Award Presentations Highlight Annual Service League Luncheon

Recognized as outstanding members of the Greenville Service League, as selected by the Board of Directors, Mrs. Ed Parkinson Jr. and Mrs. J. H. Moye were presented two coveted league awards at the league's annual luncheon held yesterday in the Episcopal Parish House.

Mrs. T. I. Wagner presented Mrs. Parkinson the Ormond Service Cup, which was presented by Mrs. H. L. Ormond in 1948 to be awarded to the person who has given the most hours of service, participated in a variety of activities, their willingness to work and their usefulness in the community.

The President's Tray, first given in 1948 by Mrs. J. T. Little, a past president, was presented Mrs. Moye by Mrs. J. D. Messick. The Tray is annually passed on to the most outstanding member of the board.

The president, Mrs. E. H. Williford, welcomed all members and guests present. Mrs. Wesley Harvey read the minutes of the last meeting and the roll was called. There are 80 members enrolled in the Service League. Fourteen provisional members were present for this annual affair.

Mrs. Williford gave her annual report at which time she stated that the Service League was ending its sixteenth year of service to the city and to the county. The president said that Mrs. R. C. Stokes Jr., chairman of the Charles O'Hagan Laughinghouse Hospital Bed Fund, had reported that the league had given hospitalization this year to 21 patients at a cost of $1,185.25. Since the fund was started in February 1939, a total of $11,684.32 had been spent for 295 patients. She reported on the various projects of the league and thanked every one for the service they have rendered to the board. She said, "I do not know a word big enough to tell the board members how I feel about their loyalty to me the past two years. They have been most helpful and I shall treasure the memories of their association." As Mrs. Williford was to turn over the presidency to the new president in closing she said, "It has been a great joy and a real privilege to serve as president for the past two years. I shall always remember it as a happy experience."

The installation of new officers for a two year term was the highlight of the business meeting before the luncheon at which the outgoing president, Mrs. Williford, presided. Mrs. J. H. Moye was installed as president, Mrs. Robert Thompson as 1st vice-president, and Mrs. George Lautares as 2nd vice-president. The new president announced her new committee chairmen after the installation.

The meeting was adjourned and everyone was introduced by the new president to the receiving line composed of the provisional members and invited into the Guild room where punch was served. The serving table was beautifully decorated with a bowl of red roses and covered with a cut-work cloth. The mantel was adorned with magnolia blossoms and leaves. Several auxiliary tables held bowls of roses, daisies, larkspur and lilies. Guests were then invited into the dining hall where they enjoyed a two course luncheon. The tables were adorned with arrangements of summer flowers. Favors were placed at the plates for everyone.

At the conclusion of the luncheon, program chairman, Mrs. J. H. Moye, began the entertainment. Numbers were drawn for the person holding the lucky numbers and prizes were awarded. The advisory board entertained with a song. The provisional members were then asked to go to the head of the room and were given a paper bag and told that the first one to blow the bag up and burst it would receive a prize.

Mrs. Tyson Bilbro read a story entitled "Hats." Mrs. Robert Thompson demonstrated the different hats that Mrs. Bilbro talked about, assisted by Mrs. George Lautares. Prizes were then given to the person wearing the prettiest hat, the largest hat, the smallest, and the most colorful. A beautiful cake was won by Mrs. Williford as the door prize.

FACTS - NOT HALF TRUTHS

The Public Is Entitled To Know:

1. If Mr. Lennon has the qualifications for the post to which he was APPOINTED - WHY has he used insinuations, innuendo, and half-truths - NOT FACTS, to assassinate the character of a man who is not resorting to such low, foul, despicable, and desperation tactics?
2. Why didn't Mr. Lennon let the public know that he had the active support of the Wilmington Negro newspapers? Why did he wait until they had withdrawn their support to let the public in on his secret? Again desperation tactics using HALF-TRUTHS.
3. If correct, why didn't Mr. Lennon let the public know that the same Wilmington newspapers were collecting money on a statewide basis to support him? - Not until they have withdrawn this support does the public learn of it - again HALF - TRUTHS,
4. Why didn't Mr. Lennon also let the public know that, in the same newspaper advertisement, these same newspapers refused to change their support to Kerr Scott - MORE HALF - TRUTHS.

Maybe They Call It Political Expediency

Here at the eleventh hour, the Senatorial campaigns have reached a fever pitch. The past few days, candidates have raced toward the wire with the voters favor in mind. They have grasped for new political fodder with which to load their campaign guns. It has not been a one-sided situation for either the Lennon forces or the Scott forces. Neither side, frankly, has carried out the quality campaign we had hoped for. In the final hours of the campaign, some supporters, if not the candidates themselves, are stooping to lower levels in an attempt to gain every possible vote.

The race issue should have never been brought into this campaign, although as yet it has not played as prominent part as did in the Senatorial campaign four years ago.

Last Minute

Reminder To Voters

A last minute note to the people of Pitt County:

Your vote will carry just as much weight as the next man's in Saturday's primary.

If you're going to feel free to discuss and criticize the government for the next few years, go to the polls Saturday and participate in the election of officials you're going to be talking about.

Through the years, there have been too many post-election quarterbacks who, for one reason or the other, didn't get around to fulfilling their obligation of voting. That fact, nevertheless, does not hamper them in their free discussion and criticism of the men the other voters elected to office.

With a brand new registration of more than 17,600 voters on the books, Pitt should have one of the largest votes in its history in Saturday's primary. That is, of course, provided the people will get out and vote.

It takes only a few minutes for a voter to cast a ballot. Officials who are elected by those ballots are going to be responsible for the operation of the government for the next two to four years.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
MONEY-SICKNESS

Americans have always been known in some parts of the world as dollar-chasers; but according to a recent scientific report, the concern of many people for money goes almost beyond belief. Dr. William Kaufman, a Boston physician, told the American Association for the Advancement of Science that emotional upsets over money can cause all sorts of symptoms of physical illness. Headaches, stomach troubles, and back pains are among the ailments which he has traced to "money-sickness."

Anyone who makes much of a study of human unhappiness and tragedy is sure to be impressed with the overwhelming tendency of men and women to bring disasters on themselves by their own action. Here is just such a situation. And certainly no aches and pains ought to be more avoidable than those brought on by undue preoccupation with money.

Since the beginning of recorded history, the world's greatest religious leaders and philosophers have preached the dangers of materialism. Their words are still true—truer and more significant than ever before in this money-mad post-war world. Money alone will not bring happiness. Financial, social, political success will not bring happiness. Happiness comes from spiritual, not material success—from inside, not from outside.

Try it yourself! See if going to church won't do you more good than going to the bank.

Conservative Trend In Votes

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON—Primary elections so far held in nine states suggest that the voters are still in a relatively conservative mood at this stage in President Eisenhower's middle-of-the-road Administration. It is a strange contrast from the situation and sentiment in Great Britain, where the Labor Party has won a majority of the national and municipal elections.

In primaries involving House members in nine states, only one has been defeated on the Democratic or Republican side. And, from his behavior so far on major legislative issues, this has been a cautious Congress. Save for the McCarthy hearing, it has been a model of restrained decorum.

DEFEATED IDOL—The identity and ideology of the single defeated candidate is significant. He was Representative Robert Crosser of Cleveland, Ohio. Cleveland has been a Democratic Gibraltar and Labor citadel for many years, or ever since the days of Taft Johnson and Newton D. Baker, Woodrow Wilson's Secretary of War and general handyman. A House member for 38 years, Crosser was the idol of the liberal and labor groups.

In reporting his defeat, the astute and well edited weekly of the Railway Brotherhoods, LABOR, said: "Railroaders don't need to be reminded that Bob Crosser, in all of his 38 years in the House, has been their friend through thick and thin."

CONSERVATIVE TREND—There are other portents of a conservative trend twist.

In the Ohio contest for the Republican Senatorial nomination, Representative George H. Bender won out. Bender was a leading vocal Robert A. Taft supporter and chief leader at the 1952 national convention. He now likes Eisenhower.

Across the line, in Illinois, Joseph Meek captured the Republican nomination for United States Senator against stiff opposition. A retail stores lobbyist at Springfield and elsewhere, a conservative and generally considered a Taft-McCarthy man, Meek had the secret backing of the state and national GOP organizations. He will oppose Senator Paul H. Douglas, an ultra-liberal, next fall.

LEN HALL'S SENSE OF HUMOR—It is for-

Pro-Scott folk have vigorously condemned the broaching of the race issue by Sen. Lennon. Many Lennon supporters, while they have not withdrawn their support, have expressed disappointment that the race question entered the campaign even in a mild way. Many newspapers of the state have voiced criticism and disappointment that the issue has been raised. Some of the newspapers, editorially, have been pro-Scott; others pro-Lennon, and still others, like The Reflector, have not taken sides in the campaign.

The skirts of neither side, in our opinion, are immaculate in this campaign which is rapidly drawing to a close.

It is not our place to suggest to hardened politicians or to neophytes in the political arena, how a campaign should be run. One thing is apparent to us however. The people of North Carolina are getting mighty tired of the low ebb to which campaigns for major offices have sunk in the state in recent years.

It suffices to say, we believe, that regardless of the outcome of Saturday's voting, neither side will have reason to be particularly proud of the tone of the campaigns.

Men And Ships Are Not Expendable

The mysterious blast which rocked the aircraft carrier, Bennington this week has also shocked the American people.

Latest count of casualties place 94 dead and at least 200 injured. Also a casualty, obvious, but not listed in thereport, is the big carrier which will have to be laid up for months for repairs caused by the explosions and fire.

This latest catastrophe, the second-worst peacetime disaster in the Navy's history, is the second carrier explosion within a year in New England waters.

A Navy Board of Inquiry will investigate the explosions aboard the Bennington in an effort to determine their cause. That same board should also lay the basis for new safety measures which can be taken by the Navy to protect its vessels against such "accidents."

In these times of unsteady peace, just as in time of war, major military facilities are of utmost importance. And big ships come under the heading of major military facilities. We can ill afford to lose any even temporarily because of such accidents which occurred upon the Bennington and the Leyte.

Our men and ships are not expendable.

ODESSA, TEXAS, AMERICAN: "... any government with strongly centralized power poses a threat to personal liberty. Each time we take another step toward socialism, government control and higher taxes in our own country, we should pause and think what life offers for the individual in countries where power is vested in the state."

tunate for Leonard W. Hall, Republican National Chairman, that he can appreciate political jokes at his own expense. His opposite, Democratic National Chairman Stephen A. Mitchell, has no sense of humor. He is, perhaps, the most austere figure on the national political scene today.

"Len" has been the butt of Republican operators' criticism for his inability to "throw the rascals out" and hand Federal jobs to their field workers. He has done his best on this ticklish assignment, but the "businessmen and administrators" in the Cabinet, not being clubhouse Republicans, will not cooperate.

Recently, when Democratic politicians assembled for the Truman dinner, they noted that "Mike," the doorman at the Capital's principal political hotel, was still on the job.

"Len Hall," one of them remarked, "hasn't been able to get a doorman's job for an Eisenhower Republican or Democrat!"

When the jocular comment was relayed to Chairman Hall, he exploded with laughter, adding that he had not been able to "change the waters, let alone the doorman."

PRIVATE CLASH—Although Britain seems to be yearning toward the American "get tough" policy in Indo-China, London, Washington and Athens have a private and unpublicized quarrel over Cyprus, the strategic Mediterranean island which guards such important gateways as the Suez Canal, the Dardanelles Straits and the Eastern end of the island.

The British took over Cyprus and made it a crown colony in 1914. It was once owned by Greece, and the population consists of Greeks and Turks. In a post-World War II plebiscite, they voted for a return to Greek ownership.

Somebody Told Me

300 Feet Up, 300 Feet Down

This is illustration number 10,001 of the guy who opened his mouth and put his foot into it. Construction has always fascinated me, so yesterday about noon I went out to the television station to check the progress of the new tower which is under construction. Bill Angle, the construction foreman for the Ace High Tower Company, was on hand to answer any and all questions I had to ask.

But it isn't necessarily so. Facts in hands, President Coigate Darden could advance the opposite thesis in his recently published report to the Board of Visitors of the University of Virginia. The record shows this: Of Virginia freshmen admitted in 1953 who won first-year scholastic honors, 12 per cent came from Virginia high schools and 8.9 per cent from Virginia preparatory schools. Of out-of-state freshmen winning honors, 7.3 per cent were from high schools and 5.7 per cent from preparatory schools.

