergeant John Piver and Patrolman V. C. Ackert with the cooperation of the State Highway Patrol.

Gets The News, And It Was Bad

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — Tony Stein, a reporter-photographer for the Lynchburg Daily Advance, called fire division headquarters here yesterday to get some information on a fire from which he had just returned.

The information he got, however, was about another fire—firemen told him his car was burning.

Stein raced downstairs to find it was all too true. A passer-by had noticed the flames a few minutes after Stein had returned to the office and had called firemen. The car was damaged severely.

Heavy Voting In Korea Indicated

SEOUL (AP) — Unofficial returns from almost 90 per cent of South Korea's 203 Assembly districts indicated today that President Syngman Rhee's Liberal party won a majority of the one-house legislature in yesterday's election.

Thirty-five unreported districts were in rural areas where Rhee's candidates were strongest.

Unofficial returns give the Liberals 88 of the 203 seats with Independent candidates getting 64, Democratic Nationalists 14 and Korean Nationalists 2.

There were predictions that final returns would give the Liberals their goal of 110 seats or 8 more than a majority.

The victory was at least partially a personal one for Rhee. His party did not control the last Assembly and he appealed to the people for a working majority in the next house.

Apparently the estimated eight million voters—about 90 per cent of the electorate—gave him what he asked. And control of the Assembly could lead to an extended term as president for Rhee. Only the Assembly can change a constitutional clause ending his term in 1956.

Family Refuses Believe Charges

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The family of Pvt. James Davis refuses to believe that he would ask for political asylum in Communist Czechoslovakia.

The Army yesterday acknowledged officially Prague radio reports that the 32-year-old Davis had fled behind the Iron Curtain.

"Jimmy was a real American boy," said Davis' father, James F. Davis Sr., a paperhanger and painter. "I'm sure this wasn't of his own volition."

The father said every effort will be made to convince Davis he should return to his outfit.

highly responsible party office. One long time observer of political doings reminded a group in the hotel lobby that the 222 men and women on the committee have as much power to nominate candidates as do the million or more registered Democratic voters.

So it was that instead of shaking a sack to find names to fill up the committee list, as has been the case sometimes in the past, there was active campaigning for the assignments. The situation confronting the state-wide committee serves also to focus attention on the congressional, judicial, solicitorial and state senatorial district committees. These groups may be called upon any time to fill vacancies on the Democratic ballots in their balliwicks.

Party leaders have awakened in previous years to realize that they had permitted these committees to be filled with the "wrong" kind of people, just because the positions were used to save hurt feelings or pacify recalcitrant party workers. The committees got much more careful screening this time.

OFFICERS — Besides filling the vacancies on the party ticket the State committee also names the State chairman. That post has been held by Everett Jordan for the past five years and there has been no pre-convention suggestion of a change this year.

New York State had 168,442 people over 65 years old in 1950 and has an estimated 1,450,000 today.

Can the St. Louis Cardinals keep up their tremendous hitting long enough for Eddie Stanky to find out if he finally has solved his pitching problems?

If they can, the skin-tight National League pennant race may soon start coming apart at the seams. The Cardinals arrived home from the East today, a game and a half in front of the nearest of the closely bunched contenders. On the road they won 9 of 14 games, including a 17-4 runaway at Pittsburgh last night.

Of even more importance to the Cards was the blossoming of Tom Poholsky as a starting pitcher. The big right-hander was used twice on the trip. He lost a 1-0 heartbreaker in Brooklyn, where he allowed only three hits. And he went the distance again last night against the last-place Pirates.

At one time or another everybody except Raschi, the $75,000 acquisition from the New York Yankees, has been blasted. Seven times the Cardinals' rivals have scored 10 or more runs.

No wonder Poholsky fresh from two years in the Army, looks good. While the pitching has been shaky, the hitting has been amazing. The team batting average is .285 and five of the regulars are over .300, topped by Ray Jablonski at .374 and Stan Musial at .367. Even Poholsky got into the hitting act last night. He singled three times in three official times at bat, sacrificed once and drove in four runs. Musial drove in four with his 13th home run and a triple.

The Cardinals scored six runs in the first inning, one in the fourth seven in the seventh and three in the eighth for their highest total of the season. Even though they lead the league by a game and a half, the Cardinals are all even in the "games lost" column with the seventh-place Chicago Cubs. The Cubs have lost 14 of 28, the Cardinals 14 of 33.

