Tentatively Plan Guatemala Move

By NORMA NCARIGNAN WASHINGTON (AP)—Informed officials said today the United States is tentatively scheduled to call on Monday for a special conference of hemisphere foreign ministers to take united action to quarantine Red-tinted Guatemala.

In preliminary consultations, the American republics have already agreed unanimously on the advisability of holding the conference—probably around the end of this month, at Montevideo, Uruguay.

They have also come to terms substantially on the main resolutions to be discussed at the meeting. The resolutions are aimed at preventing the Soviets from shipping more arms to Guatemala and stopping Guatemala from stirring up trouble in other Central American countries with red weapons.

A large shipment of arms—much bigger than Guatemala was said to need for her own defense—recently arrived unmolested at the Central American Red stronghold on a vessel which came from the Russian-controlled port of Stettin, Poland.

The U.S. move to take up the Guatemala question at Montevideo will be made through the Council of the Organization of American States, the central organism of the 21 hemisphere nations, which meets at the Pan American Union headquarters here.

Informed officials said the U.S. proposed resolutions, which have been threshed out in inter-American consultations the past two weeks, would do two main things: 1. Announce that henceforth any ships carrying Communist arms for Guatemala will be intercepted and the cargo seized.

2. Set up a five-nation watchdog commission to enforce the ship-interception resolution and to keep an eye on Communist activities in Guatemala. The United States would be a member of the commission.

Advance indication of congressional support for the U.S. move came today from Rep. Hillings (R-Calif.), a member of a special House committee on Communist aggression, who recently returned from a trip to Guatemala.

Hillings said on a radio broadcast prepared for a program sponsored by Rep. Ostertag (R-N.Y.) that "the Communists have stepped up their attempt to win absolute control of Guatemala."

He called for an immediate economic blockade by the United States and Latin American countries "as the first step" to counter the Red threat there.

Communists "have intensified their drive against anti-Communists" within Guatemala, the congressman added, because "they want to have full control of the country before the Latin American countries meet—as they probably will soon—to decide what action to take against them."

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP)—The curfew clamped in this capital after Wednesday's rioting in which 15 persons were reported killed was lifted last night.

The rioting was led by students. The government charged they were Communist-inspired.

Alleged Profiteers Are Listed

More May Follow In Check-Up On Government Housing 'Windfall' Profits

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Eisenhower administration's investigation of reported government housing scandals has come up with its first list of alleged "windfall" profiteers. More may follow.

Housing Chief Albert M. Coe announced late yesterday that a two-month inquiry has discovered 200 apartments promoters who he said pocketed nearly 40 million dollars in profits from inflated government-backed loans on 70 projects in 18 states and the District of Columbia.

William F. McKenna, Cole's deputy in charge of the investigation, said it already has been shown "beyond question that certain promoters were aided and guided by former top Federal Housing Administration officials in the windfall practices."

Coe sent the list of 200 corporations to the Justice Department for "such civil or criminal proceedings" as may be indicated.

In making the list public, Coe said it covers only a tiny percentage of several thousands of cases under study. He promised that McKenna's staff will forward to the Justice Department any more windfall cases unearthed in a continuing probe of irregularities under a post-World War II apartment building program.

The reported abuses in certain government housing programs came to public light on April 12. The FHA's top command was shaken up. The Eisenhower administration and two congressional committees promptly plunged into probes of the apartment construction program, now inactive, and the home repair program, still running.

Chairman Capehart (R-Ind.) of the Senate Banking Committee said that apartment promoters may have reaped as much as a half billion dollars by obtaining government-insured construction loans far bigger than their costs.

There were also allegations that slick home repair salesmen, traveling in packs, moved from city to city and talked unsuspecting householders into getting federally backed loans for home improvement work. These salesmen, it was charged, sometimes collected money and skipped town without getting the agreed-upon jobs done, or the work when it was done sometimes was shoddy.

Coe's report yesterday dealt only with the investigation of apartment house loan insurance operations.

Presses For Terms Justifying Indochina Action

Dulles Sets 5 'Conditions'

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Dulles returned to Washington early today to press for fulfillment of five conditions he says might justify American intervention in Indochina.

Dulles' plane touched down at National Airport just a few hours after a five-power conference of Allied military leaders ended at the Pentagon.

The military representatives of Britain, France, Australia, New Zealand and the United States had deliberated a week on the strategic situation in Communist-menaced Southeast Asia. The conference broke up last night without public announcement. The Defense Department said: "Their conclusions will be transmitted to their respective governments."

Eisenhower told his news conference Thursday the defense improvement in recent weeks, but he added that outside aid doubtless could be used very effectively.

He said, however, that as of the moment he had no plan to ask Congress for power to take any action in Indochina outside the normal traditional processes of government operation. He did not speak specifically of involvement troops or other forces but that idea was plainly implicit in the question he answered.

Dulles spelled out the five conditions in a speech yesterday to the Los Angeles World Affairs Council. This was his last stop on a three-day speaking tour in the West.

1. An invitation "from the present lawful authorities," which presumably means the governments of France and the Indochinese states—Laos, Cambodia and Viet Nam.

2. A clear assurance by France of complete independence for the three Indochinese states.

3. A demonstration of "evidence of concern" about the Indochinese situation by the United Nations. Dulles did not specify what he meant by this, but possibly the fact that the U.N. Security Council has already voted to take up the problem could be regarded as fulfillment of this condition.

4. Participation in "the collective effort of some of the other nations of the area." Here again Dulles did not spell out what he had in mind. There was some speculation that perhaps he was softening this previously stated requirement so that, for example participation of the Philippines and Thailand would be considered adequate.

However, Dulles himself has said he could not conceive of a Southeast Asian coalition without Britain.

5. An assurance by the French government "that France will not itself withdraw from the battle until it is won." In the terms in which he was speaking he presumably referred to the battle for "restoring tranquility" in Indochina.

HANOI, Indochina (AP)—The French poured reinforcements into the vital Red River Delta today as speculation grew that massing Vietminh legions would strike there within the next few weeks.

French Union sources predicted the Communist-led Rebels would launch their expected big thrust before the monsoon rains hit their peak at the end of June. If they don't, they probably will have to wait until the monsoon season ends in early October.

Several large rebel units which helped destroy the French bastion of Dien Bien Phu 220 miles west of Hanoi, already are back at their old posts on the Thanh Hoa plain. They form part of an arc the Vietminh is welding around the rice-rich delta.

French military sources said the returning units were crack troops drawn from various regiments to bolster the Vietminh assault on Dien Bien Phu which fell May 7.

Starts Curing His 1954 Tobacco

Farm hands are shown above as they tie tobacco for the first reported barn of tobacco this season in Pitt County. J. C. Galloway, owner of the farm, reported that he was putting in only one barn of tobacco yesterday. The lugs were harvested in a little less than two months after the field was transplanted.

Laniel Defeated; Asks To Resign

PARIS (AP)—The French National Assembly handed Premier Joseph Laniel an adverse vote—308-293—on a question of confidence today and he submitted his resignation. President Rene Coty did not accept the resignation immediately, however, saying he would give his reply Monday.

This leaves France with a half- and half-out government over the weekend. It also leaves the Geneva conference in suspense. If the resignations are accepted, a long crisis may follow and the Geneva conference may have to disband for lack of a French representative with power to act.

Under the French constitution, a government must resign only if it is defeated by an absolute majority of all members of the Assembly. This absolute majority is 313 votes.

In practice, governments have resigned if put in a minority on a vote of confidence even if the opponents do not rally the absolute majority. An aide close to Laniel this morning said the Premier would follow this procedure.

Pressures were being put on him to remain however. President Rene Coty was reported to be urging Laniel not to quit unless forced to.

Immediately after announcement of the vote, the Assembly recessed until 4 p.m. (10 a.m. EST.) before the re-opening. Laniel will see President Coty. He probably also will meet informally with members of his Cabinet. His decision on whether to stay or resign will be decided in this series of meetings.

The vote came shortly after Laniel pleaded for the lawmakers to keep him in unless an effective new government could be formed immediately. The lawmakers began casting their ballots only about two hours after the opening of the debate, a surprisingly short time.

In his brief address at the start of the debate, Laniel said his government should be kept in office unless "a new team can be formed immediately with a large and faithful majority."

His words apparently fell on deaf ears. He got only scattered applause at the finish and none from the critical points of the Assembly where he needs help most.

Laniel said that he did not believe the Assembly was ready to accept an "Asiatic Munich," by agreeing to give up its fight on honorable terms in Indochina and he did not believe that a majority of the Assembly was willing to vote down the Atlantic alliance.

He implied that a defeat for his government might lead to one or both of these consequences.

Woman Killed In Hail Of Bullets

A Negro woman died in a hail of bullets yesterday afternoon, apparently as a result of a feud between her and another Negro woman which had been in progress for years.

The shooting took place in a frame store on Cross Street near the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad about 4 p.m. yesterday.

Police identified the dead woman as Bertha Lee Carr, 31, and said she was the mother of several children. Arrested and charged with murder in the case is Carrie Estelle Corey, 32.

Acting Chief of Police Herbert E. Wooten stated that eight bullets were fired at the Carr woman. She was reported to have been hit four times in the chest and once in the knee. Three other bullets were fired from a 22 caliber target pistol which was recovered by police, but they apparently missed their mark.

Wooten indicated that, according to witnesses, the Corey woman came into the dimly lit store, fired several shots at close range until the Carr woman slumped to the floor and then pumped several more shots into the body as it lay on the floor.

Wooten stated that the Corey woman, being held without bond, had said in a statement which she signed at police headquarters that she had intended to kill the dead woman and "did exactly what she intended to do."

She stated that a feud had been going on between the two for some time. Wooten reported the woman, in her statement, said that she had planned to kill the Carr woman since 1949.

The acting chief noted that the arrested woman gave officers no trouble when she was picked up shortly after the shooting. He said a 22 caliber pistol was found on her person from which eight bullets had been fired. One bullet was still in the weapon.

Death came to the Carr woman at the Jessie Nobles Store, an old frame building only a few blocks from Greenville's business district.

Wooten stated this morning that one of the bullets fired from the gun had been recovered from the floor of the building. He said that the bullets will also be removed from the body.

George Wilkerson, who is acting as coroner while Coroner Griffin H. Rouse is on vacation, said this morning that an inquest into the shooting has been set for 7:30 Tuesday night in the Municipal Court Room. He said the woman is being held without bond until that time.

Also being held in the case is Zeb D. Hines. Wooten stated that Hines is being held as a material witness.

No Time For Argument, She Just Started Firing

"We were just fixing to play the juke box when she came in and started firing," the owner of a small store on Cross Street told Greenville police yesterday afternoon.

"I didn't pay any attention to her," he continued, "until I heard the pistol begin firing. Why, her baby was sitting here on the counter."

"Was there any argument?" the police asked.

"No sir, there was no time for argument—she just started firing," the old Negro man answered.

Fixed Four Shots "How many shots were fired?" "She fired four times," he answered, "twice while she was standing up and twice after she fell to the floor."

Police continued to ask the man questions and he continued explaining what had happened.

"Nobody was expecting anything like that. We were just standing here fixing to play the juke box. She wasn't bothering anyone either when the door opened. We didn't even notice her until she started shooting."

The dead woman still lay on the floor nearby.

The police, after allowing a photographer to take pictures, let the body be taken by the funeral home people and went to the station for more questioning of other witnesses. The dead woman was identified as Bertha Lee Carr, 31. Carrie Estelle Corey, 32, is now in jail booked on the charge of murder.

Vice President Nixon's Car Involved In Wreck

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Vice President Richard M. Nixon's automobile was struck last night by a swerving automobile which then collided head-on with a secret service car following it.

No one was hurt. Nixon, after a three or four-minute delay in which he walked back across the intersection to ascertain that no one had been injured, proceeded to his parents' home in nearby Whittier.

Nixon had arrived by plane and was en route in a three-car caravan to his parents' home. He speaks today at a commencement exercise of Whittier College, his alma mater. Mrs. Nixon said the accident took place on the left rear seat beside Leonard H. Crowfoot, director of Whittier College alumni relations and chairman of today's commencement exercises.

The Secret Service agent was in the front seat beside the driver, Clinton Harris of Whittier, a friend of Nixon's.

The agent said another car approached "from our left and didn't slow up. It tried to swing around the corner, making a right turn, and sideswiped the car we were in."

"It collided head-on with the Secret Service car behind us,"

The agent said the Secret Service car was knocked backward and touched bumpers with the third car in the Vice President's caravan.

He said the third car carried two or three persons from Whittier College.

The Vice President's car drove on across the intersection and stopped. Nixon got out and walked back to investigate.

The agent said the Vice President after the impact "expressed concern that somebody had been hurt." Nixon then proceeded to his parents' home and retired.

The agent said the car that struck the Vice President's carried a man and a woman. Police identified its driver as Harold Belfry, 43, of Los Angeles. He was booked on suspicion of misdemeanor drunk driving.