PROXIES — Are votes by proxy "legal" at meetings of the North Carolina Democratic State Executive Committee? The question was raised for the first time the other day and has not been satisfactorily answered. There is nothing in statutory law or the Plan of Organization of the Democratic Party authorizing or recognizing proxy votes. Yet it is doubted that any meeting of the committee in recent years could have been held without recognition of proxy attendance to afford a quorum.

The committee has 223 voting members, nine men and nine women chosen from each of the 12 congressional districts for a total of 216 and six ex-officio—the chairman, vice chairman and secretary of the committee, the national committeeman and committeewoman and the president of the State Young Democratic Clubs.

A functioning quorum of the committee requires 112 votes, constituting a majority of the voting membership. Average attendance over a period years has been 75 to 80 members present in person and an equal number or more "present by proxy." It is rare for as many as 112 members to be present in person.

Proxies have been accepted and honored, but none of the party leaders whom your reporter has contacted can tell why—except that the custom has been established and is honored because of tradition. The fact is, there are legal arguments against the use of proxies. Common law authorizes proxy voting in stockholders meetings of corporations, but directors meetings of private corporations do not permit proxy voting. The executive committee is essentially the board of directors of the Democratic party. In absence of specific authorization in the Plan of Organization, why should proxies be voted there.

tainly he didn't have time to waste with newspaper columnists. But the angle I didn't figure was that it was very close to lunch time. With the two-way inter-communications system Bill has for talking to the boys on top he informed them that it was time to come down.

As soon as they hit the ground Bill took me by the arm and strongly led me over to the steel cable that he uses for pulling up man and material. There was no question in my mind: it was too late to back out. Did I want to? Is fat meat greasy? My companion for the trip was Alex Thomson of Detroit, better known as Slim. The cable used is attached to the top of the gin pole, which is chained to the top of the tower for construction purposes. Passengers wear a safety belt, looped around the cable and slung low on the body so you ac-

Jefferson made it clear that he regarded the lifting of the intellectual level of the people not only the privilege but the responsibility of the state. He was not willing to entrust this important work to the care of the private institutions. . . . He saw, much more clearly than most of his age or many of our own, the intimate relationship between public education and democracy, and he knew that only the people themselves acting through their own government can secure for themselves the priceless opportunities they want.

France Unlikely To Take Step

Geneva conference, she insists she must have help if she is to go on fighting. A Cabinet member said recently: "France is not going to go on alone. If she doesn't get help, then she must find a way to lay down her arms honorably in Indo-China."

It is not certain his view would prevail, but he is not alone in feeling France cannot continue alone. The French National Defense Committee has discussed briefly sending draftees but no decision has been reached. It might be possible to send conscripts to southern Indo-China, where there is practically no fighting, so volunteers and regular army men could be released for the battle zones of the north.

It is extremely unlikely, however, the shaky Laniel government would make a move so loaded with political trouble.

War weary, discouraged, France wants peace most of all. If she can't get a negotiated pact at the Competition Effects

Diamond Alkali is closing its periclase producing facilities at Painesville, Ohio. Periclase is used in producing high temperature refractory brick for lining blast furnaces in steel mills. The plant is being closed because foreign producers can lay down the material cheaper than Diamond can sell it.

In recent months, British and other foreign firms have shown up as the low bidders for generators and other elaborate electric installations. Sometimes American companies and political subdivisions have found reasons for rejecting the low bids; at other times the jobs have gone to overseas contractors.

Financial and business newspapers carry considerable advertising for West German, French, British, Dutch, Belgian and Scandinavian producers of heavy equipment. American steel ingot production is about 70 per cent of capacity.

What's going on here? The basic is that much of the war-battered production capacity abroad has been restored. Our enemies and allies in Europe are now back to the point at which they can challenge us—not only in Latin America, as we're told here a few days ago—but in our own cities and towns. Even Japan is already nibbling away some of our sales in light machines and, by 1955 or 1956, will be bidding against American giants for heavy machinery.

And what are we going to do about it? Anyone with a 100 per cent sound answer to that question ought to be made a member of the Cabinet. If we allow foreign goods, from periclase to generators, to come into this country unchecked, many Americans are in danger of losing the jobs. In the past, we have learned on the belief that American production methods, even at the world's highest wages, could more than offset low wages abroad. But in the years since the war we have been teaching American techniques to Europeans—and, besides, they are pretty smart to begin with.

On the other hand, if we erect tariff barriers to keep out foreign-made goods, we will prevent foreign nations from earning dollars with which to buy American manufactured goods and farm products. And if we deny them access to this, the richest market in the world, they will try to find markets behind the Iron Curtain.

So there is no easy answer. We shall, as we have in the past, muddle and compromise, compromise and muddle. But this will require more doing than ever before, because never have the alternatives been so sharp or so unpleasant.

Mama Starts 'Farewell' Tours

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Two weeks ago my mother wrote me she wanted to make "a last visit" to those close to her heart who live far away.

Although she came all alone to this country from Ireland as a slender girl of 16, Mama—as she herself says—is no longer "the same spring chicken." She is 66, quite stout, and though summer still rules her heart, she feels a twinge of late autumn in her legs.

I didn't like the idea of her making a long journey by herself. So I phoned the old family home in Kansas City and asked whether if I came out to get her, she would fly back with me.

Mama, who had never been up in an airplane, hesitated only a moment, then said cheerfully: "Sure, what have I got to lose? I'll go anywhere with you except on a department store escalator. Those things make me nervous."

"What is all this last-visit talk? You're like Sarah Bernhardt, the French actress. Every year she announced a grand final farewell tour, she went on making them for 20 years."

"I don't know about her," said Mama. "But lately I've been going to the funerals of people younger than me. So I decided I'd make this trip while I still felt strong enough."

"I've got it all figured out. I'll spend a week with you and Frances in New York, and a week in Philadelphia taking with my four sisters about old times in County Mayo, when we were all young together. Then I'll be glad enough to go back home and—"she laughed—"die when I get around to it."

The flight was smooth and pleasant, leading Mama to give this cautious approval of the flight age: "Well, I certainly feel safer in an airplane than I do on one of those awful escalators."

I was nervous myself later as we came to our apartment door. Nearly 10 months ago Frances and I adopted a baby girl, Tracy Ann. Mama was one of nine kids, Dad was one of 16. They had five offspring themselves, but the five have so far given Mama only two grandchildren. How would she react to the first adoption in an Irish family that had dwindled so quickly in only three generations? Knowing my mother's love of children, it was unworthy of me even to harbor a doubt. I felt ashamed when Mama kissed Frances and then, without waiting to remove her coat, went over to the baby's play pen and said:

"Oh, the darling. She looks like a picture. Let me hold her." Tracy looked up solemnly for her first view of her grandmother. But she broke out in chuckles as Mama taught her a new patty cake lyric.

The two soon became inseparable. Mama had no desire to see the sights.

Once I did ask her outright whether the fact Tracy was an adopted child troubled her in any way, and she immediately named three members of the family she had decided Tracy resembles.

"Mind?" she said. "You should have done it 10 years ago. But, of course, if you had, you wouldn't have Tracy. You're lucky the way things have worked out."

One evening Tracy came down with a mild cold, and Mama was up half a dozen times in the night to listen to her breathing. "I don't care about the grown-ups, they can look out for themselves," she said. "But I hate to see the little ones suffer."

Tracy still had a runny nose on her 11-month birthday, when I left with my mother for Philadelphia, the next stop on "the last visit."

"Oh, I'll miss you, darling," Mama said, kissing Tracy the door. "And you... you'll remember Grandma... at least for a few days."

Mama never looked back as Tracy, sensing it was no ordinary goodbye, let out a cry and waved frantically. She wanted to go with Grandma.

On the train a chicken sandwich revived Mama's spirits, and she mused aloud:

"Why, the next time I see Tracy she'll be walking. And the time after that she'll be talking a blue strak."

"Okay, Sarah Bernhardt," I told her. "How many grand farewell tours are you planning now?"

"Well, you never know," said Mama, tickled at being compared to an actress. "At 66 every bite you take may be your last one, but I guess that's no reason to quit going to the grocery store, is it?"

Youth Supplies the Spark "We need 'sparkship' . . . and youth supply the 'spark,'" urged Mr. Bob Martin, father and advance man of Rev. Eddie Martin, evangelist. Eddie Martin was engaged by the Pitt County and Greenville Ministerial Associations for June 6 through 3 weeks. Crowds of 3 to 6 thousand will be expected at the tent near the hospital.

Young people are invited to sing in the choir and serve as ushers. Let's get up with other 'sparks' and plug the Martin Revival. See ya there!

At the Interdenominational Youth Council meeting Sunday officers were elected. They are president, John Brooks, first vice president, Rachel Steinbeck, second vice president, Dennis Bullock; secretary, Kitty Collins, treasurer, Angus Duff; and publicity supervisor, Tommy Bodkin.

Graduation — At Last! "Oh, I can hardly believe that twelve years have passed so quickly!"

"Am I really graduating, or am I just dreaming?"

"Hip hip, hooray!" These are a few shouts and sobs heard on the campus of dear ol' GHS.

Yes, you guessed it, Graduation has rounded the corner and heading straight for Greenville High. Many senior girls are sporting princess diamonds and watches, their graduation presents. Others have luggage, brand new for this great event.

The graduation exercises will be in Wright auditorium June 1 at 8:00 p.m. Commencement speakers are Dinah Porter and Curtis Patterson. Jimmy Phelps is the president of the senior class.

Sylvia Rogers and Jane Fuller will render a duet and Rachael Lang will play a piano solo.

Big Day for Seniors Today is a big day for seniors. For today is class day.

This morning the senior class gave a play reliving their activities during high school. The play was under the direction of Virginia Smith and Miss Estelle Greene. "Among My Souvenirs" was the theme song throughout the skit. After the play the seniors presented their gift, a whirlpool washer, and dryer for the athletics department, to the school.

A picnic was enjoyed by the seniors at 11:30 after which they went to a movie party.

Tonight is awards night. There will be a play and then the awards will be given. Ten major awards and several minor ones will be presented.

New Staff Takes Over Mary Will Long and Frances Adams will take over as editors of "Green Lights" next year.

Also serving on the staff are Janet Powell, make-up editor; Wayne Bishop, sports editor; Sally Beard, feature editor; Harris Northrop, business manager. Clark Noble will be photographer and Tommy Smith will draw the cartoons.

Best of luck to a fine staff!

Watch your cattle eat round baled hay, packaged exclusively by ROTO-BALER. You can tell immediately how well they like the better quality, cured in round bales.

Examine one closely and see why. The hay is fluffier with more nutrition-packed leaves rolled inside. Livestock eat it readily right from the bale, saving labor.

And it costs less to bale, too. It's wrapped with inexpensive binder twine — field travel is reduced by picking up big double windrows. Get ready now. Hay time will soon be here.

Man 'With A Conscience' Is Now Guiding FHA Reforms

By STERLING F. GREEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Norman P. Mason, a man with a New England conscience, has taken charge of the Federal Housing Administration.

Mason was chosen by President Eisenhower to be acting FHA commissioner while the agency itself, the Justice Department and two Senate committees try to clean up FHA's tarnished reputation.

Mason, a lumber dealer from North Chelmsford, Mass., already has sent to Capitol Hill a dozen recommendations for tightening the housing laws and regulations to prevent the bliking of house-holders by home-improvement firms, and the gleaming of "wind-fall" profits by big-time builders.

But he says he was almost as badly shocked, on coming to Washington, to learn that FHA has been pledging the credit of the United States to help home owners buy barbecue pits and tennis courts on the installment plan.

"Swimming pools and barbecues may be home improvements," he said in an interview, "but I don't think that's the kind of housing credit FHA was meant to insure."

So along with the other recommended FHA reforms, he has asked Congress to make him the judge to whether such luxuries contribute sufficiently to the "livability and comfort" of a house to warrant FHA insurance of bank loans financing them.

Mason, a smallish but solid man of 57 with candid, crinkly eyes, has learned a lot about housing since the day when, at age 15, he went from high school into his father's hardware and lumber store in Plattsburg, N. Y.

He also learned quite a lot about people and he now says:

"I know the morale of FHA's people must be badly shot after the resignations, dismissals and investigations. It's natural for the staff people to wonder whose head will be chopped off next. I'd feel that way too."