Jammed in between are Brooklyn and Philadelphia, tied for second; Milwaukee in fourth; New York, fifth; and Cincinnati, sixth. No other games were played in the majors yesterday. The Giants were scheduled in Philadelphia but were rained out.

The Friday action, as usual is almost entirely at night. The only day game matches Milwaukee against the Cubs in Chicago. St. Louis entertains Cincinnati, New York is at Philadelphia, and the Pirates limp into Brooklyn.

In the American League the Yankees play their first home night game, with Boston furnishing the opposition. Baltimore goes to Cleveland Chicago to Detroit and Philadelphia to Washington.

Joey's Reaction Is Key To Fight

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP)—Joey Giardello's reaction to the Bobo Olson-Rocky Castellani title fight announcement is the key to his midweight bout with Pierre Langlois tonight at Madison Square Garden.

If Giardello, the No. 1 contender, decides to take out his disappointment on Langlois, the Frenchman could be his fourth straight knockout victim. If Joey still is deeply disturbed about being bypassed by the Champ he may not be in the mood for a top effort.

Although Giardello has been promised an October shot at the Champ, there are two big "ifs": 1. Olson must not lose to Castellani; 2. Giardello must not lose to anybody.

Giardello is a solid 1 to 5 favorite in the 10-round match, scheduled for 10 p.m. EDT with network radio (ABC) and television (NBC). As in all New York State bouts the decision will be on a round basis with a supplementary point system. Two judges and a referee will do the scoring.

After the success of underdogs Jacques Royer (5 to 1) last Friday and Hoacine Khalif (3 to 1) Monday night against Feather Champ Sandy Saddler, there is no rush to jump on any anti-French bandwagon. Jean Bretonnel's stable has put over two tremendous upsets and has its best fighter going tonight.

Despite the recent French success, many boxing men think the 29-year-old Langlois is about ready to be knocked out. He has been fighting often against rugged opponents. In 1954 he has been beaten by Gil Turner and Carmen Basilio, a welter and won over Pedro Gonzalez. His career record, dating back to 1947 is 62-15-5 for 82 fights.

Giardello has been a hot fighter for about a year, moving up through the ranks and suddenly branching out as a puncher. Only 14 opponents failed to go the route in 61 fights until he stopped Garth Panier, Phil Cartier and Willie Troy in his last three starts. The 23-year-old Philadelphia boxer has a 49-10-5 record for 64 bouts.

Dodgertown Had One Enthusiast

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP)—When Tommy Holmes, Elmira's new manager in the Eastern League, assembled his squad for its first work-out his first impression of Dodgertown was: "This camp certainly is a credit to baseball."

Holmes has been to spring training with the Yankees, Boston Braves and Milwaukee Braves but he never saw anything like this camp where the Brooklyn Dodgers train each spring.

When the Dodgers left on their exhibition tour, Dodgertown was turned over to Brooklyn's many farm teams.

Big Prize Lures Racers To '500'

By DALE BURGESS

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—The glitter of a quarter-million-dollar purse and a record-cracking pace in last weekend's trials will shoot a double stimulant into about 40 drivers Saturday and Sunday in final 10-mile time trials for the 500-mile auto race May 31.

It could be dangerous on a track that has killed 44 people. Sixteen drivers qualified last weekend at an average speed of 138.369 miles an hour, almost 2 miles faster than last year's field. Only 17 starting spots remain for the 47 unqualified cars in the speed way garages.

After the 33-car lineup is filled, a driver still can squeeze in by qualifying faster than the slowest car in the field, which then is eliminated. Such "bumping" probably will be the main order of business Sunday. The new 10-mile record of 141,033 m.p.h. set last Saturday by Jack McGrath of South Pasadena, Calif., may be challenged by two or three drivers, although most of them figure 137 will be good enough.

If their cars will stand the pace, record runs are possible by Bill Vukovich of Fresno, Calif., last year's winner, Johnnie Parsons of Van Nuys, Calif., the 1950 winner, and Jim Rathmann of Miami, who finished second in 1952.

The retirement this week of Lee Wallard, the 1951 winner, eliminated the possibility that five former winners might make the starting field. Tro, Ruttman, the 1952 winner, qualified last weekend, and Bill Holland, the '49 winner, probably will try Saturday.

Veteran "500" drivers who still have to win starting positions include Paul Russo, Tony Bettenhausen, Budget Ward, George Connor, Henry Banks, Walt Faulner, and Duke Dinsmore.