'Might' Retire

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower's top aide has dropped a hint that a Democratic victory in the fall congressional elections could make Eisenhower think of retiring to his Gettysburg, Pa. farm after this four-year term.

The aid, Sherman Adams, said last night in an informal talk to the Citizens for Eisenhower Congressional Committee that he doesn't know what the President might do in 1956.

But he said loss of Congress to the Democrats in November could be one of certain conditions that might make a certain farm in Pennsylvania an attractive place to retire to.

J. C. Galloway (above) began curing what is believed to be the first barn of tobacco in Pitt County for this season yesterday. Galloway said that the field of tobacco was set out on April 15. He was pulling tobacco from a six-acre plot to make the first barn. Galloway's farm is located at Galloway's Crossroads. The farmer lives in Greenville. (Reflector Photos by Alvin Taylor)

Mundt Calls On Investigative Aides To Halt Feud Which Exploded Yesterday

WASHINGTON (AP)—Acting Chairman Mundt (R-SD) called today for an end to a "feud" between two Senate investigations subcommittee aides which exploded in not words yesterday and threatened to carry into next week's McCarthy-Army hearings.

Roy M. Cohn, chief counsel for the subcommittee and one of the principals in the dispute between Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis) and top Army officials, was accused by Robert F. Kennedy of threatening in an after-session clash to "get" Sen. Jackson (D-Wash) on a Communist issue.

Cohn denied this and said Kennedy brother of Sen. Kennedy (D-Mass) and adviser to subcommittee Democrats, admitted "hatred" toward him and other members of McCarthy's staff.

Mundt, who said the incident escaped his notice when he recessed the hearings for the weekend yesterday, said in an interview "there is a feud which has been going on for a long time between Kennedy and Cohn."

"I don't know why and I don't care why," Mundt said. "It is something that has no place in the hearings, and it isn't going to have a place in the hearings. They are just pipping off and they can stop it."

But Cohn already had demanded the right to ask a series of questions Monday which he said

"might develop true facts" about some of the things Jackson had said in needling questions to McCarthy about Pvt. G. David Schine and his activities.

Whether Cohn would insist on following through on this Monday was not clear from his statements on arrival in New York for a weekend at his home. Aside from saying he never threatened to Kennedy he would "get" Jackson, and that Kennedy "is indulging in a longstanding personal hatred of me," he had no comment on the incident beyond a remark that "there's been enough fighting this week."

The body of Bertha Lee Carr is shown slumped on the floor after she was shot five times yesterday afternoon. The shooting took place in the Jessie Nobles Store on Cross Street near the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad. Arrested for murder in the case was Carrie Estelle Corey. (Reflector Staff Photo)

Woman Identifies Man As Abductor; No Clues To Ransom Cash

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—A 41-year-old father of two children was jailed for investigation of kidnaping today after Mrs. Evelyn Ann Smith identified him as her abductor.

Daniel J. Marsin, an unemployed welder refused to admit his guilt. He grinned broadly when Mrs. Smith, 23, wife of a Phoenix industrialist picked him from a police lineup of five men.

"That's him," said Mrs. Smith. "There's no question about it." William Mahoney, Maricopa County attorney, cloaked himself with Marsin several hours and later announced:

"He gave marginal details of the kidnaping but would neither admit nor deny the act without full advice of a competent attorney. But, this much I know—he's the guy."

Marsin, who has lived in Phoenix with his wife and children since 1951, refused to make any statement to police. He would not discuss whether he was the man who kidnaped the young mother at gunpoint Wednesday afternoon and held her 24 hours until $75,000 was paid.

Police admitted they had no clues to what happened to the ransom money which the victim's husband, Herbert, said he left as directed at the Superstition Mountains, 45 miles east of Phoenix.

When Marsin was arrested five miles from the payoff point late Thursday night, he had only 17 cents in his pockets.

He was naked to the waist when he stumbled into a ranch house pleading for a drink of water. Sheriff's deputies who were questioning the home owners booked him as a possible suspect.

The deputies said Marsin told them at that time he had been prospecting and ran out of water, then tore off his shirt and undershirt when he became delirious.

Police said he made "several statements last night which conflicted with his original story."

Last night he was placed in a police lineup with four men who looked somewhat alike, and Mrs. Smith promptly pointed to him. "I won't say whether I'm guilty or not," said Marsin after two guns were found in his abandoned car on a Phoenix street. "I think you understand that my life is in jeopardy."

He demanded to see an attorney but refused to select one asking if he wasn't entitled to one paid by the state.

Detective Lt. Vic Soule said that a typewriter owned by Ransom would be checked against that used in the ransom note to Smith. Officers also were checking with a young service station attendant with whom a man left Smith's golf bag with the ransom note. The description given earlier by the attendant, Robert J. Plucinski, was not far from that given by Mrs. Smith.

Both came close but did not match, the police description of Marsin.

Marsin is five feet four inches tall, weighs 123 pounds but looks heavier, has green eyes and brown hair.

Mrs. Smith said her kidnaper was 35 to 45 years old, five feet four inches, 140 pounds, with green eyes and brown hair.

When a reporter asked her how she identified the suspect, she replied, "the arms, the voice, and the eyes, and the way the ears were when the handkerchief was tied around."

The kidnaper masked the lower half of his face with a handkerchief all the time he was with Mrs. Smith. Marsin and the other men in the police lineup were similarly masked.

Marsin said he was convicted of car theft in Brooklyn in 1937 and "bought" himself a suspended sentence with $6,000. He refused to explain. He insisted that was his only police record.

The kidnaping took place at a bank and drove to the mountain payoff point while a sheriff's plane pilot watched from overhead. He dropped the money and a masked gunman "adding on a cliff allowed the couple to leave."

As guests arrived they were greeted at the door by Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs and directed to the living room where Mr. and Mrs. Amos Evans served delicious punch from an attractively appointed table covered with Maderia cut-work cloth.

The guests were then invited to the dining room to find their places at a banquet table marked by place cards, hand painted with wedding

Kiwanians Hear Evangelist Talk

At the Kiwanis Club last night, Evangelist Eddie Martin, guest speaker, declared that "Families that pray together, stay together."

Dr. H. Glenn Haney introduced the speaker. Kiwanian David Evans, who had charge of the program, said large crowds are hearing the evangelist preach at the cathedral tent in the western suburbs of Greenville. Song Leader Garland Cofield and Pianist O. D. Hall also were guests of the Kiwanians.

In his brief discourse to the Kiwanians, Martin declared: "The husband is the head of the wife—the head of the home. Some of you men are trying to get to heaven on your wife's religion, but it won't work. You will have to save yourself."

Continuing, the young evangelist said, "As head of our home we should get saved. As head of the home, we should live to lead our children to Christ, and we should be faithful to the church, going to church Sundays and sitting with our family. As the head of the home we should set the highest standards of morality."

He advised his hearers to start a family altar of prayer and gave a reading, "What Is A Boy?"

Martin currently is conducting a united revival sponsored by the churches of Greenville and Pitt county, in a tent near Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

President John T. Barnhill, who presided, welcomed the visitors.

Evangelistic Crusade Draws Large Crowd Despite Brief Rain

"Hell is a literal place of fire," declared Evangelist Eddie Martin in his sermon last night at the big tent near Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The first sizeable group of the penitent during this less than a week old campaign came up to the altar last night upon invitation following the sermon by Eddie Martin.

Prior to the sermon four young men, who are either already studying for the ministry and will start soon, gave their testimony. The crowd was as good last night as the night before—in spite of the rain that fell in some parts of the city just prior to meeting time.

In explaining, "Why There Is A Hell" Mr. Martin pointed out the Bible tells about it; thus, the Bible is the common source of knowledge of heaven and hell—one as true as the other. Then he cited some of the features of Hell: separation, iniquity, and remorse. "God does not want anyone to go to Hell, but He has left it up to you if you want to be saved," he warned in conclusion.

Warren-Etheridge Nuptial Vows Said In Candle Light Ceremony

ROBERSONVILLE—In a candle-light ceremony in the Stokes Baptist Church Thursday, June 3, Miss Judy Mae Etheridge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Etheridge of Robersonville, became the bride of Pfc. Jack Shelton Warren, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer E. Warren of Stokes.

The pastor of the bride, the Rev. Hartwell A. Campbell, officiated using the double ring ceremony. Preceding the service a program of nuptial music was rendered by Miss Joy Perkins, pianist, and Mrs. Cliff Nelson, soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was wearing her sister's wedding gown of traditional Dutchess satin featuring a Peter Pan collar and a fitted bodice having long pointed sleeves and a bouffant skirt ending in a slight train. Her fingertip veil of Point de Spray edged with rose point lace was attached to a seeded pearl and orange blossom tiara. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white bride's roses showered with stephanotis and white streamers. Mrs. John G. Cherry Sr. attended her sister as matron of honor. She was attired in a waltz length gown of mauve net over taffeta. Miss Sherry Warren, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. She wore a waltz length dress of fuchsia net over satin. They carried matching cascades of mixed summer flowers with ribbon corresponding to their dresses.

The bridegroom had as his best man David Roberson of Stokes.

Ushers were Ervin and Donald Warren of Stokes, brothers of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride wore a dress of light blue crepe with navy accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

The mother of the bridegroom wore a navy dress of taffeta with navy accessories and a corsage of white roses.

Immediately following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained with a reception at their home.

For traveling the bride changed into a navy and white linen dress with matching jacket and navy accessories, wearing the white corsage lifted from her bridal bouquet.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren are both graduates of Stokes High School.

After June 8 the couple will be at home in Ft. Benning, Ga. where the bridegroom is stationed.

During the weeks prior to the wedding the bride was entertained by her aunt, Mrs. J. W. Briley, and sister, Mrs. J. G. Cherry, with a miscellaneous shower.

On Saturday morning prior to the wedding a Coca-Cola hour was given by Mrs. Jerome Perkins and daughter Joy of Stokes.

Following rehearsal the bridal party and a few friends were entertained by Mrs. Julius Ross, aunt of the bridegroom, of Greenville and Mrs. Elmer Warren, mother of the bridegroom, of Stokes at Mrs. Ross' home.

Ask 'Political Asylum' For U.S. Couple In Britain

LONDON—Britain's National Council of Civil Liberties today sought "political asylum" here for a young American doctor and his doctor-wife who have been ordered to leave the country.

Dr. Joseph H. Cort, 26, a lecturer in physiology at the University of Birmingham, said he and his wife, Ruth 28, had been told their permit to remain in Britain would not be renewed after June 30.

They have been in Britain since 1951. Their previous address in the United States was not immediately available.

Miss Elizabeth Allen, secretary of the National Council of Civil Liberties, said the Council has appealed to the Home Office to grant the Cort's permission to stay "as a matter of a political asylum."

Miss Allen told newsmen Cort had informed the council he had been a member of the Communist party in his student days but does not belong now.

Civil Air Patrol Squadron Works To Fill Major Role

Greenville Group Works And Studies To Carry Out Its Three-Fold Mission

By BOB BOYETTE
Reflector Staff Writer
Greenville Squadron, Civil Air Patrol, composed of 32 active members, is working to become an outstanding United States Air Force Auxiliary unit. There are 23 senior members in the unit and nine cadets. The present squadron was officially activated at ceremonies on May 18, 1954.

A little present time there are 13 Civil Air Patrol senior pilots and two cadet pilots helping carry out the mission of the unit.

Not The First Unit Here
This Squadron is not the first Civil Air Patrol unit in Greenville. Following World War II, there was a local unit established under the command of 1st Lt. Tommy Sellars.

This unit, meeting in conjunction with Washington members, met at the Pitt-Greenville Airport for one year before it was realized there were more men from Washington in the outfit than from Greenville. Consequently, the Squadron moved its headquarters to Washington and became known as the Washington-Greenville squadron, Civil Air Patrol.

Greenville members continued going to Washington until November, 1953, at which time Darwin Waters of Greenville and Joe H. Bynum, Jr. of Farmville decided to try to organize another squadron in Greenville.

The efforts of these two men proved successful and today, Greenville again has a Civil Air Patrol Squadron here.

Sellars, who commanded the first squadron here, was recalled to active duty with the Marine Corps and flew many missions in the Korean conflict before being reported as missing in action.

Hood Commands Unit Now
Ray Hood, a Naval Air Corps reserve pilot, was elected as commanding officer of the present squadron. He holds the rank of first lieutenant in the Civil Air Patrol now.

1st Lt. Bynum became adjutant and personnel officer of the Squadron and 1st Lt. Waters became the operations officer. Waters was a captain in the squadron at Washington, but took a cut in rank so he would not outrank the commanding officer here.

Other members of the local squadron staff include: Communications officer 2nd Lt. Rudolph Phelps, Commandant of Cadets 2nd Lt. Walter Briley, Supply Officer 2nd Lt. Homer Sanderson, and Public Information Officers 1st Lt. Robert T. Boyette and 2nd Lt. Elwood Kleister.

There are still several vacancies on the squadron staff, such as the legal officer, medical officer and chaplain.