"I feel it's my responsibility to restore morale quickly. We also must demonstrate to the public that we're still in the business of encouraging good housing."

"We're going to look at the applications very carefully from here on, but we're not going to slow up the housing program a bit."

Mason plainly prefers North Chelmsford, where he could get some gardening and golfing done, to Washington. He also knew when he came that the FHA job was, in his words, "a hot spot" in which Eisenhower's first appointee, Guy T. O. Hollyday, lasted just a year before the White House forced resignation.

Why did he come, then?

"This answer sounds hammy even to me," he replied, "but I'll tell you: I feel that this country has been very good to me and I owe it a lot."

"I don't mind risking my reputation in Washington because I don't want anything for myself. They won't ever have to chop my head off. I'll go home when they tell me."

If he turns out to be a success, he says, "it will be because I've got a lot of friends who'll tell me what's going on around the country." Many are members of the National Retail Lumber Dealers Assn., of which Mason is a former president.

A tireless correspondent, Mason for years has been firing mimeographed letters to lumber folks from every point in his travels. The points have been far-flung, for he has seen a lot of country as a director of the United States Chamber of Commerce, an adviser to a long list of government agencies ranging from the old War Production Board to the White House, and head of the governing board of the Building Research Institute of the National Academy of Sciences.

There is no officiousness about this pleasant man in blue suit, blue shirt and blue tie. In fact, the FHA probably will have less authority when he leaves it than when he took over.

A reorganization plan in the works reportedly will transfer much responsibility to the "parent" agency, the Housing and Home Finance Agency (HHFA). Mason's predecessor of FHA opposed the change, but Mason sums it up this way:

"I believe in a strong FHA but I also understand enough about administrative and political responsibility to know that President Eisenhower can't have a whole lot of people reporting directly to him."

"I don't believe the President can do a job if we're all running to him with our problems."

Mason was born in Willaboro, N. Y., a little town on Lake Champlain where his father was an executive in a wood pulp mill. The elder Mason set up his own hardware and lumber business at Plattsburg when Norman was 14. The boy went to work in the store at $8.50 a week a year later.

He got a little military training at Plattsburg before it became the World War I Army officers' training center, but when the war came he went into the Navy. The Navy gave him a rating in radio and he served in the North Atlantic on a naval troop transport.

Meantime, he had attended the naval school at Harvard as a reservist and had met Helen Proctor, then a student at nearby Mount Holyoke College. They were married when the war ended.

When his father died, soon after, Mason took over the business. The Proctors also were a lumber family and, 30 years ago, Mason joined the William P. Proctor Co. in the Lowell suburb of North Chelmsford. He has long been executive officer and treasurer of that firm, which operates a good-sized mill.

Now Mason has a housing problem of his own. Because the two children have married and gone, the Masons recently gave up their seven-bedroom, five-acre place for a smaller house. Should they now take a house in Washington?

Mason says he doesn't think so, but his wife will come down and decide. Meantime, he's living in a one-room efficiency apartment. "That," he says, "is New England frugality."

THE NEWSPAPERS OF NORTH CAROLINA AGREE

THE CHARLOTTE NEWS:

Lennon Hits Below The Belt

"There have been few foul blows struck so far by the candidates for the Democratic senatorial nomination in North Carolina. But one was thrown yesterday by Sen. Lennon.

"He charged that Gov. Scott and certain of his top political associates and advisers have encouraged abolition of segregation in our public schools for many years."

"That statement is not true. The record supports Gov. Scott's assertion, shortly after the Supreme Court announced its decision in the school segregation case, that 'I have always been opposed, and I am still opposed, to Negro and white children going to school together.'"

"Many southern leaders have counseled calmness and clear thinking during these trying days subsequent to the Supreme Court's decision. The injection of the segregation issue into the campaign at this time, whether it helps or hurts Senator Lennon's candidacy, can only harm the state in whose service he is enlisted."

DURHAM MORNING HERALD:

Race Issue Brought Into Senatorial Campaign

"It is regrettable that Senator Lennon has felt it necessary to bring the race issue into the current senatorial campaign. This is a pretty sorry way for a politician to try to get votes.

"The injection of this issue at this time is particularly regrettable. The people of North Carolina of both races need all their resources of good will to meet the problems created by the Supreme Court decision the other day. This is no time for them to allow an extraneous issue pushed by a political candidate to add to their problems.

"Senator Lennon says that Kerr Scott's statement on the Supreme Court decision is so much double-talk. But it seems to this newspaper a rather straightforward and clear comment. It is at least as specific as that made by Mr. Lennon.

"Scott's statement on this issue, the senator charges, contradicts every act and word of Scott's public career 'on this subject.' Scott and certain of his advisers and associates, he says, 'have encouraged the abolition of segregation in our public schools for many years.'"

"But news reports fail to mention any instances cited by the senator to support his charges of such 'encouragement.' Such citations would be helpful to those of us who have been around North Carolina for many years and are hearing about this 'encouragement' for the first time.

"All of this strikes this newspaper as rather sordid politicking. But it could be the best indication we've yet had of the Lennon organization's assessment of their chances of winning on May 29th.

"A candidate who is willing to use the race issue in the hope—and it may be a mistaken hope—that it can get him some votes must feel that pretty desperate measures are needed if he is to win."

SMITHFIELD HERALD:

Lennon's Deliberate Foul

"Senator Lennon has hit Kerr Scott far below the belt. It is a deliberate foul and it ought to be called . . .

"The Lennon foul is as flagrant as it is deliberate. Not only does Lennon use the explosive race issue to confuse the issues and excite the passions of the voters against his principal opponent. He makes an inflammatory charge against Scott without the slightest bit of supporting evidence. . . .

"What the evidence does show clearly is that Scott as Governor of North Carolina favored and worked for equalization of white and Negro school facilities. As a champion of 'separate but equal' public schools, Scott was an aggressive opponent of the forces which sought to eliminate segregation. And as an opponent of those who wanted to wipe out segregation, he was true to lifelong personal convictions.

"Every ballot marked for Lennon solely because the person marking it was enraged against Scott by Lennon's accusation will be a vote wrongfully gained. And the chief victim of the wrong won't be Kerr Scott. It will be democracy itself."

HIGH POINT ENTERPRISE:

... There needs be no confusing of the problem by injecting unwholesome racial issues into the present campaign. . . .

SANFORD HERALD:

Lennon Proves Inability To Lead During A Crisis

... Aligning himself with . . . extremists, Senator Alton A. Lennon used the circumstances of segregation's demise to launch a shameful political attack against his chief rival for the Democratic Senatorial nomination, former Governor Kerr Scott. . . .

... There you have a tactic of Joe McCarthy brought into the one area of Dixie that never has been long on demagoguery: damning without documentation, declaring guilty by association. There you have the political lynching of Frank Graham committed all over again. And there you have a recent police judge lecturing all nine of the Justices whose integrity is this country's final protection against internal tyranny.

"What possibly could be constructive in Senator Lennon's poisonous broadside? . . .

"In the months of this campaign, Senator Lennon has done much to screen the issues while sniping at Kerr Scott. And now, as the voting time approaches, he has called upon Tar Heels to lay aside reason and follow him down the cold trail of hatred and suspicion."

BURLINGTON TIMES-NEWS:

We Consider Kerr Scott Struck Low By Oponent

... It is our opinion that a low blow was struck . . .

WINSTON-SALEM JOURNAL:

Keep Race Issue Out

"The issue is a phony one. . . . There are plenty of real issues upon which the campaign can be fought."

HERTFORD COUNTY HERALD:

Must Not Happen Now

... We condemn with all our powder the attempt by the headquarters of Senator Alton Lennon to charge opponent Kerr Scott with 'being part of a conspiracy' to end segregation. . . .

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN:

NO PLACE

"Men of good will in North Carolina will regret that one of the candidates in the May 29 senatorial primary has injected the Supreme Court ruling on public school segregation into that rather tepid contest."

STATESVILLE RECORD & LANDMARK

Reversion To Form

"We deplore the introduction of the race issue into the United States Senate contest by Senator Alton A. Lennon. . . .

"We do not believe Kerr Scott is using the Negro issue to get votes. As a matter of fact, we have yet to receive one piece of literature from the Scott headquarters reflecting on the character of any of his opponents. On the other hand, we regularly receive material from the Lennon camp attacking Scott. . . .

"We would still like to see the contest for the United States Senate settled on the basis of the qualifications of the several candidates."

Recession 'Fruits' Already Evident

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP)—Fruits of this recession are shaping up today. Mild as it may prove to have been the business shakeup is leaving a mark, nudging along changes that may affect most people in time.

It's changing some thinking, sharpening competitive methods, scaring little fellows caught in the middle of the big boys' fights, bringing newcomers into old fields, sending more businesses to the wall.

At the employe level, the business change is emphasizing the job-holding value of skills and the job-getting value of technical education.

At the factory level, it's sharpening the work of the research laboratories and reshuffling sales departments.

At the retail level, a new battle is shaping up over dealer-distribution systems and cut-price stores.

The slide-off from the defense-boom peak has been orderly enough to strengthen the confidence of the nation in its economy and its way of doing business. Management spokesmen stress that the adjustment is being carried on by industry itself, with a minimum of interference from the government. Labor leaders, however, would like to see Washington helping to create jobs for the unemployed and the newcomers to the labor force.

Business failures are more common than a year ago, a sure sign that the slump has sharpened competition and is weeding out the marginal and inexperienced. It's proving rough for businesses that can prosper only in boom times.

Big companies are scrapping now over markets. Some smaller companies are being squeezed. The auto industry is an example. The tire industry is another.

The four largest rubber companies outfit almost all cars coming from the factories. Smaller rubber companies specialize in the replacement field. But the big ones whose auto customers aren't producing so much this year, are working hard to capture the re-

Moscow Turning On Hooliganism

By RICHARD R. KASISCHKE
MOSCOW (AP)—Ever wish you could send a noisy neighbor to jail when he wakes you up in the early morning hours? Ever want to bring down the law on a shrill-voiced, quarrelsome neighbor woman?

That's happening in Moscow these days in a concerted press and police campaign against hooliganism and misconduct.

It appears to be part of a manifold drive to improve public morals and manners.

Noisy or immoral neighbors are a special menace in Moscow and other cities of the Soviet Union, where many thousands of families live in community flats (or hostels). In these a family has its own room but must share with other families such facilities as kitchen and bath and also common entrance and door bell.

So you can easily understand what a pain Mrs. Artemov was to the other tenants in Flat No. 25 at 5 T St. This case was related in Trud, the trade union newspaper. It said:

"In the last four years Mrs. Artemov and her husband have repeatedly been brought to the police station and into the people's court. But that did not stop them. The Artemovs systematically continue to break the rules of the socialist flat. They get up at 6 a.m. and make so much noise in the kitchen, throw metal pots on the floor trying to wake all the other tenants. . . . But this time the prosecutor's office had to intervene. The judge sentenced the wife to one year in prison and her husband to one year's probation plus a fine of 24 per cent of his wages."

Izvestia, the government's official newspaper, told of another family:

"This criminal family engage in cursing, scandals, hooliganism, noise and shouting. Besides all that, this family hates the others because they don't join in drinking, creating scandals and stealing. . . . It is high time to put an end to the offensive mockery of hooligans against honest Soviet people."

Drunkenness, especially among young workers, is also being repeatedly condemned in the Soviet press.

'Cat Whiskers' For Rail Safety

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—The Southern Pacific Railroad uses "cat whiskers" to determine safe clearances for loaded freight cars in tunnels and on bridges of its Sierra Nevada line.

A special car is equipped with 126 steel-tipped aluminum feelers extending from the top and sides. They operate something like the whiskers of cats walking in the dark.

When the feelers touch an obstruction, they transmit the distance to dials inside the car, where crewmen record them.

The "Black House" at Gullford, Conn., was painted black by a French refugee when he learned of the execution of Louis XVI.

An Open Letter To Mr. Scott

Dear Mr. Scott:

I voted for you for Governor in 1948 because in my opinion you were not a power politician and were not a part of a ring or group of politicians who would like to control our State politically and in my opinion you were not obligated to any such group. I was proud when you were elected our Governor.

I think our system of government is the best in the world if it functions as our forefathers planned it—simply this—for the people and by the people. As far as I am concerned that goes from the bottom to the top; from our County Commissioners to our Statesmen in Washington. There are two ways in my opinion to keep government and power in the hands of the people: by not letting one group get too powerful by staying in office too long unless they distinguish themselves as being truly representatives of the people or by failing to re-elect anyone who shows a lust for power.