Attendance Rises For Major Loops Thanks To Orioles

NEW YORK (AP)—Major league baseball attendance, after hitting the skids the past few years, is taking a turn for the better this season.

An Associated Press survey disclosed today that the 1954 turnstile count is up more than 400,000 over last season with nine clubs benefiting.

Major league teams have played before an over-all total of 3,011,324 fans as compared to 2,589,235 in a like number of home games a year ago.

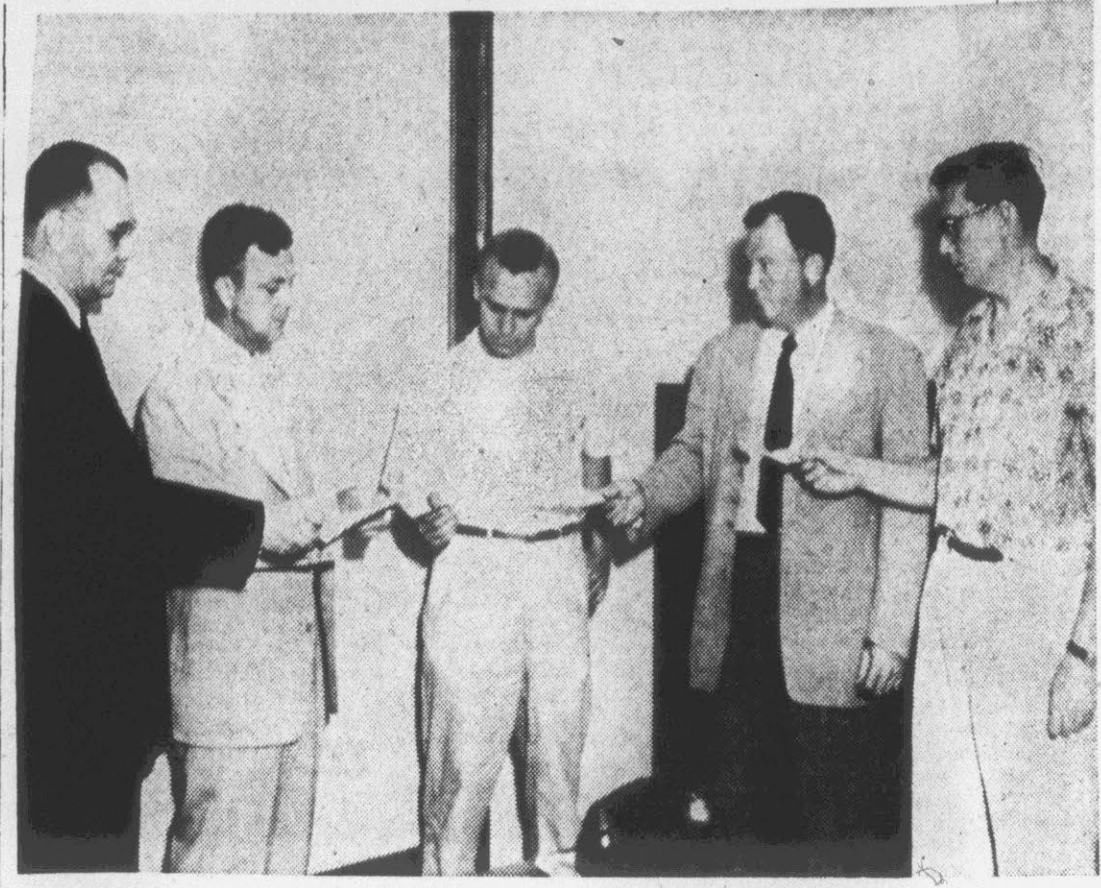

Thanks to its new Baltimore entry, which already has surpassed the total paid admissions for the St. Louis Browns in 1953, the American League shows a gain of more than 350,000. The Orioles, with a draw of 318,679 at home, are running 216,524 customers ahead of the defunct Browns.

The National League's gain is negligible—57,439—but five of its teams are on the upgrade. They are St. Louis, 54,475; Brooklyn, 45,210; New York, 25,213; Cincinnati, 7,327 and Chicago 2,696.

Surprisingly, Milwaukee, which established a National League attendance record last season, is one of the three senior loop clubs running behind its 1953 figures. The Braves show a deficit of 11,217. The Phillies and Pirates also are under their '53 gate totals.

The spirited play of the Detroit Tigers is reflected in an almost 150,000 improvement in attendance over last season. Chicago (45,022) and Philadelphia (17,300) also have attracted more American League fans at home.