At the present time 2nd Lt. Manley Edwards assists with communications and 2nd Lt. Lawrence Tyson helps with the personnel and adjutant work.

Other senior members who are unassigned a job at the present time include: 1st Lt. Paul Scott (also a member of the former Greenville Squadron), Joseph C. Boyce, Jr., James E. Buck, Elwood R. Edwards, J.C. Galloway, James Mathis, J. J. Messick, Russell C. Spain, Mitchell Johnson, Ernest Tilghman and Walter Lee.

Adams Is Cadet C.O.

Cadet 1st Lt. Billy Adams commands the cadet section of the Greenville Squadron, Civil Air Patrol.

At the present time, Adams, along with commandant of cadets 2nd Lt. Briley, are looking for interested young men who would like to become members of the local unit.

So far there are eight cadets other than Adams. They are: Eddie Lee, Nelson Dudley, Teddy Fountain, Jerry Howell, Bud Hill, Jay Robbins, Ray Gardner and L.P. Downing.

Study During Meetings

Four courses are being studied by the members at the regular weekly meetings each Tuesday night. These courses are navigation, code, radio and weather.

Of course, there is plenty of flying because the CAP has as its number one mission—"Air Search and Rescue."

For any CAP member to get a CAP pilot's certificate and have the privilege of wearing the wings he must be a qualified CAA private pilot and pass the flight proficiency board which consists here of Lt. Waters, Lt. Bynum and Lt. Edwards.

CAP's National Mission

The nation-wide missions of the CAP as the "volunteer civilian auxiliary of the United States Air Force" are divided into three main categories: certain non-combatant operational missions as directed by the Secretary of the Air Force; maintenance of a pool of carefully selected cadets trained in ground and pre-flight subjects as a source of personnel procurement for the Air Force; and maintenance of a program of aviation education for America's youth together with general aviation education of the public.

Examples of work by the CAP in this country includes searching for lost military and civilian aircraft, furnish emergency communications in case of a flood etc., checking for forest fires and aiding in communication there and helping marooned hunters and motorists out of heavy snowstorms should this situation arise.

Have Application For Aircraft

At the present time the local squadron has an application for an "on loan" aircraft from the United States Air Force.

Members here are hoping the small observation type ship will arrive soon.

This aircraft may be used by CAP pilots in their mission and in logging time by the pilots who desire to become more proficiency in their flying.

In this great time of turmoil this city should be proud of the work of the young men who love aviation and want to keep this area up-to-date in this aviation minded world.

TELEPHONE SWITCHBOARD—The local CAP squadron has its own telephone switchboard and here Cadet 1st Lt. Billy Adams is shown working with the board as Joyce Boyce, a senior member of the squadron, looks on.

LOGS TIME—2nd Lt. Walter Briley (left) looks on as 1st Lt. Darwin Waters logs his flying time after completing a CAP mission. Briley is commandant of cadets in the local unit and Waters is the operations officer.

PRACTICE CODE—Code is one of the more important CAP subjects so Marvin Buck (left) is sending code to the class of CAP members. There is no minimum for CAP students, but Buck hopes to get the class in a position to receive better than 10 words a minute.

RADIO CONTACT—Civil Air Patrol Cadets Nelson Dudley, nearest camera, and Eddie Lee are using the Squadron radio equipment for "air to ground" radio contact. The equipment can also be used to monitor the Civil Air Patrol radio network.

THE WORLD THIS WEEK

Neutralism Grows in Europe as Reds Turn to Asia

Old World Wants End to Cold War

By TOM WHITNEY
Associated Press Foreign Staff Writer

THE difficulties—so obvious at Geneva—which the Western allies have in finding a common ground on which to face the Communists have deep causes and unfortunately are not going to disappear overnight.

There are profound contradictions between the way Western Europeans on the one hand and Americans on the other assess the acuteness of the Communist danger to the free world.

These are summed up in the Western European term of "neutrality"—a mood which seems to be growing.

The failure of the French to ratify the European Defense Community agreement, the tendency of groups in West German Chancellor Adenauer's government coalition to rebel against him, the reluctance of the British to make commitments on South-east Asia are all part of the same picture.

"Neutrality" might be defined as a kind of Western European isolationism. It is the feeling on the part of many quite anti-Communist or at any rate non-Communist Western Europeans that they can afford to withdraw from the cold war.

An Undermining Process
The growing strength of neutrality and similar attitudes in the largest Western European countries has undermined the willingness of those governments to take the kind of action which the American government feels is necessary to stop the Communist advance.

Neutralism gets its strength from a lot of different ingredients. One of these elements is the assessment by many Western Europeans of the changes in Russia since Stalin's death. There is a great inclination in Western Europe to see in Soviet policies since the dictator passed away, signs that the new regime is less aggressive, that it is seeking peace and settlement of difficulties. The American government and public are more inclined to believe that the post-Stalin regime is as aggressive as before.

The Russians have done much to appear conciliatory to Western Europeans during the past year. They have made numerous small but effective gestures. These have had considerable effect.

Another ingredient in Western European neutrality is the fact that the Communist spearhead appears now to be pointed away from Europe—to South-east Asia. Despite the involvement of the British and the French in Southeast Asia, the average European does not get very excited about what seems so remote. It is the Americans with their Pearl Harbor and Korean experience who feel this threat much more keenly.

It would be a mistake to assume that neutralist moods are founded primarily in logic. Emotion is their most important constituent.

Emotional Picture

And in the emotional picture the phenomenon called anti-Americanism is important. Aneurin Bevan in England and other important Western European politicians appeal to it regularly.

Anti-Americanism in Western Europe is something which Americans themselves find difficult to understand. In part it seems to be the not-unnatural reaction of proud peoples who find their relative power in world affairs is so much less than it used to be. They resent this and particularly the United States with its wealth and might, with somewhat the same feelings which an aristocratic but recently impoverished relative might have toward a new-rich uncle from whom he has to seek material help.

Furthermore, for the first time in a long while, West Europeans can permit themselves to express their anti-American feelings. With American assistance, they now have largely recovered from their economic crisis. They are, so to speak, feeling their oats.

Fear of German Militarism
No less emotional is the attitude in France and Britain to revival of West German economic power and to American-sponsored plans for using Germans in EDC forces. Fear of German power is deeply ingrained in peoples who have twice in one generation suffered from German aggression.

The fear of German militarism in Western Europe is something which tends to make the Russian menace seem less important. The Russians know this and stimulate it.

There are other factors too. The most important is West Europe's general feeling about a war. Most Western Europeans consider that if there is an atomic war between the United States and the U.S.S.R., that no matter who wins it, they will not be around to see the end. They believe their beautiful cities will be destroyed and their countries made battlegrounds where the titans will fight it out to the finish—of Western Europe.

Grasp at Hopes

Anything seems better to many Western Europeans than this. It is natural many of them grasp eagerly at any hope of a peace settlement between East and West.

In their state of mind, Western Europeans sometimes feel that the American policies of firmness against communism which are intended to prevent war, in fact, are actually on the point of bringing on the ultimate catastrophe.

Neutrality has in it much wishful thinking. It also has in it many elements similar to the moods which set the scene for the Munich surrender to Hitler in 1938.

Like it or not, however, neutrality is a fact. How much deeper in Western European psychology it is going to grow in the coming months and years cannot be foreseen.

But already the situation which it has created for U.S. diplomacy is very difficult indeed.

Politics Simmers At Army Hearings

By SIGRID ARNE
Associated Press Newsfeatures Writer

IT WAS inevitable that the McCarthy-Army hearings would get down to personal political sniping as they did this past week when Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis.) and Sen. Symington (D-Mo) crossed swords.

The whole affair has political overtones, of course, but until the McCarthy-Symington episode political remarks were fairly broad. After that exchange Sen. Potter (R-Mich) said the hearings had "more or less degenerated" into a partisan row "marked by personal conflicts which are becoming hotter by the moment."

Politicians know full well that every time a television camera or radio microphone swings in their direction they stand to lose or win votes with the folks back home. So it is safe to say that the futures of every person involved in the hearings has been affected one way or another.

Arne

McCarthy and Symington had tangled with political talk before, but in a bantering way, avoiding the head-on crash.

The hearings were scarcely two weeks old when McCarthy, in reply to a question from Symington, said, "I got the impression that maybe you wanted a little campaign material."

Symington replied, "I think you are furnishing enough as it is, Senator."

Presidential Aspirations?
This time McCarthy put it into the record that he figured Symington is gunning for the Democratic nomination for president in 1956.

The handsome Symington made no reply but the Washington grapevine for months has carried talk of him as a possible Democratic standard bearer in the next national elections. He has been secretary of the Air Force and in 1950 was chairman of the National Security Board.

Symington has insisted through the hearings that his main interest is the morale of the Army. McCarthy claims the Army has been infiltrated by Communists. Evidence indicates that Symington, a Democrat, offered aid and advice to Republican Secretary of the Army Stevens.

A Truman Adviser
McCarthy called Stuart Symington "Sanctimonious Stu" and said that Symington and Clark Clifford, who was special counsel to former President Truman, persuaded a "naive" Stevens to bring charges against him and two of his staff members. McCarthy demanded Clifford be called as a witness.

Before their fracas was over, Symington suggested that McCarthy "better go to a psychiatrist."

Sen. Jackson (D-Wash), replying to Potter's complaint that the "Democrats seemed to want the hearings to drag on until Election Day, said that the way to end them was to "avoid bringing in other people" (like Clifford), who then ought to be heard as witnesses in "simple American fair play."

Jackson moved in a closed

Atom

Super Security
Security precautions of the atomic law are so severe that the Atomic Energy Commission is asking Congress to relax some of them.

As things stand now, the secrecy code is so tight the United States can't even tell its allies what it learns about Russia's nuclear weapons progress.

What the AEC wants specifically is an amendment permitting the exchange of intelligence information on the "evaluation of the atomic capabilities of potential enemies."

Exchange of information is a two-way street. Britain, feeling that all data from the United States has been choked off, is keeping her own information to herself—including intelligence on Soviet atomic developments.

This blackout is known to be of major concern to American officials responsible for estimation of Soviet progress in nuclear weapons.

Exchange of military intelligence with Britain, which operates one of the oldest and most experienced intelligence organizations of world powers, has been a keystone in both peace and wartime collaboration of the two English-speaking nations.

Other Information
With its proposal for exchange of intelligence reports with friendly powers, the AEC also suggested that the president be authorized to determine what data on design and manufacturing methods should be transmitted to allies.

This suggestion brought an immediate objection from at least one member of the Senate Atomic Energy Committee, which is considering the amendment recommendations. Sen. Hickenlooper (R-Iowa) criticized the placing of such power in the hands of a president. While he had great respect for President Eisenhower, Hickenlooper pointed out, the office of president changes from time to time.

Primaries

Roosevelt Wins
James Roosevelt, eldest son of the late President, ran away with the Democratic nomination for congressman in California's 26th District.

Roosevelt defeated his principal opponent, Ned Redding, by a 6-1 margin despite his marital troubles which had led Stephen Mitchell, Democratic national chairman, to withhold his support.

The 46-year-old Roosevelt's chances for election in November seemed excellent for the big 26th District of Los Angeles has better than a 2-1 Democratic registration.

His Republican opponent in November will be Theodore Owings, victor in the GOP primary.

None Like Warren
Nomination by both parties, possible under California's system of cross-filing in primaries, seemed beyond the reach of any candidate—at least in the sweeping manner achieved by Chief Justice Earl Warren when he was governor.

Gov. Goodwin J. Knight, Warren's successor at Sacramento, won the Republican primary by an overwhelming margin but trailed Richard P. Graves for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Sen. Thomas Kuchel, appointed by Warren to succeed Richard Nixon when he became Vice President, won the Republican nomination for the Senate but trailed Rep. Samuel W. Yorty in the Democratic primary.

In California's 6th District, John F. Baldwin Jr., won the Republican nomination for Congress but trailed Rep. Robert L. Condon in the Democratic primary. Last year Condon was classified as a security risk by the Atomic Energy Commission and barred from a weapons test at the Nevada proving grounds. Condon called the ban "stale political charges" and had denied under oath being a Communist.

In South Carolina, Lt. Gov. George Bell Timmerman Jr., won the Democratic nomination for governor. Victory in the primary is tantamount to election in that state.

Timmerman won easily over Lester L. Bates. Both candidates had opposed consolidating white and Negro schools despite the recent Supreme Court decision banning segregation.

Sen. Burnet R. Maybank was unopposed for re-nomination. In other races, Rep. Robert T. Ashmore, Greenville, and Rep. James P. Richards, Lancaster, won re-nomination.

In Iowa's primary, State Atty. Gen. Leo A. Hoegh, who opposed legalizing liquor sales by the drink, won the Republican nomination for governor.

CHURCH: World Conclave

A Spiritual U.N.
Can Christians of the world present a common front? That's one of the main questions discussed in American churches today.

Pick up almost any current religious publication, and you'll find the pro's and con's of the subject being analyzed.