I supported and voted for the bond issue for rural roads. I knew that your opponent, Mr. Charlie Johnson, had advocated a $100,000,000 bond issue for rural roads and when you asked the people to vote a bond issue of $200,000,000, double this amount, I trusted your judgment, knowing you had access to facts and figures through the State Highway Department on the approximate cost of paving the amount of rural roads in the State that should be paved. From that time on Mr. Scott I watched your activities with amazement and deep concern.

I watched you attempt to build and practically accomplish one of the most powerful political rings that ever sat in power in the State of North Carolina. I saw you do this in a very short time. I watched your methods—heads rolled when people did not bow to your will, vote for your man, or follow your directives. In Russia they shoot those people who oppose the boss. Your methods strike me as being similar. You cut off the family support when the man does not bow to the will of the boss. I watched you attempt to name your successor for governor and almost succeed.

In the Senatorial race between Dr. Frank Graham and the late Willie Smith, I supported Dr. Graham, and I believe the outcome would have been closer and a much friendlier feeling would have existed in the State if you and your political power group had not bloc-voted the Negro vote for Dr. Graham. In my opinion that destroys everything a free election stands for. When you asked the people to vote for a $200,000,000 bond issue to build rural roads, and to trust you with spending their money, I was proud to hear you say that in your opinion it would take quite a while to wisely spend that much money on these rural roads; that you realized it could not be done in your administration. After we voted the money, Mr. Scott, why did you insist that all of these roads be completed in the short time that you were Governor and actually give orders to that effect? You apparently were more interested in getting all the credit than in getting all the roads possible for the money for the people.

To me there is a lot of irony in this situation. It is my opinion that the people of North Carolina may elect you Senator because you gave them roads when actually you gave them one-fourth less roads for the money by trying to grab all the credit for the roads than you could have by letting your successor finish the road program as should have been done and which you admitted should be done when you were asking us to vote for the $200,000,000 bond issue. Mr. Scott, you can fool some of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all the people all of the time. History has a way of catching up with the facts—sometimes fast, sometimes slow. I sincerely hope that unless you change your ways it will not be slow in your case.

To cap the climax it was agreed and understood that every county would be allocated their proportionate part of the $200,000,000 based on road mileage and population; that each county was to get its proportionate share. You were our Governor, representing all counties, when you ordered the State Highway Department to take from my county of Robeson, and the other counties as well, their part of this money in the amount of $750,000.00 and transfer this amount to your county of Alamance, plus all of the milk you had squeezed before.

To me it was astounding that you could do this. To me the man or men in the Highway Department that refused this order, knowing how you operate, have my utmost admiration. Mr. Scott, at that time you were the Governor of the State of North Carolina representing all of the counties and all of the people. You were not a county commissioner of Alamance County, attempting to get for your county all that you could. The people of the State had voted their trust in you. Where would any banker be if he used his depositors' money the way you attempted to. He wouldn't be able to run for the Senate, Mr. Scott.

I would like to say why I think one-fourth more roads could have been built for the same amount of money had they been built over a longer period of time. Due to the speed-up in road construction, it was necessary for the State to rent millions of dollars worth of equipment. I personally rented two pieces of equipment to the State which seemed to be the thing to do at the time.

Where I rented two pieces of equipment, I know of more who rented 10 times that amount. That particular year I made more money, largely due to renting this equipment, than I have ever made before or since. I paid income tax on $30,000.00 and still own the equipment. I had to pay approximately $7,000.00 income tax that year, after exemptions for my wife and our five children. I know for a fact that if the State had spread this program over a longer period of time, their cost per mile would have been much lower than it was due to your speed up. Actually there were not enough contractors available to build all of these roads in such a short time; consequently, the bids were high, and the taxpayers suffered.

Joan Foster, Bride

By Alice Ross Colver

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

THERE were library books on antiques. She brought them home. She read them and made notes and learned a good deal about Queen Anne chairs and the Dutch influence and cabriole legs and Sheraton simplicity and Philadelphia highboys and claw and ball feet and Empire monstrosities and ogee mirrors and Meissen plates and Sheffield silver and Sandwich glass. But she did not know any more about running an antique business than she had before.

And here it was December Winter, her work period, was upon her. Before she knew it, spring would be here when her book must be completed. Yet she had not written a page—not a line!

What ought she to do now? It was Diane who unconsciously helped solve the problem for Joan. She stopped in one Saturday soon after the Thanksgiving holiday in early December and was idly watching Joan make an apple pie.

"Have you begun your book yet?" she asked.

"No," Joan was silent a moment. "I'm stuck. Stuck before I've begun. How do you like that?" And she began cutting little holes in the pastry and then deftly slid her pie into the oven. "Ten of four, Di. Fifty minutes and it'll be done. Don't let me forget. Come on into the living room now and be comfy and tell me what I'm going to do. Tempus is fugiting and I'm fidgeting." Her light words did not wholly conceal her concern. "If I dared, I'd start an antique business myself and learn the hard way. But that takes capital, a plethora of which we have not." They were back in the living room by this time and Joan waved Diane to the Boston rocker. "I miss my swan-

a.m." she said. "Not that I'm not grateful to your mother for buying it. No, you sit there, Diane. I'll take this Captain's chair. Isn't it a nice one? I found it up in Mother's attic last week when I went up there to hunt for my skates. It was way back under the eaves, and broken. Two legs off. But Todd fixed them and now I'll refinish it." She dropped into it and patted its arms. "One more chair which we sure needed. What is it you're trying to say—if you can stop my torrent of words?"

"About your book Jo I was wondering—I mean—well, how do people start in antique business, anyway? Do they borrow, do you suppose? From banks? I should think with Dad a director in the one here, something might be worked out. Do you want me to sound him out? No harm in asking, you know. No harm in questions."

But Joan shook her head. "No. Thanks, Diane but no. Banks require collateral for loans and we have nothing we can put up." "But you're right. There's no harm in questions. So this is what I think I'll do. I'll go see that nice little Mrs. Cochran over in Riverdale, put my cards on the table, tell her just why I want to know things and then ask for information."

Diane clapped her hands. "Oh, good! That's a wonderful idea! You mean the little woman who sold you your set of maple chairs—oh, I bet anything she'd help you and be glad to! She's a sweet person. And she admired you tremendously, now that she knows you write."

"You think so?" "I'm sure of it. I bet she'd be thrilled to feel she was helping you. She'd think she was taking a part in the book's creation. She'd feel almost like an author herself. Or perhaps like the heroine! Honestly, I believe you've hit on the solution."

"I hope so," Joan said seeing a nebulous idea that had been with her for a long time taking shape at last. "Maybe I could actually get a job there. Help her out on the days when she has to go off buying, I mean. Take care of her shop for her or something."

"Maybe you could," Diane's eyes sparkled suddenly. "Look! Let's drive over now and see her about it!"

"My pie." "Well, after you take it out of the oven. It still won't be too late. Come on! Let's!"

It was on a Thursday in early December when Joan stopped the old jalopy in front of the red-shingled farmhouse in Riverdale. She hurried up the flagged walk to the old front door. As she opened it she heard a bell tinkle in the back of the house, and a voice called, "That you, Joan?"

"Yes, Mrs. Cochran I'm here!" "Good." Mrs. Cochran followed her voice to the front hall where Joan stood waiting. She was a pleasant-looking little woman with a pink face, very finely lined, under an aura of white fluffy hair. She had a hat and was buttoning her coat as she walked. "I'm glad you got here before I left," she said. "I wanted to tell you a few things. There's a buyer coming this morning—a picker. She's one you'll have to watch. I don't like her but I have to do business with her because she picks up for some big houses in New York. Well, I want to warn you to stay with her the whole time." She nodded at Joan. "She's—well—tricky. Anything she wants, give her the discount on though she's entitled to that. And there's a Mr. Caldwell one of my best customers, who'll be here to get his table. He has paid for it. It's this one here in the hall. I put it out here so there'd be no confusion." She stopped to rummage in the top drawer of an old chest for her gloves. "Oh, here they are." Straightening up, she began pulling them on, her face thoughtful.

"I guess that's all," she said, after a minute. "Maybe you'll get some time to write today. I hope so." Her eyes met Joan's in a friendly, admiring way. "Good-bye. To think of my having a helper! Guess I'm a lucky fellow. But I certainly am glad you turned up last week when you did. I was at my wit's end. Mrs. Slocum has always tended my shop the days I went off to buy and to have her move away was like the end of the world for me—especially just before the Christmas season. And I can't pay enough for most people to be interested in the job. It has to be someone that really likes antiques. Well, I'll get started. There's a kettle of soup bubbling on the stove. It'll probably be boiled down good about noon. Help yourself. You'll find crackers or bread—whichever you want—there in the pantry. And you might turn off the gas under the soup then, if you will. It'll be done, I'm sure."

"All right. And thank you. I hope you find some treasures today." "I hope so."

"And don't worry. I'll take care of everything." "I know you will. The picker's name, by the way, is Miss Slavovsk. Err! It's cold out, isn't it! Well, good-bye. I'll be back around six."

She was gone. The bell tinkled in the rear of the house as Joan closed the door. Then she was alone for the first time.

With Christmas only a few weeks away business had been brisk but Joan had observed that most of the transactions were in small items priced under ten dollars.