The Red Sox, Indians, Senators and Yankees all are trailing, with the Yankees the biggest losers, 31,872.

Toski Takes Lead In Eastern Open

BALTIMORE (AP)—Bob Toski, a little shaver from Livingston N.J., was the biggest target of a strong pursuing field today as the $20,000 Eastern Open Tournament went into the second round at muggy Mt. Pleasant golf course here.

The 127-pound Toski admitted he surprised even himself by clipping 6 strokes off par 72 during an abnormally cold, steady rain over the 6,895-yard layout.

His sparkling 66 was good enough for a 2-stroke lead over handsome Jack Burke Jr., the Texas registered from Kaimessa Lake, N. Y. Burke playing halless and frequently disdaining the shelter of an umbrella held by his caddy, posted his 68 earlier in the day, when the rain was even heavier.

Tied for third at 70 were Peter Thomson of Melbourne, Australia; Jim Thomas of Briarcliff, N. Y.; and little-known Mike Fitchick of Yonkers, N. Y.

The only other par breakers in the scheduled field of 115 were Ed Oliver, Lemont, Ill.; Bob Du-den Portland, Ore.; and two previous Eastern Open winners—Lloyd Mangrum, Niles, Ill., and Cary Middlecoff, Kiamasha Lake. All were grouped at 71.

Dick Mayer, the defending champion from St. Petersburg, Fla., was 1 under at the turn but lost it back coming home, giving him a 72 along with seven others.

Burns Favored

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Defending Champion Margie Burns of Greensboro was favored to retain her title here today in the Charlotte Country Club's eleventh annual women's invitational golf tournament.

Miss Burns faces Mrs. Harold Stone of Ware Shoals, S. C., who yesterday was 1-up victor over Mrs. Agnes M. Cooke of Charlotte.

Mrs. Billie Prather Miller of Mount Airy, lost 6-4, to Miss Burns in the other semifinal match.

Ring Book Lists 4,000 Fighters

NEW YORK (AP)—The "Ring Record Book and Boxing Encyclopedia" contains the records of almost 4,000 fighters, says its editor, Nat Fleischer. The first section of the book gives seating capacities of indoor and outdoor arenas, biographical sketches of outstanding fighters, birthplaces of championing fatalities and other information.

The second section is devoted to records of world and American champions. The book contains 860 pages. It was turned out by a staff of five after checking boxing reports from all over the world.

Library's Books Cover Fishing

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—A fishing enthusiast who likes to read about fishing would do well to keep away from Harvard University's great Widener library. If he tried to read Harvard's 21,800-plus books about fishing, he'd have no time to fish.

Harvard's books and articles range from a "Treatise on Fishing with an Angle," written in 1496, to advice on catching whales. It has various first editions of Isaac Walton's famous work, "The Compleat Angler."

Thousands of illustrations, ranging from engravings and Chinese paintings to modern photographs, show the arts of angling, including the uses of baits and flies.

Perhaps no fishing enthusiast ever collected more books on fishing than Daniel Butler Peering of Providence, R.I. His 11,500 volumes were the biggest contribution to the Harvard collection.

Plenty Of Curves

LOS ANGELES (AP)—There were curves aplenty in the second annual cheesecake classic baseball game at the University of Southern California.

Pi Beta Phi's smooth sockers were pretty flashy in green jersey blouses, white shorts and green trim. The Delta Gammas wore blue and gold. The Pi Phi won the five-inning game 6-4.

Three local tobacco companies and the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade each contributed $200 yesterday for the purpose of sponsoring a Negro Little League in the City of Greenville.

Representatives of the four concerns presented Greenville Recreation Director Warren Carroll with the $800 yesterday afternoon at City Hall so uniforms and equipment could be purchased for the Negro league, which will be known as the Coastal Little League.

Person-Garrett Company will sponsor a team called the Person-Garrett "Tigers," E. B. Ficklen Tobacco Company will sponsor the Ficklen "Giants" the Greenville Tobacco Company the Greenville "Braves" and the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade the Board of Trade "Dodgers."

In sponsoring these teams the four companies will give $50 next year and $50 year after next for equipment and uniforms that need replacing.

Carroll reports that play in Coastal Little League will begin June 3. Games will be played Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday beginning at 6:45 p.m. at South Greenville Park.

"Due to a National ruling," Carroll added, "the league will be operating on a limited franchise this year, making tournament play ineligible; however, next year the league may participate in a tournament."