Reason for the widespread attention focused on the matter is the forthcoming general assembly of the World Council of Churches.

The assembly, in the opinion of many church authorities, will be the most significant Christian gathering of modern times.

It will be the most widely embracing one ever held in the United States, bringing together official delegates of 160 denominations around the world.

Opens Aug. 15
Although the assembly in Evanston, Ill., doesn't open until Aug. 15, it has caused an advance stir of activity, discussion, planning and preliminary meetings.

Both anxious concern and high expectations are being expressed. At stake will be the first broad attempt by the world's Christians to map a more nearly united approach to the moral and spiritual problems of contemporary society.

Earphone Translations
The assembly will resemble a United Nations—in a religious rather than political sense. Just as in the U.N., earphone translations into various languages will be provided during the sessions.

Church organizations throughout the country are setting up advance study groups, seminars and institutes. Some delegates are expected from churches behind the Iron Curtain, although official State Department permission has not yet been given.

The probability of their admission has caused a flurry of protest by some groups, including some local American Legion posts.

Employment Rises
The job situation has improved in recent weeks. Total unemployment in the nation is lower than it was a month ago.

In manufacturing industries, says the U.S. Department of Commerce, unemployment is a little higher right now, but the rate of climb has not been as steep as it was earlier this season.

Seasonal Increase
Much if not all the improvement, of course, is due to seasonal factors like warmer weather, which has spurred hiring in the construction business and on farms. Jobs almost always become more plentiful in May. There hasn't been a May since 1939 when payrolls didn't show an increase.

This being the case, last month's downturn in unemployment was not particularly impressive. Government officials frankly admit that the decline in May was smaller than it usually is at this time of year.

While the improvement is not sensational, it seems to bolster the position of those economists who argue that the general decline in business that started nine months ago has finally been arrested.

It also supports the contention of those who maintain that there has been no real honest-to-goodness upturn in business this spring, and that none is likely. Conservative economists now are saying there will be no important revival of business activity until fall.

Curve Flattens Out
Undersecretary of Commerce Walter Williams said recently that while "no crystal clear, sharp upturn" has been in evidence, at least the long business decline has been replaced by a "flattening out process."

"Considering the different positions occupied by different businesses at any given time in the business cycle," he explained, "it is impossible to call the turn for all the businesses at any one time."

But, he declared, there is "much reason for solid encouragement about the business outlook."

Steel

New Red Invention
Pravda claims Soviet inventors have developed and put into mass production new methods for producing sheet iron more economically and efficiently than in the West.

The new technique, said Pravda, makes it possible to get sheet iron directly from molten pig iron without first casting the iron into ingots. The paper said the method can be applied to other metals as well as steel.

The common process for making sheet iron used by American plants and previously used in Russia involves casting the iron into ingots and then processing the ingots through various rolling mills to obtain the sheet. The Russians claim their method eliminates the ingot stage entirely but there was no indication of precisely what the process involved.

Pravda claimed the Soviet metallurgical industry has installed the new equipment in 38 plants and is in the process of installing it in 57 others. As a result, Pravda said, sheet iron production will be four times as great as in 1952-53.

Cynthia proceeds homeward to the apartment shared by her and glamorous Rox Effinger and plain Nora McClary both nurses. Rox excitedly awaits a "date." He arrives in the person of Norman Brandt, driver of the ill-fated car. In eager surprise he turns to Cynthia, but Rox manages to speed him along their way, blithely making it known that Cynthia is in love with Dr. Sellars. Alone, Cynthia ponders the riddle of Walters Sellars, the kindly young doctor with whom she had long worked, with whom she is indeed in love! Why had he always regarded her so impersonally? What must she do to awaken him to her woman appeal?

CHAPTER SIX CYNTHIA had another gentleman caller that evening. It was the officer who had taken charge at the scene of the accident. He introduced himself as Dan Masters, begged her pardon for disturbing her, but said he thought he could save her the bother of coming around to the precinct in the morning.

"Come right in!" Cynthia would fix Mr. Norman Brandt—they wouldn't meet tomorrow, after all. As the two girls had just been finishing dinner, Cynthia offered the police officer a cup of coffee in appreciation of his thoughtfulness.

"I'll just jot down your version of the case," Dan Masters said, taking out pad and pencil. "It may not be called upon as I don't believe Mrs. Mancini will try to take it to court. You know how those people are in that district—all of them afraid of the law. If only they'd learn it's on their side when they're in trouble."

Cynthia agreed with him. Yet she could not help feeling relieved that there would be no trouble. It might have served Norman Brandt right, however. Especially if he had not told the truth about driving the car.

As though in answer to this, Dan Masters said "You know I'm a young fellow wasn't driving his own car. When I asked him for the license number, he didn't even know it. He had his driver's license all right. Said the car belonged to a friend. A Miss Reba Raye—say, come to think of it, she'd be that singing star, wouldn't she?"

"She might be," Cynthia agreed. So Norman Brandt ran around with actresses. Not that Cynthia had anything against actresses. But it just went to show that he was that kind of man. Whatever kind that was, she amended somewhat vaguely.

"Well, anyway," Officer Masters continued, "he's done all he could for the little fellow he hit. Got him a high-priced doctor, a private room, and nurses. So I guess I won't charge him with speeding or reckless driving, unless you want to change your story about the accident being unavoidable."

Here was her chance to say that she felt certain Norman Brandt had not been behind the wheel. But could she swear to that? And if it had been Reba Raye who had been driving and Norman wanted to shield her, Cynthia ought not to blame him. At least not too much.

"I still think it was unavoidable," she said. "Well now, I guess that will be all, then." Dan Masters got to his feet. "I won't be bothering you any longer. It's been a pleasure, Miss. I've been hearing about you for some time now. And of course everybody knows Doctor Sellars and what a grand job he's doing for those poor kids. Now there's a man for you, Miss."

Seven-Toed Cat Saved Owners

CLAYTON, N.Y. (AP)—A gray and white cat named Muggsy has seven toes on each foot and he makes good use of them. When an electrical storm knocked down a high-tension wire outside the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cell Baker, Muggsy's owners, the cat clawed at the wires of Mrs. Baker's bed until she woke, saw sparks showering about the house and notified the power company.

The next night Muggsy again woke Mrs. Baker when a warehouse fire became visible from the bedroom windows. Police said her phone call was their first word on the blaze.

Only 6, But Has Way With Women

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—Michael O'Malley, 6, told his girl chum, "Come on. Let's go over to our house and play."

"Can't my mother won't let me cross the street," the little girl said. "Let me handle it," said Mike. "Women go for me."

He entered the house and returned in a few minutes. The little girl's mother opened the door. "Okay, you can go," she said.

Statistics aren't dull when they're human. Almost ONE MILLION juvenile delinquents last year! Increase expected this year! These are not dull statistics. They are flesh and blood figures. They are the tragedy of America written not with paper and pen, but with the wreckage of young lives. "But why?" you ask. "What is the cause?" Judges and social workers, almost with one voice, lay the blame on home influences and lack of religious training. It's up to you, then, Mother and Dad, to help YOUR child. Give him a home filled with love and understanding rather than indifference—a home that leads him into service rather than crime. Bring YOUR child to Sunday School and Church. Help him become a happy, useful personality, instead of a sad statistic.

Hypocrisy Amidst Tax Cut Talk

If the American public doesn't know "the facts of life" on the political front by now, then it is indeed impervious to learning by repeated experience.

Talk, by partisan lawmakers, of reducing taxes is about as empty a political subterfuge we can at the moment conceive.

When the Democrats were "in," tax cuts were a favorite Republican battle cry, to stir the masses. Now that Republicans are in the policy-making seat, the Democrats in turn cry "let's cut taxes."

The most recent of these high-sounding

It Isn't The Dogs, But The Gambling

Greyhounds aren't running in North Carolina now; and the next big step is to make sure they don't start up again.

There is excitement aplenty watching a pack of hounds in full cry after a cotton-tail, across fields, through the brush, turning and twisting. But just watching a field of greyhounds silently bounding after an electric rabbit is about as enervating as a dull book. It isn't a sport... doesn't even approach the dignity of the name... unless one has a personal interest in one dog outrunning the rest. That factor is artificially supplied by the element of gambling.

The gambling public could be provided with as much "thrill" at a considerably smaller outlay by operators, if they chose to attend a "legalized" roulette den in North Carolina.

Opposition to the dog tracks is not based on dislike for greyhounds, but a distrust of the effects of organized gambling. Large sums of money, unearned and drawn from non-productive sources, has a way of corrupting those qualities we need most in people and institutions upon which we rely.

The gambling "interests" are interested only in their own pockets, and the unscrupulous among them will resort to any extremes to further their ends.

Our people and our state are better off without them.

(and vote-getting?) plans for tax reduction received attention in the news only by indirection. This was when the Senate Finance Committee wound up six weeks of deliberation and approved an administration-sought tax revision program. Democrats on the committee did not even offer their proposal for reducing personal income taxes.

Nonetheless, they will fight the issue out on the Senate floor... says the senior Democratic committee member.

Sure, it'll get much more attention there, by the news-gathering agencies and the easily impressed voter. But large scale tax cuts remain a pipedream, whether the advocate is Republican, Democrat, Monarchist, Socialist, or what have you.

The hard fact is that we're stuck with high taxes for years, maybe generations to come.

For the present most governmental agencies barely scrape by from one year to the next on their budgetary allowances. And despite heralded minor economies the national debt keeps getting larger. The country bears with it, because there really isn't much else to do, but hope that someday conditions will change so that national spending can be brought down within reason. Even then, the taxpayers will have a mountain-high national debt to shovel away with their little dollars, bit by bit.

There won't be, there can't be any appreciable tax relief for Americans until federal expenditures can be drastically and safely cut at home and abroad. It will be a long time, we fear before that is possible.

Hinting at the possibility of, or hinting a promise of large-scale tax relief today is rank dishonesty and hypocrisy. Minor reductions here and there may be possible; and there may be occasions when the tax burden can be re-arranged, but somebody has to pay the bill.

When there can be reasonable economies in governmental functions we can all cheer.

When waste is detected and eradicated, we can cheer again; it all means a slight savings for the taxpayer. But no one of us now living will ever see the day when government will cost as little as in pre-World War II era.

Selected Shorts

"We must be zealous in the protection of individual rights, but at the same time equally zealous in safeguarding our national security and our American form of government." William J. Jameson, President, American Bar Association.

BELLINGHAM, WASH., HERALD: "Nobody can be sure in advance of what the near future holds, but there is comfort in the fact that 'risk capital'—the kind that takes a chance in helping to make a profitable prospect—has not succumbed to the defeatist theory that good times depend on government spending of money which the government does not have."

HILLSBORO, ORE. ARGUS: "A sub-committee, following extensive hearings on the commercial-type activities of the federal government, urged that the federal government get out and keep out of competitive business operation. There is much merit in the suggestion because it is American free enterprise that has given this country and its people so much."

Communist - Hunt Speeded Up

Every Saturday, Mr. Tucker answers readers' questions of general interest on national and international politics and personalities. Questions may be sent to him at 7008 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON—Why doesn't President Eisenhower take the hunt for Reds out of Senator McCarthy's hands, asks L. F. of Auburn, N. Y., "by setting up a small cabinet group to eliminate them from government more promptly than has been done in the past? Ike says that safeguarding security is an executive responsibility. It seems to me that this plan would sideline McCarthy."

Answer: As I wrote some time ago President Eisenhower has ordered an acceleration and more active work against suspected Communists and sympathizers in the government. He also called for more publicity on the effort.

At a recent press conference, with a sideswipe at headline hunters in this field, he reported on the Administration's success in convicting, deporting and tracking down Reds. Attorney-General Brownell has been making the same kind of reports in his speeches throughout the country.

SHERMAN ADAMS' TASK—Eisenhower has handed the job of co-ordinating and publicizing anti-Red operations to Sherman Adams, White House Chief-of-Staff. Adams, you will recall, sat on the conferences at which it was decided to make public McCarthy-Cohn pressure on behalf of Private G. David Schine. That was Adams' doing, nobody else. He also advised on the proceedings against Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer.

Four weeks ago, before Eisenhower or Brownell tried to exalt their own and minimize McCarthy's interest and activity in this subject, Adams delivered the White House defense in an address before the National Association of Manufacturers of New England. He had obviously assembled the data for the anti-McCarthy campaign.

It may also be significant in this connection that Senator Ralph E. Flanders of Vermont has been McCarthy's severest critic. He and Adams are close friends, personally and politically.

Somebody Told Me

Aftermath Of An Elopement

Ever hear a first-hand account of an elopement? Today's column will describe what car happen when the love bug bites hard enough. The first time I heard this story was in 1946, when I was a freshman at Carolina. Yesterday I heard the same story from the lips of the same man, the husband of the couple that eloped.

Bert Nesbit is a fraternity brother of mine; in fact, he and I waited on tables together in the fraternity house dining room. Yesterday when I saw him for the first time in six years, I asked him about the elopement while we were eating lunch.