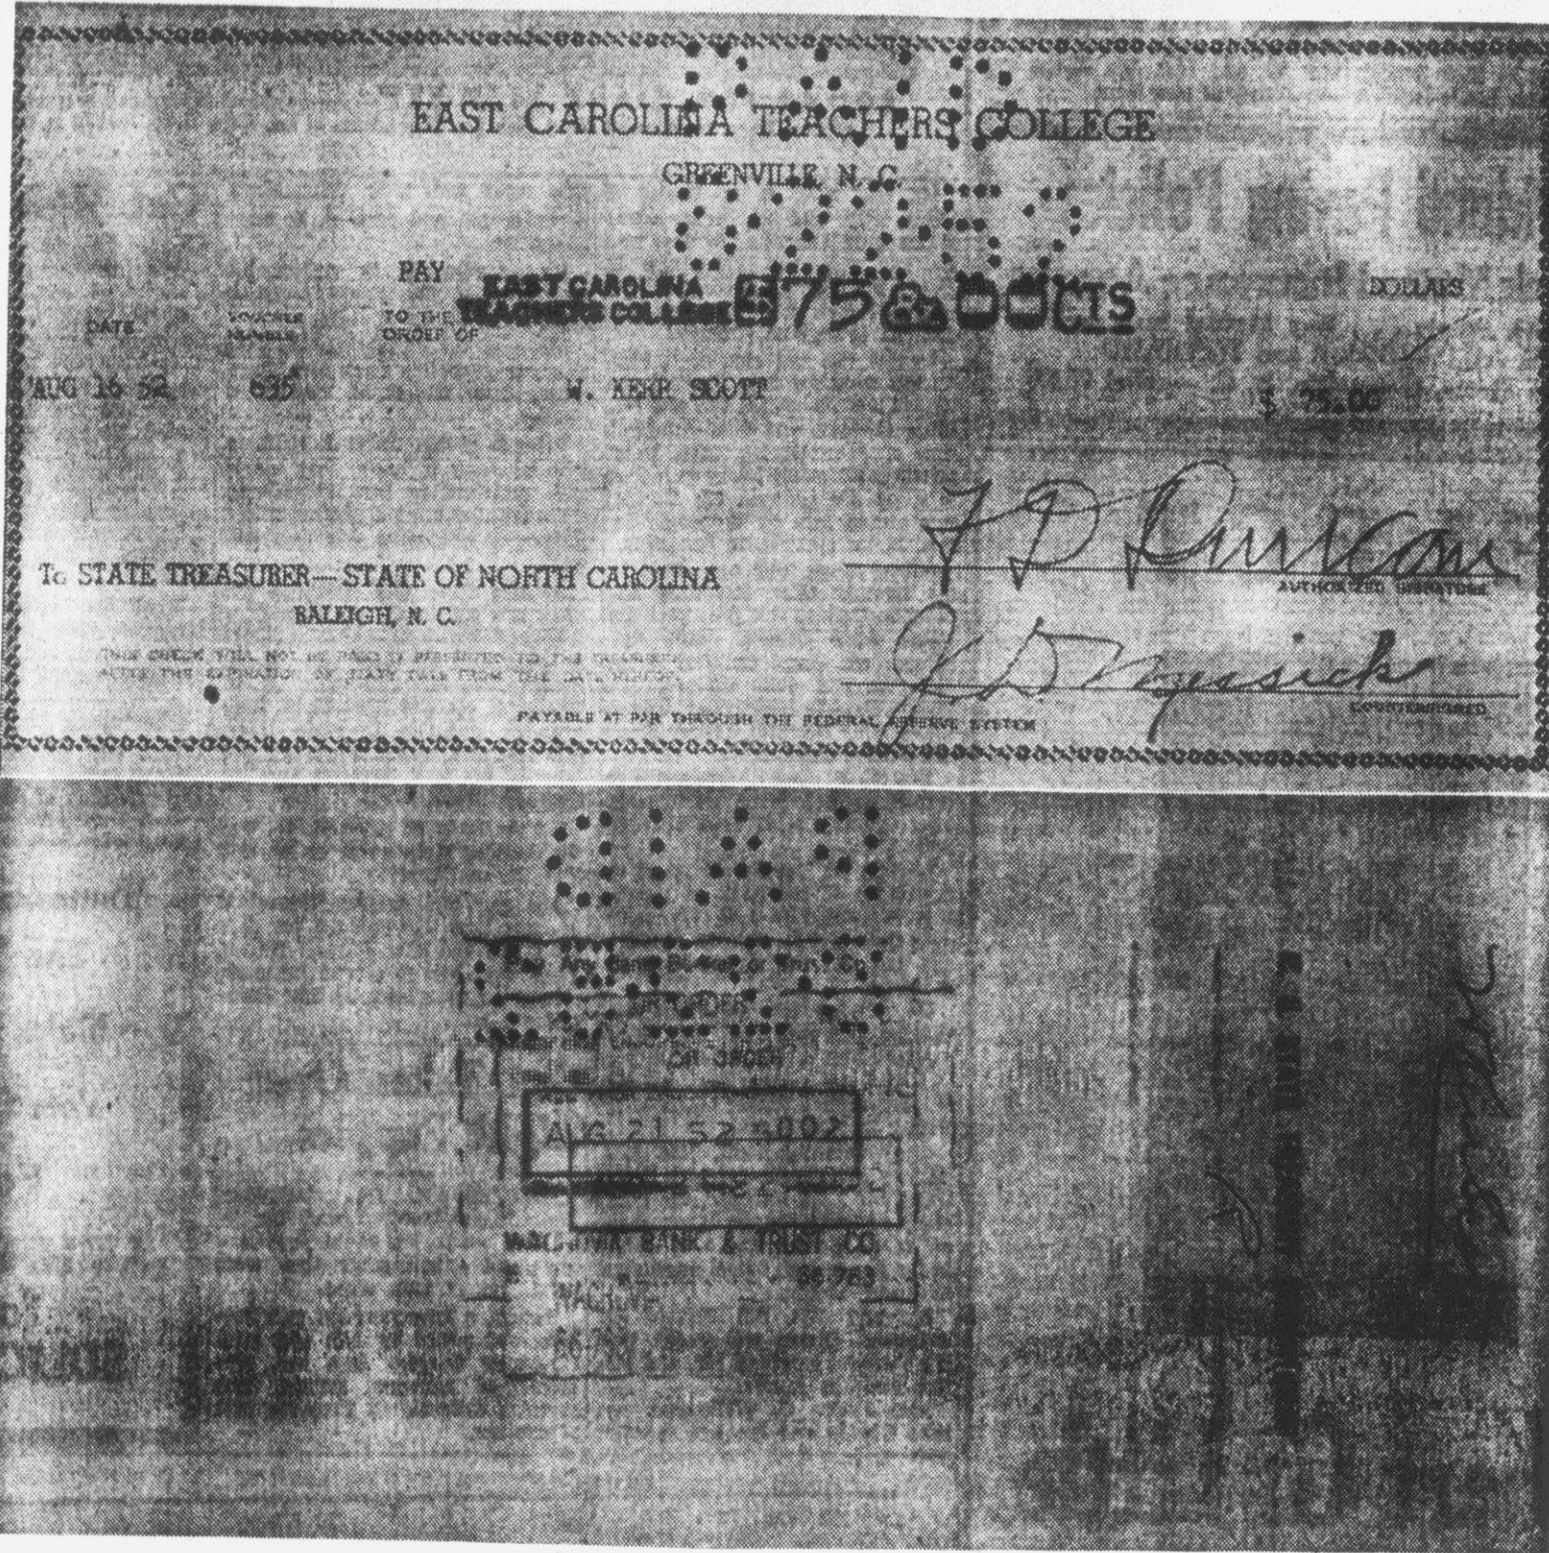

"That's true," Mrs. Cochran had agreed. "Furniture moves slowly. That's why you have to be careful when you buy it. You mustn't pay too much for it, because you have to remember that your money may be tied up in it for a year or more. I have to figure on the cost of repairing and refinishing, too since I have no husband to help me. I'm a widow, you know, and I have to send everything the needs doing over to a cabinet maker. Believe me, it costs a pretty penny. But if you're really thinking of going into this business, you'd be better off than I because Tom and you together can handle your own refinishing."

"I'm not really going into Joan explained. "At least not yet. I just want to learn about it so I can write a book about it."

"I know. But someday you'll be in it, too, I bet."

Anti-Americanism In India Said Due Largely To Old Hate Of Colonialism

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Foreign News Analyst
GENEVA (AP) — "The Devil I know," said an Indian leader, "is worse than the Devil I don't know."
He was trying to explain why anti-American sentiment is rising in India, why Indians profess not to fear any threat of communism from abroad.

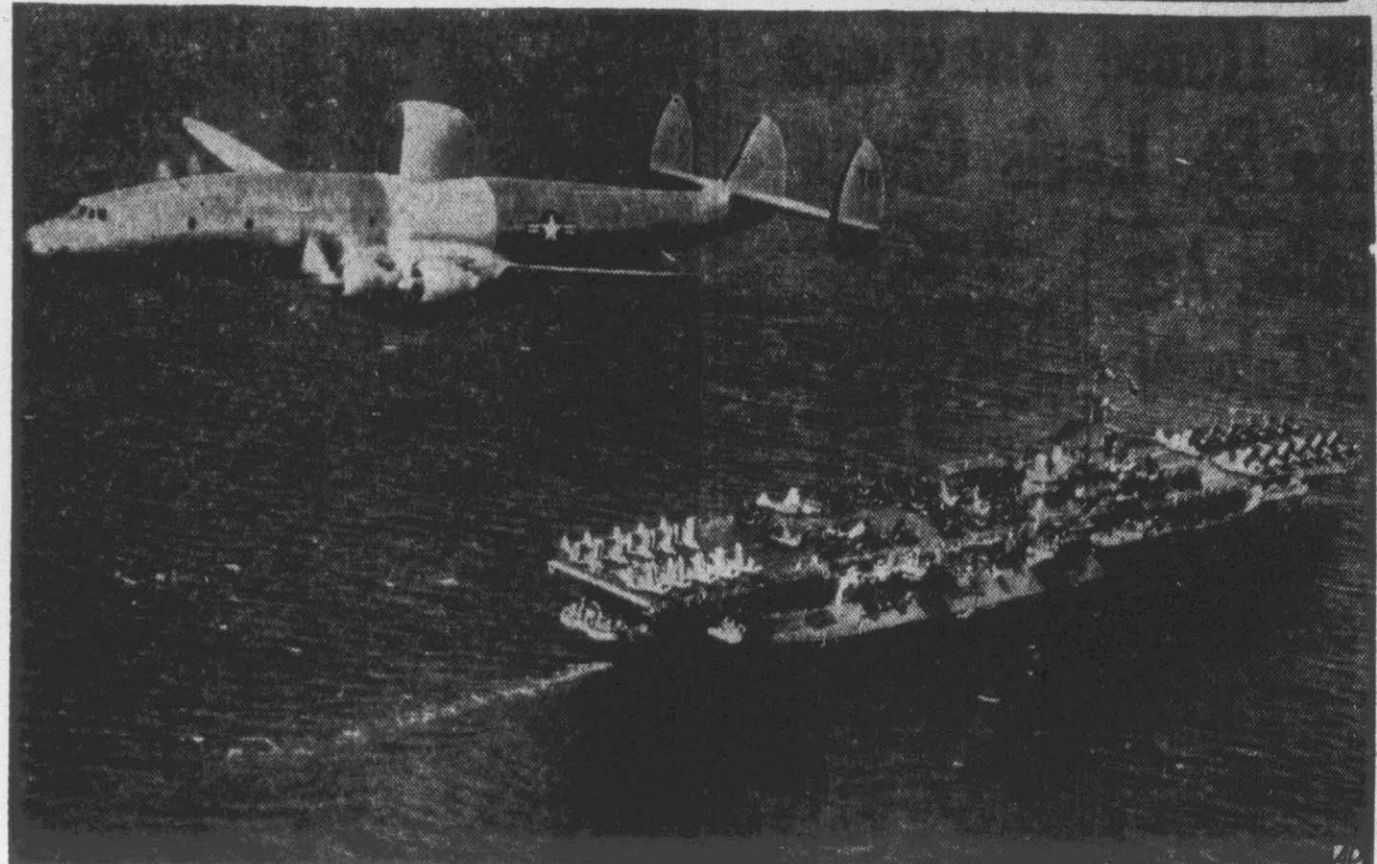

"America is capitalist," he said. "Indians relate capitalism to imperialism, and imperialism to colonialism. Colonialism is the Devil we know."
This came from an Indian leader who is pro-American, and thus is testimony to the strength of Moscow-Peking propaganda in Asia. Communist efforts have been concentrated upon identifying the United States with colonialism and imperialism.

The Communist party in India professes to give all-out support to the foreign policy of Prime Minister Nehru and his Congress party, itself carrying on a grim struggle with the domestic Communists.
The Red objective seems to be to drive Nehru into toeing the Communist Chinese line. Nehru does not appear willing to be lured all the way, but apparently he is becoming openly more and more anti-American. He declined an interview but his supporters say he has these reasons:

1. U.S. military aid to Pakistan. Nothing has so stirred anti-American sentiment. One Indian leader told me this amounted to arming "India's enemy," since there has been no solution to the Indian-Pakistani dispute over Kashmir state.
 2. Suggestions in Washington that the war in Indochina might be internationalized. Indian leaders picture the Indochina war as purely one against colonialism. Some of them were so much in the dark about it they had to be briefed by the British before the Colombo conference last month.
 3. Attempts to bring about a Southeast Asia alliance. Indian leaders say this is an invitation for Asia to provide the arena for World War III.
 4. Statements by Americans about the use of atomic weapons and the prospect of "massive retaliation." Indian leaders portray such statements as heralding a futile attempt to blast communism out of existence rather than trying to outflank communism with better ideas and ideals.
 5. Failure to appreciate India's special position. This is the crux of the matter. Indian leaders apparently consider themselves misled by American misunderstanding, consider that they are required to walk an international tightrope because of their geographical position.
- Nehru has been facing rising criticism throughout India — particularly in west Bengal and Communist-infested Calcutta—in sharp contrast to his almost unassailable position of a few years ago. There has been talk about his Congress party getting soft and tired, that it must produce definite economic results by the next elections in 1957 or prepare to get out of power. Now, apparently, the Congress party is attempting to step up its efforts in that direction.

In foreign policy the Congress party's worries bring about a sort of solemn masquerade, such as the "National Convention Against United States Military Aid to Pakistan," which I attended in New Delhi.

The convention was unofficial, but obviously had Congress blessing. Speakers criticized the United States in a tired sort of way, as if required to do so. It looked almost as if such things might be staged primarily to steal Communist thunder on such issues. But, in attempting to pull the rug from under the Communist drives, the Indian politicians themselves gave impetus to anti-American sentiment.
Everything the United States does or offers to do in India is subject to suspicious scrutiny. The United States receives a generally bad press. Anti-Americanism is fanned by professional Communists and opportunists who twist Nehru's statements on international affairs to suit their own purposes.
To retain its dominant position, the Congress party wants to appear completely independent of the United States and the taint, advertised by the Communists, of "imperialism." Thus Nehru's biggest problem seems to be an attempt to satisfy all shades of opinion, including those within his own party.
For some time to come world communism likely will be satisfied with a neutral India. There is much to digest meanwhile. But the Communists in India are far from idle. They have infiltrated deeply into the Indian press. They have kept up unceasing efforts to dominate India's students source of tomorrow's leadership. They are active in the trade union movement.
Communism's ultimate aim is a coalition of all opposition parties against the Congress party. Already in some areas the Congress party owes its dominance only to the fact that the opposition has been split. Should the coalition succeed, the Communists then could operate in the usual pattern — lopping off their temporary allies one by one.
U.S. farm exports in January, 1954 were valued at 205 million dollars, about 24 per cent below those of the previous January.
Early U.S. census reports gave the amount of coal mined in bushels and it is estimated that about 28 bushels of coal equal a ton.