Representatives of the tobacco companies stated yesterday they are giving this money because such large percentage of the Negro population here are employees of the tobacco companies.

Micaiah Withstands False Prophets ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—I King 22:1-40.

Syria had taken possession of the Israelish city of Ramoth-gilead. When King Jehoshaphat of Judah visited King Ahab of Israel, Ahab asked him if he would join in battle with him to recover it.

Jehoshaphat said, "Enquire, I pray thee, at the word of the Lord." Ahab gathered 400 men, asking them, "Shall I go to battle?" All said the Lord would be on the side of the king.

Jehoshaphat was not satisfied and called for a prophet of God. Ahab hated the prophet Micaiah but sent for him. Micaiah prophesied that Israel would be scattered as sheep having no shepherd.

During the battle Ahab was killed by an arrow through joints in his armor. He was propped up in his chariot so the enemy would not know he was dead. MEMORY VERSE—I Kings 22:14.

Micaiah Withstands False Prophets

THE MAN OF GOD SPEAKS BOLDLY AGAINST WAR

Scripture—I Kings 22:1-40.

BY NEWMAN CAMPBELL. IF IN A GROUP of people one man voted against a proposition of which 400 approved, we might be tempted to think that the one dissenting voice was that of a crank or chronic fault finder. We might be right in thinking so, and then again events might prove that he was right and the 400 wrong. It is easy to vote with the majority, without thinking seriously of the consequences of the action to be taken.

In our lesson one man did stand bravely forth and opposed the wishes of his king and the acceptance of such wish by 400 thoughtless and subservient men whose only aspiration was to please this powerful king, regardless of circumstances.

The events of the lesson took place over 100 years after the division of the kingdom. Ahab reigned over Israel and Jehoshaphat over Judah. Jehoshaphat went to pay a visit to Ahab. Now there had been peace between the kingdoms of Syria and Israel for three years, but the Syrians were threatening Israel, and had indeed taken the city Ramoth-Gilead (thought now to have been the present Mizpah). Ahab asked Jehoshaphat to join with him in a war against Syria to try to recapture the town.

Jehoshaphat replied: "I am as thou art, my people as thy people, the hand of the king." Ahab was clever enough to realize that Micaiah was not speaking the truth, and said to him: "How many times shall I adjure thee that thou tell me nothing but that which is true in the name of the Lord?"

Then Micaiah spoke as the Lord had told him: "I saw all Israel scattered upon the hills, as sheep that have not a shepherd, and the Lord said, These have no master; let them return every man to his house in peace."

Ahab turned to Jehoshaphat, saying, "Did I not tell thee that he would prophesy no good concerning me, but evil?"

Then Micaiah told the kings that he had had a vision of God and that the Lord had asked who should persuade Ahab to go to war with Syria to his destruction, and a spirit stood forth and said he would, and it was this spirit who had put false words into the mouths of these false prophets.

For these words Ahab had Micaiah put into prison "until I come in peace." But Micaiah replied, "If thou return at all in peace, the Lord hath not spoken by me."

Ahab, however, was really frightened by Micaiah's words, so much so that he went into battle disguised, leaving Jehoshaphat to wear the king's robes. Ahab was hoping, no doubt that the Syrians

"As the Lord liveth, what the Lord saith unto me, that will I speak."—I Kings 22:14.

my horses as thy horses." However, Jehoshaphat, a devout man, wanted God's approval of the war.

Ahab, however, called about 400 so-called prophets together, asked them about the matter, and they said, with one voice, "Go up; for the Lord shall deliver it into the hand of the king."

Jehoshaphat was not satisfied. He seems to have suspected that these 400 men were not true prophets of Jehovah, but mere hangers-on at the court who wanted to give Ahab anything the king desired. So Jehoshaphat said: "Is there not here a prophet of the Lord besides, that we might enquire of him?"

Ahab admitted that there was such a man and his name was Micaiah, but he hated him for he never prophesied any good for the king. However, he sent for Micaiah, and the two kings sat each on his throne, and we imagine the 400 false prophets stood about to see what Micaiah had to say, and the prophet came before them. Micaiah had told the messenger sent for him, "As the Lord liveth, what the Lord saith to me that will I speak."

Ahab asked, "Micaiah, shall we go against Ramoth-Gilead to battle, or shall we forbear?" Micaiah said, "Go, and prosper; for the Lord shall deliver it into the hand of the king."