Bert was in the Navy in Memphis when he met his wife, whose nickname is Vip. They had only a few dates, but corresponded during the entire 17 months that Bert was overseas. It was a love at first sight case if there ever was one. When Bert was discharged from the Navy he returned home, to Wilmington, and planned to go out to Memphis to tell Vip that it wasn't practical for them to get married until he got out of school. At this time Vip was 16 and Bert was 21.

Bert arrived in Memphis at about six on a Thursday afternoon and at 9:30 they were married. A friend agreed to drive them to Wilmington, with Bert paying his expenses both ways.

Not long after their time of departure the cops were hot on their trail. But not quite hot enough. Somehow they managed to stay one jump ahead of the law and made it to Wilmington in fine style. They stopped on the way long enough to wire Bert's parents and tell them the situation—that they were married and enroute to Wilmington.

Bert's father met him at the door and said, "Congratulations, son. Where's your bride?" "Sitting out in the car about half scared to death." "Tell her not to be afraid. Bring her in."

But the reception was different from Bert's mother. With folded arms and without cracking a smile she said, "I hope you're satisfied. You've worried us and Vip's folks almost crazy. I certainly hope you are satisfied."

Now, Vip is one of Mrs. Nesbit's favorite daughters-in-law and Bert is high on the totem pole with Vip's family. They have three daughters and Bert has been with the General Motors Truck Division for five years. He has recently been assigned the 48 Eastern Carolina counties and plans to settle in Goldsboro.

And I thank you, JACK EDWARDS

What Other Editors Are Thinking

'A WHEEL IN A WHEEL (Rocky Mount Telegram)

Governor Umstead's strategy centering around a successor to the late Senator Clyde R. Hoey now emerges. Instead of moving one place on the state political chessboard, the Governor has maneuvered around to jump about three places. In other words, in filling this vacancy, he has performed the amazing feat of killing not two, but three birds with one stone.

Governor Umstead departed from the usual political pastures to appoint Justice Sam Ervin from the State Supreme Court to the Senate and thereby created another important vacancy which he could fill.

The naming of his campaign manager, Carlisle W. Higgins to the Supreme Court in turn opened still another vacancy, since Mr. Higgins must resign his position as Democratic National Committee man.

It seems highly likely that W. Frank Taylor of Goldsboro will be named as the new national committee man. Since Mr. Taylor currently holds no juicy position which would have to be vacated by virtue of this appointment, the delightful vacancies to be filled seem to have come to an end at last. The chain reacting vacancies had to end sometime, but they must have been fun for the Governor while they lasted.

Fortunately for the state, the Governor's repayment of political debts is being made to good men. It is true that the appointment of Justice Ervin to the Senate was not politically inspired save as it created a highly desirable vacancy. Justice Ervin's appointment has been generally greeted with applause, because he is a man of integrity, ability and experience. We are glad to note that Mr. Higgins enjoys a good reputation, although he is not so well known here in the Eastern part of the state. We are, of course, pleased at Mr. Taylor's prospects because he is also an able man who will serve well national committee man.

These interlocking appointments remind us of the old spiritual, "A Wheel in a Wheel, Way Up in the Middle of the Air." So long as the wheels fit and run and promise to keep running smoothly we have no complaint.

Congressmen Of N. C. Are Maintaining High Prestige

By LYNN NISBET

CONGRESSMEN — Gossip among Washington newspaper folks indicates that Tarheel members of the Congress are maintaining the high level of prestige among their fellows to which this State has become accustomed. Very few of the fellows now on the newspaper jobs at the national capitol remember Claude Kitchin except by reputation, but nearly all of them know and respect Bob Doughton.

UNHERALDED — Next in the seniority list comes Herbert Bonner of the first district, whose exposure of waste in government surplus materials and stock-piling made headlines a year or two ago.

Then comes Charles B. Deane of the eighth district, a prodigious worker without regard to publicity. Fact is, that much of the contribution of Durham, Bonner and Deane has been unheralded because the seniority ranking for committee chairmanships denied them top places on major committees. In Congress as in many other realms of activity the top men get the public credit for what their associates really accomplish.

Certain it is that Durham's studious research in defense matters had substantial bearing on legislation, and Bonner's subcommittee report on waste contributed to savings of millions of dollars to the taxpayers. Even less publicized was the work done by Deane a year ago on the effect of the "hard money" policy of the Eisenhower administration, which resulted in alleviating the impact of that policy upon the householders of America.

Deane is now engaged in a similar study of the textile industry. His district is predominantly agricultural, and a preponderant percentage of its industry is textile. He is concerned about surface trends and wants to find how much below the surface they go. He fears that North Carolina in 1954 may be headed in the same direction New England took a quarter century ago, and that we may suffer in the next decade or two the same sort of competition from the far southwest that New England suffered from the southeast.

Production of cotton is moving to the southwest from the South Atlantic and mid-South States. Increasing population there provide potential labor advantages enjoyed a few years ago by the Carolinas and adjoining States. It is not inconceivable that the present war between New England and the South may be forgotten in another war which finds these areas combined against encroachments from the presently un-industrialized southwest.

ON GUARD — One of the reasons for the Deane studies in textiles is his feeling that North Carolina should be on guard against fly-by-night operators. He already has information on some outfits which have been pushed out of congested northeastern communities setting up in the Carolinas and employing "trainees" workers at low wages. As soon as the workers qualify for better jobs they are fired, and other "trainees" are employed, in order to hold down the average wage scale. On both national and State levels he opposes that sort of thing, and he highly commends the policy of North Carolina not to offer special inducements of tax exemption or locally-financed plants for that type of industry. He hopes to show by his studies that the zeal of some communities just to get an industry with a payroll should be curbed until it is ascertained the prospect can fit into the community picture and pay its own way on its own feet as a legitimate concern. That idea fits exactly into the scheme outlined by Governor Umstead in his industrialization promotion program.

OTHERS — Other Tarheel Congressmen are too young in congressional seniority to have important voice in affairs. First-termer Charles Raper Jonas of the 10th district, only Republican in the delegation, is the fair-haired boy with the national Republican ad-

Business Today

Research Available

By ELMER ROESSNER
The government's campaign to get more businesses to take advantage of the results of Federal research will enter a new phase this summer when the Government Patents Board publishes seven books describing almost 5,000 government-owned patents available for licensing.

Last year the board published a 168-page book listing these patents, but to get the details of any patent a businessman has to send 25 cents to the Patent Office, or consult a synopsis in a Department of Commerce field office. The new books will include the synopses.

Each will detail patents in one or more related fields. These, and the number of patents in each, are: instrumentation, 769; chemical products and processes, 1,349; food and kindred products, 265; mental products and processes, 458; radio and other electrical products, 1,700; textile, lumber, rubber, tobacco paper, leather and ceramic products and processes, 500; and ordnance, 600.

The United States Government is one of the biggest investors in research in the world. It does or directs about 60 per cent of all that's done in America and it spends more than $1 billion a year for exploratory work in atomic energy, munitions, agriculture and other fields. This results in patentable inventions, and the government takes out patents just like business does. As of June 1, there were 4,645 government-owned patents in force. The number keeps on growing because the government is taking out patents faster than old ones expire.

Several years ago the National Patents Board was created, with Dr. Archie M. Palmer as chairman, for the purpose of getting more of these patents into industrial use. Despite the somewhat cumbersome process of getting details on patents, it has enjoyed fair success so far. The exact number of patents put to work by industry is not known. More than a thousand formal licenses have been granted, including 90 for the government's aerosol process patent but, Dr. Palmer suspects, many firms have just started using government patents without getting an official blessing. There is no penalty for this sort of private enterprise. "With our new books, the rate of use should step up," Dr. Palmer said. Giving away the results of more than $1 million a year in research can be fun, he added.

SEWING SIFFIFIED? The do-it-yourself market may eventually involve sewing by boys, but it will take a bit of doing. Youth Research Institute, commissioned by Leon Jolson, president of Necki Sewing Machine Sales Corp., asked boys and girls what they thought of boys who sewed.

Among the girls, 53.3 per cent said boys who sewed were not sissies and 46.7 per cent said they were. Among the boys, 43.1 per cent said sewing was not sissified but the majority 56.9 per cent, said it was. Perhaps the sewing machine industry must first persuade Gene Autry, Roy Rogers and Hopalong Cassidy to sew their own clothes.

NEW TALES FOR OLD

Sugarhose, Utah, merchants decided to stay open until 2 o'clock in the morning to celebrate the community's 100th anniversary. There was some question whether shoppers would stick around that late, and the proprietors of one furniture store undertook to see that they did. They offered to exchange 300 new card tables for old ones between the hours of midnight and 2 a.m. More than 500 people stuck around to trade in tables and the store decided to accept them all. Many of the traders lingered to buy other articles.

SAVINGS RISE DESPITE D.I.P IN TOTAL INCOME

Although total personal income has declined slightly, the part of it put into savings associations and co-operative banks has increased, according to the United States Savings and Loan League.

April net savings (deposits over withdrawals) were $280,000,000, $7,000,000 more than April, 1953. January, February and March also showed gains over the same months last year.

Let's Not Forget Pilgrimages

By CHARLES MERCER (For Hal Boyle)

NEW YORK (AP)—Now that summer is nearly here a lot of people are preparing for the rigors of touring by auto. Mosquito bite, sun burn, flat tires, dyspepsia—the hazards are familiar. But let's not forget one that is the pilgrimage to the historic shrine, especially the birthplace of this and that President of the United States.

Many a father bent on fishing and many a mother determined to sun herself on a warm beach will drive many miles out of the way so the kids can see the birthplace of a President—just any President. And scarcely any of these Presidents was born beside a four-lane highway.

I know, I've visited the birthplaces of more Presidents than I can remember. That is because my father was an ardent fisherman.

Every summer he'd want to go fishing in a different part of the Northeast. To justify this frivolity he'd always hunt up a birthplace or two on the way. "It's educational," he'd say as we pulled up before another presidential birthplace. Perhaps it was, though it never had any noticeable effect on my history grades.

Have you ever visited the birthplace of James Monroe? Well, neither have I. Monroe was born in Westmoreland County, Va., and there may be signs all over the place now telling you how to find the house. But in the Model T day there weren't any, or at least we couldn't find them. We drove all over the county and had a flat and the radiator boiled over, but we never found the birthplace.

The point of all this nostalgic thing is simply this: What is going to happen about the birthplaces of the Presidents of the future?

Everybody is born in a hospital these days. Are we going to have plaques placed in hospital delivery rooms marking the birthplaces of Presidents? Impossible. You can't lead droves of kids go trooping through hospital corridors disturbing the patients just so they can see the birthplace of President Meivn McIntyre 1984-1992.

There's another possibility. An expectant mother who is certain her son will become President could have her little future president at home—if the doctor con-

By Any Yardstick, North Carolina's Crop Prospects Are 'Best' In Years

They're Baling Hay In The County

By any yardstick, or by any other device by which crop prospects may be measured, one must inevitably arrive at the conclusion that North Carolina has, at this time, its best crop prospects in years. Roy Bennett, extension tobacco specialist, says this is true for the entire tobacco area from the Border to the Burley Belt. Of course, as everyone knows, there have been outbreaks of cut worms, wire worms, and other pests, coupled with outbreaks of blue mold in the field, and some hail. These have hurt badly those folks whom they have directly affected. Take the crop as a whole from one end of the state to the other, however, and it shows promise of being the best crop we have ever had.

The same goes for other field crops. I asked our farm management and farm marketing specialists to give me their opinion of the situation and to a man, they replied "the situation is from average to above." Small grain bounced back after a bad start last fall; farmers are tending more land this summer than they did last year; they will have more total products to sell and while they will have to take a somewhat lower price for these products, the situation will not be too bad. The farm management people suggest that we try to hold our products from the market until the main harvest rush is over. They also suggest that we use the support price program where possible and that we be as careful about our marketing as we are about our production.

No doubt exists in the minds of any informed person but that we must be more efficient this year, and must use out "know-how" if we are to take home any money this fall. In the main, the nation is pretty well supplied with everything we grow. That man who can put his product on the market at the least cost to himself and his family, will be the man who will clear money in 1954. It looks like we should make a profit on corn this season and the way to make the most money is to sell the corn as livestock—especially fat hogs weighing around 225 to 250 pounds—no heavier.

Rom Mallard of Trenton, Route 1, Jones County, says the way to make corn really pay a profit when fed to hogs is to let the hogs graze pasture at the same time. Mr. Mallard says, "My hogs eat only half as much barn feed when I have them on pasture," and J.R. Franck, Jones County Agent, adds that Mr. Mallard is only one of many other Jones County men who have found that corn and pasture make a first rate feeding combination.

Penn Waynick of Reidsville, Route 2, Rockingham County, suggests that a temporary winter pasture also comes in handy for livestock. Last fall, Mr. Waynick planted 45 acres of good land to a small grain mixture consisting of two bushels of oats, one bushel of rye and one bushel of wheat per acre. He seeded that mixture on 45 acres and grazed the mixture from early fall until about the first of April with 80 head of cattle. Then he placed the animals over on his regular pasture and allowed the small grain mixture to regain its growth. Charles M. Turner, assistant farm agent in Rockingham County, says Mr. Waynick cut between 10 to 15 tons of forage per acre from the 45 acres for storage in his silo during the first week in June. "That field really paid its way," asserted Mr. Waynick.