Johnny Found Gold In Filmland Jungles

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD, May 27 (AP)—"I went into the jungle with a bunch of unmedals and came out with gold."

That was Johnny Weissmuller's reflection on his 23 years in the movie business. How well fixed because of his earnings in African movies the onetime swimming champ says he may retire in another two years.

"I've had it," he says. "In another two years, I'd like to give up the jungle life and retire."
"Don't worry about me finding something to keep me busy. I'm a guy who likes his leisure. I'd be perfectly content to spend my time skin-diving, playing golf and just relaxing."

There's only one element that might upset his plans—TV. Right now a deal for a series is being whipped up. His agents and business managers are hot for it, but Johnny isn't enthusiastic. He doesn't like to work that hard.

That's understandable. He probably does less work for more money than any other performer in Hollywood. For the past eight years, he has been doing the Jungle Jim series, in which he shares the profits. He does three a year for an estimated return of $100,000. Not bad, considering the films take a mere nine days apiece.

Movie making takes only 27 days out of his year. What does he do the rest of the time? Occasionally he takes out a water show, as he did in Las Vegas last year. But most of the time he simply enjoys life.

I must say that it agrees with him. I saw Johnny on the set of his latest Jungle Jim epic, "The Moon Men." He was up to his thighs in moon men—all the mid-gets and dwarfs in this area had been recruited for film. He'll be 47 next Wednesday, but he has the build and face of a much younger man.
I asked him how he does it. "Swimming," he replied with th obvious answer. "I keep my pool at home at 80 degrees the year around. Every day I swim about a half-mile. I do it with my feet in a rubber tube, so I'm pulling dead water. That way I get the exercise without having to make so many turns. The pool is only 20 by 40 feet, and I'd get dizzy if I swam without something to hold me back."
The daily workout keeps him at a trim 205-210 pounds, which is per for a man who is 6 feet 3. He was only 10 or 15 pounds lighter when he was breaking all the swimming records in sight.

Poor Home Showings Hurts St. Louis Cards

Australian Ace Leads Colonial

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF
FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)—Young Peter Thomson of Australia and two of the most famous names in American golf—Byron Nelson and Ben Hogan—headed the field in that order today as the $25,000 Colonial National Invitation Tournament moved into its second round.

Thomson had to tie the lowest opening round in the eight-year history of the tournament to do it. But he was amazing with his putter as he fashioned a 4-under-par 66 yesterday to take the lead by a stroke over Nelson the tall Texan who has been in semiretirement for eight years, and by three strokes over Hogan.

Sam Snead and Skip Alexander shot 66s in 1950 to establish the lowest first round in the tournament's history. Thomson, using only 25 putts, carved six birdies out of the tough 7,035-yard, par-70 Colonial Country Club course, to equal those rounds and put the curly-haired young man of 24 years and a perpetual smile in position to make his highest finish in an American golf tournament.

Nelson, the Roanoke Tex., rancher who plays only a few tournaments a year, also was putting well. He tallied a 67 for his best round in the Colonial tournament. He said he hadn't putted that well since 1946—the year he quit the golf trail.

Hogan, four times champion of the Colonial tournament and favorite this year, was methodically brilliant with a 69. He had no 3-putt greens.

Tied at par 70 were three professionals—Fred Hawkins of El Paso Johnny Palmer of Charlotte, N. C., and Ed Furgol of St. Louis—and amateur Harvie Ward Jr. of San Francisco.

Greenville Native Misses No-Hit Win

Billy Dunn of Greenville and Christ School of Asheville lost a chance for baseball's hall of fame May 22 when he gave up two seventh-inning singles to Asheville School for Boys.

Dunn, son of Judge and Mrs. Albion Dunn, had a no-hitter going into the final inning of the contest but lost it when the Asheville team suddenly found its batting eye. Despite the hits, Dunn settled down again almost immediately to work his way out of trouble and win 7-0. He struck out three and walked only two batters.

The game was the last one of the season for both squads.

THURSDAY'S STARS
PITCHING—Ned Garver, Detroit Tigers, scattered seven hits in winning his first game in almost three weeks, 7-1, over Baltimore.

By BEN PHELAGAR
AP Sports Writer

The way the St. Louis Cardinals have been playing at home this season you'd almost think they were trying to help the fans remember the old Browns.

The Cardinals obviously are a better ball team than the Browns were. But a quick glance at their Busch Stadium record raises sharp doubts that the players share owner August Busch's determination that the club must remain in St. Louis.

In 22 games at home this season the Cardinals have won only 10. And just twice have they been able to put a pair of victories back to back.

A week ago today they came home from their first long Eastern trip in first place. Last night they hustled out of town in second division. Between times they had a stroke over Chicago, both lower bracket clubs, and skidded from first to fifth.

Although the pitching faltered and Vic Raschi got hurt, no one thing seemed to be the trouble. It was just that things which worked on the road didn't at home. The fact is the Cardinals' over-all record still is above .500 is due entirely to their road play where they've won 11 and lost 7.

The Cards dropped to fifth during yesterday's abbreviated program, bowing 7-3 to Chicago. Philadelphia trounced Brooklyn 11-5. Washington tripped the New York Yankees 7-3 and Detroit handed Baltimore its seventh straight loss, 7-1. The eight other clubs weren't scheduled.

Hank Sauer hit his 14th home run, tying him for the National League lead with Stan Musial, and Ralph Kiner hit his seventh homer as the Cubs collected a dozen hits off Gerry Staley and Stu Miller of the Cardinals. Musial went hitless in three appearances.

The Phillies scored in every inning except the first and last at Brooklyn. Their 14-hit attack against five Dodger pitchers included seven extra-base blows, three of them home runs by Earl Wyrstok, Willie Jones and John Torgeson.

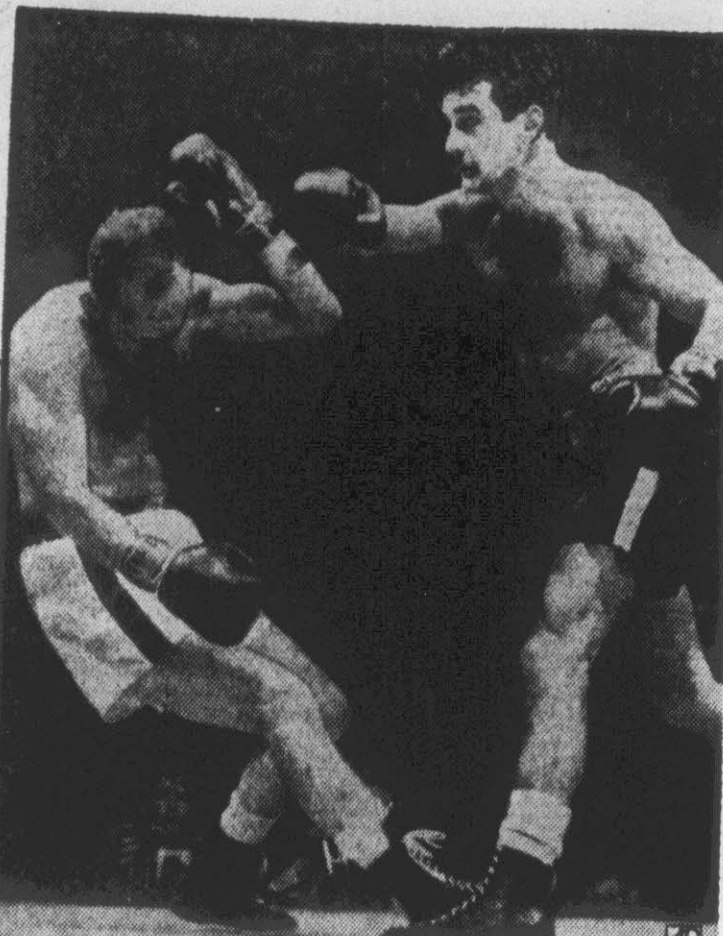

Don Newcombe, making his first start after missing two turns because of arm trouble, lasted only 2-3 innings and was charged with his third loss. He's won three.

In Washington the Yankees looked bad, committing three errors that led to six unearned runs. Lefty Chuck Stobbs gave up nine hits but was never in serious trouble after Washington batted around for five runs in the fifth.

Detroit came up with four runs in the first inning against the slumping Orioles and Ned Garver never gave the Birds a chance to catch up.

An error by Bobby Young on a potential double-play ball opened the flood gates in the first. Young later homered for the only Baltimore run.

BATTING—Richie Ashburn, Philadelphia Phils, collected four hits in five times at bat as the Phils beat Brooklyn, 11-5.

ON THE WAY DOWN—Vince Martinez (right) of Paterson, N. J., sends Chuck Davey to the canvas with a solid right in the sixth round of their scheduled 10-round welterweight battle at Chicago Stadium. Davey, of Lansing, Mich., was floored four times and Martinez was awarded a technical knockout when Davey was not permitted to come out for the seventh round. (AP Wirephoto)

Elks Hold Top Spot With 10-9 Victory

Native Dancer Has Foot Injury

By WAYNE BISHOP
Reflector Sports Writer

After smashing out six runs in the second inning, the Elks club hung on the rest of the way to edge out a 10-9 victory over the Exchange yesterday afternoon in Little League activity.

The big inning saved the Elks from defeat as the Exchange outscored them 9-4 over the rest of the game. The win kept the first place position in the Tar Heel League with the undefeated Elks. Their record is now 4-0 with the Exchange tied for second with the Moose club at 2-2.

Two costly errors on the part of the Exchange opened the door for the big score. Bynum led off with a double and Arthur walked. Rick Sauve unloaded the sacks with a ringing triple down the rightfield line. Corbett grounded to the first baseman, who made a boner and threw to the plate although Sauve had held at third. Hardee walked and after one out J. G. Procter walked to send across another run.

Forbes was safe on a fielder's choice that scored another run and Joe Moye was safe on an error that let in two more runs.

After that the Exchange kept pecking away but they never could quite catch up.

The leading hitter for the Elks was Herrill Bynum who smacked two doubles and a single in four trips. Jeff Fountain hit two for two for the Exchange.

This afternoon it will be the Lions versus the Kiwanis at 5 o'clock.

Davey To Quit; Looking For Job

CHICAGO (AP)—Attired in a dark blue business suit, with a matching left eye, Chuck Davey yesterday told a press conference that he was hanging up his boxing gloves for good.

The announcement came as a surprise. His manager, Hec Knowles, had said Wednesday night that he was going to recommend that Davey quit. Davey had just suffered a seventh-round TKO by welterweight Vince Martinez in Chicago Stadium.

The balding Davey, 28, who has a masters' degree in education, said it was tough to be retiring now "because I wanted to have a good fight before leaving the ring as an active boxer."

"Boxing has been very rewarding to me," he said. "It enabled me to receive an education. It gave me a rich and varied experience. In no other business, at my age, could I have done so well."

Davey, whose record stands at 40 victories against five defeats and two draws and whose earnings have been estimated at $150,000, still is not through with television. The medium that built him up to a one-time national boxing hero.

"I'm going to try to break into the radio and television sports-casting field," he said. "I've had a sports show in my home town—Lansing, Mich.—for two years, and now I'd like to branch out."

Pridmore Strikes Out 14 In PONY League's Opener

Left-hander Bobby Pridmore spun a brilliant 14 strikeout masterpiece last night at Guy Smith Stadium as he led his National Guard teammates to a 4-2 win over the Fordomatics in 1954's PONY League opener.

Pridmore went the route and allowed only five hits in addition to the 14 unearned runs. Both the runs were unearned runs in the last inning.

Pridmore and little Lucian Bryan had hooked up into an exciting scoreless pitching duel for five innings when the National Guard broke loose in the top of the sixth.