Joan Foster, Bride

CHAPTER TWENTY THREE
NOTHING happened out of the ordinary until Pamela called up from New York toward the end of August and invited the bride and groom to come in and have dinner with her and Tom. "We're here for the night on our way to Washington," she said.

"Oh, Pam, we'd love to! Only—I don't know. Where did you mean to eat? We hardly have two nickels to rub together these days. We might be able to manage the Automat—"

"You didn't rightly hear me, Joan. This isn't Dutch. This is a bona fide invitation to you to be our guests."

"Oh, yes. We're celebrating. We want you to celebrate with us."

"Celebrate what? What's going on?"

"We'll tell you when you come in. Put on your glad rags now, Joan, because we're going to have ourselves a time. Tomorrow night at six, then. We'll meet here in our hotel room. Right?"

"Right!"

It was good to leave work and sticky rags and wads of steel wool and crumpled sandpaper and dirty shorts. Joan dressed in a sheer black that had an accordion pleated skirt and a brief bolero jacket. Her pumps were black, too, and she carried a small black handbag. But on her bronze gold hair she perched a tiny white hat with a flying half veil and on one shoulder she pinned the fragrant white gardenias that Todd brought home to her.

He surveyed her with pride and pleasure as she turned before him as they were ready to start.

"All I can say is that matrimony becomes you Mrs. Hunter."

They drove the old jalopy to the George Washington bridge where they parked it. From here it was easy to catch a bus across the river and the subway downtown.

What an evening! Nothing spectacular, as Joan remarked afterward. Just nice and completely restful and a wonderful change for Joan, who, except for the day with Betty and the day at Jones beach, had not been out of Mapleton since the return from her wedding trip. She had been given relief from her hot little apartment and hotter kitchen by invitations to her mother's screened verandah for dinners now and then, or to the big cool manse dining room for Sunday night suppers. And sometimes, when the mosquitoes weren't too bad, she and Todd had eaten out-of-doors on the back lawn. But this was the first "dress-up party," since their marriage.

They met Pamela and Tom at their hotel and from there the four of them went to a roof garden where there was a lovely breeze, delicious dinner, a good floor show and a smooth orchestra for dancing.

"It's been ages since we've done anything as frivolous as this," Joan said to Pamela. "It's the first time since we were all in Paris together, I guess?"

"Really?"

"But now tell us!" Joan leaned forward across the table, looking eagerly from Pamela's face to Tom's.

"What's this all about? You've dodged as long as you're going to be allowed to. Just what are you two celebrating? It's not your wedding anniversary. That's in April. Come! Give!"

"Well—" Pam began and then turned to Tom. "You'd better do the talking, Tom. It's your business, not mine."

Tom's square face above his broad shoulders took on an expression of pleased triumph.

"What we're celebrating is the fact that I've got a job. At least," he corrected himself, "I'm on the track of one and I think it's in the bag."

"Oh, Tom! You know it is!"

"No, I don't know yet, Pam. Not for certain." He faced Todd. "I'm—I suppose you might call it on probation for a few months. At the end of that time I'll be sure one way or the other."

"What's the job?" Todd asked. "It's down in Washington."

"Oh!"

There was a short waiting silence. Then Todd said, "I hear there are quite a number of opportunities down there—if you have the right connections," he added, grinning.

"Connections have nothing to do with this."

"No? Not politics, then?"

"Heavens, no!"

"I bet it's the diplomatic service!" Joan exclaimed. "Are we supposed to guess, Tom?"

"Oh, tell them Tom!" Pamela said.

Tom gave them all that pleased smile again. Then he said, "Well, you know, I wasn't sure just what I wanted to do when I got back here from Europe. I felt completely out of touch with things after two years abroad. All I knew was what I didn't want. Not any more study. Not any more degrees. And not business, either. I wasn't sure about teaching. It seemed the only possibility for a while but I wasn't too keen. And after you told me of your experiences, Todd, I didn't push it too hard."

He paused.

"I did give the teachers' agencies a brief twirl, though, just to leave no stone unturned. But I was too late. Besides they told me art teachers come a dime a dozen and that's all I could offer, since I'm not a fulfilled architect by any stretch of the imagination. I was way out on a limb, all right. Not that there was anything pushing me too hard. Pam's folks have been fine. But a man can't live on charity forever."

"Not charity, love," Pam told him.