Will Pugh of the Whitehead Community in Alleghany County filled his silo during the same week with a mixture of alfalfa and rye. He wanted to be positive that the silage would keep so he used Sodium Bisulfite as a preservative. Emerson Black, Aeghany County Agent said this is the first time that this kind of preservative has been used with grass silage in the county and the experiment will be carefully watched. Mr. Pugh, himself, is satisfied that the treatment has possibilities.

For a brief period, the small grain growers of Alamance County were worried for fear they might harvest no small grain whatsoever. During the latter part of May, just as the small grain was beginning to mature, the county suffered one of the worst outbreaks of Army worms the growers had ever experienced. Most of the damage was done to oats in the southern part of Alamance and Farm Agent Jerry Bason estimated that fully 75 per cent of the crop in some fields was consumed by the voracious worms. Airplanes were used to scatter toxaphene dust on some farms and on others, the owners hastened to cut the standing oats for hay. Clyde Pugh, C.C. Richardson, and Mahlon Newlin of the Eli Whitney Community, and William Morrow of the Bethlehem section were hit hardest by the outbreak.

And Mr. Boll Weevil is here. Raymond Deese of the Pembroke Community in Robeson County feels that the weevils must be kept from getting into the fields waiting for his cotton to get large enough to feast upon. "I had no idea they were in my cotton," he said. He and English Jones made a careful count in one field, however, and found the weevils feeding upon fully fifty percent of all the cotton plants.

Robeson County small grain growers also have a pest which causes them loss and worry. For instance, Mrs. E.P. McRaney of Parkton has several acres of oats and barley which she had planned to have certified by the North Carolina Crop Improvement Association. She had planned to sell the crop for seed next fall. Imagine her chagrin when wild mustard just about took over to the extent that the grain could not be certified. Major E.D. McGougan of Lumber Bridge says it is almost impossible to keep wild mustard under control. He believes the seed will lie dormant in the soil for at least three years and bases his belief on what has happened in his own fields. He has treated them regularly with the 2,4-D solutions and has not let any mustard go to seed in his grain. Yet, he says, the wild mustard comes up regularly each spring, despite the treatment.

When a person plants registered seed of the new small grain varieties and expects to capitalize on the investment by selling certified seed to his neighbors, he finds that the wild mustard will reduce the income from the seed by as much as one-third.

Utility Room On Farm Important

RALEIGH — Do you know the role that utility rooms are playing in hundreds of modern farm homes across North Carolina.

According to Mamie Whisnant, State College extension specialist in home management, a utility room will save you steps, give extra room in your home for "living", simplify your housekeeping jobs, keep clutter out of the living areas of your home, and protect the life of your equipment.

Miss Whisnant adds that a room can be planned near the kitchen where the homemaker can wash, iron, sew, arrange flowers, clean vegetables, sort eggs, or carry on the many other activities she must do each day.

With a well-equipped conveniently-located utility room, the homemaker can carry on several jobs at once and thus save herself both time and energy doing the work that once required many hours of drudgery.

Miss Whisnant says that with a utility room near your kitchen, you can perform many of your daily household tasks and keep one eye on the pot at the same time.

A carefully planned utility room will also help to lighten storage problems. Good storage just does not happen — it's planned. It takes hours of consideration to plan storage space to accommodate your needs. Utility room storage should be planned so that all utensils and supplies can be stored near the work area where they are to be used, says Miss Whisnant.

Reminds Milk Is The 'First Food' To Sustain Life

RALEIGH — F.R. Keith, Chairman of the State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, in discussing the dairy situation and actions by the Department of Agriculture in connection with the dairy promotion program, reminds that milk is the first food to sustain human life and of the finest foods for people of every age.

"It is one of the best and cheapest sources of calcium. It offers high quality protein, riboflavin, and other nutrients. In addition to all this, he brought out that milk is a leading food in taste appeal."

If all people in this country consumed even the minimum body requirements of milk, our surpluses of milk and other dairy products would soon disappear, says Keith. Although 46 per cent of the nation's total milk supply was used as fluid milk and cream in 1953, many people in the United States are not using enough milk for best nutritional health.

Keith quoted recent Department of Agriculture figures which show that per capita consumption of milk and other dairy products, except butter, average close to 250 quarts a year, or about 2.7 cups a day per person. This is just a little over half of the recommended amounts to assure enough calcium in the diet.

Recommended amounts, according to Keith, run from two cups

Iredell Poultry Projects Boom

STATESVILLE—Iredell County's poultry industry is booming, according to William C. Chuber, assistant county agent for the State College Extension Service.

Chuber says that since December 1, 1953, some 35 additional poultry buildings have been planned for the county. To date 19 projects have been completed. This is an average of seven buildings per month for the past five months.

All You Need Is Convince A Cow

GRANKLIN — J.S. Gray Macon County dairy farmer, says it isn't difficult to build up a good dairy herd if "you can convince your cows to drop all heifers."

T.H. Fagg, assistant county agent for the State College Extension Service, says Gray has seven artificial heifers on his farm that are direct descendants of one of his best producers. The cow in question, says Fagg, has dropped five heifer calves in the past five years. Two of the daughters have dropped heifer calves also.

Girl Scouts' Camp Hardee Starting Season On Sunday

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Staff Writer

What has been described as "THE haven for Girl Scouts" will open for another summer of activity Sunday.

A representative of national headquarters of the Girl Scouts once tagged that description on Camp Hardee, the summer camp for Pitt County Girl Scouts. The beautiful camp is located on a knoll overlooking the Pamlico River, 10 miles below Chowchilly.

The camp will open Sunday for its regular summer season of six weeks. Girl Scouts in the Brownie, Intermediate, and Senior classes will have units at the camp, which has had a regular part in the program of the Pitt County Girl Scout organization almost since it was organized in 1941.

Construction on the camp was started soon after the local council received its charter in 1942. Major impetus for its beginning was a gift of $10,000 from Henry Hardee, a native of Pitt County, who made the donation in memory of his father and mother for whom the camp is named.

Much of the land for the camp came from interested citizens from the Pitt area, and many of the improvements which have been made since the camp's first days have been accounted for by interested citizens and organizations. The Greenville Rotary Club, in particular, has been a staunch booster through the years. Many of the original cabins were gifts from Rotary members and several of the major improvements have been inspired by Rotary work.

Other Campers
The camp attendance is not limited to Pitt County scouts. Indeed, in past years, campers from all over North Carolina have been attracted and there have been several instances of scouts from out of North Carolina attending. Enrollment for any one week, however, is limited to 52 scouts of all classes because of space limitations.

The supervisor and director of the three classes of scouts that will attend this year is Mrs. J. Knott Proctor of Greenville. Mrs. Proctor is serving her second year as camp director after having been assistant director for a number of years.

Besides her practical experience in camp work, Mrs. Proctor has had several training courses in camping including an advanced course in camping at Berea, Kentucky. Her associates, and the campers, have been rather impressed through the years with her qualification.

Mrs. Proctor's assistance in directing the camp comes from a trained staff. Mrs. W. R. Guice is assistant director. Coletta Lehr is director of the Arts and Crafts program. The waterfront portion of the summer camping program is directed by Miss Janice Hardison and Paschal Barrett of Farmville. Jackie Sears is the camp business manager and Mrs. Blanche Cherry is the nurse who is always on duty during the camping period. Mrs. Eleanor Felverton is dietitian.

Many of the senior and junior counselors are either scouts now or have been scouts in the not-too-distant past. The senior counselors are Ann Bell, Coletta Lehr, and Frances Marabun. Junior counselors are Mary Smithwick, Eleanor Wallace, Hallie Bethune, and Martha Ellis. All have had camping and counseling experience in past years.

As is the case in many camps, the waterfront activities are perhaps the most popular at Camp Hardee. The beach has been described as one of the best on the entire shoreline of the Pamlico and is the site of all of the swimming and boating activities. This year, the camp will offer the campers special advanced boating course, made possible through the purchase of additional canoes and other water craft. There are also two fairly new bath houses near the beach.

All of the campers are encouraged by the staff members to participate in the full camp program. In addition to the waterfront activities, there are land sports, singing, dramatic productions, group singing, and the traditional Girl Scout ceremonies of flag-raising, campfires, and observances of Girl Scout traditions.

One new feature that is being added this year is a policy of not having visitors to the camp. In past years, parents and friends of the campers have been invited to come down on weekends to see their campers but this year all visiting is being discouraged. Parents are being asked to bring their daughters on one Sunday and then pick them up when the camping period is over.

Any parents who might wonder or worry about their campers while they are at camp are, for the most part, wasting their time. The campers have access to the best facilities and care that can be provided for them. The council made sure of that before establishing the new policy.

All in all, the camping wraps itself up in a period of allowing the girls to "get away from it all." And, judging by the popularity of the program, they very obviously enjoy it.

Knighthood For Churchill Monday

By ALVIN STEINKOPF

LONDON (AP)—In a ceremony of colorful ritual and solemn music, Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill will be installed Monday as a member of Britain's most exclusive company of knights—the Most Noble Order of the Garter.

The ceremony will be held in St. George's, Chapel at Windsor, where many of Britain's kings and queens are buried.

Another bit of regalia is an eight-pointed star, of silver with a cross in the center, which will be pinned to the center of his chest.

Conferring the Garter was about the highest honor the Queen had power to bestow on Britain's greatest statesman. She might, if he agreed have elevated him to the nobility. She may do so at some future time (a dukedom is the usual suggestion), but now it would take him out of the House of Commons, where he is in his natural element of controversy and the stir of history rushing by.

At present there are 21 British knights of the Order of the Garter who are not of the royal family. The Queen, then Princess Elizabeth, and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, were installed in 1948.

There may be only 25 living knights in addition to members of royal families. In all the history of the order there have been only about 900 knights. Of these only five, including Churchill, have been commoners.

Hydro-Electric Power Will Soon Serve Big Area

NEW YORK (AP)—Cheap hydroelectric power, which has helped bolster the economy of sections of the Southeast and Far West, will become available in large amounts in the Northeast in a few years.

This became apparent in the wake of two developments in Washington this week.

The U. S. Supreme Court Monday cleared the way for the St. Lawrence river power project, which will be developed as a joint operation by the state of New York and Canada's province of Ontario.

The following day the Senate Public Works Committee voted to let the Federal Power Commission decide whether the state of New York or a group of private utilities should develop a huge hydroelectric project at Niagara Falls, 300 miles southwest of the St. Lawrence construction.

Upon completion, the two power programs will have the effect of an economic shot in the arm for the Northeast by reducing the differential between the cost of electricity in the region and other parts of the country.

Work on the 600-million-dollar St. Lawrence power project will get under way early this summer. Engineers estimate that within four or five years, the St. Lawrence will be harnessed to produce 12 billion kilowatt-hours of hydro power annually, more than the output of either the Hoover or Grand Coulee dams. The energy will be divided equally between the hydroelectric Power Commission of Ontario and the New York Power Authority.

John E. Burton a member of the authority, says the St. Lawrence plants will make possible a cut of 60 million dollars a year in the bills of electricity users of the state, because of low production costs. An integrated power pool will send part of the electricity into the New England states, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

It is estimated that completion of both the St. Lawrence and the Niagara river projects would mean total savings of about 100 million dollars annually for New York electric consumers.

Clifton Webb Doubts He Will Return To Theater

By BO THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"The stage?" said Clifton Webb reflectively. "No I don't think I shall ever return to the theater."

Webb seated himself in his spacious and tastefully decorated dressing room on the set of "A Woman's World." He had slipped into a robe and wore dark glasses with a piece of cardboard over his nose so the makeup would not be rubbed off. From a vacuum bottle he poured some milk — "Ucer, you know."

When I declined a cigarette, he sighed, "I cannot do without them. When the doctor took me to the hospital and diagnosed the ulcer, he told me to quit smoking. I tried for two whole days, and I was miserable. The slightest noise made me jump. Finally the doctor allowed me to smoke, as long as I didn't do it on an empty stomach."

As he sipped the milk and gained solace from the cigarette, he talked about his career, past and present.

nificent. But such artistry is seen all too seldom.

Webb said he had no yen to return to the legitimate theater, where he thrived for more than 40 years. He made his debut as a boy in 1903.

"When I go to plays in New York," he said, "I look up at the actors and say, 'You poor devils. You have to do the same thing tomorrow — perhaps twice, if it's a Wednesday or Saturday.'"

"The trouble with doing a play nowadays is this: if you're in a hit, you have to play it over and over for two years or more; if you're in a flop, your ego is damaged. You can't win either way."

F.D.R. SHRINE

Little White House where Mr. Roosevelt spent many happy hours relaxing from cares of state and talking with friends and neighbors.