Mark Roebuck led off the sixth inning with a single. Evans was safe on an error by the pitcher. Roebuck scored when Oscar Stoneham was safe on an error and Evans went to third. Evans scored when Churchill was safe on a fielder's choice that retired Stoneham. Churchill was nailed trying to steal second.

Big Johnny Harrison then stepped in and slammed a long drive for a home run to send the National Guard into a 3-0 lead.

In the top of the seventh the Guard scored one more insurance run. Then Pridmore went out and retired the Fordomatics although he weakened slightly in the inning.

After two were out, Pridmore walked Jorgensen and Billy Sermons. A ground ball went through the shortstop and both runners scored. Pridmore settled down to strike out Powell to end the game.

The game was the first PONY League game of the year. The Bright Leaf and Red Men will meet tonight at the Guy Smith Stadium field.

9:00—National Guard vs Carolina Dairies

The Graniteers pulled back into a position wherein they can threaten the leaders of Greenville's Recreation Softball League with a solid 17-1 victory over the hapless Jolly Rogers last night at Guy Smith Stadium.

The game was the feature contest of a doubleheader. In the other end of the twin bill, Home Builders pulled themselves into a 500 position again with an 8-5 victory over sixth-place Southern Bread.

The victory by the Graniteers gives them a 3-1 record for the year. They are in third place, behind Carolina Dairies (3-0) and National Guard (1-0). Tonight, the two leaders clash in the second game of the twin bill that will be launched by newcomer Harris Super Markets and four-place Garner-Wynne-Manning.

The Graniteers, rallying behind the three-hit pitching of Fuller, scored in each of the four innings they were at the bat. They got four runs in the first and third innings, two in the second and seven in a big fourth frame.

Dixie Hobgood led the hitting with three singles in four trips to the plate with Hendrix getting two hits—a single and a triple—in three trips. Robertson had two singles in two official trips.

About the only man Fuller had even the slightest degree of trouble with was Wood who collected a pair of singles and then reached on an error in three trips to the plate.

Loses Shutout
Fuller lost his shutout in the fourth when the Jolly Rogers put together a single, a walk, and a wild pitch for their only run.

In the second contest, Home Builders maintained a half-game lead over Southern Bread by scoring in the early innings and then holding off determined rallies by the bakers.

A four run second inning wrapped the game up for Home Builders. The frame started with walks to Lupton and Cowan and then Hudson reached after being hit by the pitcher. McGowan popped up to the infield but Jones got the life on a fielder's choice that turned in one run. Painter popped up the infield but Minges cleaned the decks with a rousing two-base hit to account for three runs.

Gordon, pitching for the Builders, gave up only two hits, one to Skeet Wysokowski and one to J. Hardee. No Home Builders batter got more than one hit, all eight of them going to different men. Paul Jones had the big hit, however, a first inning homerun with one man on.

Stranahan Loses In British Event

By TOM OCHILTREE
MURFIELD, England (AP)—Major W. D. Henderson of San Francisco, a happy weekend golfer, went into the quarter-finals of the British Amateur Championship today hoping to stretch his first taste of golfing glory.

He and Big Bill Campbell of Huntington W. Va., were the only Americans left in the eight-man field. The others are three Englishmen, a Scot, an Irishman and an Australian.

Henderson is in the lower bracket—et—the one composed of players with more hope than reputation. Henderson, who won the California junior championship back in 1931, said he entered the tournament "for the fun of it."

But now he's beginning to think he has a chance to win it. After whipping Alan Hall of Scotland 3 and 2 yesterday, he takes on Englishman W. A. Stark today. In the other lower bracket match, Douglas Bachli, former Australian amateur champion, plays J. K. Tate of England.

By GORDON TAIT
SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—An all-time record of more than five million voters will decide in general parliamentary elections tomorrow whether Australia will continue under the present free enterprise coalition or return to socialism. Despite the fact this is the prime issue in the voting for 123 members of Australia's lower chamber, the House of Representatives, it has been the quietest election campaign since the end of World War II.

Australians reckon this apathy is a sign the Liberal-Country Party coalition of Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies will be returned to office. The faction which wins the majority of seats in the House chooses the government.

Voting in Australia is compulsory and those eligible who fail to go to the polls are subject to fines. The roll call of electors is swelled this time by the addition of thousands of foreign-born adults who completed the necessary five years' residence in Australia and now have become Australian citizens.

The most powerful opposition to the Conservative Menzies government is the Labor party. The Laborites were in control in Australia throughout World War II and until 1949, when they were ousted by the present coalition. Former Foreign Minister Dr. Herbert V. Evatt is the Laborite leader.

In the last general election in April 1951, Labor won 54 seats and the Liberals only 52, making it necessary for Menzies to lean on the small Country party for an additional 17 seats to control Parliament. The Country party claims to represent the interests of farmers and residents of rural districts. Its leader is Sir Arthur Fadden, deputy prime minister and treasurer in the Menzies Cabinet.

There are 291 candidates for 116 of the seats. Six government members and one Labor member will be returned to Parliament unopposed.

The suave, 59-year-old Prime Minister has carried on a campaign promoting the political philosophy of an old-time Liberal who believes in the sanctity of the individual.

The party of his opponent, 60-year-old Dr. Evatt, is a tightly organized trade union organization pledged to gradual socialization of the nation's economy.

Transit Tie-Up Taken In Stride

PITTSBURGH (AP)—A pert blonde, busily chewing gum, smiles brightly and cheerfully raises her thumb to hitch a ride to work.

An elderly steelworker, a lunch box tucked under his arm, stands on the corner waiting for a fellow worker to come by in his auto.

Two teen-age boys, whistling snatches of the latest Hit Parade tunes, stroll block after block toward school.

All are familiar sights in this bustling industrial metropolis, without trolley; and most of its buses for nearly three weeks as the result of an AFL operators' strike.

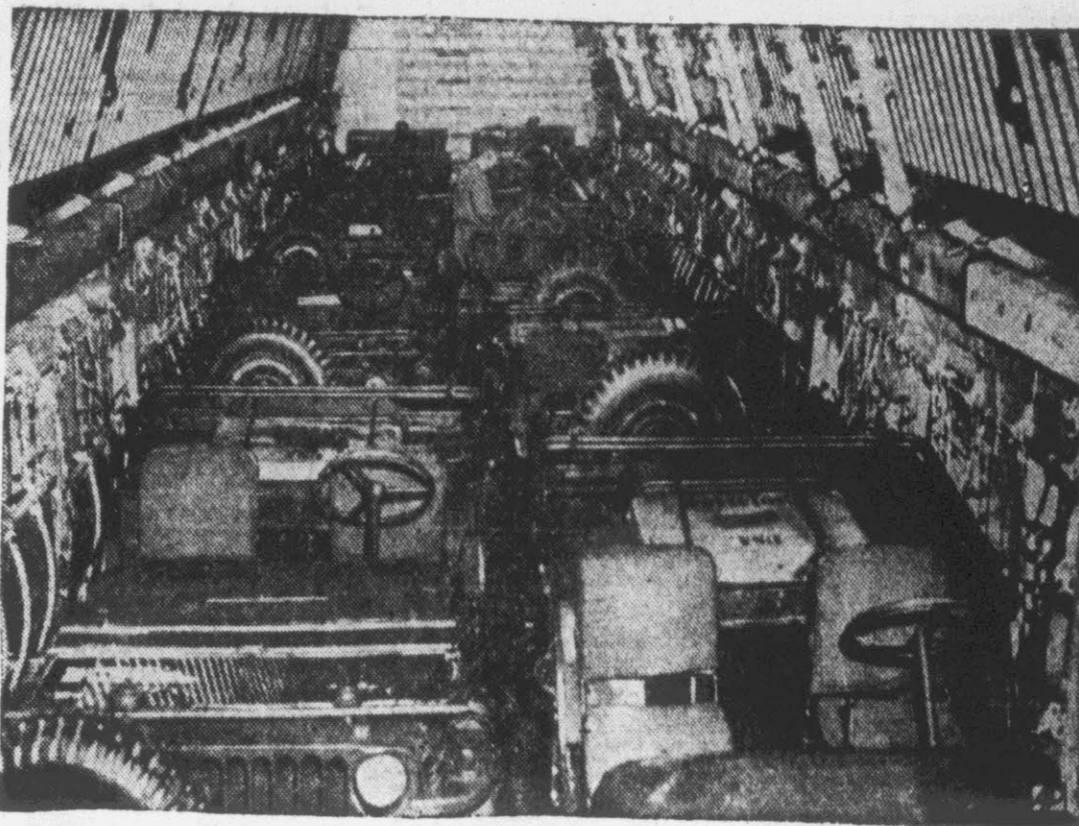

Almost everyone is taking the tie-up in stride. If they can't find other means of transportation, residents walk or hitchhike.

Commuter trains, independent bus lines taxicabs and private autos are taking up the transportation slack. That's a pretty big job in a city of 700,000—12th largest in the nation—which is the center of a metropolitan area with more than two million population.

Car pools have been formed in many neighborhoods and share-the-ride stations have been set up at some taxicab stands.

Some walkers find their daily junts to and from work are doing wonders for their health. They vow they'll keep on walking even though they'll keep on walking even though hundreds of additional autos pour into the downtown section—Pittsburgh's famed Golden Triangle—no serious jams have developed and traffic moves smoothly for the most part, although somewhat slower than usual.

However, the strike is felt keenly by merchants in the Golden Tri-

Baby And Pillow Flung From Car

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP)—Four-month-old Michael Hatoflax was sleeping on a pillow on the front seat of a car driven by his mother, Mrs. Ann Hatoflax, 29, when the car was struck roadside by a two-ton truck yesterday.

The right front door was flung open and Michael flew 20 feet through the air, accompanied by the pillow.

It was still under him when he landed. He suffered only minor bruises and scratches.

Elisha Reveals Spiritual Resources ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—II Kings 4:18-37; 6:8-23.

The prophet Elisha often passed through Shunem where a friendly woman asked him to break bread in her home.

One day when Elisha was enjoying his room, he asked his servant to summon his hostess.

A son was born, but one day when he was with his father in the field he told his father his head hurt.

Elisha's servant was frightened when Syrian hosts attacked Israel. Elisha said: "Fear not; for they that be with us are more than they that be with them."

MEMORY VERSE—Hebrews 13:2.

Elisha Reveals Spiritual Resources

PROPHET RAISES BOY FROM DEAD; SAVES ISRAEL FROM SYRIANS.

Scripture—II Kings 4:18-37, 6:8-23.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL. WE HAVE a beautiful lesson to study today.

The prophet Elisha passed through the town of Shunem (we are giving both spellings of the name) the town thought to have been about three miles from Carmel.

The woman's perceptions were keen and she was sure that this man to whom she was kind was no common person.

Elisha had no regular home. He went about doing Jehovah's will, and he must have fully appreciated this homelike place in which to lay his head when he was weary.

his bed, then she set out to find Elisha. The prophet saw her coming and sent his servant to meet her and to ask: "Is it well with thee? Is it well with thy husband? Is it well with the child?"

She answered, "It is well," but when she came to Elisha she fell at his feet, and when Gehazi would have thrust her away, Elisha told him to "let her alone; for her soul is vexed within her; and the Lord hath hid it from me, and hath not told me."

Elisha paced the room, then went back and again stretched himself on the boy who awoke seven times, then opened his eyes, and Gehazi was told to bring the mother.

The king of Syria began a war against Israel and chose a camp site. Elisha told Israel's king where it was saying, "Beware led with him by the name of Gehazi. He was a wideawake fellow, so Elisha asked him to call their hostess, and when she came to him he asked her what he could do for her for being so kind to him.

"Wouldst thou be spoken for to the king, or to the captain of the host?" If he had done so she would have been honored.

Her reply was typical of the great-hearted woman who is kind and thoughtful for others without thinking of reward: "I dwell among mine own people."

She was the good neighbor, ready and willing to do whatever she could at any time for any neighbor in need of help. We all know at least one woman who is such a neighbor.