"Call it what you will. There comes an end. So through a friend I heard about this opportunity in the State department in Washington. I was given to understand that my travel abroad was the kind of background that was wanted—that and the fact that I had a college degree plus my Master's and that I had learned to speak French quite decently and a little German. The more facility you have for languages, the better I gather. Finally, I am an American citizen, born here." He stopped.

"Have you had an interview yet?" Todd asked.

Tom nodded. "Several. And a battery of tests, too. Then I waited. I waited three weeks and months. But finally my call came through."

Joan could not restrain herself any longer. "But what is it? What will you actually do?"

"I don't know, Jo. And I won't know till I'm really in there. Maybe I'll just be a translator, at first. I hope, though, I'll eventually be connected with foreign affairs. The thing is, the FBI has to investigate me before I'm allowed to do any real work—which is all to the good, I think. Everybody ought to be investigated who works for Uncle Sam. Meanwhile during that waiting, I'm to go through a training period. When everything's checked and okayed, then I can be sure I'm in."

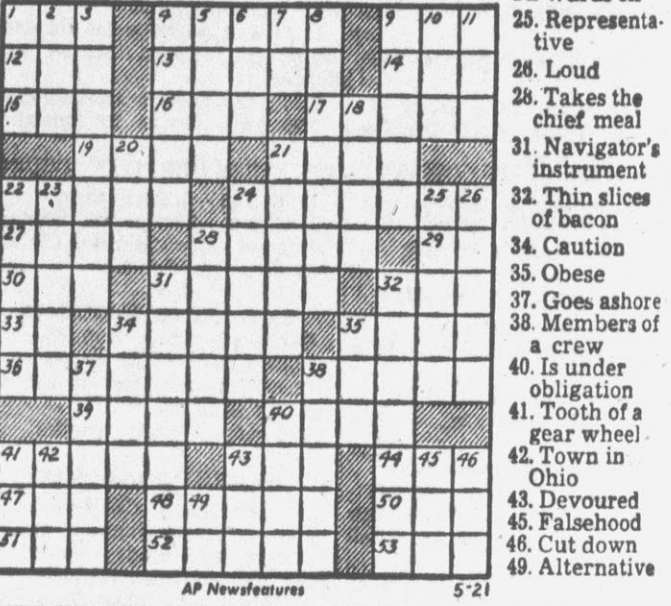

"He's in, all right," Pam said confidently. "That's why we're celebrating. If we had a murky past or any questionable affiliations, we might not be so sure."

We're absolutely in the clear, though, so—"She smiled around at them all. "Here's to us!"

"You bet!" Todd said. "It certainly sounds good."

"I think it's going to be just my meat," Tom said. "There's a real possibility that I may get overseas again in that department, too. If I do—" He looked at Pamela. "I guess we can take it, can't we, Pam?"

"I should say so! It's a funny thing," Pam turned to Joan. "We were so glad to get back here—but now we're all ready to go over again."

"You'd certainly be lucky," Joan nodded at both of them. "Going to Europe once more is a little dream we cuddle back in our subconscious, isn't it, Todd? But imagine if we really could!"

"I'm trying to," he said slowly. "And that isn't all or even the best of it." Pam's face was alight.

"There's the pay. It's better than anything Tom could expect in either teaching or the business world. It's—well shall I call it adequate, Tom?"

"That covers it. At least Pam won't have to be anybody's secretary, unless she gets bored with housework and wants to. Yes, say my salary was completely adequate. Completely respectable."

"Respectable," Todd repeated. Then he clapped a hand on Tom's shoulder. "Congratulations, old man. I'm certainly glad for you. It all sounds swell."

"We're going down to hunt for an apartment tomorrow," Pam said. "Don't forget to send us a card from the capital!"

All the way home that night Todd was very quiet and when Joan asked him what he was thinking about, he replied briefly, "Tom's respectable salary."

Was he a trifle bitter? Joan was not sure. Anyway, what could she answer to that?

DES MOINES (AP)—For the past four years, a rare albino robin has spent the spring and summer months in the same residential neighborhood of Des Moines. Wild life experts say it is unusual for an albino wild bird to survive for long as its white coloring makes it easy prey for natural enemies.

Junior Council Opposes Recreation Limitation

Greenville's 'Junior City Council' voted yesterday to ask Pitt County's North Carolina Legislators to rescind the North Carolina Public Law which sets Greenville Recreation Commission budget at a $30,000 maximum.

This 'Junior City Council,' who are Greenville High School students, met with the City Council yesterday afternoon in a special call meeting.