On grounds, the couple sees section of trunk of 250-year-old tree which grew near the President's bedroom window. Guard Dixie Kelley explains chronology of F.D.R.'s life charted by tree rings.

At Warm Springs, Ga., a modest white cottage with green shutters, in a setting of stately pines, has become a shrine. It is the Little White House which Franklin D. Roosevelt helped design and had built and where he often came to renew himself for his tasks as President. Here he spent some of his happiest hours. Here he died on April 12, 1945.

The Little White House is now owned by the state of Georgia. It was opened to the public in 1948. Some 110,000 persons visited the cottage last year. (Hyde Park, N. Y., the other Roosevelt shrine, had 250,000 in 1953).

It is operated on a non-profit but self-sustaining basis by a memorial commission. Its visitors are impressed with the warmth and simplicity of the five-room cottage. In the combination living-dining room is a huge fireplace built from field stones. It was here where the President was sitting, posing for his portrait, when he collapsed. It was his last portrait and was left unfinished. The artist, Mme. Elizabeth Shoumatoff, presented it to the Little White House. It now stands on its easel in the room where she painted it.

In the basement beneath the sun porch where Roosevelt loved to work and visit with friends and neighbors, a small museum houses gifts F. D. R. received, mementoes from many nations, and historic documents. Here, too, may be seen his unusual collection of canes, the leg braces he wore, his breakfast tray, even the old shaving brush he used for many years.

Here, visitors Mr. and Mrs. Eugene McInvale are pictured on a tour of the Little White House.

Huge collection of canes in memento room intrigues the McInvals. Gifts, documents, mementoes are also displayed here.

The President was sitting in this his favorite chair when he was stricken on April 12, 1945.

An unfinished portrait of the President stands in the combination living-dining room. He was posing for it when he collapsed and died.

Daisy Bonner, F.D.R.'s cook, on visit, points to note she scribbled on kitchen wall after his death. It reads: "Daisy Bonner cook the first meal and the last one in this cottage for the President Roosevelt."

At tour's end, McInvals kiss after dropping contribution into wishing well. Money dropped into well helps fight polio.

Knighthood For Churchill Monday

By ALVIN STEINKOPF

LONDON (AP)—In a ceremony of colorful ritual and solemn music, Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill will be installed Monday as a member of Britain's most exclusive company of knights—the Most Noble Order of the Garter.

The ceremony will be held in St. George's Chapel at Windsor, where many of Britain's kings and queens are buried.

It will be a moving moment in the life of the 79-year-old statesman. Sharing it with him will be the Queen. He adores Elizabeth II, who elevated him to the exalted knighthood a year ago with the touch of a golden sword in a drawing room of Windsor Castle.

The honor is one he turned down in 1945, shortly after the defeat of his Conservative party in the first postwar general election. He has never explained why he refused them.

A palace statement said Churchill begged King George VI "that in the present circumstances he might be allowed to decline the offer." An unverified story was that Churchill himself remarked, "How can I accept the Order of the Garter from my sovereign when his people have just given me the Order of the Boot."

But the voters later "changed their mind. And so did Churchill. The service in the chapel will complete his introduction into the select group. He will be assigned to one of the stalls which flank the choir of the beautiful chapel, in which knights sit to hold their infrequent ceremonies.

Queen Elizabeth will preside. The regalia he will receive is most impressive. Most important—the very heart of the order—is the Garter itself.

It is a gold-edged band of blue velvet on which golden letters proclaim the order's motto, "Honi Soit Qui Mal y Pense—Evil to Him Who Thinks Evil."

Legend says King Edward III, who established the order 600 years ago, proclaimed those words when the beautiful and demure Joan, Countess of Salisbury, lost her garter at a state ball. The King picked up the garter, wrapped it around his own leg and delivered the remark in rebuke to rude courtiers who snickered at the countess' plight.

Sir Winston will also receive what is called the Collar, but which looks more like a necklace. Of gold it weighs just two ounces short of two pounds. It consists of 24 pieces each in the form of a garter surrounding a Tudor rose and connected by 24 knots of chased gold.

From it hangs a major pendant known as "The George," an enameled figure of St. George on horseback fighting the legendary dragon. Churchill will receive also the "Lesser George," a golden badge worn pendant from a four-inch blue ribbon over the left shoulder.

Another bit of regalia is an eight-pointed star, of silver with a cross in the center.

Conferring the Garter was about the highest honor the Queen had power to bestow on Britain's greatest statesman. She might, if he agreed have elevated him to the nobility. She may do so at some future time (a dukedom is the usual suggestion), but now it would take him out of the House of Commons, where he is in his natural element of controversy and the stir of history rushing by.

At present there are 21 British knights of the Order of the Garter who are not of the royal family. The Queen, then Princess Elizabeth, and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, were installed in 1948.

There may be only 25 living knights in addition to members of royal families. In all the history of the order there have been only about 900 knights. Of these only five, including Churchill, have been commoners.

NEW YORK (AP)—Cheap hydro-electric power, which has helped bolster the economy of sections of the Southeast and Far West, will become available in large amounts in the Northeast in a few years.

This became apparent in the wake of two developments in Washington this week.

The U. S. Supreme Court Monday cleared the way for the St. Lawrence River power project, which will be developed as a joint operation by the state of New York and Canada's province of Ontario. The project will be an integral part of the seaway plan for permitting ocean-going ships to enter the Great Lakes.

The following day the Senate Public Works Committee voted to let the Federal Power Commission decide whether the state of New York or a group of private utilities should develop a huge hydroelectric project at Niagara Falls, 200 miles southwest of the St. Lawrence construction.

Upon completion, the two power programs will have the effect of an economic shot in the arm for the Northeast by reducing the differential between the cost of electricity in the region and other parts of the country.

Work on the 600-million-dollar St. Lawrence power project will get under way early this summer. Engineers estimate that within four or five years, the St. Lawrence will be harnessed to produce 12 billion kilowatt-hours of hydro power annually, more than the output of either the Hoover or Grand Coulee dams. The energy will be divided equally between the hydroelectric Power Commission of Ontario and the New York Power Authority.

John E. Burton, a member of the authority, says the St. Lawrence plants will make possible a cut of 60 million dollars a year in the bills of electricity users of the state, because of low production costs. An integrated power pool will send part of the electricity into the New England states, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

It is estimated that completion of both the St. Lawrence and the Niagara river projects would mean total savings of about 100 million dollars annually for New York electric consumers.

Several rivals who knew her last name dubbed her "Marshmallow," a name she's likely not to forget.

Clifton Webb Doubts He Will Return To Theater

By BO THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"The stage?" said Clifton Webb reflectively. "No I don't think I shall ever return to the theater."

Webb seated himself in his spacious and tastefully decorated dressing room on the set of "A Woman's World." He had slipped into a robe and wore dark glasses with a piece of cardboard over his nose so the makeup would not be rubbed off. From a vacuum bottle he poured some milk — "Uicer, you know."

When I declined a cigarette, he sighed, "I cannot do without them. When the doctor took me to the hospital and diagnosed the ulcer, he told me to quit smoking. I tried for two whole days, and I was miserable. The slightest noise made me jump. Finally the doctor allowed me to smoke, as long as I didn't do it on an empty stomach."

As he sipped the milk and gained solace from the cigarette, he talked about his career, past and present.

School Insurance Paid Off Quick

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP)—The Kalamazoo Board of Education adopted a low cost insurance plan covering accidents to children at school or on their way to classes. Parents pay a $1 yearly premium for each child.

A day after the policies went into effect, Marilyn Joan Walsh, a high school student, was injured in a gymnasium accident. Her policy paid hospital bills during several days' treatment for a dislocated knee.

Later John Wesley Phillips, 6, was fatally injured when struck by a car on his way to classes. His policy paid a $1,000 death benefit.

Her 'Cocktail' Caused A Stir

NORTH HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP)—Cero Kopin, 4, sometimes gets a colored fruit drink as a reward for good behavior, with the understanding that it's a cocktail to be enjoyed with Mom and Dad.

When she appeared on her parents' television show to sing a song, they told her if she sang well she'd get a cocktail right after the program.

Carol sang well and as Dad told the audience that Hollywood youngsters were really no different than any other Carol yelled for all to hear, "Daddy, I want my cocktail."

F.D.R. SHRINE

Little White House where Mr. Roosevelt spent many happy hours relaxing from cares of state and talking with friends and neighbors.

On grounds, the couple sees section of trunk of 250-year-old tree which grew near the President's bedroom window. Guard Dixie Kelley explains chronology of F.D.R.'s life charted by tree rings.

At Warm Springs, Ga., a modest white cottage with green shutters, in a setting of stately pines, has become a shrine. It is the Little White House which Franklin D. Roosevelt helped design and had built and where he often came to renew himself for his tasks as President. Here he spent some of his happiest hours. Here he died on April 12, 1945.

The Little White House is now owned by the state of Georgia. It was opened to the public in 1948. Some 110,000 persons visited the cottage last year. (Hyde Park, N. Y., the other Roosevelt shrine, had 250,000 in 1953).

It is operated on a non-profit but self-sustaining basis by a memorial commission. Its visitors are impressed with the warmth and simplicity of the five-room cottage. In the combination living-dining room is a huge fireplace built from field stones. It was here where the President was sitting, posing for his portrait, when he collapsed. It was his last portrait and was left unfinished. The artist, Mme. Elizabeth Shoumatoff, presented it to the Little White House. It now stands on its easel in the room where she painted it.

In the basement beneath the sun porch where Roosevelt loved to work and visit with friends and neighbors, a small museum houses gifts F. D. R. received, mementoes from many nations, and historic documents. Here, too, may be seen his unusual collection of canes, the leg braces he wore, his breakfast tray, even the old shaving brush he used for many years.

Here, visitors Mr. and Mrs. Eugene McInvale are pictured on a tour of the Little White House.

Huge collection of canes in memento room intrigues the McInvales. Gifts, documents, mementoes are also displayed here.

The President was sitting in this his favorite chair when he was stricken on April 12, 1945.

An unfinished portrait of the President stands in the combination living-dining room. He was posing for it when he collapsed and died.

Daisy Bonner, F.D.R.'s cook, on visit, points to note she scribbled on kitchen wall after his death. It reads: "Daisy Bonner cook the first meal and the last one in this cottage for the President Roosevelt."

At tour's end, McInvales kiss after dropping contribution into wishing well. Money dropped into well helps fight polio.

third in the process and finally came home when Paul Rausch's grounder to third was errored by Mac McDowell. Frank Moore advanced Rausch and put himself on base with a single and Jerry Phillips then came through with a two-base hit to wrap the game up. Both Moore and Rausch scored on Phillips' hit, his second of the game.

The Dairies had taken an early lead in the game on a pair of two-run homers. Williams had slugged one in the second inning with McDowell on base and George Walker had powered one in the fifth inning with Bob Dair aboard.

In next week's games, which will wrap up the first half of the season, the schedule presents no immediate indication of having the tie for first broken without some stirring upsets. Both Carolina Dairies and Graniteers will meet teams they've had little trouble with thus far. The Dairies play Tuesday against fifth-place Southern Bread and Thursday against seventh-place Harris Super Markets. The Graniteers meet third-place Home Builders on Tuesday and eighth-place Jolly Rogers on Friday.

Fordomatics Get First Win As Bright Leafs Lose, 5-2

O'Brien Sets New Shot Put Record

By JACK STEVENSON
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Parry O'Brien stole the show from a pair of the world's greatest milers last night when he threw the 16-pound shot a record 60 feet 10 inches. In the featured mile Wes Santee of Kansas ran away from Olympic champion Josy Barthel of Luxembourg in the final 220 yards to win in 4:00.7, a tenth of a second slower than he ran last week but still the third best on record.

The Fordomatics jumped off to a quick two-run lead in the first inning off Ronnie Finch, the left-handed hurler of the Bright Leafs. Conway led off with a single and stole second. Bryan grounded out, advancing the runner to third. Walker Lee Allen walked and stole second, and both runners scored on Lynn Jorgenson's single. Another run in the top of the second gave the Fordomatics the margin they needed to win by.

Two insurance runs sewed up the ball game in the seventh. Walker Lee Allen doubled home Conway and Bryan for two runs.

The chase for the first-half championship in Recreation Softball League play tightened up considerably last night in Guy Smith Stadium when previously-undefeated Carolina Dairies had the boom lowered on it by the Graniteers. The 5-4 loss threw the teams into a tie for first place with one week of first-half play remaining.

In the other game played last night, Garner-Wynne-Manning pulled back into a tie for third place and dropped Jolly Rogers deeper into the cellar with a 15-13 win over the eighth-place club. G-W-M is tied with Home Builders for the third place spot.

Bums Back In First After Beating Reds

By BEN PHLEGAR
Associated Press Sports Writer

The major leagues moved into the middle third of the campaign today with the pre-season experts still on shaky ground.

The experts, of course, picked Brooklyn and the New York Yankees to repeat as champions with Milwaukee and Cleveland runners-up, just like last year.