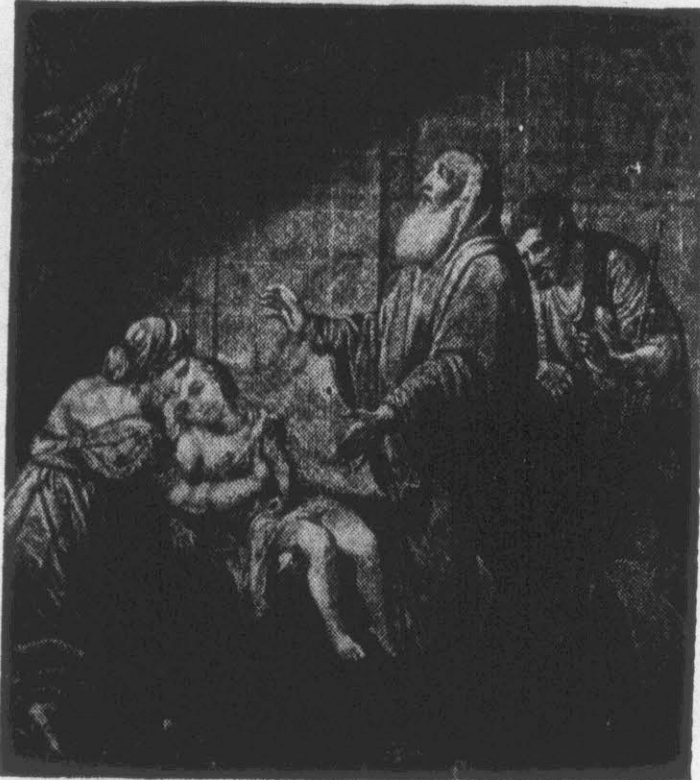

The servant, Gehazi, guessed that there was one thing, however, that the woman yearned for above all others. She was childless and this was a great grief to her, so when Elisha asked him, "What then is to be done for her?" he answered, "She hath no child."

Elisha said, "Call her," and when she stood before him again he told her that she would have a son. She doubted that this could be true, but in due time she did have a son, to her great joy.

The boy grew, but one day when he was in the field with his father, he said, "My head, my head." His father called a lad and told him to carry the child to his mother. He sat on her lap until noon and then died.

His mother carried him to the prophet's room and laid him on 'HOT DAWG!'—Just about able to squeeze into a hot dog roll and give a convincing, eyes-closed imitation of a frankfurter is this sleepy, two-weeks-old Chihuahua puppy.

Impasse Broken By Bedding Roll

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—For three and a half hours a stubborn battle was fought in silence along a lonely road here.

It began when two cars met on the narrow thoroughfare—too narrow for both to pass.

The impasse grew tense. Soon three youths hopped from one car. They lounged on the road bank, read, played cards. The other driver gnashed his teeth, but refused to back out.

When the trio reached for sleeping bags—210 minutes later—their battle was won.

OLD SCHOOL BECOMES A SHRINE—Old Dobbin and children in old costumes provide atmosphere for ceremonies at Woodstock, Conn., dedicating to the principle of America's free schools the Quasset school in this dairy community—a one-room school built in 1748, 28 years before the signing of the Declaration of Independence. TO THE VOTERS OF PITT COUNTY

My opponent for the office of Resident Superior Court Judge of the Fifth Judicial District in a leaflet mailed to many of you says:

"Judge Frizzelle is eligible for retirement whether he wins or loses this election, and has been eligible for several years. He can still be Judge, and I can be Judge with no loss to him. I am 54 years of age. A Judge's term is for 8 years. If I wait for another 8 years, it will be too late for the retirement feature to do me any good."

The leaflet is signed: "Sincerely, William J. Bundy."

You voters will have to decide whether to add the extra expense of an unnecessary Judge to the tax burden of the people in order to gratify Mr. Bundy's plainly stated desire to obtain for himself the retirement feature he mentions.

My campaign for renomination and re-election is based solely on my qualification for the office. I repeat what I consider to be the real issue in this contest between Mr. Bundy and myself; namely:

Which of the two candidates is the better qualified by training and experience to render to the public the best service as Resident Judge of the Superior Court? If you think Mr. Bundy is better qualified than I, then it would be your duty to vote for him; if, on the other hand, in your sober thinking and in your considered judgment, you decide I am the better qualified of the two, then I hope and believe you will vote for me.

Most sincerely yours, JUDGE J. PAUL FRIZZELLE

KERR SCOTT IS A CLEAN FIGHTER!

Kerr Scott is clean and positive . . . he sticks to the issues . . . and refuses to stoop to mud-slinging . . . Kerr Scott is a man of the people, a builder who knows the problems of the people . . . he is always found fighting for the best interests of the people . . . Elect Kerr Scott to the U. S. Senate.

Scott for Senator TERRY SANFORD, Campaign Manager.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market drifted lower today into the early afternoon with marked activity at higher prices in a couple of motors a feature.

Studebaker was up between 1 and 2 points and quite active. Packard gained a good fraction and hit the tape with blocks of 5,000 and 15,000 shares at higher prices.

There have been rumors of a merger between the two for some time, but informed sources could point to no new development.

Gains and losses throughout the list ran to around a point as a general rule.

An exception was Union Pacific which was up between 4 and 5 points. The railroad yesterday reporting continued high earnings for the first four months this year.

Business progressed at a fair pace of around two million shares for the day. Yesterday's total was 2,230,000 shares with the market backing down.

Most railroads were lower, a situation that also existed in the steels, radio-televisions, and airlines. Otherwise the market was fairly well mixed with a lower look.

Going down were Bethlehem Steel, Sears Roebuck, Radio Corp., American Telephone, Homestake Mining, Dow Chemical, General Electric, American Can, American Viscose, Southern Railway and Pan American World Airways.

CAP Squadron Hears Instructor

1st Lt. Harold R. Selfridge, East Carolina College Air Force R. O. T. C. instructor, talked on "Air Search and Rescue" at a meeting of the Greenville Civil Air Patrol Squadron earlier this week.

Approximately 25 CAP members heard the lieutenant, who was stationed with an Air Search and Rescue Squadron in Newfoundland prior to coming to East Carolina, tell of the work of an Air Search unit.

He explained to the local Air Force Auxiliary unit how the work of the CAP in Newfoundland helped the Air Force. He said the small CAP planes could go down through the valleys in Newfoundland searching for a missing aircraft where a larger Air Force plane would not be able to go due to its speed.

Later this summer Lt. Selfridge, an Air Force navigator, will show this unit some movies on navigation.

The Greenville CAP Squadron meets each week at the Pitt-Greenville Airport. Its headquarters is one of the quonset huts, which has been made usable by the members of the Squadron.

Toll Surpassed Battle Losses

QUONSET POINT, R. I. (AP)—This week's explosions and fire aboard the aircraft carrier Bennington took more than six times the number of American lives lost in the Revolutionary War battle for which the ship was named.

American losses in the battle of Bennington, Vt., in 1777 were only 14. The known dead aboard the carrier total 93.

New Names Are Given College Buildings, Gates

East Carolina College has named several buildings and gateways on the campus in honor of friends of the college who through service and loyalty to its ideals have furthered the progress of the institution.

President John D. Messick of East Carolina announced this week that the Board of Trustees, meeting on the campus last Saturday, approved the new names of the college structures.

The Faculty Apartments building is to be called in future the Clyde A. Erwin building, in honor of the late Dr. Erwin, superintendent of public instruction in North Carolina for a number of years and during his period of service in this position ex-officio chairman of the East Carolina Board of Trustees.

Other buildings and those for whom they are named are: the Alumni-Faculty house, for Mamie E. Jenkins of Raleigh, retired, charter member of the college faculty; the Administration building, for the late J. B. Spilman of Greenville, college treasurer; the College Theatre, for Dr. Howard J. McGinnis, of Greenville, retired, who served as faculty member, registrar, director of the Bureau of Field Services, and acting president of the college; and the Laboratory School, for Frances Wahl of Greenville, principal, and Dora E. Coates of Raleigh, retired, teacher in the elementary grades there and later a member of the college education department.

The gate marking the entrance to the campus on Fifth Street near the Austin building will be known in future as the Ross-Lewis Gate in honor of O. S. Ross of Greenville, retired, who served as registrar for three years, and Kate W. Lewis of Greenville, retired, charter member of the faculty and director of the department of art for many years.

Two gates located on Fifth Street, and leading to the entrance of the Laboratory School are named in honor, respectively, of Ann Redwine of Monroe, retired, and Elisabeth Hyman of Greenville, retired, who have long records of service in the elementary grades there.

'Books and Stuff'

We note that the books pushed by the big book clubs usually make for quite some time, so here's some advance news on what they're going to be:

The Literary Guild selection for June is "The Carrol Affair," by Mary Deasy and published by Little, Brown. There will be a review of it in these columns soon.

And in July the Literary Guild announces "The Conquest of Don Pedro," by Harvey Ferguson, a love story that takes place in a little town in New Mexico.

The Book-of-the-Month Club selection for June is "A Time to Love and a Time to Die," by Erich Maria Remarque, translated from the German by Denver Lindley. Remarque, if you remember, is the author of the post-World War I shocker, "All Quiet on the Western Front," which enjoyed years of popularity as a book and later as a movie. His new book is about a German private in World War II and his experiences in the cities behind the battle-lines. We only hope that history doesn't repeat itself a third time and find Mr. Remarque writing about the experiences of a German private in World War III—if there is anyplace left for him to have his experiences in.

And in July the Book-of-the-Month Club selection will be "Mary Anne," a historical novel by Daphne du Maurier. It's about an army investigation, no less, but it takes place in England about 150 years ago, so the present Republican administration won't have to worry.

Two new books have just come out about Japan, one scholarly and a bit heavy, the other popular. The scholarly one was issued under the auspices of the Royal Institute of International Affairs, and is called by the imposing title "Japan's New Order in East Asia, Its Rise and Fall, 1937-45." The author is F. C. Jones, who tries to show what the main factors were which drove Japan into world war and disaster.

"Typhoon in Tokyo: The Occupation and Its Aftermath," by Harry Emerson Wildes, is a different kind of book, and concerns the eventual happenings in Japan during the American Occupation after World War II. Dr. Wildes served as regional specialist for Japan in the Office of War Information, and he tells the story of 30,000 "Occupationnaires," who "loosed a whirlwind that swept away reaction, wrecked restrictive social barriers, and cleared the way for real, constructive reform." Sounds like quite a typhoon.

Two new books about religion under the Communists have just been released. "Now I Can Tell" is by the Rt. Rev. Quentin K. Y. Huang, Episcopal Bishop of Yunkwei in South-west China, and is about his experiences as a captive of the Chinese Communists and his adventurous escape to freedom over the Burma Road.

More factual but less exciting is "Religion Behind the Iron Curtain," by George N. Shuster, a former editor of "Commonweal," President of Hunter College in New York and Chairman of the U. S. National Commission for UNESCO. Dr. Shuster records in his book a picture of how people of various religions are surviving in the countries of eastern Europe now under the domination of the Soviets, and bases his account on first-hand handgled, documents and eye-witness reports.

We've been reading a paper-back called "More Stories in the Modern Manner," a selection of short stories published in recent years in "The Partisan Review," modestly termed on the flyleaf "America's leading literary magazine." We are probably way off on this, but so Nobles, Free Will Baptist minister of Winterville. Burial will be in the McLawhorn Cemetery near the home. The body will be carried to the church one hour prior to the time of service.

File Notice Of Appeal To High Court Over Estate

Notice of appeal to the North Carolina Supreme Court was filed in Pitt County Superior Court yesterday after Presiding Judge Clawson L. Williams had heard and allowed a motion of non-suit and dismissal of the case involving the estate of Fannie V. Bowen, deceased.

The motion was entered by the defendants, Hildred Bowen Darden and her husband George W. Darden, and First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Greenville. Judge Williams had not allowed a first motion, at the conclusion of testimony of the plaintiffs, but he did allow the second motion which was entered upon conclusion of evidence and testimony presented by the defense.

The case involves ownership of a house and lot on Dickinson Avenue in Greenville. The plaintiffs, H. M. Bowen and eight other children of the deceased, had charged that the defendants had obtained possession of the property through fraudulent methods when the title to the property was prepared. As it was entered, the title to the property gave the deceased, Fannie V. Bowen, a life interest in the estate with the remainder to go to her daughter, Hildred Bowen Darden.

The plaintiffs had charged that the deceased had wanted a fee simple title to the property. The defendants said that the arrangement concerning the title was such because of the wishes of the deceased.

Purchase price of the property involved, as stated in court records, was $20,000. The plaintiffs had declared in their complaint that estimated value of the property is now $40,000.

By allowing the non-suit and motion for dismissal, Judge Williams charged the plaintiffs with the costs of the case. After notice of appeal was given, appeal bond was set at $100.