These young men, members of Greenville High School's Student Council, took over the city government for a day yesterday. Billy Bost acted as mayor, Jimmy Phelps as chief manager, Bob Langston as chief of police, Joe Stell as city clerk, Dixie Hobgood as street superintendent, and Cleidith Oakley as the fire chief.

After Mayor W. L. Whedbee turned the city over to the students yesterday the 'Junior City Council' discussed at length the maximum this city could turn over to the Recreation Department.

Mayor Whedbee told the group that Greenville was limited in the amount it could turn over to the Recreation Commission by a North Carolina Public Law, and that if this city ever wanted to turn over more money to the Recreation Commission this law would either have to be rescinded or amended.

It was brought out at the meeting that Greenville is the only city in North Carolina limited by a North Carolina Public Law in how much it could turn over to the Recreation Department.

The students, after much discussion on the matter, voted to ask the senator and representatives to try to get this law rescinded in the event more money was ever needed.

Educational TV To Be Discussed

Television and its place in modern education will be discussed and demonstrated at East Carolina College's first annual television conference, scheduled for June 16-17. Station WNCN-TV of Greenville is co-sponsor of the event.

Eck Wall, program director of WNCN, and Dr. E.D. Johnson, associate librarian and chairman of the television committee at East Carolina, are directors of the conference. Ralph Burgin, TV program director of North Carolina State College, Raleigh, will act as consultant during the two-day session.

Various faculty members at East Carolina and staff members at the local television station will serve as instructors and lecturers.

The purpose of the conference, Dr. Johnson states, is "to acquaint teachers with the possibilities of using television as a supplementary teaching aid."

The conference will be offered on a non-credit basis. For those participating there will be no cost except for room and meals, both of which will be available at the college.

SUSPECT JAILED

GOLDSBORO, N. C. (AP)—A teen-age Negro is being held on an open charge in Johnson County's Smithfield jail after a Drummersville Community housewife reported an assailant had fired a rifle at her while she fled from him.

Dr. Ross, son of Mrs. Alfred F. Kennedy Jr. and the late Ledyard Ross Sr., is a graduate of Greenville High School.

He also graduated from Hardberger Business School, East Carolina College and Northwestern University of Chicago, Ill.

At Northwestern he was a member of the Xi Psi Phi fraternity, and during his senior he was vice-president of that organization.

No Jaycee Endorsement, But Getting Out Voters

Junior Chamber of Commerce President Frank Dail emphasized last night that, while the Jaycees had agreed to sponsor a get-out-the-vote campaign for the swimming pool bond election, they had not taken a stand either for or against the bond issue.

"We are not saying we are for or against the bond issue," Dail said last week was read. "We are just after the motion which was passed sponsoring the get-out-the-vote campaign."

The Jaycees also voted for J. B. Kittrell Jr. to fill the unexpired term of Frank Dail on the Board of Directors. The election of Dail as president of the club left a vacancy on the board.

It was announced that Greenville had asked for the quarterly board meeting for the District Board of Directors. The exact date has not been set.

Members were given new handbooks at last night's meeting. The handbooks contain names of members, new committees and the by-laws of the club.

Charles Hudson reported on the news letter and asked for advertising renewals for the Jaycee publication.

J. B. Smith reported on the state meet which was held in Raleigh recently.

The members present also passed a motion that the Jaycee creed be read at the conclusion of each meeting.

Attendance prize was won by Phil Goodson.

Guests of the club last night included: Jim Lafferty, Jim Steward, Herbert Olds, and Ed Vass.

Two Injured In Three-Car Crash

Two persons were injured when three cars crashed at the corner of Fourth and Pitt Streets during yesterday's rain.

Injured were Eugene Windham, Greenville Route 4 and Bobby Bullock of 104 Contentment Street. Windham received a head injury and an injury to the right hip. Bullock's right foot was injured in the wreck.

Patrolman Marvin Buck who investigated, reported that a car driven by Dan K. Wooten of Greenville Route 4 apparently entered the intersection, was involved in a collision with a car operated by Hardy Smith Barwick, Greenville Route 4 and then crashed into a third vehicle which was stopped for the intersection. The third car was driven by Madge Barnes Allen, Negro, of 1204 West Third Street.

Damage to Wooten's car amounted to $500. Barwick's received $511 damage and the Allen car's damage was estimated at approximately $60. Wooten was charged with running through a stop sign in the collision.

The accident occurred about 4:10 p. m. yesterday afternoon.