Brooklyn has dodged in and out of first place all spring, holding the top rung at the moment by one game over the New York Giants. But the Yankees haven't found the consistency they need to take charge.

They moved within three games of the top by shading the Chicago White Sox 3-2 last night. The White Sox lead Cleveland by half a game with New York third. The Yanks haven't been in first place, even for a day, so far.

Webster Wins

By BEN PHLEGAR
Associated Press Sports Writer

Beating a field of 18 cars, Tom Webster of Winston-Salem was the winner of the 25-lap sportsmen's feature stock car race last night at the Raleigh Speedway before a crowd of about 3,100.

The race was restarted five times because of pileups. No injuries were reported in any of the accidents: Glenn Good of Stuart, Va., started last and finished second. Next were Ted Swaim of Winston-Salem, Bill Myers of Winston-Salem and Gordon Mangrum of Danville, Va.

Ray Boone, who tied a major league record with four grand slam home runs last season, hit his first of 1954 in the Detroit victory at Philadelphia. Boone hit two other homers in the twin bill. Al Kaline also hit a grand slam in the first game when the Tigers totalled six home runs.

Washington jumped on Bob Chalkers for five runs in the first inning, then withstood a 16 hit Oriole assault that fell a run short. Eddie Yost homered inside the park for the Senators.

COACH EUGENE AYERS' V.F.W. team wound up the first half of play in the North State League with a 4-5 record and a third place position. Members of the team are (sitting) Charles Boyd and Elwood Goodson; (kneeling) Lester Brown, Jimmy Robertson, William Allen, Jimmy Roberts, Kenneth Allen and Tommy McGraw; (standing) Leonard Bloxam, Hugo Williams, Dickie Barnhill, Burton Jenkins, Donald Flynn, Dallas Clark, Jody Blalock, and Coach Ayers.

Murray Pitches Six-Hitter As Jaycees Defeat Lions

By WAYNE BISHOP
Reflector Sports Writer

Little Buddy Murray twirled a six-hit shutout past the first half champion Lions yesterday afternoon as he and his teammates registered a 6-0 win in their last game of the first half.

The Lions went with best Stevie Noble and the strong right-hander pitched a creditable game, allowing that it was the first game he has pitched.

Murray showed excellent control in the six-inning contest, giving up no bases on balls while striking out four. The Lions began reaching Murray for base-hits in the last three innings but Murray always got out of the trouble without a run.

The Jaycees got the winning runs in the fourth inning when three consecutive singles and an error on the centerfielder on the last single brought across three runs. The Jaycees picked up three more in the sixth and three hits and an error.

Murray, Jackie Conway, and Jasper Tripp led the Jaycees hitting with two hits apiece. Aubrey Harrison paced the hitting for the Lions with two for three.

The game ends play in the North State League for the first half. The second half begins June 16 between the V.F.W. and the Lions.

There will be a doubleheader this afternoon concluding the first half of the Tar Heel League with the Elks playing the Exchange and the Moose against the Pepsi-Cola. Game time is 5 o'clock.

'Fight They Couldn't Fix' Won By Giardello Anyhow

By JACK HAND
NEW YORK (AP) — "The fight they couldn't fix" turned out to be a victory for Joey Giardello, anyhow.

Bobby Jones, who spurned an alleged $15,000 bribe offer from heavyweight Clarence Henry last Friday, fought a brilliant battle against the 9 to 5 favorite but lost the votes of all three officials.

It was a close call for the high-ranking Giardello, who hopes to fight Bobo Olson for the middleweight title Oct. 22. Referee Al Berl and Judges Artie Aidala and Frank Forbes all had it 5-4-1, for Joey. So did the Associated Press.

The ring-side working press was split with five for Giardello, three for Jones and two calling it a draw.

Giardello started with a rush, ran out of gas in the fifth round, got his second wind in the eighth but withered again in the tenth under Jones' closing bid.

"I thought I won it 6-4," said Giardello.

"I thought I won it 6-4," said Jones, the 28-year-old veteran of 88 fights from Oakland, Calif., who twice fought Olson.

Asked what he thought of Giardello's chances against Olson, Jones had the perfect answer, "if you don't beat me, and I don't think he did, you don't beat Olson."

Pro Golfer Fires 9-Under-Par 60

By ROBERT MOORE
VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — Wally Ulrich of Maplewood, N.J., today credited an eight-foot putt as the "mental lift" that sent him on his way yesterday to carrying one of the greatest golf rounds in the history of the Professional Golfers Assn.

The chunky, 30-year-old Ulrich became one of four golfers in PGA annals to fire a 60. His magnificent performance came in the second round of the $15,000 Virginia Beach Open tournament being played over the par 69 Cavalier Yacht and Country Club course.

"I really didn't know what I was doing until I started down the back nine," said Ulrich, a native of Austin, Minn. "It was just one of those days when everything went right. I got a mental lift on the second hole by sinking an eight-foot putt for a birdie 3.

"After that, it was easy." Only other golfers credited in PGA record books with having toured a course in 60 strokes are Ted Kroll, Al Broch and Bill Nary.

Despite his sensational round, Ulrich, a former National Intercollegiate champion who once fired a 59 in the Western Intercollegiate, found himself tied only for third place as the tournament moved into the third round today.

His opening round 71 left him with a 36-hole total of 131—and tied with Pete Cooper of Branford, Fla. and George Fazio of Clementon, N.J.

Ulrich, Cooper and Fazio were five strokes off the blistering pace being set by Tommy Bolt of Houston, Tex. Bolt tied the PGA's 36-hole record with a 126 total.

Shelley Mayfield of Chicopee, Mass., shot a 64 yesterday for a two round total of 129 to pull into second place.

For today's third round, the original field of 153 dwindled to the low 60 professionals and the low 10 amateurs. The final round will be played tomorrow.

Big And Little Teams To Meet

OMAHA (AP) — The "big" and the "little" so to speak come against each other today as the only undefeated teams in the NCAA college baseball World Series.

Michigan State, the "big," faces Rollins College, the "small," in the feature game tonight at 9 p.m. (EST) as the only undefeated teams in the double elimination journey.

Michigan State, the tourney favorite and a hard hitting club branded as one of the best the Big Ten Conference has ever produced when it comes to clubbing the ball, made it victory No. 2 in the meet by eking out a 2 to 1 victory over Arizona last night.

Rollins whipped past Missouri, Big Seven champion, by a 4 to 1 margin in last base running.

Both thus ride into very important third round with two wins and no defeats.

Everybody Happy After Three Clubs Switch Players

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A trio of 11-club runners the gamut of the American League standings, switched six players and everyone seemed happy with the shuffle.

The first-place Chicago White Sox came out of yesterday's deal with lefthander Morrie Martin and outfielder Ed McGhee. Martin is expected by General Manager Frank Lane to put the White Sox in even stronger contention for the pennant. McGhee was a sort of added starter.

The Philadelphia Athletics, badly becalmed in last place, picked up two pitchers—John (Somy) Dixon and Al Sima, along with rookie outfielder Bill Wilson and $20,000 cash.

The Washington Senators, in the middle region of the standings, acquired Constantine (Gris) Keriazakos, a $60,000 bonus hurler and

Next Big N.C. Political Campaign Seen For '56

By NOEL YANCEY
 RALEIGH (AP)—With the Scott-Lennon senatorial scrap out of the way, the next big statewide political campaign promises to be the 1956 contest for governor. The names of several persons already have been mentioned as political observers look forward to this contest.

The one mentioned most often is that of Lt. Gov. Luther Hodges of Leasville, who retired from a top post in a big textile firm a few years ago and set out to carve for himself a political career. Hodges pulled a big surprise in the 1952 campaign when he won the nomination for lieutenant governor in a field of five candidates without a second primary. He had been relatively unknown politically prior to this campaign.

1956 gubernatorial race include:

 NEW BERN, N. C. (AP) A water-front fire here last night caused damage expected to exceed $400,000.
 Most of the loss was suffered by the Montgomery Ward Co. warehouse where furniture, tires and appliances were destroyed.
 New Bern firemen battled the blaze for two hours before it was brought under control. Two firemen were overcome by smoke.

Milk Production In N.C. Set New Record In May
 RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina milk production set a new record last month.
 The State Crop Reporting Service reported yesterday 394,000 cows turned out 173 million pounds of milk.
 This was 12 million higher than the 1943-52 average for May.
 The figure of 394,000 cows also set a new record.
 In another report, the Federal-State Crop Reporting Service, as of June 1 predicted a 1954 rye crop of 276,000 bushels, or 9,000 less than the May 1 forecast.
 The forecast was down a half bushel per acre, but still 44,000 bushels, or 19 per cent, above last year's rye production.
 The wheat estimate for June 1 was down 19 per cent, or half a bushel per acre, when compared with the 8,200,000 bushels produced last year.
 Strong winds and heavy showers in mid-May were partly responsible for the drop in estimates.

Minor Accident At 'Five Points'
 Two cars were involved in a minor accident at Five Points early yesterday afternoon.
 The vehicles were being operated by Charles L. Greene of Farmville and Raymond Davis of Greenville. Damage to the car operated by Greene amounted to $8.00. No charges were placed.

Freighter Sinks Off Nova Scotia
 NORTH SYDNEY, N.S. (AP)—The 102-ton coastal freighter Dorothy P. Sarty sank last night off the Cape Breton coast. Her six-man crew rowed ashore.
 Capt. Frank Poole said the vessel sprang a leak.
TRAIN ON TELEVISION.
 Next Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock, Cactus Jim will include in his program, some motion pictures of the Kiwanis "Choo-Choo Train" at Guy Smith Park taken by John Warner. The miniature train is in operation daily in the afternoons.

LET'S FACE IT! WE STILL DON'T HAVE SUFFICIENT EVIDENCE!

CRIMSTOPPERS TEXTBOOK
PHONY BLIND MAN    WRIST WATCH    LEARN TO OBSERVE A "BLIND" MAN WAS ARRESTED BECAUSE HE FORGOT TO TAKE OFF HIS WRIST WATCH.

I'M AFRAID YOU'RE RIGHT, CHIEF. IN SPITE OF THE FLOWER AND THE FINGERPRINTS ON THE CIGARETTE BUTTS AND EVERYTHING ELSE, WE STILL CAN'T PROVE HE PULLED THE TRIGGER.

AND IF WE COULD, NO JUDGE WOULD SEND OPEN-MIND MONTY UP THE RIVER FOR SHOOTING A DUMMY.

FURTHERMORE, THERE'S A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS PENDING ON THIS FELLOW. HEY! I JUST REMEMBERED! WE'RE DUE IN COURT NOW TO ANSWER THAT WRIT. IT'S ALMOST 2 O'CLOCK.

TWENTY MINUTES AND A DOZEN ARGUMENTS LATER. BOOK OR RELEASE THIS PRISONER BY 8 P.M.

STILL LATER
IT'S JUST AS WELL THAT IT'S TURNING OUT THIS WAY, CHIEF. I'VE GOT SOME NEWS FOR YOU. WHAT DO YOU MEAN?

THIS GUY IS BIG—A LOT BIGGER THAN WE THINK HE IS. DID I SHOW YOU THE POSY WE BROUGHT BACK?

WHEN WE LOOKED HIS "FLOWER SHOP" OVER YESTERDAY AND FOUND THE GUN, I TOOK A LOOK AT HIS FLOWERS. LIKE THIS?

TAP THE PLANT OUT OF THAT POT, CHIEF.

IT'S A PIECE OF WAXED PAPER. OPEN IT.

WHAT? RINGS! WITH AT LEAST 20 CARATS OF DIAMONDS IN THEM? HOLY NED! WHAT IS THIS?

SEE WHAT I MEAN?

by CHIC YOUNG

I BOUGHT DAGWOOD THE SPORT COAT HE'S BEEN WANTING SO MUCH. HOW NICE.

I ASKED THEM TO SEND IT TO YOUR HOUSE SO I CAN SURPRISE HIM WITH IT. OKAY, BLONDIE, I'LL WATCH FOR IT.

I WONDER WHAT THIS IS.

TOOTSIE MUST'VE BOUGHT IT FOR ME—OH, BOY—WAIT! I'LL SHOW THIS DREAM COAT TO DAGWOOD.

PRETTY SWELL, HUH? I'LL BET YOU NEVER HAD A COAT AS FANCY AS THIS.

I HATE PEOPLE WHO BRAG.

STOP IT—YOU'RE RUINING MY NEW COAT.

I'LL PUT IT BACK IN THE BOX THE WAY I FOUND IT AND PLAY DUMB.

YOUR PACKAGE ARRIVED, BLONDIE. I CAN'T WAIT TO SEE HOW DELIGHTED DAGWOOD WILL BE WHEN HE SEES IT.

IT'S A SURPRISE FOR YOU, DEAR—I HAD IT DELIVERED TO THE WOODLEYS! OH, BOY.

YOU MEAN THAT WAS REALLY MY COAT?

HERBERT... DAGWOOD IS HERE FOR A FRIENDLY LITTLE CALL.
